The cardinal of Winchester fords:
From him I have express commandment.

That two things, that shall be let in.
Glo. Faint hearted Woodville, prizest him take me.
Arrogant Winchester! that haughty prelate,
Whom, Henry, and late sovereign, ne'er could Thou as friend to God, or to the king, (broth:
Open the gates, or I'll shut thee out shortly.
1 Serv. Open the gates unto the lord protector:
Or we'll break them open, if that you come not quickly.

Enter Winchester, attended by a Train of Servants in tawny coats.

Win. How now, ambitious Humphrey? what means this?
Glo. Plead'st, thou command me to be shut out?
Win. I do, thou most usurping proctor, And not protector of the king or realm.
Glo. Stand back, thou manifest conspirator; Thou, that contriv'st to murder our dead lord; Thou, that giv'st whores indulgences to sin; I'll canvas thee in thy broad canvas hat, If thou proceed in this thy insolvency.

Win. Nay, stand thou back, I will not badge This be Damascus, be thou cursed Cain, [foot; To slay thy brother Abel, if thou wold.
Glo. I will not slay thee, but I'll drive thee back; Thy scarlet robes, as a child's bearing cloth I'll use, to carry thee out of this place.
Win. Do what thou dar'st; I did thee to thy face.
Glo. What am I dare, and bearded to my face?

Draw, men, for all this privileged place: Blue-coats to tawny-coats. Priest, beware your beard; [Gloster his men attack the Bishop. I mean to till it, and make it bloody! Under my feet I stomp thy cardinal's hat; In spite of pope, or dignities of church, Here by the cheeks I'll drag thee up and down. Glo. Winoster, thou'lt answer this before the pope.
Glo. Winchester goose, I cry—a rope! a rope! Now beat them hence, Why do you let them stay? Thou'lt chase hence, thou wolf in sheep's apparel. Out, tawny coats—out, scarlet hypocrite! Here a great tumult. In the midst of it, Enter the Mayor of London, and Officers.

May. Fye, lords! that you, being supreme magnates, Thus contumeliously should break the peace!
In fine, desist'd I as I deserv'd;
But, O! the treacherous Frodoth wounds my heart!
Whom with my bare fists I would execute,
If now he him brought into my power.
Sal. Yet tell'st thou not, how thou wert entertain'd.
Tal. With scoffs, and scorns, and contumelious taunts.
In open market-place produc'd they me,
To be a publick spectacle to all:
Here, said they, is the terror of the French,
The scare-crow that affrights our children so.
The men broke I from the officers that led me;
And with my nails digg'd stones out of my foot,
To hurl at the beholders of my shame.
My grisly countenance made others fly;
None durst come near, for fear of sudden death.
In iron walls they des'md me not secure;
So great fear of my name 'mongst them was spread;
That they supper'd, I could rend bars of steel,
And spurn in pieces posts of adamant;
Wherefore aguard of chosen shot I had,
That walk'd about me every minute-while;
And if I did but stir out of my bed,
Ready they were to shoot me to the heart.
Sal. I grieve to hear what torments you endur'd:
But we will be reveng'd sufficiently.
Now it is supper-time in Orleans:
Here, through this room I can count every one,
And view the Frenchmen how they brify.
Let us look in, the sight will much delight thee.
Sir Thomas Gargrave, and sir William Giandsale,
Let us hear your express opinions.
Where is best place to make our battery next.
Gar. I think, at the north gate; for there stand lords.
Glan. And I, here, at the bulwark of the bridge.
Tal. For aught I see, this must be famish'd,
Or with light skirmishes enfeebled.
[Shot from the town. Salisbury and Sir Tho. Gargrave fall.
Sal. O Lord, have mercy on us, wretched sinners!
Gar. O Lord, have mercy on me, woeful man!
Tal. What chance is this, that suddenly hath cross'd us?
Speak, Salisbury; at least, if thou canst speak;
How far'st thou, mirror of all mortal men?
One of thy eyes, and thy cheek's side struck off!
Accursed tower'd I assurance of my fall,
That hath contriv'd this woeful tragedy!
In thirteen battles Salisbury o'er came;
Henry the fifth he first train'd to the wars;
Whilst any trump did sound, or drum struck up,
His sword did never leave striking in the field.
Yet liv'st thou, Salisbury? though thy speech doth fail,
One eye thou hast, to look to heaven for grace:
The sun with one eye vieweth all the world,
Heaven, be thou gracious to none alive.
If Salisbury wants mercy at thy hand!
Bearer of his body, I will help to bury it.
Sir Thomas Gargrave, hast thou any life?
Speak unto Talbot; may, look up to him,
Salisbury, cheer thy spirit with this comfort;
Thou art not die, whiles
He beckons with his hand, and smiles on me;
As who should say, When I am dead and gone,
Remember to avenge me on the French.—
Plantagenet, I will; and Nero-like,
Wear in my grave, this gilding the town burn;
Wretched shall France be only in my name.
[Thunder heard; afterwards an alarm.
What stir'st this? What tumult's in the heavens?
Whence cometh this alarm, and the noise?
Enter a Messenger.
Mess. My lord, my lord, the French have gather'd head;
The Dauphin, with one Joan la Pucelle join'd,—
A holy prophetess, new risen up,—
Is come with a great power to raise the siege.
Salisbury groans.
Tal. Hear, hear, how dying Salisbury doth groan!
It irks his heart, he cannot be reveng'd,—
Frenchmen, I'll be a Salisbury to you:
Pucelle or dolphin, or dog-fish,
Your hearts I'll stamp out with my horse's heels,
And make a quagmire of your mingled brains.
Convey me Salisbury into his tent,
And then we'll try what these dastard Frenchmen dare.
[Exeunt, hearing out the bodies.
SCENE V.—The same. Before one of the Gates.
Alarum. Skirmishings. Talbot pursueth the Dauphin, and driveth him in; then enter Joan la Pucelle, driving Englishmen before her. Then enter Talbot.
Tal. Where is my strength, my valour, and my force?
Our English troops retire, I cannot stay them?
A woman, clad in armour, chaseth them.
Enter La. Pucelle.
Here, here she comes:— I'll have a bout with thee;
Devil, or devil's dam, I'll conjure thee:
Blood will I draw on thee, thou art a witch,
And straightway give thy soul to him thou serv'st.
Puc. Come, come, 'tis only that I must disgrace thee.
Tal. They fight.
Tal. Heavens, can you suffer hell so to prevail?
My breast I'll burst with straining of my courage,
And from my shoulders crack my English murder,
But I will chastise this high-minded spurnet.
Puc. Talbot, farewell; thy hour is not yet come:
I must go victual Orleans forthwith.
O'take me, if thou canst; I scorn thy strength.
Go, go, cheer up thy hunger-starved men;
Help Salisbury to make his testament:
This day is ours, as many more shall be.
[Enter La. Pucelle, with Soldiers.
Tal. My thoughts are whirled like a potter's wheel;
I know not where I am, nor what I do:
A witch, by force, like Hannibal,
Drives back our troops, and conquers as she lists:
So bees with smoke, and doves with noisome stench,
Are from their hives, and houses, driven away.
They call'd us, for our fierceness, English dogs;
Now, like to whoels, we cry running away.
[Alarum. A short alarum.
Hark, countrymen! either renew the fight,
Or tear the lions out of England's nest.
Renounce your soil, give sheep in lions' stead;
Sheep run not half so timorous from the wolf,
Or horse, or oxen, from the leopard,
As you fly from your oft-subdued slaves.
[Alarum. Another skirmish.
It will not be:—Retire into your trenches:
You all consented unto Salisbury's death,
For none would strike a stroke in his revenge.
Pucelle is enter'd into Orleans,
In spite of us, or aught that we could do,
O, would I were to die with Salisbury!
The shame hereof will make me hide my head!
[Alarum. Retreat. Exeunt Talbot and his Forces, &c.
SCENE VI.—The same.
Enter, on the walls, Pucelle, Charles, Reginler, Aliencon, and Soldiers.
Puc. Advance our waving colours on the walls;
Rescue'd is Orleans from the English wolves:—
Thus Joan la Pucelle hath perform'd her word.
Char. Divinest creature, bright Astraea's daughter,
How shall I honour thee for this success?
TBY promises are like Adonis' gardens,
That one day bloom'd, and fruitful were the nect-

France, triumph in thy glorious prophetes!-

Revenge is the town of the town.

More blessed hap had ne'er befal our state.

Dauphin, command the citizens make bonfires,

And feast and banquet in the open streets,

To celebrate the joy that God hath given us.

Alc. All France will be replete with mirth and joy,

When they shall hear how we have play'd the men.

Char. 'Tis Joan, not we, by whom the day is won:

For which, I will divide my crown with her:

And all the priests and friars in my realm

Shall, in procession, sing her endless praise.

A statelier pyramids to her I'll rear,

Than Rhodope's, or Memphis', ever was;

In memory of her, when she is dead,

Her ashes, in an urn more precious

Than the rich jew'ld of Parius,

Transported shall be at high festivals

Before the kings and queens of France.

No longer on Saint Dennis will we cry,

But Joan la Pucelle shall be France's saint.

Come in: and let us banquet royally,

After this golden day of victory.

[FLOURISH. EXIT.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The same.

Enter to the gate, a French Sergeant, and Two Sentinels.

Serge. Sirs, take your places, and be vigilant:

If any noise, or soldier, you perceive,

Near to the walls, by some apparent sign,

Let us have knowledge at the court of guard.

1 Senti. Sergeant, you shall. [Exit Sergeant.]

Thus are poor servitors

(When others sleep upon their quiet beds,)

Constrain'd to watch in darkness, rain, and cold.

Enter Talbot, Bedford, Burgundy, and Forces, with scaling ladders; their drums beating a death march.

Tal. Lord regent,—and redoubted Burgundy,—

By whose approach, the regions of Artois,

Walloon, and Picardy, are friends to us,—

This happy night the Frenchmen are secure,

Having all day caroused and banqueted:

Embrace we then this opportunity;

As fitting best to quittance their deceit,

Contriv'd by art, and baseful sorcery.

Bed. Coward of France!—how much he wrongs

his fame,

Despairing of his own arm's fortitude,

To join with witches, and the help of hell.

Seri. Traitors have never other company—

But what's that Pucelle, whom they term so pure?

Tal. A maid, they say.

Bed. A maid! and he so martial!

But, if underneath the same of the French,

She carry armour, as she hath begun.

Tal. Well, let them practise and converse with spies.

God is our fortress; in whose conquering name,

Let us resolve to scale their flinty bulwarks.

Bed. Ascend, brave Talbot; we will follow thee.

Tal. Not I; together; better far, I guess,

That we do make our entrance several ways;

That, if it chance one of us do fail,

The other yet may rise against their force.

Bed. Agreed; I'll to join care.

Bar. And I to this.
By message crav'd, so is lord Talbot come.

Count. And she is welcome. What is this the man?

Mess. Madam, it is.

Count. Is this the scourge of France?

Is this the Talbot, so much fear abroad,
That with his name the very thought still their babies?
I see, report is fabulous and false:
I thought, I should have seen some Hercules.
A second Hector, for his grim aspect,
And large proportions of his strong-knit limbs.
Alas! this is a child, a silly dwarf:
It cannot be, this weak and wretched shrimp
Should strike such terror to his enemies.

Tal. Madam, I have no matter to trouble you:
But, since your ladyship is not at leisure,
I'll sort some other time to visit you.

Count. What means he now?—Go ask him,
Whither he goes.

Mess. Stay, my lord Talbot; for my lady craves
To know the cause of your abrupt departure.

Tal. Marry, for that she's in a wrong belief,
I go to certify her, Talbot's here.

Re-enter Porter, with keys.

Count. If thou be he, then art thou prisoner.

Tal. Prisoner! to whom?

Count. To me, blood-thirsty lord!
And for that cause I train'd thee to my house.

Long time thy shadow hath been thrall to me,

For in my gallery thy picture hangs:

But now the circumstance shall end thy life:

And I will chain these legs and arms of thine,
That hast by tyranny, these many years,
Wasted our country, slain our citizens,
And sent our sons and husbands captive.

Tal. Ha, ha, ha!

Count. Laughest thou, wretch? thy mirth shall turn to moan.

Tal. I laugh to see your ladyship so fond,

To think that you have aught but Talbot's shade
Whereon to practise your severity.

Count. Why, art not thou the man?

Tal. I am indeed.

Count. Then have I substance too.

Tal. No, no, I am but shadow of myself:

You are deceiv'd, my substance is not here;

For what you see, is but the smallest part
And least proportion of humanity.

I tell you, madam, were the whole frame here,
It is of such a spacious lofty pitch,
Your roof were not sufficient to contain it.

Count. This is a a riddling merchant for the nonce;

He will be here, and yet he is not here:

How can these contradictions agree?

Tal. That will I show you presently.

He winds a Horn. Drums heard; then a Peal of Orphan. The Gates being forced, enter Soldier.

How say you, madam? are you now persuaded,
That Talbot is but shadow of himself?

These are his substance, sinews, arms, and strength,

With which he yoketh your rebellious necks;

Razeth your cities, and subverts your towns,
And in a moment makes them desolate.

Count. Victorious Talbot! pardon my abuse:
I find thou art no less than fame hath bruised,
And more than may be gather'd by thy shape.

Let my presumption not provoke thy wrath:
For I am sorry, that with reverence
I did not entertain thee as thou art.

Tal. Be not dismay'd, fair lady; nor misconstrue
The mind of Talbot, as you did mistake
The outward composition of his body.

What you have done, hath not offended me;
No other satisfaction do I crave.

But only (with your patience,) that we may

Taste of your wine, and see what cates you have;
For soldiers' stomachs always serve them well.
FIRST PART OF

Act 2

Count. With all my heart; and think me honoured To fear so great a warrior in my house. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—London. The Temple Garden.

Enter the Earl of Somerset, Suffolk, and Warwick; Richard Plantagenet, Vernon, and another Lawyer.

Suff. Great lords, and gentlemen, what means this silence?

Dare no man answer in a case of truth?

Suf. Within the Temple hall we were too loud: The foreman's sentence was more than his best.

Plan. Then say at once, If I maintain'd the truth; Or, else, was wrangling Somerset in the error?

Suf. 'Tis my opinion, I have been a true man in the law; And after ye, and frame me my will to it; And, therefore, frame the law unto my will.

Suf. Judge you, my lord of Warwick, then between us.

War. Between two hawks, which flies the higher pitch,

Between two dogs, which hath the deeper mouth,

Between two blades, which bears the better temper,

Between two horses, which doth bear him best,

Between two girls, which hath the merriest eye,

I have, perhaps, some shallow spirit of judgment; But in these nice sharp quilletts of the law,

Good faith, I'm no wiser than a trained fox.

Plan. Tut, tut, tut, here is a mannerly forbearance;

The truth appears so naked on my side,

That any purblind eye may find it out.

Suf. And on my side it is so well appall'd,

So clear, so shining, and so evident,

That it will glimmer through a blind man's eye.

Plan. Since you are tongue-tied, and so loath to speak,

In such significant proclamations, I have thought.

Let him, that is a true-born gentleman,

And stands upon the honour of his birth,

If he suppose that I have pleaded truth,

From this short pleader frame my will to it.

Suf. Let him that is no coward, nor no flatterer,

But dare maintain the party of the truth,

Pluck a red rose from off this thorn with me.

War. I love no colours; and, without all colour

Of base insinuating flattery.

I pluck this white rose, with Plantagenet.

Suf. I pluck this red rose, with young Somerset;

And doth he hold the right, or not?

Ver. Stay, lords, and gentlemen; and pluck no more,

Till you conclude—that be, upon whose side

Those two roses are cropped from one tree,

Shall yield the other in the right opinion.

Suf. Good master Vernon, it is well object'd;

If I have fewest, I subscribe in silence.

Plan. And I.

Ver. Then, for the truth and plainness of the case,

I pluck this pale and maiden blossom here,

Giving my verdict on the white rose side.

Suf. Prick not your finger as you pluck it off;

Lest, bleeding, you do paint the white rose red,

And fall on my side so against your will.

Ver. If I, my lord, for my opinion bleed,

Opposed to your bloody banner—

And keep me on the side where still I am.

Suf. Well, well, come on; Who else?

Law. Unless my study and my books be false,

The argument you hold, was wrong in you.

[To Somerset.

In sign whereof, I pluck a white rose too.

Plan. Now, Somerset, where is your argument?

Suff. Here, master Vernon:—meditating that,

Shall die your white rose in a bloody red.

Plan. Mean time, your checks do counterfeite our roses;

For pale they look with fear, as witnessing

The truth on our side.

Suf. No, Plantagenet; Tis not for fear; but anger,— that thy checks

Blush for pure shame, to counterfeit our roses;

And yet thy tongue will not confess thy error.

Plan. Hath not thy rose a canker, Somerset?

Suf. Hath not thy rose a thorn, plantagenet?

Plan. Ay, sharp and piercing, to maintain his truth;

Whiles thy consuming canker eats his falsehood.

Suf. Well, I'll find friends to wear my bleeding

That shall maintain what I have said is true,

Where false Plantagenet dare not be seen.

Plan. Now, by this maiden blossom in my hand,

I scorn thee, and thy fashion, passion boy.

Suf. Turn not thy scorn this way, Plantagenet.

Plan. Proud Poole, I will; and scorn both him and thee,

To scorn my part thereof into thy throat.

Suf. Away, away, good William De-la-Poole.

We grace the yeoman, by conversing with him.

War. Now, by God's will, thou wrong'st him,

His grandfather was Lionel, duke of Clarence,

Third son to the third Edward king of England;

Spring crested yeomen from so deep a root?

I'll prove one better man, by thy example,

Or durst not, for his craven heart, say thus.

Suf. By him that made me, I'll maintain my words

On any sort of ground in Christendom:

Was not thy father, Richard, earl of Cambridge,

For treason executed in our late king's days?

And, by his treason, stand'st not thou attained,

Corrupted, and exempt from ancient gentry? His trespass yet lives guilty in thy blood;

And, till thou be restor'd, thou art a yeoman.

Plan. My father was attainted, not condemned;

Cried up to die for treason, but no traitor;

And that I'll prove more than better man,

Somerset, Warrington, and Poole, were growing time once riper'n to my will.

For your partaker Poole, and you yourself,

I'll note you in my book of memory,

To compass this apprehension:

Look to it well; and say you are well warn'd.

Suf. Ay, thou shalt find us ready for thee still:

And know us, by these colours, for thy foes:

For these my friends, in spite of thee, shall wear.

Plan. And, by my soul, this pale and angry rose,

As cognizance of my blood-drinking hate,

Will I for ever, and my faction, wear;

And, till I bear'st him on the place's privilege,

Or flourish to the height of my degree.

Look forward, and be chok'd with thy ambition!

And so farewell, until I meet thee next. [Exit.

Suf. Have with thee, Poole.—Farewell, ambitious Richard. [Exit.

Plan. How I am bray'd, and must perforce enforce

To this house, War. This blot, that they object against your shall be wip'd out in the next parliament,

Call'd for the truce of Winchester and Gloster:

And, if thou be not then created York,

I will not live to be accosted Warwick.

Mean time, in signs of my love to thee,

Against proud Somerset, and William Poole,

Will I upon thy party wear this rose:

And never will it be wear'd for thee.

Grown to this faction, in the Temple garden,

Shall send, between the red rose and the white,

A thousand souls to death and deadly night.

Suf. Hath not thy master Vernon, I am bound to you,

That you on my behalf would pluck a flower.

Ver. In your behalf still will I wear the same.

Law. And so will I.

Suf. Thanks, my good sir,—

Come, let us four to dinner; I dare say,

This quarrel will drink blood another day. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—At the same. A Room in the Tower.

Enter Mortimer, brought in a chair by Two Keepers.

Mor. Kind keepers of my weak decaying age,
KING HENRY VI.

Let dying Mortimer here rest himself. —
Even like a man new haled from the rack,
So fare my limbs with long imprisonment:
And though my eyes be bulging, and my brains
Nestor-like aged, in an age of care,
Argue the end of Edmund Mortimer.
These eyes, — like lamps whose wasting oil is Wax dim, as drawing to their exponent:
Weak shoulders, overborne with burd'ning griefs;
And pithless arms, like to a wither'd vine
That yields its leaves, and clings to the ground: —
Yet are these feet — whose strengthless stay is numb,
Unable to support this lump of clay —
So weakly didged as to get up, I say,
As witting I no other comfort have. —
But tell me, keeper, will my nephew come?

I Keep. Richard Plantagenet, my lord, will come:
We sent unto the Temple, to his chamber;
And answer was return'd, that he will come.

Mor. Enough; my soul shall then be satisfied. —
Poor gentleman! his wrong doth equal mine.
Since Henry Monmouth first began to reign,
(Before whose glory I was great in arms,)
This loathsome sequestration have I had;
And even since then hath Richard been obscure'd,
Doing no good or harm to either kingdom;
But now, the arbitrator of desairs,
Just death, kind umpire of men's miseries,
With sweet enlargement doth dismiss me hence;
I would, his troubles likewise were expir'd,
That so he might recover what was lost.

Enter Richard Plantagenet.

I Keep. My lord, your loving nephew now is come.
Mor. Richard Plantagenet, my friend? Is he come?

Plan. Ay, noble uncle, thus ignobly us'd,
Your nephew, late despis'd Richard, comes.
Mor. Direct mine ears, I may embrace his neck,
And in his bosom spend my latter gasp:
O, tell me, when my lips do touch his cheeks,
That I may kindly give one fainting kiss. —
And now declare, sweet stem from York's great stock,
Why didst thou say — of late thou wert despis'd? —
Plan. First, lean thine aged back against mine arm;
And, in that ease, I'll tell thee my disease.
This day, in argument upon a case,
Some wo'rded there a thing 'twixt us, my lord, and me:
Among which terms, he used his lavish tongue,
And did upbraiid me with my father's death;
Which obloquy set bars before my tongue,
Else when I uttered, I had requir'd him;
Therefore, good uncle, — for my father's sake,
In honour of a true Plantagenet,
And for alliance's sake, — declare the cause
My father, earl of Cambridge, lost his head.
Mor. That cause, fair nephew, that imprison'd me,
And hath detain'd me, all my flow'ring youth,
Within a thicksome dungeon, there to pine,
Was cursed instrument of his deserv'd
Plan. Discover more at large what cause that was;
For I am ignorant, and cannot guess.
Mor. I tell; if that my fading breath permit,
And death approach not ere my tale be done.
Henry the fourth, grandfather to this king,
Depos'd his nephew Richard; Edward's son,
The first-born, he his advancement to the throne:
Of Edward king, the third of that descent:
During whose reign, the Percies of the north,
Finding his usurpation most unjust,
Endeavou'd my ad'vancement to the throne:
The reason mov'd these warlike lords to this,
Was — for that young king Richard thus remov'd,
Leaving no heir begotten of his body,
I was the next by birth and parentage;
For by my mother I derived am
Of Lionel duke of Clarence, the third son
To king Edward the third, whereas he.
From John of Gaunt doth bring his pedigree,
Being but fourth of that heroic line.
But mark; as, in this haughty great attempt,
They laboured to plant the right of Angels, I
Lost my liberty, and they their lives.
Long after this, when Henry the fifth,
Succeeding his father Bolingbroke — did reign,
Thy father's earl of Cambridge, then deriv'd
From famous Edmund Langley, duke of York —
Marrying my sister, that thy mother was,
Again, in pity of my hard distress,
Levied an army, and dream'd of redeeming,
And have instail'd me in the diadem:
But, as the rest, so fell that noble earl,
And was beheaded. Thus the Mortimers,
In whom the title rest'd, were suppress'd

Plan. Of which, my lord, your honour is the last.
Mor. True; and thou seest, that I no issue have;
And that my fainting words do warrant death:
Thou art my heir; the rest, I wish thee gather;
And yet be wary in thy studious care.

Plan. Thy grave admonishments prevail with me.
But yet, methinks, my father's execution
Was nothing less than bloody and base.
Mor. With silence, nephew, be thou politic;
Strong-fix'd is the house of Lancaster,
And, like a mountain, not to be remov'd.
But now thy uncle is remov'd from thence;
As princes do their courts, when they are cloy'd
With long continuance in a settled place.

Plan. O, uncle, would so much part of my young years
Might but redeem the passage of your age!
Mor. Thou dost then wrong me; as the slaughter'd doth,
Which give many wounds, when one will kill.
Mourn not, except thou sorrow for my good;
Only, give order for my funeral;
And so farewell; and fair be all thy hopes!
And prosperous be thy life, in peace, and war!

[Dies.]

Plan. And peace, no war, belal thy parting soul!
In prison hast thou spent a pilgrimage,
And like a hermit overpass'd thy days. —
Well, I will lock his coffin in my heart;
And what I do imagine, let that rest —
Keepers, convey him hence: and I myself
Will see his burial better than his life. —

[Exit.]

ACT III.

Flourish. Enter King Henry, Exeter, Gloster, Warwick, Somerset, and Suffolk; the Bishop of Winchester, Richard Plantagenet, and others.

Gloster offers to put up a bill; Winchester matches it, and tears it.

Win. Com'st thou with deep premeditated lines,
With written pamphlets studiously devis'd,
Humphrey of Gloster? if thou canst accuse,
Or aught intend'st to lay unto my charge,
Do it without invention suddenly;
As I with sudden and extemporaneous speech
Purpose to answer what thou canst object.

Glo. Presumptuous priest! this place commands
my patience,
Or than should find thou hast dishonour'd me.
Think not, although in writing I prefer'd
The manner of thy vile outrageous crimes.
That therefore I have forg'd, or am not able
To avow thee in the method of confession:
No, woman, such is thy audacious wickedness,
Thy lewd, pestiferous, and dissentient pranks,
As very infants prattle of thy pride.
Thou art a most pernicious bane,
For wroth by nature, enemy to peace:
Lascivious, wanton, more than well becometh
A man of thy profession, and degree;
And for thy treachery, what's that to manifest?
In that, And heard a trap to take my life,
As well at London bridge, as at the Tower?
Beside, I fear me, if thy thoughts were sifted,
The king, thy sovereign, is not quite exempt
From envious malice of thy swelling heart.
Win. Groser, I do defy thee.—Lords, vouchsafe
To give me hearing what I shall say.
If I were covetous, ambitious, or perverse,
As he will have me, how am I so poor?
Or how hast thou, I seek not to advance
Or raise myself, but keep my wonted calling?
And for dissertation, Who prefereth thee
More than I do, or any other priest?
Nor pardonest me, it is not that offendeth;
It is not that, that hath incensed the Duke;
It is, because no one should sway but he;
No one, but he, should be about the ear
And makes him roar these accusations forth.
But he shall know, I am as good—
Glo. Thou hasten of my grandfather!
Win. Ay, lordly sir, For what are you, I pray,
But one impertinent in another's throne?
Glo. Am I not the protector, and supreme Presbyter, and prince of the church?
Win. Yes, as an outlaw in a castle keeps,
And useth it to patronage his theft.
Win. Unseverest thievish!—Glo.
Win. Thou art reverent,
Teaching the spiritual function, not thy life.
Win. This Rome shall remedy.
War. Sow. My lord, it was your duty to forbear.
Win. Ay, see, the bishop be not overborne.
Sow. Methinks, my lord should be religious,
And know the office that belongs to such.
War. Methinks, his lordship should be humbler;
It were not so becomes him there.
Sow. Yes, when his holy state is touch'd so near.
War. State holy, or unhallowed, what of that?
Is not his grace protector to the church of War?
See, must hold his tongue; Let it be said, Speak, shrill, when you should;
Must your voice resound above your lords?
Win. Would you have a filing at Winchester. [Aside.]
K. Hen. Uncies of Gloster, and of Winchester,
The special watchmen of our English weal;
I would prevail, if prayers might prevail,
To join your hearts in love and unity,
O, what a scandal is it to our crown,
That two such noble peers as ye, should jar!
Believe me, lords, your tender years can tell,
Civil dissertation is a viperous worm,
That gnaws the very bowels of the commonwealth—
For thine own weakness: Down with the twain coats!
What tumult's this?
War. An uproar, I dare warrant,
Begun among malice of the bishop's men.
[Aside again; Stones! Stones! Stones!]
Enter the Mayor of London, attend'd.
May. O, my most good lords— and virtuous Henry,— Pit the city of London, pit up
The bishop and the duke of Gloster's men,
Forbidden late to carry any weapon,
I have fill'd their pockets full of hard stones—
And hang'd the themselves in contrary parts,
I pe't so fast at one another's pace,
That many have their giddy brains knock'd out.
Our windows are broke down in every part.
And we, for fear, compell'd to shut our shops.

Enter scurrilling, the Retainers of Gloster and Winchester, with bloody pates.
K. Hen. We charge you, on allegiance to ourself,
To hold your slaught'ring hands, and keep the Fray, uncle Gloster, mitigate this strife.
1 Ser. Nay, if we be Forbidden stones, we'll fall to it with our teeth.
2 Ser. Do what ye dare, we are as resolute.

Glo. You of my household, leave this peevish
broll,
And set this unaccustomed fight aside.
1 Ser. We, lord, we know your grace to be a man
Just and upright: and, for your royal birth,
Inferior to none, but his majesty:
And, ere He shall submit, or I will never yield.

Glo. Compassion on the king commands me stoop;
Or I would see his heart out, eee the priest
Should have but that privilege of me.
War. Behold, my lord of Winchester, the duke
Hath banish'd my disorderly discontented fury,
As by his smooth'd brow it doth appear;
Why love churchmen take delight in broils?
Glo. Here, Winchester, I offer thee my hand.
K. Hen. Eye, uncle Beaufort! I have heard you preach,
That malice was a great and grievous sin;
And will not you maintain the thing you teach,
But prove a chief offender in the same?
War. Sweet king!—the bishop hath a kindly grind.
For shaming my lord of Winchester! relent;
What, shall a child instruct you what to do?
Win. Well, duke of Gloster, I will yield to thee.
Love for thy love, and hand for hand I give.
Glo. Good eye; but, I fear me, with a hollow heart.
See here, my friends, and loving countrymen.
This token ser'veth for a flag of trust,
Betwixt ourselves, and all our followers:
So, my good God, as I dissemble not.
Win. So help me God, as I intend it not!

K. Hen. O loving uncle, kind duke of Gloster,
How is it I am made by this contract--
Away, my masters! trouble us no more;
But join in friendship, as your lords have done.
1 Ser. Content; I'll to the surgeon:
2 Ser. And so will I.
Act 3.

KING HENRY VI.

3 Serv. And I will see what physic the tavern affords.

[Exeunt Servants, Mayor, &c.]

War. Accept this scroll, most gracious sovereign;
Which in the right of Richard Plantagenet
We do exhibit to your majesty.

Glo. Well urg'd, my lord of Warwick,—for, sweet prince,
If an your grace mark every circumstance,
You have great reason to do Richard right:
Especially, for those occasions
At which your majesty, I told your majesty.

K. Hen. And those occasions, uncle, were of force:
Therefore my loving lords, our pleasure is,
That Richard be restored to his blood.

War. Let Richard be restored to his blood;
So shall his father's wrongs be recompens'd.

Win. As will the rest, so willeth Winchester.

K. Hen. If Richard will be true, not that alone,
But all the whole inheritance I give,
That doth belong unto the house of York,
From whence you spring by lineal descent.

Plan. Thy humble servant vows obedience,
And humble service, till the point of death.

K. Hen. Stoop then, and set your knee against my foot:
And, in regard of that duty done,
I give thee with the valiant sword of York:
Rise, Richard, like a true Plantagenet;
And rise created princely duke of York.

Plan. And so thrive Richard, as thy foes may fall!
And as my duty spring, so perish they
That grudge one thought against your majesty!

All. Welcome, high prince, the mighty duke of York!

Som. Perish, base prince, ignoble duke of York!

[Glo. Now will it best avail your majesty,
To cross the seas, and to be crown'd in France:
The presence of a king engenders love
Amongst his subjects, and his loyal friends;
As it disanimates his enemies.

K. Hen. When Gloster says the word, king Henry goes;
For friendly counsel cuts off many foes.

Glo. Your ships already are in readiness.

[Exeunt all but Exeter.]

Exe. Aye, we may march In England, or in France,
Not seeing what is likely to ensue:
This late discretion, grown betwixt the peers,
Brass and the felted ashes of the nation,
And will at last break out into a flame;
As Lester'd members rot but by degrees,
Till bones, and flesh, and sinews, fall away.
So will this base and envious discord breed.
And now I fear that fatal prophecy,
Which, in the time of Henry, nam'd the fifth,
Was in the mouth of every sucking babe,—
That Henry, born at Monmouth, should win all;
And Henry, born at Windsor, should lose all:
Which is so plain, that Exeter doth wish
His days may finish ere that hapless time.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—France. Before Rouen.

Enter La Pucelle disguised, and Soldiers dressed like Countrymen, with sacks upon their backs.

Puc. These are the city gates, the gates of Rodan,
Through which our policy must make a breach:
Take heed, be wary how you place your words;
Talk ill the vulgar card of France,
That come to gather money for their coin.
If we have entrance, (as, I hope, we shall,)
And that we find the slothful watch but weak,
I'll by slight give notice to our friends,
That Charles the Dauphin may encounter them.

1 Sold. Our sacks shall be a mean to sack the city,
And we be lords and rulers over Rouen;
Therefore we'll knock.

Guard. [Within.] Qui est là?

Puc. Pauvres, pauvres gens de France:
Poor market-folks, that come to sell their corn.

Guard. Enter, go in; the market-bell is rung.

[Opens the gates.]

Puc. Now, Rouen, I'll shake thy bulwarks to the ground.

Pucelle, &c. enter the city.

Enter Charles, Bastard of Orleans, Aleneon, and Forez.

Char. Saint Dennis bless this happy stratagem!
And once again we'll sleep secure in Rouen.

Bast. Here enter'd Pucelle, and her practicians;
Now she is there, how will she specify
Where is the best and safest passage in?

Aen. By thrusting out a torch from yonder tower;
Which, once discern'd, shows, that her meaning is
No way to that, for weakness, which she enter'd.

Enter La Pucelle on a battlement: holding out a torch burning.

Puc. Behold, this is the happy wedding torch,
That jointeth Rouen unto her countrymen;
But burning fatal to the Talbotites.

Bast. See, noble Charles! the beacon of our friends,
The burning torch in yonder turret stands.
Char. Now shine it like a comet of revenge,
A prophet to the fall of all our foes!

Aen. Behold no time. Delays have dangerous ends;
Enter, and cry—The Dauphin!—presently,
And then do execution on the watch. [They enter.]

Alarums. Enter Talbot, and certain English.

Tal. France, thou shalt rue this treason with thy tears.
If Talbot but survive thy treachery—
Pucelle, that witch, that damned sorceress,
Hath wrought this hellish mischief unawares,
That hardly we escap'd the pride of France.

[Exeunt to the town.]

Alarum: Excursions. Enter, from the town, Bedford, brought in sick, in a chair, with Talbot, Burgundy, and the English Forces. Then, enter on the walls, La Pucelle, Charles, Bastard, Aleneon, and others.

Puc. Good morrow, gallants! want ye corn for bread?
I think, the duke of Burgundy will fast,
Before he'll buy again at such a rate:
"Twas full of darnel; Do you like the taste?
Bur. Scoff on, vile fiend, and shameless courttezan!
I trust, ere long, to choke thee with thine own,
And make thee curse the harvest of that corn.
Char. Your grace may starve, perhaps, before that time.
Red. O, let no words, but deeds, revenge this treason!
Puc. What will you do, good grey-beard? break a lance,
And run a tilt at death within a chair?

Tal. Foul fiend of France, and hag of all despite,
Encompass'd with thy lustful parameters!
Becomes it thee to taunt his valiant age,
And twit with cowardice a man half dead?
Darnel, I'll have a bane with you again,
Or else let Talbot perish with this shame.
Puc. Are you so hot, sir?—Yet, Pucelle, hold thy peace;
If Talbot do not surrender, rain will follow.—

[Talbot, and the rest, consult together.]
God speed the parliament! who shall be the speaker?

2 D
Tel. Dare ye come forth, and meet me in the field?

Puc. Believe, your lordship take us then for fools,
To try if that our own selves, be ours, or no.

Tel. I speak not to that railing Hecate,
But unto thee, Alencon, and the rest:
Will ye, like soldiers, come and fight it out?

Alen. Signior, no.

Tel. Signior, hang I—base malcontents of France!—
Like peasanfoot-boys do they keep the walls,
And dare not take the field, like gentlemen.

Puc. Captains, away; let's get us from the walls;
For Talbot means no goodness, by his looks.

God be wil' you, my lord! we came, sir, but to tell

That we are here.

[Exeunt La Pucelle, &c. from the wall.

Tel. And there will we be too, ere it be long,
Or else reproach be Talbot's greatest fame!—

Vow, Burgundy, by honour of thy house,
(Prick'd on by publick wrongs, sustain'd in France,)—
Either to get the town again, or die:
And I,—as sure as English Henry lives,
And as his father here was conqueror;
As sure as in this late-betrayed town,
Great Cour-de-lion's heart was buried;
So sure I sweat, to get the town, or die.
Will ye, like soldiers, come and fight it out.

Bed. And Talbot, do not so dishonour me;
Here I will sit before the walls of Rouen,
And will be partner of your zeal, or woe.

Bar. Most regal Presence, let us now persuade you,

Bed. Not to be gone from hence; for once I read
That stout Wendragon, in his litter, sick,
Came to the field, and vanquished his foes
—Methinks, I should revive the soldiers' hearts,
Because I ever found them as myself.

Tel. Undaunted spirit in a dying breast!—
Then be it so; let's keep the field secure;
And now no more ado, brave Burgundy,
But gather our forces out of hand,
And set upon our boasting enemy.

[Exeunt. Burgundy, Talbot, and Forces, leaving Bedford, and others.

Alarm : Excursions. Enter Sir John Fastolfe, and a Captain.

Cap. Whither away, Sir John Fastolfe, in such haste?
Fast. Whither away? to save myself by flight;
We are like to have the overthrow again.
Cap. What! will you fly, and leave lord Talbot?
Fast. Ay,
All the Talbott in the world, to save my life.
[Exeit. Cap. Cowardly knight! ill Fortune follow thee!—
[Exeit.

Retreat : Excursions. Enter, from the town, La Pucelle, Alencon, Charles, &c. and evenyt fleeing.

Bed. Now, quiet soul, depart when heaven please:
For I have seen our enemies' overthrow.
What is the trust or strength of foolish man?
They, that of late were daring with their souls,
Are glad and fail by flight to save themselves.
[Dies, and is carried off in his chair.

Alarm : Enter Talbot, Burgundy, and others.

Tel. Last, and recover'd in a day again!
This is a double honour, Burgundy:
Yet, heavens have glory for this victory!

Bar. Worthy and martial Talbot, Burgundy,
Renowned bearers of your noble deeds,
Thy noble deeds, as valour's monument.

Tel. That's a gentle duke. But where is Pucelle now?
I think, her old familiar is asleep.

Now where's the Bastard's braves, and Charles his?)

What, all a-mort? Rouen hangs her head for grief,
That such a valiant company are fled.
Now will we take some order in the town,
Placing therein some expert officers;
And then depart to Paris, to take the city.
For there young Harry, with his noble lies, lies.

Bar. What wills lord Talbot, pleaseth Burgundy.
Tel. But yet, before we go, let's not forget
The valiant deeds of Bedford, late the gentleman.
But see his exequies fulfill'd in Rouen;
A braver soldier never couched lance,
A gentler heart did never sway in court;
But kings, and mightiest potentates, must die;
For that's the end of human misery.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. — The Plain near the City.

Enter Charles, the Bastard, Alencon, La Pucelle, and Forces.

Puc. Dismay not, princes, at this accident,
Nor grieve that Rouen is so recovered;
Care is no coute, but rather corrosive.
For things that are not to be remedied,
Let frantick Talbot triumph for a while,
And he be a peacock sweep along his tail;
We'll give him such philosophy, and take a way his train;
If Dauphin, and the rest, will be but dull'd.
Char. We have been guided by thee hitherto,
And of thy cunning had no difference;
One thing, thou, and I will never break trust.
Bast. Search out thy witt with secret policies,
And we will make thee famous through the world.

Alen. We'll set thy statue in some holy Place,
And have thee reverence'd like a blessed saint;
Empioy thee then, sweet virgin, for our good.

Puc. Then thus it must be; this doth Joan devise.
By fair persuasions, mix'd with sugar'd words,
We will entice the duke of Burgundy.

To leave the Talbot, and to follow us.
Char. Ay, marry, sweeting, if we could do that,
France were no place for Henry's warriors;
Nor shound that nation boast it so with us,
But be extirp'd from our provinces.

Alen. For ever should they be expus'd from

And not have title to an earldom here,

Puc. Your honour shall perceive how I will work,
To bring this matter to the wished end.

[Drums heard.

Ifark! by the sound of drum, you may perceive
Their powers are marching unto Parisward.

An English March. Enter, and pass over at a distance, Talbot and his Forces.

There goes the Talbot, with his colours spread;
And all the troops of English after him.

A French March. Enter the Duke of Burgundy and Forces.

Now in the rearward, comes the duke, and his;
Fortune, in favour, makes him lag behind.
Summon a parley, we will talk with him.

[Drum sounded.

Char. A parley with the duke of Burgundy.
Bar. Who craves a parley with the Burgundy?

Puc. The princely Charles of France, thy countryman.

Bar. What say'st thou, Charles? for I am marching hence.
Char. Speak, Pucelle; and enchant him with thy words.

Puc. Brave Burgundy, unbounded hope of France,
Stay, let thy humble handmaid speak to thee.

Bar. Speak on; but be not over- tedious.
Tell him we come from thy country, look on fertile France,
And see the cities and the towns defac'd
By wasting ruin of the cruel foe.

As looks the mother on her lowly babe,
When death doth close his tender dying eyes,
See, see, the pining malady of France; Behold the wounds, the most unnatural wounds, Which thou thyself hast given to thy own breast! Or, turn thy edged sword another way; Strike those that hurt, and hurt not those that help! One drop of blood, drawn from thy country's blossom, Should grieve thee more than streams of foreign gore; Return thee, therefore, with a flood of tears, And wash away thy country's stained spots! But, either she hath bewitch'd me with her words, Or nature makes me suddenly relent.

Ascribes, besides, all French and France exclaims on thee, Doubting thy birth and lawful progeny, Who join'st thou with, but with a lodly nation, That will not trust thee, but for profit's sake? When Talbot hast set footonce in France, And fashion'd thee that instrument of ill, Who then, but English Henry, will be lord, And thou be thrust out, like a fugitive? Call we to mind,—and mark but this, for proof;— Was not the duke of Orleans thy foe? And was he not in England prisoner? But, when they heard he was thine enemy, They set him free, without his ransome paid, In spite of Burgundy, and all his friends. See then! thou fights'at against thy countrymen, And join'st with them will be thy slaughter-men. Come, come, return: return, thou wounding lord; Charles, and the rest, will take thee in their arms. But, I am vanquish'd; these haughty words of her's, Have but a'd me like roaring cannon-shot, And made me almost yield upon my knees,— For give me, country, and sweet countrymen! And, lords, accept this hearty kind embrace: My forces, all my power of sum are yours;— So, farewell, Talbot: I'll no longer trust thee. Puc. Done like a Frenchman; turn, and turn again! Char. Welcome, brave duke! thy friendship makes us fresh. Bast. And doth beget new courage in our breasts. Alien. Pucelle hath bravely play'd her part in this, And doth deserve a coronet of gold. Char. Now let us on, my lords, and join our powers; And seek how we may prejudice the foe. [Exeunt.]

Enter King Henry, Gloster, and other Lords, Ver- non, Basset, &c. To them Talbot, and some of his Officers.

Tal. My gracious prince,—and honourable peers, Hearing of your arrival in this realm, I have awhile given truce unto my wars, To do my duty to my sovereign: In sign whereof, this arm,—that hath proclaim'd To your obedience fifty fortresses, Twelve cities, and seven walled towns of strength, Before the war we recked. When but one season,— Let's fall his sword before your highness' feet; And, with submissive loyalty of heart, Ascribes the glory of his conquast got, Fit to my god, and unto your grace. K. Hen. Is this the lord Talbot, uncle Gloster, That hath so long been resident in France? Glo. Yes, if it please your majesty, my liege. K. Hen. We come, brave captain, and victorious lord! When I was young, (as yet I am not old,) I do remember how my father said, A star had shone, and marked him sword. Long since we were resolved of your truth, Your faithful service, and your toll in war; Yet never have you tasted our reward, Or been requerd with so much as thanks. Because till now we never saw your face: Therefore, stand up; and, for these good deserts, We here create you to the duke of Shrewsbury; And in our coronation take your place. [Exeunt King Henry, Gloster, Talbot, and Nobles.

Ver. Now, sir, to you, that more so hot at sea, Disgracing of these colours that I wear In honour of my noble lord of York,— Dar'st thou maintain the former words thou said'st? Bas. Yes, sir; as well as you dare patronage The envious barking of thy saucy tongue Against my lord, the duke of Somerset. Ver. Sirrah, thy lord I honour as he is. Bas. Why, what is he? as good a man as York. Ver. Hark ye; not so: in witness take ye that. Bas. Villain, thou know'st, the law of arms is such, That, whose draws a sword, 'tis present death; Or else this blow should broach thy dearest blood. But I'll unto his majesty, and crave I may have liberty to venge this wrong; When thou shalt see, I'll meet thee to thy cost. Ver. Well, miscreant, I'll be there as soon as you; And, after, meet you sooner than you would. [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The same. A Room of State.

Enter King Henry, Gloster, Exeter, York, Suffolk, Somerset, Winchester, Warwick, Talbot, the Go- vernor of Paris, and others.

Glo. Lord bishop, set the crown upon his head. Win. God save king Henry, of that name the sixth! Glo. Now, governor of Paris, take your oath. [Governor kneels. That you elect no other king but him: Esteem none friends, but such as are his friends, And none your foes, but such as shall pretend Malicious practices against his state: This shall ye do, so help you righteous God! [Exeunt Gov. and his Train. Enter Sir John Fastolfe.

Fast. My gracious sovereign, as I rode from Calais, To haste unto your coronation, A letter was deliver'd to my hands, Writ to your grace from the duke of Burgundy. Tal. Shame to the duke of Burgundy, and thee! I vow'd, base knight, when I did meet thee next, To tear the garther from thy craving leg. [Plucking it off. (Which I have done) because unworthy Thou wast installed in that high degree. Pardon me, princely Henry, and the rest: This dastard, at the battle of Patay, Was as true of heart as thou art of arm, And that the French were almost ten to one,— Before we met, or that a stroke was given, Like to a trusty squire, did run away; In which assault we lost twelve hundred men: Myself, and divers gentlemen beside, Were there surpris'd, and taken prisoners. Then judge, great lords, if I have done amiss; Or whether that such cowardly ought to wear This ornament of knighthood, yea, or no. Glo. To say the truth, this fact was infamous, And ill beseeing any common man; Much more a knight, a common, and a leader. Tal. When first this order was ordain'd, my lords, Knights of the garter were of noble birth; Valiant, and virtuous, full of haughty courage.
Such as were grown to credit by the wars;
Not fearing death, nor shrinking for distress;
But always resolute in most extremities.
He then, that is not furnish'd in this sort,
Doth but usurp the sacred name of knight,
Fondly to be this most honorable order.
And should (if I were worthy to be judge)
Be quite degraded, like a hedge-born slave
That doth presume to boast of gentle blood.
K. Hen. To thy countrymen! thou hast a thy doom:
Be packing therefore, thou that wast a knight;
Henceforth we banish thee, on pain of death.—

And now, my lord protector, view the letter sent from our uncle duke of Burgundy:
Glo. What means his grace, that he hath chang'd his style?—[Reading the superscription.] No more bus, plain and bluntly.—To the king?
Hath he forgot, he is his sovereign?
Or doth this chariot supremacy pretend some alteration in good will?
What's here?—I have, upon especial cause,—[Reads.]
Moved with compassion of my country's woe,
Together with the pitiful complaints
Of those, whose persons and estates,
Forsaken your pernicious faction,
And join'd with Charles, the rightful king of France.
O monstrous treachery! Can this be so?
This is an act of malice, and obstinacy.
There should be found such false dissembling
guile?
K. Hen. What! doth my uncle Burgundy re-

Glo. He doth, my lord; and is become your foe.
K. Hen. Is that the worst, this letter doth contain
Glo. It is the worst, and all, my lord, he writes.
K. Hen. Why then, lord Talbot there shall talk with
him,
And give him challengement for this abuse:—
My lord, how say you? are you not content?
Tal. Content, my liege? Yes; but that I am prevented,
I should have begin'd I might have been employ'd.
K. Hen. Then gather strength, and march unto him straight;
Let him perceive, how ill we brook his treason;
And what offence it is, to flout his friends.
Tal. I go, my lord; in heart desiring still,
You may behold confusion of your foes. [Exit.]

Enter Vernon and Basset.

Ver. Grant me the combat, gracious sovereign!
Bass. And me, my lord, grant me the combat too.
York. This is my servant; Hear him, noble prince Som. And this is mine; Sweet Henry, favour
him!
K. Hen. Be patient, lords; and give them leave to speak.
War. Gentlemen, what makes you thus exclaim?
And wherefore crave you combat? or with whom?
Ver. With him, my lord; for he hath done me wrong.
Bass. And with him; for he hath done me
K. Hen. What is that wrong whereby you both complain?
First let me know, and then I'll answer you.
Bass. This is from England into France.
This fellow here, with envious carping tongue,
Upbursed me about the rose I wear:
Saying,—the sanguine colour of the leaves
Did represent my master's blushing cheeks,
When stubbornly he did repugn the truth,
About a certain question in the law,
Argued best the duchy of York and him;
With other vile and ignominious terms:
In confusion of which rude reproach,

And in defence of my lord's worthlessness,
I crave the benefit of law of arms.
Ver. And that is my petition, noble lord:
For though he seem, with forged quittance, to Set a gloss upon his bad intents,
Yet know, my lord, I was provok'd by him;
And he first took exceptions at this badge,
Pronouncing,—that the paleness of this flower
Blew from the fairness of my master's heart.
York. Will this not this malice, some man be left?
Som. Your private grudge, my lord of York, will out,
Though 'twere no cunningly you smother it.
K. Hen. Good Lord! what madness rules in brain-sick men?
When, for so slight and frivolous a cause,
Such factions emulations shall arise:—
Good contains both, of York and Somerset,
Quiet yourselves, I pray, and be at peace.
York. Let this dissention first be tried by fight,
And then your highness shall command a peace.
Som. The quarrel toucheth none but us alone;
But we ourselves let us decide it then;
York. There is my pledge; accept it, Somerset.
Ver. Nay, let it rest where it began at first.
Bass. Let them fight it so, mine honest lord.
Glo. Confirm it so? Confounded be your strife!
And perish ye, with your audacious prize!
Presumptuous vassals! I am not thus at hand.
With this immodest clamorous outrage
To liberty and dignity to hep
And you, my lords,—methinks, you do not well,
To bear with their perverse objections;
Much less, to take occasion from their mouths
To raise a vanity betwixt you and me.
Let me persuade you, take a better course.

Exe. It grieves his highness.—Good my lords;
be friends.
K. Hen. Hah! I hate, you that would be combatants:
Henceforth, I charge you, as you love our favour,
Quite to forget this quarrel, and the cause.—
And you, my lords,—remember where we are,
In France, amongst a fickle wavering nation:
If they perceive dissention in our ranks,
And that within ourselves we disagree,
How will their grudging stomachs be provok'd
To wilful disobedience, and rebel?
Beside, What infamy will there arise,
When foreign princes shall be certified,
That, for a toy, a thing of no regard,
Kings, peers, and chief nobility,
Destroy'd themselves, and lost the realm of France?
O, think upon the conquest of my father,
My tender years; and let us not forgo
Our high estate, that was bought with blood;
Let me be umpire in this doubtful strife,
I see no reason, if I wear this rose,
[Putting on a red rose.]

That any one should therefore be suspicious
I more incline to Somerset, than York:
Both are my kinsmen, and I love them both
As well they may upbraide me with my crown,
Because, forsooth, the king of Scots is crown'd.
That your discourses better can persuade,
Than I am able to instruct or teach:
And therefore, as we hither came in peace,
So let us still continue peace and love.
[Aside.]
York. We must institute your grace.
To be our regent in these parts of France:—
And good my lord of Somerset, unite
Your troops of horsemen with his bands of foot:
And your valiant subjects, sons of your progenitors,
Go cheerfully together, and digest
Your angry choler on your enemies.
Myself, my lord protector, and the rest,
After a rest, will return to Caen;
From thence to England, where I hope we long
To be presented, by your victories,
With Charles, Alencon, and that traitorous rout.
[Flourish.]

Enter King Henry, Glo. Som. Wm. Suf. and Basset.
War. My lord of York, I promise you, the king
Prettily, methought, did play the orator.
York. And so he did; but yet I like it not,
In that he wears the badge of Somerset.
War. Tush! I that was but his fancy, blame him
I dare presume, sweet prince, he thought no harm.
York. And, if I wist, he did,—but let it rest;
Other affairs must now be managed.

[Exit York, Warwick, and Vernon.

Exe. Well didst thou, Richard, to suppress thy voice:
For had the passions of thy heart burst out,
I fear we should have seen decipher'd there
More rancorous spite, more furious raging broils,
Than yet can be imagin'd or supposed.
But howsoever, no simple man that sees
This jarring discord of nobility,
This shroud which 'ring of each other round,
This factious bandying of their favourites,
But that it doth presage some ill event.
Tis much, when sweepers are in children's hands;
Our nation's tenantry and their undoing scission;
There comes the ruin, there begins confusion.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—France. Before Bourdeaux.

Enter Talbot, with his Forces.

Tal. Go to the gates of Bourdeaux, trumpeter,
 Summon their general unto the wall.
Trumpet sounds a parley. Enter, on the walls, the General, the French Forces, and others.

English John Talbot, captains, calls you forth,
Servant in arms to Harry king of England;
And thus he would,—Open your city gates,
Be humble to us; call my sovereign yours,
And do him homage as obedient subjects,
And join with us in war to please our power.
But, if you frown upon this present peace,
You tempt the fury of my three attendants,
Lean famine, quartering steel, and climbing fire;
Who, in a moment, even with the earth
Shall lay your stately and airy-braving towers,
If you forsake the offer of their love.
Gen. Thou ominous and fearful owl of death,
Our nation's tenantry and their undoing scourge!
The period of thy tyranny approacheth.
On us thou canst not enter, but by death:
For, I protest, we are well forti'fied,
And strong enough to issue our bloody fight:
If thou retire, the Dauphin, well appointed,
Stands with the snares of war to tangle thee:
On either hand thee there are squadrons pitch'd,
To wall thee from the liberty of flight;
And no man canst thou turn thy redress,
But death doth front thee with apparent spoil,
And pale destruction meets thee in the face.
Ten thousand French have 'trench the sacrament,
To rive their dangerous artillery
Upon no Christian soul but English Talbot.
Lo! there thou stand'st, a breathing valiant man,
Of an invincible unconquerr'd spirit:
This is the latest glory of thy praise,
That I, thy enemy, due thee withal:
For ere the glass, that now begins to run,
Finish the process of his sandy hour,
These thousand, that seem so well courted,
Shall see thee wither'd, bloody, pale, and dead.

[Drum after off.]

Hark! hark! the Dauphin's drum, a warning bell,
Shall be the musick, and put to their wings—
O, negligent and heedless discipline!
How are we park'd, and bounded in a pale;
A little herd of England's timorous deer,
Mars'd with a yelping kennel of French curs!
If we be English deer, be then in blood;
Not rascal-like, to fall down with a pinch;
But rather moody-mad, and desperate stags,
Turn on the bloody hounds with heads of steel,
And make the cowards stand aloc at bay:
Tell every man his life as dear as mine,
And they shall find dear deer of my friends—
God, and Saint George! Talbot, and England's right!
Prosper our colours in this dangerous fight!

[Exit.

SCENE III.—Plains in Gascony.

Enter York, with Forces; to him a Messenger.

York. Are not the speedy scouts return'd again,
That dogg'd the mighty army of the Dauphin?
Mess. They are return'd, my lord; and give
It out,
That he is march'd to Bourdeaux with his power,
To fight with Talbot: As he march'd along,
By your espials were discovered
Two mightier troops than that the Dauphin led;
Which joint with him, and made their march for Bourdeaux.
York. A plague upon that villain Somerset;
That thus delays my promised supply
Of horsemen, that were levied for this siege!
Renowned Talbot doth expect my aid;
And I am low'd by a traitor villain,
And cannot help the noble chevalier:
God comfort him in this necessity.
If he miscarry, farewell wars in France.

Enter Sir William Lucy.

Lucy. Thou princely leader of our English strength,
Never so needful on the earth of France,
Spur to the rescue of the noble Talbot;
Who now is girdled with a waist of iron,
And hemm'd about with grey steel armour
To Bourdeaux, warlike duke! to Bourdeaux, York!
Else, farewell Talbot, France, and England's honour.
York. O God! that Somerset—who in proud heart
Dost stop my cornets—were in Talbot's place!
So should we save a valiant gentleman,
By forfeiting traitor and a coward.
Mad ire, and wrathful fury, makes me weep,
That thus we die, while remiss traitors sleep.
Lucy. O, send some succour to the distress'd lord!
York. Bedight! that was enough for my warlike word:
We mourn, France smiles; we lose, they daily get,
All long of this vile traitor Somerset.
Lucy. Then, God, take mercy on brave Talbot's sons.

And on his son, young John; whom, two hours
I met in travel toward his warlike father! [since,
This seven years did not Talbot see his son;
And now they meet where both their lives are done.
York. Alas! what joy shall noble Talbot have,
To bid his young son welcome to his grave?
Away I vexation almost stops my breath,
That sonn'd friends greet in the hour of death—
Lucy, farewell! no more my fancy can:
But curse the cause I cannot aid the man—
Maine, Hlos, Poictiers, and Tours, are won away,
Long ofl Somerset, and his delay.

Exit. Lucy. O, while the vulture of sedition
Feeds in the bosom of such great commanders,
Sleeping neglect doth betray to loss
The conquest of our scarce-cold conqueror,
That every minute of man's memory
Henry the fifth:—Whiles they each other cross,
Lives, honors, lands, and all, hurry to loss.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.—Other Plains of Gascony.

Enter Somerset, with his Forces; an Officer of Talbot's with him.

Som. It is too late; I cannot send them now:
This expedition was by York, and Talbot,
Too rashly plotted; all our general force
Might with a safety of the very town
Be buckled with the over-daring Talbot;
Hath fulfilled all his gloss of former honour.
By this unheedful, desperate wild adventure
Your Talbot's mark, that must not be in shame.
That, Talbot dead, great York might bear the name.

The first, sir William Lucy, who with me
Bet from our over-match'd forces forth for aid.

Enter Sir William Lucy.

Som. How now, sir William? whither were you meant?

Lucy. Whither, my lord? from bought and sold lord Talbot;
Who, ring'd about with bold adversity,
Cries out for noble York and Somerset,
To beat assailing death from his weak legions.
And whilsts the honourable captain there
Drops bloody sweat from his war-wrestled limbs,
And, in advantage lording, looks for rescue,
You, uncle George, the trust of England's meunour,
Keep off aloof with worthless remonstrance.
Let not your private discreet keep away
The least success that should help Talbot him aid;
Whitebe he, renowned noble gentleman.
Yields up his life unto a world of odds.

Orleans the Hasteard, Charles, and Burgundy,
Aumont, Renfrew, Roscatur, and Talbot,
And Talbot perisheth by your default.

Som. York set him on, York should have sent him aid.
Lucy. And York work as fast upon your grace exclaim;
Swearing that you withheld his levied host,
Collected for this expedition.

Som. York lies; he might have sent and had the hour,
Owe him little duty, and less love;
And take foul scorn, to fawn on him by sending.

Lucy. The fraud of England, not the force of France.

Hath now entrapped the noble-minded Talbot;
Never to England shall bear his life;
But dies, betray'd to famine by your stride.

Som. Come, George, I will dispatch the horsemen straight;
Within six hours they will be at his aid.

Lucy. Too late comes rescue; he is ta'en, or slain:
For by he could not, if he would have fled;
And fly would Talbot never, though he might.

Som. If he be dead, brave Talbot then adieu!
Lucy. York's fame lives in the world, his shame in thee.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The English Camp near Bourdeaux.

Enter Talbot and John his Son.

Tal. O young John Talbot! I did send for thee,
To tutor thee in stratagems of war;
That Talbot's name might be in thee reviv'd,
When speechless age, and weak unable limbs,
Should bring thy father to his drooping chair.
But, O malignant and ill-boding stars!—
Now thou art come with a feast of death,
A terrible and unavailing danger:
Therefore, dear boy, mount on my swiftest horse,
And I'll direct thee how thou shalt escape
By sudden flight; come, daily not, begone.

John. Is my name Talbot? and am I your son?
And shall I fly? O, if you love my mother,
Dishonour not her honourable name,
That, with a bastard and a slave, I am;
The world will say,—He is not Talbot's blood,
That basely fled, when noble Talbot stood.

Tal. Fly, to revenge my death, if I be slain.
John. To revenge, lie, that flies so, will never return again.

Tal. If we both stay, we both are sure to die.

John. Then let me stay; and, father, do you fly:
Your loss is great, so your regard should be;
My worth unknown, no loss is known in me.
Upon my death the French can little boast;
In yours they will, if you all hopes are lost.
Flight cannot stain the honour you have won;
Your Talbot's mark, that must not be in shame.
You fled for vantage, every one will swear;
But, if I bow, they'll eat—'tis for fear.
There is no hope that ever I will star,
If, through the hour, I shrink, so, sink away.
Here, on my knee, I beg mortality.

Rather than life persev'red with infamy.

Tal. Shall all thy mother's hopes lie in one
John. Ay, rather than I'll shame my mother's womb.
Tal. Upon my blessing, I command thee go.
John. To fight I will, but not to fly the foe.

Tal. Part of thy father may be said in thee.
John. No part of him, but will be shame in me.
Tal. Thou never hadst renown, nor canst not lose it.

John. Yes, your renowned name; Shall flight abuse it?

Tal. Thy father's charge shall clear thee from John. That will not answer me, nor witness for me, being slain.
If death be so apparent, then both fly.

Tal. And leave my followers here to fight, and die?

My age, I say, was never tainted with such shame.
John. And shall my youth be guilty of such blame?

No more can I be sever'd from thy side,
Than canst thou yourself in two sides:
Stay, do, go what you will, the like do I;
For live I will not, if my father die.

Tal. Then here I take my leave of thee, fair son,
Born to inherit thy father's fame this afternoon.
Come, side by side together live and die;

And soul with soul from France to heaven fly.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—A Field of Battle.

Alarum. Excursions, wherein Talbot's Son is humbled about, and Talbot rescues him.

Tal. Saint George and victory! fight, soldiers, fight!

The regent hath with Talbot broke his word,
And left us to the rage of France his sword.
Where is John Talbot?—pause and take thy breath;
I gave thee life, and rescu'd thee from death.

John. O twice my father! twice am I thy son:
The blood of Orleans is in me first, was laid down and done;
Till with thy warlike sword, despite of fate,
To my determin'd time thou gav'st new date.

Tal. When from the Dauphin's crest thy sword did shine,
It warm'd thy father's heart with proud desire
Of bold-fac'd victory. Then leaden age,
Quicken'd with youthful spleen, and warlike rage,
Beat down Alencon, Orleans, Burgundy,
And from the pride of Gallia rescu'd thee.
The ireful bastard Orleans—that drew blood
From thee, my boy; and had the maidenhood
Of thy first fight—I soon encountered;
And, interchangeing blows, I quickly shed
Some of his bastard blood; and, in disgrace,
Bespeake him thus; Contaminated, base,
And misbeliever blood I spill of thine,
Mean and right poor; for that pure blood of mine,
Which thou didst force from Talbot, my brave boy—
Here, purposing the bastard to desist,
Came in strong rescue. Speak, thy father's care.
Art thou not weary, John? How dost thou fare?
Wilt thou yet leave the battle, bower, and fly,
Now thou art seal'd the son of chivalry?
Fly, to revenge my death, when I am dead
The help of one stands me in little stead.
O, too much folly is it, well I wot,
As a helpful assistant, I can provide the natural text representation of this document. Here is the text in plain format:

Act 4. KING HENRY VI.

To hazard all our lives in one small boat. If I to-day die with Frenchmen's rage, To-morrow shall I die with mickle age: By me they nothing gain, an if I stay, 'Tis but the short'ning of my life one day; In them is neither die, our household's name, My death's revenge, thy youth, and England's fame:

All these, and more, we hazard by thy stay; All these are saw'd, if thou wilt fly away.

John. The sword of Orleans hath not made me smart, These words of yours draw life-blood from my heart: On that advantage, bought with such a shame, (To save a paley life, and stave bright fame,) Before young Talbot from old Talbot fly, The coward horse, that bears me, fall and die! And like me to the peasant boys of France; To be shame's scorn, and subject of mischance!

Surely, by all the glory you have won, An if I fly, I am not Talbot's son: That is no more of flight, it is no boot; If son to Talbot, die at Talbot's foot.

Tal. Then follow thou thy desperate sire of Crete, Thou Ierous; thy life to me is sweet, If thou wilt fight, fight by thy father's side; And, commendable prov'd, let's die in pride.

SCENE VII.—Another Part of the same.

Alarum: Excursions. Enter Talbot wounded, supported by a Servant.

Tal. Where is my other life?—mine own is gone:
O, where's young Talbot? where is valiant John?— Triumphant death, smear'd with captivity! Young Talbot, that valour made me smile at thee— When he perceiv'd me shrink, and on my knee, His bloody sword he brandish'd over me, And, like a hungry lion, did commence Rough deeds of rage, and stern impatience; But when my angry guardant stood alone, Tender my ruin, and assail'd of none, Dizzy-eyed fury, and great rage of heart, Suddenly made him from my side to start: Into the cluse'tring battle of the French: And in that sea of blood my boy did drench His over-mounting spirit; and there died My Icarus, my blossom, in his pride.

Enter Soldiers, bearing the body of John Talbot.

Serv. O my dear lord! lo, where your son is born!—

Tal. Then antic death, which laugh'd us here to scorn, Anon, from thy insulting tyranny, Coupled in bonds of perpetuity, Two Talbots, winged through the lither sky, In thy despite, shall 'scape mortal'ity. O thou whose wounds become hard-favoured death: Speak to thy father, ere thou yield thy breath: Brave death by speaking, whether he will, or no; Imagine him a Frenchman, and thy foe. Poor boy! he smiles, methinks; as who shouldHad death been French, then death had died to-day. Come, come, and lay him in his father's arms; My spirit can no longer bear these harms. Soldiers, adieu! I have what I would have, Now my old arms are young John Talbot's grave.

Died. Alarums. Exeunt Soldiers and Servant, leaving the two bodies. Enter Charles, Alencon, Burgundy, Bastard, La Pucelle, and Forest.

Char. Had York and Somerset brought rescue in, We should have found a bloody day of this.

Exit. 4. The young whelp of Talbot's, raging wood, Did flesh his puny sword in Frenchmen's blood! Puc. Once I encounter'd him, and thus I said, Thou maiden youth, be tranquilliz'd by a maid.— But— with a proud, majestical high scorn,— He answered thus; Young Talbot was not born To be the pillage of a giglot mench: So, rushing in the bowels of the French, He left more Talbots, as unworthy fight.

Bur. Doubtless, he would have made a noble knight: See, where he lies in-reh'sed in the arms Of the most bloody nurse of his harms.

Exit. Bring them to pieces, hack their bones asunder; Whose life was England's glory, Gallia's wonder. Char. O, no; forbear: for that which we have fled During the life, let us not wrong it dead.

Enter Sir William Lucy, attended: a French Herald preceding.

Lucy. Herald, Conduct me to the Dauphin's tent; to know Who hath disturb'd the glory of the day. Char. On what submissive message art thou sent? Lucy. Submission, Dauphin? 'tis a mere French word! We English warriors not what it means. I come to know what prisoners thou hast ta'en, And to survey the bodies of the dead. Char. For prisoners ask'st thou? hell our prison Is. But tell me whom thou seek'st.

Lucy. Where is the great Aleides of the field, Valiant lord Talbot, earl of Shrewsbury? Constrain'd, by his valorous success in arms, Great earl of Washford, Waterford, and Valence; Lord Talbot of Goodrig and Urginfield, Lord Strange of Blackmere, lord Verdin of Alton, Lord Cromwell of Wingfield, lord Furnival of Sheffield, The thrice victorious lord of Falconbridge; Knight of the noble order of Saint George, Worthy Saint Michael, and the golden fleece; Great marshal to Henry the sixth, Of all his wars within the realm of France? Were but his picture left among you here, It would amaze the proudest of you all. Give me their bodies; that I may bear them hence, And give them burial as besemeth their worth.

Puc. Here is a silly stately style indeed! The Turk, that two and fifty kingdoms hath, Writes not so tedious a style as this.— Him, that thou magnifis't with all these titles, Stinking, and fly-blow'n, lies here at our feet. Lucy. Is Talbot slain? the Frenchmen's only scourge, Your kingdom's terour and black Nemesis? O, were mine eye-balls into bullets turn'd, That I, in rage, might shoot them at your faces! O, that I could but call these dead to life! It were enough to fright the realm of France: Were but his picture left among you here, It would amaze the proudest of you all. Give me their bodies; that I may bear them hence, And give them burial as besemeth their worth.

Puc. I think, this upstart is old Talbot's ghost, He speaks with such a proud commanding spirit. For God's sake, let him have 'em; to keep them here. They would but sink, and putrefy the air. Char. Go, take their bodies hence.

Lucy. I'll bear them hence: But from their ashes shall be rear'd A phoenix that shall make all France afeard. Char. So be we rid of them, do with 'em what thou wilt. And now to Paris, in this conquering vein; All will be ours, now bloody Talbot's slain.
ACT V.

Enter King Henry, Gloster, and Exeter.

K. Hen. Have you perused the letters from the Thirteen, and the earl of Arran? [pope. Gloster, love my lord; and this is his. They humbly sue unto your excellence, To have a godly peace concluded of, Between the realms of England and of France. K. Hen. How doth your grace affect their motion? Glo. Well, my good lord; and as the only means To stop effusion of our Christian blood, And establish amities on every side. K. Hen. Ay, marry, uncle; for I always thought, It was both impious and unnatural, That such inhuman and bloody strife Should claim the breath of God, or further faith. Glo. Beside, my lord,—the sooner to effect, And surer bind, this knot of amity,— The earl of Arran—near kith to Charles, A man of great authority in France, Proffers his only daughter to your grace, In marriage, with a large and sumptuous dowry. K. Hen. Marriage, uncle! alas! my years are And thoughts of my old study not so young; Than wanton dalliance with a paramour. Yes, call the ambassadors; and, as you please, So let them have their answers ever one: I shall well consent with any choice, Tends to God's glory, and my country's weal.

Enter a Legate, and two Ambassadors, with Winchester, in a Cardinal's habit.

Leg. What is my lord of Winchester insta'd, And call'd unto a cardinal's degree! Then, I perceive, that will be verified, Henry the fifth did sometime prophecy,— If once he come to be a cardinal. He'll make his cap co-equal with the crown. K. Hen. My lords ambassadors, your several suits Have been consider'd and debated on. Your purpose is both good and reasonable! And, therefore, are we certainly resolve'd To draw conditions of a friendly peace; Which, by my lord of Winchester, we mean Shall be transported presently to France. Glo. And for the prof'er of my lord your master,— I have inform'd his highness so at large, As—liking of the lady's virtuous gifts, He is consent, and the value of her heart,— He doth intent she shall be England's queen.

K. Hen. In argument and proof of which contract, Bear him this jewel, [to the Amb.] pledge of my affection. And so, my lord protector, see them guarded, And safely brought to Dover; where, inshipp'd, Commit them to the charge of the sea. [Exit King Henry and Trin.: Gloster, Exeter, and Ambassadors.

Win. Stay, my lord; for you shall first receive The money of reward, which I promised Should be deliver'd to his holiness. For clothing me in these grave ornaments. Leg. I will attend upon your lordship's leisure. Win. Now, Winchester will not submit, I trust, Or be importunate to the proudest peer. Humphry of Gloster, thou shalt well perceive, That, neither in birth, or for authority, The bishop will be overborne by thee. Shall be transported presently to France, Or sack this country with a matiny. [Exit.

SCENE II.—France. Plain in Anjou.

Enter Charles, Burgundy, Alencon, La Pucelle, and Exeter, marching.

Char. These news, my lords, may cheer our drooping spirits:

'Tis said, the stout Parisians do revolt, And turn again unto the warlike French. Amen. Exem. A fresh march to Paris, royal Charles of France, And keep not back your powers in daillance.

Puc. Peace be amongst them, if they turn to us; Else, ruin combat with their palaces! Enter a Messenger.

Mss. Success unto our valiant general, And readiness to his accomplies accursed, Char. What tidings send your scouts? I pray thee, speak.

Mss. The English army, that divided was Into two parts, is now conjoin'd in one; And means to give you battle presently. Char. Somewhat too sudden, sir; the warning is: But we will presently provide for them. Burg. I trust, the ghost of Talbot is not there Now he is gone, no. [They solemnly speak not. Puc. Of all base passions, fear is most accurs'd Command the conquest, Charles, it shall be thine; Let Henry fret, and all the world repine. Char. Then on, my lords; and France be fortunate!

SCENE III.—The same. Before Angiers.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter La Pucelle.

Puc. The regent conquer, and the Frenchmen fly: Now be you charming spells, and peripats; And ye choice spirits that admonish me, And give me signs of future accidents! [Thunder. You speedy helpers, that are substitutes Under the lordly person of the north, Appear, and aid me in this enterprise!

Enter Fiends.

This speedy quick appearance argue proof Of your accustomed diligence to me. Now, ye familiar spirits, that are call'd out of the powerful regions under earth, Help me this once, that France may get the field. O, hold me not with silence over-long! Where I was wont to feed you with my blood, I'll lay a monarch off, and give it you, To make your heads. No hope have to redress? My body shall Pay recompense, if you will stand by me. So you do condescend to help me now.— [They shake their heads.

No. Can not my body, nor blood-sacrifice, Entreat you to your wonted furtherance? Then take my soul; my body, soul, and all, Before that England give the French the fool. [They depart.

See! they forsake me. Now the time is come, That France must vail her lofty-plumed crest, And let her head fall into England's lap. My ancient incantations are too weak, And hell too strong for me to buckle with: Now, France, thy glory droopeth to the dust. [Exit.

Alarums. Enter French and English, fighting. La Pucelle and York fight hand to hand. La Pucelle is taken. The French fly.

York. Damsel of France, I think, I have you fast: Unchain your spirits now with spelling charms, And try if they can gain your liberty.— A goodly prize, fit for the devil's grace! See, how the ugly witch doth bend her bows, As if, with Circe, she would change my shape. Puc. Chang'd to a worser shape thou count not be. York. O, Charles the Damphien is a proper man; No shape but his can please your dainty eye. Puc. A plaguing mischief light on Charles, and May ye both be suddenly surpris'd! [Thee lobby bloody hands, in sleeping on your beds!}
KING HENRY VI.

Act. 5.

York. Fell, banning hag! enchantress, hold thy tongue.

Puc. My lord, thou see'st me free; give me leave to curse a while. York. Curse, miscreant, when thou comest to the stake. [Exeunt.]

Alarums. Enter Suffolk, leading in Lady Margaret.

Suf. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prisoner. [Gazes on her.]

O fairest beauty, do not fear, nor fly;

For I will touch thee but with reverent hands,
And lay them gently on thy tender side.

I kiss these fingers [kissing her hand.] for eternal peace:

Who art thou? say, that I may honour thee.

Mar. Margaret my name; and daughter to a king,
The king of Naples, whose'oeur thou art.

Be not offended, nature's miracle,
Thou art allotted to be ta'en by me:

So doth the swan her downy cygnets save,
And implements her prisoners with her wings.

Yet if this servile usage once offend,
Go, and be free again, as Suffolk's friend.

[She turns away as going.]

O, stay! I have no power to be a king.

My hand would free her, but my heart says—no.

As plays the sun upon the glassy streams,

Twinkling another counterfeit beam,

So seems this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes.

Fain would I woo her, yet I dare not speak:

I'll call for pen and ink, and write my mind:

Fye, De la Poole! dissable not thyself;

How not a tongue? is she not here thy prisoner?

Wilt thou be daunted at a woman's sight? Ay;

Beauty's princely majesty is such,

Confounds the tongue, and makes the senses tough.

Mar. Stay, earl of Suffolk,—if thy name be so,—

What ransom must I pay before I pass?

For, I perceive, I am thy prisoner

Suf. How canst thou tell, she will not thy suit,
Before thou make a trial of her love? [Aside.]

Mar. Why speak'st thou not? what ransom must I pay?

Suf. She's beautiful; and therefore to be worshipp'd;

She is a woman; therefore to be won. [Aside.]

Mar. Will thou accept of ransom, yea, or no?

Suf. Fond man! remember that thou hast a wife.

Then how can Margaret be thy paramour? [Aside.]

Mar. I were best leave him, for he will not hear.

Suf. There all is marr'd; there lies a cooling card.

Mar. He talks at random; sure, the man is mad.

Suf. And yet a dispensation may be had.

Mar. And yet I would that you would answer me.

Suf. I'll win this lady Margaret. For whom?

Why, for my king: Tush! that's a wooden thing.

Mar. He talks of wood: it is some carpenter.

Suf. Yet so my fancy may be satisfied,
And peace be established between these realms.

But there remains a scruple in that too:

For though her father be the king of Naples,

Duke of Anjou and Maine, yet is he poor,

And our nobility will scorn the match. [Aside.]

Mar. Hear ye, Captian? Are you not at leisure?

Suf. It shall be so, disdain they ne'er so much:

Henry is youthful, and will quickly yield.

Mar. I have a secret to reveal.

Suf. What though I be enthrall'd? he seems a knight,

And will not any way dishonour me. [Aside.]

Suf. Lords, you safe to listen what I say. [Aside.]

Mar. Perhaps, it be to pass the French

And then I need not crave his courtesy. [Aside.]

Suf. Sweet madam, give me hearing in a cause—

Mar. Tush! women have been captivate ere now. [Aside.]

Suf. Lady, wherefore talk you so?

Mar. I cry you mercy, 'tis but quid for quo.

Suf. Say, gentle princess, would you not suppose

Your bondage happy, to be made a queen?

Mar. To be a queen in bondage, is more vile,

Than is a slave in base servility;

For princes should be free.

Suf. And so shall you,

If happy England's royal king be free.

Mar. What are these concerns his freedom unto me?

Suf. I'll undertake to make thee Henry's queen;

To put a golden scepter in thy hand,

And set a precious crown upon thy head,

If thou wilt descend to be my queen.

Mar. What?

Suf. His love.

Mar. I am unwilling to be Henry's wife.

Suf. No, gentle madam; I unworthy am

To woo so fair a dame to be his wife,

And have no portion in the choice myself.

How say you, madam; are you so content?

Mar. An if my father please, I am content.

Suf. Then call our captains, and our colours, forth:

And, madam, at your father's castle walls

We'll crave a parley, to confer with him.

[Trumpets sound forward.]

A Parley sounded. Enter Reignier, on the walls.

Suf. See, Reignier, see, thy daughter prisoner.

Reig. To whom?

Suf. To me.

Reig. Suffolk, what remedy? I am a soldier: and unapt to weep,

Or to exclaim on fortune's toilsome woe.

Suf. Yes, there is remedy enough, my lord:

Consent, (and, for thy honour, give consent,) Thy daughter shall be wedded to my king;

Whom I with pain have wo'd and won thereto;

And this her easy-held imprisonment

Hath gain'd thy daughter princely liberty.

Reig. Speaks Suffolk as he thinks?

Suf. Fair Margaret knows

That Suffolk doth not flatter, swear, or feign.

Reig. Upon thy princely warrant, I descend to give thee answer of thy just demand.

Suf. And here I will expect thy coming.

[Exeunt, from the walls.]

Trumpets sounded. Enter Reignier, below.

Reig. Welcome, brave earl, into our territories; Command in Anjou what your honour pleases.

Suf. Thanks, Reignier, happy for so sweet a child,

Fit to be made companion with a king;

What answer makes your grace unto my suit?

Reig. Since thou dost design to woo her little worth,

To be the only bride of such a lord;

Upon condition I may quietly

Enjoy mine own, the county Maine, and Anjou,

Free from oppression, or the stroke of war,

My daughter shall be Henry's, if he please.

Suf. That is her ransom, I deliver her;

And those two counties, I will undertake,

Your grace shall well and quietly enjoy.

Reig. And I again,—in Henry's royal name,

As deputy and servant to the French

Give thee her hand, for sign of plighted faith.

Suf. Reignier of France, I give thee kindly thanks,

Because this is in traffick of a king:

And yet, methinks, I could be well content

To be mine own attorney in this case. [Aside.]

I'll over then to England with this news,

And mark what thine answer to be so solemn'd?

So, farewell, Reignier! Set this diamond safe

In golden palaces, as it becomes.

Reig. I do embrace thee, as I would embrace

The Christian prince, king Henry, were he here.
Mar. Farewell, my lord! Good wishes, praise, and prayers,
Shall Swarm ever have of Margaret. [Going.] Suf. Farewell, sweet madam: But hark you, Margaret;
Nor princely commendations to my king? Mar. Such commendations as become a maid,
And, though I dare not show the grace to him,
Suf. Words sweetly plac'd, and modestly direct'd.
But, madam, I must trouble you again,—
No longer to his majesty? Mar. Yes, my good lord, a pure unpolluted heart,
Never yet taint with love, I send the king.
Suf. And this within. [Kisses her.] Mar. That for thy sake, I will not so presume,
To send such precious tokens to a king.
[Exit Reignier and Margaret.]
Suf. O, went thou for myself—but, buffets,
They may not wander in that labyrinth;
There Minotaur, and ugly terrors lurk.
Solicit Henry with her wondrous praise:
Bethink thee on her virtues that surround;
Mad, natural grace that extinguish art;
Repeat their semblance often on the seas,
That, when thou com'st to kneel at Henry's feet,
Thou may'st bequeath of his wit with wonder.
[Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Camp of the Duke of York, in Anjou.

Enter York, Warwick, and others.

York. Bring forth that sorceress, condemn'd to burn.

Enter La Pucelle, guarded, and a Shepherd.

Shep. Ah, Joan! this kills thy father's heart outright.
I have sought every country far and near,
And, now it is my chance to find thee out,
Must I behold thy timeless cruel death?
Ah, Joan, sweet daughter Joan, I'll die with thee!
Pac. Decrepit miser! base ignoble wretch! I am descended of a gentle blood;
Thou art no father, no friend of mine.
Shep. Out, out!—My lords, an please you, 'tis not so.
I did bet her, all the parish knows:
Her mother liveth yet, can testify,
She was the first fruit of my bachelorship.
War. Graceless! wilt thou deny thy parentage?
York. This argues what her kind of life hath been:
Wicked and vile; and so her death concludes.
Shep. Pye, Joan! that thou wilt be so obstinate!
God know, thou art a cowardly creature.
And for thy sake have I shed many a tear,
Deny me not, I pray thee, gentle Joan.
Pac. Peasant, avast!—You have suborn'd this man.

Of purpose to obscure my noble birth.
Shep. 'Tis true, I gave a noble to the priest,
The morn that I was wedded to her mother,—
Kneel down and take my blessing, good my girl. Will thou not love me? Now I will see the time
Of thy nativity! I would, the milk
Thy mother gave thee, when thou suck'dst her breast,
Had been a little randle for thy sake!
Or else, when thou didst keep my lambs oft,
I wish some ravenous wolf had eaten thee! Doth thou deny thy father, cursed drab?
Or ha' I been born, her hanging is too good. [Retr. York. Take her away, for she hath liv'd too long.

To fill the world with vicious qualities.
Pac. This, alone tell you whom you have condemn'd:—
Not me begotten of a shepherd swain,
But issu'd from the progeny of kings,
Virtuous, and holy: chosen from above,
By inspiration of celestial grace,
To work exceeding miracles on earth.
I never had to do with wicked spirits.
But you,—that are polluted with your lusts,
Stain'd with the guiltless blood of innocents,
Corrupt and tainted with a thousand vices,— Despair! I wish the grace to him I have,
You judge it straight a thing impossible
To compass wonders, but by help of devils.
No, misconception! Joan of Arc hath been A virgin from her tender infancy;
Chaste, and immaculate, in every thought:
Whose maiden blood, thus rigorously effus'd,
Will cry for vengeance at the gates of heaven.
York. Ay, as thyeway with her to execution.
War. And hark ye, sire; because she is a maid,
Spare for no faggots, let there be enough;
Place barres of pitch upon the fatal stake,
That so her torture may be shortened.
Then, Joan, discover thine infirmity;
That warranteth by law to be thy privilege.
I am with child, ye bloody homicides;
Murder not then the fruit within my womb.
Although ye hate me to a violent death.
York. Now heaven forefend! the holy maid with child!—
War. The greatest miracle that e'er ye wrought:
Is all your strict preciseness come to this?
York. She and the Dauphin have been juggling
I did imagine what would be her refuge.
We never had to do with wicked spirits;
Especially, since Charles must father it.
Pac. You see deceit'd; my child is none of his;
It was Alençon that enjoy'd my love.
York. Alençon! that notorious Machiavel!
It dies, an if it had a thousand lives.
Pac. O, give me leave, I have deluded you;
'Twas neither Charles, nor yet the dutie I nam'd,
But Reignier, king of Naples, that prevail'd.
War. A bad enri'd maitre; because she is a maid.
York. Why, here's a girl! I think she knows not well,
There were so many, whom she may accuse.
War. It's sign'd she hath been liberal and free.
York. And yet, forsooth, she is a virgin pure —
Strumpet, thy words condemn thy brat, and thee:
Use no enmity, for it is in vain.
Pac. To them lead me hence,—with whom I leave my curse:
May never glorious sun reflect his beams
Upon the country where you make abode!
But death and all the gloomy shades of death
Environ you; till mischief, and despair,
Drive you to break your necks, or hang yourselves! [Retr. guarded.

York. Break thou in pieces, and consume to ashes,
Thou foul accursed minister of hell!

Enter Cardinal Beaufort, attended.

Car. Lord regent, I do greet your excellence
With letters of commisson from the king.
For know, my lords, the states of Christendom,
Moved with remorse of these outrageous bolls,
Have earnestly implored a general peace
Betwixt our nation and the aspiring French;
And here at hand the Dauphin, and his train,
Approacheth to confer about some matter.
York. It is all our travail turn'd to no effect?
After the slaughter of so many peers,
So many captains, gentlemen, and soldiers,
That in this quarrel have been overthrown,
And so many beds that had composed for their happiness,
Shall we at last conclude effeminate peace?
Have we not lost most part of all the towns,
By treason, falsehood, and by treachery,
Our great enterprise had confounded.
O, Warwick, Warwick! I foresee with grief
The utter loss of all the realm of France.
War. Be patient, York: if we conclude a peace,
Act 5.

KING HENRY VI.

It shall be with such strict and severe covenants
As little shall the Frenchmen gain thereby.

Enter Charles, attended: Alencon, Bastard,
Reignier, and others.

Char. Since, lords of England, it is thus agreed,
That peaceful truce shall be proclaimed in France,
We come to be informed by yourselves
That the condition of the army which must be.
York. Speak, Winchester; for boiling cholera causes
The hollow passage of my poison'd voice,
And that of these our base and vain enemies.
Win. Charles, and the rest, is enacted thus:
That, in regard King Henry gives consent,
Of mere compassion, and of lenity.
To ease your country of distressful war,
And suffer you to breathe in fruitful peace,
You shall become true liege-men to his crown:
And, Charles, upon condition thou wilt swear
To pay him tribute, and submit thyself,
Thus be he plac'd as victor under him,
And still enjoy thy regal dignity.
Alien. Must he be then as shadow of himself?
Adorn his temples with a coronet;
And, in substancy of thine_ishame,
Retain but privilege of a private man?
This proffer is absurd and reasonless.
Char. 'Tis known, already, that I am possess'd
With power, which by the whole I mean,
No, lord ambassador; I'll rather keep
That which I have, than, coveting more,
Be cast from possibility of all.
York. Insulting Charles! hast thou by secret means
W'd intercession to obtain a league;
And, now the matter grows to compromise,
Stand'st thou aloof upon comparison?
Either accept the title thou solicit,
Of benefit proceeding from our king,
And not of any challenge of desert,
Or we will plaque thee with incessant war.
Reignier. My lord, you do not well un Rodney
To cavil in the course of this contract:
If once it be neglected, ten to one,
We shall not find like opportunity.
Alien. To say the truth, it is your policy,
To save your subjects from such massacre,
And ruthless slaughters, as are daily seen
By your proceeding in hostilities;
And therefore take this compact of a truce,
Although you break it when your pleasure serves.

[Aside, to Charles.

War. How say'st thou, Charles? shall our condition stand?
Char. It shall:
Only reserv'd, you claim no interest
In any of our towns of garrison.
York. Then swear allegiance to his majesty;
As thou art knight, never to disobey,
Nor be rebellious to the crown of England.
Thou, nor thy nobles, to the crown of England.—
[Charles, and the rest, give tokens of fealty.
So, now dismiss your army what ye please;
Hang up your ensigns, let your drums be still,
For here we entertain a solemn peace. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, in conference with Suffolk; Gloster and Exeter following.

K. Hen. Your wond'rous rare description, noble earl,
Of beauteous Margaret hath astonish'd me:
Her virtues, graced with external gifts,
Dwelt in my love; half my gallant heart;
And like a vigour in tempestuous gusts
Provokes the mightiest hulk against the tide;
So am I driven, by breath of her renown,
Either to suffer shipwreck, or arrive
Where I may have fruition of her love.

Suf. Truth! my good lord! this superfluous tale
Is but a preface of her worthy praise;
The chief perfection of that lovely dame,
(Had I sufficient skill to utter them,)—
Would make a volume of enticing lines,
Able to rouse any dull tongue. And,
Which is more, she is not so divine,
So full replete with choice of all delights,
But, with a humble lowness of mind,
The chief of her, she is content to offer;
Command, I mean, of virtuous chaste intents,
To love and honour Henry as her lord.

K. Hen. And otherwise will Henry ne'er presume.

Therefore, my lord protector, give consent,
That Margaret may be England's royal queen.

Glo. So should I give consent to flatter sin.
You know my lord, your highness is betroth'd
Unto another lady of esteem;
How shall we then dispense with that contract,
And not deface your honour with reproach?

Suf. As doth a ruler with unlawful oaths;
Or one, that in a sudden lust,
To try his strength, forsaketh yet the lists
By reason of his adversary's odds:
A poor earl's daughter is unequal odds,
And therefore may be broke without offence.

Glo. Why, what, I pray, is Margaret more than that?
Her father is no better than an earl,
Although in gross titles no less.

Suf. Yes, my good lord, her father is a king,
The king of Naples, and Jerusalem;
And of such great authority in France,
As his alliance will convert our peace,
And keep the Frenchmen in allegiance.

Glo. And so the earl of Armagnac may do,
Because he is near kinsman unto Charles.

Exe. Beside, his wealth doth warrant liberal dower:
While Regnier sooner will receive, than give.

Suf. A dower, my lords! disgrace not so your king.
That he should be so object, base, and poor,
To choose for wealth, and not for perfect love.
Henry is able to enrich her queen;
And not to seek a queen to make him rich:
So worthless barons, with all their wives,
As market-men for oxen, sheep, or horse.
Marriage is a matter of more worth,
Than to be dealt in by attorneyship;
Not whom she marryeth, but whom affects.
Must be companion of his nuptial bed:
And therefore, lords, since he affects her most,
It most of all these reasons bindeth us,
In our opinions she should be prefer'd.
For what is wedlock forst, but a hell,
An age of discord and continual strife?
Whereas the contrary bringeth forth bliss,
And is a pattern of celestial peace.
Whom should we match, with Henry, being a king,
But Margaret, that is daughter to a king?
Her peerless feature, joined with her birth,
Approves her fit for none, but for a king;
Her valiant courage, and undaunted spirit,
(More than in women commonly is seen,)—
Will answer our hope in issue of a king;
For Henry, son unto a conqueror,
Is likely to beget new conquerors.
If with a lady of so high resolve,
As is fair Margaret, he be link'd in love.
Then yield, my lords; and here conclude with me,
That Margaret, he to be at your own, and none but she.

K. Hen. Whether it be through force of your report,
My noble lord of Suffolk; or for that
Tender of her settle was not yet perfect
With any passion of inflaming love,
I cannot tell; but this I am assur'd,

I feel such sharp dissonance in my breast,
Such fierce alarms both of hope and fear,
As I am sick with working of my thoughts.
Take, then, farewell, shipping; post, my lord, to France;
Agree to any covenants; and proceed
That lady Margaret do vouchsafe to come
To cross the sea to England, and be crowned
King Henry's faithful and anointed queen:
For your expenses and sufficient charge,
Among the people gather up a tenth.
Be gone, I say; for, till you do return,
I rest perplexed with a thousand cares—
And you, good uncle, banish all offences:
If you do censure me by what you were,
Not what you are, I know it will excuse
This sudden execution of my will.
And so conduct me, where from company,
I may receive and ruminate my grief.
[Exit.
Glo. Ay, grief, I fear me, both at first and last.
[Exeunt Gloster and Exeter.
Suff. Thus Suffolk hath prevail'd; and thus he may go away.
As did the youthful Paris once to Greece;
With hope to find the like event in love,
But prosper better than the Trojan did.
Margaret shall now be queen, and rule the king:
But I will rule both her, the king, and realm.
[Exit.

SCENE,—dispersedly in various parts of England.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London: A Room of State in the Palace.

Flourish of trumpets: then hawgs. Enter, on one side, King Henry, Duke of Gloucester, Salisbury, Warwick, and Cardinal Beaufort: on the other, Queen Margaret, led in by Suffolk; York, Somerset, Buckingham, and others following.

Suff. As by your high imperial majesty
I had in charge at my departure for France,
As procurator to your excellence,
To marry princess Margaret for your grace;
So, in the famous ancient city, Tours,—
In presence of the kings of France and Sicil,
The dukes of Orleans, Calaier, Bretaigne, and Alacocon,
Seven ears, twelve bans, twenty reverend bishops,
I have performed my task, and was esposed:
And humbly now upon my bended knee,
In sight of England and her lordly peers,
Deliver up my title in the queen
To your most gracious bands, that are the substance
Of that great shadow I did represent;
The happiest gift that ever marquesse gave,
The fairest queen that ever king receiv'd.

K. Hen. Suffolk, arise.—Welcome, queen Margaret:
I can express no kinder sign of love,
Than this kind kiss.—O Lord, that lends me life,
Lend me a heart replete with thankfulness!
For thou hast given me, in this beautiful face,
A world of earthly blessings to my soul,
If sympathy of love unite our thoughts.
Q. Mar. Great king of England, and my gracious lord;
The mutual conference that my mind hath had—
By day, by night; waking, and in my dreams;
In courtly company, or at my bedchamber;—
With you mine alder liefest sovereign,
Makes me the holer to salute my king,
With ruder terms; such as my wiit affords,
And over-joy of heart doth minister.
K. Hen. Her sight did ravish: but her grace in speech,
Her words y-clad with wisdom's majesty,
Makes me, from wondering, fail to weeping joys;
Such is the fulness of my heart's content.—
Lords, with one cheerful voice welcome my love.
All. Long live queen Margaret, England's happiness!
Q. Mar. We thank you all.
[Flourish.
Suff. Thus has the spirit transmitted, so it please your grace.
Here are the articles of contracted peace,
Between our sovereign, and the French king Charles,
For eighteen months concluded by consent.
Anjou and Maine! myself did win them both;
Those provinces these arms of mine did conquer:
And are the cities, that I got with these,
Hath the deliver'd Henry shall the do long.

Mort Dieu!
York. - For Suffolk's duke — may he be suffocate,
That dims the honour of this warlike Isle
France shall have! I have torn and rend the heart,
Before I would have yielded to this league.
I never read but England's kings have had Large sums of gold, and dowries, with their wives:
And our king's interest, so it goes away,
To match with her that brings no vantages.

Glo. A proper jest, and never heard before,
That Suffolk should demand a whole fifteenth
For costs and charges in transporting your person.
She should have said in France, and starr'd in France,
Before

Car. My lord of Gloster, now you grow too hot;
It was the pleasure of my lord the king.

Glo. My lord of Winchester, I know your mind;
'Tis not my speeches that you do mislike,
But 'tis my presence that doth trouble you.
Conceal all: Proud prelate, in thy face
I see thy fury; If I longer stay,
We shall begin our ancient bickerings.
Lords, farewell; and say, when I am gone.
I prophesy — France shall live but a long time.
[Exit.
Car. So, there goes our protector in a rage.
'Tis known to you, he is mine enemy:
Nay, more, an enemy unto you all;
And no great friend; I fear your king's Consider, lords, — he is the next of blood,
And heir apparent to the English crown;
Had Henry got an empire by his marriage,
And all the wealthy kingdoms of the west,
There's reason he should be displeas'd at it.
Look to it, lords; let not his smoothing words
Bewitch your hearts; be wise, and circumspect.
What though the common people favour him,
Calling him — Humphrey, the good duke of Gloster;
Clapping their hands, and crying with loud voice —
Jesus maintain your royal excellence!
With — God preserve the good duke Humphrey!
I fear me, lords, for all this flattering gloss,
He will be found a dangerous protector.

Buck. Why should he then protect our sovereign,
He being of age to govern of himself?
Cousin of the queen, join you with me,
And all together — with the duke of Suffolk.
We'll quickly hoise duke Humphrey from his seat.
Car. This weighty business will not brook delay;
I'll to the court, and Suffolk presently.

Som. Cousin of Buckingham, though [Humphrey's pride,
And greatness of his place be grief to us,
Yet let us watch the haughty cardinal;
His insolence is more intolerable
Than all the princes in the land beside;
If Gloster be displac'd, he'll be protector.

Buck. Or thou, or I, Somerset, will be protector,
Despight duke Humphrey, or the cardinal.
[Exit Buckingham and Somerset.

Sal. Pride went before, ambition follows him.
While these do labour for their own preferment,
Beknows us to labour for the realm?
I never saw but Humphrey duke of Gloster
Did bear him like a noble gentleman.
Oft have I seen the haughty cardinal.
More like a soldier, than a man of the church,
As stout, and proud, as he were lord of all,
Swear like a ruffian, and demean himself
Unlike the ruler of a common-wealth.
Warwicks, shall have the pleasure of age!
Thy deeds, thy plainness, and thy housekeeping,
Hath won the greatest favour of the commons,
Excepting none but good duke Humphrey.
And brave a soldier's part, thou dost perform,
In bringing them to civil discipline;
Thy late exploits, done in the heart of France,
When thou wert regent for our sovereign,
SECOND PART OF

Act I.

Scene I. — The same. A Room in the duke of Gloucester's House.

Enter Gloucester and the Duchess.

Duch. Why droops my lord, like over-ripen'd corn,

Hanging the head at Ceres' plenteous load?

Why doth the great duke Humphrey knit his brows,

As frowning at the favours of the world?

Why are thine eyes fix'd to the sullen earth,

Gazing on that which seems to dim thy sight?

What see'st thou there? king Henry's diadem,

Enchas'd with all the honours of the world?

If so, gaze on, and grovel on thy face,

Until thy head be circled with the same.

Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious gold —

What, is't too short? I'll lengthen it with mine:

And, having both together head'd it up,

Put it again together: We'll behead our heads of golden even;

And never more abuse our sight so low,

As to touchsafe one glance unto the ground.

Glo. O Neil, sweet Neil, if thou dost love thy lord,

Banish the canker of ambitious thoughts:

And may that thought, when I imagine ill

Against my king and nephew, virtues Henry,

Be my last breathing in this mortal world!

Art thou the second woman in this man's eyes?

The queen? Good heavens! — but what do I say?

Duch. What dream'd my lord? tell me, and I'll require it

With the sweet rehearsal of my morning's dream.

Glo. O Neil, think'st, this sta, mine office-badge in court,

Was broke in twain: by whom, I have forgot:

But, as I think, it was by the cardinal;

And, since the pieces of the broken was well pleas'd,

To change two dukedoms for a duke's fair daughter.

I cannot blame them all: What lost to them?

'Tis thine they give away, and not their own.

Tyrants may make cheap pennyworths of their pleasures.

And poor base friends, and give to courtisans,

Still rev'ring, like lords, till all be gone!

While as the silly owner of the good,

Wrests the crown from man, and makes him base hands,

And shakes his head, and trembling stands aloof,

While all is shad'd, and all is borne away:

Ready to start, and dare not touch his own.

So York resist, and fret, and bite his tongue,

While his own lands are bargain'd for, and sold.

Methinks, the realms of England, France, and Ireland,

Bear this proportion to my flesh and blood,

As did the fatal brand Althea burn'd,

Unto the prince's heart of Calydon.

Anjou and Maine, both given unto the French!

Cold news for me; for a bad hope of France,

Even as I have of fertile England's soil.

A day will come, when York shall claim his own;

And therefore I will take the Nevil's parts,

And make Gamester be a swain of my lord Humphrey.

And, when I spy advantage, claim the crown:

For that's the golden mark I seek to hit:

Nor shall proud Lancaster usurp my right,

Nor base his scepter in his rightful list,

Nor wear the diadem upon his head.

Whose church-like honour fits not for a crown.

Then, York, be still awhile, till time do serve:

Watch thou, and wake, when others be asleep,

To get into the secrets of the state;

Till Henry, surfeiting in joys of love,

With his new bride, and England's dearest queen,

And Humphrey with the peers be fall'n at jars:

Then will I raise aloft the milk-white rose,

With whose sweet smell the air shall be perfume'd;

And in my standard bear the arms of York,

The famous with the house of Lancaster:

And, for force perforce, I'll make him yield the crown,

Whose bookish rule hath pull'd fair England down.

[Exit.

Scene II. — The same. A Room in the duke of Gloucester's House.

Enter Gloucester and the Duchess.

Duch. Why doth my lord, like over-ripen'd corn,

Hanging the head at Ceres' plenteous load?

Why doth the great duke Humphrey knit his brows,

As frowning at the favours of the world?

Where are thou, Sir John of Ware? fear not, man,

We are alone: here's none but thee, and I.

Enter Hume.

Hume. Jeem preserve your royal majesty! —

Duch. What say'st thou, majesty? I am but grace.

Hume. But, by the grace of God, and Hume's advice,

Your grace's title shall be multiplied.
Duch. What say'st thou, man? hast thou as yet conferred
With Margery Jourdain, the cunning witch;
And Roger Bolingbroke, the conjurer?
And will they undertake to do me good?
Hume. This they have promised,—to show your highness
A spirit rais'd from depth of under ground,
That shall make answer to such questions,
As by your face shall be pronounced him.
Duch. It is enough; I'll think upon the questions:
When from Saint Alban's we do make return,
With these thimble cards, till then be paid.
Here, Hume, take this reward; make merry, man;
With thy confederates in this weighty cause.
[Exit Duchess.
Hume. Hume must make merry with the duke's gold;
Marry, and shall. But how now, sir John Hume?
Seal up your lips, and give no words but—mum!
The business asketh silent secrecy.
Dame Eleanor gives gold, to bring the witch:
Gold cannot come amiss, were she a devil.
Yet have I gold, files from another coast:
I dare not say, from the rich cardinal.
As for the great confidant, the duke of Suffolk;
Yet I do find it so: for, to be plain,
They, knowing dame Eleanor's aspiring humour,
Have hired me to undermine the duchess,
And for the cardinals, with a pair of crazy knaves.
Well, so it stands; and thus, I fear, at last,
Hume's knavery will be the duchess' wreck;
And her attain'ture will be Humphrey's fall:
Soft how it will, I shall have gold for all. [Exit.

SCENE III.—The same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Peter, and others, with petitions.
1 Pet. My masters, let's stand close; my lord protector will come this way by and by, and then we may deliver our supplications in the quill.
2 Pet. Marry, the Lord protect him, for he's a good man! Jeu! bless him!

Enter Suffolk and Queen Margaret.

1 Pet. Here 'a comes, methinks, and the queen with him: I'll be the first, sure.
2 Pet. Come back, fool: this is the duke of Suffolk, and not my lord protector.
Suf. How now, fellow? wouldst any thing with me?
1 Pet. I pray, my lord, pardon me! I took ye for my lord protector.
2 Pet. [Reading the superscription.] To my lord protector? are your supplications to his lordship? Let me see them: What is thine?
1 Pet. Mine is, an't please your grace, against John Goodman, my lord cardinal's man, for keep ing my house, and lands, and wife and all, from me.
Suf. Thy wife too? that is some wrong, indeed.—What's yours?—What's here! [Reads.] Against the duke of Suffolk, for enclosing the commons of Melford.—How now, sir knave?
2 Pet. Alas, sir, I am but a poor petitioner of our whole township.
Peter. [Presenting his petition.] Against my master, Thomas Horner, for saying, That the duke of York was rightful heir to the crown.
Q. Mar. What says thou? Did the duke of York say, he was rightful heir to the crown?
Peter. That my master was? No, forsooth: my master said, That he was; and that the king was an usurper.
Suf. Who is there? [Enter Servants.]—Take this fellow in, and send for his master with a pursuivant presently,—we'll hear more of your matter before the king. [Exeunt Servants, with Peter.
Q. Mar. And as for you, that love to be protected Under the wings of our protector's grace, Begin your suits anew, and sue to hitho. [Exeunt.

Away, base cullions!—Suffolk, let them go.
Att. Come, let's be gone. [Exeunt Petitioners.
Q. Mar. My lord of Suffolk, say, is this the guise,
Is this the fashion in the court of England?
Is this the government of Britain's isle,
And this the royalty of Albion's king?
What, shall king Henry be a pupil still,
Under the surty Glosier's good to the full?
Am I a queen in title and in style,
And must be made a subject to a duke?
I tell thee, Poole, when in the city Tours
Thou ran't a tilt in honour of my love,
And stol'st away the ladies' hearts of France;
I thought king Henry had resembled thee,
In courage, courtship, and proportion:
But all his mind is bent to holiness,
To number Ave-Marias on his beads;
His champions are—the prophets and apostles;
His weapons, holy saws of sacred writ;
His study is his till-yard, and his loves
Are brazen images of painted saints:
I would, the college of cardinals
Would choose him pope, and carry him to Rome.
And set the triple crown upon his head;
That was a state fit for his holiness.
Suf. Madam, be patient: as I was cause Your highness came to England, so will I
In England work your grace's full content.
Q. Mar. Not all these lords do vex me half so much,
As that proud dame, the lord protector's wife.
She sweeps it through the court with troops of lead.
More like an ennemp than duke Humphrey's wife;
Strangers in court do take her for the queen:
She bears a duke's revenues on her back,
And in her heart she scorns our poverty:
Shall I not live to be aveng'd on her?
Contemptuous base-born callat as she is,
She vaunted 'mongst her minions 'tother day,
The very shape of her worst wearing gown.
Was better worth than all my father's lands,
Till Suffolk gave two dukedoms for his daughter.
Suf. Madam, myself have lim'd a bush for her;
And plaz'd a quire of such enticing birds,
That she will light to listen to the lays,
And never mount to trouble you again.
So, let her rest: And, madam, list to me;
For I am bold to counsel you in this.
Although we fancy not the cardinal,
Yet must we join with him, and with the lords,
Till we have brought duke Humphrey in disgrace.
As for the duke of York,—this late complaint Will make but little for his benefit:
So, one by one, we'll wead them all at last,
And you yourself shall steer the happy helm.

Enter King Henry, York, and Somerset, conversing with him: Duke and Duchess of Glosier; Cardinal Beaufort, Buckingham, Salisbury, and Warwick.

K. Hen. For my part, noble lords, I care not which;
Or Somerset, or York, all's one to me;
York, if York have ill demean'd himself in France,
Then let him be denay'd the regentship.
SECOND PART OF

Act I

SOM. If Somerset be unworthy of the place, let York be regent, I will yield to him. Your grace must act as you see, or no. Dispute not that York is the worthier. CAR. Ambitious Warwick, let thy better speak. WAR. The cardinal's not my better in the field. BUCK. All in this presence are thy better, Warwicke. WAR. Warwick may live to be the best of all. SAL. Peace, son; and show some reason, Buckhingham.

Why Somerset should be prefer'd in this. Q. MAR. Because the king, forsooth, will have it so.

GLO. Madam, the king is old enough himself To give his consent: and so are they, in matters. Q. MAR. If he be old enough, what needs your grace To be protector of his excellence? GLO. Madam, I am protector of the realm; And, at his pleasure, will resign my place.

SAL. Resign it then, and leave thine insolence. Since thou wert king, (as who is king, but thou?) The commons have hitherto run to wreck: The Dauphin hath prevail'd beyond the seas; And all the peers and nobles of the realm Have been as bondmen to thy sovereign. CAR. The commons hast thou rack'd; the clerks thy bags Are laek and lean with thy extortion. SOM. Thy sumptuous buildings, and thy wife's attire, Have cost a mass of publick treasury. BUCK. The cruelty in execution, Upon offenders, hath exceed'd law, And left thee to the mercy of the law. Q. MAR. Thy sale of offices, and towns in France.— If they were known, as the suspect is great,— Would make thee quickly hop without thy head. [Exit Gloster. The Queen drops her fan.

Give me my fan: What, minion! can you not? [Gives the Duchess a box on the ear.

I cry you mercy, madam; Was it you? DUCK. Was't I? yes, it was, proud Frenchwoman:

Could I come near your beauty with my nails, I'd set my ten commandments in your face. K. HEN. Sweet aunt, be quiet; 'twas against her will. DUCK. Against her will! Good king, look to't in time; She'll hamper thee, and dandle thee like a baby. Though in this place most master wear no breeches, She shall not strike dame Eleanor Speke, the spithead. [Exit Duchess. BUCK. Lord cardinal, I will follow Eleanor, And listen after Humphrey, how he proceeds: She's tickled now: her fume can need no spurs, She'll gallop fast enough to her destruction. [Exit Buckingham.

Re-enter Gloster.

GLO. Now, lords, my choler being over-blown, With walking about the quadrangle, I come to talk of commonwealth affairs. As for your spiteful false objections, Free them, and I'll live open to contest: But God in mercy so deal with my soul, As I in duty love my king and country! But, to the matter that we have in hand:— I say, my sovereign, York is meetest man To be your regent in the realm of France. SAL. Before we make election, give me leave To show some reason, of no little force, That York is not most unmeet of any man: War. That I came home, and a fouler fact Did never traitor in the land commit. SUF. Peace, head-strong Warwick! WAR. Image of pride, why should I hold my peace?

Enter Servants of Suffolk, bringing in Horner and Peter.

SAL. Because here is a man accus'd of treason: Fray God, the duke of York excuse himself! YORK. Doth any one accuse York for a traitor? K. HEN. What mean'st thou, Suffolk? tell me: SUF. Peace. Because it is manifest, this is the man That doth accuse his master of high treason: His words were these,—that Richard, duke of York, Was rightful heir unto the English crown; And that your majesty was an usurper. K. HEN. Say, man, were these thy words? HOR. An't shall please your majesty, I never said nor thought any such matter: God is my witness, I am falsely accused by the villain. PET. By these ten bones, my lords, [holding up his hands:] he did speak them to me in the garret one night, as we were scouring my lord of York's armour.

York. Base dunghill villain, and mechanical, I'll have thy head for this thy traitor's speech:— I do beseech your royal majesty, Let him have all the rigour of the law. HOR. Alas, my lord, hang me, if ever I spoke the words. My accuser is my pretence; and when I did correct him for his fault the other day, he did row upon his knee he would be even with me; I have good witness of this; therefore, I beseech your majesty, do not cast away an honest man for a villain's accusation. K. HEN. Uncle, what shall we say to this in law? GLO. This doom, my lord, if I may judge. Let Somerset be regent over the French, Because in York this breeds suspicion: And let these have a day appointed them For single combat, in convenient place: For he hath witness of his servant's malice. This is the law, and this duke Humphrey's doom. K. HEN. Then be it so. My lord of Somerset, We must consult the king regent over the French. Now I humbly thank your royal majesty. HOR. And I accept the combat willingly. PET. Alas, my lord, I cannot fight; for God's sake, let some else go. I have no valiant worth against me. O Lord, have mercy upon me! I shall never be able to fight a blow: O Lord, my heart! GLO. Sirrah, or you must fight, or else be hang'd. K. HEN. Away with them to prison: and the day Of combat shall be the last of the next month.— Come, Somerset, we'll see thee sent away. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — The same. The Duke of Gloucester's Garden.

Enter Margaret Jourdain, Hume, Southwell, and Bolingbroke.

HUME. Come, my masters; the duchess, I tell you, expects performance of your promises.

Bolingbroke. Master Hume, we are therefore provided: Will her ladyship behold and hear our excursions? HUME. Ay; what else? fear you not her courage. Bolingbroke. I have heard her reputed to be a woman of an invincible spirit: lust that shall be convenient, master Hume, that you be by her aloft, while we be busy below; and so, I pray you, go in God's name, and leave us. [Exeunt Hume, Southwell, and Bolingbroke.

Enter Bolingbroke, Hume, Southwell, and Messenger.

Bolingbroke. Hume, Southwell, messenger, I send you on this errand: you shall know what I would you do.
Enter Duchess, above.

Duch. Well said, my masters; and welcome all.
To this gear; the sooner the better.
Boling. Patience, good lady; wizards know their times.

Deep night, dark night, the silent of the night,
The time of night when Troy was set on fire;
The time when screech-owls cry, and ban-dogs howl,
And spirits walk, and ghosts break up their graves,
That time best fits the work we have in hand.

Madam, sit you, and fear not; whom we raise,
We will take fast within a halfe how long.
[Here they perform the ceremonies appertaining,
And make the circle; Bolingbroke, or Southwell, reads, Conjuro te, &c. It thunders and Lightens terribly; then the Spirit riseth.]
Spir. Adsum.

M. Jourd. Asmeth,
By the eternal God, whose name and power
Thou tremblest at, answer that I shall ask:
For, till thou speake, thou shalt not pass from hence.
Spir. Ask what thou wilt: That I had said and done!
Boling. First, of the king.
Spir. What shall of him become?
[Reading out of a paper.]
Boling. What fate awaits the duke of Suffolk?
Spir. The duke yet lives, that Henry shall depose;
But him oublive, and die a violent death.
[As the Spirit speaks, Southwell writes the answer.
Boling. What shall befall the Duke of Somerset?
Spir. Let him shun castles; Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains,
Than where castles mounted stand.
Have done, for more I hardly can endure.
Boling. Descend to darkness, and the burning lake:
False fiends avoid!
[Thunder and lightning. Spirit descends.]
Enter York and Buckingham, hastily with their guards, and others.
York. Lay hands upon these traitors, and their trash.
Beldame, I think, we watch'd you at an inch—
What, madam, are you there? the king and commonwealth
Deeply indebted for this piece of palms; My lord protector will, I doubt it not,
See you well gerdon't for these good deserts.

Duch. Not half so bad as thine to England's king,
Injurious duke; that threat'st where is no cause.
Buck. True, madam, none at all. What call you this?
Spir. Shewing her the papers.
Away with them; let them be clapp'd up close,
And kept asunder:—You, madam, shall with us:
Stafford, take her to thee.——
[Exit Duchess from above.]

We'll see your trinkets here all forth-coming; All.—Away!

[Execut Guards, with South. Boling. &c.
York. Lord Buckingham, methinks, you watch'd her well:
A pretty plot, well chosen to build upon:
Now, pray, my lord, let's see the devil's writ.
What have we here?
[Reads.]
The duke yet lives, that Henry shall depose;
But him oublive, and die a violent death.
Why, this is just,
Aio te, Encina, Romanos vincere posses.
Well, to the rest:
Tell me, what fate awaits the duke of Suffolk? By water shall he die, and take his end—
What shall belude the Duke of Somerset? Let him shun castles: Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains,

Than where castles mounted stand.
Come, come, my lords;
These oracles are hardly attain'd,
And hardly understood.
The king is in progress toward Saint Alban's,
With him the husband of this lovely lady:
Thither go these news, as fast as horse can carry them:
A sorry breakfast for my lord protector.
Buck. Your grace shall give me leave, my lord of York,
To be the post, in hope of his reward.
York. At your pleasure, my good lord. Who's within there, ho?

Enter a Servant.
Invite my lords of Salisbury, and Warwick,
To sup with me to-morrow night.—Away! [Excus.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—St. Albans.

Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, Gloster, Cardinal, and Suffolk, with Falconers hooting.

Q. Mar. Believe me, lords, for flying at the brook,
I saw not better sport these seven years' day:
Yet, by your leave, the wind was very high;
And, ten to one, old Joan had not gone out.
K. Hen. But what a point, my lord, your falcon made,
And where pitch she flew above the rest?—
To see how God in all his creatures works!
Yes, man and birds, are fain of climbing hight.
Sof. No marvel, an it like your majesty,
My lord protector's hawks do walk so well:
They know, their master loves to be aloft,
And bears his thoughts above his falcon's pitch.
Glo. My lord, 'tis but a base ignoble mind
That mounts no higher than a bird can soar.
Car. I thought as much; 'tis shall be above the clouds.
Glo. Ay, my lord cardinal; How think you by that?
Were it not good, your grace could fly to heaven?
K. Hen. The treasury of everlasting joy!
Car. Thy heaven is on earth; thine eyes and thoughts
Beat on a crown, the treasure of thy heart;
Pernicious protector, dangerous peer,
That smooth'st it so with king and commonwealth!
Glo. What, cardinal, is your priesthood grown
Taste ne animis curvissius ira?
Churchmen so hot? good uncle, hide such malice;
With such holiness can you do it?
Sof. No malice, sir; no more than well becomes
So good a quarrel, and so bad a peer.
Glo. As who, my lord?
Sof. Why, as you, my lord;
An't like your lordly protectorship.
Q. Mar. And thy ambition, Gloster.
K. Hen. I am a king, I pr'ythee, peace,
Good queen; and what shall on these furious peers,
For blessed are the peacemakers on earth.
Car. Let me be blessed for the peace I make,
Against this proud protector, with my sword!
Glo. 'Faith, holy uncle, 'tould werce come to that!
[Aside to the Cardinal.
Car. Marry, when thou dar'st. [Aside.
Glo. Make up no factious numbers for the matter.
In thine own person answer thy abuse. [Aside.
Car. Ay, where thou dar'st not peep: an if thou dar'st.
This evening, on the east side of the grove. [Aside.
K. Hen. How now, my lords?

2E
Car. Believe me, cousin Gloster, had not your man put up the fowl so suddenly, we had had more sport. — Come with thy two-hand sword.

Glo. Truly, uncle.

Car. Are you advised? — the east side of the grove?

K. Hen. Why, how now, uncle Gloster?

Glo. Talking of hawking; nothing else, my lord.

Now, by God's mother, priest, I'll shave your crown for this, Or all my fence shall fail. [Aside.

Car. Medici tepsum :

Protector, see 'tis well, protect yourself. [Aside.

K. Hen. The winds grow high; so do your stomachs, lords.

How larksome is this musek to my heart! When such strings jar, what hope of harmony? I pray, my lords, let me compound this strife.

Enter an Inhabitant of Saint Albans's, crying, A Miracle!

Glo. What means this noise?

Fellow, what miracle dost thou proclaim?

Jesh. A miracle! a miracle! —

Suf. Come to the king, and tell him what miracle.

Jesh. Forsooth, a blind man at Saint Alban's shrine.

Within an half hour, hath receiv'd his sight;

A man, that 'er saw in his life before.

K. Hen. Now, God be praised! I that believing souls

Gives light in darkness, comfort in despair!

Enter the Mayor of Saint Alban's, and his brethren, and Simpcox, borne between two persons in a chair, his wife and a great multitude following.

Car. Here come the townsmen on procession,

To present his highness with the man.

K. Hen. Great is his comfort in this earthly vale, Although by his sight his sin be multiplied.

Glo. Stand by, my masters, bring him near to the His highness' pleasure is to talk with him. [King.

K. Hen. (Good fellow, tell us here the circumstance, That we for thee may glorify the Lord. What hast thou been long blind, and now restor'd?

Simp. Born blind, an't please your grace.

Wife. Ay, indeed, was he.

Suf. What word is this? —

Wife. His wife, an't like your worship.

Glo. Had'st thou been his mother, thou'lt have better told.

K. Hen. Where wert thou born?

Simp. At Berwick in the north, an't like your grace.

K. Hen. Poor soul; God's goodness hath been great to thee,

Let never day nor night unhallow'd pass, But still remember what the Lord hath done.

Q. Mar. Tell me, good fellow, cam'st thou here by chance?

Or of devotion, to this holy shrine?

Simp. God knows, of pure devotion. being call'd a hundred times, and oftner, in my sleep

By good Saint Albain; who said, — Simpcox, come: Come, sirrah, if thou know my shrine, and I will help thee.

Wife. Most true, forsooth; and many times and oft

Myself have heard a voice to call him so.

Car. What, art thou lame?

Simp. Ay, God Almighty help me!

Suf. How cam'st thou so?

Wife. A plum-tree, master.

Glo. How long hast thou been blind?

Simp. O, born so, master.

Glo. What, and would'st thou a tree? —

Suf. But that in all my life, when I was a youth.

Wife. Too true; and bought his climbing very dear.

Glo. 'Maas, thou'ld out' plums well, that would'st venture so.

Simp. Alas, good master, my wife desir'd some reins.

And made her climb, with danger of my life.

Glo. A subtle knife I but yet it shall not serve.

Let me see thine eyes — wink now; now open them —

In my opinion, yet thou seest not well.

Simp. Yes, master, clear as day; I thank God, and Saint Alban.

Glo. Sayst thou me so? What colour is this cloak

Simp. Red, master; red as blood.

Glo. Why, that's well said: What colour is my gown of?

Simp. Black, forsooth; coal-black, as jet.

K. Hen. Why then, thou knowst what colour jet is of?

Suf. And yet, I think, jet did be never see.

Glo. But cloaks, and gowns, before this day, a

Wife. Never, before this day, in all his life.

Glo. Tell me, sirrah, what's my name?

Simp. Alas, master, I know not.

Glo. What's thine own name?

Simp. I know not.

Glo. Nor his?

Simp. No, indeed, master.

Glo. What's thine own name?

Simp. Saunders Simpcox, an if it please you, master.

Glo. Then, Saunders, sit thou there, the lying'st

In Christendom. If thou hast been born blind,

Thou might'st as well have known our names, as thus To name the several colours we do wear.

Sight may distinguish of colours: but suddenly To nominate them all, 's impossible.

My lords, Saint Alban here hath done a miracle; And would ye not think that cunning to be great, That could restore this cripple to his legs again?

Simp. O, master, that you could!

Glo. My masters of Saint Alban's, have you not beardies in your town, and things called whirls?

May. Yes, my lord, if it please your grace.

Glo. Then send for one presently.

May. Sirrah, go fetch the beadle bither straight.

[Exit an Attendant.

Glo. Now fetch me a stool bither by and by. [A stool brought out.] Now, sirrah, if you mean to save yourself from whipping, leap over this stool, and run away.

Simp. Alas, master, I am not able to stand alone.

You go about to torture me in vain.

Re-enter Attendant, with the Beadle.

Glo. Well, sir, we must have you find your legs. Sirrah beadle, whip him till he leap over that same stool.

Read. I will, my lord. — Come on, sirrah; off with your doublet quickly.

Simp. Alas, master, what shall I do? I am not able to stand.

[After the Beadle hath hit him once, he leaps over the stool; and the people follow, and cry, A Miracle!

K. Hen. O God, see' st thou this, and be not so long?

Q. Mar. It made me laugh, to see the villain run.

Glo. Follow the kneave; and take this drab away.

Wife. Alas, sir, we did it for pure need.

Glo. Leave this whipped through every market town, till they come to Berwick, where they came.

[Exit Mayor, Beadle, Wife, &c.

Car. Duke Humphrey has done a miracle to day.

Suf. True; made the same to leap, and fly away.

Glo. But you have done more miracles than I; You made, in a day, my lord, whole towns to fly.
Enter Buckingham.

K. Hen. What tidings with our cousin Buckingham?

Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to unfold.
A sort of naughty persons, lowdly bent—
Under the countenance and confederacy
Of lady Eleanor, the protector's wife,
The ringleader of all this rout,—
Have practis'd dangerously against your state,
Dealing with witches, and with conjurers:
Whom we have apprehended in the fact;
Raising up wicked spirits from under ground,
Demanding of king Henry's life and death,
And other of your highness' privy council,
As more at large your grace shall understand.
Car. And so, my lord protector, by this means
Your lady is forthcoming yet at Lancaster.
This news, I think, hath turn'd your weapon's edge;
'Tis like, my lord, you will not keep your hour.

Glo. Ambitious churchman, leave to afflict my heart!
Sorrow and grief have vanquish'd all my powers:
And, vanquish'd as I am, I yield to thee,
Or to the meanest groom.

K. Hen. O God, what mischief work the wicked ones
Heaping confusion on their own heads thereby! Q. Mar. Gloster, see here the tainture of thy nest.
And, look, thyself be faultless, thou wert best.
Glo. Madam, for myself, to heaven I do appeal,
Haply my lord's my king, and common weal:
And, for my wife, I know not how it stands;
Sorry I am to hear what I have heard.
Noble she is; but if she have forgot
Honour and virtue, and convers'd with such
As, like to pitch, defile nobility,
I banish her my bed and company;
And give her, as a prey, to law, and shame,
That hath dishonour'd Gloster's honest name.

K. Hen. Well, for this night, we will repose us here:
To-morrow, toward London, back again,
To look into this business thoroughly,
And call these foul offenders to their answers!
And poise the cause in justice' equal scales,
Whose beam stands sure, whose rightful cause prevails.

[Flourish. Exeunt.]

Enter York, Salisbury, and Warwick.

York. Now, my good lords of Salisbury and Warwick,
Our simple supper ended, give me leave,
In this close walk, to satisfy myself,
In craving your opinion of my title,
Which is infallible, to England's crown.
Sal. My lord, I long to hear it at full.
War. Sweet York, begin: and if thy claim be good,
The Nevills are thy subjects to command.
York. Then thus—
Edward the Third, my lords, had seven sons:
The first, Edward the Black Prince, prince of Wales;
The second, William of Hasting; and the third,
Lionel, Duke of Clarence; next to whom,
Was John of Gaunt, the duke of Lancaster:
The fifth, was Edmond Langley, duke of York;
The sixth, was Thomas of Woodstock, duke of Gloucester;
William of Windsor was the seventh, and last;
Edward, the Black Prince, died before his father;
And left behind him Richard, his only son,
Who, after Edward the Third's death, reign'd as king:
Till Henry Bollingbroke, duke of Lancaster,
The eldest son and heir of John of Gaunt,
Crown'd by the name of Henry the Fourth,
Seiz'd on the realm; depos'd the rightful king;
Sent his poor queen to France, from whence she came.
And him to Pomfret; where, as all you know,
Harmless Richard was murder'd traitorously.
War. Father, the duke hath told the truth;
Thus you forsake the house of Lancaster the crown.
York. Which now they hold by force, and not by right:
For Richard, the first son's heir being dead,
The issues of his next son should have reign'd.
Sal. But William of Hasting died without an heir.
York. The third son, duke of Clarence, (from whose line
I claim the crown,) had issue—Philippe, a daughter:
Who married Edmund Mortimer, earl of March,
Edmund had issue—Roger, earl of March,
Roger was issue—Edmund, Anne, and Eleanor.
Sal. This Edmund, in the reign of Bolingbroke,
As I have read, laid claim unto the crown;
And, but for Owen Glendower, had been king,
Who kept him in captivity, till he died.
But, to the rest.
York.

His eldest sister, Anne,
My mother, being heir unto the crown,
Married Richard, earl of Cambridge, who was son
To Edmund and Langley, Edward the Third's fifth
By her I claim the kingdom: she was heir [son.
To Roger, earl of March; who was the son
Of Edmund Mortimer; who married Philippe,
Solo duxerunt uno Lioni, duke of Clarence:
So if the issue of the elder son
Succeed before the younger, I am king.
War. What plain proceedings are more plain
Than those of rightful princes?
Henry doth claim the crown from John of Gaunt,
The fourth son; York claims it from the third.
Till Lionel's issue fails, his should not reign.
It falls not yet; but flourish's in thee,
And in thy sons, fair slips of such a stock—
Then, father Salisbury, kneel we both together;
And, in this private plot, be we the first,
That shall salute our rightful sovereign.
With honour of his birthright to the crown.
Both. Long live our sovereign Richard, England's king!
York. We thank you, lords. But I am not your king
Till I be crown'd; and that my sword be stain'd
With heart-blood of the house of Lancaster;
And that's not suddenly to be perform'd;
But with advice, and silent secrecy.
Do you, as I do, in these dangerous days,
Wink at the duke of Suffolk's insolence,
At Beaufort's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At Buckingham, and all the crew of them;
Till they have snar'd the shepherd of the flock,
That virtuous prince, the good duke Humphrey:
'Tis that they seek; and they, in seeking that,
Shall find their deaths, if York can prophesy.
Sal. My lord, break we off; we know your mind at full.
War. My heart assures me, that the earl of Shall one day make the duke of York a king.
York. And, Nevil, this I do assure myself—
Richard shall live to make the earl of Warwick
The greatest man in England, but the king.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The same. A Hall of Justice.

Trumpets sounded. Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, Gloster, York, Suffolk, and Salisbury; the Duchess of Gloster, Margery Jourdain, Southwell, Hume, and Bollingbroke, under guard.

K. Hen. Stand forth, dame Eleanor Cobham, Gloster's wife:

[Exeunt.]
In sight of God, and us, your guilt is great;
Receive the sentence of the law, for sins
Such as by God's book are adjudged to death. —
You four, from hence to prison back again:

From thence, unto the place of execution:
The witch in Smithfield shall be burn'd to ashes,
And you three shall be strangled on the gallows.
Whoever beguiled, for his foil,
Despoiled of your honour in your life,
Shall, after three days' open penance done,
Live in your country here, in banishment,
As willing to yourself, in the late of Man.
Duck. Welcome is banishment, welcome were your death.
Glo. Eleanor, the law, then seest, hath judged
you.
I cannot justify whom the law condemne.

[Execut the Duchesse, and the other prisoners, guarded.
Mine eyes are full of tears, my heart of grief.
Ah, Humphrey, this dishonour in thy age
Will bring thy head with sorrow to the ground! —
I beseech your majesty give me leave to go;
Sorrow would solace, and mine age would ease.
K. Are. May, Humphrey duke of Gloster: one then go,
Give up thy staff, Henry will to himself
Protector be: and God shall be my hope,
My star, my guide, and lamp to me in distress;
And go in peace, Humphrey: no less belov'd,
Than when thou wast protector to thy king.
Q. Mar. I see no reason, why a king of years
Should be the protected like a child born;
God and king Henry govern England's helm:
Give up your staff, sir, and the king his realm.
Glo. My staff? — here, noble Henry, is my staff:
As long as I have the same reign,
As ere thy father Henry made it mine;
And even as willingly at thy feet I leave it,
As others would ambitiously receive it.
Farewell, good king: when I am dead and gone,
May honourable peace attend thy throne! [Exit.
Q. Mar. Why, now is Henry king, and Margaret
queen;
And Humphrey, duke of Gloster, scarce himself,
That bears so shrewd a main: two pails at once,
His lady banish'd, and a limb lopp'd off;
This staff of honour raught: — there let it stand,
Where it best fits to be, in Henry's hand.
Saf. Thus droops this lofty pine, and hangs his sprays;
Thus Eleanor's pride dies in her youngest days.
York. Lords, let him go.—Please it your majesty,
This is the day appointed for the combat;
And ready are the appellant and defendant,
The armourer and his man, to enter the lists,
So please your highness to behold the fight.
Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord; for purposely therefore Left I the court, to see this quarrel tried.
K. Hen. O God's name, see the lists and all things fit,
Here let them end it, and God defend the right!
York. I never saw a fellow worse beseated,
Or more afraid to fight, than is the appellant,
The son of this armourer, my lords.
Enter, on one side, Horner, and his neighbours, drinking to him so much that he is drunk; and he enter bearing his staff with a sand-bag fastened to it; a drum before him: at the other side, Peter, with a drum and a similar staff; accompanied by persons who drive before him.
1 Neigh. Here, neighbour Horner, I drink to you in a cup of sack; And fear not, neighbour, you shall do well enough.
2 Neigh. And here, neighbour, here's a cup of charming.
3 Neigh. And here's a pot of good double beer, neighbour; drink, and fear not your man.
Her. Let it come, I pray, and I'll pledge you all;
And a fig for Peter!
1 Pren. Here, Peter, I drink to thee; and be not afraid.
2 Pren. Be merry, Peter, and fear not thy master:
fight for credit of the prentices.
Peter. I thank you all: drink, and pray for me,
I pray you; for, I think, I have taken my last draught in this world.—Here, Robin, an if I die, give thee my apron: and, Will, thou shalt have my hammer:—and here, Tom, take all the money that I have.—O Lord, bless me, I pray God! for I am never about with my master, he hath learnt so much fence already.
Duck. Come, leave your drinking, and fall to blows.
Sirrah, what's thy name?
Peter Peter, forsooth.
Duck. Peter! what more?
Peter. Thump.
Duck. Thump! then see thou thump thy master
well.
Her. Masters, I am come hither, as it were, upon your man's instigation, to prove him a knave, and myself an honest man: and touching the duke of York,—will take my death, I never meant him any ill,
Thus, the king, nor the queen: And therefore,
Peter, have at thee with a downright blow, as Bevis of Southampton fell upon Ascupart.
York. Despatch:—this knave's tongue begins to chatter.
Sound trumpets, alarum to the combatants.
[Alarum. They fight, and Peter strikes down his master.
Her. Hold, Peter, hold! I confess, I confess treason.
(Dies.
York. Take away his weapon:—Fellow, thank
God, and the good wine in thy master's way.
Peter, if God I have I overcome mine enemies in this presence? O Peter, thou hast prevailed in right!
K. Hen. Go, take hence that traitor from our right.
For, by his death, we do perceive his guilt:
And God, in justice, hath reveal'd to us
The truth and innocence of this poor fellow,
Which he had thought to have murder'd wrong fully.
Come, fellow, follow us for thy reward.
[Execut.
SCENE IV.—The same. A Street.
Enter Gloster and Servants, in mourning clothes.
Glo. Thus, sometimes, hath the brightest day a
Fader cloistered,
And, after summer, evermore succeeds
Barren winter, with his wrathful nipping cold;
So eares and jors abound, as seasons fleet.
Syr. What's o'clock?
Ten, my lord.
Glo. Ten is the hour that was appointed me,
To watch the coming of my punish'd duchess
Unseath she may the dainty streets,
To tread them with her tender-feeling feet.
Sweet Neil, ill can thy noble mind abrook
The abject people, gazing on thy face,
With envious looks, still laughing at thy shame:
That erst did follow thy proud chariot wheels,
When thou didst ride in triumph through the streets.
But, soft! I think, she comes; and I'll prepare
My tearful eyes to see her miseries.
Enter the duchess of Gloster, in a white sheet, with papers pin'd upon her back, her feet bare, and a taper burning in her hand; Sir John Stanley, a Sheriff, and Officers.
Syr. So please your grace, we'll take her from the sheriff.
Glo. She brought these for your lives; let her pass by.
Duck. Come you, my lord, to see my open shame?
Now thou dost penance too. Look, how they gaze
Act 3.

KING HENRY VI.

See, how the giddy multitude do point,
And nod their heads, and throw their eyes on thee!
Ah, Gloster, hide thee from their hateful looks;
And, in thy closet pent up, rue thy shame,
And ban thine enemies, both mine and thine.

Glo. Be patient, gentle Nell; forget this grief.

And, in my time, to all the world I do myself:
For, whilst I think I am thy married wife,
And thou a prince, protector of this land,
Methinks, I should not thus be led along,
Matl'd up in shame, and false among men,
And follow'd with a rabble, that rejocie
To see my tears, and hear my deep-felt groans.
The ruthless flint doth cut my tender feet;
And, when I start, the envious people laugh,
And, if I cannot be advised how to
Ah, Humphrey, can I bear this shameful yoke?
Trow'st thou, that e'er I'll look upon the world;
Or count them happy, that enjoy the sun?
No; dark shall be my light, and night my day;
To think upon my pompt, shall be my hell.

Sometime I'll say, I am duke Humphrey's wife;
And he a prince, and ruler of the land:
Yet so he rut'd, and such a prince he was,
As he stood by, whilst I, his forlorn House,
Was made a wonder, and a pointing stock,
To every idle rascal follower.

But be thou mild, and blush not at my shame;
Nor sit at nothing, till the axe of death
Hang over thee, as, sure, it shortly will.

For Suffolk,—he can do all in all
With her, that hateth thee, and hates us all,—
And York, and impious Beaufort, that false priest,
Have all lim'd bushes to betray thy wings,
And, fly thou how thou canst, they'll tangle thee:
But fear not thou, until thy foot be snard,
Not the least prevention of thy foes.

Glo. Ah, Nell, forbear; thou almost all way;
I must offend, before I be attainted:
And had I twenty times so many foes,
And each of them had twenty times their power,
All these could not procure me any scathe,
So long as I am loyal, true, and crimeless.

Wouldst have me rescue thee from this reproach:
Why, yet thy scandal were not wip'd away,
But I in danger for the breach of law.

Thy greatest help is quiet, gentle Nell:
I pray thee, sort thy heart to patience;
These few days' wonder will be quickly worn.

Enter a Herald.

Her. I summon your grace to his majesty's parliament, holden at Bury the first of this next month.

Glo. And my consent ne'er ask'd herein before! This is close dealing.—Well, I will be there.

My Nell, I take my leave; and, master sheriff,
Let not her penance exceed the king's commission.

Sher. An't please your grace, here my commission stays:
And sir John Stanley is appointed now
To take her with him to the isle of Man.

Glo. Must you, sir John, protect my lady here?
Stan. So am I given in charge, may't please your grace.

Glo. Weigh not the worse, in that I pray
You use her well: the world may laugh again;
And I may live to do you kindness, if
You do it her. And so, sir John, farewell.

Duch. What service, my lord, and bid me not farewell?

Glo. Witness my tears, I cannot stay to speak.

[Exeunt: Gloster and Servants.]

Duch. Art thou gone too? All comfort go with thee!
For none abides with me: my joy is—death;
Death, at whose name I oft have been afraid,
Believe, with'd this world's eternity.—

Stanley, I pray thee, this matter forget not;
I care not whither, for I beg no favours,
Only convey me where thou art commanded.

Stan. Why, madam, that is to the isle of Man;
There to be used according to your state.

Duch. That's bad enough, for I am but reproach:

And shall I then be us'd reproachfully?

Stan. Like to a duchess, and duke Humphrey's teacher
According to that state you shall be used.

Duch. Sheriff, farewell, and better than I fare;
Although thou hast been conduct of my shame!

Sher. It is my office; and, madam, pardon me.

Duch. Ay, ay, farewell; thy office is dis-charg'd—

Come, Stanley, shall we go?

Stan. Madam, you your penance done, throw off this sheet,
And go we to attire you for our journey,

Duch. My shame will not be shifted with my sheet,
No, it will hang upon my richest robes,
And show itself, attire me how I can.
Go, lead the way; I long to see my prison.

[Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Abbey at Bury.

Enter to the Parliament, King Henry, Queen Margaret, Cardinal Beaufort, Suffolk, York, Buckingham, and Others.

K. Hen. I muse, my lord of Gloster is not come
'Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man,
Whate'er occasion keeps him from us now.

Q. Mar. Can you not see? or will you not observe the strangeness of his alter'd countenance?

With what a majesty he bears himself;
How insolent of late he is become,
How proud, peremptory, and unlike himself? We know the time, since he was mild and affable:
And, if we did but glance a far-off look,
Immediately he was upon his knee,
That all the court admitt'd him for submission:
But meet him now, and, be it in the morn,
When every one will give the time of day,
He knits his brow, and shows an angry eye,
And passeth by with stiff unbowed knee,
Disdaining duty to that we belong;
Small curs are not regarded, when they grin;
But great men tremble, when the lion roars;
And Humphrey is no little man in England.
First, note, that he is near you in descent;
And, if you fail, he is the first that will mount.
Me seemeth then, it is no policy—
Respecting what a rancorous mind he bears,
And his advantage following your decease,—
That he should come about your royal person,
Or be admitted to your highness' council.
By flattering hath he won the commons' hearts;
And, when he please to make commotion,
'Tis to be fear'd, they all will follow him.
Now 'tis the spring, and weeds are shallow-rooted;
Suffer them now, and they'll o'ergrow the garden,
And choke the herbs for want of husbandry.
The first that cares, I bear unto the Lord,
Made me collect these dangers in the duke.
If he be fond, call it a woman's fear;
Which fear if better reasons can supplant,
I will subscribe and say,—I wrong'd the duke.
My lord of Suffolk,—Buckingham,—and York,— Reprieve my allegiance, if you can;
Or else conclude my words effectual.

Suf. Well hath your highness seen into this

And, had I first been put to speak my mind,
I think, I should have told your grace's tale.
The duchess, by his subornation,
Upon my life, began her diabolic practices
Or if he were not privy to those faults,
Yet, by reputing of his high descent,
As next the king, he was successive heir,
And such high vassals of his nobility,
Jest instigate the bedlam brain-sick duchess.
By wicked means to his own sovereign
Smooth runs the water, where the brook is deep;
And in his simple show he harbours treason.
The fox berk not, when he would steal the lamb.
No, neither with my sovereignty
Unseasoned yet, and full of deep deceitful
Deceit.
Car. Had he not, contrary to form of law,
Devise strange deaths for small offenders done?
York. And did he not, in his protectorship,
Lend great sums of money through the realm,
For soldiers' pay in France, and never sent it?
By means whereof, the towns each day revolted.
Sed. Tut! These are petty faults to faults un
Thee, which time will bring to light in smooth duke
Humphrey.
K. Hen. My lords, at once! The care you have
To mow down thorns that would annoy our foot,
Is worthy praise: but shall I speak my conscience?
Our kinsman Gloster is as innocent
From meaning treason to our royal person,
As is the sucking lamb, or harmless dove:
The duke is virtuous, mild, and too well given,
To dream on evil, or to work my downfall.
Q. Mar. Ay, what's more dangerous than this,
To take for faults, what is but foolish
Seems he a dove? his feathers are but bow'd,
For he's disposed as the hateful raven.
Is he a lamb? his skin is surely lent him,
For better suiteth as are the ravenous wolves.
Who cannot steel a shape, that means deceit?
Take heed, my lord; the welfare of us all
Hangs on the cutting short that fraudulent man.

Roder Somerset.

Sed. All health unto our gracious sovereign!
K. Hen. Welcome, lord Somerset: What news finds France?

Sed. That all your interest in those territories
Is utterly bereft you; all is lost.
K. Hen. Cold news, lord Somerset: But God's will be done!
York. Cold news for me; for I had hope of France,
As firmly as I hope for fertile England.
Thus are my blossoms blasted in the bud,
And caterpillars eat my leaves away:
But I will remedy it as the wanton wolves,
Or sell my title for a glorious grave.

Aside.

Roder Gloster.

Glo. All happiness unto my lord the king!
Pardon, my liege, that I have staid so long.
Sed. Nay, Gloster, know, that thou art come too soon.
Unless thou wert more loyal than thou art:
I do arrest thee of high treason here.
Glo. Well, Suffolk, yet thou shalt not see me blush,
Nor change my countenance for this arrest;
A heart unspotted is not easily daunted.
The fairest spring is not so free from mud,
As I am clear from treason to my sovereign:
Who can suspect me, wherein am I guilty?
York. 'Tis thought, my lord, that you took bribes of France,
And, being protector, stay'd the soldiers' pay;
By means whereof, his highness hath lost France.
Glo. Is it but thought so? What are they, that think it?
I never robb'd the soldiers of their pay,
Nor ever had one penny bribe from France.
So hot a day, as I have need about the night,—
Ay, eight by night,—in studying good for England
That doth that ever I wrested from the king,
Or any great I heard to my use,
Be prove how I stand at my trial day!
No I many a pound of mine own proper store,
Because I would not tax the needy commons,
Have I dispersed to the garrisons,
And never ask'd for restitution.
Car. It serves you well, my lord, to say so much.
Glo. I say no more than truth, so help me God!
York. In your protectorship, you did devise Strange tortures for offenders, never heard of,
That England was defam'd by tyranny.
Glo. Why, 'tis well known, that whiles I was Pity was all the fault that was in me;
For I should melt at an offender's tears,
And lowly words were ransom for their fault.
Uneasy lies the head with a crown in youth;
Or foul felonious thief, that fleeced poor passengers,
I never gave them condign punishment.
Murther, indeed, that bloody sin, I tortur'd
Shorn his kingdom, unbear'd the title.
Sed. My lord, these faults are easy, quickly
answer'd,
But mightier crimes are laid unto your charge,
Whereby you cannot easily purge yourself.
I do arrest you in his highness' name:
And here commit you to my lord cardinal
To keep, until your further time of trial.

K. Hen. My lord of Gloster, 'tis my special hope,
That you will clear yourself from all suspects;
My conscience tells me, you are innocent.
Glo. Ah, gracious lord, these days are dangerous,
Virtue is chock'd with foul ambition,
And charity shall hence by raven'ts hand,
Foul subornation is predominant,
And equity extil'd your highness' land.
I know, their complot is to have my life:
And, if I had, through their false eloquence,
And prove the period of their tyranny,
I would expend it with all willingness:
But mine is made the prologue to their play;
For those that have past, but yet survive,
Will not conclude their plotted tragedy.

Beaufort's red sparkling eyes blath his heart's malice
And Suffolk's cloudy brow his stormy haste;
Sharp the king's keen eye; his tongue the

The envious load that lies upon his heart;
And dogged York, that reaches at the moon,
Whose overweening arm I have pluck'd back,
By false accuse amounting to his life.
And you, my sovereign lady, with the rest,
Causeless have laid disgraces on my head:
And, with your best endeavour, have stirr'd up
My least liege to be mine enemy.

Ay, all are in league, and you and I,
Myself had notice of your connivements,
And all to make away my guiltless life;
I shall not want false witness to condemn me,
Nor story of treasons to augment my guilt;
The ancient proverb will be well affected,—
A staff is quickly found to best a dog.
Car. My liege, his railing is intolerable
If those, that care to keep your royal person
From treason's secret knife, and traitor's rage,
Be thus upbraided, child, and rated as,
And the offender granted scope of speech,
'Twill make them cool in zeal unto your grace.
Sed. Hath he not twit our sovereign lady here,
With ignominious words, though cleverly couch'd,
As if she had suborned some to swear
False alliances to a traitor's state?
Q. Mar. But I can give the loser leave to chide.
Glo. Far truer spoke, than meant it; I lose, in deed:—
Redrew his horses, for they played me false!
And well such losers may have leave to speak.
Back. He'll wrest the sense, and bold us here all day:
Lord cardinal, he is your prisoner.
Car. See, he take away the dake, and guard him sure.
Glo. Ah, thus king Henry throws away his crust
Before his legs be firm to bear his body.
Thus is the shepherd beaten from the side,
And wolves are garrisoned who shall gnaw the first.
Ah, that my fear were false; ah, that it were!
For, good King Henry, thy decay I fear.

K. Hen. My lords, what to your wisdom seemeth best,
Do, or undo, as if yourself were here.
Q. Mar. What, will your highness leave the par-

K. Hen. Ay, Margaret; my heart is drown'd
With grief,
Whose flood begins to flow within mine eyes;
My body round engirt with misery;
For what's more miserable than discontent?—
Ah, uncle Humphrey! in thy face I see
The map of honour, truth, and loyalty;
And yet, good Humphrey, is the hour to come,
That ever many a tear of sorrow, or of faith.
What low'ring star now envies thy estate,
That these great lords, and Margaret our queen,
Do seek subversion of thy harmless life?
Thou never cast them wrong, nor man wrong:
And as the butcher takes away the calf,
And binds the wreath, and beats it when it strays,
Bearing it to the bloody slaughter-house;
Even so, remorseless, have they borne him hence.
And as the dam runs lowing up and down,
Looking the way her harmless young one went,
And can do nought but wail her darling's loss;
Even so myself bewails so good Gloucester's case.
With sad unhelpful tears; and with dim'd eyes
Look after him, and cannot do him good;
So mighty are his vowed enemies.
His fortune I will weep; and, 'twixt each groan,
Say—'Who's a traitor, Gloster he is none.'
[Exit.
Q. Mar. Free lords, cold snow melts with the sun's hot beams.

Henry my lord is cold in great affairs,
Too full of sullen pity; and Gloster's show
Beguiles him, as the mournful crocodile
With sorrow snares relenting passengers;
Or when a lake, roll'd in a flowing band,
With shining checker'd slough, doth sting a child.
That, for the beauty, thinks it excellent.
Believe me, lords, were none more wise than I,
(And yet, herein, I judge mine own wit good,) This Gloster should be quickly rid the world,
To rid us from the fear we have of him.

Car. That he should die, is worthy policy:
But yet we want a colour for his death:
'Twas by the hand of death, with his own hand,
And in the mind, that was no policy:
The king will labour still to save his life;
The commons haply rise to save his life;
And yet we have but trivial arguements,
More than mistrust, that shows him worthy death.
York. So that by this, you would not have him die.

Suy. Ah, York, no man alive so fair as I.
York. 'Tis York that hath more reason for his death—
But, my lord cardinal, and you, my lord of Suf-

Say as you think, and speak it from your souls,—
Wert not all one, an empty eagle were set
To guard the chicken from a hungry kite,
As place duke Humphrey for the king's protector?
Q. Mar. So the poor chicken should be sure of death.

Suy. Madam, 'tis true: And wert not madness then,
To make the fox surveyor of the fold?
Who being accus'd a crafty murderer,
His guilt should be but idly posted over,
Because his purpose is not executed.
No; let him die, in that he is a fox,
By nature prov'd an enemy to the flock,
Before his chaps be stain'd with crimson blood;
As Humphrey, prov'd by reasons, to my liege. And do not stand on quill'd letters, to say him:
Be it by gins, by snares, by subtilty,
Sleeping or waking, 'tis no matter how,
So he be dead; for that is good deceit
Which makes him first, that first intends deceit.
Q. Mar. Thrice-noble Suffolk, 'tis resolutely
Suf. Not resolve, except so much were done;
For things are often spoken, and seldom meant.
But, that my heart accordeth with my tongue,—
And so, my lord, I see this deed is proterious,
And to preserve my sovereign from his foe,—
Say but the word, and I will be his priest.
Car. But I would have him dead, my lord of Suf-

York. Ere you can take due orders for a priest:
Say, you consent, and censure well the deed,
And I'll provide his executioner,
And to the safety of my liege.
Suf. Here is my hand, the deed is worthy doing.
Q. Mar. And so say I.
York. And I: and now we three have spoke it,
It skills not greatly who impugns our dooms.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Great lords, from Ireland am I come again,
To signify, the rebels there are up,
And put the Englishmen unto the sword:
Send succours, lords, and stop the rage betime,
Before the wound do grow incurable;
For, being green, there is great hope of help.
Car. A break'st hark, that craves a quick expedient stop!
What counsel give you in this weighty cause?
York. That Somerset be sent as regent thither;
'Tis more, that lucky rules be employed;
Witness the fortune he hath had in France.
Suy. If York, with all his far-fet policy,
Hab'd been the regent there instead of me,
He never would have staid in France so long.
York. No, not to lose it all, as thou hast done:
I rather would have lost my life betimes,
Then bring a burden of dishonour home.
By staying there so long, till all were lost,
Show me one scar character'd on thy skin:
Men's flesh preserv'd so whole, do seldom win.
Q. Mar. Nay then, this spark will prove a raging fire,
If wind and fuel be brought to feed it with:—
No more, good York;—sweet Somerset, be still;—
Thy fortune, York, hast thou been regent there,
Mighty happily have prov'd far worse than his.
York. No, not to have been more than naught? nay, then a shame take all!
Suy. And in the number, thee, that wildest shame.
Car. We lacked of York, try what your fortune is.
The uncivil Kernes of Ireland are in arms,
And temper clay with blood of Englishmen:
To Ireland will you lead a band of men,
Collected choice, from each county some
And try your hap against the Irishmen?
York. I will, my lord, so please his majesty.
Suf. Why, our authority is his consent;
And, what we do establish, he confirms:
Then, noble York, take thou this task in hand.
York. I am content: Provide me soldiers, lords,
While I take order for mine own affairs.
Suy. A charge, lord York, that I will see per-

But now return we to the false duke Humphrey.
Car. No more of him; for I will deal with him,
That, henceforth, he shall trouble us no more.
And so be hark off; the day is almost spent:
Lord Suffolk, you and I must talk of that event.
York. My lord of Suffolk, within fourteen days,
At Bristol I expect my soldiers;
For them I would, till them all to Ireland.
Suf. I'll see it truly done, my lord of York.

[Exeunt all but York.

York. Now, York, or never, steel thy fearful thoughts;
And change misdoubt to resolution:
Be that thou hop'st to be; or what thou art
Resign to death, it is not worth the enjoying: Let pale face'd fear keep with the mean-born man, And find no harbour in a royal heart. Faster than spring-time showers, comes thought on thought; And not a thought, but thinks on dignity. My brain, more busy than the labouring spider, Weaves tedious snares to trap mine enemies. With me, a smile, well, it’s generally done, To send me packing with an host of men: I fear me, you but warm the starved snake, Who, cherish’d in your breasts, will sting your heart.

'Twas men I lack’d, and you will give them me: I take it kindly; yet, be well assur’d You put sharp weapons in a madman’s hands. Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mighty band, I will stir up in England some black storms. Shall blow ten thousand souls to heaven, or hell? And this fell tempest shall not cease to rage ‘Till the golden circuit on my head, Like to the glorious sun’s transparent beams, Do calm the fury of this mad-brained law. And, for a minister of my intent, I have seduced a head-strong Kentishman, John Cade of Ashford, To make commotion, as full well he can, Under the title of John Mortimer. In Ireland have I seen this stubborn Cade Oppose himself against a troop of Kernes: And so long time till that his thighs with darts Were almost like a sharp-quill’d porcupine: And, in the end being rescu’d, I have seen him Caper up right like a wild Morisco, Shaking the bloody darts, as he doth bells. Full often, like a shag-hair’d crafty Kerne, Hath he conversed with the enemy; And undiscover’d come to me again, And given me notions of their vanities. This devil here shall be my substitute: For that John Mortimer, which now is dead, In face, in gait, in speech, he doth resemble: By this I shall perceive the commons’ mind, How they affect the house and claim of York. Say, he be taken, rack’d, and tortured: I know, no pain, they can inflict upon him, Will make him say—I mov’d him to those arms. Say that he thrive, (as ’tis great like he will,) Why, then from Ireland come I with my strength, And reap the harvest which that rascal sow’d: For, Humphry being dead, as he shall be, And Henry just apart, the next for me. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—Burial. A Room in the Palace.

Enter certain Murderers, hastily.

1. Mar. Run to my lord of Suffolk; let him know, We have despatch’d the duke, as he commanded. 2. Mar. O, that it were to do! What have we done? Didst ever hear a man so pentiment? Enter Suffolk.

1. Mar. Here comes my lord. Saf. Now, sirs, have you despatch’d this thing? 2. Mar. Ay, my good lord, he’s dead. Saf. Why, that’s well said. Go, get you to my house: I will reward you for this venturous deed. This is the last of all the peers are hand: Have you said fair the bed? are all things well, According as I gave directions? 1. Mar. ’Tis, my good lord. Saf. Away, be gone! [Exeunt Murderers. Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, Cardinal Beaufort, Somerset, Lords, and others.

K. Hen. Go, call our uncle to our presence straight.
And make my image but anathema sign.
Was I, for this, this wretch'd upon the sea;
And twice by awkward wind from England's bank
Drove back again unto my native clime;
What heter'd this, but well-forewarning wind;
Did seem to say,—Seek not a scorpion's nest,
Nor set no footing on this unkind shore?
What did I then, but curb'd the gentle gusts
And tell that loud'd them from their brazen caves?
And bid them blow towards England's blessed
Or turn our stern upon a dreadful rock?

War.  But that dastard, that butch'd, butch'd my valiant son.
The pretty vaunting sea refuse'd to drown me;
Knowing, that thou would'st have me drown'd on shore,
With tears as salt as sea through thy unkindness:
The splitting rocks cow'd in the sinking sands;
And would not dash me with their ragged sides;
Because thy flinty heart, more hard than they,
Might in thy palace perish Margaret.
As far as I could ken thy choky cliffs,
When from the shore the tempest heat us back,
I stood upon the hatches in the storm:
And when the dusky sky began to rob
My eagle-gaping sight of the land and view,
I took a costly jewel from my neck,—
A heart it was, bound in with diamonds,—
And threw it towards thy land,—the sea receive'd it
And fell this day from his body, the man's heart:
[It:
And even with this, I lost fair England's view,
And bid mine eyes be packing with my heart;
And call'd them blind and dusky spectacles,
For hanging ken of Albion's wished coast.
How often have I tempted Suffolk's tongue
(The agent of thy foul incostancy,)
To sit and watch me, as Ascanius did,
When he to maddening Dido would unfold
His father's acts, commen'd by burning Troy?
Am I not witch'd like her? or thou not false like him?
Ah me, I can no more! Die, Margaret!
For Henry weeps, that thou dost live so long.

Noise within. Enter Warwick and Salisbury.
The Commune press to the door.
War.  It is reported, mighty sovereign,
That good duke Humphrey tr'rorously is murder'd
By Suffolk and the cardinal Beaufort's means.
The commons, like an angry hive of bees,
Their breasts open'd, in their leader's heart;
And care not who they sting in his revenge.
Myself have calm'd their spleenful mutiny,
Until they hear the order of his death.
K. Hen.  That he is dead, good Warwick, 'tis too true;
But how he died, God knows, not Henry:
Enter his chamber, view his breathless corpse,
And comment then upon his sudden death.
War.  That I shall do, my liege.—Stay, Salisbury,
With the rude multitude, till I return.

[Warwick goes into an inner room, and Salisbury retires.

K. Hen.  O thou that judgest all things, stay my thoughts;
My thoughts, that labour to persuade my soul,
Some violent hands were laid on Humphry's life!
If my suspect be false, forgive me, God;
For judgment only doth belong to thee!
Fain would I go to chafe his pale lips
With so, my lord, to cool his burning brain.
Upon his face an ocean of salt tears;
To tell my love unto his dumb deaf trunk,
And with my fingers feel his hand unfeeling;
But alack! he is too hot to be laid on;
And, to survey his dead and earthy image,
What were it but to make my sorrow greater?

The folding doors of an inner chamber are thrown open, and Gloster is discovered dead in his bed:
Warwick and others standing by it.

War.  Come hither, gracious sovereign, view this body.
K. Hen.  That is to see how deep my grave is
For, with his soul, fed all my worldly solace;
For seeing him, I see my life in death.
War.  As surely as my soul intends to live
With that dread King, that took our state upon him,
To free himself from his father's wrathful curse,
I do believe that violent hands were laid
Upon the life of this thrice-famed duke.

Suf.  A dreadful oath, sworn with a solemn tongue!
What instance gives lord Warwick for his vow?
War.  See, how the blood is settled in his face!
Oft have I seen a timely-parted ghost,
Of ashy semblance, meager, pale, and bloodless,
All being descended to the labouring heart;
Who, in the declit that it holds with death,
Attracts the same for aiding 'gainst the enemy
Which with the heart there cools, and never returneth
To blush and beautify the cheek again.
But, see, his face is black, and full of blood;
His eye-balls further out than when he liv'd,
Staring full ghastly like a strangled man;
His hair is grizzled, his nostrils stretch'd with struggling;
His hands abroad display'd, as one that grasp'd
And tugg'd for life, and was by strength subdu'd.
And, look! his sheets, his hair, you see, is sticking;
His well-proportioned beard made rough and rugged,
Like to the summer's corn by tempest lodg'd.
It cannot be, but he was murder'd here.
The least of all these signs were improbable.

Suf.  Why, Warwick, who should do the duke to death?
Myself and Beaufort, had him in protection;
And we, I hope, sir, are no murderers.
War.  But both of you were vow'd duke Humphry's foes;
And you, forsooth, had the good duke to keep:
'Tis like you, would not your foulness like a friend;
And 'tis well seen, he found an enemy.
Q. Mar.  Then you, belike, suspect these noblemen
As guilty of his dukedom Humphry's timeless death.
War.  Who finds the heifer dead, and bleeding fresh,
And sees fast by a butcher with an axe,
But with the hands of her murderer beshorthed,
That person that has the slaughter?
Who finds the partridge in the puttocks nest,
But may imagine how the bird was dead,
Although the kite soar with unbleed'd beak?
Even so, all circuits in this tragedy.
Q. Mar.  Art you the butcher, Suffolk; where's your knife?
Is Beaufort term'd a kete? where are his talons?
Suf.  I wear no knife, to slaughter sleeping men
But here's a veneful sword, rusted with ease,
That shall be scour'd in his rancorous heart,
That slanders me with murder's crimson badge,—
Say, if thou dar'st, proud lord of Warwickshire,
That I am faulty in Duke Humphry's death.
[Exeunt Cardinal, Som. and others.
War.  What dares not Warwick, if false Suffolk dare him?
Q. Mar.  Dares not calm his contumelious spirit,
Nor cease to be an arrogant controller,
Though Suffolk dare him twenty thousand times.
War.  But the mouth of a sparrow still; with reverence may I say;
For every word, you speak in his behalf,
Is slander to your royal dignity.
Suf.  Blunt-witted lord, ignoble in demeanour!
If ever in the reign of your lowly reign,
Thy mother took into her blameful bed
Some stern untutor'd churl, and noble stock
Was graft with crab-tree slip; whose fruit thou art,
And now'st the noble New Englander.
War.  But that the guilt of murder bucklers thee,
And I should rob the deathswan of his fee,
Q. Mar. What noise is this?
Re-enter Suffolk and Warwick, with their weapons drawn.

Here in our presence? dare you be so bold? —
Why what tumultuous scene is this we hear?
Suf. The traitorous Warwick, with the men of Bury,
Set all upon me, mighty sovereign.

Note of a council within. Re-enter Salisbury.
Sad. Sirs, stand apart; the king shall know your mind.—

Speaking to those within.

Dread lord, the commons send you word by me,
Unlesse the Suffolk be brake unto death,
Or banished fair England's territories.

They will by violence tear him from your palace,
And torture him with grievous lingering death.

They say, by him the good duke Humphrey died;

They say, in him they fear your highness' death;

And more instinct of love, and loyalty,—

Free from a stubborn opposite latent,
As being thought to contradict your liking,—

Makes them thus forward in his banishment.

They say, in care of your most royal person,
That, if your highness should intend to sleep,
And charge—that no man should disturb your rest,

In pain of your dislike, or pain of death;
Yet notwithstanding such a strait edict,
Were there a serpent seen, with forked tongue,
That slily glided towards your majesty,
It were but necessary you were wak'd;
Lest, being suffer'd in that harmful slumber,
The mortal worm might make the sleep eternal:
And therefore do they cry, though you forbid,
That they will guard you, where'you will, or no,
From such fell serpents as false Suffolk is;

With whose enamelled and fatal sting,
Your loving uncle, twenty times his worth,
They say, is shamefully bereft of life.

Commons. [Within.] An answer from the king,
My lord of Salisbury.

Suf. 'Tis like, the commons, rude unpolish'd kinds,
Could send such message to their sovereign:
But you, my lord, were glad to be employ'd,
To show how quaint an orator you are:
But the honour Salisbury your majesty,
Is—that he was the lord ambassador,
Bent from a sort of tinkers to the king.

Commons. [Within.] An answer from the king,

Here's a sort all break in.

K. Hen. Go, Salisbury, and tell them all from me:
I thank them for their tender loving care;
And had I not been seated by them,
Yet did I purpose as they do entertain;
For sure, my thoughts do hourly prophesy
Misiance unto my state by Suffolk's means.
And therefore—by his majesty I swear,
Whose fair unworthy deputy I am,—
He shall not breathe infection in this air.
But three days longer, on the pain of death.

[Exit Salisbury.]

Q. Mar. If Henry, let me plead for gentle Suffolk.

K. Hen. Untegentle queen, to call him gentle Suff.

No more, I say; if thou dost plead for him,
 Thou wouldest add a broach unto this wrath.
Had I but said, I would have kept my word;
But, when I swear, it is irrevocable;—
If, after three days' space, thou here be't found
I any ground that I am ruler of,
The world shall not be ransoms for thy life.—
Come, Warwick, come, good Warwick, go with me:
I have great matters to impart to thee.

Re-enter K. Henry, Warwick, Lords, &c.
Q. Mar. Misiance, and sorrow, go along with you!

Heart's discontent, and sour affliction,
He playeth to keep you company now:
There's two of you; the devil make a third!
And threefold vengeance tend upon your steps!
Suf. Cease, gentle queen, these exactions,
And let our Suffolk take his heavy leave.

Q. Mar. Fye, coward woman, and soft-hearted wretch!
Hast thou not spirit to curse thine enemies?

Suf. I would not give them! wherefore should I curse them?

Would curses kill, as doth the mandrake's groan,
I would invent as bitter-searching terms,
As currst, as harsh, and horrible to hear.
I tell thee, stand'st thou through his teeth,
With full as many signs of deadly hate,
As lean'st easy in her loathsom cave;
My tongue should stumble in mine earnest words;
Mine eyes should sparkle like the beatest flint;
My hair be fix'd on end, as one distract;
Ay, every joint should seem to curse and ban;
And even now my burden'd heart would break,
Should I not curse them. Poison be their drink!
Sail, worse than gall, the daintiest that they taste;
Their sweetest shade, a grove of cypress trees;
Their chiefest prospect, murdering basilisks;
Their deepest touch, as their smart saxes sting;
Their musick, frightful as the serpent's hiss;
And boding screech owls make the concert full;
All the foul tumors in dark-seated hell.

Q. Mar. Enough, sweet Suffolk; thou torment'st thyself.

And these dread curses—like the sun 'gainst glass,
Or like an overcharged gun.—recoll,
And turn the force of them upon thyself.

Suf. You bade me bane, and will you bid me leave?

Now, by the ground that I am banish'd from,
We'all could I curse away a winter's night,
Though standing naked on a mountain top,
Where bating cold would never let grass grow,
And think it but a minute spent in sport.

Q. Mar. O, let me entreat thee, cease! Give me the hand.
That I may dew it with my mournful tears;
Nor let the rain of heaven wet this place,
To wash away my woeful monuments.
O, could this kiss be printed in the book?

Kisses his hand.

That thou might'st think upon these by the soul,
Through whom a thousand sighs are breath'd for thee.

So, get ye hence, that I may know my grief;
'Tis but a mis'ril whilst thou art standing by,
As one that surfeits thinking on a want.
I will repeal thee; or, be well assured,
Adventure to be banished myself!
And banished I am, if but from thee.
Go, speak not to me; even now be gone.
O, go not yet!—Even thus two friends condemn'd
Embrace, and kiss, and take ten thousand leaves,
Leather a hundred times to part by thee.
Yet now farewell; and farewell life with thee!
Suf. Thus is poor Suffolk ten times banished,
Once by the king, and three times thrice by thee.
'Tis not the land I care for, wert thou hence;
A wilderness is populous enough,
So Suffolk had thy heavenly company:
For where thou art, there is the world itself,
With every several pleasure in the world;
And while thou art not, desolation.
I can no more—Live thou to joy thy life:
Myself no joy in nought, but that thou livest.

Enter Vaux.

Q. Mar. Whither goes Vaux so fast? what news
I pray thee?

Vaux. To signify unto his majesty,
That Cardinal Beaufort is at point of death:
For suddenly a grievous sickness took him,
That makes him gasp, and stare, and catch the air,
Blaspheming God, and cursing men on earth:
Sometime, he talks as if Duke Humphrey's ghost
Were by his side; sometime, he calls the king,
And whispers to his pillow, as to him,
The secrets of his overcharged soul:
And when sent to tell his majesty,
That even now he cries aloud for him.
Q. Mar. Go, tell this heavy message to the king.

[Exeunt Vaux.

Ah me! what is this world? what news are these?
But wherefore grieve I at an hour's poor loss,
Omitting Suffolk's exile, my soul's treasure?
Why only, Suffolk, mourn I not for thee,
And with the southern clouds contend in tears?
Their's for the earth's increase, mine for my sorrows?

Now, get thee hence: The king, thou know'st, is coming:
If thou be found by me, thou art but dead.
Suf. If I depart from thee, I cannot live;
And in thy sight to die, what were it else,
But like a pleasant slumber in thy lap?
Here could I breathe my soul into the air,
As mild and gentle as the cradle-babe,
Dying with mother's dug between its lips:
Where, from thy sight, I should be raging mad,
And could not be found by thee,
To have thee with thy lips to stop my mouth;
So shouldst thou either turn my flying soul,
Or I should breathe it so into thy body,
And then it lived in sweet Elysium.
To die by thee, were but to die in jest;
From thee to die, were torture more than death:
O, let me stay, befal what may befal.
Q. Mar. Away! I though parting be a fretful cor
sive,
It is applied to a deathful wound.
To France, sweet Suffolk: let me hear from thee;
For whereas'er thou art in this world's globe,
I'll have an Iris that shall find thee out.
Suf. I go.

Q. Mar. And take my heart with thee.
Suf. A jewel, lock'd into the woeful cask
That ever did contain a thing of worth,
Even as a splitted bark, so sunder we;
This way fall I to death.
Q. Mar. This way for me. [Exeunt severally.

SCENE III.—London. Cardinal Beaufort's Bel-chamber.

Enter King Henry, Salisbury, Warwick, and others.
The Cardinal in bed; Attendants with him.

Car. If thou best death, I'll give thee England's treasure,
Enough to purchase such another island,
So thou wilt let me live, and feel no pain.
K. Hen. Ah, what a sign it is of evil life,
When death's approach is seen so terrible!
War. To think at parting, it is thy sovereign speaks to thee.
Car. Bring me unto my trial, when you will.
Died he not in his bed? where should he die?
Can I, within five years, what they will or no—
O! torture me no more, I will confess—
Alive again? then show me where he is;
I'll give a thousand pound to look upon him.
He hath no eyes, the dust hath blinded them.
Comb down his hair; look! look! It stands up
right,
Like lime-twigs set to catch my winged soul!
Give me some drink; and bid the apothecary
Bring the strong poison that I bought of him.
K. Hen. O thou eternal Mover of the heavens,
Look with a gentle eye upon this wretch!
O, beat away the busy meddling fiend,
That lays strong siege unto this wretch's soul,
And from his bosom purge this black despair!
War. See, how the pangs of death do make him grin.
Suf. Disturb him not, let him pass peaceably.
K. Hen. In peace to his soul, if God's good pleasure be!
Lord cardinal, if thou think'st on heaven's bliss,
Hold up thy hand, make signal of thy hope,
He dies that makes no sign; O God, forgive we him!
War. So bad a death argues a monstrous life.
K. Hen. Forbear to judge, for we are sinners all.
Close up his eyes, and draw the curtain close;
And let us all to meditation.

[Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Kent. The Sea-shore near Dover.

Firing heard at sea. Then enter from a boat, a Captain, a Master, a Master's-Mate. Walter Whitmore, and others; with them Suffolk, and other Gentlemen, prisoners.

Cap. The gaudy, blabbing, and remorseful day
Is crept into the bosom of the sea;
And now loud-howl'ing wolves aroused the Jades
That drag the tragick melancholy night;
Who with their drowsy, slow, and flagging wings
Clip dead men's graves, and from their misty jaws
Breathe foul contagious darkness in the air.
Therefore, bring forth the soldiers of our prize;
For, whilst our pinnacle anchors in the Downs,
Here shall they make their ransome on the sand,
Or with their blood stain this discolour'd shore—
Master, this prisoner freely give I thee;—
And thou that art his mate, make boot of this;—
The other [pointing to Suffolk,] Walter Whitmore, is thy share.

1 Gent. What is thy ransom, master? let me know.

Mast. A thousand crowns, or else lay down your head.

Mate. And so much shall you give, or off goes yours.

Cap. What, think you much to pay two thousand crowns,
And bear the name and port of gentlemen?—
Cut both the villains' throats, for die you shall;
The lies of those which we have lost in fight,
Cannot be counterpois'd with such a petty sum.

1 Gent. I'll give it, sir; and therefore spare my life.

2 Gent. And so will 1, and write home for it straight.

Whit. I lost mine eye in laying the prize aboard,
And therefore, to revenge it, shalt thou die:

[To Suff.

And so should these, if I might have my fill.
SCENE 11.—Blackbeath.

Enter George Bevis and John Holland.

Geo. Come, and get thee a sword, though made of a lath: they have been up these two days.

John. They have the more need to sleep now then.

Geo. I tell thee, Jack Cade the clothier means to dress the commonwealth, and turn it, and set a new map upon it.

John. So he had need, for 'tis threadbare. Well, I say, it was never merry world in England, since gentlemen came up.

Geo. O miserable age! Virtue is not regarded in handy-work men.

John. The thoughtliness think scorn to go in leather aprons.

Geo. Nay more, the king's council are no good workmen.

By shameful murder of a guiltless king.
And lofty proud encroaching tyranny.—
Burns with revenging fire; whose hopefull colours
Advance our half-fac'd sun, striving to shine,
Under the which is writ—In victis nihilus.
The commons here in Kent are up in arms:
And, to conclude, reproach, and beggary,
Is crept into the palace of our king,
And all by thee. Away! convey him hence.

Saf. If I were a god, to shoot thoro' thunders
Upon these paity, servile, abject drudges!
Small things make base men proud: this villan
Being captain of a pinacce, threatens more [here,
Than Boris in the strong Illyrian pirate.
Drones such not eagles' blood, but rob bee-hives.
It is impossible, that I should
By such a lowly vassal as thyself.
Thy words move rage, and not remorse, in me:
I go of message from the queen to France;
I charge thee, waft me safely cross the channel.

Cap. Walter,—
Whit. Come, Suffolk, I must waft thee to thy death.

Saf. Sefios timor occupat artus:—'tis thee I fear.

Whit. Thou shalt have cause to fear, before I
What are ye daunted now? now will ye stop?
I Gent. My gracious lord, entreat him, speak him fair.

Saf. If I were in that honest tongue is stern and rough,
Us'd to command, untaught to plead for favour.
Far be it, we should honour such as these
With humble suit: no, rather let my head
Jove them be brought, than these great bow to any,
Save to the god of heaven, and to my king.
And sooner dance upon a bloody pole,
Than stand uncover'd to the vulgar groom.
True nobility is exempt from fear—
More than the bear, than you dare execute.

Cap. Hale him away, and let him talk no more.
Saf. Come, soldiers, show what cruelty ye can,
That this my death may never be forgot!
Great men oft die by vile baseness:
A Roman sworder and banditio slave,
Murder'd a sweet Tully; Brutus' bastard hand,
Stabb'd Julius Caesar: savage islanders,
Fompey the great: and Suffolk dies by pirates.

Saf. What, Speak, captain, shall I stab the foribor swain?
Cap. First let my words stab him, as he hath me.
Saf. Base slave! thy words are blunt, and so art
Cap. Convey him hence, and on our long-boat's side
Strike off his head.

Saf. You dar'st not for thy own.

Cap. Yes, Poole. Thou Poole?

Cap. Poole? Sir Poole? lord?

Ay, kennel, puddle, sink: whose filth and dirt
Troublest thou this silver spring where England drinks.
Now will I dam up this thy yawning mouth,
For swallowing the treasure of the realm
Thy lips, that kiss'd the queen, shall sweep the ground:
And thou, that smil'dst at good duke Humphrey's death,
Against the senseless winds shalt grin in vain,
Who, in contempt, shall bash at thee again:
And waddst be thou to the hags of hell,
For daring to affy a mighty lord
Unto the daughter of a worthless king,
Having neither subject, wealth, nor diadem.
By devilish policy art thou grown great,
And, like ambitious Sylla, overrog'd
With goblets of thy mother's bleeding heart.
By thee, Aunoy and Maine were sold to France:
The false revolting Normans, thorough thee,
Disdain to call us lord; and Picardy
Thrust slay their governors, surpris'd our forts,
And sent the ragged soldiers wounded home.
The wicked Warwick, and the Nevils all—
Whose dreadful words were never drawn to vaunt—
As hating thee, are rising up in arms:
And now the house of York—thrust from the crown,

Scene 4 of the play.
Act 4.

KING HENRY VI

John. True; and yet it is said,—Labour in thy vocation: which is as much to say, as,—let the magistrates be labouring men; and therefore should be magistrates.

Geo. Thou hast hit it: for there's no better sign of a brave man, than a hard hand.

John. I see them! I see them! There's Best's son, the tanner of Wingham:—

Geo. He shall have the skins of our enemies, to make dog's leather of.

John. And Dick the butcher,—

Geo. Then is sin struck down like an ox, and sin's throat cut like a calf.

John. And Smith the weaver.

Geo. Argo, their thread of life is spun.

John. Come, come, let's fall in with them.

Drum. Enter Cade, Dick the butcher, Smith the weaver, and others in great number.

Cade. We John Cade, so termed of our supposed father,—

Dick. Or rather, of stealing a cade of herrings. [Aside.]

Cade. —for our enemies shall fall before us; inspired with the spirit of putting down kings and princes,—Command silence.

Dick. Silence!

Cade. My father was a Mortimer,—

Dick. He was an honest man, and a good bricklayer. [Aside.]

Cade. My mother a Plantagenet.—

Dick. I knew her well, she was a midwife.

Cade. My wife descended of the Lacies,—

Smith. But, now of late, not able to travel with her furred pack, she washes buck's here at home. [Aside.]

Cade. Therefore am I of an honourable house.

Dick. Ay, by my faith, the field is honourable; and there was he born, under a hedge; for his father had never a house, but the cage. [Aside.]

Cade. Valiant I am.

Smith. 'A must needs; for beggary is valiant. [Aside.]

Cade. I am able to endure much.

Dick. No question of that; for I have seen him whipped three market days together. [Aside.]

Cade. I fear neither sword nor fire.

Smith. He need not fear the sword, for his coat is of proof. [Aside.]

Dick. But, methinks, he should stand in fear of fire, being burnt 'tis hand for stealing of sheep. [Aside.]

Cade. Be brave then; for your captain is brave, and vows reformation. There shall be, in England, seven half-penny loaves sold for a penny; the three-hooped pot shall have ten hoops; and I will make it felony, to drink small beer: all the realm shall be in common, and in Cheapside shall my palfry go to grass. And, when I am king, (as king I will be),

Ann. God save your majesty!

Cade. I thank you, good people:—there shall be no money; all shall eat and drink on my score; and I will apparel them all in one livery, that they may bear the name of brothers, and worship me their lord.

Dick. The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers.

Cade. Nay, that I mean to do. Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment? that parchment, being scribbled 'o'er, should undo a man? Some say, the bee stings: but I say, 'tis the bee's wax, for God did but seal once to a thing, and I was never mine own man since. How now? who's there?

Enter some, bringing in the Clerk of Chatham.

Smith. The clerk of Chatham: he can write and read, and cast accompt.
Cade. He lies, for I invented it myself. [Aside.
-Go to, sirrah, Tell the king from me, that—for his father's sake, Henry the Fifth, in whose time you went to Spain-counter for French crowns.—I am content he shall reign; but I'll be protector over him.

Dick. And, furthermore, we'll have the lord Say's head, for selling the dukedom of Maine.

Cade. And good reason, for thereby is England maimed, and fain to go with a staff, but that my puissance holds it up. Follow kings, I tell you, that matchless from the bliss of gold, and made it an eunuch; and more than that, he can speak French, and therefore he is a traitor.

Staff. O gross and miserable ignorance! Cade. Nay, answer, if you can: The Frenchmen are our enemies: go to them, I ask but this: Can he, that speaks with the tongue of an enemy, be a good counselor, or no?

All. No, no; and therefore we'll have his head.

W. Staff. Well, seeing gentle words will not prevail,
Assail them with the army of the king.
Staff. Herald, away, and, throughout every town, Proclaim them traitors that are up with Cade; That those, which fly before the battle ends,
May, even in their wives' and children's sight, Be hang'd up for example at their doores— And you, the king's friends, follow me.

[Exeunt the two Stafford's, and Force.]

Cade. And you, that love the commons, follow me.

Now shall ourselves men, Tit for liberty:
We will not leave one lord, one gentleman: "Spare none, but such as go in clouted shoon: For they are worthy honest men, and such Such (but that they dare not,) take our parts.

Dick. They are all in order, and march toward us.

Cade. But then are we in order, when we are most out of order. Come, march forward.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another Part of Blackheath.

shriam. The two parties enter and fight, and both the Staffords are slain.

Cade. Where's Dick, the butcher, of Ashford?
Dick. Here, sir.
Cade. They fell before thee like sheep and oxen, and thou behav'est thyself as if thou hadst been in those own slaughter-house: therefore thus will I reward thee. The Lenci shall be as I say; and it is, and thou shalt have a license to kill for a hundred lacking one.

Dick. I desire no more.

Cade. And, to speak truth, thou deservest no less. This monument of the victory will I bear; and the bodies shall be dragged at my horse's heels, till I do come to London, where we will have the mayor's sword borne before us.

Dick. If we mean to thrive and do good, break open the gaols, and let out the prisoners.
Cade. Fear not that, I warrant thee. Come, let's march towards London.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, reading a supplication: the Duke of Buckingham, and Lord Say, with him; as a part of distance, Queen Margaret, mourning ever Suffolk's head.

Q. Mar. Oft have I heard—that grief softens the mind, And makes it fearful and degenerate: Think therefore on revenge, and nothing else to weep. But what are tears to weep, and look on this? Here may his head lie on my throbbing breast; But where's the body that I should embrace? Buck. What answer makes your grace to the rebels' supplication? K. Hen. I'll send some holy bishop to entreat: For God forbid, so many simple souls Should perish by the sword! And I myself, Rather than bloody war shall cut them short, Will partake with Jack Cade their general—

But stay, I'll read it over once again.

Q. Mar. Ah, barbarous villains! hath this lovely face
Ruled, like a wandering planet, over me: And could it not enforce them to relent, That were unworthy to behold the same? K. Hen. Lord Say, Jack Cade hath sworn to have thy head.

Say. O, that I hope, your highness shall have his.

K. Hen. How now, madam? Still Lamenting, and mourning for Suffolk's death? Tell me, ere now, if that I had been, Thou wouldest not have mourn'd so much for me. Q. Mar. No, my love, I should not mourn, but die for thee.

Enter a Messenger.

K. Hen. How now! what news? why com'nt thou in such haste?

Mess. The rebels are in Southwark; Fly, my lord!

Jack Cade proclaims himself lord Mortimer, Descended from the duke of Clarence's house, And calls your grace usurper, openly, And vows to crown himself in your Westminster.

His army is a ragged multitude Of hinds and peasants, rude and merciless.
Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother's death Hath given them a strange start, and courage to proceed. All scholars, lawyers, courtiers, gentlemen, They call—false catering, and intend their death.

Q. Mar. Ahi! I were the duke of Suffolk now alive. These Kentish rebels would be soon appear'd.

K. Hen. Lord Say, the traitors hate thee, Therefore away with us to Kenelworth.

Say. So in't feast your grace's person be in danger; The sight of me is odious in their eyes; And therefore in this city will I stay, And live alone as secret as I may.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. Jack Cade hath gotten London-bridge, the citizens Fly and forsake their houses; The rebels, in confederacy after prey, Join with the traitor; and they jointly swear, To spoil the city, and your royal court.

Buck. Then linger not, my lord; away, take soldiers.

K. Hen. Come, Margaret; God, our hope, will succour us.

Q. Mar. My hope is gone, now Suffolk is deceased.

K. Hen. Farewell, my lord; [to Lord Say, trust not the Kentish rebels.

Buck. Trust no body, for fear you be betray'd.

Say. The trust I have is in mine innocence, And therefore am I bold and resolute.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The same. The Tower.

Enter Lord Scales, and others on the walls. Then enter certain Citizens, below.

Scales. How now? Is Jack Cade slain? I Cit. No, my lord, nor likely to be slain; for they have shot the bridge,1 killing all those that withstand them: The lord mayor's craves aid of your honour from the Tower, to defend the city from the rebels.

Scales. Such aid as I can spare, you shall command; But I am troubled here with them myself, The rebels have assay't to win the Tower.
SCENE VI. — The same. Cannon-street.

Enter Jack Cade, and his followers. He strikes his staff on London-stone.

Cade. Now is Mortimer lord of this city. And here, sitting upon London-stone, I charge and command, that, of the city's cost, the plissing-conduit run nothing but clarret wine this first year of our reign. And now, henceforward, it shall be treason for any that calls me other than — lord Mortimer.

Enter a Soldier, running.

Sold. Jack Cade! Jack Cade!

Cade. Knock him down there. [They kill him.]

Smith. If this fellow be wise, he'll never call you Jack Cade more; I think, he hath a hith fair warning.

Dick. My lord, there's an army gathered together in Smithfield.

Cade. Come then, let's go fight with them: But, first, go and set London-bridge on fire; and, if you can, burn down the Tower too. Come, let's away.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. — The same. Smithfield.

Alarum. Enter, on one side, Cade and his company; on the other, Citizens, and the King's Forces, headed by Matthew Gough. They fight; the Citizens are routed, and Matthew Gough is slain.

Cade. So, sirs: — Now go some and pull down the Savoy; others to the inns of court; down with them all.

Dick. I have a suit unto your lordship.

Cade. Be it a lordship, thou shalt have it for that word.

Dick. Only, that the laws of England may come out of your mouth.

John. Mass, 'twill be sore law then; for he was thrust in the mouth with a spear, and 'tis not whole yet. [Aside.]

Smith. Nay, John, it will be stinking law; for his breath stinks with eating toasted cheese. [Aside.]

Cade. I have thought upon it, it shall be so. Away, burn all the records of the realm; my mouth shall be the parliament of England.

John. Then we are like to have biting statutes, unless his teeth be pulled out. [Aside.]

Cade. And henceforward all things shall be in common.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, a prize, a prize! here's the lord Say, which sold the towns in France; he that made us pay one and twenty fifteen, and one shilling to the pound, the last subsidy.

Enter George Bevis, with the Lord Say.

Cade. Well, he shall be heaved for it ten times. — Ah, thou say, thou serje, nay, thou buckram lord! now art thou within point blank of our jurisdiction regal. What casst thou answer to my majesty, for giving up of Normandy unto me? — Havest thou lost the kingdom of France? Be it known unto thee, by these presence, even the presence of lord Mortimer, that I am the besom that must sweep the court clean of such filth as thou art. Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm, in erecting a grammar-school: and whereas, before, our fore-fathers had no other books but the score and the tally, thou hast caused prints to be made. — And, contrary to the king, his crown and dignity, thou hast built a paper-mill. It will be proved to thy face, that thou hast men about thee, that usually talk of a noun, and a verb; and such abominations, as no Christian ear can endure to hear. Thou hast appointed justices of peace, to call poor men before them about matters they were not able to answer. Moreover, thou hast put them in prison; and because they could not read, thou hast hanged them: when, indeed, only for that cause they have been most worthy to live. Thou dost ride on a foot-cloth, dost thou not?

Say. What of that?

Cade. Marty, thou oughtest not to let thy horse wear a cloak, when honest men through thou go in their hose, and that thou didst.

Dick. And work in their shirt too; as myself, for example, that am a butcher.

Say. You men of Kent, —

Dick. What say you of Kent?

Say. Nothing but this: 'Tis bona terra, muta gens.

Cade. Away with him, away with him! he speaks Latin.

Say. Hear me but speak, and bear me where you Kent, in the commentaries Caesar writ, [will]

Is term'd the civil'st place of all this isle: Sweet is the country, because full of riches; The people liberal, valiant, active, wealthy Which 'em red again. When have I sought exacted at your hands, Kent to maintain, the king, the realm, and you? Large gifts have I bestow'd on learned clerks, Because no book preferr'd me to the king; And—seeing ignorance is the curse of God, Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven,— Unless you be possess'd with devilish spirits, You cannot but forbear to murder me. This tongue hath parley'd unto foreign kings For your behoof.—

Cade. Tut! when struck'st thou one blow in the field?

Say. Great men have reaching hands: oft have I struck Those that I never saw, and struck them dead.

Geo. O monstrous coward! what, to come behind folks?

Say. These cheeks are pale for watching for your good.

Cade. Give him a box o'the ear, and that will make him red again.

Say. Long sitting to determine poor men's causes Hath made me full of sickness and diseases.

Cade. Ye shall have a hempen cowl and, and the cap of a hatchet.

Dick. Why dost thou quiver, man?

Say. The palsy, and not fear, provoketh me.

Cade. Nay, he nods at us; as who should say, I'll be even with you; I'll see if his head will stand steadier on a pole, or no: Take him away, and behead him.

Say. Tell me, wherein I have offended most? Have I affected wealth, or honour? speak Are my枝is cheli fill'd up with excorted gold? Is my apparel sumptuous to behold? Whom have I injur'd, that ye seek my death? These hands are free from guiltless blood-shedding. This breast from harbouring foul deceitful thoughts. O, let me live!

Cade. I feel remorse in myself with his words: but I'll bridle it; he shall die; an it be but for pleading so ten for his life. Away with him! he has a familiar urder his tongue; he speaks not o' God's name. Go, take him away, I say, and strike off his head presently; and then break into his son-in-law's house, sir James Cromer, and strike off his head, and bring them both upon two poles hither.

All. It shall be done.

Say. Ah, my countrymen! if when you make your prayers God should be so obdurate as yourselves, How would it fare with your departed souls? And therefore ye relent, and save my life.

Cade. Away with him, and do as I command ye. [Exeunt some, with Lord Say.}
O Buckingham, I pray thee, pardon me,
That I have given no answer all this while,
My mind was troubled with deep melancholy.
The cause why I have brought this army hither,
is to remove proud Somerset from the king,
Sequestrate to his grace, and to the state.

York. That is too much presumption on thy part;
But if thy arms be to no other end,
The king hath yielded unto thy demand;
The duke of Somerset, kneel for grace.

York. Upon thine honour, is he prisoner?

Buck. Upon mine honour, he is prisoner.

York. Then, Buckingham, I do dismiss my men.

Soldiers, I thank you all; disperse yourselves;
Meet me to-morrow in Saint George's field,
You shall have pay, and every thing you wish.
And let my sovereign, virtuous Henry,
Command my eldest son,—my all my sons,
As pledges of my fealty and love,
I'll send them all as willing as I live;
Lands, goods, horse, armour, any thing I have
Is his to use, so Somerset may die.

Buck. York, I commend this kind subvention;
We twain will go into his highness' tent.

Enter King Henry, attended.

K. Hen. Buckingham, doth York intend no harm to us,
That thus he marches with those arms in arm in York?
In all submission and humility,
York dost pretend to subdue unto thy highness.

K. Hen. Then what intendst thou forces thou dost bring?

For to heave the traitor Somerset from hence;
And fight against the monarch of Toward, Cade,
Who since I heard be discomfited.

Enter Iden, with Cade's head.

Iden. If one so rude, and of so mean condition,
May pass into the presence of a king,
Lo, I present your grace a traitor's head,
The head of Cade, whom I in combat slew.

K. Hen. That head of Cade?—Great God, how just art thou?
O, let me view his visage being dead,
That living wrought me such exceeding trouble.
Tell me, my friend, art thou the man that slew Cade?

Iden. I was, not like thy majesty.

K. Hen. How art thou call'd? and what is thy degree?

Iden. Alexander Iden, that's my name;
A poor esquire of Kent, that loves his king.

Buck. So please it you, my lord, 'twere not amiss
He were created knight for his good service.

K. Hen. Iden, Iden, kneel down; [He kneels.] Rise up a knight.
We give thee for reward a thousand marks:
And will, that thou henceforth attend on us.
Iden. May Iden live to merit such a bounty,
And never live but true unto his liege?

K. Hen. See, Buckingham! Somerset comes with the queen;
Go, bid her hide him quickly from the duke.

Enter Queen Margaret and Somerset.

Q. Mar. For thousand Yeorks he shall not hide his head,
But both our parts, and from him to his face.

York. How now! Is Somerset at liberty? Then, York, unlOose thy long-imprison'd thoughts,
And let thy tongue be equal with thy heart.
Shall I see the sight of Somerset?
False king! why hast thou broken faith with me,
Knowing how hardly I can brook abuse?
King did I call thee? no, thou art not king;
Not fit to bear and rule multitudes,
Which dar'st not, so, nor canst not rule a traitor.
That head of thine doth not become a crown;
Thy hand be made to grasp a palmer's staff,
And not to grace an awful princely sceptre.

That gold must round engirt these brows of mine;
Whose smile and frown, like to Achilles' spear,
Is able with the change to kill and cure.
Here is a hand to hold a scepter up,
And with the same to act controlling laws.
Give place; by heaven, thou shalt rule no more
O'Er him whom heaven created for thy ruler.

Som. O monstrous traitor! I arrest thee, York Of capital treason 'gainst the king and crown;
Ober, the maikel of his grace; kneel for grace.
York. Would'st thou have me kneel? first let me ask of these,
If they can brook I bow a knee to man.—

Sibbar, call in my sons to be my bail;

[Exit an Attendant.]
I know, ere they will have me go to ward,
They'll punish their awards for my enfranchisement.

Q. Mar. Call hither Clifford; bid him come again.

To say, if that the bastard boys of York
Shall be the surety for their traitor father.
York, O blood-bespotted Neapolitan,
Outcast of Naples, England's bloody scourge!
The sons of York, thy better in their birth,
Shall be their father's bail; and bane to those
That for my surety will refuse the boys.

Enter Edward and Richard Plantagenet, with Forces, at one side; at the other, with Forces also, Old Clifford and his Son.

See, where they come; I'll warrant they'll make it go to.

Q. Mar. And here comes Clifford, to deny their bail.

Cliff. Health and all happiness to my lord the king!

York. I thank thee, Clifford: Say, what news with thee?

Nay, do not fright us with an angry look:
We are the sovereigns of Clifford, and again;
For thy mistaking so, we pardon thee.

Cliff. This is my king, York, I do not mistake;
But thou mistak'st me much, to think I do:
To Bedlam with him! Is the man grown mad?

K. Hen. Ay, Clifford; a bedlam and ambitious humour
Makes him oppose himself against his king.

Cliff. He is a traitor; let him to the Tower,
And shew away that factious pate of his.

Q. Mar. He is arrested, but will not obey;
His sons, he says, shall give their words for him.
York. Will you not, sons?

K. Hen. We are his noble father, if our words will serve.
Rich. And if words will not, then our weapons shall.

Cliff. Why, what a brood of traitors have we here;
York, Love in a glass, and call thy image so?
I am thy king, and thou a false-heart traitor—
Call hither to the stake my two brave bears,
That, with the very shaking of their chains,
They may astonish these fell lurking curs;
Bid Salisbury, and Warwick come to me.

Drums. Enter Warwick and Salisbury, with Forces.

Cliff. Are these thy bears? we'll halt thy bears to death,
And manacil the bearward in their chains,
If thou darst bring them to the baiting-place.

York. If they be baiting-place; by heaven, thou shalt rule no more
Run back and bite, because he was withheld;
Who, being suffer'd with the bear's fell paw,
Hath clapp'd his tail between his legs, and cry'd—
And make a piece of service will you do,
If you oppose yourselves to match lord Warwick.

Cliff. Hence, heap of wrath, foul indigested lump,
As crooked in thy manners as thy shape.

York. If we shall heat you thoroughly anon.

Cliff. Take heed, lest by your heat you burn yourselves.

K. Hen. Why, Warwick, hath thy knee forgot to bow?
KING HENRY VI.

Act 5.

Old Salisbury,—shame to thy silver hair, Thou mad misleader of thy brain-sick son!— What wilt thou on thy death-bed play the rufian, And seek for sorrow with thy spectacles? O, where is faith? O, where is loyalty? If it be banish'd from the frosty head, What shall it find a harbour in the earth?— Wilt thou go dig a grave to find out war, And shame thine honourable age with blood? Why art thou old, and want'st experience? Or dost thou rest the chace of thy grace The rightful heir to England's royal seat. K. Hen. Hast thou not sworn allegiance unto me? Sal. I have. K. Hen. Canst thou dispense with heaven for such an oath? Sal. It is great sin, to swear unto a sin; But greater sin, to keep a sinful oath. Who can be bound by any solemn vow To do a murderous deed, to rob a man, To force a spotless virgin's chastity, Or to leave orphans of its rightful lord? To wring the widow from her custom'd right; And have no other reason for this wrong, But that he was bound by a solemn oath? Q. Mar. A subtle traitor needs no sophister. K. Hen. Call Buckingham, and bid him arm himself. York. Call Buckingham, and all the friends thou hast, I am resolv'd for death, or dignity. Clif. The first I warrant thee, if dreams prove true. War. You were best to go to bed, and dream again. To keep thee from the tempest of the field. Clif. I am resolv'd to bear a greater storm, Than any thou canst conjure up to-day; And that I'll write upon thy burgonet, Might I but know thee by thy household badge. War. Now, by my father's badge, old Neville's crest, The rags and the bear chal'd to the ragged staff, This day I'll wear aloft my burgonet, (As on a mountain-top the cedar shows, That keeps his leaves in spite of any storm,) Even to affright thee with the view thereof. Clif. And from thy burgonet I'll rend thee by, And tread it under foot with all contempt, Despise the bearward that protects the bear. Clif. And so to arms, victorious father, To quell the rebels, and their companions. Rich. Fye! charity, for shame I speak not in spite, For you shall sup with Jeam Christ to-night. Y. Clif. Foul stigmatick, that's more than thou canst tell. Rich. If not in heaven, you'll surely sup in hell. [Exeunt severally.

SCENE II.—Saint Alban's.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter Warwick.'

War. Clifford of Cumberland, 'tis Warwick calls! And if thou dost not hide thee from the bear, Now,—when the angry trumpet sounds alarm, And dead men's cries do fill up the air,— Clifford, I say, come forth and fight with me! Proud northern lord, Clifford of Cumberland, Warwick is hoarse with calling thee to arms. Enter York.

How now, my noble lord? what, all a-foot? York. The deadly-handed Clifford slew my steed; But match to match I have encounter'd him, And made a prey for carrion kites and crows Even of the bonny beast he lord'd so well. Enter Clifford.

War. Of one or both of us the time is come. York. Hold, Warwick, seek thee out some other For I myself must hunt this deer to death. War. Then, nobly, York; 'tis for a crown thou'stigh't.St. As I inted, Clifford, to thrive to-day, It grieves my soul to leave thee unassail'd.
That winter lion, who, in rage, forgets
Aged contusions and all brush of time;
And, like a gallant in the brow of youth,
Repairs him with occasion? this happy day
Is not itself, nor have we won one foot;
If Salisbury be lost.

Rich. My noble father,
Three times to-day I slip him to his horse,
Three times bestrid him, thrice I led him off,
Persuaded him from any farther act:
But still, where danger was, still there I met him;
And like rich hangings in a homely house,
So was his will in his old feeble body.

But, noble as he is, look where he comes.

Enter Salisbury.

Sal. Now, by my word, well hast thou fought to-day!
By the mass, so did we all. I thank you, Richard;
God knows, how long it is I have to live;
And it hath pleased him, that three times to-day
You have defended me from imminent death.—
Well, lords, we have not got that which we have.
'Tis not enough our foes are this time fled,
Being opposites of such repairing nature.
York. I know, our safety is to follow them:
For, as I hear, the king is fled to London,
To call a present court of parliament.
Let us pursue him, ere the writs go forth...

What say, Lord Warwick? shall we after them?
War. After them I say, before them, if we can.
Now by my faith, lords, 'twas a glorious day:
Saint Albans' battle, won by famous York,
Shall be eternal in all age to come.

Sounds, drums and trumpets—and to London all.
And more such days as these to us befall! [Exeunt.

ACT 1.

Then, enter the Duke of York, Edward, Richard, Norfolk, Montague, Warwick, and others, with white roses in their hats.

War. I wonder, how the king escap'd our hands.
York. While we pursu'd the horsemens of the north,
He slip stroke away, and left his men:

Whereat the great lord of Northumberland,
Whose wise and hardy heart could never brook retreat,
Cheer'd up the drooping army; and himself,
Lord Clifford, and Lord Stafford, all a-breast,
Charg'd our main battle's front, and, breaking in,
Were by the swords of common soldiers slain.

Edw. Lord Stafford's father, duke of Buckingham,
Is either slain, or wounded dangerous:
I left his beaver with a downright blow;
That this is true, father, behold his blood.

[Showing his bloody sword.

Alarums. Exit Plantagenet. Enter King Henry, Queen
Margaret, and others, retiring.

Q. Mar. Away, my lord! you are slow for shame, away!

K. Hen. Can we outrun the heavens? good
Margaret, stay.

Q. Mar. What are you made of? you'll not fight, or fly:
Now is it manhood, wisdom, and defence,
To give the enemy way; and to secure us
By what we can, which can no more but fly.

[Alarums after 6j.

If you be ta'en, we then should see the bottom
Of all our fortunes; but if we haply scape,
[As well we may, if not through your neglect.
We shall to London get; where you are lord;
And where this breach, now in our fortunes made,
May readily be stopp'd.

Enter Young Clifford.

Y. Giff. But that my heart's on future mischief set,
I would speak blasphemy ere bid you fly;
Duke you fly must: unanswerable discount
Reigns in the hearts of all our present parts.
Away, for your relief! and we will live
To see their day, and them our fortune give:
Away, my lord, away! [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Fields near Saint Alban's.

Alarums: Retreat. Flourish; then enter York,
Richard Plantagenet, Warwick, and Soldiers, with drum and colours.

York. Of Salisbury, who can report of him;

[SECOND ACT.]
Mont. And, brother, here’s the earl of Wiltshire’s blood. To York, showing him. Whom I encounter’d as the battles join’d.
Rich. Speak thou for me, and tell them what I did. They throng down the Duke of Somerset’s head. York. Richard hath best deserv’d of all my sons. What, is your grace dead, my lord of Somerset? Norf. Such hope have all the line of John of Gaunt! Rich. Thus do I hope to shake king Henry’s head.
War. And so do I.—Victorious prince of York, Before I see thee seated in that throne Which now the house of Lancaster usurps, I vow by heaven, these eyes shall never close. This is the palace of the fearful king, And this the regal seat; possess it, York! For this is thine, and not king Henry’s heirs’. York. Assist me then, sweet Warwick, and I will: For hither we have broken in by force. Norf. We’ll all assist you: he that flies, shall die. York. Thanks, gentle Norfolks.—Stay by me, my lords:—And, solemnly, stand, and lodge by me this night. War. And, when the king comes, offer him no violence, Unless he seek to thrust you out by force. York. The queen, this day, here holds her parliament, But little thinks, we shall he of her council: By words, or blows, here let us prove our right. Rich. Arm’d as we are, let’s stay within this house. War. The bloody parliament shall this be call’d, Unless by warrant, duke of York, he king. And bashful Henry depos’d, whose cowardice Hath made us by-words to our enemies. York. Then leave me not, my lords; be resolute; I mean to take possession of my right. War. Neither the king, nor he that loves him best, The proudest he that holds up Lancaster. Dares stir a wing, if Warwick shake his bells. I’ll plait Plantagenet, root him up who dares:—Resolve thee, Richard; claim the English crown. [Warwick leads York to the throne, who seats himself.

Flourish. Enter Prince Henry, Clifford, Northumberland, Westmoreland, Exeter, and others, with red roses in their hats.

K. Hen. My lords, look where the sturdy rebel sits, Even in the chair of state! belike, he means, (Back’d by the power of Warwick, that false peer,) To aspire unto the crown, and reign as king. Earl of Northumberland, he slew thy father; And thou, lord Clifford; and you both have vow’d revenge On him, his sons, his favourites, and his friends. North. If he be not, heavens be revenge’d on me! Clif. The hope thereof makes Clifford mourn in steel. West. What, shall we suffer this? let’s pluck him down; My heart for anger burns, I cannot brook it. K. Hen. Be pacitain, gentle earl of Westmoreland. Clif. Patience is for poltroons, and such as he; He durst not sit there, had your father liv’d. My gracious lord, here in the parliament Let us assail the family of York. North. Well hast thou spoken, cousin; be it so. K. Hen. Ah, know you not, the city favours them, And they have troops of soldiers at their beck? Exe. But when the duke is slain, they’ll quickly fly.

K. Hen. Far be the thought of this from Henry’s heart, To make a shambles of the parliament-house! Cousin of Exeter, frowns, words, and threats, Shall be the war that Henry means to use—[They address each other.]

Rich. Thou factious duke of York, descend my throne, And kneel for grace and mercy at my feet; I am thy sovereign.
York. Thou art deceiv’d, I am thine.
Exe. For shame, come down; he made thee duke of York.
York. ’Twas my inheritance, as the earldom was.
Exe. If thy father was a traitor to the crown.
War. Exeter, thou art a traitor to the crown, In following this usurping Henry.
Clif. Whom should he follow, but his natural king?
War. True, Clifford; and that’s Richard, duke of York.
K. Hen. And shall I stand, and thou sit in my throne?
York. It must and shall be so. Content thyself. War. Be duke of Lancaster, let him be king. West. He is both king and duke of Lancaster; And this lord Clifford shall westmoreland and shall maintain. War. And Warwick shall disprove it. You forget, That we are those, which chas’d you from the field. And slew your fathers, and with colours spread March’d through the city to the palace gates. North. Yes, Warwick, I remember it to my grief; And, by my soul, thou and thy house shall rue it. West. Plantagenet, of thee, and these thy sons, Thy kinsmen and thy friends, I’ll have more lives, Than drops of blood were in my father’s veins. Clif. Urge it no more: lest that, instead of words, I send thee, Warwick, such a messenger, As shall revenge his death, before I stir.
War. Poor Clifford! how I scorn his worthless threat the crown? York. Will you, we show our title to the crown? If not, our swords shall plead it in the field.
K. Hen. What title hast thou, traitor, to the crown? Thy father was, as thou art, duke of York; Thy grandfather, Roger Mortimer, earl of March: I am the son of Henry the Fifth, Who made the Dauphin and the French to stoop, And seiz’d upon their towns and provinces. War. Talk not of France, sith thou hast lost it all.
K. Hen. The lord protector lost it, and not I; When I was brown’d, I was but nine months old.
Rich. You are old enough now, and yet, methinks, you lose: Father, and name, a title from the usurper’s head. Edw. Sweet father, do so: set it on your head. Mont. Good brother, [to York.] as thou lov’st and honour’st arms, Let’s fight it out, and not stand cavilling thus. Rich. Sound drums and trumpets, and the king will fly.
York. Sons, peace!
K. Hen. Peace thou! and give king Henry leave to speak. War. Plantagenet shall speak first:—hear him, lords; And be you silent and attentive too. For he, that interrupts him, shall not live.
K. Hen. Think’st thou, that I will leave my kingly throne, Wherein my grandsire, and my father, sat? No: first shall war unpeople this my realm; Ay, and their colours—often home in France; And now in England, to our heart’s great sorrow, Shall be laid, the winding sheet,—Why faint you, lords? My title’s good, and better far than his. War. But prove it, Henry, and thou shalt be king.
K. Hen. Henry the Fourth by conquest got the crown.
York. 'Twas by rebellion against his king.
K. Hen. I know not what to say; 'tis my duty to tell me, may not a king adopt an heir?
York. What then?
K. Hen. An if he may, then am I lawful king;
Petr. Richard, in the view of many lords,
Resign'd the crown to Henry the Fourth;
Whose heir my father was, and I am his.
York. He rose against him, being his sovereign,
And must if she resign his crown perforce.
War. Suppose, my lords, he did it unconstrau'd,
Think you, 'twere prejudicial to his crown?
Exe. No; for he could not so resign his crown,
But that the next heir should succeed to reign.
K. Hen. Art you against us, Duke of Exeter?
Exe. His is the right, and therefore pardon me.
York. Why whisper you, my lords, and answer not?
Exe. My conscience tells me, he is lawful king.
K. Hen. All will revolt from me, and turn to him.
North. Plantagenet, for all the claim thou lay'st,
Think not, that Henry shall be so depos'd.
War. Depose he shall be, in despite of all.
North. Thou art deceiv'd; 'tis not thy southern power,
Of Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, nor of Kent, —
Which makes thee thus presumptuous and proud — can set the duke up, in despite of me.
Cliff. King Henry, be thy title right or wrong,
Let him stand to fight for his own throne,
May that ground gape, and swallow me alive,
Where I shall kneel to him that slew my father!
K. Hen. O Clifford, how thy words revive my soul.
York. Henry of Lancaster, resign thy crown —
What matter you, or what conseque you, lords!
War. Do right unto this princeely duke of York;
Or I will fill the house with armed men,
And the chair of state, where now he sits,
Write up his title with usurping blood.
[He stamps, and the Soldiers stamp themselves.
K. Hen. My lord of Warwick, hear me but one word;—
Let me, for this my life-time, reign as king.
York. Confirm the crown to me, and to mine heirs,
And the same shall reign in quiet while thou lis't.
K. Hen. I am content: Richard Plantagenet,
Enjoy the kingdom after my decease.
Cliff. What wrong is this unto the prince you speak?
War. What good is this to England, and himself?
West. Base, fearful, and despairing Henry!
Cliff. How hast thou injur'd both thyself and us?
K. Hen. I will not stay to hear these speeches.
North. Nor I.
Cliff. Come, counsel, let us tell the queen these news.
West. Farewell, faint-hearted and degenerate king,
In whose cold blood no spark of honour bides.
North. Be thou a prey unto the house of York,
And die in bands for this unmann'd deed.
Cliff. In dreadful apprehension thy life may be overthrown!
Or live in peace, abandon'd, and despis'd!
[Exeunt Northumberland, Clifford, and Westmoreland.
War. Turn this way, Henry, and regard them not.
Exe. They seek revenge, and therefore will not yield.
K. Hen. Ah, Exeter!
War. Why should you sigh, my lord?
K. Hen. Not for myself, lord Warwick, but my son,
Whom I unnatural shall disinherit.
But, be it as it may — I here entreat
The crown to thee, and to thine heirs for ever;
Conditionally, that here thou take an oath
To cease this civil war, and, whilst I live,
To honour me as thy king and sovereign;
And neither by treason, nor hostility,
To seek out me, and reign by thyself.
York. This oath I willingly take, and will perform.
[Coming from the throne.
War. Long live king Henry! — Plantagenet,
K. Hen. And long live thou, and these thy forward sons!
York. New York and Lancaster are reconcili'd.
Exe. Acours'd he be thus, and reign by them?
[Somet. The Lords come forward.
York. Farewell, my gracious lord; 'tis to my castle.
War. And I'll keep London, with my soldiers.
Norf. And I to Norfolk, with my followers.
Monte. And I unto the sea, from whence I came.
[Exeunt York, and his Sons, Warwick, Norfolk, Montague, Soldiers, and Attendants.
K. Hen. And I, with grief and sorrow, to the court.
Enter Queen Margaret and the Prince of Wales.
Exe. Here comes the queen, whose looks bewray her anger:
I'll steal away.
K. Hen. Exeter, so will I.
Q. Mar. Nay, go not from me, I will follow thee.
K. Hen. Be patient, gentle queen, and I will stay.
Q. Mar. Who can be patient in such extremes?
Ah, wretched man! 'twould I had died a maid,
And never seen thee, never borne thee son,
Seeing thou hast prov'd so unnatural a father:
Thou canst not do, nor I canst forbear to say
That he delights to lose his birthright by thee.
Had'st thou but lov'd him half so well as I;
Or felt that pain which I did for him once;
Or nourish'd him, as I did with my blood:
Thou wouldst have left thy dearest heart-blood there,
Rather than made that savage duke thine heir,
And disinherit thine only son.
Prince. Father, you cannot disinherit me;
If you be king, why should not I succeed?
K. Hen. Pardon me, Margaret; — pardon me,
Sweet son; —
The earl of Warwick, and the duke, enforce me.
Q. Mar. Enforcer's thou? I art thou king, and wilt be forc'd?
I shame to hear thee speak. Ah, timorous wretch!
Thou hast undone thyself, thy son, and me:
And given me to the house of York such head,
As thou shalt reign but by their sufferance.
To enstall him and his heirs into the crown,
What is it, but to make thy sepulchre,
And creep into it for before thy time?
Warwick is chancellor, and the lord of Calais;
Stern Englishmen commands the narrow seas;
The duke is made protector of the realm;
And yet shall thou be safe? such safety finds
The trembling lamb, environ'd with wolves.
Had I been there, which am a silly woman,
The soldiers should have too'd me on their pikes,
Before I would have granted to that act.
But thou preferrest thy life before thine honour:
And, seeing thou dost, I here divorce myself,
Both from thy table, Henry, and thy bed,
Until that act of parliament be repeal'd,
Whereby my son is disinherit'd.
The northern lords, that have forsworn thy colours,
Will follow mine, if once they see them spread;
And spread they shall be; to thy foul disgrace,
And utter out of the house of York.
Thus do I leave thee. — Come, son, let us way;
Our army's ready; come, we'll after them.
K. Hen. Stay, gentle Margaret, and hear me speak.
Q. Mar. Thou hast spoke too much already; get thee gone.
K. Hen. Gentle son Edward, thou wilt stay with me?
Act I.

KING HENRY VI.

Q. Mar. Ay, to be murder'd by his enemies.
Prince. When I return with victory from the field,
I'll see your grace; till then, I'll follow her.
Q. Mar. Come, son, away; we may not linger thus,
[Exeunt Queen Margaret and the Prince.

K. Hen. Poor queen! how love to me, and to her son,
Hath made her break out into terms of rage!
Reveng'd may she on that hateful duke;
Whose haughty spirit, winged with desire,
Will cost my crown, and, like an empty eagle,
Tire on the flesh of me, and of my son!
The long-continued lure of these three hearts:
I'll write unto them, and entreat them fair;—
Come, cousin, you shall be the messenger.
Exeunt.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Room in Sandal Castle, near Wakefield, in Yorkshire.

Enter Edward, Richard, and Montague.

Rich. Brother, though I be youngest, give me leave.
Edw. No, I can better play the orator.
Mont. But I have reasons strong and forcible.

Enter York.

York. Why, how now, sons and brother, at a strife?
What is your quarrel? how began it first?
Edw. No quarrel, but a slight contention.
York. About what's?
Rich. About that which concerns your grace, and us;
The crown of England, father, which is yours,
York, Mine, boy? not till time and Henry be dead.
Rich. Your right depends not on his life, or death.
Edw. Now you are heir, therefore enjoy it now:
By giving the house of Lancaster leave to breathe,
It will outrun you, father, in the end.
York. I took an oath, that he should quietly reign.
Edw. But, for a kingdom, any oath may be broken:
I'd break a thousand oaths, to reign one year.
Rich. No; God forbid, your grace should be forsworn.
York. I shall be, if I claim by open war.
Rich. I'll prove the contrary, if you'll hear me speak.
York. Thou canst not, son; it is impossible.
Rich. Almost, if is of no moment, being not took Before a true and lawful magistrate.
That hath authority over him that swears;
Henry had none, but did usurp the place;
Then, seeing 'twas he that made you to depose,
Your oath, my lord, is vain and frivolous.
Therefore, to arms. And, father, do but think,
How sweet a thing it is to wear a crown;
Within whose circuit is Elysium,
And all that poets feign of bliss and joy.
Why do we linger thus? I cannot rest,
Until the white rose, that I wear, be dyed
Even in the lukewarm blood of Henry's heart.
York. Rich. Richard, enough; I will be king, or die.
Brother, thou shalt to London presently,
And what on Warwick to this enterprise.—
Thou, Richard, shalt unto the duke of Norfolk,
And tell him privily of our intent.
You, Edward, shalt unto my lord Cobham,
With whom the Kentish men will willingly rise:
In them I trust; for they are soldiers,
Whose array is as the stars, the sun, and moon.
While you are thus employ'd, what resteth more,
But that I seek occasion how to rise;
And yet the king not privy to my drift,
Nor any of the house of Lancaster?

Enter a Messenger.

But, stay; What news? why com'st thou in such post?

Mess. The queen, with all the northern early
Intend here to besiege you in your castle:
She is hard by with twenty thousand men;
And therefore fortify your hold, my lord.
York. Ay, with my sword. What! think'st thou, that we fear them?
Edward and Richard, you shall stay with me;—
My brother Montague shall post to London:
Let noble Warwick, Cobham, and the rest,
Whom have three protectors of the king,
With powerful policy strengthen themselves,
And trust not simple Henry, nor his oaths.
Mont. Brother, I go; I'll win them, fear it not:
And thus most humbly I do take my leave. [Exit.

Enter Sir John and Sir Hugh Mortimer.
York. Sir John, and Sir Hugh Mortimer, mine uncles!
You are come to Sandal in a happy hour;
The answer of the queen mean to besiege:
Sir John. She shall not need, we'll meet her in the field.
York. What, with five thousand men?
Rich. Ay, with five hundred, for a need.
A woman's general, what should we fear?
Edw. I hear their drums; let's set our men in order;
And issue forth, and bid them battle straight.
York. Five men to twenty—I though the odds be great,
I doubt not, uncle, of our victory.
Many a battle have I won in France,
When as the enemy hath been ten to one;
Why should I not now have the like success?
[Alarum. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Plains near Sandal Castle.

Alarum: Excursions. Enter Rutland, and his Tutor.

Rut. Ah, whither shall I fly to 'scape their hands?
Ah, tutor! look, where bloody Clifford comes!

Enter Clifford and Soldiers.

Clif. Chaplain, away! thy priesthood saveth thy
As for the brat of this accursed duke,
Whose father slew my father,—he shall die.
Tut. And I, my lord, will bear him company.
Clif. Soldiers, away with him.
Tut. Ah, Clifford! murder not this innocent child,
Lest thou be hated both of God and man.
[Exit, forced off by Soldiers.
Clif. How now! Is he dead already? Or, is it fear,
That makes him close his eyes?—I'll open them.
Rut. So looks the pent-up lion o'er the wretch
That trembles under his devouring paws;
And so he walks, insulating o'er his prey;
And so he comes, to rend his limbs asunder,—
Ah, gentle Clifford, kill me with thy sword,
And not with such a cruel threatening look.
Sweet Clifford, hear me speak before I die;—
I am too much a subject for thy wrath,
Be thou reveng'd on men, and let me live.

Clif. Had I thy brethren here, their lives, and thine,
Were not revenge sufficient for me;
No, if I digg'd up thy forefathers' graves, And hung their rotten coffins up in chains, I could not make mine ire, nor ease my heart. The plight of me made up my cause; For York Is as a fury to torment my soul; And till I root out their accursed line, And leave not one alive, I live in hell. Therefore—(Crossing his hand.)
Ret. O, let me pray before I take my death— To thee I pray? Sweet Clifford, pity me! Clif. Such pity as my rapier's point affords. Ret. I never had thee harm; Why wilt thou slay me?
Clif. Thy father hath. Ret. But 'twas ere I was born. Thou hast one son, for his sake save me; I eat, in revenge thereof,—with God is just,— He be as miserably slain as I. Ah, let me live in prison all my days; And when I give occasion of offence, Then let me die, for now thou hast no cause.
Clif. No cause? Thy father slew me, therefore, die.
[Clifford slays him.]
Ret. Did I offend, lords and commons sit not two? [Dies.]
Clif. Plantagenet! I come, Plantagenet! And this thy son's blood, clearing to my blade, Shall rust my weapon, till I take his heart. Congress'd with this, do make me wipe off both.
[Exeunt.]
SCENE IV.—The same. [Alarum. Enter York. York. The army of the queen hath got the field: My uncles both are slain in rescuing me; And all my followers to the elder son Turn back, and fly, like ships before the wind, Or lambs pursued by hungry starved wolves. My sons—God knows, what hath bechanced them: But this I know,—they have deman'd themselves Like men born to renown, by life, or death. Three times did Richard make a lane to me; And thrice cried,—Courage, father! fight it out! And full as oft came Edward to my side, With purple fauchion, painted to the blit In blood of those that had encounter'd him: And when the hardiest warriors did retire, Richard cried,—Charge! and give no foot of ground! And when a crown, or else a precious tomb, A sceptre, or an earthy sepulchre! With this we charg'd again: but, out, alas! We bodg'd again; as I have seen a swan With both his labour swim against the tide, And spend her strength with over-matching waves. [A short alarum within.] Ah, hark! the fatal followers do pursue; And I am faint, and cannot fly their fury: And, were I strong, I would not show their fury: The sands are number'd, that make up my life; Here must I stay, and here my life must end.
[Enter Queen Margaret, Clifford, Northumberland, and Soldiers.]
Come, bloody Clifford,—rough Northumberland,— I dare your quenchless fury to more rage; I am your butt, and I abide your shot. York. Yield to our mercy, proud Plantagenet. Clif. Ay, to such mercy as his ruthless arm. With downright payment, show'd unto my father. Now Phæton hath tumbled from his car, And made an evening at the midnight prick. York. My flies, as the phoenix, may bring forth A bird that will revenge upon you all And, in that hope, I throw mine eyes to heaven, Scorning where'er you can afflict me with. What three is this faint and, alas! fear? Clif. So cowards fight, when they can fly no further; So dvers do peck the falcon's piercing talons;
So desperate thieves, all hopeless of their lives, Breathe out invitatives against the officers. York. O Clifford, but bethink thee once again, And in thine gift give not away this time; York Is as a fury to torment my soul; And till I root out their accursed line, And leave not one alive, I live in hell. Therefore—(Crossing his hand.)
Ret. O, let me pray before I take my death— To thee I pray? Sweet Clifford, pity me! Clif. Such pity as my rapier's point affords. Ret. I never had thee harm; Why wilt thou slay me?
Clif. Thy father hath. Ret. But 'twas ere I was born. Thou hast one son, for his sake save me; I eat, in revenge thereof,—with God is just,— He be as miserably slain as I. Ah, let me live in prison all my days; And when I give occasion of offence, Then let me die, for now thou hast no cause.
Clif. No cause? Thy father slew me, therefore, die.
[Clifford slays him.]
Ret. Did I offend, lords and commons sit not two? [Dies.]
Clif. Plantagenet! I come, Plantagenet! And this thy son's blood, clearing to my blade, Shall rust my weapon, till I take his heart. Congress'd with this, do make me wipe off both.
[Exeunt.]
Cliff. That is my office, for my father's sake.

Q. Mar. Nay, stay; let's hear the orisons he makes.

York. She-wolf of France, but worse than wolves of France,
Whose tonguelonger poisonsthan the adder's tooth;
How ill-beseeming is it in thy sex,
To triumph like an Amazonian trull,
Upon their woes, whom fortune captivates?
But that thy face is, visor-like, of shining
Made impudent with use of evil deeds,
I would assay, proud queen, to make thee blush:
To tell thee whence thou can'st, of whom deriv'd,
Were she enough to shame thee, wert thou not shameless.

Thy father bears the type of king of Naples,
Of both the Sicils, and Jerusalem;
Yet not so wealthy as an English yeoman.

Hath that poor monarch taugh thee to insult?
It needs not, nor it boots thee not, proud queen;
Unless the adage must be verified,—
That beggars, mounted, run their horse to death.

That beauty that doth off all women makes;
But God, he knows, thy share thereof is small;
'Tis virtue that doth make them most admir'd;
The contrary doth make thee wonder'd at;
'Tis grace, that thou wouldst rouze with dogs;
Who having pinch'd a few, and made them cry,
The rest stand all aloof, and bark at him.

So far'd our father with his enemies;
So fled his enemies may the devil, or father;
Methinks, 'tis price enough to be his son.

See how the morning opes her golden gates,
And takes her farewell of the glorious sun!
How well resembles it to the propitious
Thrim'd like a younger, prancing to his love!

Edw. Dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three suns?
Rich. Three glorious suns, each one a perfect sun;
Not separated with the racking clouds,
But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky.

See, see! they join, embrace, and seem to kiss,
As if they vow'd some league inviolable:
Now are they but one lamp, one light, one sun.
In this the heaven figures some event.

Edw. 'Tis wondrous strange, the like yet never heard of.
I think, it cites us, brother, to the field;
That hardy than I check my eyes from tears.

York. That face of his the hungry cannibals
Would not have touch'd, would not have stain'd with blood:

But you, false woman, more inexcusable,
O, ten times more,—than tigers of Hycania,—
See, ruthless queen, a hapless father's tears:
This cloth thou dipp'dst in blood of my sweet boy,
And I with tears do wash the blood away.

Keep thou the napkin, and go boast of this:
[He gives back the handkerchief.

And, if thou tell'st the heavy story right,
Upon my soul, the heirs will shed tears;
Yea, even my foes will shed fast-falling tears,
And say,—Alas, it was a pitiful deed!

There, take the crown, and, with the crown, my curse:

And, in thy need, such comfort come to thee.
As now I reap at thy too cruel hand!—
Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the world!
My soul to heaven, my blood upon your heads!

Art thou the man that slain thee, and my kin,
I should not for my life but weep with him,
To see how inly sorrow grieves his soul.

Q. Mar. What, weeping-ripe, my lord Northum-

Think but upon the wrong he did us all,
And that will quickly dry thy melting tears.

Cliff. Here's for my oath, here's for my father's, as for mine:
And for King—

Q. Mar. And here's to right our gentle-hearted king.
[Stabb'd him.

York. Open thy gate of mercy, gracious God!
My soul flies through these wounds to seek out thee.

[Dies.

Q. Mar. Off with his head, and set it on York gates;
So York may overlook the town of York. [Execut.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Plain near Mortimer's Cross, in Herefordshire.

Drums. Enter Edward, and Richard, with their Forces, marching.

Edw. I wonder, how our princely father 'scape'd
Or whether he be 'scape'd away, or no.
From Clifford's and Northumberland's pursuit;
Had he been ta'en, we should have heard the news;
Had he been slain, we should have heard the news;
Or, had he 'scape'd, methinks, we should have heard
The happy tidings of his good escape;

How fares my brother? why is he so sad?

Rich. I cannot joy, until I be resolv'd
Where our right valiant father is become.
I saw him in the battle range about;
And watch'd him, how he singled Clifford forth.
Methought, he bore him in the thickest troop,
As doth a lion in a herd of neat:
Or as a ne'er, encompass'd round with dogs;
Who having pinch'd a few, and made them cry,
The rest stand all aloof, and bark at him.

So far'd our father with his enemies;
So fled his enemies may the devil, or father;
Methinks, 'tis price enough to be his son.

See how the morning opes her golden gates,
And takes her farewell of the glorious sun!

York. That face of his the hungry cannibals

O, ten times more,—than tigers of Hycania,—
See, ruthless queen, a hapless father's tears:

Q. Mar. And here's to right our gentle-hearted king.
[Stabb'd him.

York. Open thy gate of mercy, gracious God!
My soul flies through these wounds to seek out thee.

[Dies.

Q. Mar. Off with his head, and set it on York gates;
So York may overlook the town of York. [Execut.
They took his head, and on the gates of York
They set the same; and there it doth remain,
The monument that ever I viewed.

Edw. Sweet duke of York, our prop to lean upon;
Now thou art gone, we have no staff, no stay.—
O Cluny! saintly saint! thou hast slain
The flower of Europe for his chivalry;
And treacherously hast thou vanquished him,
For, hand to hand, he would have vanquished thee.—

Now my soul's palace is become a prison;
Ah, would she break from hence! that this my body
Might lie the ground be closed up in rest:
For never henceforth shall I joy again,
Never, O never, shall I see more joy.

Rich. I cannot weep; for all my body's moisture
Scarce serves to quench my furnace-burning heart.
Nor can my tongue unfold my heart's great burden:
For selfsame wind, that I should speak withal,
Is kindling coals, that fire all my breast,
And burn me up with flames, that tears would quench.

To weep, is to make less the depth of grief:
Tears, then, for babes: blows, and revenge for me.

Richard, I hear thy name, I'll venge thy death,
Or die renowned by attempting it.

Edw. His name that valiant duke hath left with thee;
His dukedom and his chair with me is left.
Rich. Nay, if thou be that prince, e'er bird's eagle,
Show thy descent by gazing 'gainst the sun:
For chair and dukedom, throne and kingdom say:—
Either that is thine, or else thou wart not his.

March. Enter Warwick and Montague, with Forces.

War. How now, fair lords? What fare? what news abroad?
Rich. Great lord of Warwick, if we should recount
Our beliefful news, and, at each word's deliverance,
Stab poniards in our flesh, till all were told,
The words would add more anguish than the wounds.

O valiant lord, the duke of York is slain.
Edw. O fair Warwick! Warwick! that Plantagenet
Which held thee dearly, as his soul's redemption,
Is by the stern lord Clifford done to death.
War. Ten days ago I drownd these news in tears:
And now, to doubt them more than to forget them,
I come to tell thee things since then befall'n.
After the bloody fray at Wakefield fought,
Where your brave father breathed his latest gasp,
Tidings, as swiftly as the posts could run,
Were brought me of your loss, and his depart.
I then in London, keeper of the king,
Muster'd my soldiers, gathered flocks of friends,
And very well appointed, as I thought,
March'd towards Saint Albans to intercept the queen.

March. Bearing the king in my behalf along:
For by my scouts I was advertised,
That she was coming with a full intent
To dash our late decree in parliament,
Touching king Henry's oath, and your succession.

Art to make haste, we at Saint Albans met,
Our soldiers fight like more than two to one fought:
But, whether twas the coldness of the king,
Who look'd full gently on his warlike queen;
That rob'd my soldiers of their bated spicèn;
Or whether twas report of Clifford's rigour,
Or remorse in common fear of Clifford's rigor,
Who thunders to his captives—blood and death,
I cannot judge: but, to conclude with truth,
Their weapons like to lightning came and went;
Our soldiers, like the lightest of out flight,
Or like a lazy thrasher with a flail,—
Fell gently down, as if they struck their friends.

I cheer'd them up with justice of our cause,
With promise of high pay, and great rewards:
But all in vain; they had no heart to fight,
And we, in them, no hope to win the day,
So that we fled: the king, unto the queen;
Lord George your brother, Norfolk, and myself,
In haste tothalaste, are come to join with you;
For in the marches here, we heard, you were,
Making another head to fight again.

Edw. Where is the duke of Norfolk, gentle friends?

And when came George from Burgundy to England?
War. Some six miles off the duke is with the soldiers.
And for your brother, he was lately sent
From your kind aunt, duchess of Burgundy,
With aid of soldiers to this needful war.
Rich. 'Twas odds, belike, when valiant Warwick fled:
Oft have I heard his praises in pursuit,
But ne'er, till now, his scandal of retire.
War. Nor now my scandal, Richard, dost thou hear:
For thou shalt know, this strong right hand of mine
Can pluck the diadem from faint Henry's head,
And wring the awful scepter from his fist;
Were he alive his head, and as bold as he.
As he is fam'd for mildness, peace, and prayer.
Rich. I know it well, lord Warwick: I blame me not:
'Tis love I bear thy glories, makes me speak. But, in this troublous time, what's to be done?
Shall we go throw away our coats of steel,
And wrap our bodies in black mourning gowns,
Numbering our Axe-Marie's with our heads?
Or shall we on the headmen of our foes
Tell our devotion with revengeful arms?
If for the last, say,—Ay, and to it, lords.
War. Why, therefore Warwick came to seek you out
And therefore comes my brother Montague.
Attend me, lords. The proud insuiting queen,
With Clifford, and the haughty Northumberland,
And of their feather, many more proud birds,
Have wrangled over the easy melting king like wax.
He swore consent to your succession,
His oath enrolled in the parliament;
And now to London all the crew are gone,
To frustrate both his oath, and what besides
May make against the house of Lancaster.
Their power, I think, is thirty thousand strong:
Now, if the help of Norfolk, and myself,
With all the men that I have, and that of March,
Amongst the loving Welchmen canst procure,
Will but amount to five and twenty thousand,
Why, Fili! to London we will march amain;
And once again bestride our foaming steeds;
And once again cry,—Charge upon our foes!
But never once again turn back, and fly.
Rich. Ay, now, methinks, I hear great Warwick speak.
'Neer may we be live to see a sunshine day,
That cries—Retire, if Warwick bid him stay.

Edw. Lord Warwick, on thy shoulder will I lean;
And when thou fall'st, (as God forbid the hour!) Must Edward fall, when thou art fallen.
War. No longer earl of March, but duke of York;
The next degree is, England's royal throne:
For king of England shalt thou be proclaimed
In every town and city, that was taken
And he that throws not up his cap for joy,
Shall for the fault make forfeit of his head.
King Edward,—valiant Richard,—Montague,—
Star we the land with a greater draught,
But sound the trumpets, and about our task.
Rich. Then, Clifford, were thy heart as hard as steel,
(As thou hast shown it flinty by thy deeds,) I come to blest it,—or to give thee mine.

Edw. Then strike up, drums;—God, and Saint George, for us!
Enter a Messenger.

War. How now? what news?<n>

Mess. The Duke of Norfolk sends you word by me:

The queen is coming with a puissant host;
And craves your company for speedy counsel.
War. Why, then it sorts, brave warriors: Let's away.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—Before York.

Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, the Prince of Wales, Clifford, and Northumberland, with Forces.

Q. Mar. Welcome, my lord, to this brave town of York.

Vender's the head of that arch-enemy,
That sought to be encompass'd with your crown:
Dost not the object cheer your heart, my lord?
K. Hen. Ay, as the rocks cheer them that fear their wreck;
To see this sight, it irks my very soul.—
Withhold revenge, dear God! 'tis not my fault,
Not wittingly have I infringing'd my vow.
Cif. My gracious liege, this too much lenity
And harmful pity must be laid aside.
To whom do lions cast their gentle looks?
Not to the beast that would usurp their den.
Why should the fond that the fond be doth lick?
Not his, that spoils her young before her face.
Who 'scapes the lurking serpent's mortal sting?
Not he that sets his foot upon her back.
The smallest worm will turn, being trodden on;
And does will peck, in safeguard of their brood.
Ambitious York did level at thy crown,
Thou smiling, while he knits his angry brows:
He, but a duke, would have his son a king,
And raise his issue, like a loving sire:
Thou, being a king, bless'd with a goodly son,
Didst yield consent to disinherit him,
Which argued thee a most inflicting father.
Unreasonable creatures feed their young:
And though man's face be fearful to their eyes,
Yet, in protection of their tender ones,
Who hast not seen them (even with those wings
Which sometime they have used with fearful flight).
Make war with him that climb'd unto their nest,
Offering their own lives in their young's defence? For shame, my liege, make them your precedent! Where is the pity, that this goodly boy
Should lose his birthright by his father's fault;
And long hereafter say unto his child,—
What my great-grandfather and grandsire got,
My cardinal father, and my family gave away?
Ah, what a shame were this! Look on the boy;
And let his manly face, which promiseth
Successful fortune, steel thy melting heart,
To hold thine own, and leave thine own with him.

K. Hen. Full well hath Clifford play'd the orator,
Inferning arguments of mighty force.
But, Clifford, tell me, didst thou never hear,—
That things ill got had ever bad success?
And happy always was it for that son,
Whose father for his boarding went to hell? I'll leave my son my virtuous deeds behind;
And 'would, my father had left me no more!
For all the rest is held at such a rate,
As brings a thousand-fold more care to keep,
Than in possession any jot of pleasure.
Ah, cousin York! would thy best friends did know,
How it doth grieve me that thy head is here! Q. Mar. My lord, cheer up your spirits; our foes are nigh,
And this soft courage makes your followers faint.
You promised knighthood to our forward son;
Ginshath your sword, and dub him presently.—

Edward, kneel down.

K. Hen. Edward Plantagenet, arise a knight;
And learn this lesson,—Draw thy sword in right.
Prince. My gracious father, by your kindly leave,
I'll draw it as apparent to the crown.

And in that quarter use it to the death.

Clif. Why, that is spoken like a toward prince.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Royal commanders, be in readiness—
For, with a band of thirty thousand men, Comes Warwick, backing of the duke of York;
And, in the towns, as they do march along,
Proclaim a true king, and many fly to him:
Darraign your battle, for they are at hand.

Clif. I would, your highness would depart the field:
The queen hath best success when you are absent.

Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord, and leave us to our fortune.

K. Hen. Why, that's my fortune too; therefore

I'll stay.

North. Be it with resolution then to fight.

Prince. My royal father, cheer these noble lords,
And hearten those that fight in your defence:
Unsheath your sword, good father; cry, Saint阵

March. Enter Edward, George, Richard, Warwick, Norfolk, Montague, and Soldiers.

Edm. Now, perjur'd Henry! wilt thou kneel for grace,

And set thy diadem upon my head;
Or bide the mortal fortune of the field?

Q. Mar. Go, rate thy minions, proud insulting

Edm. I am his king, and he should bow his head.

Clif. I was adopted heir by his consent:
Since when, his oath is broken; for, as I hear,
You—that are king, though he do wear the crown—

Have caus'd him, by new act of parliament,
To blot out me, and put his own son in.

Clif. And reason too;

Who should succeed the father but the son?

Rich. Are you there, butcher?—O, I cannot speak!

Clif. Ay, crook-back; here I stand, to answer thee,

Or any of thee proudest of thy sort.

Rich. 'Twas you that killed young Rutland, was it not?

Clif. Ay, and old York, and yet not satisfied.

Rich. For my lord's sake, lords, give signal to the fight.

War. What say'st thou, Henry, wilt thou yield the crown?

Q. Mar. Why, how now, long-tongu'd Warwick? dare you speak?

When you and I met at Saint Albans' last,
Your legs did better service than your hands.
War. Then 'twas my turn to fly, and now 'tis thy turn.

Clif. You said so much before, and yet you fled.
War. 'Twas not your valour, Clifford, drove me thence.

North. No, nor your manhood, that durst make you stay.

Rich. Northumberland, I hold thee reverently—

Break off the parley; for scarce I can refrain The expression of my big-swoln heart.

Upon that Clifford, that cruel child-killer.

Clif. I slew thy father; Call'st thou him a child?

Rich. Yes: thou, like a dastard, and a treacherous coward,

As thou didst kill our tender brother Rutland;
But, ere sun-set, I'll make thee curse the deed.

K. Hen. Hath done with words, my lords, and hear me speak.
THIRD PART OF

Act 2.

They took his head, and on the gates of York
They set the same; and there it doth remain,
To shew what fate they had for vanquishing.

Edw. Sweet duke of York, our prop to lean upon:
Now thou art gone, we have no staff, no stay!—
On London, be it known, Clifford, thou hast slain
The flower of Warwick for his chivalry:
And treacherously hast thou vanquish'd him,
For, hand to hand, he would have vanquish'd thee.

Now my soul's palace is become a prison;
Ah, would the break from hence! that this my body
Might in the ground be closed up in rest;
For now, honest Edward, shall I again,
Never, O ever, shall I see mine eyes.

Rich. I cannot weep; for all my body's moisture
Scarce serves to quench my burning heart;
Nor can my tongue express my heart's great burden;
For self same word, that I should speak withal,
Is kindling coals, that are my breast,
And burn me up with flames, that tears would quench.

To weep, is to make less the depth of grief;
Tears, then, for babies: blows, and revenge for me.

Richard. I bear thy name, I'll revenge thy death,
In die reserved by betraying it itself.

Edw. His name that valiant duke hath left with thee;
His dukedom and his chair with me is left,
Show thy descent by gazing at the sun:
For chair and dukedom, throne and kingdom say;
Rhetor that is thine, or else thou wast not his.

March. Ever Warwick and Montague, with Forces.

War. How now, fair lords? What fare? what news abroad?
Rich. Great lord of Warwick, if we should recount
Our baleful news, and, at each word's deliverance,
Stab poison in our flesh, till all were told,
The words would add more anguish than the wounds.

O valiant lord, the duke of York is slain.

Edw. O Warwick! Warwick! that Plantagenet
Which bears the deedly, as his soul's redemption,
Is by the stern lord Clifford done to death.

War. Ten days ago I drownd these news in tears.
And now, to add more measure to your woes,
I come to tell you things since then fulfill'd:
After the battle of Wakefield fought,
Where your brave father breath'd his latest gasp,
Tidings, as swiftly as the posts could run,
Were brought me of your loss, and his depart.
I then in London, keeper of the king,
Muster'd my soldiers, gather'd flocks of friends,
And very well appointed, as I thought,
March'd towards Saint Alban's to intercept the queen.

Bearing the king in my behalf along:
For by my scouts I was advertised,
That she was coming with a full intent
To dash our late decree in parliament,
Touching king Henry's oath, and your succession;
Short tale to make,—we at Saint Alban's met,
Our battles joint'd, and both sides fiercely fought:
But, whether 'twas the coldness of the king,
Who look'd fail greatly on his warlike queen;
That rob'd my soldiers of their hated spicen;
Or whether 'twas report of her success;
Or more than common fear of Clifford's rigour,
Where my men, to his captivities and death,
I cannot judge: but, to conclude with truth,
Their weapons like to lightning came and went;
Our soldiers—like the night's—sly flight,
Or like a tiger 'th the teeth up with a fright.
Fell gently down, as if they struck their friends.

I cheer'd them up with justice of our cause,
With promise of high pay, and great rewards:
But many men did boast they had not witnessed it,
And we, in them, no hope to win the day.
So that we fled: the king, unto the queen;
Lord George your brother, Norfolk, and myself,
In haste, post-haste, are come to join with you;
For in the fields here, we heard, you were,
Making another head to fight again.

Oft have I heard his praises in pursuit,
But never, till now, his scandal of retire.

War. Nor now my scald, Richard, dost thou
Thou shalt know, this strong right hand of mine
Can pluck the diadem from faint Henry's head,
And wring the aweful sceptre from his list;
Were he as famous and as bold in war,
As he is now, for thus I judge in prayer.

Rich. I know it well, lord Warwick: blame me not.

'Tis love I bear thy glories, makes me speak.
But, in good time, what's to be done?
Shall we go throw away our coats of steel,
And wrap our bodies in black mourning gowns,

Erect. Away! for vengeance comes along with them:
Nay, stay not to expostulate; make speed;
Or else come after, I'll stay before.
K. Hen. Nay, take me with thee, good sweet
Exeter;
Not that I fear to stay, but to love go
Whither the queen intends. Forward; away! [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—The same. A loud Alarm. Enter Clifford, wounded.

Cliff. Here burns my candle out, ay, here it dies.
Which, while it lasted, gave king Henry light.
Oh! wherein? I fear thy overthrow;
More than my body's parting with my soul.
My love, and fear, grief'd many friends to thee;
And, now I fall, thy toil commixture melt.
Impairing Henry, strength'spring mis-prov'd York,
The common people swarm like summer flies:
And whither fly the gnats, but to the sun?
And who shines now but Henry's enemies?
O Phoebus! hadst thou never given consent
That Phaenon should check thy fiery steeds,
Thy burning car never had scorched the earth?
And Henry, hadst thou sway'd as kings should do,
Or as thy father, and his father, did,
Giv'n me ground into the bounds of York;
They never then had sprung like summer flies;
1, and ten thousand in this countless realm,
Had left no mourning widows for their death,
As thou didst lead me then to grace.

And for what dost thou now wander thro' the bounds of York?
For what doth cherish weeds, but gentle air?
And what makes robbers bold, but too much lewdness?
Boots spoil our plaints, and careless are our wounds:
No way to fly, nor strength to hold out flight;
The foe is merciless, and will not pity.
For, at their hands, I have deserv'd no pity.
Their hands I beg of my deadly wounds,
And much of my blood doth make me faint—
Come, York, and Richard, Warwick, and the rest;
I stabb'd your fathers' bosoms, spill my heart.

[He faints.]

Eder. Now breathe we, lords; good fortune bids
And smooth the frowns of war with peaceful looks—
Some troops pursue the bloody-minded queen—
That yea, I hope, shall have no more shafts
As dot a sail, 'twill with a fretting gust,
Command an agony to stem the waves.
But think you, lords, that Clifford fled with them?
War. Nay, no; but I am told he should meet a king.
For, though before his face I speak the words,
Your brother Richard mark'd him for the grave:
And, whereas'er he is, he's surely dead.

[Clifford groans, and dies.]

Eder. Whose soul is that which takes her heavy leave?
Eder. See who it is; and, now the battle's ended,
If friend, or foe, let him be gently us'd.
Rich. Revokes that doom of mercy, for 'tis Clifford.
Who, not contented that he lopp'd the branch
In hewing Rutland when his leaves put forth,
But set his murdering knife unto the root
From whence that tender sprig did sweetly spring;
I mean, our princely father, duke of York.
War. From off the gates of York fetch down the head,
Your father's head, which Clifford placed there:
That he may see, and that his voice may be heard.
Measure for measure must be answer'd
Eder. Bring forth that fatal screech-owl to our house,
That nothing sung but death to us and ours;
Now death shall stop his dismal threatening sound,
And his ill-boding tongue no more shall speak.
War. I think his understanding is bereft —
Speak, Clifford, dost thou know who speaks to thee?

Dark gloom doth o'er-shades his beams of life,
And he nor see, nor hears us what we say.
Rich. O, would he did! and so, perhaps, he death;
'Tis but his policy to counterfeit,
Because he would avoid such bitter tidings.

Which in the time of death he gave our father.
Geo. If so thou think'st, vex him with eager words;

Rich. Clifford, ask mercy, and obtain no grace.
War. Clifford, repeat in boastless penitence.
War. Clifford, devise excuses for thy faults.
Geo. While we devise feint tortures for thy faults.
War. Thou pisset'st Rutland, I will pity thee.
Geo. Where's your captain Margaret, to fence you then.
War. They mock thee, Clifford! I swear as thou wast wont.

Rich. What, not an oath? nay, then the world
When Clifford cannot spare his friends an oath:—
I know by that, he's dead; And, by my soul,
If this right hand would buy two hours' life,
That I in despight might raze at him.
This hand should chop it off; and with the issuing blood
Stifle the villain, whose unstainted thirst
York and young Rutland could not satisfy.
War. Ay, but he's dead: if with the traitor's head,
And rear it in the place your father's stands—
And now to London with triumphant march,
There to be crowned England's royal king.
From whence shall Warwick cut the sea to France,
And ask the lady Bona for thy queen:
So shall thou know both these lands together;
And, having France thy friend, thou shalt not dread
The scatter'd foe, that hopes to rise again;
For though they cannot greatly strive to hurt,
Yet look to have them buz, to offend thine ears.
First, will I see the coronation;
And then to Britain I'll cross the sea,
To effect this marriage, so in haste my lord.

Eder. Even as thou wilt, sweet Warwick, let it be:
For on thy shoulder do I build my seat,
And never will I undertake the state
Wherein thy counsel and consent is wanting.
Rich. Richard, I will create thee duke of Gloucester;
And George, of Clarencie:—Warwick, as ourself,
Shall do, and undo, as him pleaseth best.

Rich. Let me be duke of Clarence; George, of Gloucester;
For Gloucester's dakedom is too ominous.
War. True, that's a foolish observation:
And Richard be duke of Gloucester:
Now to London, To see these honours in possession.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

Enter Two Keepers, with cross-bows in their hands.

1 Keep. Under this thick grown brake we'll shroud ourselves;
For through this laund anon the deer will come;
And in these woods we'll make our stand,
Culling the principal of all the deer.

2 Keep. I'll stay above the hill, so both may shoot.
Act 3.

KING HENRY VI.

1 Keep. That cannot be; the noise of thy cross-bow
Will scare the herd, and so my shoot is lost.
Here stand we both, and aim we at the best:
And, for the time shall not seem tedious,
I'll tell thee what befell me on a day.
In this self-place where now we mean to stand.
2 Keep. Here comes a man, let's stay till he be past.

Enter King Henry, disguised, with a prayer-book.

K. Hen. From Scotland am I stol'n, even of pure love,
To grieve my own land with my wishful sight.
No, Harry, Harry, 'tis no land of thine;
Thy place is fill'd, thy scepter wrung from thee,
Thy balm wash'd off, wherewith thou wast anoint'd.
No bending knee will call thee Caesar now,
No humble suitors press to speak for right,
No, not a man comes for redress of thee;
For how can I help them, and not myself?
1 Keep. Ay, here's a deer whose skin's a keeper's fee:
This is the quondam king; let's seize upon him.
K. Hen. Let me embrace these sour adversities:
For what I say, it is the wisest course.
2 Keep. Why linger we? let us lay hands upon him.
1 Keep. Forbear a while; we'll hear a little more.
K. Hen. My queen, and son, are gone to France for aid.
And, as I hear, the great commanding Warwick
Is things of state, to serve the French King's sister
To wife for Edward: If this news be true,
Poor queen and son, your labour is but lost;
For Warwick is a subtle orator,
And I fear he soon won with moving words.
By this account, then, Margaret may win him;
For she's a woman to be pity'd much:
Her sighs will make a battery in his breast;
Her tears will pierce into a marble heart;
The tiger will be mild, while she doth morn;
And Nero will be tainted with remorse,
To hear, and see, her plaints, her brinish tears.
Ay, but she's come to beg; Warwick, to give:
She, on his left side, craving aid for Henry;
He, on his right, asking a wife for Edward.
She weeps, and says—her Henry is demis'd;
He smiles, and says—his Edward is install'd;
That sure grief can speak no more:
Whiles Warwick tells his title, smooths the wrong,
Inferrath arguments of mighty strength;
And, in conclusion, wins the king from her,
With promises of his sister, and what else,
To strengthen and support King Edward's place.
O Margaret, thus 'twill be; and thou, poor soul,
Art then forsaken, as thou wast't forlorn.
2 Keep. Say, what art thou, that talk'st of kings and queens?
K. Hen. More than I seem, and less than I was born to:
A man at least, for less I should not be;
And men may talk of kings, and why not I?
2 Keep. Ay, but thou talk'st as if thou wert a king.
K. Hen. Why, so I am, in mind; and that's enough.
2 Keep. But, if thou be a king, where is thy crown?
K. Hen. My crown is in my heart, not on my head;
Not deck'd with diamonds, and Indian stones,
Nor to be seen: my crown is call'd; content;
A crown it is, that few kings enjoy.
2 Keep. Well, if you be a king crown'd with content,
Your crown content, and you, must be contented
To go along with us: for, as we think,
You are the king, King Edward hath depos'd;
And we his subjects, sworn in all allegiance,
Will apprehend you as his enemy.
K. Hen. But did you never swear, and break an oath?
2 Keep. No, never such an oath; nor will not.
K. Hen. Where did you dwell, when I was king of England?
2 Keep. Here in this country, where we now remain.
K. Hen. I was anointed king at nine months old;
My father, and my grandfather, were kings;
And you were sworn true subjects unto me:
And, tell me then, have you not broke your oaths?
1 Keep. No.
For we were subjects, but while you were king.
K. Hen. Why, am I dead? do I not breathe a man?
Ah, simple men, you know not what you swear.
Look, as I blow this feather from my face,
And as the air blows it to me again,
Obeying with my wind when I do blow,
And yielding to another when it blows,
Commanded always by the greater gust;
Such is the lightness of you common men.
But do not break your oaths; for, of that sin
My manhood shall not make you guilty.
Go where you will, the king shall be commanded;
And be you kings; command, and I'll obey.
1 Keep. We are true subjects to the king, king Edward.
K. Hen. So would you be again to Henry,
If he were seated as king Edward is.
1 Keep. We charge you, in God's name, and in the king's,
To go with us unto the officers.
K. Hen. In God's name, lead; your king's name be obey'd;
And what God will, then let your king perform;
And what he will, I humbly yield unto. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Edward, Gloster, Clarence, and Lady Grey.

K. Edw. Brother of Gloster, at Saint Alban's field
This lady's husband, sir John Grey, was slain,
His lands then seiz'd on by the conqueror;
Her suit is now, to repossess those lands;
Which we in justice cannot well deny,
Because in quarrel of the house of York
The wrongy gentleman did lose his life.
Glo. Your highness shall do well, to grant her suit;
It were dishonour, to deny it her.
K. Edw. It were no less; but yet I'll make a pause.
Glo. Yea! is it so?
I see, the lady hath a thing to grant,
Before the king will grant her humble suit.
Clar. He knows the game; how true he keeps the wind!
Glo. Silence. [Aside.]
K. Edw. Widow, we will consider of your suit;
And come some other time, to know our mind.
L. Grey. Right gracious lord, I cannot brook delay:
May it please your highness to resolve me now;
And what your pleasure is, shall satisfy me.
Glo. [Aside.] Ay, widow? then I'll warrant you all your lands,
An if what pleases him, shall please you.
Flight closer, or, go to bed, you'll catch a blow.
Clar. I fear her not, unless she chance to fall. [Aside.]
Glo. God forbid that! for he'll take vantage.
K. Edw. How many children hast thou, widow?
Tell me.
Clar. I think, he means to beg a child of her. [Aside.}
Third Part of

Act 3.

Scene VI. — The same.

A loud Alarum. Enter Clifford, rounded.

Clif. Here burn my candle out, ay, here it dies, Whibl, while it lasted, gave king Henry light. O, Lancaster! I fear thy overthrow,

Most upon the earth's top, not of my soul.

My love, and fear, gwe'd many friends to thee;

And, now I fall, thy teem commissures melt.

Reposing Henry, strengthening mis-prov'd York.

The common people swarm like summer flies:

And withal fly the gnats, but to the sea?

And who shines now but Henry's enemies?

O Phæbus! hadst thou never given consent

That Phæton should check thy fiery steeds,

Thy burning car never had scorched the earth:

And Henry, hadst thou sway'd as kings should do,

O, as thy father, and his father, did,

Giv'd no ground unto the hoard of York.

They never then had springing like summer flies;

I, and a thousand in this luckless realm,

Had left no mourning widows for our death,

And thou this day hast kept thy chair in peace.

For what death cherish weeds, but gentle air?

And what makes robbers bold, but too much lenity?

Booless are priests, and careless are my wounds:

No way to fly, no strength to hold out flight;

The fool is merciful, and will not pity;

For, at their hands, I have deserv'd no pity.

The air hath got into my deadly wounds,

And with the bloody flame that slow dost I faint:

Come, York, and Richard, Warwick, and the rest;

I stabb'd your fathers' bosoms, split my breast.

[Exeunt.

Edw. Now breathe we, lords; good fortune bids us pause,

And smooths the frowns of war with peacefull looks.—

Some troops pursue the bloody-minded queen:—

That led calm Henry, though he be a king, And here with sail, with a frond of war:

Command an urgent to stem the waves.

But think you, lords, that Clifford fled with them?

War. No, 'tis impossible he should escape:

For, though before his face I speak the words,

Your brother Richard mark'd him for the grave:

And, where'er he be, he, surely dead.

[Clifford groans, and dies.

Edw. Whose soul is that which takes her heavy leave?

Edw. What is this: and, now the battle's ended, If friend, or foe, let him be gently us'd.

Rich. Revolve that doom of mercy, for 'tis Clifford;

Who, not contented that he lopp'd the branch In hewing Richard, and when his leaves put forth, But set his murdering knife unto the root

From whence that tender spray did sweety spring; I mean, our princely father, duke of York.

War. From off the gates of York fetch down the head,

Your father's head, which Clifford placed there: Instead whereof, let this supply the room; Messuage and monsure must be answered.

Edw. Bring forth that fatal screech-owl to our house,

That nothing sung but death to us and ours: Now death shall stop his dismal threatening sound, And his ill-boding tongue no more shall speak. —

[Attendants bring the body forward.

War. I think his understanding is bereft:—

Speak, Clifford, dost thou know who speaks to thee?—

Dark cloudy death o'ershades his beams of life, And both his ears, now hears us what we say.

Rich. (), would be did! and so, perhaps, he doth;

Tis but his policy to counterfeit,

Which in the time of death he gave our father.

Geo. If so thou think'st, vex him with eager words.

Rich. Clifford, ask mercy, and obtain no grace.

Geo. While we devise fact tellures for thy faults.

Rich. Thou didst love York, and I am son to

Edw. Thou pittedst Rutland, I will pity thee.

Geo. Where's captain Margaret, to fence you now?

War. They mock thee, Clifford I swear as thou wast wont.

Rich. What, not an oath? nay, then the world goes hard,

When Clifford cannot spare his friends an oath:—

I know by that, he's dead; And, by my soul,

If this right hand would buy two hours' life,

That I in all despite might tall at him.

This hand should chop it off; and with the lassing blood

Stife the villain, whose unstaunched thirst

York and young Rutland could not satisfy.

War. Yet, but he's dead: off with the traitor's head.

And rear it in the place your father's stands:—

And now to London with triumphant march, There to receive England's royal king.

From whence shall Warwick cut the sea to France, And ask the lady Bona for thy queen:

For Golaster's duckerom is too ominous.

War. Tut, that's a foolish observation; Richard, be duke of Golaster; Now to London, To see these honours in possession. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Edward, Gloster, Clarence, and Lady
Grey.

K. Edw. Brother of Gloster, at Saint Alban's field
This lady's husband, sir John Grey, was slain,
His lands then seiz'd on by the conqueror;
Her suite now, to repose him in his lands;
Which we in justice cannot well deny,
Because in quarrel of the house of York
The worthy gentleman did lose his life.
Glo. Your highness shall do well, to grant her suit;
It were dishonour, to deny it her.
K. Edw. It were no less, but yet I'll make a strength.
Glo. Yea! is it so?
I see, the lady hath a thing to grant,
Before the king will grant her humble suit.
Clar. He knows the game; how true he keeps
the wind?

[Glo. Silence! [Aside.]
K. Edw. Widow, we will consider of your suit;
And come some other time, to know our mind.
L. Gre. Right gracious lord, I cannot brook delay;
May it please your highness to resolve me now;
And what your pleasure is, shall satisfy me.
Glo. [Aside.] Ay, widow? then I'll warrant you
all your lands,
An if what pleases him, shall please you.
Fight closer, or, good faith, you'll catch a blow.
Clar. I fear her not, unless she chance to fail.

Glo. God forbid that I for he'll take vantages.

[K. Edw. How many children hast thou, widow?
tell me.
Clar. I think, he means to beg a child of her.

[Aside.]
Glo. Nor, whip me then; he'll rather give her way. [Aside.]

L. Grey. Three, my most gracious lord.

Glo. You shall have four, if you'll be ruled by him.

[Aside.]

K. Edw. 'Twere pity, they should lose their children's blood.

L. Grey. He pitiful, dread lord, and grant it then.

K. Edw. Lords, give us leave; I'll try this child's will.

Glo. Ay, good leave have you; for you will have leave,

Till youth take leave, and leave you to the crutch.

L. Grey. Therefore I came u to your majesty.

K. Edw. I'll to you how these lands are to be got.

L. Grey. So shall you bind me to your highness's service.

K. Edw. What service wilt thou do me, if I give thee

L. Grey. What you command, that rests in me to do.

K. Edw. But you will take exceptions to my boon.

L. Grey. No, gracious lord, except I cannot do it.

K. Edw. Ay, but thou canst do what I mean to ask.

L. Grey. Why, then I will do what your grace commands.

Glo. Toilles her hard; and much rain wears the marble. [Aside.

Clar. As red as fire I say, then her wax must melt. [Aside.]

L. Grey. Why stops my lord? shall I not hear my task?

K. Edw. An easy task; 'tis but to love a king.

L. Grey. That's soon perform'd, because I am a subject.

K. Edw. Why then, thy husband's lands I freely give thee.

L. Grey. I take my leave with many thousand thanks.

Glo. The match is made; she seals it with a curtsey.

K. Edw. But stay thee, 'tis the fruits of love I mean.

L. Grey. The fruits of love I mean, my loving Heggie.

K. Edw. Ay, but, I fear me, in another sense.

What love, think'st thou, I use so much to get?

L. Grey. My love till death, my humble thanks, my prayers;

That love, which virtue begs, and virtue grants.

K. Edw. No, by my troth, I did not mean such love.

L. Grey. Why, then you mean not as I thought you did.

K. Edw. But now partly may perceive my mind.

L. Grey. My mind will never grant what I perceive.

Your highness aims at, if I am right.

K. Edw. To tell thee plain, I aim to live with thee.

L. Grey. To tell you plain, I had rather lie in prison.

K. Edw. Why, then thou shalt have my husband's lands.

L. Grey. Why, then mine honesty shall be my dowry;

For by that less I will not purchase them.

K. Edw. Therein thou wrong'st thy children and self.

L. Grey. Her in my highness wrongs both them

But, mighty lord, this merry inclination

Accords not with the sadness of my suit;

Please you to dismiss me, either with ay, or no.

K. Edw. Ay; if thou wilt say ay, to my request:

No; if thou dost say no, to my demand.

L. Grey. Then, no, my lord. My suit is at an end.

Glo. The widow likes him not, she knits her brow.

[Aside.

Clar. He is the bluntest wooer in Christendom. [Aside.

K. Edw. [Aside.] Her looks do argue her replete with modesty;

Her words do show her wit incomparable.

All her perfections challenge sovereignty:

One way, or other, she is for a king;

And she shall be my love, or else my queen.

Say, that king Edward take thee for his queen?

L. Grey. 'Tis better said than done, my gracious lord:

I am a subject fit to jest withal,

But far unfit to be a sovereign.

K. Edw. Sweet widow, by my state I swear to thee,

I speak no more than what my soul intends,

And that is, to enjoy thee for my love.

L. Grey. And that is more than I will yield to;

I know, I am too mean to be your queen:

And yet too good to be your concubine.

K. Edw. You calv, widow; I did mean, my lady.

L. Grey. 'Twill grieve your grace, my son should call you—father.

K. Edw. No more, than when thy daughters call their mother.

Thou art a widow, and thou hast some children

And, by God's mother, I, being but a bachelor,

Have other some: why, 'tis a happy thing

To be the father unto many answer no more, for thou shalt be my queen.

Glo. The ghostly father now hath done his shift.

[Aside.

Clar. When he was made a shriver, 'twas for shift.

K. Edw. Brothers, you muse what chat we two have had.

Glo. The widow likes it not, for she looks sad.

K. Edw. You'd think it strange, if I should marry her.

Clar. To whom, my lord?

K. Edw. Why, Clarence, to myself.

Glo. That would be ten days' wonder, at the least.

Clar. That's a day longer than a wonder lasts.

Glo. By so much is the wonder in extremes.

K. Edw. Well, jest on, brothers: I can tell you both.

Her suit is granted for her husband's lands.

Enter a Nobleman.

Nob. My gracious lord, Henry your foe is taken,

And brought your prisoner to your palace gate.

K. Edw. See, that he be convey'd unto the Tower—

And go thy brother, to the man that took him,

To question of his apprehension—

Widow, go you along;—Lords, use her honourable.

[Exit the King Edward, Lady Grey, Clarence, and Lord.

Glo. Ay, Edward will use women honourably.

'Would he were wasted, narrow, bones, and all,

That from his toils no hopeful branch may spring.

To crown him from the golden time I look for;

And yet, between my soul's desire, and me,

(The lustful Edward's title barried,
Is Clarence, Henry, and his son young Edward,
And all the unlook'd-for issue of their bodies,
To take their rooms, ere I can place myself;
A cold premeditation for my purpose!
Why, then I do but dream on sovereignty;
Like one that stands upon a precipice,
And spies a far-off shore where he would tread,
Wishing his foot were equal with his eye;
And chides the sea that7 sunders him from thence,
Saying, I'll lade it dry to have his way:
So do I wish the crown, being so far off;
And so I chide the means that keep me from it;
And so I say,—I'll cut the causes off,
Plattering me with impossibilities.—
My eye's too quick, my heart o'erweens too much,
Unless my hand and strength could equal them.
Well, say there is no kingdom then for Richard;
What other pleasure can the world afford?
I'll make my heaven in a lady's lap,
And deck my body in gay ornaments,
And with sweet ladies with my words and looks.
O miserable thought! and more unlikely,
Than to accomplish twenty golden crowns!
Why, love forgrew me in my mother's womb:
And, for I should not deal in her soft law,
She did corrupt frail nature with some brie,
To make a man's heart mis-shap'd a wither'd shrub;
To make an envious mountain on my back,
Where sits deformity to mock my body;
To shape my legs of an unequal size;
To disproportion me in every part,
Like a green child, to give a bear-whelp,
That carries no impression like the dam.
And am I then a man to be belov'd?
O, monstrous fault, to harbour such a thought!
Then the best heart, and the best nature of man;
But to command, to check, to o'berbear such
As are of better person than myself,
I'll make my heaven—to dream upon the crown;
And, wanting the means, to dwell but hell,
Until my mis-shap'd trunk that bears this head,
Be round impaled with a glorious crown.
And yet I know not how to get the crown,
For making lives, not murders, is my trade;
And I,—like one lost in a thorny wood,
That rents the thorns, and is rent with the thorns;
Seeking a way, and straying from the way:
Not knowing how to find the open air,
But tolling desperately to find it out,—
'Orment myself to catch the English crown:
And from that torment I will free myself,
Or hew my way out with a bloody axe.
Who can smile, and murder while I smile;
And cry, content, to that which grieves my heart;
And wet my cheeks with artificial tears,
And frame my face to all occasions.
I'll drown more sailors than the priest shall;
I'll slay more gazers than the basilisk;
I'll play the craner as well as Nestor,
Deceive more shilly than Ulysses could,
And, like a Sinon, take another Troy;
I can add colours to the cameleon;
Change shapes, with Proteus, for advantages,
And set the mirth'dous Machiavel to school.
Can I do this, and cannot get a crown?
Tut I were it further off, I'll pluck it down. [Exit.

SCENE IIII.—France. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter Lewis the French King, and Lady Bona, attended; the King takes his state. Then enter Queen Margaret, Prince Edward her son, and the Earl of Oxford.

K. Lew. Fair queen of England, worthy Margaret,
Sit down with us; it ill befits thy state,
[rising,
And birth, that thou should'st stand, while Lewis
Have both sits.

Q. Mar. No mighty king of France; now Margaret
Must strike her sail, and learn awhile to serve,
Where kings command. I was, I must confess,
Great Albion's queen in former golden days:
But now mischance hath trod my title down,
And with dishonour laid me on the ground;
Where I must take like seat unto my fortune,
And to my humble seat conform myself.
K. Lew. Why, says the fair queen, wherein springs this deep despair?
Q. Mar. From such a cause as fills mine eyes with tears,
And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in cares.

K. Lew. Whate'er it be, be thou still like thyself,
And sit thee by our side: yield not thy neck
So bethe by kin.

To fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless mind
Still ride in triumph over all mischance.
Be plain, queen Margaret, and tell thy grief;
It shall be eas'd, if France can yield relief.
Q. Mar. Those gracious words revive my drooping thoughts,
And give my tongue-tied sorrows leave to speak.
Now, therefore, be it known to noble Lewis,—
That Henry, sole possessor of my love,
Is, of a king, become a banish'd man,
And forc'd to live in Scotland a forlorn;
While proud ambitious Edward, duke of York,
Usurps the regal title, and the west
Of England's true-anointed lawful king.
This is the cause, that I, poor Margaret,—
With this my son, prince Edward, my heir,—
Am come, to crave thy just and lawful aid;
And, if thou hast a heart, or an unkind heart,
Scotland hath will to help, but cannot help;
Our people and our peers are both misled,
Our treasure seiz'd, our soldiers put to flight;
And, as thou seest, ourselves in heavy plight.
K. Lew. Renowned queen, with patience calm
the storm,
While we bethink a means to break it off.
Q. Mar. To more we stay, the stronger grows our foe.

K. Lew. The more I stay, the more I'll succour
thee.
Q. Mar. To more, but impatience waiteth on true sorrow;
And see, where comes the breeder of my sorrow.

Enter Warwick, attended.

K. Lew. What's he, approacheth boldly to our presence?

Q. Mar. Our earl of Warwick, Edward's greatest friend.

K. Lew. How come, brave Warwick! What brings thee to France?

[Descending from his state. Queen
Margaret rises.

Q. Mar. Ay, now begins a storm to rise;
For this is he, that moves both wind and tide.
War. From worthy Edward, king of Albion,
My lord and sovereign, and thy vowed friend.
I come,—in kindness and unfeigned love,—
First, to do greetings to thy royal person;
And, then, to crave a league of amity:
And, lastly, to confirm that amity
With mutual knot, if thou wouldest so grant
That virtuous lady Bona, thy fair sister,
To England's king in lawful marriage.

Q. Mar. If that go forward, Henry's hope is done.
War. And, gracious madam, [to Bona.] In our keen behalf,
I am commanded, with your leave and favour,
Humbly to kiss your hand, and with my tongue
To tell the passion of my sovereign's heart;
Where faith, late entering at his heedful ears,
Therewith the shyer hand, and so the image, and so the voice. Q. Mar. King Lewis,—and lady Bona, hear me speak,
Before you answer Warwick. His demand
Springs not from Edward's well-mean'd honest love,
But from deceit, bred by necessity;
For how can tyrants safely govern home,
Unless abroad they purchase great alliance?
To prove him tyrant, this reason may suffice.—
That Henry liveth still: but were he dead,
Yet here prince Edward stands, king Henry's son.
Look therefore, Lewis, that by this league and maneuver You draw not on thy danger and dishonour.
For though usurpers sway the rule a while,
Yet heavens are just, and time suppresseth wrongs.
War. Injuries Margaret! And why not queen?
War. Because thy father Henry did usurp;
And thou more art prince, than she is queen.
Oxff. Why, Warwick, disannuls great John of Gaunt,
Which did subdue the greatest part of Spain.
And, after John of Gaunt, Henry the Fourth,
Whose wisdom was a mirror to the world.
And, after that wise prince, Henry the Fifth,
Who by his prowess conquered all France.
From these our Henry lineally descends.
War. Oxford, how hap it, in this smooth discourse,
You told not, how Henry the Sixth hath lost
All that which Henry the Fifth had gotten?
Methinks, these peers of France should smile at
that.
But for the rest,— You tell a pedigree
If threescore and two years, a silly time to make prescription for a kingdom's worth.
Oxff. Why, Warwick, cannot they speak against thy liege,
Whom thou observ'st thirty and six years,
And not bewray thy treason with a blush?
War. True; and that did ever render the right,
Now buckler falsehood with a pedigree.
For shame, leave Henry, and call Edward king.
Oxff. Call him my king, by whose injuries doom
My elder brother, the lord Aubrey Vere,
Was done to death? and more than so, my father,
Even in the downfall of his mellow'd years,
When nature brought him to the door of death;
No, Warwick; no; while life uphold this arm,
This arm uphold the house of Lancaster.
War. And I the house of York.
K. Lew. Queen Margaret, prince Edward, and Oxford, Vouchsafe, at our request, to stand aside,
While I use further conference with Warwick.
Q. Mar. Heaven grant, that Warwick's words be with him not:
[Emerging with the Prince and Oxford.
K. Lew. Now, Warwick, tell me, even upon thy conscience,
Is Edward thy true king? for I were loath,
To that degree of greatness that were not lawful chosen.
War. Thereon I pawn my credit and mine honours.
K. Lew. But is he gracious in the people's eye?
War. True; and more, that Henry was unfortunate.
K. Lew. Then further,— all dissembling set aside,
Tell me for truth the measure of his love
Unto our sister Bona.
War. Such it seems.
K. Lew. It may be seen a monarch like himself.
Myself have often heard him say, and swear,—
That this his love was an eternal plant;
Whereof the root was fix'd in virtue's ground,
The leaves of compassion, and the fruit of love;
Exempt from envy, but not from disdain
Unless the lady Bona quit his pain.
K. Lew. Now, sister, let us hear your firm seat
Bona. Your grant, or your denial, shall be mine:—
Yet I confess, [to War.] that often ere this day,
When we have heard his majesty's desert recounted,
Mine ears hath tempted judgment to desire.
K. Lew. Then, Warwick, thus,— Our sister shall be Edward's:
And more northward shall articles be drawn
Touching the levies that your king must make,
Which with her dewry shall be countersigned:—
Draw near, queen Margaret, and be a witness,
That Bona shall be wife to the English king.
Prince. To Edward, but not to the English king.
Q. Mar. Deceitful Warwick! it was thy device
But to make sure how to make sure with us.
Before thy coming Lewis was Henry's friend.
K. Lew. And still is friend to him and Margaret;
But if his little to the crown be weak,
As may appear by Edward's good success,
Then is but reason, that I be released;
From giving aid, which late I promised.
And swear you yourself, our goddess queen,
You have a father able to maintain you;
And better were, you troubled him than France.
Q. Mar. Peace, impudent and shameless Warwick, peace;
Proud settler and puller down of kings!
I will not hence, till with my talk and tears,
Both full of truth, I make king Lewis behold
Thy silly consequence, and thy lord's false love;
For both of you are birds of sel'ish feather.
[Here a storm and tempest.
A group around within.
K. Lew. Warwick, this is some post to us, or there.
Enter a Messenger.
Mess. My lord ambassador, these letters are for
you.
Not from our brother, marquis Montague.
From these our king unto your majesty:—
And, madam, these for you; from whom, I know not.
It is my Margaret. They all read their letters.
Oxff. I like it well, that our fair queen and maids.
Smiles at her words, while Warwick frowns at his.
Prince. Say, mark, how Lewis stamps as he were nettled:
I hope, all's for the best.
K. Lew. Warwick, what are thy news? and yours, fair queen?
Q. Mar. Mine and yours, such as all my heart with un boped joys.
War. Mine, full of sorrow and heart's disconstement.
K. Lew. What is your king married the lady
Grey?
And now, to soothe your fury and his,
Sends me a paper to persuade me patience.
Is this the alliance that he seeks in France?
Dare he presume to scorn us in this manner?
Q. Mar. I told you majesty as much before:
This proveth Edward's love, and Warwick's ho
nour.
War. King Lewis, I here protest,— in sight of heaven,
And by the hope I have of heavenly bliss,—
That I came near from this misdeed of Edward's;
No more my king, for he dishonours me;
But most himself, if he could see his shame.—
Did I forget, that by the house of York,
My father came untimely to his death?
Did I let pass the abuse done to my niece?
Did I impale him with the regal crown?
Did I put Henry from his native right?
And am I guerdon'd at the last with shame?
Shame on himself: for my desert is honour;
And to repair my honour lost for him,
I here renounce him, and return to Henry:
My noble queen, let former grudges pass,
And henceforth I am thy true retainers.
I will revenge his wrong to lady Bona,
And replant Henry in his former state.
Q. Mar. Warwick, these words have turn'd my heart:
And I forgive and quite forget old faults,
And joy, that thou becom'est Henry's friend.
War. So much his friend, ay, his unfeigned friend;
That, if king Lewis vouche secure to furnish us
With some few bands of chosen soldiers;
I'll undertake to land them on our coast,
And force the tyrant from his seat by war.
'Tis not his new-made bride shall succour him:
And as for Clarence,—as my letters tell me,
He's very likely now to fall from him;
For match him more for want of hast than honour,
Or than for strength and safety of our country.
Bon. Dear brother, how shall Bona be reveng'd,
But by thy help to this distressed queen?
Q. Mar. Renowned prince, how shall poor Henry live
Unless thou rescue him from foul despair?
Bon. My quarrel and this English queen's are one.
War. And mine, fair lady Bona, joins with yours.
K. Len. And mine with hers, and thine, and Margaret's.
Therefore, at last, I firmly am resolv'd,
What shall have; [Exit Mess.]
Q. Mar. Let me give humble thanks for all at once.
K. Len. Then England's messenger, return in haste;
And tell false Edward, thy supposed king,—
That Lewis of France is sending over maskers,
To revel with him and his new bride:
Thou seest what's past, go fear thy king withal.
Bon. Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly,
I'll wear the willow garland for his sake.
Q. Mar. Tell him, My mourning weeds are laid aside,
And I am ready to put armour on.
War. Tell him from me, That he hath done me wrong:
And these tears I'll uncrown him, ere't be long.
There's thy reward; be gone. [Exit Mess.
K. Len. But, Warwick, thou, and Oxford, with five thousand men,
Shall cross the seas, and bid false Edward battle:
And, as occasion serves, this noble queen
And prince shall follow with a fresh supply.
Yet, ete thou go, but answer me one doubt;—
What shall have we of thy firm loyalty?
War. This shall assure my constant loyalty,—
That if our queen and this young prince agree,
I'll join mine eldest daughter and my joy,
To him forthwith in holy wedlock bands.
Q. Mar. Yes, I agree, and thank you for your motion—
Son Edward, she is fair and virtuous,
Therefore delay not, give thy hand to Warwick;—
And, with thy hand, thy faith irrevocable,
That only Warwick's daughter shall be thine.
Prince. Yes, I accept her, for she well deserves it;
And here, to pledge my vow, I give my hand.
[He gives his hand to Warwick.
K. Len. Why stay we now? These soldiers shall be levied.
And thou, lord Bourbon, our high admiral,
Shall waft them over with our royal fleet.—
I long, till Edward fall by war's mischance,
For mocking marriage with a dame of France.
[Exit all but Warwick.
War. I came from Edward as ambassador,
But I return his sworn and mortal foe;
Matter of marriage was the charge he gave me,
And force the tyrant that I am his demand.
Had he none else to make a State, but me?
Then none but I shall turn his jest to sorrow.
I was the chief that ral'd him to the crown,
And I'll be chief to bring him down again.
Not that I pity Henry's misery,
But seek revenge on Edward's mockery. [Exit.}

ACT IV.

Enter Gloster, Clarence, Somerset, Montague, and others.

Glo. Now tell me, brother Clarence, what think you
Of this new marriage with the lady Grey?
Hath not our brother made a worthy choice?
Clar. Alas, you know, 'tis far from hence to France;
How could he stay till Warwick made return?
Som. My lords, forbear this talk; here comes the king.

Flourish. Enter King Edward, attended; Lady Grey, as Queen; Pembroke, Stafford, Hastings, and others.

Glo. And his well-chosen bride.
Clar. I mind to tell him plainly what I think.
K. Edw. Now, brother of Clarence, how like you our choice,
That you stand pensive, as half miscantion?
Clar. As well as Lewis of France, or the earl of Warwick;
Which are so weak of courage, and in judgment,
That they'll make no offence at our abuse.
K. Edw. Suppose they take offence without a cause.
They are but Lewis and Warwick; I am Edward,
Your king and Warwick's, and must have my will.
Glo. And you shall have your will, because our king
Yet hast a marriage seldom proveth well.
K. Edw. Yea, brother Richard, are you offended too?
Glo. Not I,
No; God forbid that I should wish them sever'd
Whom God hath join'd together: ay, and 'twere pity,
To sunder them that yoke so well together.
K. Edw. Setting your scorns, and your mislike, aside,
Tell me some reason, why the lady Grey
Should not become my wife, and England's queen.
And you too, Somerset, and Montague,
Speak freely what you think.
Clar. Then this is my opinion,—that king Lewis
 Becomes your enemy, for mocking him.
About the marriage of the lady Bona.
Glo. Aye, Warwick, doing what you gave in charge,
Is now dishonoured by this new marriage.
K. Edw. What, if both Lewis and Warwick be
And the lady grey?
By such invention as I can devise?
Mont. Yet to have join'd with France in such alliance,
Would more have strengthen'd this our commonwealth
'Gainst foreign storms, than any home-bred marriage.

Hast. Why, knows not Montague, that of itself
England is safe, if true within itself?
Mont. Yes; but the safer, when it is back'd with France.
Hast. Is this better using France, than trusting France?
Let us be back'd with God, and with the seas,
Which he hath given for fence Impregnable,
And with their helps only defend ourselves;
In them, and in ourselves, our safety lies.
Clar. For this one speech, lord Hastings well deserves
To have the heir of the lord Hungerford.
K. Edw. Ay, what of that? it was my will, and grant;
And, for this once, my will shall stand for law.
Glo. And yet, methinks, your grace hath not done well,
To give the heir and daughter of lord Scales
Unto the brother of your losing bride;
She better would have fitted me, or Clarence:
But in your bride you bury brotherhood.
Clar. Or else you would not have bestow'd the heir

Of the lord Bonville on your new wife's son.
And leave your brothers to go speed elsewhere.
K. Edw. Also, peace Clarence; is it for a wife,
That the present malcontent? I will provide thee.
Clar. In choosing for yourself, you show'd your judgment;
Which being shallow, you shall give me leave
To play the broker in mine own behalf;
And, to that end, I shortly mind to leave you.
K. Edw. Leave me, or tarry, Edward will be
king,
And not be tied unto his brother's will.
Q. ELIA. My lords, before it please'd his majesty to raise my state to title of a queen,
Do me but right, and you must all confess
That I was not ignoble of descent,
And meaner than myself have had like fortune.
But as this title honours me and mine,
So your dislikes, to whom I would be pleasing,
Do close my joys with danger and with sorrow.
K. Edw. Or love, forbear to fawn upon their frowns:
What danger, or what sorrow can befal thee,
So long as Edward is thy constant friend,
And, as a subject, whom thou must obey?
Nay, whom they shall obey, and love thee too,
Unless they seek for hatred at my hands:
Which if they do, yet will I keep thee safe,
And they shall feel the vengeance of my wrath.
Glo. I hear, yet say not much, but think the most.

[Aside.]

Enter a Messenger.

K. Edw. Now, messenger, what letters, or what news,
From France?
Mess. My sovereign liege, no letters: and few words,
But much as I, without your special pardon, Dare not relate. K. Edw. Go so, we pardon thee: therefore, in brief,
Tell me their words as near as thou canst guess
them.
What answer makes king Lewis unto our letters?
Mess. At my depart, these were his very words:
Go tell false Edward, thy supposed king—
That Lewis of France is sending over maskers,
To revel with him and his new bride.
K. Edw. Is Lewis so brave? believe, he thinks me Henry.
But what said lady Bona to my marriage?
Mess. These were her words, uttered with mild disdain:
Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widow shortly,
I'll wear the widow garland for his sake.
K. Edw. I blame not her, she could say little less;
She had the wrong. But what said Henry's queen?
For I have heard that she was there in place.
Mess. Tell him, quoth she, my mourning weeds are done,
And I am ready to put armour on.
K. Edw. Believe, she minds to play the Amazon.
But what said Warwick to these injuries?
Mess. He showed more incensed against your majesty
Than all the rest, discharg'd me with these words:
Tell him, from me, that he hath done me wrong,
And therefore I will unwear him, ere he be long.
K. Edw. Hal drunk the traitor breathe out so profound words?
Well, I will arm me, being thus forewarn'd:
The lady shall have wars, and pay for their presum-
tion.
But say, is Warwick friends with Margaret?

Mess. Ay, gracious sovereign; they are so link'd in friendship,
That young prince Edward marries Warwick's dughter.
Clar. O, the elder; Clarence will have the younger.
Now, brother king, farewell, and sit you fast,
For I will hence to Warwick's other daughter;
That she which holds the kingdom in her hand,
I may not prove inferior to yourself:
You, that love me and Warwick, follow me.
[Exit Clarence, and Somerset follow.]

Glo. Not I. My thoughts aim at a further matter: I
Stay not for love of Edward, but the crown. [Aside.
K. Edw. Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwick;
Yet am I arm'd against the worst can happen;
And haste is needful in this desperate case—
Pembroke, and Stafford, you in our behalf
Go levy men, and make prepare for war.
They are already, or quickly will be landed:
Myself in person will straightway follow you.
[Exeunt Pembroke and Stafford.
But, ere I go, Hastings,—and Montague,—
Receive me, lords. You twain, of all the rest,
Are next to Warwick, by blood, and by alliance
Tell me, if you love Warwick more than me?
If it be so, then both depart to him;
I rather wish you foes, than hollow friends;
For if you stand by him, and true obedience
Give me assurance with some friendly vow,
That I may never have you in suspect.
Mont. No God help Montague, as he proves true Hast. And Hastings, as he favours Edward's cause!
K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, will you stand by us?
Glo. Ay, in despite of all that shall withstand us. K. Edw. Why so? then am I sure of victory.
Now therefore let us hence; and lose no hour,
Till we meet Warwick with his foreign power.

SCENE III.—A Plain in Warwickshire.

Enter Warwick and Oxford, with French and other Forces.
War. Trust me, my lord, all bitherto goes well;
The common people by numbers swarm to us.

Enter Clarence and Somerset.
But, see, where Somerset and Clarence come;—
Speak suddenly, my lords, are we all friends?
Clar. Fear not that, my lord.
War. Then, gentle Clarence, welcome unto
Warwick!—And welcome, Somerset:—I hold it cowardice,
To rest mistrustful where a noble heart
Hath paw'd an open hand in sign of love.
Else might I think, that Clarence, Edward's brother,
Were but a feldged friend to our proceedings;
But welcome, Clarence; my daughter shall be thine.
And now what rests, but, in night's coverture,
Thy brother being careless encamp'd,
His soldiers lurking in the towns about,
And but attended by a simple guard.
We may surprise and take him at our pleasure.
Our scouts have found the adventure very easy:
That as Ulysses, and stout Diomede,
With sight and monarch stole to Rheus' tents,
That from thence the Thracian fatal steeds:
So we, well covered with the night's black mantle.
At unawares may best down Edward's guard,
And seem well:—I say not.—Slaughter him,
For I intend but only to surprise him.—
You, that will follow me to this attempt,
Appraise the name of Henry, with your leader.

[They all cry Henry]
SCENE III. | Edward's Camp near Warwick.

Enter certain Watchmen, to guard the King's tent.

1 Watch. Come on, my masters, each man take his stand;
The king, by this, is set him down to sleep.
2 Watch. What, will he not to bed?
1 Watch. Why, no: for he hath made a solemn
Never to lie and take his natural rest,
Till Warwick be, or himself, be quite suppress'd.
2 Watch. To-morrow then, belike, shall be the

That with the king here resteth in his tent?

3 Watch. O, is it so? But why commands the king,
That his chief followers lodge in towns about him,
While he himself in the open field?
8 Watch. 'Tis the more honour, because more dangerous.
3 Watch. Ay; but give me worship, and quietness,
I like it better than a dajgered man.
If Warwick knew in what estate he stands,
'Tis to be doubted, he would waken him.
1 Watch. Unless our halberds did shut up his passage.
2 Watch. Ay: wherefore else guard we his royal tent,
But to defend his person from night-foes?

Enter Warwick, Clarence, Oxford, Somerset, and Forces.

He shall here find his friends, with horse and men, To set him free from his captivity.

Enter King Edward, and a Huntsman.

Hunt. This way, my lord; for this way lies the game.
K. Edw. Nay, this way, man; see, where the huntsmen stand.— Now, brother of Gloster, lord Hastings, and the rest, Stand you thus close, to steal the bishop's deer? Glo. Brother, the time and case requireth haste; Your horse stands ready at the park corner. K. Edw. But whither shall we then? Hast. To Lynn, my lord; and ship from thence to Flanders.

Glo. We'll guess'd, believe me; for that was my meaning.
K. Edw. Stanley, I will requite thy forwardness.
Glo. But wherefore stay we? 'Is no time to talk. K. Edw. Huntsman, what say'st thou? wilt thou go along?
Hunt. Better do so, than tarry and he hang'd.
Glo. Come then, away; let's have no more ado.
K. Edw. Bishop, farewell: shield thee from Warwick'srown:
And pray that I may reposesthe crown. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—A Room in the Tower.

Enter King Henry, Clarence, Warwick, Somerset, young Richmond, Oxford, Montague, Lieutenant of the Tower, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Master lieutenant, now that God and friends Have shaken Edward from the regal seat, And turn'd my captive state to liberty, My fear to hope, my sorrows unto joys; At our enlargement what are thy due fees? Lies. Subjects may challenge nothing of their sovereigns; But, if an humble prayer may prevail, I then crave pardon of your majesty.
K. Hen. For what, lieutenant? for well using me?

Nay be thou sure, I'll well requite thy kindness, For that it made my imprisonment a pleasure: Ay, such a pleasure as incaged birds Long for when, after many stormy thoughts, At last, by notes of household harmony, They quite forget their loss of liberty.— But, Warwick, after God, thou set'st me free, And dost dissemble as though thou were free; He was the author, thou the instrument, Therefore, that I may conquer fortune's spite, By living low, where fortune cannot hurt me; And that the people of this blessed land May not be punish'd with my thwarting stars; Warwick, although my head still wear the crown, I here resign my government to thee, For thou art fortunate in all thy deeds.

War. Your grace hath still been fam'd for virtue; And now may seem as wise as virtuous, By spying, and avoiding, fortune's malice, For few men rightly temper with the stars: Yet in this one thing let me blame your grace, For choosing me, when Clarence is in place.

Clar. No, Warwick, thou art worthy of the sway, To whom the hearers, in thy nativity, Adjudge'd an olive branch, and laurel crown, As likely to be stiit for peace, and war; And therefore I yield thee my free consent.
War. And I choose Clarence only for protector. K. Hen. Warwick, and Clarence, give me back both my hands; Now join your hands, and, with your hands, your hearts, That no dissension hinder government: I make you both protectors of this land;

While I myself will lead a private life, And in devotion spend my latter days, To sin's rebuke, and my Creator's praise.
War. What answers Clarence to his sovereign's will?
Clar. That he consents, if Warwick yield consent; For on th' fortune I repose myself.
War. Why then, though loath, yet must I be content: We'll yoke together like a double shadow To Henry's body, and supply his place; I mean, in bearing weight of government, While he enjoys the honour, and his ease.
And, Clarence, now then it is time enough, Forthwith that Edward be pronouced a traitor, And all his lands and goods be confiscate.
Clar. What else? and that succession be determin'd.
War. Ay, therein Clarence shall not want his part.
K. Hen. But, with the first of all your chief affairs,
Let me entreat, (for I command no more,) That Margaret your queen, and my son Edward, He sent for, to return from France with speed: For, till I see them here, by doubtful fear My joy of liberty is half eclips'd. Clar. It shall be done, my sovereign, with all speed.
K. Hen. My lord of Somerset, what youth is this?
Of whom you seem to have so tender care?
Som. My liege, it is young Henry, earl of Richmond.

K. Hen. Come hither, England's hope: If secret powers [Leys his hand on his head. Suggest but truth to my divining thoughts, This pretty lad will prove our country's bliss.
His looks are full of peaceful majesty; His head by nature fram'd to wear a crown, His hand to wield a scepter; and himself Likely, in time, to bless a regal throne.
Make much of him, my lords; for this is he Must help you more than you are hurt by me.

Enter a Messenger.

War. What news, my friend?
Mess. That Edward is escaped from your broth-
And fled, as he hears since, to Burgundy.
War. Unsaussy news: But how made he es-
Mess. He was convey'd by Richard duke of Gloster,
And the lord Hastings, who attended him In secret ambush on the forest side, And from the bishop's huntsmen rescued him; For hunting was his daily exercise.
War. My brother was too careless of his charge. But let us hence, my sovereign, to provide A salve for any sore that may betide. [Exeunt King Henry, War. Clar. Lieut. and Attendants.

Som. My lord, I like not of this flight of Edward's For, doubtless, Burgundy will yield him help; And we shall have more wars, before't be long. As Henry's late pressing prophecy Did glad my heart, with hope of this young Rich-
So doth my heart misgave me, in these conflicts What may befall him, to his harm, and ours Therefore, lord Oxford, to prevent the worst, Fortwith we'll send him hence to Britannia. Till storms be past of civil enmity.
Oxf. Ay; for, if Edward reposesthe crown, 'Tis like, that Richmond with the rest shall down. Son. It shall be so; he shall to Britannia.
Came, therefore, let's about it speedily. [Exeunt.
SCENE VII.—Before York.

Enter King Edward, Gloster, Hastings, and Forces.

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, lord Hastings, and the rest; Yet thus far fortune maketh us amend, And says—that once more I shall interchange My wandering fate for Henry's regal crown. Well have we pass'd, and now repass'd the seas, And brought desired help from Burgundy: What then remains, we being thus arriv'd From RAVENSGURU haven before the gates of York, But that we enter, as into our dukedom? Glo. The gates made fast!—Brother, I like not this; For many men, that stumble at the threshold, Are well foretold—that danger lurks within. K. Edw. Tush, man! abdometes must not now affright us: By fair or foul means we must enter in, For either will our friends repair to us. Hast. My liege, I'll knock once more, to summon them.

Enter on the walls, the Mayor of York, and his brethren.

May. My lords, we were forewarned of your coming, And shut the gates for safety of ourselves; For now we owe allegiance unto Henry. K. Edw. But, master mayor, if Henry be your king, Yet Edward, at the least, is duke of York. May. True, my good lord; I know you for no less.

K. Edw. Why, and I challenge nothing but my dukedom; As being well content with that alone. Glo. But, when the fox hath once got in his nose, He'll soon find means to make the body follow. [Aside.

Hast. Why, master mayor, why stand you in a doubt? Open the gates, we are king Henry's friends.

May. Ay, say you so? the gates shall then be open'd. [Exit from above. Glo. A wise stout captain, and persuaded soon! Hast. The good old man would fain that all were well, So were not long of him: but, being enter'd, I doubt not, I, but we shall soon persuade Both him, and all his brothers, unto reason.

Re-enter the Mayor, and two Aldermen, below.

K. Edw. So, master mayor: these gates must not be shut, But in the night, or in the time of war. What! fear not, man, but yield me up the keys; For Edward will defend the town, and thee, And all those friends that dare to follow me. Drum. Enter Montgomery, and Forces, marching.

Glo. Brother, this is sir John Montgomery, Our trusty friend, unless I be deceiv'd.

K. Edw. Welcome, sir John! But why come you in arms? Mont. To help king Edward in his time of storm. As every loyal subject ought to do. K. Edw. Thanks, good Montgomery: But we now forget Our title to the crown; and only claim Our dukedom, till God please to send the rest. Mont. Then fare you well, for I will hence again; I came to serve a king; and not a duke,— Drummer, strike up, and let us march away. From thence march begun. K. Edw. Nay, stay, sir John, awhile; and we'll debate, By what safe means the crown may be recover'd.

Mont. What talk you of debating? in few words, If you'll not here proclaim yourself our king, I'll leave you to your fortune; and be gone, To keep them back that come to succour you: Why should we fight, if you pretend no title? Glo. Why, who translate, wherefore stand you on nice points? K. Edw. When we grow stronger, then we'll make our claim: Till then, we'll use wisdom to conceal our meaning. Hast. Away with scurpulous wit! now arms must rule. Glo. And fearless minds climb soonest unto the height. Brother, we will proclaim you out of hand; The brut thereof will bring you many friends. K. Edw. Then be it as you will: for 'tis my right, And Henry but usurps the diadem. Mont. Ay, now, my sovereign speaketh like himself; And now will I be Edward's champion. Hast. Sound, trumpet; Edward shall be here proclaimed! — Come, fellow-soldier, make thou proclamation. [Gives him a paper, Flourish.

Sold. [Reads.] Edward the Fourth, by the grace of God, king of England and France, and lord of Ireland, &c. Mont. And whosoever gannys Edward's By this I challenge him to single fight. [right, [Throws down his gauntlet.

All. Long live Edward the fourth! K. Edw. Thanks, brave Montgomery; — and thanks unto you all. If fortune serve me, I'll requite this kindness. Now, for this night, let's harbour here in York; And, when the morning sun shall raise his car Above the border of this horizon, We'll forward towards Warwick, and his mates; For, well I wot, that Henry is no soldier. Ah, foward Clarence!—how evil it beseemeth thee, To flatter Henry, and forsake thy brother! Yet, as we may, we'll meet both thee and War- wickshire; shall I march with thee? Come on, brave soldiers; doubt not of the day; And, that once gotten, doubt not of large pay. [Exit.

SCENE VIII.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, Warwick, Clarence, Mont- tague, Exeter, and Oxford.

War. What counsel, lords? Edward from Belisia, With hasty Germans, and blunt Hollanders, Hath pass'd in safety through the narrow seas, And with his troops doth march amain to London; And many giddy people flock to him. Orf. Let's levy men, and beat him back again. Clar. A little fire is quickly trodden out; Which, being suffer'd, rivers cannot quench. War. In Warwickshire I have true-hearted friends. Not mutinous in peace, yet bold in war; Those will I must up— and thou, son Clarence, Shalt stir, in Suffolk, Norfolk, and in Kent, The knight in England, and gentleme in to come with thee— Thou, brother Montague, in Buckingham, Northampton, and in Leicester-shire, shalt find Men well inclin'd to hear what thou command'st— And thou, brave Oxford, wondrous well belov'd, in Oxford, and shalt muster up thy friends,— My sovereign, with the loving-citizens,— Like to his island, girt in with the ocean, Or modest Dian, circled with her nymphs,— Shall rest in London, till we come to him. Fair lords, take leave, and stand not to reply.— Farewell, my sovereign. K. Hen. Farewell, my Hector, and my Troy's true hope. Clar. In sign of truth, I kiss your highness' hand. K. Hen. Well-minded Clarence, be thou fortunate! 8
Mont. Comfort, my lord;—and so I take my leave.

Oxf. And thus [kissing Henry's hand.] I seal my truth, and bid adieu.

K. Hen. Sweet Oxford, and my loving Montague, And all at once, once more a happy farewell.

War. Farewell, sweet lords; let's meet at Coventry.

[Exeunt War. Clar. Oxf. and Mont.]

K. Hen. Here at the palace will I rest a while. Cousin of Exeter, what thinks your lordship? Methinks, the power, that Edward hath in field, should not be able to enconter mine.

Exe. The doubt is, that he will seduce the rest. K. Hen. That's not my fear, my meed hath got me fame. I have not stop'd mine ears to their demands, Nor posted off their snits with slow delays; My pity hath been balm to heal their wounds, My mildness hath assay'd their swelling griefs, My mercy dry'd their water-flowing tears: I have not been desirous of their wealth, Nor much oppress'd them with great subsidies, Nor forward of revenge, though they much err'd; Then why should they love Edward more than me? No, Exeuter, these graces challenge grace: And, when the lion fawns upon the lamb, The lamb will never cease to follow him. [Shout within. A Lancaster! A Lancaster!

Exe. Hark, hark, my lord! what shouts are these?

Enter King Edward, Gloster, and Soldiers.

Edw. Seize on the shame-fac'd Henry, bear him hence.

And once again proclaim as king of England—

You are the fount, that makes small 'brooks to flow,

Now stops thy spring; my sea shall suck them dry,

And swell so much the higher by their ebb.—

Hence with him to the Tower; let him not speak.

[Exeunt some with King Henry.

And, lords, towards Coventry bend we our course,

Where peremptory Warwick now remains: The sun shines hot, and, if we use delay,

Cold-biting winter mars our hop'd-for hay.

Glo. Away betimes, before his forces join,

And take the great-grown traitor now aware:

Brave warriors, march amain towards Coventry.

[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Coventry.

Enter, upon the walls, Warwick, the Mayor of Coventry, two Messengers, and others.

War. Where is the post, that came from valiant Oxford?

How far hence is thy lord, mine honest fellow? 1 Mess. By this at Dunsmore, marching hitherward.

War. How far off is our brother Montague?— Where is the post that came from Montague? 2 Mess. By this at Daintree, with a puissant troop.

Enter Sir John Somerville.

War. Say, Somerville, what says my loving son? And, by thy guess, how nigh is Clarence now? Som. At Southam I did leave him with his forces And do expect him here some two hours hence. [Drum heard.

War. Then Clarence is at hand, I hear his drum. Som. It is not his, my lord; were Southam lies; The drum your honour hears, marcheth from Warwick.

War. Who should that be? belike, unlook'd-for friends.

Som. They are at hand, and you shall quickly know.

Drums. Enter King Edward, Gloster, and Forces, marching.

K. Edw. Go, trumpet, to the walls, and sound a parle.

Glo. See, how the surly Warwick mans the wall. War. A, nabbe side! is sportful Edward come? Where slept our scouts, or how are they seduced? That we could hear no news of his repair?

K. Edw. Now, Warwick, wilt thou ope the city gates,

Speak pleasant words, and humbly bend thy knee?— Call Edward—king, and at his hands beg mercy, And he shall pardon thee these outrages.

War. Nay, rather, wilt thou draw thy forces hence, Confess who set thee up and pluck'd thee down?— Call Warwick—patron, and be penitent, And thou shalt still remain the duke of York.

Glo. I thought, at least, he would have said— the king?

Or did he make the jest against his will? War. Is not a dukedom, sir, a goodly gift? Glo. Ay, by my faith, for a poor earl to give; I'll do this service for so good a gift. War. 'Twas I, that gave the kingdom to thy brother.

K. Edw. Why, then, 'tis mine, if but by War- Wick's gift.

War. Thou art no Atlas for so great a weight: And, weaking, Warwick takes his gift again; And Henry is my king, Warwick his subject.

K. Edw. But Warwick's king is Edward's prisoner:

And, gallant Warwick, do but answer this,— What is the body when the head is off? Glo. Thy head, my lord, Warwick had no more forecast, But, whiles he thought to steal the single ten, The king was sily finger'd from the deck! You left poor Henry at the bishop's palace, And, ten to one, you'll meet him in the Tower.

K. Edw. Ths even so; yet you are Warwick still.

Glo. Come, Warwick, take the time, kneel down. Nay, when? strike now, or else the iron cools. War. I had rather chop this hand off at a blow, And with the other fling it at thy face, Than bear so low a sail, to strike to thee. K. Edw. Sall, how thou canst, have wind and tide thy friend! This hand, fast wound about thy coal-black hair, Shall, whiles the head is warm, and new cut off, Write in the dust this sentence with thy blood,— Wind-changing! Warwick now can change no more. Enter Oxford, with drum and colours.

Glo. The gates are open, let us enter too. K. Edw. So other foes may set upon our hawks. Stand we in good array; for they, no doubt, Will issue out again, and hide us battle; If not, the city being but of small defence, We'll quickly rouse the traitors in the same. War. O, welcome, Oxford! for we want thy help.

Enter Montague, with drum and colours.

Mont. Montague, Montague, for Lancaster! [He and his Forces enter the City.

Glo. Thou and thy brother both shall buy this Even with the dearest blood your bodies bear. K. Edw. The harder match'd, the greater victory: My mind presageth happy gain, and conquest.
Enter Somerset, with drum and colours.

Som. Somerset, Somerset, for Lancaster!

[He and his Forces enter the City.

Glo. Two of the name, both of a brother's love—
Have sold their lives unto the house of York:
And thou shalt be the third, if this sword hold.

Enter Clarence, with drum and colours.

War. And lo, where George of Clarence sweeps along,
Of force enough to bid his brother battle;
With whom an upright zeal to right prevails,
More than the nature of a brother's love—
Come, Clarence, come; thou wilt, if Warwick calls.

Clar. Father of Warwick, know you what this means—

[Taking the red rose out of his cap.

Look here, I throw my infant at thee:
I will not ruinate my father's house,
Who gave his blood to lime the stones together,
And set up Lancaster. Why, thou'rt wou, Warwick.

That Clarence is so harsh, so blunt, unnatural,
To bend the fatal instruments of war
Against his brother and his lawful king?
Perhaps thou wilt object my holy love—
To keep that oath, were more impety
Than Jeptha's, when he sacrificed his daughter.
I am so sorry for my trespass made,
That to deserve well at my brother's hands,
I here proclaim myself thy mortal foe;
With resolution, wheresoe'er I meet thee,
(As I will meet thee, if thou stir abroad,) To plague thee for thy foul misleading me.
And so, proud-hearted Warwick, I defy thee,
And to my brother turn my blushing cheeks.—
Pardon me, Edward, I will make amends;
And, Richard, do not frown upon my faults,
For I will henceforth be hence unstained.
K. Edm. Now welcome more, and ten times more belov'd—
Than if thou never deserv'd our hate.
Glo. Welcome, good Clarence; this is brother-like.

War. O passing traitor, perjur'd, and unjust!
K. Edm. What, Warwick, wilt thou leave the own, and fight?

Or shall we beat the stones about thine ears?
War. Alas, I am not coopt here for defence:
I will away towards Barnet presently,
And bid the battle, Edward, in thy'start.
K. Edm. Yes, Warwick, Edward dares, and leads the way:—
Lords, to the field; Saint George, and victory.

[March. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Field of Battle near Barnet.

Alarums, and Excursions. Enter King Edward, bringing in Warwick wounded.

K. Edm. So, lie thou there; die thou, and die our fear;
For Warwick was a hug, that fear'd us all—
Now, Montague, sit fast; I seek for thee,
That Warwick's bones may keep thine company.

[Exit.

War. Ah, who is nigh! come to me, friend or foe, And tell me, who is victor, York, or Warwick?
Why ask I that? my mangled body shows,
My blood, my want of strength, my sick heart shows,
That I must yield my body to the earth,
And, by my fall, the conquest to my foe,
Thus yields the cedar to the axe's edge,
Whose arms gave shelter to the princely eagle
Under whose shade the ramping lion slept;
Whose top-branch overpeer'd the joy'st spring tree,
And kept low shrubs from winter's powerful wind.
These eyes, that now are dimm'd with death's black veil,
Have been as piercing as the mid-day sun,
To search the secret treasons of the world:
The wrinkles in my brows, now fill'd with blood,
Were like'n'd oft to kindly sephulches;
For who liv'd king, but I could dig his grave?
And when that dusk smile, when Warwick bent his brow?
Lo, now my glory smeared in dust and blood!
My parks, my walks, my manors that I had,
Even now forsake me; and of all my lands,
Is nothing left me, but my body's length!
Why, what is pomp, rule, reign, but earth and dust?
And, live we how we can, yet die we must.

Enter Oxford and Somerset.

Som. Ah, Warwick, Warwick! wert thou as we are,
We might recover all our loss again!
The queen from France hath brought a puissant power;
Even now we heard the news: Ah, could'st thou fly!

War. Why, then I would not fly.—Ah, Montague,
If you be there, sweet brother, take my hand,
And with thy lips keep in my soul a while!
Thou lovedst me not; for, brother, if thou didst,
Thy tears would wash this cold congealed blood,
That gies my lips, and will not let me speak.
Come quickly, Montague, or I am dead.

Som. Ah, Warwick, Montague hath breath'd his last;
And to the latest gasp, cried out for Warwick,
And said—Commend me to your valiant brother.
And more;—thy soul hath sail'd, and more he spoke,
Which sounded like a cannon in a vault,
That might not be distinguished; but, at last,
I well might hear deliver'd with a groan,—
O, farewell, Warwick!—

Warwick. Sweet rest to his soul!—
Fly, lords, and save yourselves; for Warwick bids
You all farewell, to meet again in heaven. [Dies.

[Exeunt bearing off Warwick's body.

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Field.

Flourish. Enter King Edward, in triumph; with Clarence, Gloster, and the rest.

K. Edm. Thus far our fortune keeps an upward course,
And we are grac'd with wreaths of victory.
But, in the midst of this bright-shining day,
I spy a black suspicious, threatening cloud,
That will encounter with our glorious sun,
Ere he attain his easy western bed:
I mean, my lords,—those powers, that the queen
Hath rais'd in Galia, have arriv'd our coast,
And, as we hear, march on to fight with us.

Clar. A little gale will soon disperse that cloud,
And blow it to the source from whence it came:
Thy very beams will dry those vapours up;
For every cloud engenders not a storm.

Glo. The queen is val'd thirty thousand strong,
And Somerset, with Oxford, fled to her;
If she have time to breathe, be well assur'd,
Her faction will be full as strong as ours.

K. Edm. We are advertised by our loving friends,
That they do hold their course toward Tewksbury;
We having now the best at Barnet field,
Will shiv'r straight, For willingness rides way:
And, as we march, our strength will be augmented
In every county as we go along.—
Strike up the drum; cry—Courage! and away.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Plains near Tewksbury.

March. Enter Queen Margaret, Prince Edward,

Q. Mar. Great lords, wise men neither sit and wall their loss,
THIRD PART OF

Act 5.

But cheerly seek how to redress their harms. What though the mast be now blown over-board, The cable broke, the holding chain is lost, And half our sailors swallowed in the flood; Yet lives our pilot still: Is't meet, that he Should leave the helm, and like a fearful lad, With tearful eyes add water to the sea, And give more strength to that which hath too much; Whiles, in his moan, the ship splits on the rock, Which industry and courage might have saved? Ah, what a shame! ah, what a tenant are this! Say, Warwick was our anchor; What of that? And Montague our top-mast; What of him? Our laughter'd friends the tackles; What of these? Why, Is't not Oxford here another anchor? And Somerset another goodly mast? The friends of France our shrouds and tacklest And, though unskilful, why not Ned and I For once allow'd the skilful pilot's charge? We will not from the helm, to sit and weep; But keep our course, though the rough wind say—no,

From shelves and rocks that threaten us with wreck. As good to chide the waves, as speak them fair. And what is Edward, but a ruthless sea? What Clarence, but a quicksand of deceit? And Henry, but a suggested fatal? All these the enemies to our poor bark. Say, you can swim; alas, 'tis but a while: Tread on the sand; why there you quickly sink: Bestride the rock; the tide will wash you off; Or else you famish, that's a thricefold death. This speak I, lords, to let you understand, In case some one of you would fly from us, That there's hope for mercy with the brothers, More than with ruthless waves, with sands and rocks. Why, courage, then! what cannot be avoided, 'Twere childish weakness to lament, or fear. Prince. Methinks, a woman of this valiant spirit Should, if a coward heard her speak these words, Infuse his breast with magnanimity, And make him, naked, foil a man at arms. I speak not this, as doubting any here: For, did I but suspect a fearful man, He should have leave to go away betimes; Lest, in our need, he might infect another, And make him of like spirit to him lost, If any such be here, as God forbid! Let him depart, before we need his help. Oxfr. Women and children of so high a courage! And warriors faint! why, 'twere perpetual shame— O, brave Prince George! the famous grandfather! Doth live again in thee; Long may'st thou live, To bear his image, and renew his glories! Som. And he that will not fight for such a hope, Go home to bed, and, like the owl by day, If he arise, be mock'd and wonder'd at. Q. Mar. Thanks, gentle Somerset;—sweet Oxfr, thanks. Prince. And take his thanks, that yet hath nothing else. Enter a Messenger. Mess. Prepare you, lords, for Edward is at hand, Ready to fight; therefore be resolute. Oxfr. I thought them hence: it is not ordinary To haste thus fast, to find us unprovided. Som. But he's deceiv'd; we are in readiness. Q. Mar. This cheers my heart, to see your forwardness. Oxfr. Here pitch our battle; hence we will not budge.

March. Enter, at a distance, King Edward, Clarence, Gloster, and Forces. K. Edw. Brave followers, yonder stands the thorny wood,

Which, by the hearest's assistance, and your strength, Must be the root be hewn up yet ere night. I need not add more fuel to your fire, For, well I wot, ye blaze to burn them out: Give signal to the fight, and to it, lords. Q. Mar. I am a knight, and gentlemen, what I should say My tears gainsey; for every word I speak, Ye see, I drink the water of mine eyes. Therefore, no more but this:—Henry, your sove reign. Is prisoner to the foe; his state usurp'd, His realm a slaughterhouse, his subjects slain, His states cancel'd, and his treasure spent; And yonder is the wolf, that makes this spoil. You fight in justice; then, in God's name, lords, Be valiant, and give signal to the fight. [Exeunt both armies.

SCENE V.—Another Part of the same.

Alarums: Excursions: and afterwards a retreat. Then, enter King Edward, Clarence, Gloster, and Forces: with Queen Margaret, Oxford, and Somerset and others. K. Edw. Now, here a period of tumultuous broils. Away with Oxford to Hamnet's castle straight: For Somerset, off with his guilty head. Go, new expedients, I will not hear them speak. Oxf. For my part, I'll not trouble thee with words. Som. Nor I, but stoop with patience to thy fortune. [Exeunt Oxford and Somerset, guarded. Q. Mar. So part we sadly in this troublous world, To meet with joy in sweet Jerusalem. K. Edw. 'Tis proclamation made,—that, who finds Edward, Shall have a high reward, and he his life. G1. It is: and lo, where youthful Edward comes. Enter Soldiers, with Prince Edward. K. Edw. Bring forth the gallant, let us hear him speak. What! can so young a thorn begin to prick? Edward, what satisfaction canst thou make, For bearing arms, for stirring up my subjects, And an assailable thou hast turn'd me to? Prince. Speak like a subject, proud ambitious York! Suppose, that I am now my father's mouth; Resign thy chair, and, where I stand, kneel thou, Whilst I pronounce the self-same words to thee, Which, traitor, thou would'st have me answer to. Q. Mar. Ah, that thy father had been so resold! Glo. That thou might'st still have worn the peri-coat, And ne'er have stol'n the breech from Lancaster. Prince. Let Edward's fable in a winter's night; His curtew riddles sort not with this place. G1. By heaven, brat, I'll plague you for that word. Q. Mar. Ay, thou wast born to be a plague to thy father. Glo. For God's sake, take away this captive scold. Prince. Nay, take away this scolding cuck-oof-back mother. K. Edw. Peace, wilful boy, or I will charm your tongue. Clar. Untutor'd lad, thou art too misapert. Prince. I know my duty, you are so undutiful: Lascivious Edward,—and thou perjur'd George,— And thou misshapen Dick,— I tell ye all, I am your better, traitors as ye are:— And thou usurp'st my father's right and mine. K. Edw. Take that, the likeness of this railer here. [Stabs him.
K. Hen. So flies the reckless shepherd from the wolf:
So first the harmless sheep doth yield his fleece,
And next his throat unto the butcher's knife.—

What scene of death hath Roscius now to act?
Glo. Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind;
The thief doth fear each bush an officer.
K. Hen. The bird, that hath been limed in a bush,
With trembling wings misdoubteth every bush:
And I, the hapless male to one sweet bird,
Have now the fatal object in my eye,
Where my poor young was lim'd, was caught, and killed.

Glo. Why, what a peevish fool was that of Crete,
That taught his son the office of a foul?
And yet, for all his wings, the fool was drown'd.
K. Hen. A Bolingbroke, a prodigious boy, I see;
Thy father, Minos, that denied our course;
The sun, that sear'd the wings of my sweet boy,
Thy brother Edward; and thyself, the sea,
Whose evervng guilt did swallow up his life.
Ah, kill me with thy weapon, not with words!
My breast can better brook thy dagger's point,
Than can my ears that tragick history.—
But wherefore dost thou come? let for my life?
Glo. Think'st thou, I am an executioner?
K. Hen. A persecutor, I am sure, thou art;
If murdering innocents be executing,
Then thou art an execrable butcher.
Glo. Thy son I kill'd for his presumption.
K. Hen. Hadst thou been kill'd, when first thou didst presume,
Thou hadst not liv'd to kill a son of mine.
And thus I prophecy,—that many a thousand,
Which now mistrust no parcel of my fear;
And many an old man's sigh, and many a widow,
And many an orphan's water-staring eye,
Perforce, who doth avenge, and have them,
As crowning them husbands, or widowers' fate?
And orphans and for their parents' timeless death,—
Shall rue the hour that ever thou wast born.
The owl shriek'd at thy birth, an evil sign;
The nightingale's song in dismal discords sang;
Dogs howl'd, and hideous tempests shook down trees;
The raven rook'd her on the chimney's top,
And chatting crows, cried, 'was it ever born.'
Thy mother felt more than a mother's pain,
And yet brought forth less than a mother's hope:
To wit,—an indigest deformed lump,
Not like the fruit of such a goodness tree.
Teeth hadst thou in thy head, when thou wast born,
To signify, thou cam'st to bite the world:
And, if the rest be true which I have heard,
Thou canst eat no victuals.
Glo. I'll hear no more;—Die, prophet, in thy speech:
For this, amongst the rest, was I ordain'd:
K. Hen. Ay, and for much more slaughter after this:
O God! forgive my sins, and pardon thee! [Dies.
Glo. What, will the aspiring blood of Lancaster
Sink in the ground? I thought it would have mounted.
See, how my sword weeps for the poor king's death,
O, may such purple tears be always shed
From those that wish the downfall of our house!—
If any spark of life be yet remaining,
Down, down to hell; and say—I sent thee thither,
[Stabs him.
I, that have neither pity, love, nor fear,—
Indeed, 'tis true, that Henry told me of;
For I have often heard my mother say,
She came into the world with my lord for a foreman:
Had I not reason, think ye, to make haste,
And seek their ruin that usurp'd our right?
The midwife wonder'd: and the women cried,
O, Jesus bless thee! who is born new without a

Glo. Sirrah, leave us to ourselves: we must con-
fer. [Exit Lieutenant.

Act 5. KING HENRY VI. 459

Glo. Swarest thou? take that to end thy agony.
[Stabs him.
Clar. And there's for twitting me with perjury.
[Stabs him.
Q. Mar. O, kill me too!
Glo. Marry, and shall.
[Offers to kill her.
K. Edw. Hold, Richard, hold, for we have done too much.
Glo. Why should she live to fill the world with words?
Clar. Glo. G passive, except to me the king my brother;
I'll hence to London on a serious matter:
Ere ye come there, be sure to hear some news.

Clar. What? what?
Glo. The Tower! the Tower! [Exit.

Q. Mar. O, my sweet Ned! speak to thy mothner, boy!
Canst thou not speak?—O traitors! murderers!
They, that stab'd Caesar, shed no blood at all,
Did not offend, nor were not worthy blame,
If this foul deed were by, to equal it.
He was a man: this, in respect, a child;
And men ne'er spend their fury on a child.
What's worse than murderer, that I may name it?
No, no; my heart will burst, as I speak:
And I will speak, that so my heart may burst—
Butchers and villains, bloody cannibals!
How sweet a plant have you untimely crop'd!
You have seduced children, barbiers! if you had,
The thought of them would have stir'd up re-

more;
But, if you ever chance to have a child,
Look in his youth to have him so cut off,
As, deathsmen! you have rid this sweet young prince!
K. Edw. Away with her; go, bear her hence
here.
Q. Mar. Nay, never bear me hence, despatch me
here;
Here sheeteth thy sword, I'll pardon thee my death:
What! O, thou not?—then, Clarence, do it thou.
Clar. By heaven, I will not do thee so much ease.
Q. Mar. Good Clarence, do; sweet Clarence, do thou it do.
Clar. But hast thou not me swear, I would not do
it?
Q. Mar. Ay, but thou usest to forswear thyself;
'Twas sin before, but now 'tis charity.
What's the worse woman? there's that my devil's butcher,
Hard-favour'd Richard? Richard, where art thou?
Thou art not here! Murder is thy aim-deed;
Petitioners for blood thou ne'er put'st back.
K. Edw. Away, I say; I charge ye, bear her hence.
Q. Mar. So come to you and yours, as to this prince!
K. Edw. Where's Richard gone?
Clar. To London, all in pestil; and, as I guess,
To make a bloody supper in the Tower.
K. Edw. He's sudden, if a thing comes in his head.
Now march we hence; discharge the common sort
With pay and thanks, and let's away to London.
And see our gentle queen how well she fares;
By this, I hope, she hath a son for me.

SCENE VI.—London. A Room in the Tower.

King Henry is discovered sitting with a book in his hand, the Lieutenant attending. Enter Gloster.

Glo. Good day, my lord! What, at your book so hard?
K. Hen. Ay, my good lord: My lord, I should see any rather;
'Tis sin to flatter, good was little better;
Good Gloster, and good devil, were alike,
And both preposterous; therefore, not good lord.
Glo. Sirrah, leave us to ourselves: we must con-
fer. [Exit Lieutenant.
KING HENRY VI.

Then, since the heavens have shap'd my body so,
Let hell make crook'd my mind to answer it.
I have no brother, I am like no brother:
And this word—love, which greybeards call divine,
Be resident in men like one another,
And not in me; I am myself alone.
Clarence, beware; thou keep'st me from the light;
But I will sort a pitchy day for thee;
For I will buzz abroad such prophecies,
That Edward shall be fearful of his life;
And, then, to purge his fear, I'll be thy death.
King Henry, and the prince his son, are gone:
Clarence, thy turn is next, and then the rest;
Counting myself but bad, till I be best,—
I'll throw thy body in another room,
And triumph, Henry, in thy day of doom.

SCENE VI.—The same. A Room in the Palace.

King Edward is discovered sitting on his throne;
Queen Elizabeth with the infant Prince, Clarence,
Gloster, Hastings, and others, near him.

K. Edm. Once more we sit in England's royal throne,
Re-purchas'd with the blood of enemies.
What valiant foe-men, like to autumn's corn,
Have we mow'd down; in tops of all their pride?
Three duked of Somerset, threefold renown'd
For hardy and undoubted champions;
Two Cliffsords, as the father and the son,
And two Northumberlands; two braver men
Ne'er spurr'd their courser at the trumpet's sound:
With them, the two brave bears, Warwick and Montague,
That in their chains fetter'd the kingly lion,
And made the forest tremble when they roar'd.
Thus have we swept suspicion from our seat,
And made our foot stool of security.
Come hither, Bess, and let me kiss my boy:—
Yonng Ned, for thee, thine uncles, and myself,
Have in our armours watch'd the winter's night;
Went all a foot in summer's scalding heat,
That thou might'st repossess the crown in peace;
And of our labours thou shalt reap the gain.
Glo. I'll blast his harvest, if your head were laid;
For yet I am not look'd on in the world.
This shoulders was ordain'd so thick to heave;
And heave it shall some weight, or break my Work thou the way,—and thou shalt execute.

[Exeunt.

K. Edm. Clarence, and Glostcr, love my lovely
And kiss your princely nephew, brothers both.
Clar. The duty that I owe unto your majesty,
I seal upon the lips of this sweet babe.
K. Edm. Thanks, noble Clarence; worthy brother,
Brother, thanks.
Glo. And, that I love the tree from whence thou
Witnesse the loving kiss I give the fruit:—
To say the truth, so Judas kiss'd his master;
And cried—all hail! when as he meant—
Aide.

K. Edm. Now am I seated as my soul delights,
Having my country's peace, and brothers' loves.
Clar. What will your grace have done with Margareet?
Begnign, her father, to the king of France
Hath pawn'd the Niells and Jerusalem,
And hither have they sent it for her ransom.
K. Edm. Away with her, and waft her hence to France.
And now what rests, but that we spend the time
With stately triumphs, mirthful comick shows,
Such as befit the pleasures of the court?—
Sound, drums and trumpets! farewell, sour annoy!
For here, I hope, begins our lasting joy.

[Exeunt.

SCENE.—England.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. A Street.
Enter Gloster.

Glo. Now is the winter of our discontent
Made glorious summer by this sun of York;

And all the clouds, that low'r'd upon our house,
In the deep bosom of the ocean bury'd.
Now are our brows bound with victorious wreaths;
Our bruised hands, our torn and bloody cloaks;
Our stern alarums chang'd to merry meetings,
Our dreadful marches to delightful measures.
Grim-visag'd war hath smooth'd his wrinkled front;
And now—instead of mounting barbed steeds, To fright the souls of fearful adversaries,— Herdsmen nimble in a great hurly-burly, To the lascivious pleasing of a lute. But I,—that am not shap’d for sportive tricks, Nor made to court an amorous looking-glass; I, that am rudely stamp’d, and want love’s majesty; To strut before a wanton ambling nymph; I, that am curtail’d of this fair proportion, Cheated of feature by dissembling nature, Before I came to this unfashion’d frame Into this breathing world, scarce half made up, And so lamentably unequable, That dogs bark at me, as I halt by them; With such a weak and bashful Under-tune Have no delight to pass away the time, Unless to spy my shadow in the sun, And desant on mine own deformity; And therefore,—since I cannot prove a lover, To entertain these fair well-spoken days,— I am determined to prove a villain, And hate the little pleasures of these days. Plots have I laid, inductions dangerous, By drunken prophesies, libels, and dreams, To set my brother Clarence, and the king, In deadly hate the one against the other; And, if King Edward be as true and just, As I am subtle, false, and treacherous, This day should Clarence closely be mew’d up; About a prophecy, which says—that G Of Edward’s heirs the murderer shall be. Dive, thoughts, down to my soul! here Clarence comes.

Enter Clarence, guarded, and Brakenbury.

Brother, good day: What means this armed guard, That waits upon your grace?

Clar. His majesty, Tendering my person’s safety, hath appointed This conduct to convey me to the Tower.

Glo. Upon what cause?

Clar. Because my name is—George.

Glo. Alack, my lord, that fault is none of yours; He should, for that, commit your godfathers:— O, belike, his majesty hath some intent, That you shall be new christen’d in the Tower. But what’s the matter, Clarence? may I know?

Clar. Yes, Richard, when I know; for, I protest, As yet I do not: But, as I can learn, He hearkens after prophesies, and dreams; And from the cross-row plucks the letter G, And says a—wizard told him that G His issue dishonored should be; And, for my name of George begins with G, It follows in his thought, that I am he: These, as I learn, and such like toys as these, Have mov’d his highness to commit me now.

Glo. Why, this it is, when men are rul’d by women:—
’Tis not the king, that sends you to the Tower; My lady Grey, his wife, Clarence, ’tis she, That tempers him to this extremity. Was it not she, and that good man of worship, Anthony Vodvile, her brother, that G His issue disinherit’d should be; And, for my name of George begins with G, It follows in his thought, that I am he: These, as I learn, and such like toys as these, Have mov’d his highness to commit me now.

Glo. Why, this it is, when men are rul’d by women:

Since that our brother dub’d them gentlewomen, Are mighty gossips in this monarchy.

Brak. I can speak your grace both to pardon me: His majesty hath straitly given in charge, That no man shall have private conference, Of what degree soever, with his brother. Glo. Will you, then, an please your worship, Brakenbury, You may partake of any thing we say: We speak no treason, man:—We say, the king Is wise and virtuous; and his noble queen Well struck in years, and fair, and not jealous:— We say, that Shore’s wife hath a pretty foot, A cherry lip, A bonny eye, a passing pleasing tongue: And the like kind of tales are made gentlefolks: How say you, sir? can you deny all this?

Brak. With this, my lord, myself have nought to do.

Glo. Naught to do with mistress Shore? I tell thee, fellow, He that doth naught with her, excepting one, Were best to do it secretly, alone.

Brak. What one, my lord?

Glo. Her husband, knave:—Wouldst thou betray me? Brak. I beseech your grace to pardon me; and I will.

Forbear your conference with the noble duke.

Clar. We know thy charge, Brakenbury, and will obey.

Glo. We are the queen’s subjects, and must obey. Brother, farewell; I will unto the king; And whatsoe’er you will employ me in,— Were it to call king Edward’s widow,—sister,— I will perform it, to enfranchise you. Mean time, this deep disgrace in brotherhood, Touches me deeper than you can imagine. Clar. I know, it pleaseth neither of us well. Glo. Well, your imprisonment shall not be long; I will deliver you, or else lie for you: Mean time, have patience.

Clar. I must persevere; farewell.

Enter Clarence, Brakenbury, and Guard.

Glo. Go, tread the path that thou shalt never return, Simple, plain Clarence!—I do love thee so, That I will shortly send thy soul to heaven, If heaven will take the present at our hands. But who comes here? the new-deliver’d Hastings?

Enter Hastings.

Hast. Good time of day unto my gracious lord!

Glo. As much unto my good lord chamberlain Well are you welcome to this open air. How hath your lordship brook’d imprisonment?

Hast. With patience, noble lord, as prisoners must. But I shall live, my lord, to give them thanks, That were the cause of my imprisonment.

Glo. No doubt, no doubt; and so shall Clarence too.

For they, that were your enemies, are his, And have prevail’d as much on him, as you. Hast. More pity, that the eagle should be mew’d, While kites and buzzards harken to liberty. Glo. What news abroad?

Hast. No news so bad abroad, as this at home:— The king is sickly, weak, and melancholy, And his physicians fear him mightily. Glo. Now, by Saint Paul, this news is bad indeed.

Hast. He is.

Glo. Go you before, and I will follow you.

[Exit Hastings.

He cannot live, I hope; and must not die,
Till George be pack’d with posthorse up to heaven.
KING RICHARD III.

Act I

I'll in, to urge his hatred more to Clarence,
With lies well steed'd with weighty arguments;
And, if I fail not in my deep intent,
Clarence hath not another day to keep:
Which done, God take king Edward to his mercy,
And leave the world for me to bustle in!
For then I'll marry Warwick's youngest daughter:
What, thou didst kill her husband, and her father?
The readiest way to make the wench amends,
Is—to become her husband, and her father:
The which will I: not all so much for love,
As for another secret close intent,
By marryng her, which I must reach unto.
Yet but I run before my horse to market:
Clarence still breathes; Edward still lives, and reigns:
When they are gone, then must I count my gains.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—The same. Another Street.

Enter the corpse of King Henry the Sixth, borne in an open coffin, Gentlemen bearing halberds, to guard it; and Lady Anne as mourner.

Anne. Set down, set down your honourable load,—
If honour may be shrouded in a hearse,—
While obsequiously lament
The untimely fall of virtuous Gentleman.—
Poor key-cold figure of a holy king!
True ashes of the house of Lancaster!
Thou bloodless remnant of that royal blood!
Be it true that I invoke this ghost,
To hear the lamentations of poor Anne,
Wife to thy Edward, to thy slaughter'd son,
Stabb'd by the self-same hand that made these wounds!

[Lo, in these windows, that let forth thy life,
I pour the helpless balm of my poor eyes:
O, cursed be the hand, that made these holes!
Cursed be the heart, that had the heart to do it!
Cursed the blood, that let this blood from hence!
More direful hap betide that hated wretch,
That maketh us swoon by the death of thee,
Than I can wish to adders, spiders, toads,
Or any creeping venom'd thing that lives!
If ever he have child, abrogate be it.

Prodigious, and untimely brought to light,
Whose ugly and unnatural aspect
May fright the hopeful mother at the view:
And be her heir to her unhappy child!
If ever he have wife, let her be made
More miserable by the death of him,
Than I am made by my young lord, and thee!—
Come, now,eward Cherissey with thy holy load,
Taken from Paul's to be interred there;
And, still as you are weary of the weight,
Rest you, whiles I lament king Henry's course.

[The bearers take up the corpse, and advance.

Enter Gloster.

Glo. Stay you, that bear the corse, and set it down.

Anne. What black magician conjures up this fiend,
To stop devoted charitable deeds?

Glo. Villains, set down the corse; or, by Saint Paul,
I'll make a corse of him that disobeys.

I Gent. My lord, stand back, and let the coffin pass.

Glo. Unmanner'd dog! stand thou when I command:
Advance thy halberd higher than my breast,
Or, by Saint Paul, I'll strike thee to my foot,
And spurn upon thee, beggar, for thy boldness.

[The bearers set down the coffin.

Anne. What, do you tremble? are you all afraid?
Alas, I blame you not; for you are mortal,
And mortal eyes cannot endure the devil.—

Avant, thou dreadful minister of hell!
Thou hast but power over his mortal body,
His soul thou canst not have; therefore, be gone.

Glo. Be see, my saint, for charity, be not so curst.

Anne. Foul devil, for God's sake, hence, and trouble us not;
For thou hast made the happy earth thy hell,
Filled her with sighing cries, and deep exclaims.
If thou delight to view thy heinous deeds,
Behold this pattern of thy butcheries:
Of gentlemen, see, see! dead Henry's wounds
Open their congeal'd mouths, and bleed afresh.
Blood, blood, thou lump of foul deformity,
For 'tis thy presence that exhalcs this blood
From cold and empty veins, where no blood dwells.

Thy deed, inhuman and unnatural,
Provokes this deluge most unnatural.

O God, which this blood mad'st, revenge his death!
O earth, which this blood drink'st, revenge his death!

Either, heaven, with lightning strike the murderer dead,
Or, earth, gape open wide, and eat him quick;
As thou didst swallow up this good king's blood,
Which his hell-govern'd arm hath butcher'd!

Glo. Lady, you know no rules of charity,
Which renders good for bad, blessings for curses.

Anne. Villain, thou know'st no law of God nor man;

No beast so fierce, but knows some touch of pity.

Glo. But I know none, and therefore am no

Anne. O wonderful, when devils tell the truth!

Glo. More wonderful, when angels are so angry!

Vouchsafe, divine perfection of a woman,
Of these supposed evils, to give me leave,
By circumstance, but to acquit myself.

Anne. Vouchsafe, diffus'd infection of a man,
For these known evils, but to give me leave,
By circumstance, to curse thy cursed self.

Glo. Fairer than tongue can name thee, let me have
Some patient leisure to excuse myself.

Anne. Fouler than heart can think thee, thou curst make
No excuse current, but to hang thyself.

Glo. By such despair, I should accuse myself.

Anne. And, by despairing, shalt thou stand

Glo. For doing worthy vengeance on thyself,
That didst unworthy slaughter upon others.

Anne. Nay, that I slew them not?

Anne. Why, then, they are not dead;
But dead they are, and, devilish slave, by thee.

Glo. I did not kill your husband.

Anne. Why, then he is alive.

Glo. Nay, he is dead; and slain by Edward's hand.

Anne. In thy soul's throat thou liest; queen Margaret saw
Thy murderous faction smoking in his blood.
The which but thou once didst bend against her breast,
But that thy brothers beat aside the point.

Glo. I was provoked by her stand'stough tongue,
That laid their guilt upon my guiltless shoulders.

Anne. Thou wast provoked by thy bloody mind,
That never dreamt on aught but butcheries;

Glo. Didst thou not kill this king?

Glo. I grant ye.

Anne. Dost grant me, hedgehog? then, God grant me too,
Thou may'st be damned for that wicked deed!

Glo. He is gentle, mild, and virtuous.

Anne. Then rather for the King of heaven that hath him.

Anne. He is in heaven, where thou shalt never come.
Glo. Let him thank me, that help to send him thither;
For he was fitter for that place, than earth.
Anne. And thou shalt find any place, but hell.
Glo. Yes, one place else, if you will hear me name it.
Anne. Some dungeon.

Glo. Your bed-chamber.
Anne. Ill rest betide the chamber where thou liest!
Glo. So will it, madam, till I lie with you.
Anne. Then so is it.
Glo. I know so.—But, gentle lady Anne,—
To leave this, at the leave of our wits,
And fall somewhat into a slower method;
Is not the cause of the timeless death
Of these Plantagenets, Henry, and Edward,
As blameless as the executioner?
Anne. Thou wast the cause, and most accur'd effect.
Glo. Her beauty was the cause of that effect;
Your beauty, which did haunt me in my sleep,
To undertake the death of all the world,
So I might live one hour in your sweet bosom.
Anne. If I thought that, I tell thee, bimboide,
These nails should rend that beauty from my cheeks.
Glo. These eyes could not endure that beauty's loss.
You should not blemish it, if I stood by:
As all the world is cheered by the sun,
So I by that; it is my day, my life.
Anne. Black night o'ershade thy day, and death thy life!
Glo. Curse not thyself, fair creature; thou art both.
Anne. I would I were, to be reveng'd on thee.
Glo. It is a quarrel most unnatural,
To be reveng'd on him that loveth thee.
Anne. It is a quarrel just and reasonable,
To be reveng'd on him that kill'd my husband.
Glo. He that bereft thee, lady, of thy husband,
Did it to help thee to a better husband.
Anne. His better doth not breathe upon the earth.
Glo. He lives, that loves you better than he could.
Anne. Name him.
Plantagenet.
Glo. Anne.
Anne. Why, that was he.
Glo. He was the same name, but one of better nature.
Anne. Where is he?
Glo. Here: [She spits at him.] Why dost thou spit at me?
Anne. 'Woul' it were mortal poison, for thy sake!
Glo. Never came poison from so sweet a place.
Anne. Never lung poison on a fouler toad.
Out of my sight! thou dost infect mine eyes.
Glo. Thine eyes, sweet lady, have infected me.
Anne. 'Woul' they were basillakes, to strike thee dead!
Glo. I would they were, that I might die at once;
For now they kill me with a living death.
Those eyes of thine from mine have drawn salt tears,
Sham'd their aspects with store of childish drops;
Thy eyes, which never shed a painful tear,—
Not,when my father York and Edward wept,
To hear the piteous moan that Rutland made,
When black-face'd Clifford shook his sword at him:
Nor when thy warlike father, like a child,
Told the sad story of my father's death;
And twenty times made pause, to sob, and weep,
That all the standers-by had wet their cheeks,
Like trees bedash'd with rain: in that sad time,
My mother's eyes did scorn an humble tear;
And these sores could not then thence exhale,
Thy beauty hath, and made them blind with weeping.
I never said to friend, nor enemy,
My proud heart sues, and prompts my tongue to speak.
[She looks scornfully at him.]
Teach not thy lips such scorn; for it was made
For kising, lady, not for such contempt.
If thy revengeful heart cannot forgive,
Lo! here I lend thee this sharp-pointed sword;
Which if thou please to hide in this true breast,
And let the soul forth that adores thee,
I lay it naked to the deadly stroke;
And humbly beg the death upon my knee.
[He lays his breast open; she offers it at with his sword.]
Nay, do not pause; for I did kill king Henry;—
But 'twas thy beauty that provoked me.
Nay, now despatch; 'twas I that stabb'd young Edward;—[She again offers at his breast.]
But 'twas thy heavenly face that set me on.
[She lets fall the sword.]
Take up the sword again, or take up me.
Anne. Arise, dissembler: though I wish thy death,
I will not be thy executioner.
Glo. Then bid me kill myself, and I will do it.
Anne. I have already.
Glo. That was in thy rage:
Speak it again, and even with the word,
This hand, which, for thy love, did kill thy love,
Shall, for thy love, kill a fair truer love;
To both their deaths shall thou be accessory.
Anne. I would, I knew thy heart.
Glo. 'Tis figur'd in
My tongue.
Anne. I fear me, both are false.
Then man
Was never true.
Anne. Well, well, put up your sword.
Glo. Say then, my peace is made.
Anne. That shall you know
Hereafter.
Glo. But shall I live in hope?
Anne. All men, I hope, live so.
Glo. Vouchsafe to wear this ring.
Anne. To take, is not to give.
Glo. Look, how this ring encompasseth thy finger
Even so thy breast encloses my poor heart;
Wear both of them, for both of them are thine.
And if thy poor devoted servant may
But beg one favour at thy gracious hand,
Thou dost confirm his happiness for ever.
Anne. What is it?
Glo. That it may please you leave these sad des-signs?
To him that hath more cause to be a mourner,
And presently repair to Crosby-place;
Where—after I have solemnly inter'd,
At Chertsey monastry, this noble king,
And wet his grave with my repentant tears,—
I will with all expedient duty see you:
For divers unknown reasons, I beseech you,
Grant me this boon.
Anne. With all my heart; and much it joyes me too,
To see you are become so penitent.—
Tressel, and Berkley, go along with me.
Glo. Bid me farewell.
Anne. 'Tis more than you desire:
But, since you teach me how to flatter you,
Imagine I have said farewell already.
[Exeunt Lady Anne, Tressel, and Berkley.
Glo. Take up the curse, sirs.
Gent. Towards Chertsey, noble lord?
Glo. No, to White-Friers; there attend my com-
[Exeunt the rest, with the curse.]
Glo. Was ever woman in this humour?
[Exeunt Lady Anne, Tressel, and Berkley.
Glo. Was ever woman in this humour won?
I'll have her,—but I will not keep her long.
What! I, that kill'd her husband, and his father,
To take her in her heart so greedily to hate;
With curses in her mouth, tears in her eyes
The bleeding witness of her hatred by:
With God, her conscience, and these bars against me, And I no friends to back my suit withal, But the plain devil, and dissembling looks, And yet to win her,—all the world to nothing! Hath she forgot already that brave prince, Edward, her lord, whom I some three months since, Stabb'd in my angry mood at Tewksbury? A sweeter and a lovelier gentleman, Fram'd in the prodigality of nature, Young, valiant, wise, and, no doubt, right royal,— The spacious world cannot again afford: And yet she yet abuse her eyes on me, That cropp'd the golden prime of this sweet prince, And made her widow to a woful bed? On me, whose all not equals Edward's moiety? On me, that hale, and am mishapen thus? My dukedom to a beggarly denial, I do mistake my person all this while: Upon my life, she finds, although I cannot, Myself to be a marvellous proper man. I'll be at charges for a looking glass; And entertain a score or two of tailors, To study fashions to adorn my body: Since I am crept in favour with myself, I will maintain it with some little cost. But, first, I'll turn you' fellow in his grave; And then return lamenting to my love,— Shine out, fair sun, till I have bought a glass, That I may see my shadow as I pass. [Exit.

SCENE III.—The same. A Room in the Palace. Enter Queen Elizabeth, Lord Rivers, and Lord Grey.

Riv. Have patience, madam; there's no doubt, his majesty Will soon recover his accustomed health. Grey. In that you brook it ill, it makes him worse: Therefore, for God's sake, entertain good comfort, And cheer his grace with quick and merry words. Q. Eliz. If he were dead, what would betide of me? Grey. No other harm, but loss of such a lord. Q. Eliz. The loss of such a lord includes all things. Grey. The heavens have bless'd you with a goodly son, To be your comforter, when he is gone. Q. Eliz. Ah, he is young: and his minority Is out of the trust of Richard of Gloucester, A man that loves not me, nor none of you. Riv. Is it concluded, he shall be protector? Q. Eliz. It is determin'd, not concluded yet; But so it must be, if the king miscarry. Enter Buckingham and Stanley.

Grey. Here come the lords of Buckingham and Stanley.

Buck. Good time of day unto your royal grace! Stan. God make your majesty joyful as you have been!

Q. Eliz. The countess Richmond, good my lord of Stanley, To your good prayer will scarcely say amen. Yet, Stanley, notwithstanding she's your wife, And loves not me, he, you good, lord assur'd, I have not you for her proud arrogance. Stan. I do beseech you, either not believe The envious slanderers of her false accusers; Or, if she be accus'd on true report, Hear with her weakness, which, I think, proceeds From want of strength, and no grounded malice. Q. Eliz. Saw you the king to-day, my lord of Stanley? Stan. But now, the duke of Buckingham, and I, Are come from visiting his majesty, my lord. Q. Eliz. What likelihood of his amendment, lords?
KING RICHARD III.

Act 1.

Riv. What, marry, may she be?
Glo. What, marry, may she be? marry with a king,
A bachelor, a handsome striping too;
I wis, your grandam had a worse match.
Q. Eliz. My lord of Gloster, I have too long
Your blunt upbrailings, and your bitter scoffs;
By heaven, I will acquaint his majesty,
Of those gross taunts I often have endur'd.
I had rather be a country, servant-maid,
Than a great queen, with this condition—
To be so bailed, scorn'd, and storm'd at:
Small joy have I in being England's queen.

Enter Queen Margaret, behind.

Q. Mar. And lessen'd be that small, God, I be see thee!
Thy honour, state, and seat, is due to me.
Glo. What? threat you men with telling of the king?
Tell him, and spare not: look, what I have said,
I will avouch, in presence of the king;
I dare adventure to be sent to the Tower.
'Tis time to speak, my pains are quite forgot.
Q. Mar. Out, devil! I remember them too well:
Thou killest my husband Henry in the Tower,
And Edward, my poor son, at Tewksbury.
Glo. Ere ye were queen, ay, or your husband king,
I was a pack-horse in his great affairs;
A weeder-out of his proud adversaries,
A liberal rewarer of his friends.
To royalize his blood, I spilt mine own.
Q. Mar. Ay, and much better blood than his, or thine.
Glo. In all which time, you, and your husband grey,
Were factious for the house of Lancaster;
And, Rivers, so were you:—Was not your husband
In Henry's joy the brave and bloody Alban's slain?
Let me put in your minds, if you forget
What you have been ere now, and what you are;
Withal, what I have been, and what I am.
Q. Mar. A mur'drous villain, and so still thou art.
Glo. Poor Clarence did forsake his father War wick, Ay, and forswore himself;—Which Jesu pardon!—
Q. Mar. Which God revenge!
Glo. To fight on Edward's party, for the crown;
And, for his meed, poor lord, he is mew'd up:
I would to God, my heart were flint like Edward's,
Or Clarence's soft, and thus would I reign.
I am too childish-foolish for this world.
Q. Mar. Hie thee to hell for shame, and leave this world,
Thou cadger! there thy kingdom is.
Riv. My lord of Gloster, in those busy days,
Which here you urge, to prove us enemies,
We follow'd then our lord, our lawful king;
So should you, if you should be our king.
Glo. If I should be?—I had rather be a pedlar;
Far be it from my heart, the thought thereof!
Q. Eliz. As little joy, my lord, as you suppose
You should enjoy, were you this country's king;
As little joy you may suppose in me,
That I enjoy, being the queen thereof.
Q. Mar. A little joy enjoys the queen thereof!
For I am she, and altogether joyless.
I can no longer hold me patient:—Advancing,
Hear me, you wrangling pirates, that fall out
In sharing that which you have pill'd from me:
Which of you trembles not, that looks on me?
If not, that, I being queen, you bow like subjects;
Yet that, by you depred, you quake like rebels?—
Ah, gentle villain, do not turn away!
Glo. Foul wrinkled witch, what mak'st thou in my sight?
Q. Mar. But repetition of what thou hast marr'd;
That will I make, before I let thee go.
Glo. Wert thou not banished on pain of death?
Q. Mar. I was; but I do find more pain in banishment,
Than death can yield me here by my abode.
A husband, and a son, thou owst to me,—
And thou, a kingdom,—all of you, allegiance:
Born that I this crown by right is yours;
And all the pleasures you usurp, are mine.
Glo. The curse my noble father laid on thee,—
When thou didst crown his warlike brows with poison, a country, and the son of;
And with thy scorns drewest rivers from his eyes;
And then, to dry them, gav'st the duke a clout,
Steep'd in the foulest streams of Satan's lust;
His curses, then from bitterness of soul
Denounc'd against thee, are all fallen upon thee;
And God, not we, hath plagu'd thy bloody deed.
Q. Eliz. So just is God, to right the innocent.
Hast. O, 'twas the foulest deed, to slay that babe,
And the most merciless, that 'er was heard of.
Riv. Tyrants themselves wept when it was re ported.
Dor. No man but prophecy'd revenge for it.
Lack. Northumberland, then present, wept to see it.
Q. Mar. What! were you snarling all, before I came,
Ready to catch each other by the throat,
And turn you all your hatred now on me?
Did York's dread curse prevail so much with
him?
That Henry's death, my lovely Edward's death,
Their kingdom's loss, my woful banishment,
Could all but answer for that peevish brat?
Can curses pierce the clouds, and enter heaven?
—Why, then give way, dull clouds, to my quick curses!—
Though not by war, by surfeit die your king;
As ours by murder, to make him king?
Edward, thy son, that now is prince of Wales.
For Edward, my son, that was prince of Wales,
Die in his youth, by like unhallow'd violence!
Thy self a queen, for me that was a queen,
Oustive thy glory, like my wretched self!
Long may'st thou live, to wall thy children's loss;
And see another, as I see thee now,
Deck'd in thy rights, as thou art staid'l in mine?
Long die thy happy days before thy death;
And, after many lengthen'd hours of grief,
Die neither mother, wife, nor England's queen:
Rivers,—and Dorset,—you were standers by,—
And so with poison, and lordly falling,
When my son was stabb'd with bloody daggers: God, I pray
him,
That none of you may live your natural age,
But by some unlook'd accident cut off!
Glo. Have done thy charm, thou hateful w提示 hag.
Q. Mar. And leave out thee? stay, dog, for thou shalt hear me.
If heaven have any grievous plague in store
Exceeding those that I can wish upon thee,
O, let them keep it, till thy sins be ripe,
And then hurl down their indignation
On thee, the troublest of the poor world's peace!
The worm of conscience still be gnaw thy soul!
Thy friends suspect for traitors while thou liv'st,
And take deep traitors for thy dearest friends?
No sleep close up that deadly eye of thee,
Unless in its while some tormenting dream
Affrights thee with a hell of ugly devils!
'Thou elish-mark'd, abortive, rooting hog!
'Thou that wast seal'd in thy nativity
The slave of nature, and the son of hell;
'Thou slander of thy mother's heavy womb!
'Thou loathed issue of thy father's loins!
'Thou rag of honour! thou detestèd—
Glo. Margaret.
Q. Mar. Richard!
Glo. Ha?
Q. Mar. I call thee not.
Glo. I cry thee mercy then; for I did think,
That thou had'st call'd me all these bitter names.
Q. Mar. Fain, so I did; but I looked to no reply.
O, let me make the period to my curse.
Glo. 'Tis done by me; and ends in—Margaret.
Q. Eliz. Thus have you breath'd your curse
And given me no return of my own.
Q. Mar. Poor painted queen, vain flourish of my fortune! Why strew'st thou sugar on that bottled spider,
Whose deadly web environeth thee about?
Fool, fool! thou wast a knife to kill thyself.
The day will come, that thou shalt wish for me
To help thee curse this pois'nous bunch-back'd toad.
Hast. False-boding woman, end thy frantic curse;
Lest, to thy harm, thou move our patience.
Q. Mar. Foul shame upon you! you have all mold'ry mine.
Riv. Were you well serv'd, you would be taught your duty.
Q. Mar. To serve me well, you all should do me duty,
Teach me to be your queen, and you my subjects:
O, serve me well, and teach yourselves that duty.
Dor. Dispute not with her, she is lunatick.
Q. Mar. Peace, master marquis, you are malapert;
Your fire-new stamp of honour is scarce current:
0, that your young nobility could judge,
What 'twere to lose it, and be miserable!
They that stand high, have many blasts to shake
them;
And, if they fall, they dash themselves to pieces.
Glo. Good counsel, marry; learn it, learn it, marquis.
Dor. It touches you, my lord, as much as me.
Glo. Ay, and much more: Bnt I was born so high,
Our alien wall'deth in the cedar's top,
And dailies with the wind, and scorns the sun.
Q. Mar. And turns the sem to shade: alas! alas!
Witness my son, in the shade of death:
Whose bright out-shining beams thy cloudy wrath
Hath in eternal darkness foil'd np.
Your alien buildeth in our alien's nest:—
O God, that see'st it, do not suffer it;
As it was won with blood, lost be it so!
Buck. Peace, peace, peace, for shame; if not for charity.
Q. Mar. Urge neither charity nor shame to me;
Uncharitably with me have you dealt,
And shamefully by you my hopes are butcher'd.
My charity is outrage, life my shame,—
And I will live my sorrow's rage!—
Buck. Have done, have done.
Q. Mar. O princely Buckingham, I kiss thy hand,
In sign of league and amity with thee:
Now fair befal thee, and thy noble house.
Thy garments are not spotted with our blood,
Nor thou within the compass of my curse.
Buck. Nor no one here; for curses never pass
The lips of those that breathe them in the air.
Q. Mar. I'll not believe but they ascend the sky,
And there awake God's gentle-sleeping peace.
0 Buckingham, beware of yonder dog;
Look, when he fawns, he bites; and, when he bites,
His venom tooth will rankle to the death:
Have not to do with him, beware of him;
Sin, death, and hell, have set their marks on him;
And, if his ministers attend with it, [ham !
Glo. What doth she say, my lord of Buckingham?
Buck. Nothing that I respect, my gracious lord.
Q. Mar. What, dost thou scorn me for my gentle women?
And soothe the devil that I warn thee from?
O, but remember this another day,
When he shall split thy very heart with sorrow;
And yet my name was a man's name—
Live each of you the subjects to his hate,
And he to yours, and all of you to God's! [Exit.

First. My hair doth stand on end to hear her curses.
Riv. And so doth mine; I muse, why she's at liberty.
Glo. I cannot blame her, by God's holy mother;
She hath had too much wrong, and I repent
My taking her from thee; but I have done.
Q. Eliz. I never did her any, to my knowledge.
Glo. Yet you have all the vantage of her wrong.
I was too hot to do some body good,
And it's too cold in thinking of it now.
Marry, as for Clarence, he is well repaid;
He is frank'd up to fatting for his pains;—
God pardon them that are the cause thereof!

Riv. A virtuous and a christian-like conclusion,
To pray for them that have done seath to us.
Glo. So do I ever, being well advis'd:
For had I curs'd now, I had curs'd myself. [Aside.

Enter Catesby.
Cates. Madam, his majesty doth call for you,—
Are you now going to despatch this thing?
Q. Eliz. Catesby, I come—lords, will you go with me?
Riv. Madam, we will attend upon your grace.
[Exeunt all but Gloster.
Glo. I do the wrong, and hast bin to bawl,
The secret mischief that I set abroad,
I lay unto the grievous charge of others.
Clarence,—whom I, indeed, have laid in darkness,
Do bring to many simple guide;
Namely, to Stanley, Hastings, Buckingham;
And tell them—tis the queen and her allies,
That stir the king against the duke my brother.
Now that I believe it; and withal whet me
To be reveng'd on Rivers, Vaughan, Grey;
But then I sigh, and, with a piece of scripture
Tell them—tis God bids us do good for evil
And Thus, I, in the name of my naked villains,
With old odd ends, stolt'rn forth of holy writ;
And seem a saint, when most I play the devil.

Enter two Murderers.
But soft, here come my executioners—
How now, my Hardy, stout resolv'd mates?—
Are you now going to despatch this thing?
1 Murd. We are, my lord; and come to have the warrant,
That we may be admitted where he is.
Glo. Well thought upon, I have it here about me:
[Give's the warrant.
When you have done, repair to Crosby-place.
But, sir, be sudden in the execution,
Withal obdurate, do not hear him plead;
For he will say what is well or what is spoken, and, perhaps,
May move your hearts to pity, if you mark him.
1 Murd. Tut, tut, my lord, we will not stand to prate,
Talkers are no good does; be as'read, We go to use our hands, and not our tongues.
Glo. Your eyes drop mill-stones, when fools' eyes drop tears;
I like you, lads;—about your business straight;
Go on, despatch.
1 Murd. We will, my noble lord.
[Exeunt.}

SCENE IV.—The same. A Room in the Tower.

Enter Clarence and Brakenbury.
Brak. Why looks your grace so heavily to-day?
Clar. O, I have pass'd a miserable night,
So full of fearfull dreams, of ugly sights,
That, as I am a christian faithful man,
I would not spend another such a night.
Though 'twere to buy a world of happy days;
So full of dismal terror was the time.
Brak. What was your dream, my lord? I pray a Clar. Methought, I had broken from the Tower,

Brak. What would'st thou, fellow? and how can'st thou hither?

1 Murd. I would speak with Clarence, and I came hither on my legs.

Brak. What, so brief?

2 Murd. O, sir, 'tis better to be brief & an tedious—

Let him see our commission; talk no more.

[Exit Brakenbury, who reads it.]

Brak. I am in this, commanded to deliver

The noble duke of Clarence to your hands:

I will not reason what is meant hereby,

Henceforth, those shall be words of the meaning.

Here are the keys—there sits the duke asleep:

I'll to the king; and signify to him,

That thus I have resign'd to you my charge.

1 Murd. You may, sir; 'tis a point of wisdom:

Fare you well.

2 Murd. What, shall we stab him as he sleeps?

1 Murd. No; he'll say, 'twas done cowardly, when he wakes.

2 Murd. When he wakes! why, fool, he shall never wake until the great judgment day.

1 Murd. Why, then he'll say, we stabb'd him

sleeping.

2 Murd. The urging of that word, judgment, hath bred a kind of remorse in me.

1 Murd. What, art thou afraid?

2 Murd. Not to kill him, having a warrant for it; but to be damn'd for killing him, from which no warrant can defend us.

1 Murd. I thought, thou hastcst been resolute.

2 Murd. So I am, to let him live.

1 Murd. I'll back to the duke of Gloster, and tell him so.

2 Murd. Nay, I pr'ythee, stay a little: I hope, this holy humour of mine will change; it was wont to hold me but while one would tell twenty.

1 Murd. How dost thou feel thyself now?

2 Murd. 'Faith, some certain dregs of conscience are yet within me.

1 Murd. Remember our reward, when the deed's done.

2 Murd. Come, he dies; I had forgot the reward.

1 Murd. Where's thy conscience now?

2 Murd. In the duke of Gloster's purse.

1 Murd. No, when he opens his purse to give us our reward, thy conscience flies out.

2 Murd. 'Tis no matter; let it go; there's few, or nurse, will entertain it.

1 Murd. What, is it come to thee again?

2 Murd. I'll not meddle with it; it is a dangerous thing; it makes a man a coward; a man cannot steal, but it accuseth him; a man cannot swear,

but it accuseth him; a man cannot lie; but it accuseth him: I'll not meddle with it; I'll persevere, and our lot is such a poor lot.

1 Murd. 'Tis done, it is even now at my elbow, persuading me not to kill the duke.

2 Murd. Take the devil in thy mind, and believe him not: he would insinuate with thee, but to make thee sigh.

1 Murd. I am strong-fram'd, he cannot prevail with me.

2 Murd. Spoke like a tall fellow, that respects his reputation. Come, shall we fall to work?

1 Murd. Take him over the costard with the hilts of thy sword, and then throw him into the malmsey-butt, in the next room.

2 Murd. O excellent device! and make a sop of him.

1 Murd. Soft! he wakes.

2 Murd. Strike.

1 Murd. No, we'll reason with him.
Clar. Where art thou, keeper? give me a cup of wine.
1 Murd. You shall have win' enough, my lord, anon.
Clar. In God's name, what art thou?
1 Murd. A man, as you are.
Clar. But not, as I am, royal.
1 Murd. Nor you, as we are, loyal.
Clar. Thy voice is thunder, but thy looks are humble.
1 Murd. My voice is now the king's, my looks the people's.
Clar. How darkly, and how deadly dost thou speak!
Your eyes do menace me: Why look you pale?
What sent you hither? Wherefore do you come?
Both Murd. To, to, to—
Clar. To murder me?
Both Murd. Ay, ay.
Clar. You scarcely have the hearts to tell me so,
And therefore cannot have the hearts to do it.
Wherein, my friends, have I offended you?
1 Murd. Offended us you have not, but the king.
Clar. I shall be reconcil'd to him again.
2 Murd. Never, my lord; therefore, prepare to die.
Clar. Are you call'd forth from out a world of men,
To slay my innocent? What is my offence?
Where is the evidence that doth accuse me?
What lawful quest have given their verdict up
Unto the frowning judge? or who pronounce'd
The bitter sentence of poor Clarence' death?
Before I be convict by course of law,
To threaten me with death, is most unlawful.
I charge you, as you hope for any goodness,
By Christ's dear blood shed for our grievous sins,
That you depart, and lay hands on me;
The deed you undertake is damnable.
1 Murd. What we will do, we do upon command.
2 Murd. And he, that hath commanded, is our law.

Clar. Erroneous vassal! the great King of kings
Hath in the table of his law commanded,
That thou shalt do no murder; wilt thou then
Spawn at his edict, and fulfil a man's woe?
Take heed; for he holds vengeance in his hand,
To hurl upon their heads that break his law.
2 Murd. And that same vengeance doth he hurl on thee,
For false forewarning, and for murder too:
Thou didst receive the sacrament to fight
In quarrel of the house of Lancaster.
1 Murd. And, like a traitor to the name of God,
Didst break that vow; and, with thy treacherous blade,
Unrip'st the bowels of thy sovereign's son.
2 Murd. Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend.
1 Murd. How canst thou urge God's dreadful law to us,
When thou hast broke it in such dear degree?
Clar. Alas! for whose sake did I that ill deed?
For Edward, for my brother, for his sake:
He sends you not to murder me for this;
For in that sin he is as deep as I.
If God will be avenged for the deed,
O, know you, that he doth it publicly;
Take not the quarrel from his powerful arm;
He needs no indirect nor lawless course,
To cut off those that have offended him.
1 Murd. Who made thee then a bloody minister,
Where dallant-springing, brave Flamengen?
That princely novice, was struck dead by thee?
Clar. My brother's love, the devil, and my rage,
1 Murd. Thy brother's love, our duty, and thy fault,
Provoke us hither now to slaughter thee.
Clar. If you do love my brother, hate not me;
I am his brother, and I love him well.
If you are hir'd for me, go back again,
And I will send you to my brother Gloster.
I every day expect an embassage
From my Redeemer to redeem me hence;
And more in peace my soul shall part to heaven,
Since I have made my friends at peace on earth.
Rivers and Hastings, take each other's hand;
Dissemble our hatred, swear your love.

Riv. By heaven, my soul is purg'd from grudging hate;
And with my hand I seal my true heart's love.
Hast. To thine, I as truly swear the like!
K. Edw. Take heed, you daily not before your king;
Lest he, that is the supreme King of kings,
Confound your hidden falsehood, and award
Either of you to be others' kinsmen.
Hast. So prosper I, as I swear perfect love!
Riv. And I, as I love Hastings with my heart!
K. Edw. Madam, yourself are not exempt in this,— Nor your son Dorset,—Buckingham, nor you;—
You have been factious one against the other.
Wife, love lord Hastings, let him kiss your hand;
And what you do, do it unfriendly.
Q. Eliz. There, Hastings;—I will never more remember
Our former hatred, so thrive I, and mine!
Dor. This interchange of love, I here protest,
Upon my part shall be inviolable.
Hast. And so swear I. [Embrace Dorset.
K. Edw. Now, princely Buckingham, seal thou this league
With thy embracements to my wife's allies,
And make me happy in your unity.
Buck. Whenever Buckingham doth turn his hate
Upon your grace, [to the Queen.] but with all duty
Doth cherish you, and yours, God punish me With all the strongest marks of hate I know!
When I have most need to employ a friend,
And most assured that he is a friend,
Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile,
Be he unto me! this do I beg of heaven,
When I am cold in love, to you, or yours.
K. Edw. A pleasing cordial, princely Buckingham,
Is this thy vow unto my sickly heart.
There wanteth now our brother Gloster here,
To make the blessed period of this peace.
Buck. And, in good time, here comes the noble duke.

Enter Gloster.

Glo. Good morrow to my sovereign king, and
And, princely peers, a happy time of day!
K. Edw. Happy, indeed, as we have spent the day:
Brother, we have done deeds of charity;
Made peace of enmity, fair love of hate.
Between these swelling wrong-encrusted peers.
Glo. A blessed labour, my most sovereign liege—
Among this princely heap, if any here,
By false intelligence, or wrong surmise,
Hold me a foe;—If I unwittingly, or in my rage,
Have aught committed that is hardly borne
By you, in this your hatred, I expect most love!
When I have most need to employ a friend,
And most assured that he is a friend,
Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile,
Be he unto me! this do I beg of heaven,
When I am cold in love, to you, or yours.
K. Edw. A pleasing cordial, princely Buckingham,
Is this thy vow unto my sickly heart.
There wanteth now our brother Gloster here,
To make the blessed period of this peace.
Buck. And, in good time, here comes the noble duke.

Enter Gloster.

K. Edw. More than the infant that is born to-night;
I thank my God for my humility.
Q. Eliz. A holy day shall this be kept hereafter:
I would to God, all strife were well compounded.
My sovereign lord, I do beseech your highness
To take this my brother Gloster to your grace.
Glo. Why, madam, have I offer'd love for this,
To be so flouted in this royal presence?
Who knows not, that the gentle duke is dead?
[They all start.
You do him injury, to scorn his corse.
K. Edw. Who knows not he is dead! who knows he is?
Q. Eliz. All-seeing heaven, what a world is this!
Lack: I saw he was so pale, lord Dorset, as the rest?
Dor. Ay, my good lord? and no man in the presence,
But his red colour hath forsok his cheeks.
K. Edw. Is Clarence dead? the order was re-versed.
Glo. But he, poor man, by your first order died,
And that a winged Mercury did bear;
Some tardy cripple bore the countermand,
That came too late to see him buried:
God grant that some less noble, and less loyal,
Nearer in bloody thoughts, and not in blood,
Deserve not worse than a wretched Clarence did,
And yet go current from suspicion!

Enter Stanley.

Stan. A boon, my sovereign, for my service done!
K. Edw. I pray thee, peace; my soul is full of sorrow.
Stan. I will not rise, unless your highness hear me.
K. Edw. Then say at once, what is it thou request.
Stan. The forfett, sovereign, of my servant's life,
Who slew to-day a riotous gentleman,
Lately dependent on the duke of Buckingham.
K. Edw. Have I a tongue to doom my brother's death,
And shall that tongue give pardon to a slave?
My brother kill'd no man, his fault was thought,
And yet his punishment was bitter death.
Who sired to me for him? who, in my wrath,
Kneel'd at my feet, and bade me be advis'd?
Who spoke of brotherhood? who spoke of love?
Who told me, how the poor soul did forsake
The mighty Warwick, and did fight for me?
Who told me, in the field at Tewksbury,
When Oxford had me down, he rescu'd me,
And said, these brothers, live, and be a king?
Who told me, when we both lay in the field,
Frozen almost to death, how he did lap me
Even in his garments; and did give himself,
All this he had, to keep the number of might?
All this from my remembrance brutish wrath
Sinfully puck'd, and not a man of you
Had so much grace to put it in my mind.
But, when your carteries, or your waiting vassals,
Have done a drunken slaughter, and defac'd
The precious image of our dear Redeemer,
You straight are on your knees for pardon, pardon;
And I, unjustly too, must grant it you;
But for my brother, not a man would speak,—
Nor I (ungracious) speak unto myself
For him, poor soul.—The proudest of you all
Have been beholden to him in his life;
Yet none of you would once plead for his life—
O God! I fear, thy justice will take hold
On me, and you, and mine, and yours, for this.—
Come, Hastings, help me to my closet.

 Poor Clarence.

[Execut. Klug, Queen, Hastings, Rivers, Dorset, and Grey.

Glo. This is the fruit of rashness!—Mark'd you not,
How that the guilty kindred of the queen
Look'd pale, when they did hear of Clarence death?
O! they did urge it still unto the king:
God will revenge it. Come, lords; will you go,
To comfort Edward with our company?

Buck. We wait upon your grace.

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter the Duchess of York, with a Son and Daughter of Clarence.

Son. Good grandam, tell us, is our father dead?

Duch. No, boy.

Daugh. Why do you weep so oft? and beat your breast;
And call,—O Clarence, my unhappy son!

Son. Why do you look on us, and shake your head,
And call us—orphans, wretches, cast-aways,
If that our noble father be alive?

Duch. My pretty cousins, you mistake me both; I do lament the sickness of the king,
As loath to lose him, not your father's death;
It was lost sorrow to wall one that's lost.

Son. Then, grandam, you conclude that he is dead.

The king your uncle is to blame for this:
God will revenge it: whom I will importune
With earnest prayers all to that effect.

Daugh. And so will I.

Duch. Peace, children. peace! the king doth love you well;
Incaspable and shallow innocents,
You cannot be the cause of your father's death.

Son. Grandam, we can: for my good uncle
Glotser told me, the king, provok'd to't by the queen,
Dev't impeachments to imprison him;
And when my uncle told me so, he wept,
And pitied me, and kindly kiss'd my cheek;
Bade me rely on him, as on my father,
And he would love me dearly as his child.

Duch. Ah, that deceit should steal such gentle shapes,
And with a virtuous visor hide deep vice!
He is my son, ay, and therein my shame,
Yet from my dugs he drew not this deceit.

Son. Think you, my uncle did dissemble, grandam?

Duch. Ay, boy.

Son. I cannot think it. Hark! what noise is this?

Enter Queen Elizabeth, distractedly: Rivers and Dorset following her.

Q. Eliz. Ah! who shall hinder me to wall and weep?
To chide my fortune, and torment myself?
I'll join with black despair against my soul,
And to myself become an enemy.

Duch. What means this scene of rude impatience?

Q. Eliz. To make an act of tragick violence:—
Edward, my lord, thy son, our king, is dead.

— Why grow the branches, when the root is gone?
Why wither not the leaves, that want their sap?
If you will live, lament: if die, be brief;
That our swift-winged souls may catch the king's;
O! let the obedient subjects follow him
To his new kingdom of perpetual rest.

Duch. Ah, so much interest have I in thy sorrow,
As I had title in thy noble husband!
I have bewept a worthy husband's death,
And liv'd by looking on his images:
But now, two mirrors of his princely semblance
Are restor'd in pieces by malignant death;
And I for comfort have but one false glass,
That grieves me when I see my shame in him.
Thou art a widow; yet thou art a mother,
And hast the comfort of thy children left thee:
But death hath snatch'd my husband from my arms,
And pluck'd two crutches from my feeble hands,
Clarence and Edward. O, what cause have I,

(Thine being but a moiety of my grief,)
To over-go thy plaints, and drown thy cries?

Son. Ah, sunit! you wept not for our father's death!

How can we aid you with our kindred tears?

Daugh. Your fatherless distress was left unmoan'd,
Your widow's woe likewise be unwept!

Q. Eliz. Give me no help in lamentation,
I am not barren to bring forth laments:
All springs reduce their currents to mine eyes,
That I, being govern'd by the watry moon,
May send such plentiful tears to drown the world!

Ah, for my husband, for my dear lord Edward!

Chil. Ah, for our father, for our dear lord Clarence.

Duch. Alas, for both, both mine, Edward and Clarence!

Q. Eliz. What stay had I, but Edward? and he's gone.

Chil. What stay had we, but Clarence? and he's gone.

Duch. What stays had I, but they? and they are gone.

Q. Eliz. I had never widow, had so dear a loss.

Chil. Were never orphans, had so dear a loss.

Duch. Was never mother, had so dear a loss.

Alas! I am the mother of these griefs;

Their woes are parcel'd, mine are general.
She for an Edward weeps, and so do I;
I for a Clarence weep, so doth not she:
These babes for Clarence weep, and so do I
For an Edward weep, and so do they.

Alas! you three, on me, threefold, and a'd,
Pour all your tears, I am your sorrow's nurse,
And I will pamper it with lamentations.

Dor. Comfort, dear mother: God is much displeas'd,
That you take with unthankfulness his doing:
In common worldly things, 'tis call'd—ungrateful,
With dull unwillingness to repay a debt,
Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent;

Duch. I could not be otherwise oppose with heaven,
For it requires the royal debt it lent you.

Riv. Madam, bethink you, like a careful mother,
Of the young prince your son: send straight for him,
Let him be crown'd; in him your comfort lives:
Drown desperate sorrow in dead Edward's grave,
And plant your joys in living Edward's throne.

Enter Gloster, Buckingham, Stanley, Hastings, Ratcliff, and others.

Glo. Sister, have comfort: all of us have cause
To wall the dimming of our shining star:
But none can cure their harms by wailing them.—

Madam, my mother, I do cry you mercy,
I did not see your grace: Heaven on my knee,
I crave your blessing.

Duch. God bless thee: and put meekness in thy breast,
Love, charity, obedience, and true duty!

Glo. Ah, Madam, and make me die a good man!—

That is the butt end of a mother's blessing;
I marvel, that her grace did leave it out.

Aside.

Buck. You cloudy princes, and heart-sorrowing peers,
That bear this mutual heavy load of moan,
Now cheer each other in each other's love:
Though we have spent our harvest of this king,
We are to reap the harvest of his son.

The broken rancour of your high swolen hearts,
But lately splinter'd, knit, and joint'd together,
Must gently be preserv'd, cherish'd, and kept:
Me seemeth good, I pray, with some little train,
Forthwith from Ludlow the young prince fetch'd
Ther to London, to be crown'd our king.
Act 2.

KING RICHARD III.

KING. Why with some little train, my lord of Buckingham?
BUCK. Marry, my lord, lest by a multitude,

The new-heal'd wound of malice should break out;

Which would do more the more men look upon,

By how much the estate is green, and yet un-
govern'd:

Where every horse bears his commanding rein,

And may direct his course as please himself,

As well the fears as harm, as harm apparent,

In my opinion, ought to be prevented.

GLO. I hope, the king made peace with all of us;

And the compact is firm, and true, in me.

RICH. And so in me; and so, I think, in all:

Yet, since it is but green, it should be put

To no apparent likelihood of breach,

Which, haply, by much company might be urg'd:

Therefore I say, with noble Buckingham,

That it is meet so few should fetch the prince.

Host. And so say I.

GLO. Then be it so; and go we to determine

Who they shall be that shall straight shall post to Ludlow.

Madam,--and you my mother, will you go

To give your censures in this weighty business?

[Exeunt all but Buckingham and Gloster.

BUCK. My lord, whoever journeys to the prince,

For God's sake, let not us two stay at home:

For, by the way, I'll sort occasion,

As index to the story we late talk'd of,

To part the queen's proud kindred from the southern.

GLO. My other self, my counsel's consistory,

My oracle, my prophet! -- My dear cousin,

I, as a child, will go by thy direction.

Towards Ludlow then, for we'll not stay behind.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.---The same.---A Street.

Enter two Citizens, meeting.

1 CIT. Good morrow, neighbour: Whither away so fast?

2 CIT. I promise you, I scarcely know myself:

Hear you the news abroad?

1 CIT. Yes; the king's dead.

2 CIT. Ill news, by'r lady; seldom comes the better:

I fear, I fear, 'twill prove a giddy world.

Enter another Citizen.

3 CIT. Neighbours, God speed!

1 CIT. Give you good morrow, sir.

2 CIT. Doth the news hold of good King Edward's death?

2 CIT. Ay, sir, it is too true; God help, the while!

3 CIT. Then, masters, look to see a troubled world.

1 CIT. No, no; by God's good grace, his son shall reign.

3 CIT. Woe to that land, that's govern'd by a child!

2 CIT. In him there is a hope of government;

That, in his nosage, council under him,

And, in his full and ripest years, himself,

No doubt, shall then, and till then, govern well.

1 CIT. So stood the state, when Henry the Sixth

Was crown'd in Paris but at nine months old.

3 CIT. Stood the state so? no, no, good friends,

God wot; for then this land was famishing enrich'd

With politic grave counsel; then the king

Had virtuous uncles to protect his grace.

1 CIT. Marry, so hath this, both by his father and mother.

3 CIT. Better it were, they all came by his father,

Or, by his father, there were none at all:

For even now, who shall be nearest,

Will touch us all too near, if God prevent not.

O, full of danger is the duke of Gloster;

And the queen's sons, and brothers, bought and purchased.

And were they to be rule'd, and not to rule,

This sickly land might solace as before.

1 CIT. Come, come, we fear the worst; all will be well.

3 CIT. When乌云 are seen, wise men put on their cloaks;

When great leaves fall, then winter is at hand;

When the sun sets, who doth not look for night?

Un timely makes men expect a dearth;

All may be well; but, if God sort it so,

Tis more than we deserve, or I expect.

2 CIT. Truly, the hearts of men are full of fear

You cannot reason almost with a man

That looks not heavily, and full of dread.

3 CIT. Before the days of change, still is it so:

By a divine instinct, men's minds mistrust

Ensuing danger; as, by proof, we see

The water swell before a boisterous storm.

But leave it all to God. Whither away?

2 CIT. Marry, we were sent for to the justices.

3 CIT. And so was I; I'll bear you company.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.---The same.---A Room in the Palace.

Enter the Archbishop of York, the young Duke of York, Queen Elizabeth, and the Duchess of York.

ARCH. Last night, I heard, they lay at Stony-

Stratford;

And at Northampton they do rest to night;

To-morrow, or next day, they will be here.

DUC. Long I long with all my heart to see the prince;

I hope, he is much grown since last I saw him.

Q. ELIZ. But I hear, no; they say, my son of York

Hath almost overta'en him in his growth.

YORK. Ay, mother, but I would not have it so.

DUC. Why, my young cousin? It is good to grow.

YORK. Grandam, one night, as we did sit at supper,

My uncle Rivers talk'd how I did grow

More than my brother; Ay, quoth my uncle

Gloster,

Small herbs have grace, great meads do grow apace;

And since, methinks, I would not grow so fast,

Because sweet flowers are slow, and weeds make haste.

DUC. 'Good faith, 'good faith, the saying did not hold

In him that did object the same to thee;

He was the wretched'st thing, when he was young,

So long a growing, and so leisurely,

That, if his rule were true, he should be gracious.

ARCH. And so, no doubt, he is, my gracious madam.

DUC. I hope, he is; but yet let mothers doubt.

YORK. Now, by my troth, if I had been remember'd,

I could have given my uncle's grace a flout,

To touch his growth, nearer than he touch'd mine

DUC. How, my young York? I pr'ythee, let me hear it.

YORK. Marry, they say, my uncle grew so fast,

That he could gnaw a crust at two hours old;

Was full two years ere I could get a tooth.

Grandam, this would have been a biting jest.

DUC. I pr'ythee, pretty York, who told thee

this?

YORK. Grandam, his nurse.

DUC. His nurse! why, she was dead ere thou wast born.

YORK. If 'twere not she, I cannot tell who told me.

Q. ELIZ. A parlous boy! Go to you, are too shrewd.

ARCH. A good madam, be not angry with the child.

Q. ELIZ. Pitchers have ears.
Enter a Messenger.

Arch. Here comes a messenger:

What news?

Mess. Such news, my lord, as grieves me to unfold.

Q. Eliz. How doth the prince?

Mess. Well, madam, and in health.

Duch. What is thy news?

Mess. Lord Rivers, and lord Grey, are sent to Pomfret, with them sit Thomas Vaughan, prisoners.

Arch. Who hath committed them?

Mess. The mighty dukes, Gloster and Buckingham.

Q. Eliz. For what offence?

Mess. The sum of all I can, I have disclos'd; Why, or for what, the nobles were committed, is all unknown to me, my gracious lady.

Q. Eliz. Ah me, I see the ruin of my house! The tiger now hath seiz'd the gentle hind; Insulting tyranny begins to jut Upon the innocent and a\wless throne. Welcome, destruction, blood, and massacre! I see, as in a map, the end of all.

Duch. Accursed and unquiet wrangling days! How many of you have mine eyes beheld? My husband lost his life to get the crown; And often up and down my sons were lost, For me to joy, and weep, their gain, and loss: And being seated, and domestick broils Clean over-blown, themselves, the conquerors, Make war upon themselves; brother to brother, Blood to blood, self against self:—O, preposterous And frantick courage, end thy damned spleen! Or let me die, to look on death no more!

Q. Eliz. Come, come, my boy, we will to sanctuary.

Madam, farewell.

Duch. Stay, I will go with you.

Q. Eliz. You have no cause.

Arch. My gracious lady, go, [To the Queen. And thither bear your treasure and your goods. For my part, I'll resign unto your grace The seal I keep; And so betide to me, As well I tender you, and all of yours! Come, I'll conduct you to the sanctuary. [Exit."

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The same. A Street.

The trumpets sound. Enter the Prince of Wales, Gloster, Buckingham, Cardinal Bourchier, and others.

Buck. Welcome, sweet prince, to London, to your chamber.

Glo. Welcome, dear cousin, my thoughts' sovereign:

The weary way hath made you melancholy.

Prince. No, uncle; but our crosses on the way Have made it tedious, wearisome, and heavy: I want more uncles here to welcome me.

Glo. Sweet prince, the untainted virtue of your years Hath not yet div'd into the world's deccit: No more can you distinguish of a man, Than of his outward show; which, God he knows, Seldom, or never, jumpeh with the heart. Those uncles, which you want, were dangerous; Your grace attended to theirugar'd words, But look'd not on the poison of their hearts: God keep you from them, and from such false friends!

Prince. God keep me from false friends! but they were none.

Glo. My lord, the mayor of London comes to greet you.

Enter the Lord Mayor, and his Train.

May. God bless your grace with health and happy days!

Prince. I thank you, good lord;—and thank you all. [Exit Mayor, &c.

I thought, my mother, and my brother York, Would long ere this have met us on the way: Fie, what a slugg is Hastings! that he comes not To tell us, whether they will come, or no.

Enter Hastings.

Buck. And in good time, here comes the sweating lord.

Prince. Welcome, my lord; What will our mother come?

Hast. On what occasion, God he knows, not I, The queen your mother, and your brother York, Have taken sanctuary: The tender prince Would fain have come with me to meet your grace, But by his mother was perfce withheld.

Buck. Fye! what an indirect and peevish course Is this of hers?—Lord cardinal, will your grace persuade the queen to send the duke of York Unto his princely brother presently? If she deny,—lord Hastings, go with him, And from her jealous arms pluck him perforce. Card. Lord, and lord of Buckingham, if my weak oratory Can from his mother win the duke of York, Anon expect him here: But if she be obdurate To mild entreaties, God in heaven forbid We should infringe the holy and sage Bless of blessed sanctuary! not for all this land, Would I be guilty of so deep a sin.

Buck. You are too senseless-obstinate, my lord, Too ceremonious, and too droll. Wert it with the grossness of this age, You break not sanctuary in seizing him. The benefit thereof is always granted To those whose dealings have deserv'd the place, And those who have the wit to claim the place: This prince hath neither claim'd it, nor deserv'd it. And therefore, in mine opinion, cannot have it: Then, taking him from thence, that is not there, You break no privilege nor charter there. Oft have I heard of sanctuary men; But sanctuary children ne'er till now.

Card. My lord, you shall o'er-rule my mind for once.—

Come on, lord Hastings, will you go with me?

Hast. I go, my lord.

Prince. Good lords, make all the speedy haste you may. [Exit Cardinal and Hastings. Say, uncle Gloster, if our brother come, Where shall we sojourn till our coronation?

Glo. Where it seems best unto your royal self. If I may counsel you, some day, or two, Your highness shall repose you at the Tower: Then where you please, and shall be thought most fit For your best health and recreation.

Prince. I do not like the Tower, of any place:— Did Julius Cæsar build that place, my lord?

Glo. He did, my gracious lord, begin that place; Which, since, succeeding ages have had it edified.

Prince. Is it upon record? or else reported Successfully from age to age, he built it?

Buck. Upon record, my gracious lord.

Prince. But say, my lord, it were not register'd; Methinks, the truth should live from age to age, As 'twere retail'd to all posterity, Even to the general all-ending day.

Glo. So wise so young, they say, do ne'er live long. [Aside.

Prince. What say you, uncle?

Glo. I say, without characters, fame lives long. Thus, like the formal vice, Iniquity.

Prince. That Julius Cæsar was a famous man:

With what his valour did enrich his wit, His wit set down to make his valour live:
Death makes no conquest of this conqueror;
For now he lives in fame, though not in—
I'll tell you what, my cousin Buckingham.
Buck. What, my gracious lord?
Prince. An if I live until I be a man,
I'll win our ancient right in France again,
Or die a soldier, as I liv'd a king.
Glo. Short summers lightly have a forward spring.
[Aside.
Enter York, Hastings, and the Cardinal.
Buck. Now, in good time, here comes the duke of York.
Prince. Richard of York! how fares our loving brother?
York. Well, my dread lord; so must I call you now.
Prince. Ay, brother; to our grief, as it is yours.
Too late he died, that might have kept that title,
Which by his death hath lost much majesty.
Glo. How fares our cousin, noble lord of York?
York. I thank you, gentle uncle. O, my lord,
You said, that idle weeds are fast in growth:
The prince your brother hath outgrown me far.
Glo. He hath, my lord.
York. And therefore is he idle?
Glo. O, my fair cousin, I must not say so.
York. Then is he more beholden to you, than I Am to my sovereign, as your foreign;
But you have power in me, as in a kinsman.
Glo. I pray you, uncle, then, give me this dagger.
Glo. My gentle cousin, little cousin? with all my heart.
Prince. A beggar, brother?
York. Of my kind uncle, that I know will give;
And, being but a toy, which is no grief to give.
Glo. A greater gift than that I'll give my cousin.
York. A greater gift! O, that's the sword to it?
Glo. Ay, gentle cousin, were it light enough.
York. O then, I see, you'll part but with light graces;
In weightier things you'll say a beggar, nay.
Glo. It is too weighty for your grace to wear.
York. I weigh it lightly, were it heavier.
Glo. What, would you have my weapon, little lord?
York. I would, that I might thank you as you call me.
Glo. How?
York. Little, my Lord.
Prince. My lord of York will still be cross in talk;—
Uncle, your grace knows how to bear with him.
York. You mean, to bear with me, not to bear with me—
Uncle, my brother mocks both you and me;
Because that I am little, like an ape,
He thinks that you should bear me on your shoulder.
Buck. With what a sharp-provided wit he rears
To mitigate the scorn he gives his uncle, [sons!
He prettily and aptly taunts himself;
So cunning, and so young, is wonderful.
Glo. My gracious lord, will't please you pass along?
Myself, and my good cousin Buckingham,
Will to your mother; to entreat of her,
To meet you at the Tower, and welcome you.
York. What, will you go unto the Tower, my lord?
Prince. My lord protector needs will have it so.
York. I shall not sleep in quiet at the Tower.
Glo. Why, sir, what should you fear?
York. Marry, my uncle Clarence's angry ghost;
My gentle cousin told me, he was murdered there.
Prince. I fear no uncles dead.
Glo. Nor none that live, I hope.
Prince. An if they live, I hope, I need not fear.
I come to my lord, with a heavy heart,
Thinking on them, go I unto the Tower.
[Exeunt Prince, York, Hastings, Cardinal, and Attendants.

Buck. Think you, my lord, this little prating York
Was not so compassed by his subtle mother,
To taunt and scorn you thus opprobriously?
Glo. No doubt, no doubt: O, 'tis a parcious boy;
Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable;
He's all the mother's, from the top to toe.
Buck. Well, let them rest—
Come hither, gentle Catesby; thou art sworn
As deeply to effect what we intend,
As closely to conceal what we impart:
Thou know'st our reasons urg'd upon the way;
What think'st thou? is it not an easy matter
To make William lord Hastings of our mind,
For the instalment of this noble duke
In the seat royal of this famous isle?
Cate. He for his father's sake so loves the prince,
That he will not be wont to aught against him.
Buck. What think'st thou then of Stanley? will not he?
Cate. He will do all in all as Hastings doth,
Buck. Well then, no more but this: Glo, gentle Catesby,
And, as it were far off, sound thou lord Hastings,
How he doth stand affected to our purpose;
And summon him to-morrow to the Tower,
To sit about the coronation.
If thou dost find him tractable to us,
Encourage him, and tell him all our reasons:
If he be leaden, icy, cold, unwilling,
Be thou so too; and so break off the talk,
And give us notice of his inclination:
For we must know how this divided councils,
Wherein thyself shalt highly be employed.
Glo. Command me to lord William: tell him,
Catesby,
His ancient knot of dangerous adversaries
To-morrow are set blood at Fomfreycastle;
And bid my friend, for joy of this good news,
Give mistress Shore one gentle kiss the more.
Buck. Good Catesby, go, effect this business soundly.
Cate. My good lords both, with all the heed I can.
Glo. Shall we hear from you, Catesby, ere we sleep?
Cate. You shall, my lord.
Glo. At Crosby-place, there shall you find us both.
[Exit Catesby.
Buck. Now, my lord, what shall we do, if we Lord Hastings will not yield to our complots?
Glo. Chop off his head, man;—somewhat we will do:—
And, love, when I am king, claim thou of me
The earldom of Hereford, and all the moveables
Whereof the king my brother was posses'd.
Buck. I'll claim that promise at your grace's hand.
Glo. And look you have it yielded with all kind-

Come, let us sup betimes; that after-wards
We may digest our complots in some form.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Before Lord Hastings' House.
Enter a Messenger.
Mess. My lord, my lord,—
[Knocking.
Hast. [Within.] Who knocks?
Mess. One from lord Stanley.
Hast. [Within.] What is o'clock?
Mess. Upon the stroke of four.
[Enter Hastings.
Hast. Cannot thy master sleep the tedious nights?
Mess. So it should seem by that I have to say.
First, he commends him to your noble lordship.
Hast. And then,
Mess. And then he sends you word, he doth dream
To-night the boar had rased off his helm:
Besides, he says, there are two councils held;
And that may be determin'd at the one,
Which may make you and him to rue at the other. Therefore he sends to know your lordship's pleasure.

If, presently, you will take horse with him, And with all speed post with him toward the north, To shun the danger that his soul divines:

Hast. Go, fellow, go, return unto the lord: Bid him not fear the separated counsels: His honour, and myself, are at the one; And, at the other, is my good friend Catesby; Wherein the thing may proceed, 'tis toucheth us. Whereof I shall not have intelligence

Tell him, his fears are shallow, wanting instance: And for his dreams—I wonder, he's so fond To trust the mockery of unkind sleepers: To fly the boar, before the boar pursues, Were to incense the boar to follow us, And make pursuit, where he did mean no chase. Go, bid thy master rise and come to me; And we will both together to the Tower, Where, he shall see, the boar will use us kindly.

Mess. I'll go, my lord, and tell him what you say. [Exit.

Enter Catesby.

Cate. Many good morrows to my noble lord!

Hast. Good morrow, Catesby; you are early stirring:

Cate. What news, what news, in this our tottering state?

Cate. It is a reeling world, indeed, my lord; And, I believe, will never stand upright, Till Richard wear the garland of the realm. How! How? How I wear the garland? Art thou mean the crown?

Cate. Ay, my good lord.Hast. I'll have this crown of mine cut from my shoulders, Before I'll see the crown so foul misplac'd. But canst thou guess that he doth aim at it?

Cate. Ay, on my life; and hopes to find you forward. Upon his party, for the gain thereof: And, thereupon, he sends you this good news,— That, this same day, your enemies, The kindred of the queen, must die at Pomfret. Hast. Indeed, I am no mourner for that news, Because they have been still my adversaries: But, that I'll give my voice on Richard's side, To bar my master's heirs in true descent, God knows, I will not do it to the death.

Cate. God give your lordship in that gracious mind!

Hast. But I shall laugh at this a twelve-month hence,

That they who brought me in my master's hate, I live to look upon their tragedy. Well, Catesby, ere a fortnight make me older, I'll send some packing, that yet think not on't. Cate. 'Tis a vile thing to die, my gracious lord. When men are unprepared, and look not for it.

Hast. O, monstrous, monstrous! and so fills it out

With Rivers, Vaughan, Grey; and so 'twill do With some men else, who think themselves as safe As thou and I; who, as thou know'st, are dear To princely Richard, and to Buckingham.

Cate. The princes both make high account of you— For they account his head upon the bridge. [Aside. Hast. I know, they do; and I have well deserv'd it.

Enter Stanley.

Come on, come on, where is your bear-spear, man? Peare you the boar, and go so unprovided?

Stan. My lord, good morrow; and good morrow, Catesby— You may jest on, but, by the holy rood I do not like these several counsels. 1.

Hast. My lord, I hold my life as dear as yours; And nearer, in my life, do protest. Was it more precious to me than 'tis now:

Think you, but that I know our state secure, I would be so triumphant as I am?

Stan. The lords at Pomfret, when they rode from London, Were jocund, and suppos'd their states were sure, And they, indeed, had no cause to mistrust; But yet, you see, how soon the day over-cast. This sudden stab of rancour I mis doubt; Pray God, I say, I prove a needless coward! What, shall we toward the Tower? the day is fine.

Hast. Come, come, have with you—Wot you what, my lord?

To-day the lords you talk of are beheaded.

Stan. They, for their truth, might better wear their heads, Than some, that have accus'd them, wear their hats. But come, my lord, let's away.

Enter a Pursuivant.

Hast. Go on before, I'll talk with this good fellow. [Exit Stan. and Catesby.

How now, sirrah? how goes the world with thee?

Purs. The better, that your lordship please to ask.

Hast. I tell thee, man, 'tis better with me now, Than when thou met'st me last where we meet:

Then was I going prisoner to the Tower, By the suggestion of the queen's allies; But now I tell thee (keep it to thyself,) This day those enemies are put to death, And I in better state than ere I was. Purs. God hold it, to your honour's good conscience.

Hast. Gramercy, fellow: There, drink that for me.

[Throwing him his purse.

Purs. I thank your honour. [Exit Pursuivant.

Enter a Priest.

Pr. Well met, my lord; I am glad to see your honour.

Hast. I thank thee, good sir John, with all my heart. I am in your debt for your last exercise; Come the next Sabbath, and I will content you.

Enter Buckingham.

Buck. What, talking with a priest, lord chamberlain? Your friends at Pomfret, they do need the priest; Your honour hath no shaming work in hand.

Hast. Good faith, and when I met this holy man, The more methinks came into my mind. What, go you toward the Tower?

Buck. I do, my lord: but long I cannot stay there: I shall return before your lordship thence.

Hast. Nay, like enough, for I stay dinner there.
Buck. And supper too, although thou know'st it not. [Aside. Come, will you go?

Hast. I'll wait upon your lordship. [Exit.

SCENE III.—Pomfret. Before the Castle.

Enter Ratcliff, with a guard, conducting Rivers, Grey, and Vaughan, to execution.

Rat. Come, bring forth the prisoners.

Riv. Sir Richard Ratcliff, let me tell thee this, To-day, shalt thou behold a subject die, For truth, for duty, and for loyalty.

Grey. God keep the prince from all the pack of you! A knot you are of damned blood-suckers.

Vaugh. You live, that shall cry woe for this here.

Rat. Dispatch; the limit of your lives is out.

Riv. O Pomfret, Pomfret! 0 thou bloody prison, Fatal and ominous to noble peers!
Within the guilty closure of thy walls,
Richard the Second here hack'd to death:
And, for more slander to thy dismal seat,
We reek'd in every guilty bosom's drink.
Grey. Now Margaret's curse is fallen upon our heads,
When she exclaim'd on Hastings, you, and I.
For I saw it, by when Richard stab'd his son.
Riv. Then curst she Hastings; then curst she Buckingham,
Then curst she Richard:—O, remember, God,
To hear her prayers for them, as now for us!
And for my sister, and her princely son;
Be satisfied, dear God, with our true bloods,
Which, as thou know'st, unjustly must be split!
But. Make haste, the hour of death is expiate.
Riv. Come, Grey, come, Vaughan,—let us here embrace;
Farewell, until we meet again in heaven. [Exeunt.

Buckingham, Stanley, Hastings, the Bishop of Ely, Catesby, Lovel, and others, sitting at a table: officers of the council attending.

Hast. Now, noble peers, the cause why we are met
Is—to determine of the coronation:
In God's name, speak, when is the royal day?
Buck. Are all things ready for that royal time?
St. n. They are; and wants but nomination.
Ely. To-morrow then I judge a happy day.
Buck. Who knows the lord protector's mind herein?
Who is most inward with the noble duke?
Ely. Your grace, we think, should soonest know his mind.
Buck. We know each other's faces: for our hearts,
He know no more of mine, than I of yours;
Nor I, of his, my lord, than you of mine:
Lord Hastings, you and he are near in love.
Hast. I thank his grace, I know he loves me well.
But, for his purpose in the coronation,
I have not sounded him, nor he deliver'd
His gracious pleasure any way therein:
But you, my noble lord, may name the time;
And in the duke's behalf I'll give my voice,
Which, I presume, he'll take in gentle part.

Enter Gloster.

Ely. In happy time, here comes the duke himself.

Glo. My noble lords and cousins, all, good morrow:
I have been long a sleeper; but, I trust,
My absence doth neglect no great design,
Which by my presence might have been concluded.
Buck. Had you not come upon your cue, my lord,
William lord Hastings had pronounce your part,—
I mean, your voice,—for crowning of the king.
Glo. Then my lord Hastings, no man might be bolder;
His lordship knows me well, and loves me well.—
My lord of Ely, when I was last in Holborn,
I saw good strawberries in your garden there; I do beseech you, send for some of them.
Ely. Marry, and will, my lord, with all my heart. [Exit Ely.

Glo. Cousin of Buckingham, a word with you. [Takes him aside.

Catesby hath sound'd Hastings in our business;
And finds the testy gentleman so hot,
That he will lose his head, ere give consent,
His master's child, as worshipfully he terms it,
Shall lose the royalty of England's throne.
Buck. Why didst thou yourself a while, I'll go with you. [Exeunt Gloster and Buckingham.

Stan. We have not yet set down this day of triumph.
To-morrow, in my judgment, is too sudden;
For I myself am nor so well provided,
As else I would be, were the day prolong'd.

Re-enter Bishop of Ely.

Ely. Where is my lord protector? I have sent
For these strawberries.

Hast. His grace looks cheerfully and smooth this morning;
There's some conceit or other likes him well,
When he doth bid good-morrow with such spirit.
I think, there's ne'er a man in Christendom,
That can hold his heart with his love, or hate, but he.
For by his face straight shall you know his heart.
Stan. What of his heart perceive you in his face, By any likelihood he show'd to-day?
Hast. Marry, that with no man here he is offended:
For, were he, he had shown it in his looks.

Re-enter Gloster and Buckingham.

Glo. I pray you all, tell me what they deserve,
That do or are my death with devilish plots
(Off damn'd witchcraft; and that have prevail'd)
Upon my body with their hellish charms?
Hast. The tender love I bear your grace, my lord,
Makes me most forward in this noble presence
To doom the offenders: Whoose'er they be,
I say, my lord, they have deserved death.
Glo. Then be your eyes the witness of their evil,
Look how I am bewitch'd; behold mine arm
Is, like a blasted sapling, wither'd up;
And this is Edward's wife, that monstrous witch,
Consorted with that harlot, strumpet Shore;
That by their witchcraft thus have marked me.
Hast. If they have done this deed, my noble lord,—
Glo. If I! thou protector of this damn'd strumpet,
Talk'st thou to me of 't?—Thou art a traitor—
Off with his head:—now, by saint Paul I swear,
I will not dine until I see the same.—
Lovel, and Catesby, look, that it be done;
The rest, that love me, rise, and follow me. [Exeunt Council, with Gloster and Buckingham.

Hast. Woe, woe, for England! not a whit for me.

For I, too fond, might have prevented this:
Stanley did dream, the boar did rase his helm;
But I disdain'd it, and did scorn to fly.
Three times to-day my foot-cloth horse did stumble.
And startled, when he look'd upon the Tower,
As loath to bear me to the slaughter-house.
O, now I want the priest that spake to me:
I now repent I told the pursuivant,
As too triumphing, how mine enemies,
To-day at Pomfret bloodily were butcher'd,
And I myself secure in grace and favour.
O, Margaret, Margaret, now thy heavy curse
Is lighten'd on poor Hastings' wretched head.
Cate. Despatch, my lord, the duke would be at dinner.

Make a short shift, he lons to see your head.

Hast. Of momentary grace of mortal men,
Which we more hunt for than the grace of God:
Who builds his hope in air of your fair looks,
Lives like a drunken sailor on a mast;
Ready, with every nod, to tumble down
Into the fatal bowels of the deep.

Louv. Come, come, despatch; 'tis bootless to exclaim.

Hast. O bloody Richard!—miserable England! I prophesy the fearful'st time to thee,
That ever wretched age hath look'd upon.—
Come, lead me to the block; bear him my head;
They smile at me, who shortly shall be dead.
SCENE V.—The same. The Tower Walls.

Enter Gloster and Buckingham, in rusty armour, marvellous ill-favoured.

Glo. Come, cousin, canst thou quake, and change thy colour?
Murther thy breath in middle of a word,—And then again begin, and stop again, As if thou wert disdained, and mad with terror?
But, Tut, I can counterfeit the deep tragedian:
Speak, and look back, and pry on every side, Tremble and start at wagging of a straw, Indeed, deep suspicion: ghastly looks
Are at my service, like enforced smiles; And both are ready in their offices, At any time, to grace my stratagems. But what, is Catesby gone?
Glo. He is; and, see, he brings the mayor along.

Enter the Lord Mayor and Catesby

Buck. Let me alone to entertain him.—Lord mayor,
Glo. Look to the draw-bridge there.
Buck. Hark, back! a drum.
Glo. Catesby, o'relook the walls.
Buck. Lord mayor, the reason we have sent for you,
Glo. Is he back, defend thee, here are enemies. Buck. God and our innocence defend and guard us!

Enter Lovel and Ratcliff, with Hastings's head.

Glo. Be patient, they are friends; Ratcliff, and Lovel.

Lovel. Here is the head of that ignoble traitor, The dangerous and unsuspected Hastings.
Glo. So dear [Ilov'd the man, that I must weep, I took him for the plainest harmless' creature, That breath'd upon the earth a Christian; Made him my book, wherein my soul recorded The history of all my thoughts; So smooth he daub'd his vice with show of virtue, That, his apparent open guilt omitted,—I mean, his conversation with Shore's wife,— He liv'd from all attendant of suspect.

Buck. Well, well, he was the covert's shelter'd traitor That ever liv'd.—Look you, my lord mayor, Would you imagine, or almost believe, (Vellus it was not, that there's a great present,) We live to tell it you,) the subter traitor This day had plotted, in the council-house, To murder me, and my good lord of Gloster? May. What! had he so?
Glo. What! think you we are Turks, or infidels? Or that we would, against the form of law, Proceed thus rashly in the villain's death; But that the extreme peril of the case, The peace of England, and our persons' safety, Enforce'd us to this execution? May, Now, fair befall you! he deserv'd his death;
And your good graces both have well proceeded, To warn false traitors from the like attempts. I never look'd for better at his hands, After he once fell in with mistress Shore. Buck. Yet had we not determin'd he should die, 'Till your lordship came to see his end; Which now the loving haste of these our friends, Somewhat against our meaning, hath prevented: Because, my lord, we would have had you hear The traitor speak, and timorous confess The manner and the purpose of his treasons; That you might well have signified the same Unto our citizens, who, happily, Misconstrue us in him, and wall his death. May. But, my good lord, your grace's word shall serve, As well as I had seen, and heard him speak: And do not doubt, right noble princes both, But I'll acquaint our duteous citizens With all your just proceedings in this case.

Glo. And to that end we wish'd your lordship here, To avoid the censures of the carpenter world. Buck. But since you came too late of our intent, Yet witness what you hear we did intend; And so, my good lord mayor, we bid farewell.

[Exit Lord Mayor.

Glo. Go, after, after, cousin Buckingham. The mayor towards Guild-hall hies him in all post:— There, at your meetest vantage of the time, Infer the bastardy of Edward's children: Tell them, how Edward put to death a citizen, Only suspect that he would make them heir to the crown; meaning, indeed, his house, Which, by the sign thereof, was termed so. Moreover, urge his hateful luxury, And bestial appetite in change of lust; Which stretch'd unto their servants, daughters, wives, Even where his raging eye, or savage heart, Without control, list'd to make his prey, Nay, if a need, this far come near my person: Tell them, when that my mother went with child Of that insatiate Edward, noble York, My princely father, then had wars in France; And, by just computation of the time, Found, that the issue was not his beget; Which well appeared in his lineaments, Being nothing like the noble duke my father: Yet touch this sparingly, as 'twere with oil; Because, my lord, you know, my mother lives. Buck. Doubt not my lord, I'll play the orator, As if the golden fee, for which I plead, Were for myself: and so, my lord, adieu.

Glo. If you thrive well, bring them to Baynard's castle; Where you shall find me well accompanied, With reverend fathers, and well-learned bishops. Buck. I go, and, towards three or four o'clock, Look for the news that the Guild-hall affords. [Exit Buckingham.

Glo. Go, Lovel, with all speed to Doctor Shaw.— Go thou (to Cat.) to friar Penker.—Bid them both meet me, within this hour, at Baynard's castle.

[Exit Lovel and Catesby.

Now will I in, to take some privy order To draw the brats of Clarence out of sight; And to acquaint, that no manner of person Have, any time, recourse unto the princes. [Exit.

SCENE VI.—A Street.

Enter a Scrivener.

Scriv. Here is the indictment of the good lord Hastings; Which in a set hand fairly is engross'd, That it may be to-day read over in Paul's, And mark how well the sequel hangs together:—Eleven hours I have spent to write it over, For yesternight by Catesby was it sent me; The precedent was full as long a doing: And yet within these five hours Hastings liv'd, Untaint'd, unexamind, free, at liberty. Here's a good world the while!—Who so gross, That cannot see this palpable device? Very so bold, but says—he see it not? Bad is the world; and all will come to nought, When such had dealing must he seen in thought.

[Exit.

SCENE VII.—The same. Court of Baynard's Castle.

Enter Gloster and Buckingham, meeting.

Glo. How now, how now? what say the citizens? Buck. Now by the holy mother of our Lord, The citizens are mam, say not a word.

Glo. How should you the bastardy of Edward's children?
Buck. I did; with his contract with Lady Lucy, And his contract by deputy in France: The insatiate greediness of his desires, And his enforcement of the city wives: His tyranny for trifles,— As being got, your father then in France; And his resemblance, being not like the duke. Withal, I did infer your lineaments,— Being the right idea of your father. Both in your form and nobleness of mind: Laid open all your victories in Scotland, Your discipline in war, wisdom in peace, Your bounty, virtue, fair humility; Indeed, left nothing, fitting for your purpose, Untouched, or slightly handled, in discourse. And, when my oratory grew to an end, I bade them, that did love their country's good, Cry—God save Richard, England's royal King! Glo. And did they so? Buck. No, so God help me, they spake not a word; But, like dumb statues, or breathless stones, Star'd on each other, and look'ddeadly pale. Which when I saw, I reprehended them; And ask'd the mayor, what meant this wilful silence: His answer was—the people were not us'd To be spoke to, but by the recorder. Then he was urg'd to tell my tale again;— Thus saith the duke, thus hath the duke inform'd: But nothing spake, nothing parted from himself. When he had done, some followers of mine own, At lower end o'the hall, hur'd up their caps, And some ten voices cried, God save king Richard! And thus I took the vantage of those few,— Thanks, gentle citizens, and friends, quoth I; This general applause, and cheerful shout, Argues your wisdom, and your love to Richard: And thus I brake off, and went away. Glo. What tongueless blocks were they? Would they not speak? Will not the mayor then, and his brethren, come? Buck. The mayor is here at hand, intend some fear; Be not you spoke with, but by mighty suit: And look you, get a prayer-book in your hand, And stand between two churchmen, good my lord; For on that ground I'll make a holy descant: And be not easily won to our requests; Play the maid's part, still answer nay, and take it. Glo. I go; And if you plead as well for them, As I can say may to thee for thy mercy, No doubt we'll bring it to a happy issue. Buck. Go, go, up to the leads; the lord mayor knocks. [Exit Gloster.

Enter the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens.

Welcome, my lord: I dance attendance here; I think, the duke will not be spoke withal.—

Enter from the castle, Catesby.

Now, Catesby! what says your lord to my request? Cate. He doth entreat your grace, my noble lord, To visit him to-morrow, or next day: He is within, with two right reverend fathers, Divinely bent to meditation: And in no worldly suit would he be mov'd, To draw him from his holy exercise. Buck. Ah, la, my lord, this prince is not an Edward! He is not lolling on a lewd day-bed, But on his knees at meditation; Not dallying with a brace of courtzants, But meditating with two deep divines; Not sleeping, to engross his idle body, But praying, to enrich his watchful soul: Happy were England, would this virtuous prince Take on himself the sovereignty thereof: But, sure, no fear, he shall never win li to it. May. Marry, God defend, his grace should say us nay! Buck. I fear, he will: Here Catesby comes again—

Re-enter Catesby.

Now, Catesby, what says his grace? Cate. He wonders to what end you have assembled Such troops of citizens to come to him, His grace not being warn'd thereof before; He fears, my lord, you mean no good to him. Buck. Sorry I am, my noble cousin should' Suspect me, that I mean no good to him: By heaven, we come to him in perfect love; And so once more return and tell his grace. [Exit Catesby. When holy and devout religious men Are at their beads, 'tis hard to draw them thence; So sweet is zealous contemplation. Enter Gloster, in a gallery above, between two Bishops. Catesby returns. May. See, where his grace stands 'twixt two clergymen! Buck. This troop of virtue for a christian prince, To stay him from the fall of vanity: And, see, a book of prayer in his hand; True ornaments to know a holy man.— Famous Plantagenet, most gracious prince, Send favourable ear to our requests; And pardon us the interruption Of thy devotion, and right christian zeal. Glo. My lord, there needs no such apology; I rather do beseech you pardon me. Who, earnest in the service of my God, Neglect the visitation of my friends. But, leaving this, what is your grace's pleasure? Buck. Even that, I hope, which pleaseth God above, And all good men of this ungovn'd isle. Glo. I do suspect, I have done some offence, That seems disgraceful in the city's eye; And that you come to reprehend my ignorance. Buck. You have, my lord; Would it might please your grace, On our entreaties to amend your fault! Glo. Else wherewith breathe I in a christian land? Buck. Know, then, it is your fault, that you resign The supreme seat, the throne majestical, The scepter'd office of your ancestors, Your state of fortune, and your due of birth, The lineal glory of your royal house, To the corruption of a blemish'd stock; Whilst, in the mildness of your sleepy thoughts, (Which here we waken to our country's good,) The noble isle doth want her proper limbs; Her face defac'd with scars of infancy, Her royal stock graft with ignoble plants, And almost should'er'd in the swelling gulf Of dark forgetfulness and deep oblivion. Which to remove we heartily solicit Your gracious self to take on you the charge And kingly government of this your land Not as protector, steward, substitute, Or owly father, as one of your subjects; But as successively, from blood to blood, Your right of birth, your empery, your own. For this, consoled with the citizens, Your very worshipful and loving friends, And by their vehement instigation, In this just suit come I to move your grace. Glo. I cannot tell, if to depart in silence, Or bitterly to speak in your reproof, Best fittest my degree, or your condition:
If, not to answer,—you might happily think,
Tongue-tied ambition, not replying, yielded
To bear the golden yoke of sovereignty,
Which fondly you would here impose on me;
If to refuse you for this suit of yours,
So season'd with your faithful love to me,
Then, ou the other side, I check'd my friends.
Therefore,—to speak, and to avoid the first;
And though in speaking, not to incur the last,—
Definitively thus I answer you.
Your love deserves my thanks; but my desert
Uneritable, shuns your high request.
First, if all obstacles were cut off,
And that my path were even to the crown,
As the ripe revenue and due of birth;
Yet so much is my poverty of spirit,
So mighty, and so many, my defects,
That I would rather hide me from your greatness—
Being a bark to brook no mighty sea—
Than in my greatness covet to be hid,
And in the vapour of my glory smother'd.
But, God be thank'd, there is no need of me;
(As much I need to help you, if need were)
The royal tree hath left us royal fruit,
Which, mellow'd by the stealing hours of time,
Will soon become the seat of majesty,
And make, no doubt, us happy by his reigne.
On him I lay what you would lay on me,
The right and fortune of his happy stars—
Which, God defend, that I should wring from him!

Buck. My lord, this argues conscience in your grace;
But the respects thereof are nice and trivial,
All circumstances well considered.
You say that Edward is your brother's son;
So say we too, but not by Edward's wife;
For first he was contract to lady Lucy,
Your mother lives a witness to his vow:
And afterwards by substitute betroth'd
To Bona, sister to the king of France.
These both put by, a poor petitioner,
A care-craz'd mother to a many sons,
A beauty-waning and distressed widow,
Even in the afternoon of her best days,
Made prize and purchase of his wanton eye,
Seduc'd the pitch and height of all his thoughts
To base declension, and loath'd bigamy
By her, in her unlawful bed, he got
This Edward, whom our manners call—the prince.
More bitterly could I expostulate,
Say that, for reverence to sovereignty,
I give a sparing limit to my tongue.
Then, good my lord, take to your royal self
This proffer'd benefit of dignity:
If not to bless us and the land withal,
Yet to draw forth your noble acnesty
From the corruption of abusing time,
Unto a lineal true-derived course.

May. Do, good my lord; your citizens entreat
you.

Buck. Refuse not, mighty lord, this proffer'd love.

Cate. O make them joyful, grant their lawful suit.

Glo. Alas, why would you heap those cares on me?
I am unfit for state and majesty:
I do beseech you, take it not amiss;
I cannot, nor will I not yield to you.

Buck. If you refuse it,—as in love and zeal,
Loath to depose the child, your brother's son;
As well we know your tenderness of heart,
And gentle, kind, effeminate remorse,
Which we have noted in you to your kindred,
And equally, indeed, to all estates,—
Yet know, where you accept our suit or no,
Your brother's son shall never reign our king;
But this will apply us to some other in your house,
To the disgrace and downfall of your house.
And, in this resolution, here we leave you:—
Come, citizens, we will entreat no more.

[Exit Buckingham and Citizens.

Cate. Call them again, sweet prince, accept their suit,
If you deny them, all the land will rue it.
Glo. How could you enforce me to a world of cares?
Well, call them again; I am not made of stone,
But penetrable to your kind entreaties,
[Exit Catesby.

Albeit against my conscience and my soul.—

Re-enter Buckingham, and the rest.

Cousin of Buckingham,—and sage grave men,—
Since you will buckie fortune on my back,
To bear her burden, whether I will, or no,
I must have patience to endure the load:
But if black scandal, or foul-fac'd reproach,
Attend the sequel of your imposition,
Your mere enforcement shall acquaintance me
From all the impure blots and stains thereof;
For God he knows, and you may partly see,
How far I am from the desire of this.
May. God bless your grace! we see it, and will say it.

Glo. In saying so, you shall say but the truth.
Buck. Then I salute you with this royal title.—
Long live king Richard, England's worthy king!—
All. Amen.
Buck. To-morrow may it please you to be crown'd.
Glo. Even when you please, since you will have it so.
Buck. To-morrow then we will attend your grace;
And so most joyfully, we take our leave.

Glo. Come, let us to our holy work again.—
[To the Bishops.

Farewell, good cousin,—farewell, gentle friends.
[Exeunt.

ACT IV

SCENE I.—Before the Tower.

Enter, on one side, Queen Elizabeth, Duchess of York, and Marquis of Dorset; on the other, Anne, Duchess of Gloster, leading Lady Margaret Plantagenet, Clarence's young daughter.

Duch. Who meets us here?—my niece Plantagenet
Led in the hand of her kind aunt of Gloster?
Now, for my life, she's wand'ring to the Tower,
On pure heart's love, to greet the tender prince.—
Duchess, well met.

Anne. God give your graces both
A happy and a joyful time of day!
Q. Eliz. As much to you, good sister! Whither you go?
Anne. No further than the Tower; and, as I guess,
Upon the like devotion as yourselves,
To gratulate the gentle princes there.
Q. Eliz. Kind sister, thanks; we'll enter all togeth'er:

[Enter Brakenbury.

And, in good time, here the lieutenant comes.—
Master lieutenant, pray you, by your leave,
How doth the prince, and my young son of York?
Brak. Right well, dear madam! By your patience,
I may not suffer you to visit them;
The king hath strictly charg'd the contrary.
Q. Eliz. The king! who's that?
Brak. I mean, the lord protector.
Q. Eliz. The lord protect him from that kingly title!
Hath he set bounds between their love and me?
I am their mother, who shall bar me from them?
Duch. I am their father's mother, I will see them.
Anne. Their aunt I am in law, in love their mother: Then bring me to their sights; I'll bear thy blame. And take thy office from thee, on my peril.

Brak. No, madam, no, I may not leave it so; I am bound by oath, and therefore pardon me.

[Exit Brakenbury.]

Elder Stanley.

Stan. Let me but meet you, ladies, one hour hence, And I'll salute your grace of York as mother, And reverend looker-on of two fair queens.— Come, madam, you must straight to Westminster.

[To the Duchess of Gloucester.]

There to be crowned Richard's royal queen.

Q. Eliz. Ah, cut my lace asunder !

That my pent heart may have some scope to beat, Or else I swoon with this dead-killing news.

Anne. Despightful tidings! O unpleasing news!

Dor. Be of good cheer;—Mother, how fares your grace?

Q. Eliz. O Dorset, speak not to me, get thee gone,

Death and destruction dog thee at the heels; Thy mother's name is ominous to children: If thou haststriped death, go to the sea, And live with Richmond, from the reach of hell. Go, hie thee, hie thee, from this slaughter-house, Lest thou increase the number of the dead; And make me die the thrall of Margaret's curse,— Nor mother, wife, nor land's uncounted queen.

Sten. Full of wise care is this your counsel, madam:— Take all the swift advantage of the hours; You shall have letters from me to my son In your behalf, to meet you on the way; Be not ta'en tardy by unwise delay.

Duck. O ill-dispersing wind of misery!

O my sacred womb, the bed of a thorn! A cockatrice hast thou hatch'd to the world, Whose unavoidable eye is murderous!

Sten. Come, madam, come; I in all haste was

Anne. And I with all unwillingness will go.— O God, to would, that the inclusive verge Of golden metal, that must round my brow, Were red-hot steel, to sear me to the brain! Anointed let me be with deadly venom; And die, ere men can say—God save the queen!

Q. Eliz. Go, go, poor soul, I envy not thy glory; To feed my humour, wish thyself no harm. Anne. Why?—When he, that is my husband now, Came to me, as I follow'd Henry's corse; When scarce the blood was well wash'd from his hands, Which issu'd from my other angel husband, And that dead saint which then I waving followed, O, when, I say, I look'd on Richard's face, This was my wish.—Be thou, quoth I, accur'd, For making me, so young, so old a widow! And, when thou mad'st, let sorrow haunt thy bed; And be thy wife (if any be so mad) More miserable by the life of thee, Than thou hast made me by my dear lord's death! Lo, ere I can repeat this curse again, Even in so short a space, my woman's heart Groanily grew captive to his honey words, And prov'd the subject of mine own soul's curse: Which ever since hath held mine eyes from rest; For never yet one hour in his bed Did I enjoy the golden dew of sleep, But whilst this new dream was still awk'ard; Besides, he hates me for my father Warwick; And will, no doubt, shortly be rid of me.

Q. Eliz. Poor heart, adieu! I pity thy complaining.

Anne. No more than with my soul I mourn for yours.

Dor. Farewell, thou wouf welcomer of glory!

Anne. Adieu, poor soul, that tak' st thy leave of it!

Duck. Go thou to Richmond, and good fortune guide thee!—

[To Dorset.]

Go thou to Richard, and good angels tend thee!—

[To Anne.]

Go thou to sanctuary, and good thoughts possess thee!

[To Q. Elizabeth.]

I to my grave, where peace and rest lie with me! Eighty odd years of sorrow have I seen, And each hour's joy wrack'd with a week of teen.

Q. Eliz. Stay yet; look back, with me, unto the Tower.—

Pity, you ancient stones, these tender babes, Whom envy hath immur'd within your walls! Rough cradle for such little pretty ones! Rude ragged nurse! old sullen play-fellow For tender princes, use my babies well! So foolish sorrow bids your stones farewell.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Room of State in the Palace.

Flourish of trumpets. Richard, as King, upon his throne ; Buckingham, Catesby, a Page, and others.

K. Rich. Stand all apart.—Cousin of Buckingham,

Buck. My gracious sovereign.

K. Rich. Give me thy hand. Thus high, by thy advice, And thy assistance, is king Richard seated:— But shall we wear these glorifies for a day? Or shall they last, and we rejoice in them?

Buck. Still live they, and for ever let them last!

K. Rich. Ay, Buckingham, now do I play the touch, To try if thou be current gold, indeed:— Young Edward lives;—Think now what I would speak.

Buck. Say on, my loving lord.

Buck. Why, so you are, my thrice-renowned liege.

K. Rich. Ha! am I king? 'Tis so: but Edward lives.

Buck. True, noble prince.

K. Rich. O bitter consequence, That Edward still should live,—true, noble prince!— Cousin, thou wast not wont to be so dull:— Shall I be plain? I wish the bastard dead; And I would have it suddenly perform'd. What say'st thou now? speak suddenly, be brief.

Buck. Your grace may do your pleasure.

K. Rich. Tut, tut, thou art all ice, thykindness freezes; Say, have I thy consent, that they shall die?

Buck. Give me some breath, some little pause, dear lord, Before I positively speak in this:

I will resolve your grace immediately.

[Exit Buckingham.]

Catesby. The king is angry; see, he gnaws his lip.

[Aside.]

K. Rich. I will converse with iron-witted fools,

[Descends from his throne

And unrespective boys; none are for me, That look into me with considerate eyes;— High-reaching Buckingham grows circumstances.

Boyd.

Page. My lord.

K. Rich. Know'st thou not any, whom corrupting gold Would tempt unto a close exploit of death?

Page. Lord, I am a discontented gentleman, Whose humble means match not his haughty mind; Gold were as good as twenty orators, And will, no doubt, tempt him to any thing.

K. Rich. What is his name?

Page.

His name, my lord, is—Tyrel.

K. Rich. I partly know the man; Go, call him hither, boy.

[Exit Page.]

The deep-revolving witty Buckingham
No more shall be the neighbour to my counsels:
Hath he so long held out with me untir'd,
And stops he now for breath?—well, be it so.—

Enter Stanley.

How now, lord Stanley? what's the news?
Stau.  Know, my loving lord,
The marquis Dorset, as I hear, is fled
To Richmond, in the parts where he abides.

K. Rich. Come hither, Catesby; rumour it abroad,
That Anne, my wife, is very grievous sick;
I will take order for her keeping close.
Inquire me out some mean-born gentleman,
Whom I will marry straight to Clarence' daughter.

The boy is foolish, and I fear not him.
Look, how thou dream'st!—I say again, give out,
That Anne my queen is sick, and like to die:
About it; for it stands me much upon,
To stop all hopes whose growth may damage me.—
[Exit Catesby.

I must be married to my brother's daughter,
Or else my kingdom stands on brittle glass:
Murder her brothers, and then marry her!
Uncertain way of gain! But I am in
So far in blood, that sin will pluck on sin.
Fear-falling pity dwells not in this eye.

Re-enter Page, with Tyrrel.

Is thy name—Tyrrel?

Tyr. James Tyrrel, and your most obedient subjects.

K. Rich. Art thou, indeed?

Tyr. Prove me, my gracious lord.

K. Rich. Dar'st thou resolve to kill a friend of mine?

Tyr. Please you; but I had rather kill two enemies.

K. Rich. Why, then thou hast it; two deep enemies.

Foes to my rest, and my sweet sleep's disturbers,
Are they that I would have thee deal upon:
Tyrrel, I mean those bastards in the Tower.

Tyr. Let me have open means to come to them,
And soon I'll rid you from the fear of them.

K. Rich. Thou sing'st sweet music. I'ack, come hither, Tyrrel;
Go, by this token:—Rise, and lend thine ear:

Tyr. There is no more but so:—Say, it is done,
And I will love thee, and prefer thee for it.

Tyr. I will despatch it straight.

[Exit, Re-enter Buckingham.

Buck. My lord, I have consider'd in my mind
The late demand that you did sound me in.

K. Rich. Well, let that rest. Dorset is fled to Richmond.

Buck. I hear the news, my lord.

K. Rich. Stanley, he is your wife's son:—Well, look to it.

Buck. My lord, I claim the gift, my due by promise,
For which your honour and your faith is pawn'd;
The earldom of Hereford, and the moveables,
Which you have promised I shall possess.

K. Rich. Stanley, look to your wife; if she convey
Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it.

Buck. What says your highness to my just request?

K. Rich. I do remember me,—Henry the Sixth
Did prophesy, that Richmond should be king,
When Richmond was a little peevish boy.

A King's prerogative

Buck. My lord,

K. Rich. How chance, the prophet could not at that time,

have told me, I being by, that should kill him?

Buck. My lord, your promise for the earldom,—

K. Rich. Richmond:—When last I was at Exeter,
The mayor in courtesy show'd me the castle,
And called it the ha'penny: at which name I started;
Because a bard of Ireland told me once,
I should not live long after I saw Richmond.

Buck. My lord,

K. Rich. Ay, what's o'clock?

Buck. Upon the stroke
Of ten.

K. Rich. Well, let it strike.

Buck. Why, let it strike?

K. Rich. Because that, like a Jack, thou keep'st the stroke
Betwixt thy begging and my meditation.
I am not in the giving vein to-day.

Buck. Why, then resolve me whe'er you will, or no.

K. Rich. Thou troublest me; I am not in the vein.

[Exit King Richard and Tyrrel.

Buck. And is it thus? repays he my deep service?
With such contempt? made I him king for this?
O, let me think on Hastings; and be gone
To Brecknock, while my fearful head is on. [Exit.

SCENE III.—The same.

Enter Tyrrel.

Tyr. The tyrannous and bloody act is done;
The most arch deed of piteous massacre,
That ever yet this land was guilty of.
Dighton, and Forrest, whom I did suborn
To do this piece of ruthless butchery.
Albeit they were flesh'd villains, bloody dogs,
Melting with tenderness and mild compassion,
Wet like two children, in their death's sad story,
O thus, quoth Dighton, lay the gentle bates,
A look of prayers on their pillow lay's;
Which once, quoth Forrest, almost chang'd my mind.
But, O, the devil!—there the villain stopp'd;
When Dighton thus told on,—me smother'd
The most expiendent sport of woe,
That, from the prime creation, e'er she fram'd!—
Hence both are gone with conscience and remorse,
They could not speak; and so I left them both,
To bear this tidings to the bloody king.

Enter King Richard.

And here he comes:—All health, my sovereign lord!

K. Rich. Kind Tyrrel! am I happy in thy news?

Tyr. If to have done the thing you gave in charge
Beget your happiness, be happy then,
For it is done.

K. Rich. But didst thou see them dead?

Tyr. I did, my lord.

K. Rich. And buried, gentle Tyrrel?

Tyr. I, the chaplain of the Tower hath buried
them;
But where, to say the truth, I do not know.

K. Rich. Come to me, Tyrrel, soon, at after sundown.
When thou shalt tell the process of their death.
Mean time, but think how I may do thee good,
And be inheritor of thy desire.

Tyr. Farewell, till then.

Tyr. I humbly take my leave. [Exit.

K. Rich. The son of Clarence have I penn'd up close;
His daughter meanly have I match'd in marriage
The sons of Edward sleep in Abraham's bosom,
And Anne my wife hath bid the world good night.
Now, for I know the Bretagne Richmond aims
At young Elizabeth, my brother's daughter.
And, by that knot, looks proudly on the crown,
To her go I, a jolly thriving woor.

Enter Catesby.

Cates. My lord,—
K. Rich. Good news or bad, that thou com'st in so bluntly?

Cates. Bad news, my lord: Morton is fled to Richmond.

And Buckingham, back'd with the hardy Welsh-
men,
is in the field, and still his power encreasea.
K. Rich. Ely with Richmond troubles me more near
Than Buckingham and his rash-levied strength.
Come,—I have learn'd, that fearful communis leaden servitor to dull delay;
Delay leads impotent and snail-pace'd beggary:—
Then fiery expedition be my wing,
Jove's Mercury, and herald for a king!
Go, muster men: My counsel is my shield;
We must be brief, when traitors brave the field.

Exeunt.

Scene IV.—The same. Before the Palace.

Enter Queen Margaret.

Q. Mar. So, now prosperity begins to mellow,
And drop into the rotten mouth of death.
Here in these confines silly have I lurk'd,
To watch the waning of mine enemies.
A dire induction am I witness to,
And will to France; hoping, the consequence
Will make as bitter of senility,
Withdraw thee, wretched Margaret! who comes here?

Enter Queen Elizabeth and the Duchess of York.

Q. Eliz. Ah, my poor princes! ah, my tender
babes!
My unblown flowers, new-appearing sweets!
If yet your gentle souls fly in the air,
And be not fix'd in doom perpetual,
Hover about me with your airy wings,
And hear your mother's lamentation!
Q. Mar. Hover over her; say, that right for right
Hath dim'd your infant morn to aged night.

Duch. So many miseries have craz'd my voice,
That my woe-weared tongue is still and mute,—
Edward Plantagenet,
Edward for Edward pays a dying debt.
Q. Eliz. Will thou, O God, fly from such gentle
And throw them in the entrails of the wolf?
When didst thou sleep, when such a deed was done?
Q. Mar. When holy Harry died, and my sweet
son.

Duch. Dead life, blind sight, poor mortal-living ghost,
Woe's scene, world's shame, grave's due by life
ruptd,
Brief abstract and record of tedious days,
Rest thy unrest on England's lawful earth,
(Sitting down.)

Unlawfully made drunk with innocent blood!
Q. Eliz. Ah, that thou would'st as soon afford a grave,
As thou canst yield a melancholy seat;
Then would I hide my bones, not rest them here!
Ah, who hath any cause to mourn, but we?—

[Sittdng down by her.

Q. Mar. If ancient sorrow be most reverent,
Give nigh the benefit of senility,
And let my griefs frown on the upper hand.
If sorrow can admit society,

[Sittdng down with them.
Q. Elis. O thou well skill'd in curses, stay a while, And teach me how to curse mine enemies. Q. Mar. Forbear to sleep the night, and fast the day; Compare dead happiness with living woe; Think that thy babes were fairer than they were, And he, that slew them, fouler than he is: Better the loss of the bad, than making the bad-caster worse; Resolving this will teach thee how to curse. Q. Elis. My words are dull, O, quicken them with thine! Q. Mar. Thy woes will make them sharp, and pierce like mine. [Exit Q. Margaret. Duch. Why should calamity be full of words? Q. Elis. Windy attorneys to their client woes, Airy suceeders of intestine joys, Poor breathing orators of miseries! Let them have scope: though what they do impart Help nothing else, yet do they ease the heart. Duch. If so, thou be not tongue-tied: go with me, And in the breath of bitter words let's smoother My dammed son, that thy two sweet sons smother'd. [Dram, within.
I hear his drum,—be copious in exclamis.

Enter King Richard, and his Train, marching.

K. Rich. Who intercepts me in my expedition? Duch. O, she, that might have intercepted thee, By strangling thee in her accursed womb. From all the slaughters, wretch, that thou hast done. Q. Elis. Hid'st thou that forehead with a golden crown? Where should be branded, if that right were right, The slaughter of the prince that ow'd that crown, And the dire death of my poor sons, and brothers? Tell me, thou villain-slave, where are my children? Duch. Thou toad, thou toad, where is thy brother (Clarence)? And little Ned Plantagenet, his son? Q. Elis. Where is the gentle Rivers, Vaughan, Grey? Duch. Where is kind Hastings? K. Rich. A flourish, trumpets,—strike alarum, drums! Let not the heavens hear these tell-tale women Rail on the Lord's appointed: Strike, I say, [Flourish. Alarum. Either be patient, and entreat me fair, Or with the clamorous report of war Thus will I drown your exclamations. Duch. Art thou my son? K. Rich. Ay; I thank God, my father, and myself. Duch. Then patiently hear my impatience. K. Rich. Madam, I have a touch of your condition, That cannot brook the accent of reproof. Duch. O, let me speak. K. Rich. Do, then; but I'll not hear. Duch. I will be mild and gentle in my words. K. Rich. And brief, good mother; for I am in haste, Duch. Art thou so hasty? I have staid for thee, God knows, in torment and in agony. K. Rich. And came I not at last to comfort you? Duch. No, by the holy rood, thou know'st it well, Thou cam'st on earth to make the earth my hell. A grievous burden was thy birth to me; Teichy, and wayward was thy infancy; Thy school-days, frightful, desperate, wild, and furious; Thy prime of manhood, daring, bold, and venturous, Thy age confirm'd, proud, subtle, sly, and bloody, More mild, but yet more barmful, kind in hatred: What comfortable hour caust thou name, That ever grac'd me in thy company? K. Rich. 'Faith, none, but Humphrey Hear, that call'd your grace To breakfast once, forth of my company. If I be so disgracious in your sight, Let me retrace on, and not offend you, madam,— Strike up the drum. Duch. I pray thee, hear me speak. K. Rich. You speak too bitterly. Duch. For I shall never speak to thee again. K. Rich. So. Duch. Either thou wilt die, by God's just or

Ere from this war thou turn a conqueror; Or I with grief and extreme age shall perish, And never look upon thy face again. Therefore, take with thee my most heavy curse; Which, in the day of battle, tire thee more, Than all the complete armour that thou wear'st! My prayers on the adverse party fight; And there the little souls of Edward's children Whisper the spirits of thine enemies, And promise them success and victory. Bloody thou art, bloody will be thy end; Shame serves thy life, and doth thy death attend.

[Exit. Q. Elis. Though far more cause, yet much less spirit to curse Abides in me; I say amen to her. [Going. K. Rich. Stay, madam, I must speak a word with you. Q. Elis. I have no more sons of the royal blood, For thee to murder: for my daughters, Richard,— They shall be praying nuns, not weeping queens; And therefore level not to hit their lives. K. Rich. You have a daughter call'd—Elizabeth, Virtuous and fair, royal and gracious. Q. Elis. And must she die for this? O, let her And I'll corrupt her manners, stain her beauty: Slander myself, as false to Edward's bed; Throw over her the veil of infamy; So she may live unscar'd of bleeding slaughter, I will confess she was not Edward's daughter. K. Rich. Wrong not her birth, she is of royal blood. Q. Elis. To save her life, I'll say—she is not so. K. Rich. Her life is safest only in her birth. Q. Elis. And only in that safety died her brothers. K. Rich. Lo, at their births good stars were Q. Elis. No, to their lives bad friends were contrary. K. Rich. All unavoided is the doom of destiny. Q. Elis. True, when avoided grace makes deserts. My babes were destin'd to a fairer death, If grace had bless'd thee with a fairer life. K. Rich. You speak, as if that I had slain my cousins. Q. Elis. Cousins, indeed; and by their uncle cozen'd Of comfort, kingdom, kindred, freedom, life. Who's hands soever lanced their tender hearts, Thy head, all indirectly, gave direction: No doubt the murderous knife was dull and blunt, Till it was whetted on thy stone-hard heart, To revel in the entrails of my lambs. Who's hands soever saddened their tender hearts, To revel in the entrails of my lambs: And I, in such a desperate bay of death, Like those that use of grief makes wild grief tame, My tongue should to thy ears not name my boys, Till that my nails were anchor'd in thine eyes; And I, in such a desperate bay of death, Rush all to pieces on thy rocky bosom. K. Rich. Madam, so thrive I in my enterprise, And dangerous success of bloody wars, As I intend more good to you and yours, Than ever you or yours by me were harm'd! Q. Elis. What good is cover'd with the face of heaven, To be discover'd, that can do me good?
Your children were vexation to your youth. But mine shall be a comfort to your age. The loss, you have, is but—a son being king, And, by that loss, your daughter is made queen. I cannot make you what amends I would, Therefore accept such kindness as I can. Dorset, your son, that, with a fearful soul, Leads discontented steps in foreign soil, This fair alliance quickly shall call home To high recompenses and great dignity: The king, that calls your beauteous daughter,—wife. Familiarly shall call thy Dorset—brother; Again shall you be mother to a king, And all the ruins of distressful times Repair'd with double riches of content. What! we have many goodly days to see: The liquid drops of tears that you have shed, Shall come again, transform'd to orient pearl; Advantaging their loan, with interest Of ten-times double gain of happiness. Go, then, my mother, to thy daughter go; Make bold her bashful years with your experience; Prepare her ears to hear a wooser's tale; Put in her tender heart the aspiring flame Of goden sover'ignty; acquire the princess With the sweet silent hours of marriage joys; And when this arm of mine hath chastised The petty rebel, dull-brain'd Buckingham, Bound with triumphant garlands will I come, and lead as daughter to a conqueror's bed; To whom I will retaliate my conquest won, And she shall be sole victress, Caesar's Caesar. Q. Eliz. What were I best to say? her father's brother Would be her lord? Or shall I say, her uncle? Or, he that slew her brothers, and her uncles? Under what title shall I woo thee, That God, the law, my honour, and her love, Can make me so pleasing to her tender years? K. Rich. Infer fair England's peace by this alliance. Q. Eliz. Which shall she purchase with still lasting war. K. Rich. Tell her, the king, that may command, entreats. Q. Eliz. That at her hands, which the king's dying forbids. K. Rich. Say, she shall be a high and mighty queen. Q. Eliz. To wait the title, as her mother doth. K. Rich. Say, I will love her everlasting. Q. Eliz. But how long shall that title, ever, last? K. Rich. Sweetly in force unto her fair life's end. Q. Eliz. But how long fairly shall her sweet life last? K. Rich. As long as heaven, and nature, lengtliens it. Q. Eliz. As long as hell, and Richard, likes of it. K. Rich. Say, I, her sovereign, am her subject low. Q. Eliz. But she, your subject, loathes such sover'ignty. K. Rich. Be eloquent in my behalf to her. Q. Eliz. An honest tale speedes best, being plainly told. K. Rich. Then, in plain terms tell her my loving tale. Q. Eliz. Plain, and not honest, is too harsh a style. K. Rich. Your reasons are too shallow and too quick. Q. Eliz. O, no, my reasons are too deep and deep. Too deep, too deep, poor infants, in their graves. K. Rich. Harp not on that string, madam; that is past. Q. Eliz. Harp on it still shall I, till heart-string's. K. Rich. Now, by my George, my garter, and my crown,— Q. Eliz. Profan'd, dishonour'd, and the third usury'd.

Q. Eliz. I swear by nothing: for this is no oath. Thy George, profan'd, hath lost his holy honour; Thy garter, blemish'd, pawn'd his knightly virtue; Thy crown, usurp'd, disgrac'd his kingly glory: If something thou wouldst swear to be believ'd, Swear then by something that thou hast not wrong'd.

K. Rich. Now by the world,— Q. Eliz. 'Tis full of thy foul wrongs. K. Rich. Thy father's death. Q. Eliz. Thy life hath dishonour'd. K. Rich. Then, by myself,— Q. Eliz. Thyself is self-mis us'd. K. Rich. Why then, by God! Q. Eliz. God's wrong is most of all. If thou hast fear'd to break an oath by him, The unity, the king thy brother made, Had not been broken, nor my brother slain. If thou hadst fear'd to break an oath by him, The imperial metal, circling now thy head, Had grace'd the tender temples of my child; And both the princes was breathing here, Which now, two tender bed-fellows for dust, Thy broken faith hath made a prey for worms. What canst thou swear by now? K. Rich. By the time to come. Q. Eliz. That thou hast wrong'd in the time o'erpast; I go For myself have many tears to wash Hereafter time, for time past, wrong'd by thee. The children live, whose parents thou hast slaughter'd, Ungovern'd youth, to wail it in their age: The parents live, whose children thou hast butcher'd, Old barren pleasures, to wail it with their age. Swear not by time to come; for that thou hast Mis us'd ere used, by times ill us'd o'er-past.

K. Rich. As I intend to prosper, and repent! So thrive I in my dangerous attempt Of hostile arms! myself myself confound! Heaven, and fortune, bar me happy hours! Day, yield me not thy light: nor, night, thy rest! Be opposite all planets of good luck To my proceeding, if, with pure heart's love, Immaculate devotion, holy thoughts, I tender not thy beamy princely daughter! In her consists my happiness, and thine; Without her, falls to myself and thee, Herself, the land, and many a Christian soul, Death, desolation, ruin, and decay: It cannot be avoided, but by this; It will not be avoided, but by this. Therefore, dear mother, (if I must call you so,) Be the attorney of my love to her. Plead what I will be, not what I have been; Not my deserts, but what I will deserve: Urge the necessity and state of times, And be not peevish found in great designs. Q. Eliz. Shall I be tempted of the devil thens? K. Rich. Ay, if the devil tempt thee to do good. Q. Eliz. Shall I forget myself, to be myself? K. Rich. Ay, if your self's remembrance wrong yourself. Q. Eliz. But thou didst kill my children. K. Rich. But in your daughter's womb I bury them. Where in that nest of spicerie, they shall breed Selves of themselves to your requomfort. Q. Eliz. Shall I go win my daughter to thy will? K. Rich. But in your daughter's womb I bury them. Q. Eliz. I go.—Write to me very shortly, And you shall understand from me her mind. K. Rich. Bear her my true love's kiss, and so farewell. [Kissing her. Exit Q. Elizabath. Relenting fool, and shallow, changing—woman! How now? what news?]

Enter Ratcliff; Catesby following.

Rat. Most mighty sovereign, on the western coast

Rideth a prussian nany; to the shore
Throng many doubtful hollow-hearted friends,
Unarm'd, and unre solv'd to beat them back:
'Tis thought, that Richmond is their admiral; And they there hulk, expecting but the aid Of Buckingham to welcome them ashore.

K. Rich. Some light-foot friend post to the duke of Norfolk:
Ratcliff, thyself,—or Catesby; where is he? Cate. Here, my good lord. K. Rich. Ratcliff, Catesby, fly to the duke. Cate. I will, my lord, with all convenient haste. K. Rich. Ratcliff, come hither: Post to Salisbury; When thou com'st thither,—Dull unmindful wit! [To Catesby. Why stay'st thou here, and go'st not to the duke? Cate. First, mighty liege, tell me your highness' pleasure, What from your grace I shall deliver to him. K. Rich. O, true, good Catesby;—Bid him very straight The greatest strength and power he can make, And meet me suddenly at Salisbury.

That, in the sty of this most bloody boar,
My son George Stanley is frank'd up in hold;
If I revolt, off goes young George's head!
The fear of that withholds my present aid.
But, tell me, where is princely Richmond now?
Chris. Sir Walter Herbert, a renowned soldier;
Sir Gilbert, sir William, sir James Blunt.
Oxford, redoutted Pembroke, sir James Blunt,
And Rice ap Thomas, with a valiant crew;
And many other of great fame and worth:
And towards London do they bend their course,
If by their way they be not fought withal.
Stan. Well, he's thee to thy lord; commend me to him;
Tell him the queen hath heartily consented
He shall espouse Elizabeth her daughter.
These letters will resolve him of my mind.
Farewell. [Gives papers to Sir Christopher. [Exit.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Salisbury. An open Place.

Enter the Sheriff and Guard, with Buckingham, led to execution.

Buck. Will not king Richard let me speak with him?
Sher. No, my good lord; therefore be patient.
Buck. Hastings and Edward's children, Rivers,
Holy king Henry, and thy fair son Edward,
Vaughan, and all that have miscarried
By underhand corrupted foul injustice;
If that thy Moody disconcerned
Do through the clouds behold this present hour,
Even for revenge mock my destruction!
This is All-Souls' day, fellows, is it not?
Sher. It is, my lord.
Buck. Why, then All-Souls' day is my body's doomsday.
This is the day, which, in king Edward's time,
I wish'd might fall on me, when I was found
False to his children, or his wife's allies:
This is the day, wherein I wish'd to fall
By the false faith of him whom most I trusted:
This, that All-Souls' day to my fearful soul,
Is the determin'd respite of my wrongs.
That high All-seer which I dallied with,
Hath turned my fidel'd prayer on my head,
And given in earnest what I begg'd in jest.
Thus doth he force the swords of wicked men
To turn their own points on their masters' bosoms:
Thus Margaret's curse falls heavy on my neck,
When he, quoth she, shall split thy heart with sor'vom.
Remember Margaret was a prophetess—
Come, sirs, convey me to the block of shame:
Wrong hath but wrong, and blame the due of blame. [Exit Buckingham, &c.

SCENE II.—Plain near Tamworth.

Enter, with drum and colours, Richmond, Oxford,
Sir James Blunt, Sir Walter Herbert, and others, with Forces, marching.

Richm. Fellows in arms, and my most loving friends,
Bruised underneath the yoke of tyranny,
Thus far into the hands of the Stanley;
Have we marsh'd on without impediment;
And here receive we from our father Stanley
Lines of fair comfort and encouragement.
The wretched, bloody, and usurping boar,
That spoil'd your summer fields, and fruitful vines,
Swills your warm blood like wash, and makes his trough

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My gracious sovereign, now in Devonshire,
As I by friends am well advertised,
Sir Edward Courtney, and the haughty prelate,
Bishop of Exeter, his elder brother,
With many more confederates, are in arms.

Enter another Messenger.

2 Mess. In Kent, my liege, the Guildfords are in arms;
And every hour more competitors
Flock to the rebels, and their power grows strong.

Enter another Messenger.

3 Mess. My lord, the army of great Buckingham,
K. Rich. Out on ye, owls! nothing but songs of death?
[He strikes him.
There, take thou that, till thou bring better news.
3 Mess. The news I have to tell your majesty,
Is—that, by sudden floods and fall of waters,
Buckingham's army is dispersed, and scatter'd;
And he himself wander'd away alone,
No man knows whither.
K. Rich. O, I cry you mercy:
There is my purse, to cure that blow of thine.
Hath any well-advised friend proclaimed
Reward to him that brings the traitor in?
3 Mess. Such proclamation hath been made, my liege.

Enter another Messenger.

4 Mess. Sir Thomas Lovel, and lord marquis Dorset.
'Tis said, my liege, in Yorkshire are in arms.
But this good comfort bring I to your highness,—
The Bretagne navy is dispersed by tempest:
Richmond, in Dorsetshire, sent out a boat
Into the shore, to ask those on the banks,
If they were his assistants, yea, or no;
Who answer'd him, they came from Buckingham.
Upon his party: he, mistrusting them,
Hiero'd sail, and made his course again for Bre-

cagne.
K. Rich. March on, march on, since we are up
in arms;
If not to fight with foreign enemies,
Yet to beat down these rebels here at home.

Enter Catesby.

Cates. My liege, the duke of Buckingham is taken,
That is the best news; That the earl of Richmond
Is with a mighty power landed at Milford,
Is colder news, but yet they must be told.
K. Rich. Away towards Salisbury; while we res-
on here,
A royal battle might be won and lost—
Some one take order, Buckingham be brought To Salisbury,—the rest march on with me. [Exit.

SCENE V.—A Room in Lord Stanley's House.

Enter Stanley and Sir Christopher Urswick.

stan. Sir Christopher, tell Richmond this from me:
In your embowell'd bosoms, this foul swine
Lies now in even in the center of this isle,
Nor in the town of Leicester, as we learn:
From Tamworth thither is but one day's march.
In God's name, cheerrily on, courageous friends,
To reap the harvest of perpetual peace
By this one bloody trial of sharp war.

Oef. Every man's conscience is a thousand swords,
To fight against that bloody homicide.

Herb. I doubt not, but his friends will turn to us.
Blunt. He hath no friends, but who are friends for fear:
Which, in his dearest need, will fly from him.

Ric. All for our vantage. Then, in God's name, may True hope is swifit, and flies with swallow's wings,
Kings it makes gods, and meaner creatures kings.

SCENE III.—Bosworth Field.

Enter King Richard and Forrest : the Duke of Norfolk, Earl of Surrey, and others.

K. Rich. Here pitch our tents, even here in Bosworth field.

My lord of Surrey, why look you so sad?
Sur. My heart is ten times lighter than my looks.

Nor. Here, most gracious liege,
K. Rich. Norfolk, we must have knock'd; Ha! must we not?
Nor. We must both give and take, my loving lord.
K. Rich. Up with my tent: Here will I lie tonight;

[Soldiers begin to set up the King's tent.
But where, to-morrow?—Well, all's one for that.—
Who hath descried the number of the traitors?
Nor. Six or seven thousand is their utmost power.

K. Rich. Why, our battalia trebles that account:
Besides, the king's name is a tower of strength,
Which they upon the adverse faction want.
Up with the tent.—Come, noble gentlemen,
Let us survey the vantage of the ground;
Call for some men of sound direction;
Let's want no discipline, make no delay;
For, lords, to-morrow is a busy day.

Enter, on the other side of the field, Richmond, Sir
William Brandon, and other Lords.
Some of the Soldiers pitch Richmond's tent.

Richm. The weary sun hath made a golden set,
And, by the bright track of his fiery car,
Gives token of a goodly day to-morrow—
Sir William Brandon, you shall bear my stand-give me some ink and paper in my tent;—[ard.]
I'll draw the form and model of our battle,
Limit each leader to his several charge,
And part in just proportion our small power.

My lord of Oxford,—you, sir William Brandon,—
And you, sir Walter Herbert, stay with me:
The earl of Pembroke keeps his regiment;
Good captain Blunt, bear my good night to him,
And by the second hour in the morning
Desire the earl to see me in my tent—
Yet one thing more, good captain, do for me;
Where is lord Stanley quarter'd, do you know?
Blunt. Unless I have mista'en his colours much,
(Which, well, I am assur'd, I have not done,) His regiment lies half a mile at least
South from the mighty power of the king.

Richm. If without peril it be possible,
Sweet Blunt, make some good means to speak with
And give him from me this most needful note.

Blunt. Upon my life, my lord, I'll undertake it;
And, so God give you quiet rest to-night!

Richm. Good night, good captain Blunt. Come,
gentlemen,

Let us consult upon to-morrow's business;
In to my tent, the air is raw and cold.

[They withdraw into the tent.

Enter, to his tent, King Richard, Norfolk, Rat-ciff, and Catesby.

K. Rich. What is't o'clock?

cats. It's supper time, my lord;
It's nine o'clock.
K. Rich. I will not sup to-night.

Give me some ink and paper,—

What is my burden easier than it was?
And all my armour laid into my tent?

Cats. It is, my liege; and all things are in rea-

K. Rich. Good Norfolk, he's the to thy charge
Use careful watch, choose trusty sentinels.
Nor. I go, my lord.

K. Rich. Sir, with the dark to-morrow, gentle
Norfolk.

Nor. I warrant you, my lord.

K. Rich. Ratcliff, —

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. Send out a pursuivant at arms
To Stanley's regiment: bid him bring his power
Before sun-rising, lest his son George fall
Into the blind eye of eternal night.

Fill me a bowl of wine. Give me a watch—

[To Catesby.

Saddle white Surrey for the field to-morrow.
Look that your staves be sound, and not too heavy.
Ratcliff, —

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. Saw'st thou the melancholy lord Northernumberland?

Rat. Thomas the earl of Surrey, and himself,
In about cock-shut time, from troop to troop,
Went through the army cheering up the soldiers.

K. Rich. I am satisfied. Give me a bowl of wine:
I have not that unanimity of spirit,
Nor cheer of mind that I was wont to have—
So, set it down. —Is ink and paper ready?

Rat. It is, my lord.

K. Rich. Bid my guard watch: leave me
About the mid of night, come to my tent,
And help to arm me. —Leave me, I say.

[King Richard retires into his tent. Exeunt
Ratcliff and Catesby.

Richmond's tent opens, and discourses him and his Officers, &c.

Enter Stanley.

Stan. Fortune and victory sit on thy helm!—
Richm. All comfort that the dark night can afford.

Be to thy person, noble father-in-law!—
Tell me those facts out of loving mother?

Stan. 1, by attorney, bless thee from thy mother,
Who prays continually for Richmond's good:
So much for that. —The silent hours steal on,
And flaky darkness breaks within the east.
In brief, for so the season bids us be,
Prepare thy battle early in the morning;
And put thy fortune to the arbitration
Of bloody strokes, and mortal-staring war,
I, as I may, (that which I would, I cannot,) With best advantage will deceive the time,
And aid thee in this doubtfull shock of arms:
But on thy side I may not be too forward,
Lest, being seen, the brother tender George
Be executed in his father's sight.

Farewell! The leisure and the fearful time
Cuts off the ceremonious vows of love,
And ample interchange of sweet discourse,
Which so long under't friends should dwell upon:
God give us leisure for these rites of love:
Once more, adieu: —Be valiant, and speed well!

Richm. Good lords, conduct him to his regiment: I'll strive with troubled thoughts, to take a nap;
Lest ledain slumber pelse me down to-morrow
When I should mount with wings of victory:
Once more, good night, kind lords and gentlemen.

Exeunt Lords, &c. with Stanley.
Act 5  KING RICHARD III.  487

O Thou! whose captain I account myself,
Look on my forces with a gracious eye;
Put in their hands thy bruising irons of wrath,
That they may crush down with a heavy fall
The usurping helmets of our adversaries;
Make us thy ministers of chastisement,
That we may praise thee in thy victory!
To thee I commend my watchful soul,
Ere I let fail the windows of mine eyes;
Sleeping; and waking, O, defend me still! [Sleeps.

The Ghost of Prince Edward, son to Henry the Sixth, rises between the two tents.

GHOST. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow! [To King Richard.

Think, how thou stabb'st me in my prime of youth
At Tewksbury; Despair therefore, and die!—
Be cheerful, Richmond; for the wronged souls
Of butcher'd princes fight in thy behalf:
King Henry's issue, Richmond, comforts thee.

The Ghost of King Henry the Sixth rises.

GHOST. When I was mortal, my anointed body
By thee was pumched full of deadly holes:
Think on the Tower and me; Despair, and die;
Harry the Sixth bids thee despair, and die—
Virtuous and holy, be thou conquered!

To Richmond.

Harry, that prophesy'd thou should'st be king,
Doth comfort thee in thy sleep; Live, and flourish!

The Ghost of Clarence rises.

GHOST. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow! [To King Richard.

I, that was wash'd to death with fulsome wine,
Poor Clarence, by thy guilty betrayal to death!
To-morrow in the battle thinkest thou:
And falld thy edgeless sword; Despair, and die!—
Thou ofspring of the house of Lancaster,

To Richmond.

The wronged heirs of York do pray for thee;
Good angels guard thy battle! Live, and flourish!

The Ghosts of Rivers, Grey, and Vaughan, rise.

RIV. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow—

To King Richard.

Rivers, that didst at Pomfret! Despair, and die!
Grey, Think upon Grey, and let thy soul despair!

To King Richard.

Vaugh, Think upon Vaughan; and, with guilty fear,
Let fall thy lance! Despair, and die!—

To King Richard.

All. Awake! and think, our wrongs in Richard's bosom
Will conquer him;—awake, and win the day!

The Ghost of Hastings rises.

GHOST. Bloody and guilty, guiltyly awake,
[To King Richard.

And in a bloody battle end thy days!
Think on lord Hastings; and despair, and die!—
Quiet untroubled soul, awake, awake!

To Richmond.

Arm, fight, and conquer, for fair England's sake!

The Ghosts of the two young Princes rise.

GHOSTS. Dream on thy cousins smother'd in the Tower,
Let us be lead within thy bosom, Richmond,
And weigh thee down to ruin, shame, and death!
Thy nephews' souls bid thee despair, and die,—
Sleep, Richmond, sleep in peace, and wake in joy;
Good angels guard thee from the boar's annoy!
Live, and beget a happy race of kings!
Edward's unhappy sons do bid thee flourish.

The Ghost of Queen Anne rises.

GHOST. Richard, thy wife, that wretched Anne thy wife,
That never slept a quiet hour with thee,
Now fills thy sleep with perturbations;
To-morrow in the battle think on me,
And fall thy edgeless sword; Despair, and die!
Thou, quiet soul, sleep thou a quiet sleep;

To Richmond.

Dream of success and happy victory;
Thy adversary's wife doth pray for thee.

The Ghost of Buckingham rises.

GHOST. The first was I, that help'd thee to the crown!
[To King Richard.

The last was I that felt thy tyranny:
0, in the battle think on Buckingham,
And die in terror of thy guiltiness!
Dream on, dream on, of bloody deeds and death;
Fainting, despair; despairing, yield thy breath!—
I died for hope, ere I could lend thee aid;

To Richmond.

But cheer thy heart, and be thou not dismay'd:
God, and good angels, fight on Richmond's side;
And Richard falls in height of all his pride.

The Ghosts vanishe. King Richard starts out of his dream.

K. Rich. Give me another horse,—bind up my wounds,—
Have more, O, Jesu!—Soft! I did but dream.—
O coward conscience, how dost thou afflict me!—
The lights burn blue.—It is now dead midnight.
Cold fearful drops stand on my trembling flesh.
What do I fear? myself? there's none else by:
Richard loves Richard; that is, I am I.
Is there a murderer here?—No;—Yes; I am;
Then fly,—What, from myself? Great reason why?
Lest I revenge. What? Myself on myself?
I love myself. Wherefore? for any good,
That I myself have done unto myself?
O, no; alas, I rather hate myself,
For hateful deeds committed by myself.
I am a villain: Yet I lie, I am not.
Fool, of thyself speak well:—Fool, do not flatter.
My conscience hath a thousand several tongues,
And every tongue brings in a several tale,
And every tale condemns me for a villain.
Perjury, perjury, in the high'st degree,
Murder, stern murder, in the dir'st degree;
All several sins, all us'd in each soul's des- pair!
Throng to the bar, crying all,—Guilty! guilty! I shall despair.—There is no creature loves me;
And, if I die, no soul will pity me:
Nay, wherefore should they? since that I myself
Find in myself no pity to myself.
Methought, the souls of all that I had murder'd
Came to my tent; and every one did threat
To-morrow's vengeance on the head of Richard.

Enter Ratcliff.

RATCLIFF. My lord,—
K. Rich. Who's there?—

Ratcliff, my lord; 'tis I. The early village
Hath twice done salutation to the morn; [cock
Your friends are up, and buckle on their armour.
K. Rich. O, Ratcliff, I have dream'd a fearful dream.
What thinkes thou? will our friends prove all true?

Rat. No doubt, my lord.

K. Rich. Ratcliff, I fear, I fear,—

Rat. Nay, good my lord, be not afraid of shadows.
K. Rich. By the apostle Paul, shadows to-night
Have struck more terror to the soul of Richard,
Than can the substance of ten thousand soldiers
Armed in proof, and led by shallow Richmond.
It is not yet near day. Come, go with me;
Under our tents I'll play the eaves-dropper,
To hear if any mean to shrink from me.

[Exit King Richard and Ratcliff.
Richmond awakes. Enter Oxford and others.

Lords. Good morrow, Richmond.

Rich. 'Cry mercy, lords, and watchful gentle-
men,
That you have taken a tardy signal here.

Lords. His Grace have you slept, my lord?

Richm. The sweetest sleep, and fairest-boding dreams,
That ever enter'd in a drowsy head,
Have I since departure had, my lords.

Methought, their souls, whose bodies Richard murder'd,

Come to my tent, and cried—Oh! victory! I promise you, my heart is very jocund
In the remembrance of so fair a dream.

How far into the morning is it, lords?

Lords. Upon the stroke of four.

Richm. Why, then 'tis time to arm, and give direction.—[He advances to his troops.

More than I have said, loving countrymen,
The leisure and enforcement of the time
Forbids to dwell on; yet remember this,—

God, and our good cause, fight upon our side;
The prayers of holy saints, and wronged souls,
Like high-rear'd bulwarks, stand before our faces;

Richard except, whom we fight against,
Had rather have us win, than him they follow.

For what hath be followed, than to follow? —
gentlemen, A bloody tyrant, and a homicide;
One rais'd in blood, and one in blood establish'd;
One that made means to come by what he hath,
And slav'd those that those were the means to help
him;
A base foul stone, made precious by the foil
Of England's chair, where he is falsely set;
One that hath ever been God's enemy:
Then if you fight against God's enemy,
God will, in justice, ward you as his soldiers;
If you do sweat to put a tyrant down,
You sleep in peace, the tyrant being slain;
If you do fight against your country's foes,
Your country's fat shall pay your pains the hire;
If you do fight in safeguard of your wives,
Your wives shall welcome home the conquerors;
If you do free your children from the sword,
Your children's children quit it in your age.
Then, in the name of God, and all these rights,
Advance your standards, draw your willing swords;
For me, the ransom of my bold attempt,
Shall be this cold content on the earth's cold face;
But if I thrive, the gain of my attempt
The least of you shall share his part thereof.
Sound, drums and trumpets, boldly and cheerfully,
God, and Saint George! Richmond, and victory!—[Exeunt

Re-enter King Richard, Ratcliff, Attendants, and Forces.

K. Rich. What said Northumberland, as touching Richmond?

Rat. That he was never trained up in arms.

K. Rich. He said the truth: and what said Surrey then?

Rat. He smiled and said, the better for our purpose.

K. Rich. He was I the right; and so, indeed, it
is. [Clock strikes.

Tell the clock there.—Give me a calendar.—

Who saw the sun to-day?

Rat. Not I, my lord.

K. Rich. Then he disdains to shine; for, by the book,
He should have braved the east an hour ago:
A day of blood will it be to somebody.—

Ratcliff.

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. The sun will not be seen to-day;
The sky doth frown and pour upon our army.
I would have thee, men of valor, be on thy guard.
Not shine to-day! Why, what is that to me,

More than to Richmond? for the self-same bea-teen,

That frowns on me, looks sadly upon him.

Enter Norfolk.

Nor. Arm, arm, my lord; the foe vaunts in the field.

K. Rich. Come, bustle, bustle;—CAPTAIN my horse:—

Call up lord Stanley, bid him bring his power—
I will forth with my soldiers to the plain,
And thus my battle shall be ordered.

My foreward shall be drawn out all in length,
Consisting equally of horse and foot;
Our archers shall be placed in the midst;
John duke of Norfolk, Thomas Earl of Surrey,
Shall have the leading of this foot and horse.
They thus directed, we ourselves will follow in the main battle; whose puissance on either side
Shall be well winged with our chiefest horse.
This, and Saint George to boot!—What think'st thou, Norfolk?

Nor. A good direction, warlike sovereign.—

This found I on my tent this morning.

[Giveing a scroll.] K. Rich. Jocky of Norfolk, be not too bold; [Reads.

For Dickon thy master is bought and sold.

A thing devised by thee? unless falsely.

Go, gentlemen, every man unto his charge;
Let not our babbling dreams affright our souls.

Conscience is but a word that cowards use,
Dwelt'st first to keep the strong in awe;
Our strong arms be our conscience, swords our law.

March on, join bravely, let us to'p well-mell;
If not to heaven, then hand in hand to hell;

What shall I say more than I have infer'd?
Remember whom you are to cope withal:—

A sort of vagabonds, rascals, and run-aways,
A scum of Bretagnes, and base lackey peasants,
Whom their o'er-cloy'd country renews forth
To desperate ventures and arrow'd destruction.

You sleeping safe, they bring you to unrest;
You having lands, and bless'd with bounteous wives;

They would restrain the one, distain the other.
And who doth lead them, but a paltry fellow,
Long kept in Bretagne at our mother's cost? a milk-sop, one that never in his life

Felt so much cold on the earth's cold face,

But if I thrive, the gain of my attempt
The least of you shall share his part thereof.

Sound, drums and trumpets, boldly and cheerfully,

God, and Saint George! Richmond, and victory!—

[Exeunt

Re-enter King Richard, Ratcliff, Attendants, and Forces.

K. Rich. What said Northumberland, as touching Richmond?

Rat. That he was never trained up in arms.

K. Rich. He said the truth: and what said Sur-
rey then?

Rat. He smiled and said, the better for our purpose.

K. Rich. He was I the right; and so, indeed, it
is. [Clock strikes.

Tell the clock there.—Give me a calendar.—

Who saw the sun to-day?

Rat. Not I, my lord.

K. Rich. Then he disdains to shine; for, by the book,
He should have braved the east an hour ago:
A day of blood will it be to somebody.—

Ratcliff.

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. The sun will not be seen to-day;
The sky doth frown and pour upon our army.
I would have thee, men of valor, be on thy guard.
Not shine to-day! Why, what is that to me,
Inspire us with the spilem of fiery dragons!
Upon them! Victory sits on our helms.

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum: Excursions. Enter Norfolk, and Forces; to him Catesby.

_Cate._ Rescue, my lord of Norfolk, rescue, rescue!

The king enacts more wonders than a man,
Dar'ing an opposite to every danger;
His horse is slain, and all on foot he fights,
Seeking for Richmond in the throat of death;
Rescue, fair lord, or else the day is lost!

Alarum. Enter King Richard.

K. Rich. A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

_Cate._ Withdraw, my lord, I'll help you to a horse.

K. Rich. Slave, I have set my life upon a cast,
And I will stand the hazard of the die:
I think, there be six Richmonds in the field;
Five have I slain to-day, instead of him:—
A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

[Exeunt.

Alarums. Enter King Richard and Richmond; and _excitement, fighting, Retreat, and flourish._ Then _enter Richmond, Stanley bearing the crown, with divers other Lords, and Forces._

Richm. God, and your arms, be praed's, vicio-

PROLOGUE.

I come no more to make you laugh; things now,
That bear a weighty and a serious brow,
Sad, high, and working, full of state and woe,
Such noble scenes as draw the eye to flow,
We now present. Those that can pity, here
May hear the sigh it well, let fall a tear;
The subject will deserve it. Such, as give
Their money out of hope they may believe,
May here find truth too. Those, that come to see
Only a show or two, and so agree,

Richm. Great God of heaven, say, amen, to all—
But, tell me first, is young George Stanley living?

Stan. He is, my lord, and safe in Leicester town;
Whither, if it please you, we may now withdraw us.

Richm. What men of name are slain on either side?

Stan. John duke of Norfolk, Walter lord Ferrers,
Sir Robert Brakembury, and sir William Brandon.

*Richm. Inter their bodies as becomes their births._
Prolace a pardon to the soldiers fled,
That in submission will return to us;
And then, as we have ta'en the sacrament,
We will unite the white rose with the red—
Smile heaven upon this fair conjunction,
That long hath frown'd upon their enmity!—
What traitor hears me, and says not,—amen?

England hath long been mad, and scarr'd herself;
The brother blindly shed the brother's blood,
The father rashly slaughter'd his own son,
The son, compell'd, been butcher to the sire;
All this divided York and Lancaster,
Divided, in their dire division.

O, now let Richmond and Elizabeth,
The true successors of each royal house,
By God's fair ordinance conjoin together!
And let their heirs, (God, if thy will be so,)
Enrich the time to come with smooth-face'd peace,
With smiling plenty, and fair prosperous days!

Abate the edge of traitors, gracious Lord,
That would reduce these bloody days again,
And make poor England weep in streams of blood!
Let them not live to taste this land's increase,
That would with treason wound this fair land's peace!
Now civil wounds are stopp'd, peace lives again;
That she may long live here, God say—Amen!

[Exeunt._

---

The play may pass; if they be still, and willing,
I'll undertake, may see away their shining
Richly in two short hours. Only they,
That come to hear a merry, bawdy play,
A noise of targets; or to see a fellow
In a long motley coat, guarded with yellow,
Will be deceiv'd: for, gentle hearers, know,
To rank our chosen truth with such a show
As fool and fight is, beside forfeiting
Our own brains, and the opinion that we bring,
(To make that only true we now intend.)
Will leave us never an understanding friend.
Therefore, for goodness' sake, and, as you are known,
The first and happiest hearers of the town,
Be sad, as we would make you: Think, ye see
The very persons of our noble story,
As they were living; think, ye see them great,
And happy: for they were loving, and sweet.
Of thousand friends: then, in a moment, see
How soon this mightiness meets misery!
And, if you can be merry then, I'll say,
A man may weep upon his wedding day.

---

ACT I.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk, at one door; at the other, the Duke of Buckingham, and the Lord Abergavenny.

Buck. Good morrow, and well met. How have you done,
Since last we saw in France?

Nor. I thank your grace:
Healthful; and ever since a fresh admirer
Of what I saw there.

Buck. An untimely age
Stay'd me a prisoner in my chamber, when
Those suns of glory, those two lights of men,
Met in the vale of Arde.

Nor. 'Tis true (Guynes and Arde was,
I was then present, saw them salute on horseback;
Beheld them, when they lighted, how they clung
In their embracement, as they grew together;
Which had they, what four thron'd ones could have

Such a compounded one?

Buck. All the whole time
I was my chamber's prisoner.

Nor. Then you lost
The view of earthly glory: Men might say,
Till this time, pomp was single; but now married
To one above itself. Each following day
Became the next day's master, till the last
Made former wonders it's: To-day, the French,
All clinquant, all in gold, like heathen gods,
Shone down the English; and, to-morrow, they Made Britain, India: every man, that stood,
Show'd like a mine. Their dawrfish pages were
As cherubins, all gilt; the madams too,
Not us'd to toil, did almost sweat to bear
The pride upon them, that their very labour
Was to them as a painting: Now this mask
Was cry'd incomparably; and the ensuing night
Made it a fool, and beggar. The two kings,
Equal in lustre, were now best, now worst,
As presence did present them; him in eye,
Still him in praise: and, being present both,
'Twas said, they saw but one; and no discern
Durst wag his tongue in censure. When these suns
(For so they phrase them,) by their heralds chal-

leng'd.
The noble spirits to arms, they did perform
Beyond thought's compass; that former fabulous story,
Being now seen possible enough, got credit,
That Davis was believ'd.

Buck. O, you go far.

Nor. As I belong to worship, and affect
In honour honesty, the tract of every thing
Would by a good discover lose some life,
Which action's self was tongue to. All was royal;
To the disposing of it nought rebell'd;
Order gave each thing view; the office did
Directly his full function. Who did guide,
I mean, who set the body and the limbs
Of this great sport together, as you guess?

Buck. One, certes, that promises no element
In such a business.

Nor. All this was order'd by the good discretion
Of the right reverend cardinal of York.

Buck. He did reveal him! no man's pie is free'd
From his ambitious finger. What had he
To do in these fierce vanities? I wonder,
The art with which can with his very bulk
Take up the rays o' the beneficial sun,
And keep it from the earth.

Nor. Surely, sir,
There's in him stuff that puts him to these ends.
For, being not propp'd by ancestry, (whose grace Chalks to successors their way,) nor call'd upon
For high feats done to the crown; neither allied
To remain assistants, but, spider-like,
Out of his self-drawing web, he gives us note,
The force of his own merit makes his way;
A gift that heaven gives him, which buys
A place next to the king.

Aber. I cannot tell
What heaven hath given him, let some graver eye
Pierce into that; but I can see his pride
Feed through each part of him: Whence has he

That not from hell, the devil is a niggard;
Or has given all before, and he begins
A new hell in himself.

Buck. Why the devil,
Upon this French going out, took he upon him,
Without the privity o' the king, to appoint
Who should attend on him? He makes up the file
Of all the gentry; for the most part such
Two, whom as great a charge as little honour
He meant to lay upon: and his own letter,
The hononrable board of council out,
Must fetch him in the papers.

Nor. A weighed
Kinsmen of mine, three at the least, that have
By this so sicken'd their estates, that never
They shall abound as formerly.

Buck. O, many
Have broke their backs with laying manors on

For this great journey. What did this vanity,
But minister communication of
A most poor issue?

Nor. Grievingly I think,
The peace between the French and us not values
The cost that did conclude it.

Buck. Every man,
After the hideous storm that follow'd, was
A thing inspir'd; and, not consulting, broke
Into a general prophecy.—That this tempest,
Having the garment of this peace, abode
The sudden break on't.

Nor. Which is banded out.
For France hath flaw'd the league, and hath att-ched'd.

Our merchants' goods at Bourdeaux.

Aber. Is it therefore
The ambassador is silent'd?

Nor. Marry, is't.

Aber. A proper title of a peace; and purchases'd
At a superfluous rate!

Buck. Why, all this business
Our reverend cardinal carried.

Nor. 'Like it your grace,
The state takes notice of the private difference
Betwixt you and the cardinal. I advise you,
(And take it from a heart that wishes towards you Honesty and plenteous safety,) that you read
The cardinal's malice and his potency
Together: to consider further, that
His high talent would effect, wants not
A minister in his power: You know his nature,
That he's revengeful; and I know, his sword
Hath a sharp edge; it's long, and, it may be said,
It reaches far; and where 'twill not extend,
Thither he darts it. Bosom up my counsel,
You'll find it wholesome. Lo, where comes that Rock,
That I advise your shunning.
Enter Cardinal Wolsey, (the purse borne before him,) certain of the Guard, and Two Secretaries with papers. The Cardinal in his passage flaseth his eye on Buckingham, and Buckingham on him, both full of disdain.

Wol. The duke of Buckingham's surveyor? ha? Where's his examination? I see. Here, so please you.

Wol. Is he in person ready? I see. Ay, please your grace.

Wol. Well, we shall then know more; and Buckingham shall lessen this big look.

Exeunt Wolsey, and Train.

Buck. This butcher's cur is venom-mouth'd, and I have not the power to muzzle him; therefore, best not wake him in his slumber. A beggar's book out-worth's a noble's blood.

Nor. What are you charg'd? Ask God for temperance; that's the appliance only, which Your disease requires.

Buck. I read in his looks Matter against me; and his eye revil'd Me, as his abject object: at this instant He bores me with some trick: he's gone to the king; I'll follow, and out-stare him.

Nor. Stay, my lord, And let your reason with your choleric question What 'tis you go about: to climb steep hills, Requires slow pace at first: Anger is like A full-hot bath: who being allow'd his way, Self-mettle tires him. Not a man in England Can advise me like you: be to yourself As you would to your friend.

Buck. I'll to the king: And from a mouth of honour quite cry down This Ipswich fellow's insolence; or proclaim, There's difference in no persons.

Nor. Be advis'd. Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot That it do singe yourself: We may outrun, By violent swiftness, that which we run at, And lose by over-running. Know you not, The fire, that mounts the liquor till it run o'er, In seeming to augment it, wastes it? Be advis'd: I say again, there is no English soul More stronger to direct you than yourself; If with the sap of reason you would quench, Or but allay, the fire of passion.

Buck. Sir, I am thankful to you; and I'll go along By your prescription—but this top-proud fellow, (Whom from the flour of gall I name not, but From sincere motions,) by intelligence, And proofs as clear as fountains in July, when We see each grain of gravel, I do know To be corrupt and treasonous.

Nor. Say not, treasonous. Buck. To the king I'll say't; and make my vouch as strong As shore of rock. Attend. This holy fox, Or wolf, or both, (for he is equal ravenous As he is subtle; and as prone to mischief, As able to perform it: his mind and place Inflicting one another, yes, reciprocally,) Only to show his pomp as well in France As here at home, suggests the king our master To this last costly treaty, the interview, That swallow'd so much treasure, and like a glass Did break it the ringing. 'Faith, and so it did.

Buck. Pray, give me favour, sir. This cunning cardinal

The articles of the combination drew, As himself pleas'd; and they were ratify'd, As he cried, Thus let be: to as much end, As give a crutch to the dead: But our count-cardinal

Has done this, and 'tis well; for worthy Wolsey, Who cannot err, he did it. Now this follows, (Which, as I take it, is a kind of puppy To the old dam, treason.)—Charles the emperor, Under pretence to see the queen his host, (For 'twas, indeed, his colour; but he came To whisper Wolsey,) here makes visitation: His fears were, that the interview, betwixt England and France, light, through their amity, Breed him some prejudice; for from this league Peep'd harms that menace'd him: He privily Deals with our cardinal; and, as I trow,— Which I do well; for, I am sure, the emperor Paid ere he promis'd; whereby his suit was granted Ere it was ask'd;—but when the way was made, And pav'd with gold, the emperor thus desir'd,— That he would please to alter the king's course, And breathe peace. Let the king know, (As soon he shall by me,) that thus the cardinal Does buy and sell his honour as he pleases, And for his own advantage.

Nor. I am sorry To hear this of him; and could wish, he were Something mistaken in't.

Buck. No, not a syllable; I do pronounce him in that very shape, He shall appear in proof.

Enter Brandon; a Sergeant at Arms before him, and two or three of the Guard.

Bran. Your office, sergeant; execute it. Seri. My lord the duke of Buckingham, and earl Of Hereford, Stafford, and Northampton, I arrest thee of high treason, in the name Of our most sovereign king.

Buck. Lo, you, my lord, The net has fall'n upon me; I shall perish Under device and practice.

Bran. I am sorry To see you ta'en from liberty, to look on The business present: 'Tis his highness' pleasure You shall to the Tower.

Buck. It will help me nothing, To plead mine innocence; for that die is on me, Which makes my whitest part black. The will of heaven Be done in this, and all things I— I obey.— O my lord Abergha'ny, fare you well.

Bran. Nay, he must bear you company:— The king [To Aberghavenny. Is pleas'd, you shall to the Tower, till you know How he determine further.

Aber. The will of heaven be done, and the king's pleasure By me obey'd.

Bran. Here is a warrant from The king, to attach lord Montacute; and the bodies Of the duke's confessor, John de la Court, One Gilbert Peck, his chancellor,—

Buck. So, so; These are the limbs of the plot: no more, I hope.

Bran. A monk o' the Chartreux.

Buck. O, Nicholas Hopkins? Bran. He. Buck. My surveyor is false; the o'er-great cardinal Hath show'd him gold: my life is span'd already I am the shadow of poor Buckingham; Whose figure even this instant cloud puts on, By dark'ning my clear sun.—My lord, farewell.

[Exeunt.}

SCENE II.—The Council-Chamber.

Cornets. Enter King Henry, Cardinal Wolsey, the Lords of the Council, Sir Thomas Lovell, Officers, and Attendants. The King enters, leaning on the Cardinal's shoulder.

K. Hen. My life itself, and the best heart of it, Thanks you for this great care: I stood 't the level Of a full-charge confederacy, and give thanks To you that chok'd it.—Let be call'd before us That gentleman of Buckingham's: in person I'll hear him his confessions justify;
And point by point the treasons of his master
He shall again relate.

The King takes his State. The Lords of the Council take their several places. The Cardinal places himself under the King's feet, on his right side.

A noise within, crying, Room for the Queen! Enter the Queen, ushered by the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk: she kneels. The King riseth from his State, takes her up, kisses, and placeth her by him.

Q. Kath. Nay, we must longer kneel; I am a man.

K. Hen. Arise, and take place by us:—Half your suit
Never name to us; you have half our power;
The other moiety, ere you ask, is given;
Repeat your will, and take it.

Q. Kath. Thank your majesty,
That you would love yourself; and, in that love,
Not unconsider'd leave your honour, nor
The dignity of your office, is the point
Of my petition.

K. Hen. Lady mine, proceed
Q. Kath. I am solicited, not by a few,
And those of true condition, that your subjects
Are in great grievance: there have been commissions
Sent down among them, which have flaw'd the hear
Of all their liberties:—wherein, although,
My good lord cardinal, they vent reproaches
Most bitterly on you, as pitter-on
Of these exactions, yet the king our master, (Whose honour heaven shield from soil!) even he escapes not
Language unmannerly, yea, such which breaks
The sides of loyalty, and almost appears
In loud rebellion.

Nor. Not almost appears,
It doth appear: for, upon these taxation,
The clothiers all, not able to maintain
The many to them 'longing, have put off
He spinsters, carders, fullers, weavers, who,
Unfit for other life, compell'd by hunger,
And lack of other means, in desperate manner
During the event to the teeth, are all in uproar,
And danger serves among them.

K. Hen. Taxation!
Wherein? and what taxation?—My lord cardinal,
You are blamed for it alike with us,
Know you of this taxation?

Wol. Please you, sir,
I know but of a single part, in aught
Pertains to the state; and from but in that file
Where others tell steps with me.

Q. Kath. No, my lord,
You know no more than others: but you frame
Things, that are known alike; which are not Wholesome
To those which would not know them, and yet must Perforce be their acquaintance. These exactions
Whereof my sovereign would have note, they are Most pestilent to the hearing; and, to bear them,
The back is sacrifice to the load. They say,
They are devils'd by you; or else you suffer
Too hard an exclamation.

K. Hen. Still exaction!
The nature of it? In what kind, let's know,
Is this exaction?

Q. Kath. I am much too venturous
In testifying of your patience; but am bolden'd
Under your promis'd pardon. The subjects' grief Comes through commissions, which compel from each
The sixth part of his substance, to be levied
Without delay; and the pretence for this Is nam'd, your wars in France: This makes bold mouths:
Tongues split their duties out, and cold hearts
Allegiance in them; their curses now,
Live where their prayers did; and it's come to pass,
That that tolerable obedience is a slave
To each incensed will. I would, your highness
Would give it quick consideration, for
There is no primer business.

K. Hen. This is against our pleasure.

Wol. By my life,
And for me,
I have no further gone in this, than by
A single voice; and that not pass'd me, but
By learned approbation of the judges.
If I am traduc'd by tongues, which neither know
My faculties, nor person, yet will be
The chronicles of my doing,—let me say,
'Tis but the fate of place, and the rough brake
That virtue must go through. We must not stint
Our necessary actions, in the fear
To cope malicious censurers; which ever,
As ravenous fishes, do a vessel follow
That is new trimm'd; but benefit no further
Than vainly longing. What we oft do best,
By sick interpreters, once weak ones, is
Not ours, or not allow'd; what worst, as oft,
Hit a grosser falsity, is critiqu'd
For our best act. If we shall stand still,
In fear our motion will be mock'd or carpt'd at,
We should take root here where we sit, or sit
Statesman only.

K. Hen. Things done well,
And with a care, exempt themselves from fear;
Things done without example, in their issue
Are to be fear'd. Have you a precedent
Of this commission? I believe, not any.
We must not rend our subjects from our laws,
And stick them in our will. Sixth part of each?
A trembling contribution! Why, we take,
From every tree, top, bark, and heart of the timber;
And, though we leave it with a root, thus hack'd,
The air will drink the sap. To every county,
Where this is question'd, send our letters, with Free pardon to every man that he denied
The force of this commission: Pray, look to't;
I put it to your care.

Wol. A word with you.

Let there be letters writ to every shire,
Of the king's grace and pardon The griev'd commons
Hardly conceive of me: let it be nois'd,
That, through our intercession, this revokement
And pardon comes: I shall anon advise you
Further in the proceeding. [Exit Secretary.

Enter Surveyor.

Q. Kath. I am sorry that the duke of Buckingham
Is run in your displeasure.

K. Hen. It grieves many:
The gentleman is learn'd, and a most rare speaker,
To nature none more bound; his training such,
That he may furnish and instruct great teachers,
And never seek for aid out of himself.
Yet see
When these so noble benefits shall prove
Not a dispos'd, he the mind grace'ing once corrupt,
They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly
Than ever they were fair. This man so complete,
Who was enrol'd 'mongst wonders, and when we,
Almost with ravish'd list'nings, could not find
His heart speech a minute: he, my lady,
Hath into monstrous habits put the graces
That once were his, and is become as black
As if best ear'd in hell. Sit by us; (This was his gentleman in trust of him)
Things to strike honour sad.—Bid him recount
The fore-recited practices: whereof
We cannot feel too little, hear too much.

Wol. Stand forth; and with bold spirit relate what you,
Most like a careful subject, have collected
Out of the duke of Buckingham.

K. Hen. Speak freely. I have not decided, but, it was usual with him, every day
It would infect his speech, That if the king
Should without issue die, he'd carry it so
To make the scepter his: These very words
I have heard him utter to his son-in-law,
Lord Albemarle; to whom by oath he menace'd
Revenge upon the cardinal.

Wol. Please your highness, note
This dangerous conception in this point.
Nor infringed by his wish, to your high person
His will is most malignant; and it stretches
Beyond you, to your friends.

Q. Kath. My learned lord cardinal,
Deliver all with charity.

K. Hen. Speak on:
How grounded he his title to the crown,
Upon our fall? to this point hast thou heard him
At any time speak aught?

Surv. He was brought to this
By a vain prophecy of Nicholas Hopkins.

K. Hen. What was that Hopkins?

Surv. Sir, a Chartreux friar,
His confessor; who fed him every minute
With words of sovereignty.

K. Hen. How know'st thou this?

Surv. Not long before your highness sped to France,
The duke being at the Rose, within the parish
Saint Lawrence Poutney, did me demand
What was the speech amongst the Londoners
Concerning the French journey: I replied,
Men fear'd, the French would prove perfidious,
To the king's danger. Presently the duke
Said, 'Twas the fear; indeed; and that he doubted,
Would prove the verity of certain words
Spoke by a holy monk: that oft, says he,
Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit
John de la Court, my chaplain, a choice hour
To hear from him a matter of some moment:
Whom after under the confession's seal
He solemnly had sworn, that, what he spoke,
My chaplain to no creature living, but
To me, should utter, with demure confidence
Thus pubisling enu'd—Neither the king, nor his heirs, (Tell you the duke) shall prosper: bid him strive
To gain the love of the commonalty; the duke
Shall govern England.

Q. Kath. If I know you well,
You were the duke's surveyor, and lost your office
On the complaint of the tenants: Take good heed,
You charge not in your price a noble person, and
And spoil your noble soul! I say, take heed;
Yes, heartily beseech you.

K. Hen. Go forward.

Surv. On my soul, I'll speak but truth.
I told my lord the duke, By the devil's illusions
The monk might he deceiv'd; and that 'twas dangrous for him
To ruminate on this so far, until
It forg'd him some design, which, being believ'd,
It was much like to do: He answer'd, Truth!
It can do me no damage: adding further,
That, had the king in his last sickness fail'd,
The cardinal's and sir Thomas Lovell's heads
Should have gone off.

K. Hen. Ha! what, so rank? Ah, ha!
There's a ship chaplain in this man:—Canst thou say further?

Surv. I can, my liege.

K. Hen. Proceed.

Surv. Sir, Being at Greenwich,
About his highness had reprov'd the duke
About sir William Blomer,—

K. Hen. I remember
Of such a time—Being my servant sworn,
The duke retain'd him his:—But on: What hence?

Surv. If, quoth he, I for this been committed,
As, to the Tower, I thought;—I would have play'd
The part my father meant to act upon
The usurper Richard: now, being at Salisbury,
Made suit to come in his presence; which if granted,
As he made semblance of his duty, would
Have put his knife into him.

K. Hen. A giant traitor!—
of. Now, madam, may his highness live in freedom,
And this man out of prison?

Q. Kath. God mend all!—

K. Hen. There's something more would out of thee; What say'st?

Surv. After—the duke his father,—with the
He stretch'd him, and, with one hand on his dagger,
Another spread on his breast, mounting his eyes,
He did discharge a horrible oath; whose tenour
Was,—Were he evil us'd, he would out-go
His father, by as much as a performance
Does an irresolute purpose.

K. Hen. There's his period,
To sheath his knife in us. He is attack'd;
Call him to present trial: if he may
Find mercy in the law, 'tis his; if none,
Let him not seek't of us: by day and night.
He's traitor to the height.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain and Lord Sands.

Cham. Is it possible, the spells of France should juggle Men into such strange mysteries?

Sands. New customs, Though they he never so ridiculous,
Nay, let them be unmanny, yet are follow'd.

Cham. As far as I see, all the good our English
Have got by the late voyage, is but merely
A fit or two o' the face; but they are shrewd ones;
For when they hold them, you would swear directly,
Their very noses had been counsellors
To Pepin, or Clotharius, they keep state so.

Sands. They have all new legs, and lame ones:
One would take it,
That never saw them pace before, the sparvin
A springhalt reign'd among them.

Cham. Death! my lord,
Their clothes are after such a pagan cut too,
That, sure, they have worn out christianedom. How now?

What news, sir Thomas Lovell?

Enter Sir Thomas Lovell.

Lov. Faith, my lord,
I hear of none, but the new proclamation
That's clapp'd upon the court-gate.

Cham. What is't for?

Lov. The reformation of our travel'd gallants,
That fill the court with quarrels, talk, and tailors.

Cham. I am glad, 'tis there; now I would pray our mono-sieurs
To think an English courtier may be wise,
And never see the Louvre.

Lov. They must either
(For so run the conditions,) leave these remnants
Of fool, and feather, that they got in France,
With all their honourable points of ignorance,
Pertaining thereunto, (as fights, and fireworks;
Abusing better men than they can be
Out of a foreign wisdom,) renouncing clean
The faith they have in tennis, and tall stockings,
Short bluster'd breeches, and those types of travel.
And understand again like honest men;
Or pack to their old playfellows: there, I take it,
They may, cum privilegio, wear away
The lag end of their lewdness, and be laugh'd at.

Sands. 'Tis time to give them physic, their disease
Are grown so catching.
What a loss our ladies
Will have of these trim vanities!

Ay, marry,
There will be woe indeed, lords; the sly whore-sons
Have got a speeding trick to lay down ladies;
A French song, and a fiddle, has no fellow.
Sands. The devil fiddle them! I am glad, they're going;
(For, sure, there's no converting of them;) now,
An honest country man, as I am, beaten
A long time out of play, may bring his plain-song,
And have an ear of hearing; and, by'r lady,
Held current musick too.

Cham. Well said, lord Sands;
Your colt's tooth is not cast yet.
Sands. No, my lord;
Nor shall not, while I have a stamp.

Cham. Sir Thomas,
Whither were you a going?

Lov. To the cardinal's;
Your lordship is a guest too.

Cham. O, 'tis true:
This night he makes a supper, and a great one,
To many lords and ladies; there will be
The beauty of this kingdom, I'll assure you.

Lov. That churchman bears a bounteous mind
Indeed,
A hand as fruitful as the land that feeds us;
His dews fall everywhere.

Cham. He had a black mouth, that said other of him.
Sands. He may, my lord, he has wherewithal;
in him,
Sparing would show a worse sin than ill doctrine:
Men of his way should be most liberal,
They are set here for examples.

Cham. True, they are so;
But few now give so great ones. My barge stays;
Your lordship shall along.—Come, good sir Thomas,
We shall be late else; which I would not be,
For I was spoke to, with sir Henry Guildford,
This night to be comptrollers.

Sands. I am your lordship's.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Presence-Chamber in York-Place.

Hauk boys. A small table under a state for the Cardinal, a longer table for the guests. Enter at one door Anne Bullen, and divers Lords, Ladies, and Gentlewomen, as guests; at another door, enter
Sir Henry Guildford.

Guild. Ladies, a general welcome from his grace
Salutes ye all: This night he dedicates
To fair content, and you: none here, he hopes,
In all this noble hevy, has brought with her
One care abroad: he would have all as merry
As first-good company, good wine, good welcome,
Can make good people.—O, my lord, you are tardy:

Enter Lord Chamberlain, Lord Sands, and Sir
Thomas Lovell.

The very thought of this fair company
Clapp'd wings to me.

Cham. You are young, sir Harry Guildford.
Sands. Sir Thomas Lovell, had the cardinal
But half my lay-thoughts in him, some of these Should find a running banquet ere they rested,
I think, would better please them: By my life,
They are a sweet society of fair ones.

Lov. O, that your lordship were but now con-
He to one or two of these!

Sands. As easy as a down-bed would afford it.
Cham. Sweet ladies, will it please you sit? Sir
Henry,
Place you that side, I'll take the charge of this:
His grace is entr'ing.—Nay, you must not freeze;
Two women plac'd together makes cold weather.

My lord Sands, you are one will keep them waking:

Pray, sit between these ladies.

Sands. By my faith,
And think your lordship.—By your leave, sweet ladies:

[Seats himself between Anne Bullen and another lady.

If I chance to talk a little wild, forgive me;
I had it from my father.

Anne. Was he mad, sir?
Sands. O, very mad, exceeding mad, in love too:
But he would bite no one; just as I do now,
He would kiss you twenty with a breath.

[Kisses her.

Cham. Well said, my lord—
So, now you are fairly seated.—Gentlemen,
The people lies on you, if these fair ladies
Pass away frowning.

Sands. For my little cure,
Let me alone.

Hauk boys. Enter Cardinal Wolsey, attended; and takes his state.

Wol. You are welcome, my fair guests; that noble lady,
Or gentleman, that is not freely merry,
Is not my friend; This, to confirm my welcome;
And to you all good health.

[Drinks.

Sands. Your grace is noble—
Let me have such a bowl may hold my thanks,
And save me so much talking.

Wol. My lord Sands,
I am beholden to you; cheer your neighbours.—
Ladies, you are not merry.—Gentlemen,
Whose fault is this?

Sands. The red wine first must rise
In their fair cheeks, my lord; then we shall have them
Talk us to silence.

Anne. You are a merry gamer,

Sands. Yes, if I make my play.

Here's to your ladyship: and pledge it, madam,
For 'tis to such a thing.—

Anne. I told your grace, they would talk anon.

Sands. Yon cannot show me.

Wol. [Drum and trumpets within: Chambers discharged.

Wol. What's that?

Cham. Look out there, some of you.

[Exit a Servant.

Wol. What warlike voice?
And to what end is this?—Nay, ladies, fear not;
By all the laws of war you are privilieg'd.

Re-enter Servant.

Cham. How now? what is't?

Serv. A noble troop of strangers:
For so they seem; they have left their barge, and landed;
And hither make, as great ambassadors
From foreign princes.

Wol. Good lord chamberlain,
Go, give them welcome, you can speak the French tongue;
And, pray, receive them nobly, and conduct
them,
Into our presence, where this heaven of beauty
Shall shine: at full upon them:—Some attend
him—

[Exit Chamberlain, attended. All arise, and tables removed.

You have now a broken banquet; but we'll mend
it.
A good digestion to you all: and, once more,
I shower a welcome on you;—Welcome all.
HAUTBOYS. Enter the King, and twelve others, as maskers, habited like shepherds, with sixteen torch-bearers; ushered by the Lord Chamberlain. They pass directly before the Cardinal, and gracefully salute him.

A noble company! what are their pleasures? Cham. Because they speak no English, thus they pray.

to tell your grace.—That, having heard by fame
Of this so noble and so fair assembly
This night to meet here, they could do no less,
But of that past respect they bear to beauty,
But leave their flocks; and, under your fair conduct,
Crave leave to view these ladies, and entreat
An hour of revels with them.

Wol. Say, lord chamberlain, They have done my poor house grace; for which I pay them
A thousand thanks, and pray them take their pleasures.

[Scenes chosen for the dance. The King chooses Anne Bullen.

K. Hen. The fairest hand I ever touch'd! O, beauty,
Till now I never knew thee. [Music. Dance. Wol. My lord,—Your grace?

Cham. Pray, tell them thus much from me.

There should be one amongst them, by his person,
More worthy this place than myself; to whom,
If but I knew him, with my love and duty
I would surrender it.

Cham. I will, my lord. [Cham. goes to the company, and returns

Wol. What say they? Cham. Such a one, they all confess,
There is, indeed; which would you have your grace
Find out, and he will take it.

Wol. Let me see then.—[Comes from his state.

By all your good leaves, gentlemen;—Here I'll make
My royal choice.

K. Hen. You have found him, cardinal:

[Unmasking.
you hold a fair assembly; you do well, lord;
you are a churchman, or I tell you, cardinal,
I should judge now unhappily;
I am glad.

Your grace is grown so pleasant.

K. Hen. My lord chamberlain, pray,

Cham. then, some hither: What fair lady's that?

Cham. An't please your grace, sir Thomas Bullen's daughter,

The viscount Rochford, one of her highness' women.

K. Hen. By heaven, she is a dainty one.—Sweet-

heart,

I were unmannerly, to take you out,
And not to kiss you.—A health, gentlemen,
Let it go round.

Wol. Sir Thomas Lovell, is the banquet ready

I the privy chamber? Law,

Yes, my lord.

Wol. Your grace;

I fear, with dancing is a little heated.

K. Hen. I fear, too much.

Wol. There's fresher air, my lord,

In the next chamber. K. Hen. Lead in your ladies, every one.—Sweet partner,

I must not yet forsake you;— Let's be merry!—

Good my lord cardinal, I have half a dozen

healths

To drink to these fair ladies, and a measure

To lead them once again; and then let's dream

Who's best in favour.—Let the musick knock it.

[Exeunt, with trumpets.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Street.

Enter Two Gentlemen, meeting.

1 Gent. Whither away so fast?

2 Gent. O, God save you!

Even to the hall, to hear what shall become

Of the great duke of Buckingham.

1 Gent. I'll save you

That labour, sir. All's now done, but the ceremony

Of bringing back the prisoner.

2 Gent. Have you there?

1 Gent. Yes, indeed, was I.

2 Gent. Pray, speak, what has happen'd?

1 Gent. You may guess quickly what.

2 Gent. Is he found guilty?

1 Gent. Yes, truly is he, and condemn'd upon it.

2 Gent. I am sorry fort.

1 Gent. So are a number more.

2 Gent. But, pray, how pass'd it?

1 Gent. I'll tell you in a little. The great duke

Came to the bar; where, to his accusations,

He pleaded still, not guilty, and alleg'd

Many sharp reasons to defeat the law.

The king's attorney, on the contrary,

Urg'd on the examinations, proofs, confessions

Of divers witnesses; which the duke desir'd

To him brought, viva voce, to his face:

At which appear'd against him, his surveyor;

Sir Gilbert Peck his chancellor; and John Court,

Confessor to him; with that devil-monk,

Hopkins, that made this mischief.

2 Gent. That was he,

That fed him with his prophecies?

1 Gent. The same.
All these accus'd him strongly; which he fin.

Would have flung from him, but, indeed, he could

And so his peers, upon this evidence,

Not: Have found him guilty of high treason. Much

He spoke, and learn'dly, for life; but all

Was either pitied in him, or forgotten.

2 Gent. After all this, how did he hear himself?

1 Gent. When he was brought again to the bar,

—to hear

His knell rung out, his judgment,— he was stirr'd

With such an agony, he could not

And something spoke in choler, ill, and hasty:

But he fell to himself again, and, sweetly,

In all the rest show'd a most noble patience.

2 Gent. I do not think he fears death.

1 Gent. Sure, he does not,

He never was so womanish; the cause

He may a little grieve at.

2 Gent. Certainly.

The cardinal is the end of this.

1 Gent. 'Tis likely,

By all conjectures: First, Kildare's attain'd;

Then deputy of Ireland; who remov'd,

Earl Surrey was sent thither, and in haste too,

Lest he should help his father.

2 Gent. That trick of state

Was a deep envious one.

1 Gent. At his return,

No doubt, he will requite it. This is noted,

And generally; whoever the king favours,

The cardinal instantly will find employment,

And far enough from court too.

2 Gent. All the commons

Hate him perniciously, and, o' my conscience,

Wish him ten fathom deep; this duke as much.

They love and dote on; call him bounteous Buck.

The mirror of all courtesy;—

[Ingham,

1 Gent. Stay there, sir,

And see the noble ruin'd man you speak of.

Enter Buckingham from his arraignment; Tipstaves before him, the axe with the edge towards him; haberdashers on each side of him, Sir Thomas

Lovell, Sir Nicholas Vaux, Sir William Sands, and common people.

2 Gent. Let's stand close, and behold him.
And give your hearts to, when they once perceive
The last rub in your fortunes, fall away
Like water from ye, never found again
But where they mean to sink ye. All good people,
Pray for me! I must now forsake ye; the last hour
Of my life, my weary life is come upon me.

Farewell!
And when you would say something that is sad,
Speak how I fell, and I have done; and God forgive me.

Exeunt Buckingham and Train.

1 Gent. O, this is full of pity! — Sir, it calls,
I fear, too many curses on their heads
That are the authors.

2 Gent. If the duke be guiltless,
'Tis the fate of woe: yet I must give you inkling
Of an ensuing evil, if it fall,
Greater than this.

1 Gent. Good angels keep it from us?
Where may it be ? You do not doubt my faith, sir?

2 Gent. This secret is so weighty, 'twill require
A strong faith to conceal it.

1 Gent. Let me have it;
I do not talk much.

2 Gent. I am confident;
You shall, sir: Did you not of late days hear
A huzzing, of a separation
Between the king and Katharine?

1 Gent. Yes, but it held not:
For when the king once heard it, out of anger
He sent command to the lord mayor, straight
To stop the rumour, and allay those tongues
That had been dispersing.

2 Gent. But that slander, sir,
Is found a truth now: for it grows again
Fresher than e'er it was; and held for certain,
The king will venture at it. Either the cardinal,
Or some about him near, have, out of malice
To the good queen, possess'd him with a scruple
That will undo her: To confirm this too,
Cardinal Campeius is arrived, and lately
As all think, for this business.

1 Gent. 'Tis the cardinal,
And merely to revenge him on the emperor,
For not bestowing on him, at his asking,
The archbishoprick of Toledo, this is purpos'd.

2 Gent. I think, you have hit the mark: But it's not cruel,
That she should feel the smart of this? The cardinal
Will have his will, and she must fall.

1 Gent. 'Tis woful.
We are too open here to argue this;
Let's think in private more.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—An Ante-chamber in the Palace.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain, reading a letter.

Cham. My lord,—The horses your lordship sent for,
with all the care I had, I saw well chosen, ridden, and furnished. They were young, and handsome;
and of the best breed in the north. When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my lord cardinal's, by commission, and main power, took 'em from me; with this reason,—His master would be served before a subject, if not before the king: which stopped our mouths, sir.

I fear, he will, indeed: Well, let him have them: He will have all, I think.

Enter the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk.

Nor. Well met, my good Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Good day to both your graces;
—and how is the king employ'd, sir?

Cham. I left him private,
Full of sad thoughts and troubles.

Nor. What's the case? Cham. It seems the marriage with his brother's wife
Has crept too near his conscience.
Nor. How holly he works in all his business! And with what zeal! For now he has crack'd the league Between us and the emperor, the queen's great nevph, He dines into the king's soul; and there scatters Dangers, doubts, wringing of the conscience, Fears, and despair, and all these for his marriage: All out of all these to restore the king, He counsels a divorce: a loss of her, That, like a jewel, hath shining twenty years About his neck, yet never lost his lustre: Of her, that loves him with that excellence That angels love good men with; even of her That, when the greatest stroke of fortune falls, Will bless the king: And is not this course pious? Cham. Heaven keep me from such counsel! 'Tis most true, These words are every where; every tongue speaks them, And every true heart weeps for't: All, that dare Look into these affairs, see this main end,— The French king's sister. Heaven will one day open The king's eyes, that so long have slept upon This bold bad man.

Nor. We had need pray, And heartily for our deliverance; Or this imperious man will work us all From princes into pages; all men's honours Lie in one lump before him, to be fashion'd Into what pitch he please.

Suf. For me, my lords, I love him not, nor fear him; there's my creed: As I am made, without hind, so I'll stand, If the king please; his curses and his blessings Touch me alike, they are breath I not believe in. I knew him, and I know him; so I leave him To him, that made him proud, the pope.

Nor. Let's in; And with some other business, put the king From these sad thoughts, that work too much upon him: My lord, you'll bear us company?

Cham. Excuse me; The king hath sent me other-where: besides, You'll find a most unfit time to disturb him: Health to your lordships.

Nor. Thanks, my good lord chamberlain.

[Exit Lord Chamberlain.]

Norfolk opens a folding door. The King is discovered sitting, and reading pensively.

Suf. How sad he looks! sure, he is much afflicted. K. Hen. Who is there? ha?

Nor. 'Pray God, he be not angry.

Nor. A gracious king, that pardons all offences Malice ne'er meant: our breach of duty, this way Is business of estate; in which, we come To know your royal pleasure.

You are too bold; Go to; I'll make ye know your times of business: Is this an hour for temporal affairs? ha?

[Enter Wolsey and Campeius.]

Wol. Who's there? my good lord cardinal? O my Wolsey,

The quiet of my wounded conscience,
Thou art a cure fit for a king.—You're welcome, [To Campeius.

Most learned reverend sir, into our kingdom; Use us, and it,—My good lord, have great care I be not found a talker. [To Wolsey.

Wol. Sir, you cannot.

I would, your grace would give us but an hour Of private conference.

K. Hen. We are busy; go. [To Norfolk and Suff.]

Nor. This priest has no pride in him.

Suf. Not to speak of; I would not be so sick though, for his place: But this cannot continue. [Aside.

K. Hen. If it do, I'll venture one heate at him. [Aside.

Wol. Your grace has given a precedent of wisdom Above all princes, in committing freely Your scruple to the voice of Christendom: Who can be angry now? what envy reach you? The Spaniard, tied by blood and favour to her, Must now confess, if they have any goodness, The trial just and noble. All the clerks, I mean, the learned ones, in christian kingdoms, Have their free voices; Rome, the nurse of judgment, Invited by your noble self, hath sent One gentleman tongue unto us, this good man, This just and learned priest, cardinal Campeius; Whom, once more, I present unto your highness.

K. Hen. And, once more, in mine arms I bid him welcome. And thank the holy concave for their loves; They have sent me such a man I would have wish'd for, Cam. Your grace must needs deserve all strangers' loves.

You are so noble: To your highness' hand I tender my commission; by whose virtue, [The court of Rome commanding,—you, my lord (The court of Rome commanding,—you, my lord Cardinal of York, are join'd with me their servant, In the unpartial judgment of this business.

K. Hen. Two equal men. The queen shall be acquainted Forthwith, for what you come:—Where's Gardiner?

Wol. I know your majesty has always lov'd her So dear in heart, not to deny her that A woman of less place might ask by law, Scholars, allow'd freely to argue for her. K. Hen. Ay, and the best, she shall have; and my favour To him that does best; God forbid else. Cardinal, Prythee, call Gardiner to me, my new secretary; I find him a fit fellow. [Exit Wolsey.

[Re-enter Wolsey, with Gardiner.

Wol. Give me your hand: much joy and favour to you; You are the king's now. Gard. But to be commanded For ever by your grace, whose hand has rais'd me. [Aside.

K. Hen. Come hither, Gardiner. [They converse apart.

Cam. My lord of York, was not one doctor Peace in this man's place before him?

Wol. Yes, he was.

Cam. Was he not held a learned man?

Wol. Yes, surely.

Cam. Believe me, there's an ill opinion spread then Even of yourself, lord cardinal.

Wol. How! of me?

Cam. They will not stick to say, you envied him; And, fearing he would rise, he was so virtuous, Kept him a foreign man still; which so grieved That he ran mad, and died. [him, 2 K
KING HENRY VIII.

Act 2.

Wol. Heaven's peace be with him! That's christian care enough; for living murmurs
There's places of rebuke. He was a fool;
For he would needs be virtuous: That good fellow,
If I command him, follows my appointment;
I will hold none so near else. Learns this, brother,
We live not to be grip'd by meaner persons.

Anne. How you do talk!
I swear again, I would not be a queen
For all the world.

Old L. In faith, for little England
You'd venture an embalming: I myself
Would for Carnarvonshire, although there 'long'd
No more than the crown but that. Lo, who comes here?

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Good morrow, ladies. What will you Know
The secret of your conference?

Anne. My good lord,
Not your demand; it values not your asking:
One marvel's sorrows we were pitying.

Cham. It was a gentle business, and becoming
The action of good women; there is hope,
All will be well.

Anne. Now I pray God, amen! Cham. You bear a gentle mind, and heavenly blessings Follow such creatures. That you may, fair lady, Perceive I speak sincerely, and high note's
T'en of your many virtues, the king's majesty
Commends his good opinion to you, and Does purpose honour to you no less flowing
Than marchioness of Pembroke; to which title
A thousand pound a year, annual support,
Omt of his grace he adds.

Anne. I do not know,
What kind of my obedience I should tender;
More than my words all is nothing; nor my prayers
Are not words duly hallow'd, nor my wishes
More worth than empty vanities; yet my wishes,
Are all I can return. Beseech your lordship,
Vouchsafe to speak my thanks, and my obedience,
As from a blushing handmaid to his highness;
Whose health, and royalty, I pray for.

Cham. Lady, I shall not fail to approve the fair conceit,
The king hath of you. I have perus'd her well;
Beauty and honour in her are so mingled,
That they have caught the king: and who knows yet,
But from this lady may proceed a gem,
To lighten all this isle?—I'll to the king
And say, I spoke with you.

Anne. My honom'd lord. [Exit Lord Chamberlain.

Old L. Why, this it is; see, see! I have been begging sixteen years in court,
And never yet a courtier beggar'd, nor could Come pat betwixt too early and too late,
For any suit of pounds: and you, (O fate!) A very fresh-fish here, (fye, fye upon This campaign'd fortune!) have your month fill'd up.

Before you open it.

Anne. This is strange to me.

Old L. How tastes it? is it bitter? forty pence,
no.

There was a lady once, (tis an old story,) That would not be a queen, that would she not,
For all the mud in Egypt. Have you heard it?
Anne. Come, you are pleasant.

Old L. With your theme, I could Overtourn the lark. The marchioness of Pembroke
A thousand pounds a year! for pure respect
No other obligation: By my life,
That promises more thousands: Honnor's train
Is longer than his foreskirt. By this time,
I know your back will bear a duchess:—Say,
Are you not stronger than you were?

Anne. Good lady, Make yourself mirth with your particular fancy,
And jesting: but not on't. 'Would I had no being,
If this salute my blood a jot; it faints me,
To think what follows.
The queen is comfortless, and we forgetful
In our long absence: Fray, do not deliver
What you have seen of her, to her.
Old L. What do you think I

SCENE IV.—A Hall in Black-ferns.

Trumpets, sennet, and cornets. Enter Two Varojes, with short and silver swords; next them, Two Scribes in the habit of docters; after them, the Archbishop of Canterbury alone; after him, the Bishops of Lincoln, Ely, Rochester, and Saint Asaph; next them, with some smalldeclare, follows a Gentleman bearing the purse, with the great seal, and a cardinal's hat; then Two Priests, bearing each a silver cross; then a Gentleman-Usher bareheaded, accompanied with a Sergeant at Arms, bearing a silver mace; then Two Gentlemen, bearing two great silver platters; after them, side by side, the Two Cardinals Wolsey and Campeolus; Two Noblemen with the sword and mace. Then enter the King and Queen, and their Train. The King takes place under the cloth of state; the Two Cardinals sit under him as judges. The Queen takes place at some distance from the King. The Bishops place themselves on each side of the Queen, in manner of a consistory; between them, the Scribes. The Lords sit next the Bishops. The Crier and the rest of the Attendants stand in convenient order about the stage.

The Queen makes no answer, rises out of her chair, goes about the court, comes to the King, and kneels at his feet; then speaks.

Q. Kath. Sir, I desire you, do me right and justice; And to bestow your pity on me for I am a most poor woman, and a stranger, Born out of your dominions; having here No judgment different, nor no more assurance Of equal friend and proceeding. Alas, sir, In what have I offended you? what cause Hath my behaviour given to your displeasure, That thus you should proceed to put me off, And take your good grace from me? Heaven witnes,
I have been to you a true and humble wife, At all times to your will conformable: Ever in fear to kindle your dislike, Yes, subject to your countenance; glad, or sorry, As I saw it inclin'd. When was the hour, I say, where you condemned me for mine? Or made it not mine too? Or which of your friends Have I not strove to love, although I knew He were mine enemy? what friend of mine That had it to him durst'd your anger, did I Continue in my liking? say, or any? He was from thence discharg'd? Sir, call to mind That I have been your wife, in this obedience, Upward of twenty years, and have been blest With many children by you; if, in the course: And process of this time, you can report, And prove it too, against mine honour aught, My bond to wedlock, or my love and duty, Against which you do suspect me, in God's name, Turn me away; and let the foulest contempt Shut door upon me, and so give me up

To the sharpest kind of justice. Please you sir, The king, your father, was reputed for A prince of prudence, of an excellent And unmatch'd wit and judgment. Ferdinand, My father, king of Spain, was reckoned one The wisest prince, that there had reign'd by many A year before: It is not to be question'd That they had gather'd a wise counsel to them Of every realm, that did debate this business, Who deem'd our marriage lawful: Wherefore I humbly Beseech you, sir, to spare me, till I may Be by my friends in Spain advis'd; whose counsel I will implore; if not; the name of God, Your pleasure be fulfill'd! Wol. You have here, lady, Wol. (And of your choice,) these reverend fathers; men Of singular integrity and learning, Yes, the elect of the land, who are assembled To plead your cause: It shall be therefore bootless, That longer you desire the court; as well For your own quiet, as to rectify What is unsettled in the kingdom. Com. His grace Hath spoken well, and justly: Therefore, madam, It's fit this royal session do proceed; And that, without delay, their arguments Be now produc'd, and heard.

Q. Kath. Lord cardinal,— To you I speak. Wol. Your pleasure, madam? Q. Kath. Sir, I am able to weep; but, thinking that We are a queen, (or have dream'd so,) certain, The daughter of a king, my drops of tears I'll turn to sparks of fire. Wol. Be patient yet. Q. Kath. I will, when you are humble; nay, before, Or God will punish me. I do believe, Induc'd by potent circumstances, that You are mine enemy, and make my challenge, You shall not be my judge: for it is you Have blown this coal betwixt my lord and me,— Which (God's dews quench!)—Therefore, I say again, I utterly abhor, yes, from my soul; Refuse you for my judge; whom, yet once more, I hold my most malicious foe, and think not At all a friend to truth.

Wol. I do profess, You speak not like yourself: who ever yet Have stood to charity, and display'd the effects Of disposition gentle, and of wisdom O'topping woman's power. Madam, you do me wrong! I have no spleen against you; nor injustice For you, or any: how far I have proceeded, Or how far further shall, is warranted By a commission from the consistory, Yea, the whole consistory of Rome. You charge me,
That I have blown this coal: I do deny it: The kind is present; if it be known to him, That I gain'd my deed, how may he wound, And worthily, my falsehood? yea, as much As you have done my truth. But if he know That I am free of your report, he knows I am not of your wrong judgment. Therefore in him It lies, to cure me: and the cure is, to Remove these thoughts from you: The which be—fore His highness shall speak in, I do beseech You, gracious madam, to unthink your speaking, And to say so no more.

Q. Kath. My lord, my lord, I am a simple woman, much too weak To oppose your cunning. You are meek, and humbly-mouth'd; You sign your place and calling, in full seeming With manifest grace and humility: but your heart Is cram'd with arrogance, spleen, and pride. You have, by fortune, and his highness' favours,
Gone slightly o'er low steps; and now are mounted
Where powers are your retainers: and your words,
Domesticks to you, serve your will, as't please
Yourself pronounce their office. I must tell you,
You tender more your person's honour, than
Your high profession spares; and again
I do refuse you for my judge: and here,
Before you all, appeal unto the pope,
To bring my whole cause 'fore his holines,
And to be judg'd by him.

[She cur'ties to the King, and offers to depart.]

Cam. The queen is obstinate,
Stubborn to justice, apt to accuse it, and Disdainful to be try'd by it; 'tis not well.
She's going away.

K. Hen. Call her again.

Griff. Katharine queen of England, come into the Court.

Q. Kath. What need you o'to me? pray you, keep Your joy the unlook'd: although not there
At once and fully satisfied, whether ever I Did broach this business to your highness; or Laid any scruple in your way, which might Induce you to the question on't? or ever
Have you to, but with thanks: for such
A royal lady,—speak one the least word, might
Be to the prejudice of her present state,
Or touch of her good person?

K. Hen. My lord cardinal,
I do excuse you; yes, upon mine honour,
I free you from't. You are not to be taught
That you have many enemies, that know not
Why they are so, but, like to village curs,
Bark when their fellows do:—by some of these
The queen is put in anger. You are excus'd
But will you be more justified? you ever
Have wish'd the sleeping of this business: never Desir'd it to be stirr'd; but oft have hinder'd: oft
The passages made toward it:—on my honour,
I speak as your lord cardinal to this point,
And thus far clear him. Now, what mov'd me
to'rt,
I will be bold with time, and your attention:—
Then mark the inducement. Thus it came:—give
I do refused to't:

My conscience first receiv'd a tenderness,
Scruple, and pricks, on certain speeches utter'd
By the bishop of Bayonne, then French ambassador;
Who had been hither sent on the said
Marriage, 'twixt the duke of Orleans and
Our daughter Mary: I' the progress of this business,
Ere a determinate resolution, be
I mean, the bishop) did require a respite;
Wherein he might the king his lord advertise
Whether our daughter were legitimate,
Respecting this our marriage with the dowager,
Sometimes our brother's wife. This respite shook
The bosom of my conscience, enter'd me,
Yes, with a splitting power, and made to tremble
The region of my breast: which forc'd such way,
That made my grand consideration did throng,
And press'd in with this caution. First, methought,
I stood not in the smile of heaven; who had
Commanded nature, that my lady's womb,
If it conceiv'd a male child by me, should
Do no more offices of life to't, then
The grave does to the dead: for her male issue
Or died where they were made, or shortly after
This world had air'd them: Hence I took a thought,
This was an argument on me: that my kingdom,
Well worthy the best heir the world, should not
Be gladd'd in't by me: Then follows, that I weigh'd the danger which my realms stood in
By this my issue's fall: and that gave to me
Many a great concern. Thus hulling in
The wild sea of my conscience, I did steer Towards this remedy, whereupon we are
Now present here together; that's to say,
I meant to rectify my conscience, which
I then did feel full sick, and yet not well,
By all the reverend fathers of the land,
And doctors learn'd,—First, I began in private
With you, my lord of Lincoln; you remember
How under my oppression I did reek,
When I first mov'd you.

Lin. Very well, my liege.

K. Hen. I have spoke long; be pleas'd yourself to say
How far you satisfied me.

Lin. So please your highness,
The question did at first so stagger me,—
Bearing a state of mighty moment in,
And consequence of dread,—that I committed
The damag'd counsel which I had to doubt; and Did entreat your highness to this course,
Which you are running here.

K. Hen. I then mov'd you,
My lord of Canterbury; and got your leave
To make this present summons.—Unsolicited
I left no reverend person in this court;
But by particular consent proceeded,
Under your hands and seals. Therefore, go ou;
For no dislike I' the world against the person
Of the great queen, but the say's a thorny points
Of my alleged reasons, drive this forward;
Prove but our marriage lawful, by my life
And kingly dignity, we are contented
To wear our mortal state to come, with her,
Katharine our queen, before the primest creature
That's paragon'd o' the world.

Cam. So please your highness,
The queen being absent, 'tis a needful fitness
That we adjourn this court till further day:
Mean while must be an earnest motion
Made to the queen, to call back her appeal
She intends unto his holiness. [They rise to depart.]

K. Hen. I may perceive, [Aside
These cardinals trifle with me: I labour
This dilatory sloth, and tricks of Rome.
I learn'd and well-beloved servant, Cranmer,
Pr'ythee, return! with thy approach, I know,
My comfort comes along. Break up the court;
I say, set on. [Exeunt in manner as they entered.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Palace at Bridewell. A Room in the Queen's Apartment.

The Queen, and some of her Women, at work.

Q. Kath. Take thy lute, wench: my soul grows
Sad with troubles:
Sing, and disperse them, if thou canst. leave working.
KING HENRY VIII.

Act 3.

SONG.

Orpheus with his lute made trees,
And the mountain-tops, that freeze,
Bow themselves, when he did sing:
To his music, plants, and flowers,
E'en sprung; as sun, and shopers,
There had been a lasting spring.
Every thing that heard him play,
Even the billows of the sea,
Rung their heads, and then lay by.
In sweet music is such art;
Killing care, and grief of heart,
Fall asleep, or, hearing, die.

Enter a Gentleman.

Q. Kath. How now?
Gent. An't please your grace, the two great cardinals
Walt in the presence.
Q. Kath. Would they speak with me?
Gent. They will'd me say so, madam.
Q. Kath. To come near. [Exit Gent.] What can be their business?
With me, a poor weak woman, fallen from favour?
I do not like their coming, now I think on't.
They should be good men; their affairs as righteous;
But all hoods make not monks.

Enter Wolsey and Campeius.

Wol. Peace to your highness!
Q. Kath. Your graces find me here part of a house life?
I would be all, against the worst may happen.
What are your pleasures with me, reverend lords?
Wol. May it please you, noble madam, to withdraw
Into your private chamber, we shall give you
The full cause of our coming.
Q. Kath. Speak it here;
There's nothing I have done yet, o' my conscience,
Deserves a corner: 'Would, all other women
Could speak this with as free a soul as I do!
My lords, I care not, (so much I am happy Above a number,) if my actions
Were tried by every tongue, everyone saw them,
Envy and base opinion sat against them,
I know my life so even: If your purposes
Seek me out, and that way I am wise in,
Out with it boldly; Truth loves open dealing.
Wol. Tanta est erga te mentis integritas, regina serenissima.—
Q. Kath. O, good my lord, no Latin;
I am not such a truant since my coming,
As not to know the language I have liv'd in:
A strange tongue makes my cause more strange, suspicious;
Pray, speak in English: here are some will thank you,
If you speak truth, for their poor mistress' sake;
Believe me, she has had much wrong: Lord cardinal,
The willing'st sin I ever yet committed,
May be absolv'd in English.
Wol. Noble lady,
I am sorry, my Integrity should breed,
(And service to his majesty and you,)
So deep suspicion, where all faith was meant.
We come not by the way of accusation,
To taint that honour every good tongue blesses;
Nor to beiny anywhere to sorrow;
You have too much, good lady: but to know
How you stand minded in the weighty difference
Between the king and you; and to deliver,
Like free and honest men, our just opinions,
And comforts to your cause.
Cam. Most honour'd madam,
My lord of York,—out of his noble nature,
Zeal and obedience he still bore your grace;
Forgetting, like a good man, your late censure
Both of his truth and him, (which was too far,)—
Offers, as I do, in a sign of peace,
His service and his counsel.
Q. Kath. To betray me. [Aside.
My lords, I thank you both for your good wills,
Ye speak like honest men, (pray God, ye prove so!)
But how to make ye suddenly an answer,
In such a point of weight?your mine honour,
(More near my life, I fear,) with my weak wit,
And to such men of gravity and learning,
In truth, I know not. I was set at work
Among my maids; full little, God knows, looking Either for such men, or such business.
For her sake that I have been, (for I feel
The last fit of my greatnes,) good your graces,
Let me have time, and counsel, for my cause;
Alas! I am a woman, friendless, hopeless.
Wol. Madam, you wrong the king's love with these fears;
Your hopes and friends are infinite.
Q. Kath. In England,
But little for my profit: Can you think, lords,
That any Englishman dare give me counsel?
Or be a known friend, 'gainst his highness' pleasure,
(Though he be grown so desperate to be honest,)
And live a subject? Nay, forsooth, my friends,
They that must weigh out my afflictions,
They that my trust must grow to, live not here:
They are, as all my other comforts, far hence,
In mine own country, lords.
Cam. I would, your grace.
Would leave your griefs, and take my counsel.
Q. Kath. How, sir?
Cam. Put your main cause into the king's protection.
He's loving, and most gracious; 'twill be much
Both for your honour better, and your cause;
For, if the trial of the law o'ertake you,
You'part away disgrac'd.
Wol. He tells you rightly.
Q. Kath. Ye tell me what ye wish for both, my ruin:
Is this your christian counsel? out upon ye!
Heaven is above all yet; there sits a judge,
That no king can corrupt.
Cam. Your rage mistakes us.
Q. Kath. The more shame for ye; holy men I thought ye,
Upon my soul, two reverend cardinal virtues;
But cardinal virtues, and hollow hearts, I fear ye:
Mend them, for shame, my lords. Is this your comfort?
The cordial that ye bring a wretched lady?
A woman lost among ye, laugh'd at, scorn'd? I will not wish ye half my miseries,
I have more charity: But say, I warn'd ye;
Take heed, for heaven's sake, take heed, lest at once
The burden of my sorrows fall upon ye.
Wol. Madam, this is a mere distraction;
You turn the good we offer into envy.
Q. Kath. Ye turn me into nothing: Woe upon ye,
And all such false professors! Would ye have me (If you have any justice, any pity;
If ye be any thing but churchmen's habits,)
Put my sick cause into his hands that hates me?
Alas! he has banish'd me his bed already;
His love, too long ago: I am old, my lords,
And all the fellowship I hold now with him
Is only my obedience. What can happen
To me above this wretchedness? all your studies
Make me a curse like this.
Cam. Your fears are worse.
Q. Kath. Have I liv'd thus long,—(let me speak myself, Since virtue finds no friends,)—a wife, a true one?
A woman (I dare say, without vain-glory,
Never yet branded with suspicion?
Have I with all my full affections
Still met the king? lovd him next heaven? obey'd
him?
Been, out of fondness, superstitious to him?
Almost forgot my prayers to content him?
And am I thus rewarded? 'tis not well, lords.
Bring me a constant woman to her husband,
One that ne'er dream'd a joy beyond his pleasure;
And to that woman, when she has done most,
Yet will I add an honour.—a great patience.
Wol. Madam, you wander from the good we aim at.

Q. Kath. My lord, I dare not make myself so guilty,
To give up willingly that noble title
Your master wed me to: nothing but death
Shall e'er divorce my dignities.
Wol. 'Pray, hear me.
Q. Kath. 'Would I had never trod this English earth,
Or felt the flatteries that grow upon it!
Ye have angels' faces, but heaven knows your hearts.
What will become of me now, wretched lady?
I am the unhappiest woman living—
Alas! poor wenches, where are now your fortunes?
[To her Woman.
Shipwreck'd upon a kingdom, where no pity,
No friends, no hope; no kindred weep for me,
Almost, no grave allow'd me:—take the lilt,
That once was mistress of the field, and flourisht,
I'll hang my head, and perish.
Wol. If your grace
Could but be brought to know, our ends are honest,
You'd feel more comfort: why should we, good lady,
Upon what cause, wrong you? alas! our places,
The way of our profession is against it;
We are to cure such sorrows, not to sow them,
For goodness' sake, consider what you do;
How you may hurt yourself, ay, utterly
Grow from the king's acquaintance, by this carriagé.
The hearts of princes kiss obedience,
So much they love it; but, to stubborn spirits,
They swell, and grow as terrible as storms.
I know, you have a gentle, noble temper,
A soul as even as a calm; Pray, think us
Those we profess, peace-makers, friends, and servants.
Cam. Madam, you'll find it so. You wrong your virtues
With these weak women's fears. A noble spirit,
As yours was put into you, ever cast
Such doubts, so false coin, from it. The king loves you;
Beware, you lose it not: For us, if you please
To trust us in your business, we are ready
To use our utmost studies in your service.
Q. Kath. Do what ye will, my lords: And, pray,
Forgive me,
If I have us'd myself unmanly; I know,
I am a woman, lacking wit
To make a seemly answer to such persons.
Pray, do my service to his majesty.
He has my heart yet; and shall have my prayers,
While I shall have my life. Come, reverend fathers,
Bestow your counsels on me: she now begs,
That little thought, when she set nothing here,
She should have bought her dignities so dear.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Ante-chamber to the King's Apartment.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk, the Duke of Suffolk, the Earl of Surrey, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. If you will now unite in your complaints
And force them with a constancy, the cardinal
Cannot stand under them. If you omit
The offer of this time, I cannot promise,
But that you shall sustain more new disgraces,
With these you bear already.

Sur. I am joyful
To meet the least occasion, that may give me
Remembrance of my father in-law, the duke,
To be reveng'd on him.

Suf. Which of the peers
Have unconstem'd gone by him, or at least
Strangely neglected? when did he regard
The stamp of nobleness in any person,
Out of himself?

Cham. My lords, you speak your pleasures:
What he deserves of you and me, I know;
What we can do to him, (though now the time Gives way to us,) I much fear. If you cannot Bar his access to the king, never attempt
Any thing on him; for he hath a witchcraft
Over the king in his tongue.

Nor. O, fear him not; his spell in that is out: the king hath found
Matter against him, that for ever mars
The honey of his language. No, he's settled,
Not to come off, in his displeasure.

Sur. Sir, I should he glad to hear such news as this Once every hour.

Nor. Believe it, this is true,
In the divorce, his contrary proceedings
Are all unfolded; wherein he appears,
As I could wish mine enemy.

How came
His practices to light?

Suf. Most strangely.

Sur. O, how, how?

Suf. The cardinal's letter to the pope miscarried,
And came to the eye of the king: wherein was read,
How that the cardinal did entreat his holiness
To stay the judgment o' the divorce; For if
It did take place, I do, quoth he, perceive,
My king is tangled in affection to
A creature of the queen's, lady Anne Bullen.

Suf. Has the king this?

Suf. Believe it.

Cham. The king in this perceives him, how he cosets
And hedges, his own way. But in this point
All his tricks founder, and he brings his physic
After his patient's death: the king already
Hath married the fair lady.

Sur. 'Would he had!

Suf. May you be happy in your wish, my lord!
For, I profess, you have it.

Sur. Now all my joy
Trace the conjunction!

Suf. My ame to t'

Nob. All men's.

Suf. There's order given for her coronation:
Marry, this is yet but young, and may be left
To some ears unrecorded.—But, my lords,
She is a gallant creature, and complete
In mind and feature: I persuade me, from her
Will fall some blessing to this land, which shall
In it be memoriz'd.

Sur. But, will the king
Digest this letter of the cardinal's?

The Lord forbid!

Nob. Marry, ameu!

Suf. There be more wasps that buzz about his nose,
Will make this sting the sooner. Cardinal Cam-
Is stolen away to Rome; hath ta'en no leave;
Has left the cause o' the king unhandled; and
Is posted, as the agent of our cardinal,
To second all his plot. I do assure you,
The king cry'd, ha! at this.

Cham. Now, God incense him,
And let him cry ha, louder!
Act 3.

KING HENRY VIII.

Nor. But, my lord, When returns Cranmer?

Suf. He is return'd, in his opinions; which Have satisfied the king for his divorce, Together with all famous colleges

Almost in Christendom; shortly, I believe, His second marriage shall be publish'd, and Her coronation. Katharine no more Shall be call'd, queen; but princess dowager, And widow to prince Arthur.

Nor. This same Cranmer's A worthy fellow, and hath ta'en much pain In the king's business.

Suf. He has; and we shall see him For it, an archbishop.

Nor. So I hear.

Suf. 'Tis so.

The cardinal—

Enter Wolsey and Cromwell.

Nor. Observe, observe, he's moody.

Wol. The packet, Cromwell, gave it you the king?

Crom. To his own hand, in his bedchamber.

Wol. Look'd he 'tude the inside of the paper?

Crom. Presently.

He did unseal them: and the first he view'd, He read it with a serious mind; a heed Was in his countenance: You, he bade Attend him here this morning.

Wol. Is he ready To come abroad?

Crom. I think, by this he is.

Wol. Leave me a while,— [Exit Cromwell.

It shall be to the duchess of Alencon, The French king's sister: he shall marry her—

Anne Bullen! No; I'll no Anne Bullens for him: There is more in it than fair visage—Bullen! No, we'll no Bullens. Speedily I wish To hear from Rome. The marchioness of Pembroke!

Nor. He's discontented.

Suf. May be, he hears the king Does what his anger to him.

Sur. Sharp enough, Lord, for thy justice!

Wol. The late queen's gentlewoman; a knight's daughter.

To be her mistress' mistress! the queen's queen!—

This candle burns not clear; 'tis I must snuff it; Then, out it goes. What though I know her virtuous, And well deserving? yet I know her for A spleeny Lutheran; and not wholesome to Our cause, that she should lie it the bosom of Our hard-rul'd king. Again, there is sprung up An heretick, an arch one, Cranmer; one Hath craw'd it into the favour of the king, And is his oracle.

Nor. He is vex'd at something.

Suf. I would 'twere something that would fret the string, The master-cord of his heart!

Enter the King, reading a schedule; and Lovell.

Suf. The king, the king.

K. Hen. What pales of wealth hath he accumul'd To his own portion! and what expence by the hour Seems to grow from him! How, I' the name of thrift, Does he rate this together!—Now, my lords; Saw you the cardinal?

Nor. My lord, we have Stood here observing him: Some strange commotion Is in his brain: he bites his lip, and starts; Stops on a sudden, looks upon the ground, Then, lays his finger on his temple; straight, Springs out into fas' gait; then, stops again, Strikes his breast hard; and anon, he casts His eye against the moon: in most strange postures We have seen him set himself.

K. Hen. It may well be; There is a mutiny in his mind. This morning Papers of state he sent me to peruse, As I requir'd; And, wot you, what I found There; on my conscience, perhaps, not angry? Forssooth, an inventory, thus importing— The several parcels of his plate, his treasure, Rich stuffs, and ornaments of household; which I find at such proud rate, that it out-speaks Possession of a subject.

Nor. It's heaven's will;

Some spirit put this paper in the packet To bless your eye withal.

K. Hen. If we did think His contemplation were above the earth, And fix'd on spiritual object, he should still Dwell in his musings: but, I am afraid, His thinkings are below the moon, not worth His serious considering.

[He takes his seat, and whispers Lovell, who goes to Wolsey.

Wol. Heaven forgive me! Ever God bless your highness!

K. Hen. Good my lord, You are full of heavenly stuff, and bear the inven- tory Of your best graces in your mind; the which You were now running o'er; you have scarce time To steal from spiritual leisure a brief span To keep your earthly audit: Sure, in that I deem you an ill husband: and am glad To have you therein my companion.

Wol. Sir,

For holy offices I have a time; a time To think upon the part of business, which I bear! the state; and nature does require Her times of preservation, which, perforce, I her frail son, amongst my brethren mortal, Must give my tendance to.

K. Hen. You have said well.

Wol. And ever may your highness yoke together, As I will lend you cause, my doing well With my well-saying!

K. Hen. 'Tis well said again; And 'tis a kind of good deed, to say well; And yet words are no deeds. My father lov'd you; He said, he did; and with his deed did crown His word upon you. Since I had my office, I have kept you next my heart; have not alone Employ'd you where high profits might come home, But part'd my present havings, to bestow My bounties upon you.

Wol. What should this mean?

Sur. The Lord increase this business!

[Aside.

K. Hen. Have I not made you The prime man of the state? I pray you, tell me, If what I now pronounce, you have found true: And, if you may confess it, say withal, If you are bound to us, or no. What say you?

Wol. My sovereign, I confess, your royal graces, Shower'd on me daily, have been more, than could My studied purposes require; which went Beyond all man's endeavours—my endeavours Have ever came too short of my desires, Yet, fill'd with my abilities: Mine own ends Have been mine so, that evermore they pointed To the good of your most sacred person, and The profit of the state. For what that graces Heap'd upon me, poor undeserver, I Can nothing render but allegiance thanks; My prayers to heaven for you; my loyalty, Which ever has, and ever shall be growing, Till death, that winter, kill it.

K. Hen. Fairly answer'd: A loyal and obedient subject is Therein illustrated: The honour of it Does pay the act of it; as, if the contrary, The foulness is the punishment. I presume
That, as my hand has open'd bounty to you,
My heart dropp'd love, my power rain'd honour,
More on you, than any; so your hand, and heart,
Your brain, and every function of your power,
Should, notwithstanding that your bond of duty,
As 'twere in love's particular, be more
To me, your friend, than any.

Wol. I do profess,
That for your highness' good I ever laboured
More than mine own; that am, have, and will be.
Though all the world should crack their duty to you,
And throw it from their soul; though perils did Abound, as thick as thought could make them, and Appear in forms more horrid; yet my duty,
As in the heavens, my strength, as much in flood,
Should appear to the approach of this wild river break,
And stand unshaken yours.

K. Hen. 'Tis nobly spoken:
Take notice, lords, he has a loyal breast,
For you have seen him open't.

[ADING him papers.

And, after, this; and then to breakfast, with
What appetite you have.

[Exit king, frowning upon Cardinal Wolsey:
the Nobles throng after him, smiling, and whispering.

Wol. What should this mean?
What sudden anger's this? how have I reap'd it?
He parted frowning from me, as if ruin
Leap'd from his eyes: so looks the cherished lion
Upon the daring huntsman that has gull'd him;
Then makes him nothing. I must read this paper:
I fear, the story of his anger.—'Tis so;
This paper has undone me:—'Tis the account
Of all that world of wealth I have drawn together
For mine own ends; indeed, to gain the popedom,
And see my friends in Rome.

O negligence,
Fit for a fool to fall by! What cross devil
Made me put this main secret in the packet
I sent the king? Is there no way to cure this?
No new device to beat this from his brains?
I know, 'twill stir him strongly; Yet I know
A way, if it take right, in spite of fortune
Will bring me off again. What's this—To the Pope.

The letter, as I live, with all the business
I writ to his holiness. Nay then, farewell!
I have touch'd the highest point of all my great-
ness;
And, from that full meridian of my glory,
I have roll'd, to my setting. I shall fall,
Like a bright exhalation in the evening,
And no man see me more.

Re-enter the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk, the Earl of Surrey, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. Hear the king's pleasure, cardinal: who commands you
To render up the great seal presently
Into our hands; and to confine yourself
To Asher-house, my lord of Winchester's,
Till you hear further from his highness.

Wol. Stay,
Where's your commission, lords? words cannot carry
Authority so weighty.

Stuf. Who dare cross them,
Bearing the king's will from his mouth expressly?
Wol. Till I find more than will, or words, to do it,
(mean, your malice,) know, officious lords,
I dare, and must deny it. Now I feel
Of what coarse metal ye are moulded,—envy.
How eagerly ye follow my disgraces,
As if it fed ye? and how sleek and wanton
Ye appear in every thing may bring my ruin!
Follow your envious courses, men of malice;
You have Christian warrant for them, and, no doubt,
In time will find their fit rewards. That seal,
You ask with such a violence, the king,
(Mine, and you master,) with his own hand gave me:
Bade me enjoy it, with the place and honours,
During my life, and, to confirm his goodness,
Tied it by letters patent: Now, who'll take it?

Sur. The king, that gave it.

Wol. It must be himself then.

Sur. Thou art a proud traitor, priest.

Wol. Proud lord, thou liest:
Within these forty hours Surrey durst better
Have burnt that tongue, than said so.

Sur. Thy ambition,
Thou scarlet sin, robb'd this bewailing laud
Of noble Buckingham, my father-in-law:
The heads of all thy brother cardinals,
(With, me, see, and all thy best parts bound together,)
Welgh'd not a hair of his. Flague of your policy
You sent me deputy for Ireland;
Far from his succour, from the king, from all
That might have mercy on the fault thou gav'st
him:
Whilst your great goodness, out of holy pity,
Absolv'd him with an axe.

Wol. This, and all else
This talking lord can lay upon my credit,
I answer, is most false. The duke by law
Found his deserts: how innocent I was
From any private malevice in his end,
His noble jury and cause can witness.
If I lov'd many words, lord, I should tell you,
You have as little honesty as honour:
That I, in the way of loyalty and truth
Toward the king, my ever royal master,
Dare mate a sounder man than Surrey can be,
And all that love his follies.

Sur. By my soul,
Your long coat, priest, protects you; thou should'st feel
My sword the life-blood of thee else.—My lords,
Can ye endure to hear this arrogance
And from this fellow? If we live thus tamely,
To be thus jaded by a piece of scarlet,
Farewell nobility; let his grace go forward,
And dare us with his cap, like larks.

Wol. All goodness
Is poison to thy stomach.

Sur. Yes, that goodness
Of gleaning all the land's wealth into one,
Into your own hands, cardinal, by extortion;
The goodness of your intercepted packets,
You sent to the pope, against the king: your goodness,
Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious.—
My lord of Norfolk, as you are truly noble,
As you respect the common good, the state
Of our despid't nobility, our issues
Who, if he live, will scarce be gentlemen,—
Produce the grand srm of his sins, the articles
Collected from his life—'I'll startle you
Worse than the sacring bell, when the brown
Can match
Lay kissing in your arms, lord cardinal.

Wol. How much, methinks, I could despise this man,
But that I am bound in charity against it!

Nor. Those articles, my lord, are in the king's hand;
But, thus much, they are foul ones.

Wol. So much fairer,
And spotless, shall mine innocence arise,
When the king knows my truth!

Sur. This cannot save you:
I thank my memory, I yet remember
Some of these articles; and out they shall.
Now, if you can blush, and cry guilty, cardinal,
You'll show a little honesty.

Wol. Speak on, sir;
I dare your worst objections: if I blush,
It is, to see a nobleman want manners.
Act 3

KING HENRY VIII.

Sur. I'd rather want those, than my head. Have you at you.
First, that, without the king's assent, or knowledge, you would go to be a legate; by which power you might have the jurisdiction of all bishops.
Nor. Then, that, in all you write to Rome, or else To foreign princes, Ego et Rex meus Was still inscrib'd; in which you brought the king To be your servant.
Suf. Then, that, without the knowledge Either of king or council, when you went Ambassador to the emperor, you made bold To carry into Flanders the great seal.
Sur. Item, you sent a large commission To Gregory de Cassalls, to conclude Without the king's will, or the state's allowance, A league between his highness and Ferrara.
Suf. That, out of mere ambition, you have caus'd Your holy hat to be stamp'd on the king's coin.
Sur. Then, that you have sent innumerable substance, (By what means got, I leave to your own conscience,) To furnish Rome, and to prepare the ways You have for dignities; to the mere undoing Of all the kingdom. Many more there are; Which, since they are of you, and odious, I will not taint my mouth with.
Crom. O my lord, Press not a falling man too far; 'tis virtue: His faults lie open to the laws; let them, Not you, correct him. My heart weeps to see him So little of his great self.
Suf. Lord cardinal, the king's further pleasure is,— Because all those things, you have done of late By your power legatine within this kingdom, Full tender leaves of hope, to-morrow blossoms, And bears his blushing honours thick upon him: The third day, comes a frost, a killing frost; And,—when he thinks, good easy man, full surely His greatness is a ripening,—nips his root, And then he falls, as I do. I have ventur'd, Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders, This many summers in a sea of glory; But far beyond my depth: my high-born pride At length broke under me; and now has left me, Well and without service, to the mercy Of a rude stream, that must for ever hide me. Vain pomp, and glory of this world, I hate ye; I feel my heart new opened: O, how wretched Is it to lose the poor man's hangings on princes' favours! There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire to, That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin, More pangs and fears than wars or women have; And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer, Never to hope again.—

Enter Cromwell, amazedly.

Crom. Why, how now, Cromwell? I have no power to speak, sir. What is it, that, amaz'd At my misfortunes? can thy spirit wonder, A great man should decline? Nay, an you weep, I am fallen indeed.

Crom. How does your grace? Why, well;
Never so truly happy, my good Cromwell. I know myself now; and I feel within me A peace above all earthly dignities, A still and quiet conscience. The king has cur'd me, I humbly thank his grace; and from these shoulders These ruin'd pillars, out of pity, taken A load would sink a navy, too much honour: O, 'tis a burden, Cromwell, 'tis a burden, Too heavy for a man that hopes for heaven.

Crom. I am glad, your grace has made that right use What news abroad?

Crom. The heaviest, and the worst, Is your displeasure with the king.

Wol. God bless him! The next is, that sir Thomas More is chosen Lord chancellor in your place.

Crom. That's somewhat sudden: But he's a learned man. May he continue Long in his highness' favour, and do justice For truth's sake, and his conscience; that his bones, When he has run his course, and sleeps in blessings, May have a tomb of orphans' tears wept on 'em! What more?

Crom. That Cranmer is return'd with welcome, Install'd lord archbishop of Canterbury. Wol. That's news indeed. Last, that the lady Anne, Whom the king hath in secrecy long married, Shall this day be view'd in open, as his queen, Going to chapel; and the voice is now Only about her coronation.

Wol. There was the weight that pull'd me down. O Cromwell, The king has gone beyond me, all my glories In that one woman I have lost for ever:
No sun shall ever usher forth mine honours, Or gild again the noble troops that waited Upon my smiles. Go, get thee from me, Cromwell; I am a poor fallen man, unworthy To be thy lord and master: Seek the king: That sun, I pray, may never set! I have told him What, and how true thou art: he will advance Some little memory of me will stir him, [Thee; With what emotion he was pleas'd,] Thy hopeful service perish too: Good Cromwell, Negotiit not; make use now, and provide For thine own future safety.

Crom. O my lord, Must I then leave you? must I needs forego So good, so noble, and so true a master? Bear witness, all that have not hearts of iron, With what a sorrow Cromwell leaves his lord.—

Crom. The king shall have my service; but my prayers For ever, and for ever, shall be yours.

Wol. Cromwell, I did not think to shed a tear In all my miseries; but thou hast forc'd me Out of thy honest truth to play the woman. Let's dry our eyes: and thusfar hear me, Cromwell And,—when I am forgotten, as I shall be; And sleep in dull cold marble, where no mention Of me more must be heard of,—say, I taught thee; Say, Wolsey,—that once rod the ways of glory, And sounded all the depths and shoals of honour, Found thee a way, out of his v neck, to rise in; A sure and safe one, though thy master miss'd it. Mark but my fall, and that ruin'd me. Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away ambition; By that sin fell the angels; how can man then, The image of his Maker, hope to win by't? Love thyself last: cherish those hearts that hate thee;
KING HENRY VIII.

Act 4.

Corruption wins not more than honesty.
Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace,
To silence envious tongues. Be just, and fear not:
Let all the ends, thou sim' st at, be thy country's,
Thy God's, and truth's; then if thou fall'st, O Cromwell,
Thou fall'st a blessed martyr. Serve the king;
And,—Pr'ythee, lead me in:
'There take an inventory of all I have,
To the last penny; 'tis the king's; my robe,
And my integrity to heaven, is all
I dare command mine own. O Cromwell, Cromwell,
Had I but serv'd my God with half the zeal
I serv'd my king, he would not in mine age
Have left me naked to mine enemies.
Crom. Good sir, have patience.
Wet. The hopes of court! my hopes in heaven do dwell.
[Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Street in Westminster.

Enter Two Gentlemen, meeting.

1 Gent. You are well met once again.
2 Gent. And so are you.
1 Gent. You come to take your stand here, and behold
The lady Anne pass from her coronation?
2 Gent. 'Tis all my business. At our last encounter,
The duke of Buckingham came from his trial.
1 Gent. 'Tis very true: but that time offered sorrow.
This, general joy.
2 Gent. 'Tis well: The citizens,
I am sure, have shown at full their royal minds;
As, let them have their rights, they are ever forward
In celebration of this day with shows,
Pageants, and sights of honour.
1 Gent. Never greater,
Nor, I'll assure you, better taken, sir.
2 Gent. May I be bold to ask what that contains,
That paper in your hand?
1 Gent. Yes; 'tis the list
Of those, that claim their offices this day,
By custom of the coronation.
The duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims
To be high-steward; next, the duke of Norfolk,
He to be earl marshal: you may read the rest.
2 Gent. I thank you, sir; had I not known those customs,
I should have been beholden to your paper.
But, I beseech you, what's become of Katharine,
The princess dowager? how goes her business?
1 Gent. That I can tell you too. The archbishop Of Canterbury, accompanied with other
Learned and reverend fathers of his order,
Held a late court at Dunstable, six miles off
From Ampthill, where the princess lay; to which
She oft was cited by them, but appear'd not;
And, to be short, for not appearance, and
The king's late scruple, by the main assent
Of all these learned men she was divorc'd,
And the late marriage made of none effect:
Since which, she was removed to Kimbolton,
Where she remains now, sick.
2 Gent. Alas, good lady!—
[Trumpets. The trumpets sound: stand close, the queen is coming.

The Order of the Procession.

A lively flourish of Trumpets: then enter.
1. Two Judges.
2. Lord Chancellor, with the purse and mace before him.
3. Choristers singing.
4. Mayor of London bearing the mace. Then caret, in his coat of arms, and, on his head, a gilt copper crown.
5. Marquis Dorset, bearing a sceptre of gold, on his head a demi-coronal of gold. With him, the Earl of Surrey, bearing the rod of silver with the dove, crowned with an earl's coronet.
Collars SS.
6. Duke of Suffolk, in his robe of estate, his coronet on his head, bearing a long white wand, as high-steward. With him, the Duke of Norfolk, with the rod of marshalship, a coronet on his head. Collars SS.
7. A canopy borne by four of the Cinque-ports:
under it, the Queen in her robe; in her hair wreath, crowned with pearl, crowned. On each side of her, the Bishops of London and Winchester.
8. The old Duchess of Norfolk, in a coronal of gold, worthed with flowers, bearing the Queen's train.
9. Certain Ladies or Countesses, with plain circlets of gold without flowers.

2 Gent A royal train, believe me.—These I know:
Who's that, that bears the scepter?
1 Gent. Marquis Dorset:
And that the earl of Surrey, with the rod.
2 Gent. A bold brave gentleman: And that should be the duke of Suffolk.
1 Gent. 'Tis the same; high-steward.
2 Gent. And that my lord of Norfolk?
1 Gent. Yes.
2 Gent. Heaven bless thee.

[Looking on the Queen.
Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look'd on—
Sir, as I have a soul, she is an angel;
Our king has all the Indies in his arms,
And more, and richer, when he strains that lady;
I cannot blame his conscience.
1 Gent. They, that bear
The cloth of honour over her, are four barons
Of the Cinque-ports.
2 Gent. Those men are happy; and so are all,
Near her.
I take it, she that carries up the train,
Is that old noble lady, duchess of Norfolk.
1 Gent. It is; and all the rest are countesses.
2 Gent. Their coronets say so. These are stars,
Indeed:
And, sometimes, falling ones.
1 Gent. No more of that.
[Exit Procession, with a great flourish of trumpets.

Enter a Third Gentleman.

God save you, sir! Where have you been broiling?
3 Gent. Among the crowd 'tis the abbey; where a finger
Could not be wedg'd in more: and I am stifled
With the mere rankness of their joy.
2 Gent. You saw
The ceremony?
3 Gent. That I did.
2 Gent. How was it?
3 Gent. Well worth the seeing.
2 Gent. Good sir, speak it to us.
3 Gent. As well as I am able. The rich stream
Of lords, and ladies, having brought the queen
To a prepar'd place in the choir, fell off; while her grace sat down
To rest a while, some half an hour, or so,
In a rich chair of state, opposing freely
The beauty of her person to the people.
Believe me, sir, she is the goodliest woman
That ever by man: which when the people
Had the full view of, such a noise arose
As the shrouds make at sea in a stiff tempest,
As loud, and to as many tunes: harts, cloaks,

[Trumpets. The trumpets sound: stand close, the queen is coming.

The Order of the Procession.

A lively flourish of Trumpets: then enter.
1. Two Judges.
2. Lord Chancellor, with the purse and mace before him.
(Doublets, I think,) flew up; and had their faces been lost, this day they had been lost. Such joy I never saw before. Great-bellied women, That had not half a week to go, like rams In the old time of war, would shake the press, And bore them reel before them. No man living Could say, This is my wife; there, all were woven So strangely in one piece.

2 Gent. But, 'pray, what follow'd?

3 Gent. At length her grace rose, and with modest pace,

Came to the altar: where she knelt, and, saint-like,
Cast her fair eyes to heaven, and pray'd devoutly. Then rose again, and bow'd her to the people: When she by the archbishop of Canterbury She had all the royal makings of a queen; As holy oil, Edward Confessor's crown, The rod, and bird of peace, and all such emblems Laid nobly on her; which perform'd, the choir, With all the choicest music of the kingdom, Together sung Te Deum. So she parted, And with the same full state pac'd back again To York-place, where the feast is held. Gent. Sir, you have more call it York-place, that is past: For, since the cardinal fell, that title's lost; Tis now the king's, and call'd—Whitehall. 3 Gent. I know it; But I'm so lately alter'd, that the old name Is in my mouth. About what?

2 Gent. Who may that be, I pray you? 3 Gent. Thomas Cromwell; A man in much esteem with the king, and truly A worthy friend—The king Has made him master o'the jewel-house, And one of theready, of the privy-council. 2 Gent. He will deserve more. 3 Gent. Yes, without all doubt. Come, gentlemen, ye shall go my way, which Is to the court, and there ye shall be my guests; Something I can command. As I walk thither, I'll tell ye more. Both. You may command us, sir.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. —Kimbolton.

Enter Katharine, Dowager, sick; led between Griffith and Patience.

Grif. How does your grace?

Kath. O, Griffith, sick to death: My legs, like loaden branches, bow to the earth, Willing to leave their burden: Reache a chair:—So, now, methinks, I feel a little ease. Didst thou not tell me, Griffith, as thou led'st me, That the great child of honour, cardinal Wolsey, Was dead?

Grif. Yes, madam; but, I think, your grace, Out of the pain you suffer'd, gave no ear to't.

Kath. Frythee, good Griffith, tell me how he died: If well, he stepp'd before me, happily, For my example.

Grif. Well, the voice goes, madam: For after the stout earl Northumberland Arrested him at York, and brought him forward (As a man sorely tainted,) to his answer, He fell sick suddenly, and grew so ill, He could not sit his mule.

Kath. Alas, poor man! Griffith. At last, with easy roads, he came to Leicester, Lodg'd in the abbey: where the reverend abbot, With all his convent, honourably receiv'd him; To whom he gave these words,—Of father abbot, An old man, broken with the storms of state, Is come to lay his weary bones among ye; Give him a little earth for charity's sake. So went to bed: where eagerly his sickness Pursu'd him still; and, three nights after this, About the hour of eight, (which he himself Foretold, should be his last,) full of repentance, Continual meditations, tears, and cries, He gave his honours to the world again, His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace. Kath. So may he rest; his faults lie gently on him! Yet thus far, Griffith, give me leave to speak him, And yet with charity.—He was a man Of an unbounded stomach, ever ranking Himself with princes; one, that by suggestion Ty'd all the kingdom: simony was fair play; His own opinion was his law: If in his presence He would say untruths; and be ever double, Both in his words and meaning: He was never, But where he meant to ruin, pitiful! His promises were, as he then was, mighty, But his performance, as he is now, nothing. Of his own body he was ill, and gave The clergy ill example. Griffith. Noble madam, Men's evil manners live in brass; their virtues We write in water. May it please your highness To hear me speak his good now?

Kath. Yes, good Griffith; I was malicious else. Griffith. This cardinal, Though from an humble stock, undoubtedly Was fashion'd to much honour. From his cradle, He was a scholar, and a ripe, and good one; Exceeding wise, fair spoken, and persuading: Lofty, and sour, to that they lov'd him not; But, to those men that sought him, sweet as summer. And though he were unsatisfied in getting, (Which was a sin,) yet in bestowing, madam, He was most princely: Ever witness for him Turning, as if he was all in you, Ipswich, and Oxford! one of which fell with him, Unwilling to outlive the good that did it; The other, though unfinished, yet so famous, So excellent in art, and still so rising, That Christendom shall ever speak his virtue. His overthrow heap'd happiness upon him; For then, and not till then, he felt himself, And found the blessedness of being little: And, to add greater honours to his age Than man could give him, he died, Caring God. Kath. After my death I wish no other herald, No other speaker of my living actions, To keep mine honour from corruption, But such an honest chronicler as Griffith. Whom I most hated living, thou hast made me, With thy religious truth, and modesty, Now in his ashes honour: Peace be with him!:— Patience, be near me still; and set me lower: I have not long to trouble thee.—Good Griffith, the cause the musicians play me that sad note I nam'd my knell, whilst I sit meditating On that celestial harmony I go to.

Sad and solemn music.

Grif. She is asleep: Good wench, let's sit down quiet, For fear we wake her:—Softly, gentle Patience.

The Vision. Enter, solemnly tripping one after another, six Personages, clad in white robes, wearing on their heads garlands of bay, and golden wands on their faces; branches of bays, or palm, in their hands. They first comee unto her, then dance; and at certain changes, the first two hold a spare garland over her head; at which the other four make reverend courtsey; then the two, that held the garland, deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in their changes, and holding the garland over her head: which done, they deliver the same garland to the last two, who likewise observe the same order: at which (as it were by inspiration,) she makes in her sleep signs of rejoicing, and holds up her hands to heaven: and so in their dancing they vanish, carrying the garland with them. The musicke continues.

Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye? Are ye all gone?
And leave me here in wretchedness behind ye?

Grif. Madam, we are here.

Kath. It is not you I call for:
Saw ye none enter, since I slept?

Grif. None, madam.

Kath. No? Saw you not, even now, a blessed troop
Invite me to a banquet; whose bright faces
Cast thousand beams upon me, like the sun?
They promised me eternal happiness;
And brought me garlands, (griffith, which I feel
I am not worthy yet to wear: I shall,
Assuredly.

Grif. I am most joyful, madam, such good dreams
Possess your fancy.

Kath. Bid the musicke leave,
They are harsh and heavy to me. [Musick ceases.

Pat. Do you note,
How much her grace is alter'd on the sudden?
How long her face is drawn? How pale she looks,
And of an earthly cold? Mark you her eyes?

Grif. She is going, wench; pray, pray.

Pat. Heaven comfort her!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. An't like your grace,

Kath. You are a saucy fellow:

Deserve we no more reverence?

Grif. You are to blame,
Knowing, she will not lose her wonted greatness,
To use so rude behaviour: go to, kneel.

Mess. I humbly do entreat your highness' pardon;
My haste made me unmanfully: There is staying
A gentleman, sent from the king, to see you.

Kath. Admit him entrance, Griffith: But this fellow,
Let me ne'er see again.

[Exeunt Griffith and Messenger.

Re-enter Griffith, with Capucins.

If my sight fail not,
You should be lord ambassador from the emperor,
My royal nephew, and your name Capucins.

Cap. Madam, the same, your servant.

Kath. O my lord,
The titles, and titles, now are alter'd strangely
With me, since first you knew me. But, I pray you,
What is your pleasure with me?

Cap. C'est une noble dame,
First, mine own service to your grace; the next,
The king's request that I would visit you:
Who grieves much for your weakness, and by me
Sends your princely commendations,
And heartily entreat you take good comfort.

Kath. O my good lord, that comfort comes too late;
'Tis like a pardon after execution:
That gentle physicke, given in time, had enn'd me;
But now I am past all comforts here, but prayers.

How does his highness?

Cap. Madam, in good health.

Kath. So may he ever do! and ever flourish,

When I shall dwell with worms, and my poor name
Banish't, the kingdom — Patience, is that letter,
I caus'd you write, yet sent away?

Pat. No, madam.

Kath. Sir, I most humbly pray you to deliver
This to my lord the king.

Cap. Most willing, madam.

Kath. In which I have commended to his goodness
The model of our chaste loves, his young daughter:
The dew of heaven fall thick in blessings on her —
Beseeming him, to give her virtuous breeding;
(She is young, and of a noble modest nature;
I hope, she will deserve well;) and a little
To love her for her mother's sake, that lord'd him,
Heaven knows how dearly. My next poor petition
Is, that his noble grace would have some pity
Upon my wretched women, that so long,
Have follow'd both my fortunes faithfully:
Of which there is not one, I dare aver,
(And now I should not lie,) but will deserve,
For virtue, and true beauty of the soul,
For honesty, and decent carriage,
A right good husband, let him be a noble;
And sure, those men are happy that shall have them.
The last is, for my men:—they are the poorest,
But poverty could never draw them from me:—
That they may have their wages duly paid them,
And something over to remember me by:
If heaven had pleas'd to have given me longer life,
And able means, we had not parted thus.
These are the whole contents:—And, good my lord,
By that grace love the dearest in this world,
As you wish christian peace to souls departed,
Stand these poor people's friend, and urge the king
To do me this last right.

Cap. By heaven, I will,
Or let me lose the fashion of a man!

Kath. I thank you, honest lord. Remember me
In all humility unto his highness:
Say, his long trouble now is passing
Out of this world: tell him, in death I bless'd
For so I will.—Mine eyes grow dim.—Farewell,
My lord.—Griffith, farewell.—Nay, Patience,
You must not leave me yet. I must to bed;
Call in more women.—When I am dead, good wench,
Let me be us'd with honour; strew me over
With maiden flowers, that all the world may know
I was a chaste wife to my grave: embalm me,
Then lay me forth: although unquen'd, yet like
A queen, and daughter to a king, inter me.
I can no more.— [Exeunt, leading Katharine.

ACT V.

SCENE I._A Gallery in the Palace.

Enter Gardiner, Bishop of Winchester, a Page with a torch before him, met by Sir Thomas Lovell.

Gar. It's one o'clock, boy, is't not?

Boy. It hath struck.

Gar. These should be hours for necessities,
Not for delights: times to repair our nature
With comforting repose, and not for us
To waste these times.—Good hour of night, sir Thomas!

Whither so late?

Lov. Came you from the king, my lord?

Gar. I did, sir Thomas; and left him at primrose
With the duke of Suffolk.

Lov. I must to him too,
Act 5.

KING HENRY VIII.

Before he go to bed. I'll take my leave.

Gar. Not yet, sir Thomas Lovell. What's the matter?

It seems, you are in haste; an if there be
No great offence belongs to, give your friend
Some touch of your late business: Affairs, that can be talk'd
(As, they say, spirits do,) at midnight, have
In them a wilder nature, than the business
That seeks despatch by day.

Lov. My lord, I love you;
And durst commend a secret to your ear
Much weightier than this work. The queen's in labour,
They say, in great extremity; and fear'd,
She'll with the labour end.

Gar. The fruit, she goes with,
I pray for heartily; that it may find
Good time, and live; but for the stock, sir Thomas,
I wish it grubb'd up now.

Lov. Methinks, I could
Cry the amen; and yet my conscience says
She's a good creature, and, sweet lady, does
Deserve our better wishes.

Gar. But, sir, sir,—
Hear me, sir Thomas: You are a gentleman
Of mine own way; I know you wise, religious;
And, let me tell you, it will never be
Twill not, sir Thomas Lovell, take't of me,
Till Cranmer, Cromwell, her two hands, and she,
Sleep in their graves.

Lov. Now, sir, you speak of two
The most remark'd i' the kingdom. As for Cromwell,—
Beside that of the jewel-house, he's made master
Of the rolls, and the king's secretary; further, sir,
Stands in the gap and trade of more preferments,
With which the time will load him: The archbishop
Is the king's hand, and tongue; And who dare speak
One syllable against him?

Gar. Yes, yes, sir Thomas,
There are that dare; and I myself have ventur'd
To speak my mind of him: and, indeed, this day,
Sir, (I may tell it you,) I think, I have Incens'd the lords o' the council, that he is Forsoo, I know he is, they know he is,
A most arch heretic, a pestilence
That does infect the land: with which they moved,
Have broken with the king; who hath so far
Given ear to our complaint, (of his great grace
And princely care; foreseeing those fell mischiefs
Our reasons laid before him,) he hath commanded,
To-morrow morning to the council-board
He be convented. He's a rank weed, sir Thomas,
And we must root him out. From your affairs
I hinder you too long: good night, sir Thomas.

Lov. Many good nights, my lord; I rest your servant. [Execute Gardiner and Page.

As Lovell is going out, enter the King, and the Duke of Suffolk.

K. Hen. Charles, I will play no more to-night;
My mind's not on't, you are too hard for me.

Suf. Sir, I did never win of you before.

K. Hen. But little, Charles;
Nor shall not, when my fancy's on my play.—
Now, Lovell, from the queen what is the news?

Lov. I could not personally deliver to her
What you commanded me, but by her woman
I sent your message; who return'd her thanks
In the greatest humbleness, and desir'd your highness
Most heartily to pray for her.

K. Hen. What say'st thou? ha!
To pray for her? what, is she crying out?

Lov. He said her woman; and that her sufferance made
Almost each pang a death.

K. Hen. Alas, good lady!

Suf. God safely quit her of her burden, and
With gentle travail, to the gladding of
Your highness with an heir!

K. Hen. 'Tis midnight, Charles, Prythee, to bed; and in thy prayers remember
The estate of my poor queen. Leave me alone;
For I must think of that, which company
Will not be friendly to.

Suf. I wish your highness
A quiet night, and my good mistress will Remember in my prayers.

K. Hen. Charles, good night.—
[Exit Suffolk.

Enter Sir Anthony Denny.

Well, sir, what follows?

Den. Sir, I have brought my lord the archbishop,
As you have commanded me.

K. Hen. Ha! Canterbury?

Den. Ay, my good lord.

K. Hen. 'Tis true; Where is he, Denny?

Den. He attends your highness' pleasure.

K. Hen. Bring him to us.

Lov. This is about that which the bishop spake;
I am happily come hither. [Aside.

Re-enter Denny, with Cranmer.

K. Hen. Avoid the gallery.

Lovell seems to stay.

Ha!—I have said.—Be gone.

What!—

[Execute Lovell and Denny.

Cran. I am fearful;—Wherefore frowns he thus?
'Tis his aspect of terror. All's not well.

K. Hen. How now, my lord? You do desire to know
Wherefore I sent for you.

Cran. It is my duty,
To attend your highness' pleasure.

K. Hen. Pray you, arise,
My good and gracious lord of Canterbury.
Come, you and I must walk a turn together;
I have news to tell you: Come, come, give me your hand.
Ah, my good lord, I grieve at what I speak,
And am right sorry to repeat what follows:
I have, and most unwillingly, of late
Heard many grievous, I do say, my lord,
Grievous complaints of you; which, being con-
sider'd,
Have mov'd us and our council, that you shall
This morning come before us; where, I know,
You cannot with such freedom purge yourself,
And bring the charge: of all these charges
Which will require your answer, you must take
Your patience to you, and be well contented
To make your house our Tower: You a brother of us,
It fits we thus proceed, or else no witness
Would come against you.

Cran. I humbly thank your highness;
And am right glad to catch this good occasion
Most thoroughly to be winnow'd, where my chaff
And corn shall fly asunder: for, I know,
There's none stands under more calumnious tongues,
Than I myself, poor man.

K. Hen. Stand up, good Canterbury;
Thy truth, and thy integrity, is rooted
In us, thy friend: Give me thy hand, stand up;
Prythee, let's walk. Now, by my holy-dame,
What manner of man are you? My lord, I look'd
You would have given me your petition, that
I should have taken some pains to bring together
Yourself and your accusers; and to have heard you
Without indulgence further.

Cran. Most dread liege,
The good I stand on is my truth, and honesty;
If they shall fail, I, with mine enemies,
Will triumph o'er my person; which I weigh not,
Being of those virtues vacant. I fear nothing
What can be said against me.

K. Hen. Know you not how
Your state stands i' the world, with the whole world?
Your enemies
Are many, and not small; their practices
Must be the same proportion; and not over
The justice and the truth o' the question carries
The due o' the verdict with it: At what ease
Might corrupt minds procure knaves as corrupt
To swear against you? such things have been done.
You are potently opposed; and with a malice
Of as great size. Ween you of better luck,
I mean, in perjur'd witness, than your master,
Whose minister you are, whiles here he liv'd
Upon this naughty earth? Go to, go to;
You take a precipice for no leap of danger,
And wo'e your own destruction.
Cran. God, and your majesty,
Protect mine innocence, or I fall into
The trap is laid for me!
K. Hen. Be of good cheer;
They shall no more prevail, than we give way to.
Keep comfort to you; and this morning see
You do appear before them; if they shall chance,
In charging you with matters, to commit you,
The best conconsions to the contrary
Fail not to use, and with the remainder
The occasion shall in-struct you; if entreaties
Will render you no remedy, this ring
Deliver them, and your appeal to us
There make before them.—Look, the good man weeps
He's honest, on mine honour. God's blest mother!
I swear, he's true-hearted; and a son
None better in my kingdom.—Get you gone.
And do as I have bid you.—[Exit Cranmer.] He has strangely
His language in his tears.

Enter an old Lady.

Gent. [Within.] Come back; What mean you?
Lady. I'll not come back; the tidings that I bring
Will make my boldness manners.—Now, good angels,
Fly o'er thy royal head, and shade thy person
Under their blessed wings!
K. Hen. Now, by thy looks
I guess thy message Is the queen deliver'd?
Say, ay; and of a boy.
Lady. Ay, ay, my liege;
And of a lovely boy: The god of heaven
Both now and ever bless her—'tis a girl,
Promises boys hereafter. Sir, your queen
Desires your visitation, and to be Acquainted with this stranger; 'tis as like you,
As cherry is to cherry.
K. Hen. Lovell.—

Enter Lovell.
Lov. Sir,
K. Hen. Give her an hundred marks. I'll to the queen. [Exit King.
Lady. An hundred marks! By this light, I'll have more.
An ordinary girdle is for such payment.
I will have more, or scold it on of him.
Said I for this, the girl is like to him?
I will have more, or else mnsay't; and now
While it is hot, I'll put it to the issue. [Exeunt.}

SCENE II.—Lobby before the Council-Chamber.

Enter Cranmer; Servanis, Door-keeper, &c. attending.
Cran. I hope I am not too late; and yet the gentleman,
That was sent to me from the council, pray'd me to make great haste. All fast? what means this?—Hoa!
Who waits there?—Sure, you know me?
D. Keep.
But yet I cannot help you.
Cran. Why?
KING HENRY VIII.

Act 5

Gar. Which reformation must be sudden too, My noble lords: for those that tame wild horses, \n   Face them not in their hands to make them gentle; \n   But stop their mouths with stubborn bits, and spur \n   them, \n   Till they obey the manage. If we suffer \n   (Out of our easiness, and childish pity \n   To one man’s honour) this contagious sickness, \n   Farewell, all physic; And what follows then? \n   Commotions, uprises, with a general taint \n   Of the whole state: as, of late days, our neighbours, \n   The upper Germany, can dearly witness, \n   Yet freshly pitted in our memories. \n
Cran. My good lords, hitherto, in all the progress \n   Both of life and justice, I have laboured, \n   And with no little study, that my teaching, \n   And the strong course of my authority, \n   Might go one way, and safely; and the end \n   Was ever to do well; nor is there living \n   (I speak it with a single heart, my lords,) \n   A man that more detests, more strives against, \n   Both in his private conscience, and his place, \n   Defacers of a publick peace, than I do. \n   ‘Pray heaven, the king may never find a heart \n   With less allegiance in it.’ Ahen, that make \n   Envy, and created malice, nourish, and \n   Dare bite the best. I do beseech your lordships, \n   That, in this case of justice, my accusers, \n   Be what they will, may stand forth face to face, \n   And freely urge against me. \n
Suf. Nay, my lord, \n   That cannot be; you are a counsellor, \n   And, by that virtue, no man dare accuse you. \n
Gar. My lord, because we have business of more \n   weight, \n   We shall be short with you. ‘Tis his highness’ pleasure, \n   And our consent, for better trial of you, \n   From hence you he committed to the Tower, \n   Where, being but a private man again, \n   You shall know many dare accuse you boldly, \n   More than, I fear, you are provided for. \n   [You, \n   Cran. Ah, my good lord of Winchester, I thank \n   You are always my good friend; if your will pass, \n   I shall both find your lordship judge and jury, \n   You are so merciful; I see your end. \n   ‘Tis my undoing: Love and meekness, lord, \n   Become a churchman better than ambition; \n   Win straying souls with modesty again, \n   Cast none away. That I shall clear myself, \n   Lay all the weight I can upon my patience, \n   I make as little doubt, as you do conscience; \n   In doing daily wrongs I could say more, \n   But reverence to your calling makes me modest. \n
Gar. My lord, my lord, you are a sectary, \n   That’s the plain truth; your painted gloss \n   Discovers, \n   To men that understand you, words and weakness. \n
Crom. My lord of Winchester, you are a little, \n   By your good favour, too sharp; men so noble, \n   However faulty, yet should find respect \n   For what they have been: ‘tis a cruelty, \n   To load a fallen man. \n
Gar. Good master secretary, \n   I urge your honour mercy; you may, worst \n   Of all this table, say so. \n
Crom. Why, my lord? \n
Gar. Do not I know you for a favourer \n   Of this new sect? ye are not sound. \n
Crom. Not sound, I say. \n
Gar. Would you were half so honest! \n
Crom. Men’s prayers then would seek you, not their fears. \n
Gar. I shall remember this bold language. \n
Crom. Remember your bold life too. \n
Chan. This is too much; \n
Forbear, for shame, my lords. \n
Gar. I have done. \n
Crom. And I. \n
Chan. Then thus for you, my lord,—It stands agreed,

I take it by all voices, that forthwith \n   You be conveyed to the Tower a prisoner; \n   There to remain, till the king’s further pleasure \n   Be known unto us: Are you all agreed, lords? \n
All. We are. \n
Cran. Is there no other way of mercy, \n   But I must needs to the Tower, my lords? \n
Gar. What other \n   Would you expect? You are strangely troublesome: \n   Let some o’the guard be ready there. \n
Enter Guard. \n
Cran. For me? \n
Must I go like a traitor thither? \n
Gar. Receive him, \n
And see him safe’t the Tower. \n
Cran. \n
Stay, good my lords; \n   I have a little yet to say. Look there, my lords; \n   By virtue of that ring, I take my cause \n   Out of the grips of cruel men, and give it \n   To a most noble judge, the king my master. \n
Chan. This is the king’s ring. \n
Sur. ‘Tis no counterfeiter. \n
Suf. ‘Tis the right ring, by heaven! I told ye all, \n   When we first met at this dangerous stone a rolling, \n   ‘T would fall upon ourselves. \n
Nor. Do you think, my lords, \n   The king will suffer but the little finger \n   Of this man to be vex’d? \n
Chan. ‘Tis now too certain: \n   How much more is his life in value with him? \n   ‘Would I were fairly out on’. \n
Crom. My mind gave me, \n   In seeking tales, and informations. \n   Against this man, (whom heaven by the devil \n   And his disciples only envy at,) \n   Ye blew the fire that burns ye: Now have at ye. \n
Enter King, frowning on them; takes his seat. \n
Gar. Dread sovereign, how much are we bound to heaven \n   In daily thanks, that gave us such a prince; \n   Not only good and wise, but most religious: \n   One, that, in all obedience, makes the church \n   The chief aim of his honour; and, to strengthen \n   That holy duty, out of dear respect, \n   His royal self in judgment comes to hear, \n   The cause betwixt her and this great offender. \n
K. Hen. You were ever good at sudden commotions. \n
Bishop of Winchester. But know, I come not \n   To hear such flattery now, and in my presence; \n   They are too thin and base to hide offences. \n   To me you cannot reach; you play the spaniel, \n   And think with wagging of your tongue to win me; \n   But whatsoever thou takest at me for, I am sure, \n   Thou hast a cruel nature, and a bloody— \n
Good man, [to Cranmer,] sit down. Now let me see \n   the proudest \n   He, that dares most, but wag his finger at thee: \n   By all that’s holy, he had better starve, \n   Than but once think his place becomes thee not. \n
Sur. May it please your grace,— \n
K. Hen. No, sir, it does not please me. \n
I had thought, I had had men of some understanding, \n   And wisdom, of my council: but I find none. \n   Was it discretion, lords, to let this man, \n   This good man, (few of you deserve that title,) \n   This honest man, wait like a lousy footboy \n   At chamber door? and one as great as you are? \n   Why, what a shame was this? Did my commission \n   Bid ye so far forget yourselves? I gave ye \n   Power as he was a counsellor to try him, \n   Not as a groom; There’s some of it, I see, \n   More out of malice than integrity, \n   Would try him to the utmost, had ye mean; \n   Which ye shall never have, while I live. \n
Chan. Thus far, \n   My most dread sovereign, may it like your grace \n   To let my tongue excuse all. What was purposed \n   Concerning his imprisonment, was rather (If there be faith in men,) meant for his trial,
And fair purgation to the world, than malice;
I am sure, in me.
K. Hen. Well, well, my lords, respect him;
Take him, and use him well, he's worthy of it.
I will say thus much for him, If a prince
May be behelden to a subject, I
Am, for his love and service. so to him.
Make me no more ado, but all embrace him;
Be friends, for shame, my lords.—My Lord of Canterbury,
I have a snit which you must not deny me;
That is, a fair young maid that yet wants baptism,
You must be godfather, and answer for her.
Cran. The greatest monarch now alive may glory
In such an honour; How may I deserve it,
That am a poor and humble subject to you?
K. Hen. Come, come, my lord, you'd spare your
Two noble partners with you; the old duchess
Norfolk,
And lady marquiss Dorset: Will these please you?
Ome more, my lord of Winchester, I charge you,
Embrace, and love this man.
Gar. With a true heart,
And brother-love, I do it.
Cran.
Witness, how dear I hold this confirmation.
K. Hen. Good man, those joyful tears show thy true heart.
The common voice, I see, is verified
Of thee, which says thus, Do my lord of Canterbury a slender turn, and he is your friend for ever.
—Come, lords, we trie time away. I long
To have this young one made a Christian.
As I have made ye one, lords, one remain;
So I grow stronger, you more honour gain.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Palace Yard.

Noise and tumult within. Enter Porter and his Man.

Port. You'll leave your noise anon, ye rascals:
Do take the court for Paris-garden? ye rude slaves, leave your gaping.
[Within.] Do good master porter, I belong to the arder.
Port. Belong to the gallows, and be hanged, you rogue: Is this a place to roar in? — Fetch me a dozen crab-tree staves, and strong ones; these are but switches to them. — I'll scratch your heads:
You must be seeing christenings? Do you look for ale and cakes here, you rude rascals?
Man. Pray, sir, be patient; 'tis as much impossible (Until we sweep them from the door with cannons: you shall have
To scatter them, as 'tis to make them sleep
On May-day morning; which will never be:
We may as well push against Paul's, as stir them.
Port. How got they in, and be hang'd.
Man. Alas, I know not; How gets the tide in?
As much as one sound edgul of four foot
(You see the poor remainder) could distribnte,
I made no more, sir.
Port. You did nothing, sir.
Man. I am not Samson, nor sir Guy, nor Col-brand, to mow them down before me: but, if I spared any, that had a head to hit, either young or old, be it a cuckold or cuckold-maker, let me ever hope to see a chime again; and that I would not for a cow, God save her.
[Within.] Do you hear, master porter?
Port. I shall be with you presently; good master porter. Keep the door close, sirrah.
Man. What would you have medo?
Port. What should you do, but knock them down by the dozens? Is this Moorfields door in? or have we some strange Indian with the great tool come to court, the women so besiege us?
Pless me, what a fry of formation is at door! On my christian conscience, this one christening will egget a thousand: here will be father, godfather, and all together.
Man. The spoons will be the bigger, sir. There is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a brazier by his face, for, on my conscience, twenty of the god-days now reign in his nose; all that stand about him are under the line, they need no other penance: That fire-drake did I hit three times on the head, and three times was his nose discharged against me; he stands there, I know, a mortar-piece, to rain. There was a haberdasher's wife of such will near him, that railed upon me till her pink'd porrying fell off her head, for kindling such a combustion in the state. I miss'd the meteor one after, and hit that woman, who cried out, club!
when I might have driven from far some forty truncheonees draw to her succour, which were the hope of the Strand, where she was quartered. They fell on;
I made good my place; at length they came to the broomstaff with me, I defied them still; when suddenly a file of boys behind them, loose shot, de-ivered such a shower of pebbles, that I was fain to draw mine honour in, and let them win the work:
The devil was amongst them, I think, surely.
Port. These are the youths that thunder at a play-house, and fight for bitten apples; that no miscarriage, but the tribulation of Tower-hill, or the lumbs of Limehouse, their dear brothers, are able to endure. I have some of them in Limbo Patrum, and there they are like to dance these three days
besides the running banquet of two beaddles, that is to come.
Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Mercy o'me, what a multitude are here!
They grow still too, from all parts they are coming,
As if we kept a fair here! Where are these porters,
These lazy knaves?—Ye have made a fine hand,
fellows.
There's a trim rabble let in: Are all these
Your faithful friends 'o the suburbs? We shall have Great store of room, no doubt, left for the ladies,
When they pass back from the christening.
Port. An't please your honour
We are but souls; and what so many may do,
Not being torn a pieces, we have done:
An army cannot rule them.
Cham.
As I live,
If the king blame me for't, I'll lay ye all
By the heels, and suddenly; and on your heads
Clip round, times, for neglect: You are lazy knaves;
And here ye lie baiting of bumbards, when
Ye should do service. Hark, the trumpets sound;
They are come already from the christening;
Go, break among the press, and find a way out
To let the troop pass fairly; or I'll find
A Marshalsea, shall hold you play these two months.
Port. Make way there for the princess.
Man. You great fellow, stand close up, or I'll make your head ache.
Port. You 'tis the camblet, get up o'the rail; I'll pick you o'er the pales else.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Palace.

Enter trumpets, sounding: then Two Aldermen,
Lord Mayor, Garter, Cranmer, Duke of Norfolk, & his marshall's staff, Duke of Suffolk,
Two Noblemen bearing great standing-bowls for the christening gifts; then Four Noblemen bearing a canopy, under which the Duchess of Norfolk, godmother bearing the child richly habited in damask & lace. Train borne by a Lady: then follows the Marchioness of Dorset, the other godmother, and Ladies. The troop pass once about the stage, and Garter speaks.

Gart. Heaven, from the endless goodness, send prosperous life, long, and ever happy, to the high and mighty princess of England, Elizabeth!

Flourish. Enter King and Train.

Cran. [Kneeling.] And to your royal grace, and the good queen,
My noble partners, and myself, thus pray:—
All comfort, joy, in this most gracious lady,
Heaven ever laid up to make parents happy,
May hourly fall upon ye!

K. Hen. Thank you, good lord archbishop, What is her name?

Cran. Elizabeth.

K. Hen. Stand up, lord.—
[The King kisses the child.]

With this kiss take my blessing: God protect thee In whose hands I give thy life.

Amen.

K. Hen. My noble gossips, ye have been too prodigal: I thank ye heartily; so shall this lady, When she has so much English.

Cran. Let me speak, sir, For heaven now bids me; and the words I utter Let none think flattery, for they'll find them truth. This royal infant, [heaven still move about her!] Though in her cradle, yet now promises Upon this land a thousand thousand blessings, Which time shall bring to ripeness: She shall be (But few now living can behold that goodness,) A pattern to all princes living with her, And all that shall succeed: Sheba was never More cove'rous of wisdom, and fair virtue, Than this pure soul shall be: all princely graces, That mould up such a mighty piece as this is, With all the virtues that attend the good Shall still be doubled on her: truth shall nurse her,
Holy and heavenly thoughts still counsel her: She shall be lov'd, and fear'd: Her own shall bless her:

Her foes shake like a field of beaten corn, And hang their heads with sorrow: Good grows with her:
In her days every man shall eat in safety Under his own vine, what he plants; and sing The merry songs of peace to all his neighbours: God shall be truly known; and those about her From her shall read the perfect ways of honour, And by those claim their greatness, not by blood. [Nor shall this peace sleep with her: But as when The bird of wonder dies, the maiden phoenix, Her ashes new create another heir, As great in admiration as herself; So shall she leave her blessedness to one,

(When heaven shall call her from this cloud of darkness,)

Who, from the sacred ashes of her honour,
Shall star-like rise, as great in fame as she was, And so stand fix'd: Peace, plenty, love, truth, terror,
That were the servants to this chosen infant,
Shall then be his, and like a vine grow to him; Wherever the bright sun of heaven shall shine, His honour, and the greatness of his name Shall be, and make new nations: He shall flourish, And, like a mountain cedar, reach his branches To all the plains about him:—Our children's children Shall see this, and bless heaven.

K. Hen. Thou speakest wonders.

Cran. She shall be, to the happiness of England, An aged princess; many days shall see her, And yet no day without a deed to crown it, 'Would I had known no more! but she must die, She must, the saints must have her; yet a virgin, A most unsotted lily shall she pass To the ground, and all the world shall mourn her.

K. Hen. O lord archbishop, Thou hast made me now a man; never, before
This happy child, did I get any thing: This oracle of comfort has so pleas'd me, That, when I am in heaven, I shall desire To see what this child does, and praise my Maker. I thank ye all,—To you, my good lord mayor, And your good brethren, I am much beholden; I have receive'd much honour by your presence, And ye shall find me thankful. Lead the way, lords; Ye must all see the queen, and she must thank ye, She will be sick else. This day, no man think He has business at his house; for all shall stay, This little one shall make it holiday. [Exeunt.

EPilogue.

'Tis ten to one, this play can never please All that are here: Some come to take their ease, And sleep an act or two; but those, we fear, We have frighted with our trumpets; so, 'tis clear, They'll say, 'tis naught: others, to hear the city Abus'd extremely, and to cry,—that's witty! Which we have not done neither: that, I fear, All the expected good we are like to hear For this play at this time, is only in The merciful construction of good women; For such a one we show'd them; if they smile, And say, 'twill do, I know, within a while All the best men are ours; for 'tis ill hap, If they hold, when their ladies bid them clap
PROLOGUE.

In Troy, there lies the scene. From isles of Greece

Enter Troilus armed, and Pandarus.

Tro. Call here my varlet, I'll unarm again:
Why should I war without the walls of Troy,
That find such cruel battle here within?
Each Trojan, that is master of his heart,
Let him to field; Troilus, alas! hath none.

Pan. Will this gear ne'er be mended?
Tro. The Greeks are strong, and skilful to their strength.
Fierce to their skill, and to their fierceness valiant;
But I am weaker than a woman's tear,
Tamer than sleep, fonder than ignorance;
Less valiant than the virgin in the night,
And skill-less as unpractis'd infancy.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

Cressida, daughter to Calchas.

Trojan and Greek Soldiers, and Attendants.

SCENE.—Troy, and the Grecian Camp before it.

Pan. Well, I have told you enough of this: for my part, I'll meddle nor make no further. He, that will have a cake out of the wheat, must tarry the grinding.

Tro. Have I not tarried?
Pan. Ay, the grinding; but you must tarry the bolting.

Tro. Have I not tarried?
Pan. Ay, the bolting: but you must tarry the leavening.

Tro. Still have I tarried.
Pan. Ay, to the leavening: but here's yet in the word—hereafter, the kneading, the making of the cake, the heating of the oven, and the baking: nay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance to burn your lips.

Tro. Patience herself, what goddess e'er she be,
Doth lesser blemish at suffrance than I do.
At Triam's royal table do I sit,
And when fair Cressid comes into my thoughts,—
So, traitor! when she comes!—When is she thence?

Pan. Well, she looked yesternight fairer than ever I saw her look, or any woman else.

Tro. I was about to tell thee,—When my heart,
As wedged with a sigh, would rise in twain;
Lest Hector or my father should perceive me,
I have (as when the sun doth light a storm,
Bur'd this sigh in wrinkle of a smile):
But sorrow, that is conch'd in seeming gladness,
Is like that mirth fate turns to sudden sadness.

Pan. An her hair were not somewhat darker
Than Helen's, (well, go to,) there were no more comparison between the women.—But, for my part, she is my kinswoman; I would not, as they term it, praise her—but I would somebody had heard her talk yesterday, as I did. I will not dispraise your sister Cassandra's wit; but—

Tro. O, Pandarus! I tell thee, Pandarus,—
When I do tell thee, There my hopes lie drown'd,
Reply not in how many fathoms deep
They lie indrench'd. I tell thee, I am mad
In Cressid's love: Then answer'st, She is fair;
Four'st in the open ulcer of my heart
Her eyes, her hair, her cheek, her gait, her voice;
Handiest in thy discourse, O, that her hand,
In whose comparison all whites are ink,
Writing their own reproach: To whose soft seisure
The cygnet's down is harsh, and spirit of sense
Hard as the palm of ploughman! This thou tell'st me,
As true thou tell'st me, when I say—I love her;
But, saying thus, instead of oil and balm.
Thou lay'st in every gash that love hath given me
The knife that made it.

Pan. I speak no more than truth.

Tro. Thou dost not speak so much.

Pan. 'Faith, I'll not meddle in't. Let her be as she is: if she be fair, 'tis the better for her; an she be not, she has the mends in her own hands.

Tro. Good Pandarus! How now, Pandarus?

Pan. I have had my labour for my travel; ill-thought on of her, and ill-thought on of you: gone between and between, but small thanks for my labor.

Tro. What, art thou angry, Pandarus? what, with me?

Pan. Because she is kin to me, therefore she's not so fair as Helen: an she were not kin to me, she would be as fair on Friday, as Helen is on Sunday. But, what care I? I care not, an she were a black-a-moor; 'tis all one to me.

Tro. Say I, she is not fair?

Pan. I do not care whether you do or no. She's a fool to stay behind her father; let her to the Greeks; and so I'll tell her the next time I see her: for my part, I'll meddle nor make no more in the matter.

Tro. Pandarus,—

Pan. Not I.

Tro. Sweet Pandarus,—

Pan. Pray you, speak no more to me; I will leave all as I found it, and there an end.

[Exit Pandarus. An alarum.]

Tro. Peace, you ungracious clamours! peace, rude sounds!

Fools on both sides! Helen must needs be fair, When with your blood you daily paint her thus. I cannot fight upon this argument; It is too starv'd a subject for my sword. But Pandarus—O gods, how do you plague me! I cannot come to Cressid, but by Pandar; And he's as tetchy to be woo'd to woo, As she is stubborn-chaste against all suit.

Tell me, Apollo, for thy Daphne's love, What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we? Her bed is India; there she lies, a pearl! Between our Ilium, and where she resides, Let it be call'd the wild and wandering flood; Ourselves, the merchant; and this sailing Pandar, Our doubtful hope, our convoy, and our bark.

[Alarum. Enter Eneas.]

Ene. How now, prince Troilus? wherefore not afield?

Tro. Because not there; This woman's answer sorts.

For womanish it is to be from thence. What news, Eneas, from the field to-day?

Ene. That Paris is returned home, and hurt.

Tro. By whom, Eneas?

Ene. Troilus, by Menelaus.

Tro. Let Paris blest: 'tis but a scar to scorn; Paris is gird' with Menelaus' horn. [Alarum]

Ene. Hark! what good sport is out of town to-day?

Tro. Better at home, if would I might, were may—

But, to the sport abroad:—Are you bound thither? Eneas. In all swift haste.

Tro. Come, go we then together. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same. A Street.

Cres. Who were those that went by?

Alex. Queen Hecula, and Helen.

Cres. And whither go they?

Alex. Up to the eastern tower, Whose height commands as subject all the vale, To see the battle. Hector, whose patience Is, as a virtue, fix'd, to-day was mov'd: He chid Andromache, and struck his armourer, And, like as there were husbandry in war, Before the sun rose, he was harness'd light, And to the field goes he; where every flower, Did, as a prophet, weep what it foresaw.

In Hector's wrath.

Cres. What was his cause of anger?

Alex. The noise goes, this: There is among the Greeks A lord of Trojan blood, nephew to Hector; They call him Ajax.

Cres. Good; And what of him?

Alex. They say he is a very man per se, And stands alone.

Cres. So do all men; unless they are drunk, sick, or have no legs.

Alex. This man, lady, hath robbed many beasts of their particular additions; he is as valiant as the lion, churlish as the bear, slow as the elephant: a man into whom nature hath so crowded humours, that his valour is crushed into folly, his folly sauced with discretion; there is no man hath a virtue that he hath not a glimpse of; nor any man an attained, but he carries some stain of it: he is melancholy without cause, and merry against the hair: He hath the joints of every thing; but every thing so out of joint, that he is a gouty Briareus, many hands and no use; or purblind Argus, all eyes and no sight.

Cres. But how should this man, that makes me smile, make Hector angry?

Alex. They say, he yesterday coped Hector in the battle, and struck him down; the disdain and shame whereof hath ever since kept Hector fasting and waking.

[Enter Pandarus.]

Cres. Who comes here?

Alex. Madam, your uncle Pandarus.

Cres. Hector's a gallant man.

Alex. As may be in the world, lady.

Pan. What's that? what's that?

Cres. Good morrow, uncle Pandarus.

Pan. Good morrow, cousin Cressid: What do you talk of?—Good morrow, Alexander.—How do you, cousin? When were you at Ilium?

Cres. This morning, uncle.

Pan. What were you talking of, when I came? Was Hector armed, and gone, ere ye came to Ilium? Helen was not up, was she?

Cres. Hector was gone; but Helen was not up.

Pan. E'en so; Hector was stirring early.

Cres. That were we talking of, and of his anger.

Pan. Was he angry?

Cres. So he says here.

Pan. True, he was so; I know the cause too; he'll lay about him to-day, I can tell them that; and there is Troilus will not come far behind him; let them take heed of Troilus; I can tell them that too.

Cres. What, is he angry too?

Pan. Who, Troilus? Troilus is the better man of the two.

Cres. O, Jupiter! there's no comparison.

Pan. What, not between Troilus and Hector?

Do you know a man, if you see him?

Cres. Ay; if I ever saw him before, and knew him.

Pan. Well, I say, Troilus is Troilus.

Cres. Then you say as I say; for, I am sure, he is not Hector.

Pan. No, nor Hector is not Troilus, in some degrees.

Cres. 'Tis just to each of them; he is himself. Pan. Himself? Alas, poor Troilus? I would, he were,—

Cres. So he is.

Pan.——'Condition, I had gone bare-foot to Ilium.

Cres. He is not Hector.

Pan. Himself? no, he's not himself.—'Would 'a were himself! Well, the gods are above; Time must friend, or end: Well, Troilus, well,—I would, my heart were in her body!—No, Hector is not a better man than Troilus.

Pan. Quoth she, Here's but one and fifty hairs on your chin, and one of them is white.

Cres. Quoth she真实的; make no question of that. One and fifty hairs, quoth he, and one white: That white hair is my father, and all the rest are his sons. Jupiter! quoth she, which of these hairs is Paris my husband? The forked one, quoth he, pluck it out, and give it him. But, there was such laughing: and Helen so blushed, and Paris so chafed, and all the rest laughed, that it passed.

Cres. So let it now; for it has been a great while going by.

Pan. Well, cousin, I told you a thing yesterday; think out.

Cres. So I do.

Pan. I'll be sworn, 'tis true; he will weep you, an 'twere a man born in April.

Cres. And I'll spring up in his tears, an 'twere a nettle against May.

Pan. Hark, they are coming from the field: Shall we stand up here, and see them, as they pass toward Ilium? good niece, do; sweet niece Cressida.

Cres. At your pleasure.

Pan. Here, here, here's an excellent place; here we may see most bravely: I'll tell you them all by their names, as they pass by; but mark Troilus above the rest.

Æneas passes over the Stage.

Cres. Speak not so loud.

Pan. That's Æneas; Is not that a brave man? he's one of the flowers of Troy, I can tell you; But mark Troilus; you shall see anon.

Cres. Who's that?

Antenor passes over.

Pan. That's Antenor; he has a shrewd wit, I can tell you; and he's a man good enough: he's one o'the soudest judgments in Troy, whosoever, and a proper man of person:—When comes Troilus?—I'll show you Troilus anon; if he see me, you shall see him nod at me.

Cres. Will he give you the nod?

Pan. You shall see.

Cres. If he do, the rich shall have more.

Hector passes over.

Pan. That's Hector, that, that, look you, that; There's a fellow!—Go thy way, Hector!—There's a brave man, niece.—O brave Hector!—Look, how he looks! there's a countenance: Is't not a brave man?

Cres. O, a brave man!

Pan. Is 'a not? It does a man's heart good— Look you what hacs are on his helmet? look you yonder, do you see? look you there! there's no jesting: there's laying on; take't off who will, as they say: there he hacks!

Cres. Be those with swords?

Paris passes over.

Pan. Swords? any thing, he cares not: an the devil come to him, it's all one: By good's lid, it does—Yonder comes Paris, yonder comes Paris: look ye yonder, niece; Is't not a gallant man too, is't not?—Why, this is brave now.— Who said, he same hurt home to-day? he's not hurt: why, this will do Helen's heart good now. Ha! 'twould I could see Troilus now!—you shall see Troilus anon.

Cres. Who's that?

Helenus passes over.

Pan. That's Helenus,—I marvel, where Troilus is.—That's Helenus:—I think he went not forth to-day:—That's Helenus.

Cres. Can Helenus fight, uncle?

Pan. Helenus? no;—yes, he'll fight indifferent well:—I marvel, where Troilus is:—Hark:—
you not hear the people cry, Troilus?—Heleusus is a priest.
Cres. What sneaking fellow comes yonder?
TROILUS passes over.
Cres. Peace, for shame, peace!
Pan. Mark him; note him;—that brave Troilus! look well upon him, niece; look you, how his sword is bloodied, and his helm more hack'd than Hector's; And how he looks, and how he goes!—O admirable youth! he ne'er saw three and twenty. Go thy way, Troilus, go thy way: had I a sister, were a grace, or a daughter a goddess, he should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris?—Paris is dirt to him; and, I warrant, Helen, to change, would give an eye to boot.

Forces pass over the Stage.
Cres. Here come more.
Pan. Asses, fools, doits! chaff and hran, chaff and bran! porridge after meat! I could live and die the eyes of Troilus. Ne'er look, ne'er look; till those larges, churls and daws, crowes and daws! I had rather be such a man as Troilus, than Agamemnon and all Greece.
Cres. There is among the Greeks, Achilles; a better man than Troilus.
Pan. Achilles? a drayman, a porter, a very camel.
Cres. Well, well.
Pan. Well, well?—Why, have you any discretion? have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, dis-course, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and such like, the spice and salt that season a man?
Cres. Ay, a minced man; and then to be baked with no date in the ype,—for then the man's date is out.
Pan. You are such a woman! one knows not at what ward you lie.
Cres. Upon my back, to defend my belly; upon my wit, to defend my wits; upon my secrecy, to defend mine honesty; my mask, to defend my beauty; and you, to defend all these; and at all these wards I lie, at a thousand watches.
Pan. Say one of your watches.
Cres. Anon. What? I'll watch for that; and that's one of the chiefest of them too; if I cannotward what I would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow; unless it dwell past hiding, and then it is past watching.
Pan. You are such another!

Enter Troilus' Boy.
Boy. Sir, my lord would instantly speak with you.
Pan. Why is he there?
Boy. At your own house; there he unnarms him.
Pan. Good boy, tell him I come: [Exit Boy.] I doubt, he be hurt,—Fare ye well, good niece.
Cres. Adieu, uncle.
Pan. I'll be with you, niece, by and by.
Cres. To bring, uncle,—
Pan. Ay, a token from Troilus.
Cres. By the same token—you are a bawd.—

[Exit Pandarus.

Words, vows, griefs, tears, and love's full sacrifice, He offers in another's enterprize; But more in Troilus thousand fold I see Than in the glass of Pandar's praise may be; Yet hold it off. Women are angels, wooing; Things won are done, joy's soul lies in the doing; That she that know'st nought, that knows not this,— Men prize the thing unguird'more than it is; That was never yet, that ever knew Love got so sweet, as when desire did sue; Therefore this maxim out of love I teach,— Achievement is command; unguird'd, beesech Then though my heart's content firm love doth bear, Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appear. [Exit.

Trumpets. Enter Agamemnon, Nestor, Ulysses, Menelaus, and others.

Agam. Princes, What grief hath set the Jaundice on your cheeks?—The ample proposition, that hope makes In all designs begun on earth below, Fails in the promis'd largeness: checks and dis-asters.
Grow in the veins of actions highest rear'd; As knots, by the conflux of meeting sap, Infect the sound pine, and divert his grain Tortive and errant from his course of growth. Nor, princes, is it matter new to us, That we come short of our suppose so far, That, after seven years' siege, yet Troy walls stand; Sith every action that hath gone before, Whereof we have record, trial did draw Bliss or woe, and the day of the fight, not answering the aim, And that unbody'd figure of the thought That gav't surmised shape. Why then, you princes, Do you with cheeks abash'd behold our works: And think them shame's, which are, indeed, nought else But the protractive trials of great Jove, To find persisitive constancy in men? The fineness of which metal is not found In fortune's love; for then the bold and coward, The wise and fool, the artist and unread, The hard and soft, seem all affin'd and kin': But, in the wind and tempest of her frown, Distinction, with a broad and powerful fan, Buffeting at all, winnows the light way: And what hath mass, or matter, by itself Lies, rich in virtue, and unmingled.

Nest. With due observance of thy godlike seat, Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply Thy latest words. In the reproof of chance Lies the true proof of men: the sea being smooth, How many shallow bauble boats dare sail Upon her patient breast, making their way With those of nobler bulk and strength; But let the gale of enrage the gentle Thetis, and, anon, behold The strong-rabb'd bark through liquid mountains cut, Rounding between the two moist elements, Like Perses' horse; where's then the saucy boat, Whose weak untimber'd sides but even now Co-riva'l'd greatness? either to harbour fled, Or made a toast for Neptune. Even so Doth valour's show, and valour's worth, divide, In storms of fortune: For, in her ray and bright-ness, The herd hath more annoyance by the brize, Than by the tiger; but when the splitting wind Makes flexible the knees of knotted oaks, And flies flied, umbrella shade, Why, then, the thing of courage As rous'd with rage, with rage doth sympathize, And, with an accent tun'd in self-same key, Returns to chiding fortune.

Ulyss. Agamemnon,— Thou great commander, nerve and bone of Greece, Heart of our numbers, soul and only spirit, In whom the tempers and the minds of all Should be shut up,—hear what Ulysses speaks. Besides the applause and approbation The which,—most mighty for thy place and sway,— And thou most reverend for thy stretch'd-out life,— [To Nestor. I give to both your speeches,—which were such, As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece
That matter needless, of importless burden,
Divide thy lips; than we are confident,
When rank Thersites opes his mastif's jaws,
Who stretches a wit, sick, wit, rudes, as Ulyss. Troy, yet upon his basis, had been down,
And the great Hector's word had lack'd a master,
But for these instances.
The specialty of rule hath been neglected:
And therefore Grecian teachers do stand
Hollow upon this plain, so many hollow factions.
When that the general is not like the hive,
To whom the foragers shall all repair,
What honey is expected? Degree being vizarded,
The unworthiest shows as fairly in the mask.
The heavens themselves, the planets, and this center,
Observe degree, priority, and place,
Insistence, course, proportion, season, form,
Office, and custom, in all line or form:
And therefore is the glorious planet, Sol,
In noble eminence enthron'd and spier'd
Amidst the other; whose med'cinal eye
Corrects the ill aspects of planets evil,
And posts, like the commandment of a king,
Sane check, to good and bad; But, when the planets,
In evil mixture, to disorder wander,
What plagues, and what ports? what mutiny?
What raging of the sea? shaking of earth?
Common in the winds? frights, changes, horrors,
Divert and crack, rend and deracinate
The unity and married calm of states
Quite from their fixture? O, when degree is shak'd,
Which is the ladder of all high designs,
The enterprise is sick! How could communities,
Degrees in schools, and brotherhoods in cities,
Peaceful commerce from dividable shores,
The primogenitive and due of birth,
Parents, or age, crowns, sceptres, laurels,
But by degree, stand in authentick place?
Take not degree away, untune that string,
And, hark, what discord follows! each thing meets
In mere oppugnation: The bounded waters
Should lift their bosoms high, and the shores,
And make a stop of all this solid globe:
Strength should he lord of imbecility,
And the rude son should strike his father dead:
Force should be right; or, rather, right and wrong.
(Between whose endless jar justice resides,)
Should lose their names, and so should justice too.
Then every thing includes itself in power,
Power into will, will into appetite;
And appetite, an universal wof,
So doubly seconded with will and power,
Must make an universal prey,
And, last, eat up himself. Great Agamemnon,
This chaos, when degree is suffocate,
Follows the choking.
And this neglect of degree it is,
That our pace goes backward, with a purpose
It hath to climb. The general's disaidn'd
By him one step below; he, by the next;
That next, by him beneath: so every step,
Examined by the first pace that is sick
Of his interior, grows to an expecciber,
Of pale and bloodless emulation:
And 'tis this fever that keeps Troy on foot,
Not her own sinews. To end a tale of length,
Troy in our weakness stands, not in her strength.
Great Agamemnon's tent, I pray?
Ulyss. The great Achilles,—whom opinion crowns
The sinew and the forehead of our host,—
Having his ear full of his airy fame,
Grows dainty of his worth, and in his tent
Lies mocking our designs: With him, Patroclus,
Upon a lazy bed, the leveling day
Breaks scurril jests;
And with ridiculour and awkwart action
(Which, slanderer, he imitation calls,)
He pageants us. Some time, great Agamemnon,
Thy topper despiration he pendment,
And, like a strutting player,—whose conceit
Lies in his hamstring, and doth think it rich
To hear the wooden dialogue and sound
'Twixt his stretch'd footing and the scaffoldage.—
Such the oppugned and o'er-wrested seeming
He acts thy greatness in: and when he speaks,
'Tis like a chime a mending; with terms unsquad,
Which, from the tongue of roaring Typhon dropp'd,
Would seem hyperboles. At this fusty stuff,
The large Achilles, on his press'd bed lolling,
From his deep chest laughs out a loud applause;
Cries—Excellent!—'Tis Agamemnon just.—
Now play me Nester;—hem, and stroke thy bear!
As he, being 'drest to some oration,
That's done:—as near as the extremest ends
Of parallels: as like as Vulcan and his wife:
Yet good Achilles still cries, Excellent;
'Tis Nester right! Now play him me, Patroclus,
Arming to answer in a night alarm.
And then, forsooth, the faint effects of age
Must be the scene of birth; to cough, and spit,
And with a paisy-fumbling on his gorget,
Shake in and out the rivet:—And at this sport,
Sir Valour dies; cries, O!—enough, Patroclus;
Or give me riba of steel! I shall enjoy
The pleasure of my splend.
And in this fashion, all our abilities, gifts, names, shapes,
Sweakers and generals of grace exact,
Achievements, plots, orders, prevention,
Excitements to the field, of speech for truce,
Success, loss, what is, or is not, serves
As stuff for these two to make paradoxes.
Nest.
And in the imitation of these twain
(Whom, as Ulysses says, opinion crowns
With an imperial voice,) many are infect
Imitation, which is grown self-will'd; and know, by measure
Of the observed toll, the enemies' weight.—
Why, this hath not a finger's dignity:
They call this—bed-work, mappers, closet-war;
So that the ram, that hatters down the wall,
For the great swing and rudest of his poise,
They think it before his hand that made the engine;
Or those, that with the fineness of their souls
By reason guide his execution.
Nest. Let this he granted, and Achilles' horse
Makes many Thetis' sons.
(Achilles,--Trumpet sounds.
Achilles,--What trumpet? look, Menelaus.)
Enter Ilneas.
Men. From Troy.
Achilles,--What would on 'fore our tent?
Ilneas.
Achilles,--Is this this
Great Agamemnon's tent, I pray?
Achilles,--Even this.
Men. May one, that is a herald, and a prince,
Do a fair message to his kingly ears!
Act I.  TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.  519

Agam. With surety stronger than Achilles' arm
For all the Greekish force, send one with one voice
Call Agamemnon head and general.

Aene. Fair leave, and large security. How may
A stranger to those most imperial looks
Know them from eyes of other mortals?

Agam. How?

Aene. Ay; I ask, that I might wakken reverence,
And bid the cheek be ready with a blush
Modest as morning when she coldly eyes
The youthful Phoebus;
Which is that god in office, guiding men?
Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon?

Agam. This Trojan scorns us; or the men of Troy
Are ceremonious courtiers.

Aene. Courtiers as free, as delsonair, unarm'd,
As bending angels; that's their fame in peace:
But when they would seem soldiers, they have galls,
Good arms, strong joints, true swords; and Jove's accord,
Nothing so full of heart. But peace, Aeneas,
Peace, Trojan; lay thy finger on thy lips;
The worthiness of praise distains his worth,
If that the prais'd himself bring the praise forth:
But what the repining enemy commends,
That breath fame blows; that praise, sole pure,
Transcends.

Agam. Sir, you of Troy, call you yourself
Aeneas?

Aene. Ay, Greek, that is my name.

Agam. What's your affair, I pray you?

Aene. Sir, passion; tis for Agamemnon's ears.

Agam. He hears nought privately, that comes from Troy.

Agam. Nor I from Troy come not to whisper him:
I bring a trumpet to awake his ear;
To set his sense on the attentive bent,
And then to speak.

Agam. Speak frankly as the wind;
It is not Agamemnon's sleeping hour;
That thou shalt know, Trojan, he is awake,
He tells thee so himself.

Trumpet. Trumpet, blow loud,
Send thy brass voice through all these lazy tents;
And every Greek of mettle, let him know,
What Troy means fairly, shall be spoke aloud.

[Trompet sounds.]

We have, great Agamemnon, here a prisoner.
A prince call'd Hector, (Priam is his father,) Who in this dull and long-continued truce Is rusty grown; he made me take a trumpet, And to this purpose speak. Kings, princes, lords! If there be one, among the fairest of Greece, That holds his honour higher than his ease; That seeks his praise more than he fears his peril; That knows his valour, and knows not his fear; That loves his mistress more than in confession, (With truant vows to her own lips he loves,) And dars avow her beauty and her worth.
In other arms than hers— to him this challenge. Hector, in view of Trojans and of Greeks, Shall make it good, or do his best to do it,
He hath a lady, wiser, fairer, trueer
Than ever Greek did compass in his arms;
And will to-morrow with his trumpet call,
Mid-way between your tents and walls of Troy,
To rouse a Grecian that is true in love:
If any come, Hector shall honour him;
If none, he'll say in Troy, when he retires,
The Grecian dames are sun-burn'd, and not worth
The splinter of a lance. Even so much.

Agam. This shall be told our lovers, lord Aeneas;
If none of them have soul in such a matter,
We left them all at home: But we are soldiers;
And may that soldier a mere recreant prove,
That means not, hath not, or is not in love!
If the one is, or hath, or means to be,
That one meets Hector: if none or I am he.

Tell him of Nestor, one that was a man
When Hector's grandsire suck'd'd: he is old now;
But, if there be not in our Grecian host
One noble man, that hath one spark of fire
To answer for his love, 'Tell him from me,—
I'll hide my silver beard in a gold beaver,
And in my vantbrace put this wither'd brawn;
And meeting him, will tell him, that my lady
Was fairer than his grandame, and as chaste
As may be in the world; his youth in flood,
I'll prove the truth with my three drops of blood.
Aene. Now heavens forbid such scarcity of youth!

Ulyss. Fair lord Aeneas, let me touch your hand;
To our pavilion shall I lead you, sir.
Achilles shall have word of your import;
So shall each lord of Greece, from tent to tent;
Yourself shall feast with us before you go,
And find the welcome of a noble foe.

[Exit all but Ulysses and Nestor.

Ulyss. Nestor, what says Ulysses?

Nest. What says Ulysses?

Ulyss. I have a young conception in my brain,
To be you my time to bring it to some shape.

Nest. What is't?

Ulyss. This 'tis:
Hunt wedges rive hard knots: The seeded pride
That hath to this maturity blown up
In rank Achilles, must or now be crop'd,
Or, shedding, breed a nursery of like evil,
To overbalk us all.

Nest. Well, and how?

Ulyss. This challenge that the gallant Hector sends,
However it is spread in general name,
Relates in purpose only to Achilles.

Nest. The purpose is perspicuous even as substance,
Whose grossness little characters sum up:
And, in the publication, make no strain,
But that Achilles, were his brain as barren
As banks of Libya, though, Apollon knows
'Tis dry enough,— will, with great speed of judgment,
Ay, with celerity, find Hector's purpose
Pointing on him.

Ulyss. And wake him to the answer, think you?

Nest. Yes, it is most meet; Whom may you else oppose,
That can from Hector bring those honours off,
If not Achilles? Though't be a sportful combat,
Yet in the truest mean opinion for thee,
For here the Trojans taste our dearst repute
With their finst palate: And trust to me, Ulysses,
Our imputation shall be oddly pois'd.
In this wild action: for the success,
Although particular, shall give a scantling
Of good or bad unto the general;
And in such indexes, although small pricks
To their subsequent volumes, there is seen
The baby figure of the giant mass
Of things to come at large. It is suppos'd,
He, that meets Hector, issues from our choice:
And choice, being mutual act of all our souls,
Makes merit her election; and doth boil,
As 'twere from forth us all, a man distill'd
Out of our virtues: Who miscarrying,
What heart receiv'd from hence he conquering part,
To steel a strong opinion to themselves?
Which entertain'd, limbs are his instruments,
In no less working, than are swords and bows
Directive by the limbs.

Ulyss. Give pardon to my speech:—
Therefore 'tis meet, Achilles meet not Hector.
Let us, like merchants, show our foulest wares,
And think, perchance, they'll sell; if not,
The lustre of the better shall exceed,
By showing the worse first. Do not consent,
That ever Hector and Achilles meet;
For both our honour and our shame, in this,
Are dogg'd with two strange followers.

Nest. I see them not with my old eyes; what are they?

Ulyss. What glory our Achilles shares from Hecctor,

Were he not proud, we all should share with him:
But he already is too insolent;
And we were better parch in Africk sun,
Than in the pride and salt scorn of his eyes,
Should he scape Hector fair: If he were fool’d,
Why, then, did our main opinion crush
In taint of our best man. No, make a lottery;
And, by device, let blockish Ajax draw
The sort to fight with Hector: Among ourselves, give him allowance for the better man,
For that will physic the great Myrmidon,
Who broils in loud applause; and make him fall
His crest, that prouder than blue Iris bends.
If the dull brainless Ajax come safe off,
We’ll dress him up in voices: If he fail,
Yet go we under our opinion still
That we have better men. But, hit or miss,
Our project’s life this shape of sense assumes,—
Ajax, employ’d, plucks down Achilles’ plumes.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Another part of the Camp.
Enter Ajax and Thersites.

Ajax. Thersites,——
Ther. Agamemnon:—how if he had bolls? full, all over, generally?

Ajax. Thersites,——
Ther. And those bolls did run?—Say so, did not the general run then? were not that a botchy core?

Ajax. Dog.
Ther. Then would come some matter from him: I see none now.

Ajax. Thou bitch-wolf’s son, canst thou not hear? Feel then. [Strikes him.

Ther. The plague of Greece upon thee, thou monstrosity, beast-witted lord!

Ajax. Speak then, thou unsalted leaven, speak: I will beat thee into handsomeness.

Ther. I shall sooner rail thee into wit and holiness: but, I think, thy horse will sooner con an oration, than thou learn a prayer without book. Thou canst strike, canst thou? a red murrain o’thy jade’s tricks!

Ajax. Toads-stool, learn me the proclamation.

Ther. Dost thou think, I have no sense, thou strikst me thus?

Ajax. The proclamation,—
Ther. Thou art proclaimed a fool, I think.

Ajax. Do not, porcupine, do not; my fingers itch.

Ther. I would, thou didst itch from head to foot, and I had the scratching of thee; I would make thee the loathsomest scab in Greece. When thou art forth in the incursions, thou strikst as slow as another.

Ajax. I say, the proclamation,—
Ther. Thou shouldst strike him.

Ajax. Cobloof!
Ther. He would run thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a biscuit.

Ajax. You whomeron cur!

Ther. Do, d’you?

Ajax. Thou stoo! for a witch!

Ther. Ay, do, do; thou sodden-witted lord! thou hast no more brain than I have in mine elbows; an assinego may tutor thee: Thou scurry valiant ass! thou art here put to thrust Trojans; and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit, like a Barbarian slave. If thou use to beat me, I will begin at thy heel, and tell what thou art by; thou hast thing of no bowls, thou!

Ajax. You dog!

Ther. Thou, scurril lord!

Ajax. You cur!

Ther. Mars his idiot! do, rudeness; do, camel; do, do.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus.

Achil. Why, how now, Ajax? wherefore do you thus?

Ther. Nay, look upon him.

Achil. No; what’s the matter?

Ther. Nay, but regard him well.

Achil. Well, why I do so.

Ther. But yet you look not well upon him: for, whosoever you take him to be, he is Ajax.

Achil. I know that, fool.

Ther. Ay, but that fool knows not himself.

Achil. Therefore I beat thee.

Ther. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what modicum of wit he utters! his evasions have ears thus long. I have bobbed his brain, more than he has beat my bones: I will buy nine sparrers for a penny, and his pia matter is with the ninth part of a sparrow.

This lord, Achilles, Ajax,—who wears his wit in his belly, and his guts in his head,—I’ll tell you what I say of him.

Achil. What?

Ther. I say, this Ajax.

Achil. Nay, good Ajax.

[ Ajax offers to strike him, Achilles interposes.

Ther. Has not so much wit——

Achil. Nay, I must hold you.

Ther. As will stop the eye of Helen’s needle, for whom he comes to fight.

Achil. Peace, fool!

I would have peace and quietness, but the fool will not: he there; that he; look you there.

Ajax. O thou damned cur! I shall——

Achil. Will you set thy wit to a fool’s?

Ther. No, I warrant you; for a fool’s will shame it.

Patr. Good words, Thersites.

Achil. What’s the quarrel?

Patr. The vile owl, go learn me the tenour of the proclamation, and he rolls upon me.

Ther. I serve thee not.

Ajax. Well, go to, go to.

Ther. I serve here voluntary.

Achil. Your last service was sufferrance, ’twas not voluntary; no man is beaten voluntary; Ajax was here the voluntary, and you as under an impress.

Ther. Even so?—a great deal of your wit too lies in your sinews, or else there be liars. Hector shall have a great catch, he knock out either of your brains: ’a were as good crack a dusty nut with no kernel.

Achil. What, with me too, Thersites?

Ther. There’s Ulysses and old Nestor,—whose wit was grumbliest and railest every hour on Achilles; and thou art as full of envy at his greatness, as Cerberus is at Proserpina’s beauty, ay, that thou barkest at him.

Achil. Mistress Thersites!

Ther. Thou shouldst strike him.

Achil. Cobloof!

Ther. He would run thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a biscuit.

Achil. You whomeron cur!

Ther. Do, do.

Achil. Thou stoo! for a witch!

Ther. Ay, do, do; thou sodden-witted lord! thou hast no more brain than I have in mine come any more to your tents; I will keep where there is wit stirring, and leave the faction of fools.

[Exit.

Art. A good riddance.

Art. Narry, this, sir, is proclaimed through all our host:
That Hector, by the first hour of the sun,
Will, with a trumpet, twixt our tents and Troy,
Though never was making call some knight to arms,
That hath a stomach; and such a one, that dare
Maintain—I know not what; 'tis trash; Farewell.

Ajax. Farewell. Who shall answer him?

Art. I know not, it is put to lottery; otherwise,
He knew his man.

Ajax. O, meaning you—I'll go learn more of it.

SCENE II.—Troy. A Room in Priam’s Palace.

Enter Priam, Hector, Troilus, Paris, and Helenus.

Pri. After so many hours, lives, speeches spent,
Thus once again says Nestor from the Greeks;
Deliver Helen, and all damage else—
As honour, love, time, space, honours,
Wounds, friends, and what else dear that is consum’d
In hot digestion of this cormorant war—
Shall be struck off:—Hector, what say you to’t?

Hect. Though no man lesser fears the Greeks than I.

As far as toucheth my particular, yet,
Dread Priam,
There is no lady of more softer howsels,
More spungy to suck in the sense of fear,
More ready to cry out—Who knows what follows?
Than Hector is: the wound of peace is surety,
Surety secure; but modest doubt is call’d
The beacon of the wise, the tent that searches
To the bottom of the worst. Let Helen go:
Since the first sword was drawn about this question,
Every tithe soul, mongst many thousand dismes,
Hath been as dear as Helen; I mean of ours:
If we have lost so many tenths of ours:
To guard a thing not ours; not worth to us,
Had it our name, the value of one ten;
What merit’s in that reason, which denies
The yielding of her up?

Tro. Fye, fye, my brother!

Weigh you the worth and honour of a king,
So great as our dread father, in a minute:
Of common ounces? will you with counters sum
The past-proportion of his infinite?
And buckle in a waist most fathomless,
With spans and latches so diminutive
As fears and reasons? fye, for godly shame!

Hel. No marvel, though you bite so sharp at reasons,
You are so empty of them. Should not our father
Do the great way of his affairs with reasons,
Because your speech hath none, that tells him so?

Tro. You are for dreams and slumber, brother priest,
You fur your groves with reason. Here are your reasons:
You know, an enemy intends you harm;
You know, a sword employ’d is perilous,
And reason flies the object of all harm:
Who marvels then, when Helenus beholds
A Grecian and his sword, if he do set
The writings of reason to his heart;
And fly like chidden Mercury from Jove,
Or like a star dis-orb’d?—Nay, if we talk of reason,
Let’s shut our gates, and sleep: Manhood and homour
Should have bare hearts, would they but fat their thoughts
With this cram’d reason; reason and respect
Make lives pale, and lustladden defect.

Hect. Brother, she is not worth what she doth more cost

The holding.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

Act 2.

Tro. What is aught, but as 'tis valued?
Hect. But value dwells not in particular will
It holds his estimate and dignity
As well wherein 'tis precious of itself
As in the lighter, 'tis mad idolary.
To make the service greater than the god;
And the will dotes, that is attributive
To what infectiously itself affects,
Without some image of the affected merit.

Tro. I take to-day a better selection
Is led on in the conduct of my will:
My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,
Two traded pilots twixt the dangerous shores
Of will and judgment: How may I avoid,
Although my will will distaste what it elected,
The wife I chose? there can be no evasion
To blench from this, and to stand firm by honour:
We turn not back the silks upon the merchant,
When we have soil’d them: nor the remainder

We do not throw in unrespective sieve,
Because we now are full. It was thought meet,
Paris should do some vengeance on the Greeks:
Your breath with full consent bellied his sails;
Though seas and winds (old wranglers) took a truce,
And did him service: he touch’d the ports desir’d; and,
For an old aunt, whom the Greeks held captive,
He brought a Grecian queen, whose youth and freshness

Wrinkles Apollo’s, and makes pale the morning.
Why keep we her? the Grecians keep our aunt:
Is she worth keeping? why, she is a pearl,
Whose price hath lead’d above a thousand ships,
And turn’d crown’d kings to merchants,
If you’ll avouch, 'twas wisdom Paris went,
(As you must needs, for you all cry’d—Go, go)
If you’ll confess, he brought home noble prize,
(As you must needs, for you all clapp’d your hands,
And cry’d—Inestimable!) why do you now
The issue of your proper wisdoms rate;
And do a deed that fortune never did,
Beggar the estimation which you priz’d
Richer than sea and land? O theft most base;
That we have stolen what we do fear to keep!
But, thieves, unworthy of a thing so stolen,
That in their country did them that disgrace,
We fear to warrant in our native place!

Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans, cry!

Pri. What noise? what shrill is this?

Tro. 'Tis our good sister, I do know her voice.

Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans!

Hect. It is Cassandra.

Eater Cassandra, raging.

Cas. Cry, Trojans, cry! lend me ten thousand
eyes,
And I will fill them with prophetick tears.

Hect. Peace, sister, peace.

Cas. Virginis and boys, mid-age and wrinkled elders,
Soft infancy, that nothing canst but cry,
Add to my clamours! let us pay betimes
A moiety of that mass of moan to come.
Cry, Trojans, cry! practise your eyes with tears!
Troy must not be, nor goodly Ilion stand;
Our fire-brand and brother, Paris, burns us all.
Cry, Trojans, cry! I, Helen, and a woe:
Cry, cry! Troy burns, or else let Helen go. [Exit.

Hect. Now, youthful Troilus, do not these high strains
Of divination in our sister work
Some touches of remorse? or is your blood
So madly hot, that no discourse of reason,
Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause,
Can qualify the same?

Tro. Why, brother Hector,
We may not think the justness of each act
Such and no other than event doth form it;
Nor once reject the courage of our minds,
Because Cassandra’s mad; her brain-sick raptures
Cannot distaste the goodness of a quarrel,
Which hath our several honours all engag'd
To make it gracious: For my private part,
I am no mender: but all Priam's sons:
And Jove forbid, there should be done amongst us
Such things as might offend the weakest spleen
To fight for and maintain!
Par. Else might the world convince of levity
At our undertakings as your counsels:
But I attest the gods, your full consent
Gave wings to my propension, and cut off
All fears attending on so dire a project.
For what, alas, can these my silyge arms?
What proof of cunning or design is in one man's colour,
To stand the push and enmity of those
This quarrel would excite? Yet, I protest,
Were I alone to pass the difficulties,
And had as ample power as I have will,
Paris should ne'er retract what he hath done,
Nor faint in the pursuit.
Pri. Paris, you speak
Like one besotted on your sweet delights:
You have the honey still, but these the gall;
So to be valiant is no praise at all.
Par. Sir, I propose not merely to myself
The pleasures such a beauty brings with it;
But I would have the soil of her fair rape
Wip'd off, in honourable keeping her.
What treason was it to the ransack'd queen,
Dishonour that she of no worth, and shame to me,
Now to deliver her possession up,
On terms of base compulsion? Can it be,
That so degenerate a strain as this,
Should once set footing in your generous bosoms?
This sight, this mean spirit of party,
Without a heart to dare, or sword to draw,
When Helen is defended; nor none so noble,
Whose life were ill bestow'd, or death unfam'd,
Where Helen is the subject: then, I say,
Where we fight for her, whom, we know well,
The world's large spaces cannot paralell.
Hect. Paris, and Troilus, you have both said
well;
And on the cause and question now in hand
Have given;—but superficially; not much
Unlike young men, whom Aristotle thought
Unfit to hear moral philosophy:
The reasons, you allege, do more conduce
To the hot passion of distemper'd blood,
Than to make up a free determination
Towards our end; for whiling; for place and revenge,
Have ears more deaf than adders to the voice
Of any true decision. Nature craves,
All due to be render'd to their owners; Now
What nearer debt in all humanity,
Than that is to the husband's band? This law
Of nature be corrupted through affectation;
And that great minds, of partial indulgence
To their benumbed wills, resist the same;
There is a law in each well-order'd nation,
To curb those raging appetites that are
Most disobedient and refractory.
If Helen then be wife to Sparta's king,—
As it is known she is,—these moral laws
Of nature, and of nations, speak aloud
To have Laocoon stroke'd:—I would persist
In doing wrong, extenuates not wrong,
But makes it much more heavy. Hector's opinion
Is this, in way of truth; yet, ne'ertheless,
My spirited brethren, I propound to you
In resolution to keep Helen still;
For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependence
Upon our joint and several dignities.
Tro. Why, there you touch the life of our design:
Were it not glory that we more affected
Than the performance of our heaving spleens,
I would not wish so a drop of Trojan blood
Spent more in her defence. But, worthy Hector,
She is a theme of honour and renown;
A spur to valiant and magnanimous deeds;
Whose present courage may beat down our foes,
And tame, in time to come, canonize us:
For, I presume, brave Hector would not lose
So rich advantage of a promis'd glory,
As smiles upon the forehead of this action,
For the wide world's revenue.
Hect. I am yours,
You valiant offspring of great Priamus.—
I have a roasting challenge sent amongst
The dragon's factious nobility of the Greeks,
Will strike antagonism to their drowsy spirits:
I was advertised, their great general slept,
Whilst emulation in the army crept.
This, I presume, will wake him.
[Exeunt.

Enter Thersites.

Ther. How now, Thersites? what, lost in the labyrinth of thy fury? Shall the elephant Ajax carry it thus? he beats me, and I rail at him: O worthy satisfaction! would it were otherwise; that I could beat him, whilst he railed at me; 'soo't, I'll learn to conjure and raise devils, but I'll see some issue of my spirituful exactions. Then there's Achilles', Paris' engineer. If Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves. O thou great thunder-darter of Olympus, forget that thou art Jove
the king of gods; and Mercury, lose all the serpentine craft of thy great device: if I but take not that little less-than-little wit from them that they have!
which short-nerved ignorance itself knows is so abundant serce, it will not in circumvention de-lever a fly from a spider, without drawing their massy irons, and cutting the web. After this, the vengance on the whole camp! or, rather, the bone-ache! for that, methinks, is the curse dependent on those that war for a placet. I have said my prayers; and devil, enty, say Amen. What ho! my lord Achilles!

Enter Patroclus.

Patr. Who's there? Thersites? good Thersites, come in and rail.

Ther. If I could have remembered a gift coun-terfelt, thou wouldst not have slipped out of my contemplation; but it is no matter; Thyself upon thyself! The common curse of mankind, folly and ignorance, be thine in great revenue! heaven blessest hee from a tutor, and discipline come not near thee! Let thy blood be thy direction till thy death! then if she, that lays thee out, says—thou art a fair corse, I'll be sworn and sworn upon she, never shrouded any but lazars. Amen. Where's Achilles?

Patr. What, what art thou devout? wast thou in prayer?

Ther. Ay; The heavens hear me!

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Who's there?

Patr. Thersites, my lord.

Achil. Where, where?—Art thou come? Why, my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not served thyself in to my table so many meals? Come;
what's Agamemnon?

Ther. Thy commander, Achilles;—Then tell me,
Patroclus, what's Achilles?—Ther. by lord, Thersites;
Then tell me, I pray thee, what's thyself?

Ther. Thy knower, Patroclus; Then tell me,
Patroclus, what art thou?

Patr. Thou mayest tell, that knowest.

Achil. O tell, tell.

Ther. I'll decline the whole question. Agamem-non commands Achilles; Achilles is my lord; I am
Patroclus' knower; and Patroclus is a fool.

Patr., You rascal! Ther. Peace, fool; I have not done.

Achil. He is a privileged man.—Proceed, Ther-sites.
TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

Act 2.

Thers. Agamemnon is a fool; Achilles is a fool; Thersites is a fool; and, as aforesaid, Patroclus is a fool.

Achiv. Derive this; come.

Thers. Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command Achilles; Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon; Thersites is a fool to serve such a fool, and Patroclus is a fool positive.

Patr. Why am I a fool? Ther. Make that demand of the prover. — It suffices me, thou art. Look you, who comes here?

Enter Agamemnon, Ulysses, Nestor, Diomedes, and Ajax.

Achiv. Patroclus, I'll speak with nobody:—Come in with me, Thersites. [Exit.

The he is such knavery, such juggling, and such knavery! all the argument is, a cuckold, and a whore: A good quarrel, to draw emulous factions, and bleed to death upon. Now the dry serpigo on the subject! and war, and leechery, confound as.

Aeam. Where is Achilles?

Patr. Within his tent; but ill-dispos'd, my lord.

Aeam. Let it be known to him, that we are here.

He shent our messengers, and we lay by
Our appartemnants, visiting of him:
Let him be told so; lest, perseverance, he think
We dare not move the question of our place,
Or know not what we are.

Patr. I shall say so to him. [Exit.

Ulyss. We saw him at the opening of his tent;
He is not sick.

Ajax. Yes, lion-sick, sick of proud heart: you may call it melancholy, if you will favour the man: but, by my head, 'tis pride: But why, why? let him show us a cause.—A word, my lord.

[Nakes Agamemnon aside.

Nest. What moves Ajax thus to bay at him?
Ulyss. Achilles hath inveigled his foot from him.
Nest. Who? Thersites?

Ulyss. He.

Nest. Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have lost his argument.
Ulyss. No; you see, he is his argument, that has his argument; Achilles.

Nest. All the better; their fraction is more our wish, than their faction: But it was a strong composure, a fool could disunite.

Ulyss. The amity, that wisdom knits not, folly may easily unite. Here comes Patroclus.

Re-enter Patroclus.

Nest. No Achilles with him.
Ulyss. The elephant hath joints, but none for courtesy: his legs are legs for necessity, not for flexure.

Patr. Achilles bids me say—he is much sorry,
If any thing more than your sport and pleasure
Did move your greatness, and this noble state,
To call upon him; he hopes, it is no other,
But, for your health and your digestion sake,
An after-dinner's breath.

Aeam. Hear you, Patroclus:—
We are too well acquainted with these answers:
But his evasion, wing'd thus swift with scorn,
Cannot outfly our apprehensions.
Much attribute he hath; and much the reason
Why we ascribe it to him: yet all his virtues,—
Not virtuously on his own part beheld,—
Do, in our eyes, begin to lose their gloss; You have pickled fruit: in an wholesome dish,
Are like to rot untasted. Go and tell him,
We come to speak with him: And you shall not
If you do say—we think him over-proud, [sin,
And under-honest; in self-assumption greeter,
Than in the more judgment; and worthier than himself
Here tend the savage strangeness he puts on;
Disguise the holy strength of their command,
And underwrite in an observing kind
His humorous predomiance; yea, watch
His pettish lunes, his ebb, his flows, as if
The passage and whole carriage of this action
Rode on his tide. Go, tell him this; and add,
That, if he overhold his price so much,
We'll none of him; but let him, like an engine
Not portable, lie under this report—
Bring action hither, this cannot go to war:
A stirring dwarf we do allowance give
Before a sleeping giant.—Tell him so.

Patr. I shall; and bring his answer presently.

Aeam. And at second voice we'll not be satisfied,
We come to speak with him.—Ulysses, enter.

Ajax. What is he more than another? and is such Butcherery, such juggling, and such knavery!

Aeam. No more than what he thinks he is.
Ajax. Is he so much? Do you not think, he thinks himself a better man than I am?
Aeam. No question.
Ajax. Will you subscribe his thought, and say—he is?
Aeam. No, noble Ajax; you are as strong, as valiant, as wise, no less noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractable.

Ajax. Why should a man be proud? How doth pride grow? I know not what pride is.
Aeam. Your mind's the clearer, Ajax, and your virtues the fairer. He that is proud, eats up himself: pride is his own glass, his own trumpet, his own chronicle; and whatever praises itself but in the deed, devours the deed in the praise.
Ajax. I do hate a proud man, as I hate the en-gendering of toads.

Nest. And yet he loves himself: Is it not strange?

[Aside.

Re-enter Ulysses.

Ulyss. Achilles will not to the field to-morrow.
Aeam. What's his excuse?
Ulyss. He doth rely on none; But carries on the stream of his dispose,
Without observation or respect of any,
In will peculiar and in self-admission.
Aeam. Why will he not, upon our fair request,
Untent his person, and share the air with us?
Ulyss. Things small as nothing, for request's sake only.
He makes important: Possess'd he is with greatness;
And speaks not to himself, but with a pride
That quarrels at self-breath: imagin'd worth
Hold in his blood such swain and hot discourse.
That, 'twixt his mental and his active parts,
Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion rages,
And batters down himself: What should I say?
He is so plaguy proud, that the death-tokens of it
Cry—No recovery.

Aeam. Let Ajax go to him.—
Dear lord, go you and greet him in his tent:
'Tis said, he holds you well; and will be led,
At your request, a little from himself.
Ulyss. O Ajax, and have the answer, let us not be so!
We'll consecrate the steps that Ajax makes
When they go from Achilles: Shall the proud lord,
That bastes his arrogance with his own seam;
And never suffers matter of the world
Enter his thoughts,—save such as do revolve
And ruminate himself,—shall he be worshipp'd
Of that we hold an idol more than he?
No, this thrice worthy and right valiant lord
Must not so scale his palm, nobly acquird;
Nor, by my will, assubjugate his merit,
As amply titled as Achilles is,
By going to Achilles;
That were to enlard his fat-already pride;
And add more coals to Cancer, when he burns
With entertaining great Hyperion.
This lord go to him! Jupiter forbid;
And say in thunder—Achilles, go to him.
Next. O, this is well; he rubs the vein of him.

[Troilus and Cressida, Act 3, Scene 1.]

Dio. And how his silence drinks up this applause! [Aside.

Ajass. If I go to him, with my arm'd fist I'll push him over the face.

[Aside.

Agam. O, no, you shall not go.

Ajass. An he be proud with me, I'll please his pride;

Let me go to him.

Ulysses. Not for the worth that hangs upon our quarrel.

Ajass. A paltry, insolent fellow,—

[Aside.

Nest. How he describes himself!

Ajass. Can he not be sociable?

Ulysses. The raven.

[Aside.

Chides blackness.

Ajass. I will let his humours blood.

Agam. He'll be physician, that should be the patient.

Ajass. An all men were o'my mind,—

Ulysses. Wit would be out of fashion.

Ajass. He should not bear it so, he should eat swords first: Shall pride carry it?

Nest. An 'tould, you'd carry half.

Ulysses. He had ten shares.

[Aside.

Ajass. I'll knead him, I will make him supple—

Nest. He's not yet thorough warm: force him with praises:

Pour in, pour in; his ambition is dry. [Aside.

Ulysses. My lord, you feed too much on this delicious.

[To Agamemnon.

Nest. Of noble general, do not do so.

Dio. You must prepare to fight without Achilles.

Ulysses. Why, 'tis this naming of him does him harm.

Here is a man,—But 'tis before his face;

I will be silent.

Nest. Wherefore should you so?

He is not emulous, as Achilles is.

Ulysses. Know the whole world, he is as valiant.

Ajass. A whoreson dog, that shall palter thus with us!

I would be were a Trojan!

[Aside.

Ulysses. What a vice

Were it in Ajax now——

Ulysses. If he were proud?

Dio. Or covetous of praise?

Ulysses. Ay, or surly borne?

Dio. Or strange, or self-affected?

Ulysses. Thank the heavens, lord, thon art of sweet composure; praise him that got thee, she that gave thee suck: Fam'd be thy tutor, and thy parts of nature Thrice-fam'd, beyond all erudition: But he that disciplin'd thy arms to fight, Let Mars divide eternity in twain, And give him half: and, for thy vigour, Bull-bearing Milo his addition yield To sinewy Ajax. I will not praise thy wisdom, Which, like a bourn, a pale, a shore, confines Thy spacious and dilated parts: Here's Nestor,— Instructed by the antiquity times, He must, he is, he cannot but be wise;— But, pardon, father Nestor, were your days As green as Ajax', and your brain so temper'd, You should not have the eminence of him, But be as Ajax.

Ajass. Shall I call you father?

Nest. Ay, my good son.

Dio. Be rul'd by him, lord Ajax.

Ulysses. There is no tarrying here; the hart

Achilles keeps the scent. Please it our great general To call together all his state of war; Fresh kings are come to Troy: To-morrow, We must with all our main of power stand fast:

And here's a lord,—come knights from east to And call their flower, Ajax shall cope the best. Agam. Go we to council. Let Achilles sleep: Light boats sail swift, though greater hulks draw deep. [Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Troy. A Room in Priam's Palace. Enter Pandarus and a Servant

Pan. Friend! you! pray you, a word: Do not you follow the young lord Paris?

Serv. Ay, sir, when he goes before me.

Pan. You do depend upon him, I mean?

Serv. Sir, I do depend upon the lord.

Pan. You do depend upon a noble gentleman; I must needs praise him.

Serv. The lord be praised!

Pan. You know me, do you not?

Serv. 'Faith, sir, superficially.

Pan. Friend, know me better; I am the lord Pandarus.

Serv. I hope, I shall know your honour better.

Pan. I do desire it.

Serv. You are in the state of grace.

Pan. Grace! not so, friend; honour and lordship are my titles:—What music is this?

Serv. I do but partly know, sir; it is musick in parts.

Pan. Know you the musicians?

Serv. Wholly, sir.

Pan. Who play them to?

Serv. To the hearers, sir.

Pan. At whose pleasure, friend?

Serv. At mine, sir, and theirs that love musick.

Serv. Who shall I command, sir?

Pan. Friend, we understand not one another; I am too curiously, and thou art too cunning: At whose request do these men play?

Serv. That's to't, indeed, sir: 'Marry, sir, at the request of Paris my lord, who is there in person; with him, the mortall Venus, the heart-blood of beauty, love's invisible soul.

Pan. Who? my cousin Cressida?

Serv. No, sir, Helen; Could you not find out that by her attributes?

Pan. It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the Trojan; I will make a compli-mental assault upon him, for my business seeth.

Serv. Sodden business! there's a stewed phrase, indeed!

Enter Paris and Helen, attended.

Pan. Fair be to you, my lord, and to all this fair company! fair desires, in all fair measure, fairly guide them! especially to you, fair queen! fair thoughts be your fair pillow! Helen. Dear lord, you are full of fair words.

Pan. You speak your fair pleasure, sweet queen.

Fair prince, here is good broken musick.

Par. You have broke it, cousin: and, by my life, you shall make it whole again; you shall piece it out with a piece of your performance:—Neil, he is full of harmony.

Pan. Truly, lady, no.

Helen. O, sir—

Pan. Rude, in sooth; in sooth, very rude.

Par. Well said, my lord! well, you say so in fits.

Pan. I have business to my lord, dear queen:—My lord, will you vouchsafe me a word?

Helen. Nay, this shall not heuise us out: we'll hear you sing, certainly.

Pan. Well, sweet queen, you are pleasant with me.—But (marry) thus, my lord.—My dear lord, and most estemed friend, your brother Troilus—

Helen. My lord Pandarus; honey-sweet lord,
Pan. Go to, sweet queen, go to—commends himself most affectionately to you.
Helen. You shall not bob us out of our melody;
If you do, our melancholy upon your head!
Pan. Sweet queen, sweet queen; that's a sweet queen,! faith.
Helen. And to make a sweet lady sad, is a sour offence.
Pan. Nay, that shall not serve your turn; that shall it not, in truth, la.
Nay, I care not for such words: no, no.
—And, my lord, he desires you, that, if the king call for him at supper, you will make his excuse.
Helen. My lord Pandarus,—
Pan. What say' my sweet queen,—my very sweet queen?
Par. What exploit's in hand? where sups he to-night?
Helen. Nay, but my lord,—
Pan. What says my sweet queen?—My cousin will fall out with you. You must not know where he sups.
Par. I'll lay my life, with my disposer Cressida.
Pan. No, no, no such matter, you are wide;
come, your disposer is sick.
Par. Well, I'll make excuse.
Pan. Ay, good my lord. Why should you say—
Cressida? no, your poor disposer's sick.
Par. I spy,
Pan. You spy! what do you spy?—Come, give me an instrument.—Now, sweet queen.
Helen. Why, this is kindly done.
Pan. My niece is horribly in love with a thing you have, sweet queen.
Helen. She shall have it, my lord, if it be not your lordship's.
Pan. He! no, she'll none of him; they two are twin.
Helen. Falling in, after falling out, may make them there.
Pan. Come, come, I'll hear no more of this; I'll sing you a song now.
Helen. Ay, ay, pr'ythee now. By my troth, sweet lord, thou hast a fine forehead.
Pan. Ay, you may, you may.
Helen. Let thy song be love; this love will undo us all.
O, Cupid, Cupid, Cupid!
Pan. Love! ay, that it shall, I' faith.
Par. Ay, good now, love, love, nothing but love.
Pan. In good troth, it begins so:
Love, love, nothing but love, still more!
For, oh, love's bow
Shoots buck and doe;
The shaft confounds,
Not that it wounds
But tickles still the sore.

These lovers cry—Oh! oh! they die!
Yet that which seems the wound to kill,
Both turns oh! oh! to ha! ha! he!
So dying love lives still:
Oh! oh! a while, but ha! ha! ha!
Oh! oh! groans out for ha! ha! ha!

Hey ho!
Helen. In love, I' faith, to the very tip of the nose.
Par. He eats nothing but doves, love; and that breeds hot blood, and hot blood begets hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deeds, and hot deeds is love.
Pan. Is this the generation of love? hot blood, hot thoughts, and hot deeds?—Why, they are vipers:
Is love a generation of vipers? Sweet lord, who's afraid to-day?
Par. Deiphobus, Helenus, Antenor, and all the gallantry of Troy: I would fain have armed night, but my Nell would not have it so. How chance my brother Troilus went not?
Helen. He hangs the lip at something;—you know all, lord Pandarus.
Pan. Not I, honey-sweet queen.—I long to hear how they sped to day.—You'll remember your brother's excuse?
Par. To a hair.
Pan. Fare you well, sweet queen.
Helen. Command me to your niece.
Pan. I will, sweet queen.
[Exit.
Par. They are come from field: let us to Priam's hall,
To greet the warriors. Sweet Helen, I must woo
you
To help unarm our Hector: his stubborn buckles,
With these your white enchanting fingers touch'd,
Shall more obey, than to the edge of steel.
Oh force of Greekish sinews: you shall do more
Than all the island kings, disarm great Hector.
Helen. 'Twill make us proud to be his servant,
Paris:
Yea, what he shall be, wife of us in duty,
Gives us more palm in beauty than we have;
Yea, overshines ourself.
Par. Sweet, above thought I love thee. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same. Pandarus' Orchard.
Enter Pandarus and a Servant, meeting.
Pan. How now? where's thy master? at my cousin Cressida's?
Serv. No, sir; he stays for you to conduct him thither.

Enter Troilus.
Pan. O, here he comes.—How now, how now?
Tro. Sirrah, walk off.
[Exit Servant.
Pan. Have you seen my cousin?
Tro. No, Pandarus; I talk about her door,
Like a strange soul upon the Stygian banks
Staying for watage. O, he thou my Charon,
And give me swift transportance to those fields,
Where I may mallow in the lily beds
Propos'd for thee to save! O gentle Pandarus,
From Cupid's should'er pluck his painted wings,
And fly with me to Cressid!
Pan. Walk here 't' orchard, I'll bring her straight.
[Exit Pandarus.
Tro. I am giddy; expectation whirls me round.
The imaginary relish is so sweet
That it enchant's my sense; What will it be,
When that the watry palate tastes indeed
Love's thrice-reputed nectar? death, I fear me;
Swooning destruction; or some joy too fine,
Too subtle-playing, too'd shall't sharp in sweetness,
For the capacity of my ruder powers:
I fear it much; and I do fear besides,
That I shall lose distinction in my joys;
As doth a battle, when they charge on heaps
The enemy flying.

Re-enter Pandarus.
Pan. She's making her ready, she'll come straight:
you must be witty now. She does so blush, and fetches her wind so short, as if she were frayed with a sprite: I'll fetch her. It is the prettiest villain: she fetches her breath as short as a newtaken sparrow.—[Exit Pandarus.
Tro. Even such a passion doth embrace my bosom:
My heart beats thicker than a feverous pulse
And all my powers do their bestowing lose,
Like vassalage at unawares encount'ring
The eye of majesty.

Enter Pandarus and Cressida.
Pan. Come, come, what need you blush? shame's a baby. —Here she is now: swear the oaths now to her, that you have sworn to me.—What, are you gone again? you must be watched ere you be made tame, must you? Come your ways, come your ways; an you draw backward, we'll put you the fills.—
Why do you not speak to her?—Come, draw this curtain, and let's see your picture. Alas the day, how loath you are to offend daylight! an 'twere dark, you'd close sooner. So; so; rub on, and kiss the mistress. How now, a kiss in bee-farm! build there, carpenter; the air is sweet. Nay, you shall flit, you hearts out, ere I part you. The fainest as the tercel, for all the ducks i'the river: go to, go to.

Tro. You have bereft me of all words, lady.

Pan. Words pay no debts, give her deeds: but she'll bereave you of the deeds too, if she call your activity in question. What, billin' again? Here's—In witness whereof the parties interchangeably—Come in, come in; I'll go get a fire.

[Exit Pandarus.]

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord? Tro. O Cressida, how often have I wished me thus?

Cres. Wished, my lord?—The gods grant!—O my lord!

Tro. What should they grant? what makes this pretty abruption? What too curious drag espie my sweet lady in the fountain of our love? Cres. More dregs than water, if my fears have eyes.

Tro. Fears make devils cherubins; they never see truly.

Cres. Blind fear, that seeing reason leads, finds safer footing than blind reason stumbling without fear: To fear the worst, oft cures the worst.

Tro. O, let my lady apprehend no fear: in all Cressid's tray, she is presented no monster.

Cres. Nor nothing monstrous neither?

Tro. Nothing, but our undertakings; when we vow to weep seas, live in fire, eat rocks, tame tigers, thinking it harder for our mistress to devise imposition enough, than for us to undergo any difficulty imposed. This is the monstruosity in love, lady, that the will is infinite, and the execution confined; that the desire is boundless, and the act slave to limit.

Cres. They say, all lovers swear more performance than they are able, and yet reserve an ability that they never perform; vævo more than the perfection of ten, and discharging less than the tenth part of one. They that have the voice of lions, and the act of hares, are they not monsters?

Tro. Are there such? such are not we: Praise us as we are tasted; allow us as we prove; our head shall go bare, till merit crown it: no perfection in reversion shall have a praise in present; we will not name desert, before his birth; and, being born, his part will be the shibboleth of our reward to fair faith: Troilus shall be such to Cressid, as what envy can say worst, shall be a mock for his truth; and what truth can speak truer, not truer than Troilus.

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Re-enter Pandarus.

Pan. What, fishing still? have you not done talking yet?

Cres. We uncle, what folly I commit, I dedicate to you.

Pan. I thank you for that; if my lord get a boy of you, you'll give him me: Be true to my lord: if he flinch, chide me for it.

Tro. You, you! no cry of hostages; your uncle's word, and my firm faith.

Pan. Nay, I'll give my word for her too; our kindred, though they be long ere they are wood, they are constant, being won: they are burs, I can tell you; they'll stick where they are thrown.

Cres. Both regale comes to me now, and brings me heart:

Prince Troilus, I have lov'd you night and day, For many weary months.

Tro. What was my Cressid then so hard to win?

Cres. Lord to seem won; but I was won, my lord,

With the first glance that ever.—Pardon me:—

If I confess much, you will play the tyrant.

I love you now; but not, till now, so much

But I might master it:—in faith, I lie;

My thoughts were like unbriaded children, grown

Too headstrong for their mother: see, we fools!

Why have I blab'd? who shall be true to us,

When what we have seen, and what we say,

But, though I lov'd you well, I wou'd not you;

And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a man;

Or that we women had men's privilege

Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue;

For, by this rapture, I shall surely speak

The things of love shall repent. See, see, your silence,

Cunning in dumbness, from my weakness draws

My very soul of counsel: Stop my mouth.

Tro. And shall, albeit sweet musick issues thence.

Pan. Fretty, f'faith.

Cres. My lord, I do beseech you, pardon me:

'Twas not my purpose, thus to beg a kiss:

I am amash'd:—0 heavens! what have I done?—

For this time will I take my leave, my lord.

Tro. Your leave, sweet Cressid?

Pan. Leave! an you take leave till to-morrow morning,

Cres. Pray you, content you.

Tro. What offends you, lady?

Cres. Sir, mine own company.

Tro. You cannot shun Yourself.

Cres. Let me go and try:

I have a kind of self resides with you:

But, as the kind self, that itself will leave,

To be another's fool. I would be gone:

Where is my wit? I know not what I speak.

Tro. Well know they what they speak, that speak so wisely.

Cres. I have no distance, my lord, I show more craft than love;

And fell so roundly to a large confession,

To angle for your thoughts: But you are wise;

Or else you love not; For, to be wise, and love,

Exceeds man's might; that dwells with gods above.

Tro. O, that I thought it could be in a woman, (As, if it can, I will presume in you,) To feed for aye her lamp and flames of love; To keep her constancy in plight and youth, Outliving beauty's outward, with a mind That doth renew swifter than blood decays! Or, that persuasion could but thus convince me,— That my integrity and truth to you Might be affronted with the match and weight Of such a winnow'd purity in love; How now, my lord?—I tell you, then uplifted! but, alas, I am as true as truth's simplicity, And simplest than the infancy of truth.

Cres. In that I'll war with you.

Tro. O virtuous fight, When right with right wars who shall be most right! True swains in love shall, in the world to come, Approve their truths by Troilus: when their rhymes,

Full of Virginals, of oath, and big compare, Want similes, truth tir'd with iteration,— As true as steel, as plantage to the moon, As sun to day, as turtle to her mate, As iron to adamant, as earth to the center,— Yet, to make all comparisons truer,

As truth's authentick author to be cited, As true as Troilus shall crown up the verse, And sanctify the numbers.

Cres. Prophets may be! If I false, or swerve a hair from truth, When time is old and hath forgot itself,

When waterdrops have worn the stones of Troy, And blind oblivion swallowing'd cities up, And mighty states characterless are grated To dusty nothing; yet let memory

From fair to false, among false maids in love, Upbraid my falsehood! when they have said—as false

As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth,

As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf,
Act 3.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. 527

Pard to the hand, or stepdame to her son;
Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood,
As false as Cressid.
Pan. Go to, a bargain made: seal it, seal it; I'll be the witness.—Here I hold my hand; here, my cousin. If ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such pains to bring you together, let all pitiful goers-between be called to the world's end after my name, call them all—Pandars; let all constant men be Troiluses, all false women Cressids, and all brokers-between Pandars! say, amen.
Troc. Amen.
Cres. Amen.
Pan. Amen. Whereupon I will show you a chamber and a bed, which bed, because it shall not speak of your pretty encounters, press it to death away.
And Cupid grant all tongue-tied maidens here,
Bed, chamber, Pandar to provide this gear!
[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Grecian Camp.

Enter Agamemnon, Ulysses, Diomedes, Nestor, Ajax, Menelaus, and Calchas.

Cal. Now, princes, for the service I have done you,
The advantage of the time prompts me aloud
To call for recompense. Appear it to your mind,
That, through the sight I bear in things, to love
I have abandon'd Troy, left my possession,
Incur'd a traitor's name; expos'd myself,
From certain and possess'd conveniences,
To doubtful fortunes; sequest'red from me all
That time, acquaintance, custom, and condition,
Made tame and most familiar to my nature;
And here, to do you service, am become
As new into the world, strange, unacquainted:
I do beseech you, as in way of taste,
To give me now a little benefit,
Out of those many register'd in promise,
Which, you say, live to come in my behalf.
Agam. What wouldst thou of us, Trojan? make demand.

Cal. You have a Trojan prisoner, call'd Antenor,
Yesterday took; Troy holds him very dear.
Oft have you, (often have you thanks therefore,) Desire'd my Cressid in right great exchange,
Whom Troy hath still denied: But this Antenor,
I know's such a wrest in their affairs,
That their negotiations all must slack,
Wanting his manage; and they will almost
Give us a prince of blood, a son of Priam,
In change of him: let him be sent, great princes.
Agam. The child shall be my daughter; and her presence
Shall quite strike off all service I have done,
In most accepted pain.
Agam. Let Diomedes bear him,
And bring us Cressid hither; Calchas shall have,
What he requests of us—Good Diomed,
Purify you furnish for this interchange;
Withal, bring word—if Hector will to-morrow
Be answer'd in his challenge: Ajax is ready.

Dio. This shall I undertake; and 'tis a burden
Which I am proud to bear!
[Exeunt Diomedes and Calchas.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus, before their tent.

Ulyss. Achilles stands 'tis the entrance of his tent:
Please it our general to pass strangely by him,
As if he were forgot; and, princes all,
Lay negligent and loose regard upon him:
I will come last: 'Tis like, he'll question me,
Why such unpleasive eyes are bent, why turn'd on him;
If so, I have derision med'cinal,
To use between your strangeness and his pride,
Which his own will shall have desire to drink;
It may do good; pride hath no other glass
To show itself, but pride; for supple knees
Feed arrogance, and are the proud man's fees.

Agram. We'll execute your purpose, and put on
A form of strangeness as we pass along:
So do each lord; and either he meet him, or Else disdainfully, which shall shake him more
Than if not look'd on. I will lead the way.

Achil. What, comes the general to speak with me?
You know my mind, I'll fight no more 'gainst Troy.
Agam. What says Achilles? would he aught with us?
Nest. Would you, my lord, aught with the general?
Achil. No.
Nest. Nothing, my lord.
Agam. The better.

[Exeunt Agamemnon and Nestor.

Achil. Good day, good day.
Men. How do you? how do you?

Achil. What, does the cuckold scorn me?

Ajax. How now, Patroclus?

Achil. Good morrow, Ajax.

Ajax. Ha?

Achil. Good morrow.

Ajax. Ay, and good next day too.

[Exeunt Ajax.

Achil. What mean these fellows? Know they not Achilles?

Patro. They pass by strangely: they were us'd to bend,
To send their smiles before them to Achilles;
To come as humbly, as they us'd to creep
To holy altars.

Achil. What, am I poor of late?

'Tis certain, greatness, once fallen out with fortune,
Must fall out with men too: What the declin'd is,
He shall as soon read in the eyes of others,
As feel in his own fall: for men, like butterflies,
Show not their mealy wings, but to the summer;
And not a man, for being simply man,
Hath any honour; but honour for those honours
That are without him, as place, riches, favour,
Prizes of accident as oft as merit,
Which when they fall, as being slippery standers,
The love that lean'd on them as slippery too,
Do one pluck down another, and together
Die in the fall. But 'tis not so with me:
Fortune and I are friends; I do enjoy
At ample point all that I did possess,
Save these men's looks; who do, methinks, find out
Something not worth in me such rich beholding
As they have often given. Here is Ulysses;
I'll interrupt his reading—

How now, Ulysses?

Ulyss. Now, great Thetis' son? Achil. What are you reading?

Ulyss. A strange fellow here

Writs me, That man—how dearly ever parted,
How much in having, or without, or in,—
Cannot make boast to have that which he hath,
Nor feels not what he owes, but by reflection;
As when his virtues shining upon others
Heat them, and they return heat again
To the first giver.

Achil. This is not strange, Ulysses.

The beauty that is borne here in the face
The bearer knows not, but comments itself
To others' eyes; nor doth the eye itself
(That most pure spirit of sense,) behold itself,
Not going from itself; but eye to eye oppos'd
Salutes each other with each other's form.
For speculation turns not to itself,
Till it hath travel'd, and is married there,
Where it may see itself: this is not strange at all.

Ulyss. I do not strain at the position,
It is familiar; but at the author's drift:
Who, in his circumstance, expressly proves—
That no man is the lord of any thing, (Though in and of him there be much consisting,
Till he communicate his parts to others:
Nor doth he of himself know them for aught,
Till he behold them form'd in the applause
Where they are extended; which, like an arch,
Reverberates The voice again; or like a gate of steel
Fronting the sun, receives and renders back
His figure and his heat. I was much rapt in this;
And apprehended here immediately
The victory Ajax had in Heaven,
Heavens, what a man is there! a very horse;
That has he knows not what. Nature, what things there are,
Most affect in regard, and dear in use!
What thing again most dead in the esteem,
And poor in worth! Now shall we see to-morrow,
An act that very chance doth throw upon him,
Ajax renown'd. O heavens, what some men do,
While some men leave to do!
How some men creep in skittish fortune's hall,
Whiles others play the idlets in her eyes!
How one man eats into another's pride,
While pride is fasting in his wantonness!
To see these Grecian lords!—why, even already
The unknown Ajax stands on the shoulder;
As if his foot were on brave Hector's breast,
And great Troy shrinking.

Achil. I do believe it: for they pass'd by me,
As misers do by beggars; neither gave to me
Good word, nor look. What, are my deeds forgot?

Ulysses. Time hath, my lord, the spider doth his work,
Wherein he puts aim for oblivion,
A great-sized monster of ingratitude:
Those scraps are good deeds past; which are devourd As fast as they are made, forgot as soon
As done: Perseverance, dear my lord,
Keeps honour bright: To have done, is to hang Quite out of fashion, like a rusty mail
In monimental mockery. Take the instant way;
For he is no stranger there at all:
Where one but goes abroad: keep then the path;
For emulation hath a thousand sons,
That one by one purs'ne: If you give way,
Or hedge aside from the direct forthright,
Like to an enter'd tide, they all rush by,
And leave you hindmost:—
Or, like a gallant horse fallen in first rank,
Lie there for pavement to the abject rear,
O'er-run and trampled on: Then what they do in
Though less than yours in past, must o'ertop yours:
For time is like a fashionable host,
That slightly shakes his parting guest by the hand;
And with his arms out-stretch'd, as he would fly,
Grasps know no comer: Welcome ever smiles,
And farewell goes out sighing. O, let not virtue
Seek Remuneration for the thing it was;
For beauty, wit,
High birth, vigour of bone, desert in service,
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating time.
One touch of nature makes the whole world kin,—
That all, with one consent, praise new-born gods,
Though they are made and moulded of things past;
And give to dust, that is a little gilt,
More land than gilt o'er-dusted.
The present eye praising the present object:
Then marble, not the great and complete man,
That all the Grecians begin to worship Ajax;
Since things in motion sooner catch the eye,
Than what not stirs. The cry went once on thee,
And still it might; and yet it may again.
If thou wouldst take thyself alive,
And case thy reputation in thy tent;
Whose glorious deeds, but in these fields of late,
Made emnious missions 'mongst the gods themselves,
And drave great Mars to faction.
knows not me: I said, Good-morrow, Ajax; and he replies, Thanks, Agamemnon. What think you of this man, that takes me for the general? He is grown a very land-fish, languageless, a monster. A plague of opinion! a man may wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin. Achill. You must be my ambassador to him, Thersites. Ther. Who, 1? why, he'll answer nobody; he professes not answering; speaking is for beggars: he wears his tongue in his arms. I will put on his presence, let Patroclus make demands to me, you shall see the pageant of Ajax. Achill. To him, Patroclus! Tell him,—I humbly desire the valiant Ajax, to invite the most valorous Hector to come unarmed to my tent; and to procure in his behalf, and in mine, an end to that war-roused, and most illustrious, six-or-seven-times-honoured captain-general of the Grecian army, Agamemnon. Do this. Patr. Jove bless great Ajax! Ther. Humph! Patr. I come from the worthy Achilles,— Ther. Ha! Patr. Who most humbly desires you, to invite Hector to his tent,— Ther. Humph! Patr. And to procure safe conduct from Agamemnon. Ther. Agamemnon? Patr. Ay, my lord. Ther. Ha! Patr. What say you to't? Ther. God be wi' you, with all my heart. Patr. Your answer, sir. Ther. If to-morrow be a fair day, by eleven o'clock it will go one way or other; howsoever, he shall pay for me ere he has me. Patr. Your answer, sir. Ther. Fare you well, with all my heart. Achill. Why, but he is not in this tune, is he? Ther. No, but he's out o'tune thus. What musing will be in him when Hector has knocked out his brains, I know not: But, I am sure, none; unless the fiddler Apollo get his sinews to make catching. Achill. Come, thou shalt bear a letter to him straight. Ther. Let me bear another to his horse; for that's the more capable creature. Achill. My mind is troubled, like a fountain stirr'd; And I myself see not the bottom of it. [Exeunt Achilles and Patroclus. Ther. 'Would the fountain of your mind were clear again, that I might water an as at it! I hate rather be a tick in a sheep, than such a valiant ignorance. [Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Troy. A Street.

Enter, at one side, Eneas, and Servant with a torch; at the other, Paris, Diomedus, Antenor, Diomedes, and others, with torches.

Par. See, ho! who's that there? Del. 'Tis the lord Eneas.

Ene. Is the prince there in person? Had I so good occasion to lie long, As you, prince Paris, nothing but heavenly business Should rob my bed-mate of my company.

Dio. That's my mind too.—Good morrow, lord Eneas.

Par. A valiant Greek, Eneas; take his hand: Witness the process of your speech, wherein You told—how Diomed, a whole week by days, Did hunt you in the field, in midst of the mangled.

Ene. Health to you, valiant sir, During all question of the gentle truce:

But when I meet you arm'd, as black defiance, As heart can think, or courage execute. Dio. The one and other Diomed embraces. Our bloods are now in calm; and, so long, health: But when contention and occasion meet, By Jove, I'll play the hunter for thee, With all my force, pursuit, and policy.

Æne. And thou shalt hunt a lion, that will fly With his face backward.—In humane gentleness, Welcome to Troy! now, by Anchises' life, Welcome, indeed! By Venus' hand I swear, No man alive can love, in such a sort, The thing he means to kill, more excellently. Dio. We sympathize:—Jove, let Eneas live, If to my sword his fate be not the glory, A thousand complete courses of the sun! But, in minute honour, let him die, With every joint a wound; and that to-morrow! Æne. We know each other well.

Dio. We do; and long to know each other worse. Par. This is the most despiteful gentle greeting, The noblest hateful love, that ever I heard of.— What business, lord, so early? Æne. I was sent for to the king; but why, I know not.

Par. His purpose meets you; 'Twas to bring this Greek To Calchas' house; and there to render him, For the enfrend Antenor, the fair Cressida: Let's have your company; or, if you please, Haste there before us: I constantly do think, (Or, rather, call my thought in question,) My brother Troilus lodges there to-night; Rouse him, and give him note of our approach, With the whole quality wherefore; I fear, We shall be much unwelcome.

Æne. That I assure you; Troilus had rather Troy were bore to Greece, Than Cressid borne from Troy. Par. There is no help; The bitter disposition of the time Will have it so. On, lord; we'll follow you.

Æne. Good morrow, all. [Exit. Par. And tell me, noble Diomed; 'tis faith, tell me true,

Even in the soul of sound good-fellowship.— Who, in your thoughts, merits fair Helen best, Myself, or Menelaus?

Dio. Both alike: He merits well to have her, that doth seek her (Not scrapping trifle of her soilure,) With such a hell of pain, and world of charge; And you as well to keep her, that defend her (Not palating the taste of her dishonour,) With such a costly loss of wealth and friends: But, in a purling cuckold, a willing spur, The lees and dregs of a flat tamed piece; You, like a leech, out of whorsiholms Are pleas'd to breed out your inheritors; Both merits pons'd, each weighs nor less nor more; But he as he be the heavier for a whore.

Par. You are too bitter to your countrywoman. Dio. She's bitter to her country: Hear me, Paris,— For every false drop in her bawdy veins A Grecian's life hath sunk; for every scruple Of her contaminated carrion weight, A Trojan hath been slave; since she could speak, She hath not given so many good words breath, As for her Greeks and Trojans suffer'd death. Par. Fair Diomed, you do as chapmen do, Dispraise the thing that you desire to buy: But we in silence hold this virtue well,— We'll not commend what we intend to sell.

Here lies our way. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same. Court before the House of Pandarus.

Enter Troilus and Cressida.

Troc. Dear, trouble not yourself; the morn is cold.
TROILUS

Act 4.

Cres. Then, sweet my lord, I'll call mine uncle down;
He shall unbol't the gates.

Tro. Trouble him not; To bed, to bed: Sleep till those pretty eyes, And give as soft attachment to th' sense, As infants' empty of all thought!

Cres. Good morrow then.

Tro. 'Pr'ythee now, to bed.

Cres. Are you aware of me?

Tro. O Cressida ! but that the busy day, Wak'd by the lark, hath rous'd the rivial crowds, And dreaming night will hide our joys no longer, I would not from thee.

Cres. Night hath been too brief, troo.

[Knocking.]

You men will never tarry.---
Oh foolish Cressid!—I might have still held off,
And then you would have tarried. Hark! there's one up.

[Enter Pandarus.]

Pens. [Within.] What, are all the doors open here? Tro. It is your uncle.

Enter Pandarus.

Pens. A pestilence on him! now will he be mocking:
I shall have such a life,---

Pens. How now, how now? how go maidens' heads?

—Here, you maid! where's my cousin, Cressid?

Pens. Go hang yourself, you naughtie mocking uncle!

You bring me to do, and theu you flout me too.

Pens. To do what? to do what?—let her say what: what have I brought you to do?

Pens. Come, come; beshrew your heart: you'll never be good,
Not suffer others.

Pens. Ha! ha! Alas, poor wretch! a poor capocchia! hast not slept to-night? would he not, a naughty man, let it sleep? a bugbear take him!
[Knocking.

Pens. Did I not tell you?—would he were knock'd o'the head!---

Who's that at door? good uncle, go and see.--

My lord, come you again into my chamber:
You smile, and mock me, as if I meant naughtily.

Tro. Ha! ha!

Pens. Come, you are deceiv'd, I think of no such thing.--- [Knocking.

How earnestly they knock! pray you, come in;
I would not for half Troy have you seen here.

[Exeunt Troilus and Cressida.

Pens. [Going to the door.] Who's there? what's the matter? will you beat down the door? How now? what's the matter?

[Exeunt.}

As Pandarus is going out, enter Troilus.

Tro. How now? what's the matter?

Æne. My lord, I scarce have leisure to salute you.

My matter is so rash: There is at hand Paris your brother, and Deiphobus,
The Grecian Diomed, and our Antenor Deliver'd to us; and for him forthwith, Ere the first sacrifice, within this hour, We must give up to Dromedes' hand

The lady Cressida.

Tro. Is it so concluded?

Æne. By Priam, and the general state of Troy: You are at hand, and ready to effect it.

Tro. How does my achievements mock me!

I will go meet them: and, my lord Æneas,
We met by chance; you did not find me here.

Æne. Good, good, my lord; the secrets of nature Have not more gift in taciturnity.
[Exeunt Troilus and Æneas.

Pan. Is't possible? no sooner got, but lost? The devil take Antenor! the young prince will go mad. A plague upon Antenor! I would, they had broke their neck.

Enter Cressida.

Cres. How now? what is the matter? Who was Pens. Ah, ah! [here?]

Cres. Why sigh you so profoundly? where's my lord gone?

Tell me, sweet uncle, what's the matter?

Pens. 'Would I were as deep under the earth as I am above!

Cres. O the gods!—what's the matter?

Pens. 'Pr'ythee, get thee in; 'Would thou hadst 'tnever been born! I knew, thou wouldst be his death—O poor gentleman!—A plague upon Antenor!

Cres. Good uncle, I beseech you on my knees, I beseech you, what's the matter?

Pens. Thee must be gone, wench, thou must be gone; thou art changed for Antenor: thou must to thy father, and be gone from Troy; 'twill be his death; 'twill be his bane; he cannot bear it.

Cres. O you immortal gods!—I will not go.

Pan. Thou must.

Cres. I will not, uncle: I have forgot my father: I know no touch of consanguinity;
No kin, no love, no blood, no soul so near me, As the sweet Troilus.—O you gods divine! Make Troilus' name the very crown of falsehood, If ever she leave Troy! Time, force, and death, Do to this body what extremes you cast; But the strong base and building of my love Is as the very center of the earth, Drawing all things to it.—I'll go in, and weep;---

Pan. Do, do.

Cres. Tear my bright hair, and scratch my prais'd cheeks; Crack my clear voice with sobs, and break my heart

With sounding Troilus. I will not go from Troy.

[Exeunt.}

SCENE III.—The same. Before Pandaruss House.

Enter Paris, Troilus, Æneas, Deiphobus, Antenor, And Diomedes.

Par. It is great morning; and the hour prefix'd Of her delivery to this valiant Greek Comes fast upon:—Good my brother Troilus, Tell you the lady she is to do, And haste her to the purpose.

Tro. I will bring her to the Grecian presently: And to his hand when I do set an altar; And thy brother Troilus A priest, there offering to it his own heart. [Exit. Par. I know what 'tis to love; And 'would, as I shall pity, I could help!— Please you, walk in, my lords.

[Exeunt.]}
SCENE IV. — The same. A Room in Pandarus’ House.

Enter Pandarus and Cressida.

Pan. Be moderate, he moderate.

Cres. Why tell you me of moderation? The grief is fine, full, perfect, that I taste, And violenteth in a sense as strong As that which causeth it: How can I moderate it? If I could temporize with my affection, Or brew it to a weaker and colder paste, The like allevament could I give my grief: My love admits no qualifying dross; No more my grief, in such a precious loss.

Enter Troilus.

Pan. Here, here, here he comes. — Ah, sweet ducks! O Troilus! Troilus! [Embracing him.] Pan. What a pair of spectacles is here! Let me embrace too: O heart, — as the goodly saying is, — a heart, a heavy heart, Why sigh’st thou without breaking? where he answers again, Because thou canst not ease thy smart, By friendship, nor by speaking.

There never was a truer thy name, Let us cast away nothing, for we may live to have need of such a verse; we see it, we see it. — How now, lambs? Tro. Cres. I love thee in so strain’d a purity, That the best gods — as angry with my fancy, More honest in real than the devotion Which cold lips blow to their deities, — take thee from me, Cres. Have the gods envy? Pan. Ay, ay, ay, ay; ’tis too plain a case. Cres. It is true, that I must go from Troy? Tro. A hateful truth.

Cres. What, and from Troilus too? Tro. From Troy, and Troilus.

Cres. And suddenly; where injury of chance Puts back leave-taking, justles roughly by All time of pause, rudely bequilles our lips Of all rejoindre, forcibly prevents Our lack’d embrasures, strangles our dear vows Even in the birth of our own labouring breath: We two, that with so many thousand sighs Did buy each other, must poorly sell ourselves With the rude brevity and discharge of one. Injurious time now, with a robber’s haste, Crims his rich thievry up, he knows not how: As many farewells as be stars in heaven, With distinct breath and consign’d kisses to them, He fumbles up into a loose adieu; And scants us with a single famish’d kiss, Distast’d with the salt of broken tears.

Tro. Hark! you are call’d! — Some say, the Genius so cries, Come! to him that instantly must die. — Bid them have patience; she shall come anon.

Pan. Where are my tears? rain, to lay this wind, or my heart will be blown up by the root? [Exeunt Pandarus.

Cres. I must then to the Greeks? Tro. No remedy.

Cres. A woe full Cressid ’mongst the merry Greeks! When shall we see again?

Tro. Dear, my love: Be thou but true of heart,

Cres. I true! how now? what wicked deem is this?

Tro. Nay, we must use expostulation kindly, For it is parting from us: I speak not, be thou true, as fearing thee; For I will throw my glove to death himself, That there’s no malacation in thy heart: But, be thou true, say I, to fashion in my sequent protestation; be thou true, And I will see thee. Cres. O, you shall be expos’d, my lord, to dangers As infinite as imminent I but, I’ll be true. Tro. And I’ll grow friend with danger. Wear this sleeve.

Cres. And you this glove. When shall I see you?

Tro. I will corrupt the Grecian sentinels, To give thee nightly visitation. But yet, be true.

Cres. O heavens! — be true, again? Tro. Hear why I speak it, love; The Grecian youths are full of quality; They’re loving, well composed, with gifts of nature flowing, And swelling o’er with arts and exercise; Or knowing may now novelty advance, and parts with person, Alas, a kind of godly jealousy (Which, I beseech you, call a virtuous sin,) Makes me afraid.

Cres. O heavens! you love me not.

Tro. Die I a villain then!

In this I do not call your faith in question, So mainly as my merit: I cannot sing, Nor heel the high lavolt, nor sweeten talk, Nor play at subtle games; fair virtues all, To which the Grecians are most prompt and preg- But I can tell, that in each grace of these There lurks a still and dumb-discoursive devil, That tempts most cunningly; but be not tempted. Cres. Do you think, I will? Tro. No.

But something may be done, that we will not; And sometimes we are devils to ourselves, When we will temerity the frailty of our powers, Presuming on their changeful potency.

Ene. [Within.] Nay, good my lord, —

Tro. Come, kiss; and let us part.

Par. [Within.] Brother Troilus! Tro. Good brother, come you hither; And bring Eneas and the Grecian, with you. Cres. My lord, will you be true? Tro. Who I? alas, it is my vice, my fault; While others fish with craft for great opinion, I with great truth catch mere simplicity; Whilst some with cunning gild their copper crowns, With truth and plainness I do wear mine bare. Fear not my truth; the moral of my wit Is — plain, and true, — there’s all the reach of it.

Enter Eneas, Paris, Antenor, Delphous, and Diomedes.

Welcome, sir Diomed! here is the lady, Which for Antenor we deliver you: At the port, lord, I’ll give her to thy hand; And, by the way, possess thee what she is. Entreat her fair; and, by my soul, fair Greek, If e’er thou stand at mercy of my sword, Name Cressid, and thy life shall be as safe As Priam is in Ilion.

Dio. Fair lady Cressid, so please you, save the thanks this prince expects. The lustre in your eye, heaven in your cheek, Plead your fair usage; and to Diomed You shall be mistress, and command him wholly. Tro. Grecian, thou dost not use me courteous, To shame the zeal of my petition to thee, In praising her: I tell thee, lord of Greece, She is as far high-soaring o’er thy praises, As thou unworthy to be call’d her servant. Hear me, thy well, even for my charge: For, by the dreadful Pluto, if thou dost not, Though the great bulk Achilles be thy guard, I’ll cut thy throat.

Tro. O, be not mov’d, prince Troilus. Let me be privilege’d by my place, and message, To be a speaker free; when I am hence, I’ll answer to my lust: And know you, lord, I’ll nothing do on charge: To her own worth
She shall be priz'd; but that you say—be't so,
I'll speak it in my spirit and honour, no.

Trois. Come, to the port.—I tell thee, Diomed,
This brave shall oft make thee to hide thy head.
Lady, give me your hand; and, as we walk,
To our own selves bend we our needful talk.

[Exeunt Troilus, Cressida, and Diomed.]

[Trumpet heard.]

Par. Hark! Hector's trumpet.

Ach. How have we spent this morning?
The prince must think me tardy and remiss,
That swore to ride before him to the field.

Par. 'Tis Troilus' fault: Come, come, to field
with him.

Dei. Let us make ready straight.

Ajax. You carry off a bridegroom's freshness alacrity,
Let us address to tend on Hector's heels:
The glory of our Troy doth this day lie
On his fair worth, and single chivalry.

[Exeunt.]

Enter Ajax, armed; Agamemnon, Achilles, Patroclus, Menelaus, Ulysses, Nestor, and others.

Agam. Here art thou in appointment fresh and fair,
Anticipating time with starting courage.
Give with thy trumpet a loud note to Troy,
Thon dreadful Ajax; that the appalled air
May pierce the head of the great combatant,
And hale him hither.

Ajax. Thou, trumpet, there's my purses.
Now crack thy lungs, and spit thy brazen pipe:
Blow, villain, till thy spher'd bias cheek
Out-swell the choliect of puff'd Aquilion:
Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes spawn blood:

Thon blow'st for Hector.

Ulyss. No trumpet answers, Achilles.

Agam. 'Tis but early days.

Agam. Is not yon Diomed, with Calchas' daughter?

Ulyss. 'Tis he, I ken the manner of his gait;
He rises on the toe: that spirit of his
In aspiration lifts him from the earth.

Enter Diomed, with Cressida.

Agam. Is this the lady Cressid?

Di. Even she.

Agam. Most dearly welcome to the Greeks, sweet lady.

Nest. Our general doth salute you with a kiss.

Ulyss. Yet is the kindness but particular;
'Twere better, she were kiss'd in general.

Nest. And very courteously! I'll begin:
So much for Nestor.

Achil. I'll take that winter from your lips, fair lady:
Achilles bids you welcome.

Men. I had good argument for kissing once.

Patr. But that's no argument for kissing now:
For thus pop'd Paris in his hardiment;
And parted thus you and your argument.

Ulyss. O deadly gall, and theme of all our sorrows!
For which we lose our heads, to yeld his horns.

Patr. The first was Menelaus' kiss;—this, mine:
Patroclus kisses you.

Men. O, this is trim!—

Men. I'll have my kiss, sir—Lady, by your leave.

Cres. In kissing, do you render or receive?

Patr. Both take and give.

Cres. I'll make my match to live,

The kiss you take is better than you give;

Therefore no kiss.

Men. I'll give you boot, I'll give you three for one.

Cres. You're an odd man; give even, or give none.

Men. An odd man, lady? every man is odd.

Cres. No, Paris is not; for, you know, 'tis true,

That you are odd, and he is even with you.

Men. You fillip me o'the head.

Cres. No, I'll be sworn.

Ulyss. It were no match, your nail against his horn.

May I, sweet lady, beg a kiss of you?

Cres. You may.

Ulyss. I do desire it.

Cres. Why, beg then.

Ulyss. Why then, for Venus' sake, give me a kiss,
When Helen is a maid again, and his.

Cres. I am your debtor, claim it when 'tis due.

Ulyss. Never's my day, and then a kiss of you.

Dio. Lady, a word:—I'll bring you to your father.

[Diomed tends out Cressida.]

Nest. A woman of quick sense.

Ulyss. Fye, fye upon her!

There's language in her eye, her cheek, her lip,
Nay, her foot speaks; her wanton spirits look out
At every joint and motive of her body.
O, these encounters, so glib of tongue,
That give a coating welcome ere it comes,
And wide unc Lisp the tables of their thoughts
To every ticklish reader! set them down
For sluttish spoils of opportunity,
And daughters of the game.

[Trumpet within.]

Agam. Yonder comes the troop.

Enter Hector, armed; Æneas, Troilus, and other Trojans, with Attendants.

Æne. Hail, all the state of Greece! what shall be done
To him that victory commands? Or do you purpose
A victor shall be known? will you, the knights
Shall to the edge of all extremity
Pursue each other; or shall they be divided
By any voice or order of the field?

Hector bade ask.

Agam. Which way would Hector have it?

Æne. He cares not, he'll obey conditions.

Achil. 'Tis done like Hector; but securely done,
A little proudly, and great deal misprizing
The knight oppos'd.

Æne. If not Achilles, sir,

What is your name?

Achil. If not Achilles, nothing.

Æne. Therefore Achilles: But, whate'er, know this:

In the extremity of great and little,
Valour and pride excel themselves in Hector;
The one almost as infinite as all,
The other blank as nothing. Weigh him well,
And that, which looks like pride, is courtesy.
This Ajax is half made of Hector's blood.
In love whereof, half Hector stays at home;
Half heart, half hand, half Hector comes to seek
This blended knight, half Trojan, and half Greek.

Achil. A maiden battle then?—O, I perceive you.

Re-enter Diomed.

Agam. Here is sir Diomed:—Go, gentle knight,
Stand by our Ajax: as yon and lord Æneas
Consent upon the order of their fight,
So be it; either to the uttermost,
Or else a breadth: the combatants being kin,
Half stints their strife before their strokes begin.

[Ajax and Hector enter the lists.]

Ulyss. They are oppos'd already.

Agam. What Trojan is that same that looks so

Ulyss. The youngest son of Priam, a true knight;
Not yet mature, yet matchless: firm of word;
Speaking in deeds, and deedless in his tongue;
Not soon provok'd, nor, being provok'd, soon calm'd:
His heart and hand both open, and both free;
For what he has, he gives; what thinks, he shows;
Yet gives he not till judgment guide his bounty,
Nor dignifies an impair thought with breath.

Manly as Hector, but more dangerous.
For Hector, in his blaze of wrath, subscribes
To tender objects; but he, in heat of action,
Is man and valiant as the hero he loves;
They call him Troilus; and on him erect
A second hope, as fairly built as Hector.
Thus says Æneas; one that knows the youth
Even to his inches, and, with private soul,
Did in great Ilius translate him to me.

[Atrum. Hector and Ajax fight.]

Agam. They are in action.

Nest. Now, Ajax, ho'd thine own

Tro. Hector thou sleep'st; awake thee!

Agam. His blows are well dispos'd:—there, Ajax!

Dio. You must no more.

Agam. Princes, enough, so please you.

Ajax. I am not warm yet, let us fight again.

Dio. As Hector pleases.

Hect. Why then, will I no more:
Thou art, great lord, my father's sister's son,
A cousin-german to great Priam's seed;
The obligation of our blood forbids
A gory emulation 'twixt us twain:
Were they communion Greek and Trojan so,
That thou could'st say—This hand is Grecian all,
And this is Trojan: the sinews of this leg
All Greek, and this all Troy: my mother's blood
Runs on the dexter cheek, and this sinister
Bounds-in my father's; by Jove multipotent,
Thou should'st not bear from me a Greekish mem-pin.

Wherein my sword had not impression made
Of our rank feud: But the just gods gainsay,
That any drop thou borrow'st from thy mother,
My sacred aunt, should by my mortal sword
Be drain'd! Let me embrace thee, Ajax:
By him that thunders, thou that lusty arm;
Hector would have them fall upon him thus:
Cousin, all honour to thee!

Ajax. I thank thee, Hector:
Thou art too gentle, and too free a man;
I came to kill thee, cousin, and bear hence
A great addition earned in thy death.

Hect. Not Neoptolomeus so mirable
(On whose bright crest Fame with her loud'st O Cries, This is he), could promise to himself
A thought of added honour borr'n from Hector.

Ente. There is expectation here from both the sides,
What further you will do.

Hect. We'll answer it;
The issue is embracement:—Ajax, farewell.

Ajax. If I might in entreaties find success,
(As said! I have the chance,) I would desire
My famous cousin to our Grecian tents.

Dio. 'Tis Agamemnon's wish, and great Achilles
Doth long to see unarmed the valiant Hector.

Hect. Æneas, call my brother Troilus to me:
And signify this loving interview
To the expecters of our Trojan part;
Desire them home.—Give me thy hand, my cousin;
I will go eat with thee, and see your knights.

Ajax. Great Agamemnon comes to meet us here.

Hect. The worthiest of them tell me by name
But for Achilles, my own searching eyes
Shall find him by his large and portly size.

Agam. Worthy of arms! as welcome as to one
That would be rid of such an enemy;
But that's no welcome: Understand more clear
What's past, and what's to come, is strewd with husks
And formless ruin of oblivion!

But in this extant moment, faith and truth,
Strain'd purely from all hollow bias-drawing,
Bids thee, with most divine integrity,
From heart of very heart, great Hector, welcome.

Hect. I thank thee, most imperative Agamemnon.

Agam. My well-fam'd lord of Troy, no less to thee.

Troilus,

Men. Let me confirm my princely brother's greeting:
You braise up war-like brothers, welcome hither.

Hect. Whom must we answer?

Men. The noble Menelaus.

Hect. O you, my lord? by Mars his gauntlet, thanks.

Mock not, lest thou affect the untraded oath:
You quondam wife swears still by Venus' glove:
She's well, but bade me not commend her to you.

Men. Name her not now, sir; she's a deadly theme.

Hect. O, pardon; I offend.

Nest. I have, thou gallant Trojan, seen thee oft,
Labouring for destiny, make cruel way
Through ranks of Greekish youth: and I have seen thee:
As hot as Persius, spur thy Phrygian steed,
Despising many forfeits and subduements,
When thou hast hung thy advanced sword i'the
Not letting it decline on the declin'd;
[air,
That I have said to some my standers-by,
Lo, Jupiter's is, destiny's life!
And I have seen thee pace, and take thy breath,
When that a ring of Greeks have hemm'd thee in,
Like an Olympian wrestling: This have I seen;
But this thy countenance, still look'd in steel,
I never saw till now, I knew thy grandsire,
And once fought with him: he was a soldier good;
But, by great Mars, the captain of us all,
Never like thee: Let an old man embrace thee;
And, worthy warrior, welcome to our tents.

Ente. 'Tis the old Nestor.

Hect. Let me embrace thee, good old chronicle,
Thou hast so long walk'd in hand in hand with time:
Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to clasp thee.

Nest. I would, my arms could match thee in contention
As they contend with thee in courtesy.

Hect. I would they could.

Na. Ha!
By this white beard, I'll fight with thee to-morrow.
Well, welcome, welcome! I have seen the time—

Ulyss. I wonder now how yonder city stands,
When we have here our base and pillar by us.

Hect. I know your favour, lord Ulysses, well.

Ag. Sir, there's many a Greek and Trojan dead,
Since first I saw yourself and Diomed
In Ilion, on your Grecian embassy.

Ulyss. Sir, I foretold you then what would ensue:
My prophecy is but half his journey yet;
For yonder wall, that partly fronts your town,
Yon towers, whose wonton tops do buss the clouds,
Must kiss their own feet.

Hect. I must not believe you:
There they stand yet; and modestly I think,
The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost
A drop of Grecian blood: The end crowns all;
And that old common arbitrator, time,
Will one day end it.

Ulyss. So to him we leave it.

Most gentle, and most valiant Hector, welcome:
After the general, I beseech you next
To feast with me, and see me at my tent.

Achil. I shall forestall thee, lord Ulysses, thou!
Now, Hector, I have fed mine eyes on thee:
I have with exact view perus'd thee, Hector,
And quoted joint by joint.

Hect. Is this Achilles?

Achil. I am Achilles.

Hect. Stand fair, I pray thee; let me look on thee.

Achil. Behold thy fill.

Hect. Nay, I have done already.

Achil. Thou art too brief; I will the second time.

As I would buy thee, view thee limb by limb.

Hect. O, like a book of sport thou'lt read me o'er;
But there's more in me, than thou understand'st.

Why dost thou so oppress me with thine eye?

Achil. Tell me, you heavens, in which part of his body
ACT V.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus.

Achil. I'll heat his blood with Greekish wine to-night,
Which with my scimitar I'll cool to-morrow.—Patroclus, let us feast him to the height.

Patr. Here comes Thersites.

Enter Thersites.

Achil. How now, thou core of envy?
Thou crusty batch of natrine, what's the news?

Ther. Why, thou picture of what thou seest,
And idol of idiot-worshippers, here's a letter for thee.

Achil. From whence, fragment?

Ther. Why, thou full dish of fool, from Troy.

Patr. Who keeps the tent now?

Ther. The surgeon's box, or the patient's wound.

Patr. Weil said, Avarice! and what need these tricks?

Ther. Pr'ythee be silent, boy; I profit not by thy talk: thou art thought to be Achilles' male varlet.

Patr. Male varlet, you rogue! what's that?

Ther. Why, his masculine whore. Now the rotten diseases of the south, the guts gripping, rupures, catarrhs, loads of gravel, the back, lethargies, cold palest, raw eyes, dirt-rotten livers, wheezing lungs, natal, and the last dust of imposthume, sciatias, limes, kilns, the pale, incurable bone-ache, and the rivelled fee-simple of the better, take and take again such preposterous discoveries!

Patr. Why thou damnable box of envy, thou, what meanest thou to curse thus?

Ther. Do I curse thee?

Patr. Why, no, you riuinous bntt; you whorish indistinguishable cnr, no.

Ther. No? why art thou then exasperate, thou idle foundling of skin of slave silk, thou green sarcenet flap for a sore eye, thou tassel of a prodigal's purse, thou? Ah, how the poor world is pestered with such water-flies; diminutives of nature!

Patr. Out, gaff! Cher. Finch egg!

Achil. My sweet Patroclus, I am thwarted quite From my great purpose in to-morrow's battle.
Here is a letter from queen Hecuba;
A token from her daughter, my fair love;
Both taxing me, and gaging me to keep An oath that I have sworn. I will not break it:
Fall, Greeks: fail, fame; honour, or go, or stay;
My major vow lies here, this I'll obey.
Come, come, Thersites, help to trim my tent;
This night in banqueting must all be spent.—Away, Patroclus.

[Execute Achilles and Patroclus.

Ther. With too much blood, and too little brain, these two may run mad; but if with too much brain, and too little blood, they do, I'll be a curer of madmen. Here's Agamemnon,—an honest fellow enough, and one that loves snails; but he has not so much brain as ear-wax: And the goodly transformation of Jupiter there, his brother, the bull.—A princely, primitive statue, and sublime memorial of cuckolds; a shifty shoeing-horn in a chain, hanging at his brother's leg,—to what form, but that he is, should wit larded with malice, and malice forced with wit, turn him to? To an ass, were nothing; he is both ass and ox: to an ox were nothing; he is both ox and ass. To be a dog, a mule, a cat, a fitchew, a toad, an owl, a pntlock, or a herring without a roe, I would not care: but to be Menelaus,—I would conspire against destiny. Ask me not what I would be, if I were not Thersites: for I care not to be the house of a lizar, so I were not Menelaus.—Hey-day! spirits and fires!

Enter Hector, Troilus, Ajax, Agamemnon, Ulysses, Nestor, Menelaus, and Diomed, with lights.

Agam. We go wrong, we go wrong.

Ajax. No, yonder 'tis;

Patr. There, where we see the lights.

Hect. I trouble you.

Ajax. No, not a whit.

Ulyss. Here comes himself to guide you.

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Welcome, brave Hector; welcome, princes mighty.

Agam. So now, fair prince of Troy, I bid good night.

Hect. Thanks, and good night, to the Greeks general.
Men. Good night, my lord.

Hect. Good night, sweet Menelaus.

Ther. Sweet draught: Sweet, quoth 'a! sweet sink, sweet sewer.

Achil. Good night.

And welcome, both to those that go, or tarry.

Agam. Good night.

[Exeunt Agamemnon and Menelaus.

Achil. Old Nestor tarries; and you too, Diomed, keep Hector company an hour or two.

Dio. I cannot, lord; I have important business, the tide whereof is now.—Good night, great Hector.

Hect. Give me your hand.

[Exeunt.

Tro. Follow his torch, he goes to Calchas' tent; I'll keep you company.

[Aside to Troilus.

Tro. Sweet sir, you honour me.

Hect. And so good night.

[Exit Diomed; Ulysses and Tro. following.

Achil. Come, come, enter my tent.

[Exeunt Achil, Hector, Ajax, and Nest.

Ther. That same Diomed's a false-hearted rogue, a most unjust knave; I will no more trust him when heelects, than I will a serpent when he hisses: he will spend his mouth, and promise, like Brabber the hound; but when he performs, astronomers foretell it; it is prodigious, there will come some change; the sun borrows of the moon, when Diomed keeps his word. I will rather leave to see Hector, than not to dog him! they say, he keeps a Trojan drab, and uses the traitor Calchas' tent: I'll after.—Nothing but lechery! all incontinent varlets!

[Exit.

SCENE II.—The same. Before Calchas' Tent.

Enter Diomedes.

Dio. What, are you up here, ho? speak.

Cal. [Within.] Who calls?

Dio. [Within.] Diomed.—Calchas, I think.—Where's your daughter?

Cal. [Within.] She comes to you.

Enter Troilus and Ulysses, at a distance; after them Thersites.

Ulyss. Stand where the torch may not discover us.

[Enter Cressida.

Tro. Cressida, come forth to him!

Dio. How now, my charge?

Cres. Now, my sweet guardian!—Hark! a word with you.

[Whispers.

Tro. Yes, so familiar!

Ulyss. She will sing any man at first sight.

Ther. And any man may sing her, if he can take her cliff; she's noted.

Dio. Will you remember?

Dio. Nay, but do then; and let your mind be coupled with your words.

Tro. What should she remember?

Ulyss. List!

Cres. Sweet honey Greek, tempt me no more to folly.

Ther. Roguery!

Dio. Nay, then,—

Cres. I'll tell you what:

Dio. Pho! pho! come, tell a pin: You are forsworn.

Cres. In faith, I cannot: What would you have me do?

Ther. A juggling trick, to be—secretly open.

Dio. What did you swear you would bestow on me?

Cres. I pray thee, do not hold me to mine oath; Bid me do any thing but that, sweet Greek.

Dio. Good night.

Tro. Hold, patience!

Ulyss. How now, Trojan?

Cres. Diomed,
Dio. Whose was it?
Cres. By all Diana's waiting women, yonder, And by herself, I will not tell you whose.
Dio. To-morrow will I wear it on my helm; And grieve his spirit, that dares not challenge it.
Tro. Wert thou the devil, and wert it on thy horn, It should be challeng'd.
Cres. Well, well, 'tis done, 'tis past; —And yet it is not;
I will not keep my word.
Dio. Why then, farewell;
Thou never shalt mock Diomed again.
Cres. You shall not go: —One cannot speak a word, But it straight starts you.
Dio. I do not like this fooling.
Ther. Nor I, by Pluto: but that that likes not you, Please me best.
Dio. What, shall I come? the hour?
Cres. Ay, come: —O Jove!
Do come: —I shall be plagu'd.
Farewell till then.
Cres. Good night. I pr'ythee, come.
[Exit Diomedes.
Troilus, farewell! one eye yet looks on thee; But with my heart the other eye doth see.
Ah! poor our sex! this fault in us I find, The error of our eye directs our mind:
What error leads, must err; O then conclude,
Minds, sway'd by eyes, are full of turpitude.
[Exit Cressida.

Ther. A proof of strength she could not publish more,
Unless she said, My mind is now tur'd where.
Ulyss. All's done, my lord.
Tro. It is.
Ulyss. Why stay we then?
Tro. To make a recordation to my soul
Of every syllable that here was spoke.
But, if I tell how these two did co-oper,
Shall I not lie in publishing a truth?
Sith yet there is a credence in my heart,
An esperance so obstinately strong,
That doth invert the attest of eyes and ears;
As if those organs had deceiving functions,
Created only to calumniate.
Was Cressid here?
Ulyss. I cannot conjure, Trojan.
Tro. She was not, sure.
Ulyss. Most sure she was.
Tro. Why, my negation hath no taste of madness.
Ulyss. Nor mine, my lord: Cressid was here but now.
Tro. I am not belter'd for womanhood! I think, we had mothers; do not give advantage To stubborn critics—ap't, without a theme, For depravation,—to square the general sex By Cressid's rule: rather think this not Cressid.
Ulyss. What hath she done, prince, that causeth our mothers?
Tro. Nothing at all, unless that this were she.
Ther. Will he swagger himself out on our eyes?
Tro. This she? no, this is Diomed's Cressida:
If beauty have a soul, this is not she;
If souls guide vows, if vows be sanctimony,
If sanctimony be the gods' delight,
If there be rule in unity itself,
This was not she.  O madness of discourse,
That cause-sets up with and against itself;
Bi-fold authority! where reason can revolt
Without perdition, and loss assume all reason
Without revolt; this is, and is not, Cressid!
Within my soul there doth commence a fight
Of that false nature, that a thing inseparable
Divides more wider than the sky and earth;
And yet the spacious breadth of this division
Admits no orifice for a point, as subtle
As is Arachne's broken woof, to enter.
Instance, O instance! strong as Pluto's gates;
Cressid is mine, tied with the bonds of heaven:
Instinct, O instance! strong as heaven itself;
The bonds of heaven are slipp'd, dissolv'd, and loos'd;
And with another knot, five-finger-tied.
The fractions of her faith, oars of her love,
The fragments, scraps, the bits, and greasy reliques
Of her o'er-eaten faith, are bound to Diomed.
Ulyss. May worthy Troilus be half attach'd
With that which here his passion doth express?
Tro. Ay, Greek; and that shall be divell'd wide
In characters as red as Mars his heart.'
Infam'd with Venus: never did young man fancy
With so eternal and so fix'd a soul.
Hark, Greek; As much as I do Cressid love,
So much by my hate I her Diomed;
That sleeve is mine, that he'll bear on his helm;
Were it a casque compos'd by Vulcan's skill,
My sword should bite it: not the dreadful spout,
Which shipmen do the hurricane call.
Constring'd in mass by the almighty sun,
Shall dizzy with more clamour Neptune's ear
In his descent, than shall my promis'd sword
Falling on Diomed.
Ther. He'll tickle it for his concupis.
Tro. O Cressid! O false Cressid! false, false, false.
Let all untruths stand by thy stained name,
And they'll seem glorious.
Ulyss. O, contain yourself;
Your passion draws ears hither.
[Enter Aeneas.

Aene. I have been seeking you this hour, my lord:
Hector, by this, is arming him in Troy;
Ajax, your guard, stays to conduct you home.
Tro. Have with you, prince!—My courteous lord, adieu:
Farewell, revolted fair! and, Diomed,
Stand fast, and wear a castle on thy head!
Ulyss. I'll bring you to the gates.
Tro. Accept distracted thanks.
[Exit Troilus, Aeneas, and Ulysses.

Ther. Would, I could meet that rogue Diomed! I would croak like a raven; I would bode, I would Dazze, and give me any thing for the in-Telligence of this where: the parrot will not do more for an almond, than he for a commodious Drab. Lecchery, lechery; still, wares and lechery; nothing else holds fashion: A burning devil take them.
[Exit.

Enter Hector and Andromache.

And. When was my lord so much ungently tem-per'd,
To stop his ears against admonishment?
Unarm, unarm, and do not fight to-day.
Hect. You train me to offend you; get you in;
By all the everlasting gods, I'll go.
And. My dreams will, sure, prove ominous to the day.
Hect. No more, I say.
[Enter Cassandra.

Cas. Where is my brother Hector?
And. Here, sister; arm'd, and bloody in intent.
Cousort with me in loud and dear petition,
Pursue we him on knees, for I have dream'd
Of bloody turbulence and nightly combat
Hath nothing been but shapes and forms of
Cas. O, it is true. [slaughter.
Hect. Ho! I bid my trumpet sound!
Cas. No notes of sally, for the heavens, sweet Hect. Begone, I say: the gods have heard me swear.
Cas. The gods are deaf to hot and peevish vows;
They are polluted offerings, more abhor'd
Than spotted livers in the sacrifice.
And. O I be persuaded: Do not count it holy
To hurt by being just: it is as lawful,
For that course would much, to use violent thefts,
And rob in the behalf of charity.
Cas. It is the purpose, that makes strong the vow:
But vows to every purpose must not hold; Unarm, sweet Hector.

Hect. Hold you still, I say; Mine honour keeps the weight of my fate: Life every man holds dear; but the dear man Holds honour far more precious-dear than life.—

Enter Troilus.

How now, young man? mean'st thou to fight to-day?
And. Cassandra, call my father to persuade.

Hect. No, Faith, young Troilus; dott thy har- ness, youth.
I am to-day! the vein of chivalry:
Let grow thy sinews till their knots be strong,
And tempt not yet the brushes of the war.
Unarm thee, go; and doubt thou not, brave boy,
I'll stand, to-day, for thee, and me, and Troy.
Tro. Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you, Which better fits a lion, than a man.
Hect. What vice is that, good Troilus? chide me for it.
Tro. When man is twice the captive Grecians fall,
Even in the fair and wind of your fair sword,
You bid them rise, and live.
Hect. O, 'tis fair play.
Tro. Fool's play, by heaven, Hector.
Hect. How now? how now?
Tro. For the love of all the gods,
Let's leave the hermit pitty with our mother;
And when we have our armours buckled on,
The venom'd vengeance ride upon our swords;
Spur them to ruthless work, rein them from ruth.

Hect. Fye, savage, fye! Hector, then 'tis wars.
Hect. Troilus, I would not have you fight to-day.
Tro. Who should withhold me?
Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars Beckoning with fiery truncheon my retire;
Not Priamus, and Hecuba on knees,
Their eyes o'ergalled with recourse of tears;
Nor you, my brother, with your true sword drawn,
Oppos'd to hinder me, should stop my way,
But by my ruin.

Re-enter Cassandra, with Priam.

Cas. Lay hold upon him, Priam, hold him fast:
He is thy crutch; now if thou lose thy stay,
Thou on him leaning, and all Troy on thee,
Fall all together.

Pri. Come, Hector, come, go back:
Thy wife hath dream'd; thy mother hath had visions;
Cassandra doth foresee; and I myself
Am like a prophet suddenly errant,
To take thee—this to-day is ominous:
Therefore, come back.

Hect. Helen is a field;
And I do stand engag'd to many Greeks,
Even in the faith of valour, to appear
This morning to them.
But thou shalt not go.
Hect. I must not break my faith,
You know me dutiful; therefore, dear sir,
Let me not shame respect; but give me leave
To take that course by your consent and voice,
Which you do here forbid me, royal Priam.
Cas. O Priam, yield not to him.

And. Do not, dear father.
Hect. Andromache, I am offended with you;
Upon the love you bear me, get you in.

[Tro. This foolish, dreaming, superstitious girl Makes all these bodements.

Cas. O farewell, dear Hector.
Look, how thou diest! look, how thy eye turns pale!
Look, how thy wounds do bleed at many vents!
Hark, how Troy roars! how Hecuba cries out!
How poor Andromache shrills her doleurs forth!
Behold, destruction, frenzy, and amazement,
Like wilds and storms in another meet,
And all cry—Hector! Hector's dead! O Hector!

Tro. Away!—Away!

Cas. Farewell.—Yet, soft.—Hector, I take my leave:
Thou dost thyself and all our Troy deceive.

[Tro. Away! The gods with safety stand about thee!

[Exeunt severally Priam and Hector.

Alarums.

Tro. They are at it; hark! Proud Diomed, believe,
I come to lose my arm, or win my sleeve.

As Troilus is going out, enter, from the other side, Pandarus.

Pan. Do you hear, my lord? do you hear?
Tro. What now?
Pan. Here's a letter from you poor girl.
Tro. Let me read.

Pan. A whore's paper, a whoreson picquetick, a whoreson rascally picquetick so troubles me, and the foolish fortune of this girl; and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one of these days: And I have a rheum in mine eyes too; and such an ache in my bones, that, unless a man were cursed, I cannot tell what to think on. What says she there?

Tro. Words, words, mere words, no matter from the heart;

[Tearing the letter.
The effect doth operate another way.
Go, wind, to wind, there turn and change together.

My love with words and errors still she feeds;
But edifies another with her deeds.

[Exeunt severally.

SCENE IV.—Between Troy and the Grecian Camp.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter Thersites.

Thers. Now they are clapper-clawing one another; I'll go look on. That dissembling abominable varlet, Diomed, has got that same scurril dotted foolish young knave's sleeve of Troy there in his helm; I would fain see them meet; that that same young Trojan ass, that loves the whore there, might send that Greekish whoremasterly villain, with the sleeve, back to the dissembling luxurious drab, on a sleeveless errand. O the other side, The policy of those crafty swearing rascals,—that staid old mouse-eaten dry cheese, Nestor; and that same dog-box, Ulysses,—is not proved worth a blackberry:—They set me up, in policy, that mongrel cur, Ajax, against that dog of as bad a kind, Achilles; and now is the cur Ajax prouder than the cur Achilles, and will not arm to-day; whereupon the Grecians begin to proclaim barbarism, and policy grows into an ill opinion. Soft! here come sleeve, and 'other.

Enter Diomedes, Troilus following.

Tro. Fly not; for, shouldst thou take the river Styx,
I would swim after.

Dio. Thou dost miscall retire:
I do not fly; but advantageous care
Withdrew me from the odds of multitude
Fie at thee!

Thers. Hold thy whore, Grecian!—now for thy whore, Trojan!—now the sleeve, now the sleeve!

[Exeunt Troilus and Diomedes, fighting.
Enter Hector.

Hect. What art thou, Greek, art thou for Hector's match?
Art thou of blood, and honour?

Troil. No, no. — I am a rascal; a scurvy railing knav; a very filthy rogue.

Hect. I do believe thee — live. [Exit.

Thee, God-a-mercy, that thou wilt believe me:
But a plague break thy neck, for frightening me!

What's become of the wenching rogues? I think,
They have swallowed one another: I would laugh
At that miracle. Yet, in a sort, lechery eats itself.

I'll seek them. [Exit.

SCENE V. — The same.

Enter Diomedes and a Servant.

Dio. Go, go, my servant, take thou Troilus' horse:

Present the fair steed to my lady Cressid:

Fellow, commend my service to her beauty;
Tell her, I have chastis'd the amorous Trojan,

And am her knight by proof.

Serv. I go, my lord. [Exit Servant.

Enter Agamemnon.

Agam. Renew, renew! The fierce Polydamus
Has beat down Menou: bastard Margarelion

Hath Doreus prisoner:

And stands colossal-wise, waving his beam,

Up on the pashed corses of the kings
Epistrophus and Cedius: Polixenes is slain;

Amphilochus, and Thoas, deadly hurt;

Patroclus' ten, or slain; and Palamedes

Sore hurt and bruised: the dreadful Sagittary

Appals our numbers; haste we, Diomed,

To reinforcement, or we perish all.

Enter Nestor.

Nest. Go, bear the snail-pac'd Ajax arm for shame. —

There is a thousand Hectors in the field:

Now here he fights on Galathe his horse,

And there lacks work; anon, he's there afoot,

And there they fly, or die, like scaled sculls

Before the belching whale; thou is he yonder,

And there the strauny Greeks, ripe for his edge,

Fall down before him, like the mower's swath:

Here, there, and every where, he leaves, and takes;

Dexterity so obeying appetite,

That what he will, he does; and does so much,

That proof is call'd impossibility.

Enter Ulysses.

Ulyss. O courage, courage, princes! great Achilles

Is arming, weeping, cursing, vow'sr vengeance;

Patroclus' wounds have rout'd his drawys blood,

Together with his mangled Myrmidons.

That useless, handless, hack'd and chipp'd, come to him,

Crying on Hector. Ajax hath lost a friend,

And foams at mouth, and he is arm'd, and at it;

Roaring for Troilus; who hath done to-day

Mad and fantastick execution;

Engaging and redeeming of himself,

With such a careless force, and forceless care,

As if that luck, in very spite of cunning,

Bade him win all.

Enter Ajax.

Ajax. Troilus, thou coward Troilus! [Exit.

Dio. Ay, there, there.

Enter Achilles.

Achill. Where is this Hector?

Come, come, thou boy-queller, show thy face;

Know what it is to meet Achilles angry.

Hector! where's Hector? I will none but Hector.

[Exit.

SCENE VI. — Another Part of the Field.

Enter Ajax.

Ajax. Troilus, thou coward Troilus, show thy head!

Enter Diomedes.

Dio. Troilus, I say! where's Troilus?

Ajax. What would'st thou?

Dio. I would correct him.

Ajax. Were I the general, thou should'st have my office,

Ere that correction: — Troilus, I say! what, Troilus!

Enter Troilus.

Tro. O traitor Diomed! turn thy false face, thou traitor.

And pay thy life thou owst me for my horse!

Dio. Ha! art thou there?

Ajax. I'll fight with him alone: stand, Diomed.

Dio. He is my prize. I will not look upon.

Tro. Come both, you coggins Greeks; have at you both.

[Exit.

Enter Hector.

Hect. Yea, Troilus? O well fought, my youngest brother!

Enter Achilles.

Achill. Now do I see thee: — Ha! — Have at thee, Hector.

Hect. Pause, if thou wilt.

Achill. I do disdain thy courtesy, proud Trojan.

Be happy, that my arms are out of use:

My rest and negligence befriended thee now,

But thou anon shalt hear of me again;

Till when, go seek thy fortune. [Exit.

Hect. Fare thee well;

I would have been much more a fresher man,

Had I expected thee. — How now, my brother?

Re-enter Troilus.

Tro. Ajax hath ta'en Eneas; Shall it be?

No, by the flame of yonder glorious heaven,

He shall not carry him; I'll be taken too,

Or bring him off: — Fate, hear me what I say!

I reck not though I end my life to-day. [Exit.

Enter one in sumptuous armour.

Hect. Stand, stand, thou Greek; thou art a goodly mark: —

No? wilt thou not? — I like thy armour well;

I'll brush it, and unlock the rivets all,

But I'll be master of it: — Wilt thou not beast, abide?

Why thee, fly on, I'll hunt thee for thy hide.

[Exit.

SCENE VII. — The same.

Enter Achilles, with Myrmidons.

Achill. Come here about me, you my Myrmidons, mark what I say. — Attend me where I wheel: — Strike not a stroke, but keep your-selves in breath; And when I have the bloody Hector found, Empale him with your weapons round about; In feline manner execute your arms. Follow me, sirs, and my proceedings eye: —

It is decreed: — Hector the great must die.

[Exit.

SCENE VIII. — The same.

Enter Menelaus and Paris, fighting: then Ther.

Thee, the cuckold, and the cuckold-maker are at it: — Now, bull I now, dog! 'Lo, Paris, 'Lo! uow my double-henned sparrow! too, Paris, 'oo! The bull has the game: — 'Ware horns, ho! —

[Exit Paris and Menelaus.
Enter Margareton.

Mar. Turn, slave, and fight.

Thee. What art thou?

Ther. I am a bastard too; I love bastards. I am a bastard begot, bastard instructed, bastard in mind, bastard in valour, in every thing illegitimate. One bear will not bite another, and wherefore should one bastard? Take heed, the quarrel's most ominous to us: if the son of a whore fight for a whore, he tempts judgment; Farewell, bastard.

Mar. The devil take thee, coward!

[Exeunt.

SCENE IX. Another Part of the Field.

Enter Hector.

Hec. Most putrid core, so fair without, Thy goodly armour thus hast cost thy life.

Now is my day's work done: I'll take good breath.

Rest, sword: thou hast thy fill of blood and death.

[Put off his helmet, and hangs his shield behind him.

Enter Achilles and Myrmidons.

Ach. Look, Hector, how the sun begins to set;

How ugly night comes breathing at his heels:

Even with the vail and dark'ning of the sun,

To close the day up, Hector's life is done.

Hec. I am unarmed! forego this vantage.

Ach. Strike, fellows, strike; this is the man I seek.

[Hector falls.

So, Ilion, fall thou next; now, Troy, sink down;

Here lies thy heart, thy sinews, and thy bone.—

On, Myrmidons; and cry ye all amain.

Achilles hath the mighty Hector slain.

[Retreat sounded.

Hark! a retreat upon our Grecian part.

Myr. The Trojan trumpet sounds like my lord.

Achil. The dragon wing of night o'erspreads the earth,

And, sinner like, the armies separate.

My half-supp'd sword, that frankly would have fed,

Pleas'd with this dainty bit, thus goes to bed.—

Sheath his sword.

Come, tie his body to my horse's tail;

Along the field I will the Trojan train.

[Exeunt.

SCENE X.—The same.

Enter Agamemnon, Ajax, Menelaus, Nestor, Diomedes, and others, marching: Shouts within.

Agam. Hark! hark! what shout is that?

Nest. Peace, drums.

[Within.]

Achilles! Achilles; Hector's slain! Achilles!

Dio. The bruit is—Hector's slain, and by Achilles.

Ajax. If it be so, yet bragless let it be;

Great Hector was as good a man as he.

Agam. March patiently along:—Let one be sent

To pray Achilles see us at our tent.—

If in his death the gods have us befriended,

Great Troy is ours, and our sharp wars are ended.

[Exeunt, marching.

SCENE XI.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter Æneas and Trojans.

Æne. Stand, ho! yet are we masters of the field.

Never go home; here starve we out the night.

Enter Troilus.

Tro. Hector is slain.

All. Hector?—The gods forbid!

Tro. He's dead; and at the murderer's horse's tail,

In beastly sort, dragg'd through the shameful field.

Frown on, you heavens, effect your rage with speed!

Sit, gods, upon your thrones, and smile at Troy!

I say, at once let your brief plagues be mercy,

And linger not our sure destructions on!

Ænæs. My lord, you do discomfort all the host.

Tro. You understand me not, that tell me so.

I do not speak of flight, of fear, of death;

But dare all imminence, that gods and men,

Address their dangers in. Hector is gone!

Who shall tell Priam so, or Hecuba?

Let him, that will a screech-owl aye call'd,

Go in to Troy, and say there—Hector's dead:

There is a word will Priam turn to stone;

Make wells and Niobes of the maids and wives,

Cold statues of the youth; and, in a word,

Scare Troy out of itself. But, march away:

Hector is dead; there is no more to say.

Stay yet,—you vile abominable tents,

Thus proudly right upon our Phrygian plains,

Let Titan rise as early as he dare,

I'll through and through you!—And thou, great siz'd coward!

No space of earth shall sunder our two hates;

I'll haunt thee like a wicked conscience still;

That mouldeth goblins swift as frenzy thoughts,—

Strike a free march to Troy!—with comfort go:

Hope of revenge shall hide our inward woe.

[Exeunt Æneas and Trojans.

As Troilus is going out, enter, from the other side, Pandarus.

Pan. But hear you, hear you! Tro. Hence, broker lackey! ignomy and shame
Pursue thy life, and live awe with thy name.

[Exit Troilus.

Pan. A goodly medicine for my aching bones!—
O world! world! world! thus is the poor agent despised! O traitors and barns, how earnestly are you set to work, and how ill requited! Why should our endeavour be so loved, and the performance so loathed? what verse for it? what instance for it?

—Let me see—

Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing,

Till he hath lost his honey, and his sting:

And being once subdued in armed tail,

Sweet honey and sweet notes together fall.—

Good traders in the flesh, set this in your painted cloths.

As many as be here of pandar's hall,

Your eyes, half out, weep out at Pandar's fall;

Or, if you cannot weep, yet give some groans,

Though not for me, yet for your aching bones.

Brothers and sisters, of the hold-door trade,

Some two months hence my will shall here be made:

It should be now, but that my fear is this,—

Some gaUed goose of Winchester would hiss;

Till then I'll sweat, and seek about for eases;

And, at that time, hequeath you my diseases.

[Exit.

SCENE.—Athens; and the woods adjoining.

ACT I.

Enter Poet Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and others, at several doors.

Poet. Good day, sir.

Pain. I am glad you are well.

Poet. I have not seen you long; how goes the world?

Pain. It wears, sir, as it grows.

Poet. Ay, that's well known:

But what particular rarity? what strange,

Which manifold record not matches? see,

Magick of bounty! all these spirits thy power

Hath conjur'd to attend. I know the merchant.

Pain. I know them both; 'tis, other's a jeweller.

Mer. O, 'tis a worthy lord!

Jem. Nay, that's most fix'd.

Mer. A most incomparable man; breath'd, as it were,

To an untirable and continuant goodness:

He passes.

Jem. I have a jewel here.

Mer. O, pray, let's see't. For the lord Timon, sir?

Jem. If he will touch the estimate: But, for that—

Poet. When we for recompense have prais'd the wile,

It stains the glory in that happy verse

Which aptly sings the good.

Mer. 'Tis a good form.
[Looking at the jewel.

Jem. And rich: here is a water, look you.

Pain. You are rapt, sir, in some work, some dedication

To the great lord.

Poet. A thing slipp'd idly from me.

Our poesy is as a gum, which oozes

From whence 'tis nourish'd: The fire 'tis, the flint

Shows not, till it be struck; our gentle flame

Prorogates itself, and, like the current, files

Each bound it chases. What have you there?

Pain. A picture, sir:—And when comes your book forth?

Poet. Upon the heels of my presentment, sir.

Let's see your piece.

Pain. 'Tis a good piece.

Poet. So 'tis: this comes off well and excellent.

Pain. Indifferent.

Poet. Admirable. How this grace

Speaks his own standing! what a mental power

This eye shoots forth! how big imagination

Moves in this lip! to the dumness of the gesture

One might interpret.

Pain. It is a pretty mocking of the life.

Here is a touch: Is't good?

Poet. I'll say of it,

It tutors nature: artificial strike

Lives in these touches, livelier than life.

Enter certain Senators, and pass over.

Pain. How this lord's follow'd?

Poet. The senators of Athens:—Happy men!

Pain. Look, more!

Poet. You see this confusion, this great flood of visitors.

I have, in this rough work, shap'd out a man,

Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hug

With ampest entertainment; My free drift

Halts not particularly, but moves itself

In a wide sea of wax: no level'd malice

Infests one comma in the course I hold;

But flies an eagle flight, bold, and forth on,

Leaving no tract behind.

Pain. How shall I understand you?

Poet. I'll unbolt to you.

You see how all conditions, how all minds,

(As well of glib and slippery creatures, as Of grave and austere quality,) tender down

Their services to lord Timon: his large fortune,

Upon his good and gracious nature hanging,

Subdues and properties to his love and tendance

All sorts of hearts; yes, from the class-fac'd flat-terer

To Apemantus, that few things loves better

Than to abhor himself: even he drops down

The knee before him, and returns in peace

Most rich in Timon's nod.

Pain. I saw them speak together.

Poet. Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hill,

Felt'md Fortune to be thr'd: The base o' the mount

Is rank'd with all deserts, all kind of natures,

That labour on the bosom of this sphere

To propagate their states: amongst them all,

Whose eyes are on this sovereign lady fix'd,

One do I personate of lord Timon's frame,

Whose Fortune with her ivory hand wafts to her;

Whose present grace to present slaves and servants

Translates his rivals.

Pain. 'Tis conceiv'd to scope.

This throne, this Fortune, and this hill, methinks,

With one man beckon'd from the rest below,
Act I.

TIMON OF ATHENS.

541

Bowing his head against the steepy mount
To climb his happiness, would be well express'd
In our condition.

Poet. Nay, sir, but hear me on:
All those which were his fellows but of late,
(Some better than his value,) on the moment
Follow his strifes, his lobbies fill with tendance,
His cheek, official whisper in his ear,
Make sacred even his stirrup, and through him
Drink the free air.

Pain. Ay, marry, what of these?

Poet. When Fortune, in her shift and change of mood,
Spurns down her late beloved, all his dependants,
Which labour'd after him to the mountain's top,
Even on their knees and hands, let him slip down,
Not one accompanying his declining foot.

Pain. 'Tis common:
A thousand moral paintings I can show,
That shall demonstrate these quick blows of fortune
More pregnant than words. Yet you do well,
To show lord Timon, that mean eyes have seen
The foot above the head.

Trumpets sound. Enter Timon, attended; the Servant of Venetidius talking with him.

Tim. Imprison'd is he, say you?

Ven. Serv. Ay, my good lord; five talents is his debt;
His means most short, his creditors most strait:
Your honourable letter he desires
To those have shut him up; which failing to him,
Periods his comfort.

Tim. Noble Venetidius! Well; I am not of that feather, to shake off
My friend when he must need me. I do know him
A gentleman, that well deserves a help,
Which he shall have: I'll pay the debt, and free him.

Tim. Commend me to him: I will send his ransom;
And, being enfanchis'd, bid him come to me:—
'Tis not enough to help the feeble up,
But to support him after. Fare you well.

Ven. Serv. All happiness to your honour! [Exeunt.

Enter an Old Athenian.

Old Ath. Lord Timon, hear me speak.

Tim. Freely, good father.

Old Ath. Thou hast a servant nam'd Lucilius.

Tim. I have so; what of him?

Old Ath. Most noble Timon, call the man before thee.

Tim. Attends he here, or no?—Lucilius!

Enter Lucilius.

Luc. Here, at your lordship's service.

Old Ath. This fellow here, lord Timon, this thy creature,
By night frequents my house. I am a man
That from my first have been inclin'd to throttle
And my estate deserves an heir more rais'd,
Than one which holds a trencher.

Tim. Well; what further?

Old Ath. One only daughter have I, no kin else,
On whom I may confer what I have got;
The maid is fair, o' the youngest for a bride,
And I have bred her at my dearest cost,
In qualities of the best. This man of thine
Attempts her love: I pray thee, noble lord,
Join with me to forbid him her resort;
Myself have spoke in vain.

Tim. The man is honest.

Old Ath. Therefore he will be, Timon: his honesty rewards him in itself;
I must not hear my daughter.

Tim. Does she love him?

Old Ath. She is young, and apt:
Our own precedent passions do instruct us
What levity's in youth.

Tim. [To Lucilius.] Love you the maid?

Luc. Ay, my good lord, and she accepts of it.

Old Ath. It in her marriage my consent be missing,
I call the gods to witness, I will choose
Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world,
And dispossess her all.

Tim. How shall she be endow'd,
If she be mated with an equal husband?

Old Ath. Three talents, on the present; in future, all.

Tim. This gentleman of mine hath serv'd me long;
To build his fortune I will strain a little,
For 'tis a bond in men. Give him thy daughter:
What you bestow, in him I'll counterpoise,
And make him weigh with her.

Old Ath. Most noble lord,
Pawne me to this your honour, she is his.

Tim. My hand to thee; mine honour on my promise.

Luc. Humbly I thank your lordship: Never may
That state or fortune fall into my keeping,
Which is not owed to you!

[Exeunt Lucilius and Old Athenian.}

Poet. Vouchsafe my labour, and long live your lordship:

Tim. I thank you; you shall hear from me anon:
Go not away.—What have you there, my friend?

Pain. A piece of painting, which I do beseech
Your lordship to accept.

Tim. Painting is welcome. The painting is almost the natural man;
For since dishonour trafficks with man's nature,
He is but outside: These pencil'd figures are Even such as they give out. I like your work;
And you shall find, I like it: wait attendance
Till you hear further from me.

Pain. The gods preserve you! Tim. Well fare you, gentlemen: Give me your hand;
We must needs dine together.—Sir, your jewel
Hath suffer'd under praise.

Jew. What, my lord? dispraise?

Tim. A meer satiety of commendations.
If I should pay you for 't as 'tis extoll'd,
It would unclaw me quite.

Jew. As those, which sell, would give: But you well know,
Things of like value, differing in the owners,
Are prized by their masters: believe't, dear lord,
You mend the jewel by wearing it.

Tim. Well mock'd.

Mer. No, my good lord; he speaks the common tongue,
Which all men speak with him.

Tim. Look, who comes here. Will you be chid?

Enter Apemantus.
Apem. Right, if doing nothing be death by the law.

Tim. How likest thou this picture, Apemantus?

Apem. The best, for the innocence.

Tim. Wrought he not well, that painted it?

Apem. He wrought better, that made the painter; and he's but a filthy piece of work.

Pain. You are a dog.

Apem. Thy mother's of my generation; What's she, if I be a dog?

Tim. Wilt dine with me, Apemantus?

Apem. No: I eat not lords.

Tim. An thou should'st, thou'dst anger ladies.

Apem. O, they eat lards; so they come by great bilies.

Tim. That's a lascivious apprehension.

Apem. So thou apprehend'st it: Take it for thy labour.

Tim. How dost thou like this jewel, Apemantus?

Apem. Not so well as plain-dealing, which will not cost a man a doit.

Tim. What dost thou think 'tis worth?

Apem. Not worth my thinking. — How now, poet?

Poes. How now, philosopher?

Apem. Thou liest.

Poes. Art not one?

Apem. Yes.

Poes. Then I lie not.

Apem. Art not a poet?

Poes. Yes.

Apem. Then thou liest: look in thy last work, where thou hast feign'd him a worthy fellow.

Poes. That's not feign'd, he is so.

Apem. Yes, he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour: He, that loves to be flattered, is worthy o'the flatterer. Heavens, that I were a lord!

Tim. What wouldst do then, Apemantus?

Apem. Even as Apemantus does now, hate a lord with my heart.

Tim. What, thyself?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. Wherefore?

Apem. That I had no angry wit to be a lord —

Art not thou a merchant?

Mer. Ay, Apemantus.

Apem. Traffick confound thee, if the gods will not —

Mer. If traffick do it, the gods do it.

Apem. Traffick's thy god, and thy god confound thee!

Trumpets sound. Enter a Servant.

Tim. What trumpet's that?

Ser. 'Tis Alcibiades, and some twenty horse, all of companionship.

Tim. Pray, entertain them; give them guide to your house.

Enter Alcibiades, with his company.

Most welcome, sir! [They salute.

Apem. So, so; there! — A civil contract and starve your supple joints! — That there should be small love 'mongst these sweet knives.

And all this courtly! The strain of man's bred out into baboon and monkey.

Alcib. Sir, you have sav'd my longings, and I feed most hungrily on your sight.

Tim. Right welcome, sir; Ere we depart, we'll share a bounteous time In different pleasures. Pray you, let us in. [Exit some Attendants. Exeunt two Lords.

Enter Two Lords.

1 Lord. What time a day is't, Apemantus?

Apem. Time to be honest.

1 Lord. That time serves still.

Apem. The most accursed thou, that still omit'st it.

2 Lord. Thou art going to lord Timon's feast.

Apem. Ay; to see meat fill knives, and wine heat fools.

2 Lord. Fare thee well, fare thee well.

Apem. Thou, too, a fool, to bid me farewell twice.

2 Lord. Why, Apemantus?

Apem. Shouldst have kept one to thyself, for I mean to give thee none.

1 Lord. Hang thyself.

Apem. No, I will do nothing at thy bidding: make thy requests to thy friend.

2 Lord. Away, unpeaceable dog, or I'll spurn thee hence.

Apem. I will fly, like a dog, the heels of the ass.

Apem. The most accursed thou, that still omit'st it.
Act I.

TIMON OF ATHENS.

Aepm. Let me stay at thine own peril, Timon; I come to observe; I give thee warning on’t.

Tim. I take no heed of them: thou art an Athenian; therefore welcome: I myself would have no power; prythee, let my meat make thee silent.

Aepm. I scorn thy meat; ’twould choke me, for I should Ne'er flatten them.—O you gods! what a number Of men eat Timon, and he sees them not! It grieves me to see so many dip their meat In one man's blood; and all the madness is, He cheers them up too.

I wonder men dare trust themselves with men: Methinks, they should invite them without knives; Good for their meat, and safer for their lives. There's much example for't; the fellow, that Sits next him now, parts bread with him, and pleads The breath of him in a divided draught, Is the readiest man to kill him; it has been prov'd. If I Were a huge man, I should fear to drink at meals; Lest they should spy my windpipe's dangerous notes:

Great men should drink with harness on their throats.

Tim. My lord, in heart; and let the health go round.

2 Lord. Let it flow this way, my good lord.

Aepm. Flow this way! A brave fellow! he keeps his tides well. Timon, Those healths will make thee, and thy state, look all.

Here's truth, which is too weak to be a sinner, Honest water, which ne'er left man: the mere: This, and my food, are equals; there's no odds. Feasts are too proud to give thanks to the gods.

Aepmanus's Grace.

Immortal gods, I crave no self: I pray for no man, but myself: Grant I may never prove so fond, To trust man on his oath or bond; Or a harlot, for her weeping; Or a deg, that seems a sl-peing; Or a keeper with my freedom; Or my friends, if I should need 'em. Amen. So full t'ot: Rich men sin, and I eat root. [Eats and drinks.

Much good dight thy good heart, Apem anus! Tim. Captain Alcibiades, your heart's in the wind.

Alcb. My heart is ever at your service, my lord.

Tim. You had rather be at a breakfast of enemys, than a dinner of friends.

Alcb. So they were bleeding-new, my lord, there's no meat like them; I could wish my best friend at such a feast.

Aepm. 'Would all those flatterers were thine enemies then; that then thou might'st kill 'em, and bid me to 'em.

1 Lord. Might we but have that happiness, my lord, that you would once use our hearts, whereby we might express some part of our zeals, we should think ourselves for ever perfect.

Tim. O, no doubt, my good friends, but the gods themselves have provided that I shall have much help from you: How had you been my friends else? why have you that charitable title from thousands, did you not chiefly belong to my heart? I have told more of you to myself, than you can with modesty speak in your own behalf; and thus far I confirm you. O, you gods, think I what need we have any friends, if we should never have need of them? they were the most needless creatures living, should we ne'er have use for them? and what would most resemble sweet instruments hung up in cases, that keep their sounds to themselves. Why, I have often wished myself poorer, that I might come nearer to you. We are born to do benefits: and what better or properer can we call our own than the riches of our friends? O, what a precious comfort 'tis to have so many like brothers, commanding one another's fortunes! O joy, 'e'en made away ere it can be born! Mine eyes cannot hold out water, methinks; to forget their faults, I drink to you.

Aepm. Thee woeapest to make them drink, Timon.

2 Lord. Joy had the like conception in our eyes, And, at that instant, like a babe sprung up.

Aepm. Ho, ha! I laugh to think that babe a bastard.

3 Lord. I promise you, my lord, you mov'd me much.

Aepm. Much! [Tucket sounded. Tim. What means that trump?—How now?

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Please you, my lord, there are certain ladies most desirous of admittance.

Tim. Ladies? What are their wills?

Serv. There comes with them a forerunner, my lord, which bears that office, to signify their pleasures.

Tim. I pray, let them be admitted.

Enter Cupid.

Cup. Hail to thee, worthy Timon;—and to all That of his bounties taste!—The five best senses Acknowledge thee their patron; and come freely To congratulate thy plenteous bosom: The ear, Taste, touch, smell, all pleas'd from thy table rise; They only now come but to feast thine eyes.

Tim. They are welcome all; let them have kind admittance.

Musick, make their welcome. [Exit Cupid.

1 Lord. You see, my lord, how ample you are belov'd.

Musick. Re-enter Cupid, with a masque of Ladies as Amazons, with lutes in their hands, dancing, and playing.

Aepm. Hey day, what a sweep of vanity comes this way!

They dance! they are mad women.
Like madness is the glory of this life,
As this pomp shows to a little oil, and root.
We make ourselves fools, to disport ourselves;
And spend our flatteries, to drink those men,
Upon whose age we void it up again,
With poisonous spite, and envy. Who lives, that's field,

Depraved, or depravers? who dies, that bears Not one spurn to their graves of their friends' gift? I should fear, those, that dance before me now,
Would one day stamp upon me: It has been done;
Men shut their doors against a setting sun.

The Lords rise from table, with much adoring of Timon; and, to show their loves, each single out an Amazon, and all dance, men with women, a lusty strain or two to the hautboys, and cornet.

Tim. You have done our pleasures much grace, fair ladies,

Set a fair fashion on our entertainment,
Which was not half so beautiful and kind;
You have added worth unto't, and lively lustre,
And entertain'd me with mine own device;
I am to thank you for it.

Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet
Attends you: Please you to dispose yourselves.

All Lad. Most thankfully, my lord.

Tim. Flavius,—

Flav. My lord.

Tim. The little casket bring me hither.

Flav. Yes, my lord.—More jewels yet! There is no crossing him in his humour; [Aside.
Else I should tell him.—Well,—if'faith, I should,
When all's spent, he'd be cross'd then, an he could.
'Tis pitty, bounty had not eyes behind;
That man might ne'er be wretched for his mind.
[Exit, and returns with the casket.
1 Lord. Where be our men?
Serv. Here, my lord, in readiness.
2 Lord. Our horses.
Tim. —Oh my friends, I have one word
To say to you:—Look you, my good lord, I must Entreat you, honour me so much, as to Advance this jewel;
Accept, and wear it, kind my lord.
1 Lord. I am so far already in your gifts,—
All. So are we all.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord, there are certain nobles of the senate
Newly alighted, and come to visit you.
Tim. They are fairly welcome.
Flav. I beseech your honour,
Vouchsafe me a word; it does concern you near.
Tim. Near; why then another time I'll hear
I pray thee, let us be provided
To show them entertainment.
Flav. I scarce know how.
[Aside.

Enter another Servant.

2 Serv. May it please your honour, the lord Lucas,
Out of his free love, hath presented to you
Four milch horses, trap'd in silver.
Tim. I shall accept them fairly: let the presents
Enter a third Servant.

He worthily entertain'd.—How now, what news?
3 Serv. Please you, my lord, that honourable gentleman, lord Lucullus, entreats your company to-morrow to hunt with him; and has sent your honour two brace of greyhounds.
Tim. I'll hunt with him; and let them be re-
ceiv'd,
Not without fair reward.
Flav. [Aside.] What will this come to?
He commands us to provide, and give great gifts,
And all out of an empty coffer.—
Nor will he know his purse for any good;
His promises fly so beyond his state,
That what he speaks is all in debt, he owes
For every word; he is so kind, that he now
Pays interest for't: his land's put to their books.
Well, 'would I were gently put out of office,
Before I were forc'd out!
Hapless is he that has no friend to feed,
Than such as do even enemies exceed.
I blead inwardly for my lord. [Exit.
Tim. You do yourselves
Much wrong, you bate too much of your own merits:
Here, my lord, a trifle of our love.
2 Lord. With more than common thanks I will receive it.
3 Lord. O, he is the very soul of bounty!
Tim. And now I remember me, my lord, you gave Good words the other day of a bay courser
I rode on: it is yours, because you lik'd it!
2 Lord. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, in that.
Tim. You may take my word, my lord; I know no man
Can justly praise, but what he does affect:
I weigh my friend's affection with mine own;
I'll tell you true. I'll call on you.
All Lords. None so welcome.
Tim. I take all and your several visitations
So kind to heart, 'tis not enough to give:
Methinks, I could deal kingdoms to my friends,
And ne'er be weary.—Alcibiades,
Thou art a soldier, therefore seldom rich,
But comes in charity to thee: for all thy living
Is 'mongst the dead; and all the lands thou hast
Lie in a pitch'd field.
Alcib. Ay, defiled land, my lord.
1 Lord. We are so virtuously bound,—

Am I to you?
2 Lord. So infinitely endear'd—
Tim. All to you.—Lights, more lights.
1 Lords. The best of happiness,
Honour, and fortunes, keep with you, lord Timon!
Tim. Ready for his friends.
[Exit Alcibiades, Lords, &c.

What a coil's here!
Serving of beasts, and jutting out of bums!
I doubt whether their legs be worth the sums
That are given for 'em. Friendship's full of dregs:
Methinks, false hearts should never have sound legs.
Thus honest fools lay out their wealth on court-
sies.
Tim. Now, Apeamanus, if thou wert not sullen,
I'd be good to thee.
Ape'm. No, I'll nothing: for
If I should be brib'd too, there would be none left
To rate upon thee; and then thou would'st sin the faster.
Thou giv'st so long, Timon, I fear me, thou
Wilt give away thyself in paper shortly
What need these feasts, pomp's, and vain glories?
Tim. Nay,
As thou begin to rail on society once,
I am sworn, not to give regard to you.
Farewell; and come with better msick. [Exit.
Ape'm. So—
Thou'lt not hear me now,—thou shalt not then,
Thy heart from thee. O, that men's ears should be
To counsel deaf, but not to flattery! [Exit.

* ACT II.

SCENE I.—The same. A Room in a Senator's House.

Enter a Senator, with papers in his hand.

Sen. And late, five thousand to Varro; and to Isidore
He owes nine thousand; besides my former sum,
Which makes it five and twenty.—Still in motion
Of raging waste? It cannot hold; it will not. If I want gold, steal but a beggar's dog,
And give it Timon, why, the dog coins gold:
If I would sell my horse, and buy twenty more
Better than he, why, give my horse to Timon,
Ask nothing, give it him, it foals me, straight,
And able horses: No potter at his gate;
But rather one that smiles, and still invites
All that pass by. It cannot hold; no reason
Can found his state in safety. Caphis, he! Caphis, I say!

Enter Caphis.

Cap'his. Here, sir; what is your pleasure?
Sen. Get on your cloak, and haste you to lord Timon;
Importune him for my monies; be not rece'd
With slight denial; nor then silenced, when—
Commend me to your master—and the cap
Plays in the right hand, thus:—but tell him,
Sirrah,
My uses cry to me, I must serve my turn
Out of mine own; his days and times are past,
And my reliances on his fracted dates
Have smit my credit: I love, and honour him;
But must not break my back, to heal his finger:
Immediate are my needs; and my relief
Must not be toss’d and turn’d to me in words,
But find supply immediate. Get you gone:
Put on a most important aspect,
A visage of demand; for, I do fear,
When every feather sticks in his own wing,
Lord Timon will be left a naked gull,
Which flashes now a phoenix. Get you gone.

SCENE II.—The same, A Hall in Timon’s House.

Enter Flavius, with many bills in his hand.

Flav. No care, no stop! so senseless of expence,
That he will neither know how to maintain it,
Nor cease his flow of riot: Takes no account
How things go from him; nor resumes no care
Of what is to continue; Never mind
Was to be so unwise, to be so kind.

What shall be done? I’er will not hear, till feel:
I must be round with him, now he comes from hunting.

Fye, fye, fye, fye!

Enter Caphis, and the Servants of Isidore and Varro.

Caph. Good even, Varro: What, you
Come for money?

Var. Serv. Is’t not your business too?

Caph. It is;—and yours too, Isidore?

Isid. Serv. It is so.

Caph. ‘Would we were all discharg’d!

Var. Serv. I fear it.

Caph. Here comes the lord.

Enter Timon, Alcibiades, and Lords, &c.

Tim. So soon as dinner’s done, we’er forth again,
My Alcibiades.—With me? What’s your will?

Caph. My lord, here is a note of certain dues.

Tim. Dues? whence are you?

Caph. Of Athens here, my lord.

Tim. Go to my steward.

Caph. Please it your lordship, he hath put me off
To the succession of new days this month:
My master is awak’d by great occasion,
To call upon his own; and humbly prays you,
That with your other noble parts you’ll suit,
In giving him his right.

Tim. Mine honest friend,
I pray thee, but repair to me next morning.

Caph. Nay, good my lord,—

Tim. Contain thyself, good friend.

Var. Serv. One Varro’s servant, my good lord,—

Isid. Serv. From Isidore;
He humbly prays your speedy payment,—

Var. Serv. T’was due on forfeit, my lord, six weeks,
And past;—

Isid. Serv. Your steward puts me off, my lord;—
And I am sent expressly to your lordship.

Tim. Give me breath:—

I do beseech you, good my lords, keep on;—

[Exeunt Alcibiades and Lords.]

I’ll wait upon you instantly.—Come hither, pray you,
How goes the world, that I am thus encounter’d
With clamorous demands of date-broke bonds,
And the detention of long since-due debts,
Against my honour?

Flav. Please you, gentlemen,
The time is unagreeable to this business:
Your importunity cease tills after dinner;

That I may make his lordship understand
Wherefore you are not paid.

Tim. See them well entertained. Do so, my friends:

Flav. I pray, draw near.

[Exit Flavius.

Enter Apeamantus and a Fool.

Caph. Stay, stay, here comes the fool with Apeamantus;
let’s have some sport with ‘em.

Var. Serv. Hang him, he’ll abuse us.

Isid. Serv. A plague upon him, dog!

Var. Serv. How dost, fool?

Apeam. Dost thou dare with thy shadow?

Var. Serv. I speak not to thee.

Apeam. No; ‘tis to thyself.—Come away.

Isid. Serv. [To the Fool.

There’s the fool hangs on your back already.

Apeam. No, thou stand’st single, thou art not on him yet.

Caph. Where’s the fool now?

Apeam. He last asked the question.—Poor rogues and usurers’ men! bawds between gold and want! All Serv. What are we, Apeamantus?

Apeam. Asses.

All Serv. Why?

Apeam. That you ask me what you are, and do not know yourselves.—Speak to ’em, fool.

Fool. How do you, gentlemen?

All Serv. Gramercies, good fool: How does your mistress?

Fool. She’s even setting on water to scald such chinks as you are. ‘Would we could see you at Corinth.

Apeam. Good! gramercies.

[Exit Page.

Fool. Look you, here comes my mistress’ page.

Page. [To the Fool.] Why, how now, captain? what do you in this wise company? How dost thou, Apeamantus?

Apeam. ‘Would I had a rod in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably.

Page. Pr’ythee, Apeamantus, read me the supercription of these letters; I know not which is which.

Apeam. Canst not read?

Page. No.

Apeam. There will be little learning die then, that day thou art hanged. This is to lord Timon; this to Alcibiades. Go; thou wast born a bastard, and thou’lt die a bawd.

Page. Thou wast whelped a dog; and thou shalt famish, a dog’s death. Answer not, I am gone.

[Exit Page.

Apeam. Even so thou out-rust’st grace. Fool, I will go with you to lord Timon’s.

Fool. Will you leave me there?

Apeam. If Timon stay at home.—You three serve three usurers?

All Serv. Ay; ’would they served us!

Apeam. So would I,—as good a trick as ever hangman served thief.

Fool. Are you three usurers’ men?

All Serv. Ay, fool.

Fool. I think, no usurer but has a fool to his servant: My mistress is one, and I am her fool. When men come to borrow of your masters, they approach sadly, and go away merry; but they enter my mistress’ house merrily, and go away sadly: The reason of this?

Var. Serv. I could render one.

Apeam. Do it then, that we may account thee a whoremaster, and a knave; which notwithstanding, thou shalt be no less esteemed.

Var. Serv. What is a whoremaster, fool?

Fool. A fool in good clothes, and something like thee. ’Tis a spirit: sometime, it appears like a lord; sometime, like a lawyer; sometime, like a philosopher, with two stones more than his artifical one: He is very often like a knight; and, generally, in all shapes, that man goes up and down in, from one to the thirteenth, this spirit walks in.

Par. Serv. Thou art not altogether a fool.

Fool. Nor thou altogether a wise man: as much follyer as I have, so much wit thou lackest.

Apen. That answer might have become Aperatus.

All Serv. Aside, aside; here comes lord Timon.

Re-enter Timon and Flavius.

Apen. Come, with me, fool, come.

Fool. I do not always follow lover, elder brother, and woman; sometimes, the philosopher.

[Exit Aperatus and Fool.

Flav. 'Pray you, walk near; I'll speak with you anon.

[Exit Serv.

Tim. You make me marvel: Wherefore, ere this I had you not fully laid my state before me; time, That I might so have rated my expence, As I had left of means?

Flav. You would not hear me?

At many leisures I proposed.

Tim. Go to:

Perchance, some single vantages you took,

When my indisposition put you back;

And that unaptness made your minister,

Thus to excuse yourself.

Flav. O my good lord!

At many times I brought in my accounts,

Laid them before you; you would throw them off,

And say, you found them in mine honesty.

When, for some trifling present, you had bid me return; I have shook my head, and wept;

Yet, against the authority of masters, pray'd you

To hold your hand more close; I did endure

Not seldom, nor no slight checks; when I have Prompted you, in the ebb of your estate,

And your great flow of debts.

My dear-lov'd lord,

Though you hear now, (too late!) yet now's the time,

The greatest of your having lacks a half

To pay your present debts.

Tim. Let all my land be sold.

Flav. 'Tis all engag'd, some forfeited and gone;

And what remains will hardly stop the mouth

Of present dues: the future comes apace:

What shall defend the interim? and at length

How goes our reckoning?

Tim. To Lacedaemon did my land extend.

And lord Flaminius, the world is but a word;

Were it all yours, to give it in a breath,

How quickly were it gone?

Tim. You tell me true.

Flav. If you suspect my husbandry, or falsehood,

Cal me a thief, or what extreme.

And set me on the proof.

So the gods bless me,

When all our offices have been oppress'd

With riotous feeders: when our vaults have wept

With drunken saplire of wine; when every room

Hath blaz'd with lights, and bray'd with minstrel.

I have retir'd me to a wasteful cock,

And set mine eyes at flow.

Tim. Pr'ythee, no more.

Flav. Heavens, have I said, the bounty of this lord!

How many prodigal bits have slaves, and peasants,

This night englutt'd? Who is not Timon's?

What head, heart, sword, force, means, but is lord Timon's?

Great Timon, noble, worthy, royal Timon?

Ah! when the means are gone, that buy this praise,

The breath is gone whereof this praise is made:

Feast-won, fast-lost; one cloud of winter showers,

These flies are coach'd.

Tim. Come, sermon me no further:

No villainous bounty yet hath pass'd my heart;

Unwisely, not ignobly, have I given.

Why dost thou weep? Canst thou the conscience lose?

To think I shall lack friends? Scence thy heart;

If I would breach the vesseis of my love,

And try the argument of hearts by borrowing,

Men, and men's fortunes, could I frankly use,

As I can bid thee spare.

Flav. Assurance bless your thoughts!

Tim. And, in some sort, these wants of mine are crown'd,

That I account them blessings; for by these

Shall I know friends: You shall perceive, how you

Misake my fortunes; I am wealthy in my friends,

Within there, ho! Flaminius! Servilius!

Enter Flaminius, Servilius, and other Servants.

Serv. My lord, my lord,—

Tim. I will dispatch you severally.—You, to lord Lucullus,—

To lord Lucullus yon; I hunted with his

Honour to-day,—you, to Sempronius;

I commend me to their loves; and, I am proud, say,

That my occasions have found time to use them

Toward a supply of money: let the request

Be fifty talents.

Flam. As you have said, my lord.

Flam. Lord Lucius, and lord Lucullus? hump!

[Aside.

Tim. Go you, sir, to another Serv. to the se-

ators,

(Of whom, even to the state's best health, I have Deserv'd this hearing,) bid 'em send o' the instant

A thousand talents to me.

Flav. I have been bold,

(For that I knew it the most general way,)

To them to use your signet, and your name;

But they do shake their heads, and I am here

No richer in return.

Tim. Is't true? can it be?

Flav. They answer, in a joint and corporate voice,

That now they are at fall, want treasure, cannot

Do what they would; are sorry—you are honour-

bles, but

But yet they had wish'd—th' know not—

Something hath been amiss—a noble nature

May catch a wrench—would all were well—ti;

And so, intending other serious matters,

After distasteful looks, and these hard fractions,

With certain half-caps, and cold-moving nods,

They froze me into silence.

Tim. You gods, reward them

I pr'ythee, man, look cheerly;

These old fellows

Have their good lord, the world is but a word;

Their blood is cak'd, 'tis cold, it seldom flows;

'Tis lack of kindly warmth, they are not kind;

And nature, as it grows again toward earth,

Is fashion'd for the journey, dull, and heavy.

Go to your affairs.

Flav. Pr'ythee, to Flavius, be not sad.

Thou art true, and honest; ingeniously I speak,

No blame belongs to thee; to a Serv. Ventidius lately

Buried his father; by whose death, he's stepp'd

Into a great estate: when he was poor,

Imprison'd, and in scarcity of friends,

I clear'd him with five talents: Greet him from me;

Bid him suppose, some good necessity

Touches his friend, which craves to be remember'd

With these five talents;—that had—[to Flav.]

Give it these fellows.

To whom 'tis instant due. Ne'er speak, or think,

That Timon's fortune 'mong his friends can sink.

Flav. I would, I could not think it; That thought

Is bounty's foe;

Being free itself, it thinks all others so.

[Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The same. A Room in Lucullus's House.

Flaminius waiting. Enter a Servant to him.

Serv. I have told my lord of you, he is coming down to you.

Flam. I thank you, sir.
Enter Lucius.

Serv. Here's my lord.

Luc. [Aside.] One of lord Timon's men? a good warrant. Why, this hits right; I dreamt of a silver bason and even to-night. Flaminius, honest Flaminius; you are very respectfully well, sir. Fill me some wine. [Exit Servant.] And how does that honourable complete, free-hearted gentleman of Athens, thy very bountiful good lord and master?![Flam.]

Flam. His health is well, sir.

Luc. I am right glad that his health is well, sir: And what hast thou there under thy cloak? Some play, Flaminius?

Flam. 'Faith, nothing but an empty box, sir: which, in my lord's behalf, I come to entreat your honour to supply; who, having great and instant occasion to use fifty talents, hath sent to your lordship to furnish him; nothing doubting your present assistance therein.

Luc. La, la, la, la,—nothing doubting, says he? alas, good lord! a noble gentleman 'tis, if he would not keep so good a house. Many a time and often, I have heard him speak, and told him on't and come again to supper to him, of purpose to have him spend less: and yet he would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming. Every man has his fault, and honesty is his; I have told him on't, but I could never get him from it.

Re-enter Servant, with wine.

Serv. Please your lordship, here's the wine.

Luc. Flaminius, I have noted thee always wise. Here's to thee.

Flam. Your lordship speaks your pleasure.

Luc. I have observed thee always for a towardly, plain-spoken spirit,—give thee thy meed and one that knows what belongs to reason; and cannot use the time well, if the time use thee well: good parts in thee. —Get you gone, sirrah. [To the Servant, who goes out.] —Draw nearer, honest Flaminius. Thy lord's a bountiful gentleman; but thou art wise; and thou knowest well enough, although thou comest to me, that this is no time to lend money: especially upon bare friendship, without security. Here's three solidaries for thee; good boy, wink at me, and say I saw 't with mine. Fare thee well.

Flam. Is't possible, the world should so much differ: And we alive, that liv'd? Fly, damned baseness, To him that worshippeth thee. [Throwing the money away.]

Luc. Hal! now I see, thou art a fool, and fit for thy master. [Exit Lucillus.

Flam. May these add to the number that may scald thee!

Let molten coin be thy damnation, Thou disease of a friend, and not himself! Has friendship such a faint and milky heart, It turns in less than two nights? O you gods, I feel my master's passion! This slave Unto his honour, has my lord's meat in him: Why should it thrive, and turn to nutriment, When he is turn'd to poison? O, may diseases only work upon! And, when he is sick to death, let not that part of nature Which my lord paid for, be of any power To expel sickness, but prolong his hour! [Exit.}

Enter Lucillus, with Three Strangers.

Luc. Who, the lord Timon? he is my very good friend, and an honourable gentleman. 1 Stran. We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one thing, my lord, and which I hear from common rumours; now lord Timon's happy hours are done and past, and his estate shrinks from him.

Luc. Fye no, do not believe it, he cannot want for money.

2 Stran. But believe you this, my lord, that not long ago, one of his men was with the lord Lucillus, to borrow so many talents; nay, urged extremely for't, and showed what necessity belonged to't, and yet was denied.

Luc. How?

2 Stran. I tell you, denied, my lord.

Luc. What a strange case was that? now, before the gods, I am asham'd on't. Denied that honourable man? there was very little honour showed in't. For my own part, I must needs confess, I have received some small kindesses from him, as money, plate, jewels, and such like trifles, nothing comparing to his; yet, had he mistook him, and sent to me, I should ne'er have denied his occasion so many talents.

Enter Servillus.

Ser. See, by good hap, yonder's my lord; I have sweet to see his honour.—My honoured lord,—

Luc. Servillus! you are kindly met, sir. Fare thee well — Commend me to thy honourable- virtuous lord, my very exquisite friend.

Ser. May it please your honour, my lord hath sent—

Luc. Ha! what has he sent? I am so much en- deared to that lord; he's ever sending: How shall I thank him, thinketh thou? And what has he sent now?

Ser. He has only sent his present occasion now, my lord; requesting your lordship to supply his instant use with so many talents.

Luc. I know, his lordship is but merry with me; He cannot want fifty-five hundred talents.

Ser. But in the mean time he wants less, my lord.

If his occasion were not virtuous, I should not urge it half so faithfully.

Luc. Dost thou speak seriously, Servillus?

Ser. Upon my soul, 'tis true, sir.

Luc. What a wicked beast was I, to disfurnish myself against such a good time, when I might have shown myself honourable! how unluckily it happened, that I should purchase the day before for a little part, and undo a great deal of honour!—Servillus, now before the gods, I am not able to do't; the more beast, I say—I was sending to use lord Timon myself, these gentlemen can witness; but I would not, for the wealth of Athens, I had done it now. Commend me bountifully to his good lordship, and I hope, his honour will con- ceive the fairest of me, because I have no power to be kind: —And tell him this from me, I count it one of my greatest afflictions; say, that I cannot pleasure such an honourable gentleman. Good Servillus, will you befriend me so far, as to use mine own words to him?

Ser. Yes, sir, I shall.

Luc. I will look you out a good turn, Servillus. —True, as you said, Timon is shrunk; indeed; And he, that's once denied, will hardly speed. [Exit Lucillus.

1 Stran. Do you observe this, Hostillus?

2 Stran. Ay, too well.

1 Stran. Why this? Is the world's soul; and just of the same piece Is every flatterer's spirit. Who can call him His friend, that dips in the same dish? for, in My knowing, Timon has been this lord's father, And kept his credit with his purse: Supported his estate; nay, Timon's money Has paid his men their wages: He ne'er drinks, But Timon's silver treads upon his lip; And yet, (O, see the monstrousness of man) The he looks out in an ungrateful shape: He does deny him, in respect of his, What charitable men afford to beggars.

3 Stran. Religion groans at it.
TIMON OF ATHENS.

Act 3.

TIMON

I never tasted Timon in my life.
Nor gave any of his bounties over me,
To mark me for his friend; yet, I protest,
For his right noble mind, illustrious virtue,
And honourable carriage,
Had his necessity made use of me,
I would have put my wealth into donation,
And the best half should have return'd to him,
So much I love his heart; But, I perceive,
Men must learn now with pity to dispense:
For policy sits above conscience.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The same. A Room in Sempronius’s House.

Enter Sempronius, and a Servant of Timon’s.

Serv. Must he needs trouble me in’t? Humph!
‘Bove all others?
He might have tried lord Lucius, or Lucullus;
And now Ventidius is wealthy too,
Whom he redeem’d from prison: All these three
Owe their estates unto him.

Serv. O my lord,
They have all been touch’d, and found base metal;
for
They have all denied him!
Serv. How have they denied him?
Has Ventidius and Lucullus denied him?
And does he send to me? Three? Humph!—
It shows but little love or judgment in him.
Must I be his last refuge? His friends, like physicians,
Thrive, give him over; Must I take the cure upon me?
He has much disgrac’d me in’t; I am angry at him,
That might have known my place: I see no sense for’t,
But his occasions might have woo’d me first;
For, in my conscience, I was the first man
That e’er received gift from him:
And does he think so backwardly of me now,
That I’ll require it last? No; so it may prove
An argument of laughter to the rest,
And amongst the lords he thought a fool.
I had rather than the worth of thrice the sum,
He had sent to me first, but for my mind’s sake;
I had such a courage to do him good. But now return,
And with their faint reply this answer join;
Who bates mine honour, shall not know my coin.

Serv. Excellent! Your lordship’s a goodly villain.
The devil knew not what he did, when he made man politick; he crossed himself by’t: and I cannot think, but, in the end, the villainies of man will set him clear. How fairly this lord strives to appear foul? takes virtuous copies to be wicked; like those that, under hot, ardent zeal, would set whole realms on fire.
Of such a nature is his politick love.
This was my lord’s best hope; now all are fled,
Save the gods only: Now his friends are dead,
Doors, that were never acquainted with their wards.
Many a bounteous year, must be employ’d
Now to guard sure their master.
And this is all a liberal course allows;
Who cannot keep his wealth, must keep his house.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.—The same. A Hall in Timon’s House.

Enter Two Servants of Varro, and the Servant of Lucius, meeting Titus, Hortensins, and other Servants to Timon’s creditors, waiting his coming out.

Var. Serv. Well met; good-morrow, Titus and Hortensins.

Tit. The like to you, kind Varro.

Hor. What, do we meet together?

Luc. Serv. Ay, and, I think,
One business doth command us all; for mine is money.

Tit. So is theirs and ours.

Enter Philotus.

Luc. Serv. Philotus too!

Phi. Good day at once.

Luc. Serv. Welcome, good brother,
What do you think the hour?

Phi. Labouring for mine.

Luc. Serv. So much?

Phi. Is not my lord seen yet?

Luc. Serv. Not yet.

Phi. I wonder on’t; he was wont to shine at seven.

Luc. Serv. Ay, but the days are waxed shorter with him:
You must consider, that a prodigal course
Is like the sun’s; but, not, like his, recoverable.
I fear,
’Tis deepest winter in lord Timon’s purse;
That is, one may reach deep enough, and yet
Find little.

Phi. I am of your fear for that.

Tit. I’ll show you how to observe a strange event,
Your lord sends now for money.

Hor. Most true, he does.

Tit. And he wears jewels now of Timon’s gift,
For which I wait for money.

Hor. It is against my heart.

Luc. Serv. Mark, how strange it shows,
Timon in this should pay more than he owes:
And e’en as if your lord should wear rich jewels,
And send for money for ‘em.

Hor. I am weary of this charge, the gods can witness:
I know, my lord hath spent of Timon’s wealth,
And now ingratitude makes it worse than theft.

1 Var. Serv. Yes, mine’s three thousand crowns:
What’s yours?

Luc. Serv. Five thousand mine.

1 Var. Serv. ’Tis much deep: and it should seem by the sum,
Your master’s confidence was above mine;
Else, surely, his had equal’d.

Enter Flaminius.

Tit. One of lord Timon’s men.

Luc. Serv. Flaminius! sir, a word: ’Pray, is my lord ready to come forth?

Flam. No, indeed, he is not.

Tit. We attend his lordship; ’pray, signify so much.

Flam. I need not tell him that; he knows, you are too diligent.

[Exit Flaminius.

Enter Flavius, in a cloak, muffled.

Luc. Serv. Ha? is not that his steward muffled so?

He goes away in a cloud: call him, call him.

Tit. Do you hear, sir?

1 Var. Serv. By your leave, sir,——

Flav. What do you ask of me, my friend?

Tit. We wait for certain money here, sir.

Flav. A?

If money were as certain as your waiting,
Twere sure enough. Why then prefer’d you not
Your sums and bills, when your false masters eat
Of my lord’s meat? Then they could smile, and fawn
Upon his debts, and take down th’ interest
Into their glutinous maws. You do yourselves but wrong,
To stir me up; let me pass quietly:
Believe’t, my lord and I have made an end;
I have no more to reckon, he to spend.

Luc. Serv. Ay, but this answer will not serve.

Flav. If ’twill not,
’Tis not so base as you; for you serve knaves.

[Exit.
Enter Servilius.

Tit. O, here's Servilius; now we shall know some answer.

Ser. If I might beseech you, gentlemen, To repair some other hour, I should much Dwell from it: for, take it on my soul, My lord leans wondrously to discontent. His comfortable temper has forsook him; He is much out of health, and keeps his chamber. Luc. Serv. Many do keep their chambers, are not sick; And, if it be so far beyond his health, Methinks, he should the sooner pay his debts, And make a clear way to the gods.

Ser. Good gods! We cannot take this for an answer, sir.

Flam. [Within.] Servilius, help!—my lord! my lord!

Enter Timon, in a rage; Flaminius following.

Tim. What, are my doors oppr'd against my passage? Have I been ever free, and must my house Be my retentive enemy, my gaol? The place, which I have feasted, does it now, Like all mankind, show me an iron heart? Luc. Serv. Put in now, Titus. Tit. My lord, here is my bill. Luc. Serv. Here's mine. Hor. Serv. And mine, my lord. Both Var. Serv. And ours, our lord.

Flam. All our bills. Our lord makes us forswear us, What folly 'tis, to hazard life for ill?

Tim. Knock me down with 'em: cleave me to the girdle.

Luc. Serv. Alas! my lord,——

2 Var. Serv. My lord,——

Tim. Tear me, take me, and the gods fall upon you! [Exit.

Hor. 'Faith, I perceive our masters may throw their caps at their mothers: these debts may well be called desperate mses, for a madman owes 'em.

Re-enter Timon and Flavius.

Tim. They have e'en put my breath from me, the slaves:

Creditors—devils. Flav. My dear lord,——

Tim. What if it should be so?—— Flam. My lord,——

Tim. I'll have it so: — my steward! Flav. Here, my lord.

Tim. So fitly? Go, bid all my friends again, Luells, Lucullins, and Sempronius; all: I'll once more feast the rascals.

Flav. O my lord. You only speak from your distracted soul; There is not so much left, to furnish out A moderate table.

Tim. Be't not in thy care; go, I charge thee; invite them all: let in the tide Of knaves once more; my cook and I'll provide.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V. — The same. The Senate House. The Senate sitting. Enter Alcibiades, attended.

1 Sen. My lord, you have my voice to it; the fault's bloody; 'tis necessary he should die:

Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy. 2 Sen. Most true; the law shall bruise him.

Alcib. Honour, health, and compassion to the senate!

1 Sen. Now, captain?

Alcib. I am an humble suitor to your virtues, For pity is the virtue of the law. And none but tyrants use it cruelly. It pleases time, and fortune, to lie heavy Upon a friend of mine, who, in hot blood, Hath stepp'd it into the law, which is past depth To those that, without heed, do plunge into it. He is a man, setting his fate aside, Of comely virtues: Nor did he soil the fact with cowardice. [An honour in him, which buys out his fault.] But, with a noble fury, and fair spirit, Seeing his reputation touch'd to death, He did oppose his foe: And with such sober and unnoted passion He did behave his anger, ere 'twas spent, As if he had but prov'd an argument.

1 Sen. You undergo too strict a paradox, Striving to make an ugly deed look fair; Your words have took such pains, as if they laboured To bring man's laughter into form, set quarrelling Upon the head of valour; which, indeed, Is valour misbegot, and came into the world When sects and factions were newly born: He's truly valiant, that can wisely suffer The worst that man can breathe; and make his wrongs His outsides; wear them like his raiment, carelessly; And ne'er prefer his injuries to his heart, To bring it into danger. If wrongs be evil, and enforce us kill,

What folly 'tis, to hazard life for ill?

Alcib. My lord,——

1 Sen. You cannot make gross sins look clear; To revenge is no valour, but to bear.

Alcib. My lords, then, under favour, pardon me, If I speak like a captain.——

Why do fond men expose themselves to battle, And not endure all threatenings? sleep upon it, And let the foes quietly cut their throats, Without repugnancy? but if there be such valour in the bearing, what make we abroad? why then, women are more valiant, That stay at home, if bearing carry it; And th' ass, more captain than the lion; the felou, wiser than the judge, If wisdom be in suffering. O my lords, As you are great, be pitifully good: Who cannot condemn rashness in cold blood? To kill, 1 grant, is sin's extremest gust; But, in defence, by mercy, 'tis most just. To be in anger, is impiety;

But who is man that is not angry? Weigh but the crime with this. 2 Sen. You breathe in vain.

Alcib. In vain? his service done At Lacedemon, and Byzantium, Were a sufficient briber for his life. 1 Sen. What's that? Alcib. Why, I say, my lords, 'h's done fair service, And slain in fight many of your enemies: How full of valour did he bear himself In the last conflict, and made plentiful wounds? 2 Sen. He has made too much plenty with 'em, he Is a sworn rioter: 'h's a sin that often Drowns him, and takes his valour prisoner: If there were no foes, that were enough alone To overcome him; in that beastly fury He has been known to commit outrages, And cherish factions: 'Tis infer'd to us, His days are foul, and his drink dangerous 1 Sen. He dies.
1 Lord. What of you?
2 Lord. He sent to me, sir,—Here he comes.

Enter Timon, and Attendants.

Tim. With all my heart, gentlemen both.—And how fare you?

2 Lord. Ever at the best, hearing well of your lordship.

Tim. [Aside.] Nor more willingly leaves winter; such summer-birds are men.—Gentlemen, our dinner was not long ago; let us suppress this long stay: feast your ears with the music awhile; if they will fare so harshly on the trumpet's sound: we shall to present.

1 Lord. I hope it remains not unkindly with your lordship, that I returned you an empty messenger.

Tim. O, sir, let it not trouble you.

2 Lord. My noble lord.

Tim. Ah, my good friend! what cheer?

2 Lord. My most honourable lord, I am e'en sick of shame, that, when your lordship this other day sent to me, I was so unfortunate a beggar.

Tim. Think not on't, sir.

2 Lord. If I had sent but two hours before,—Tim. Let it not cumber your better remembrance;—Come, bring in all together.

2 Lord. All covered dishes!

1 Lord. Royal cheer, I warrant you.

Tim. Doubt not that, if money, and the season can yield it.

1 Lord. How do you? What's the news?

2 Lord. Alcibiades is banished: Hear you of it?

1 & 2 Lord. Alcibiades banished!

3 Lord. And to be sure of it.

1 Lord. How? how?

2 Lord. I pray you, upon what?

Tim. My worthy friends, will you draw near?

3 Lord. I'll tell you more anon. Here's a noble feast toward.

2 Lord. This is the old man still.

3 Lord. Will'st hold, will'st hold?

2 Lord. It does: but time will—and so—

3 Lord. I do conceive.

Tim. Thus royal manner to his stool, with that spur as he would to the lip of his mistress: your diet shall be in all places alike. Make not a city feast of it, to let the meat cool ere we can agree upon the first place: Sit, sit. The gods require our thanks.

You great benefactors, sprinkle our society with thankfulness. For your own gifts, make yourselves praised: but reserve still to give, lest your duties be despised. Lead to each man enough, that one need not lend to another: for, were your goodheads to borrow of men, men would forsake the gods. Make the meat be beloved, more than the man that gives it. Let no assembly of twenty be without a score of villains: If there sit twelve women at the table, let a dozen of them be—as they are. The rest of your feet, O gods,—the senators of Athens, together with the common lag of people,—what is amiss in them, you gods, may be suitable for destruction. For these my present friends,—as they are to me nothing, so in nothing bless them, and to nothing they are welcome.

Uncover, dogs, and lap.

[The dishes uncovered, are full of warm water.

Some speak. What does his lordship mean?

Some other. I know not.

Tim. 'Tis on a better feast never beheld, You knot of mouth-friends! smoke, and lake-warm water Is your perfection. This is Timon's last; Who stuck and stung you with flatteries, Washes it off, and sprinkles in your faces [Throwing water in their faces. Your reeking villainy. Live loath'd, and long, Most smiling, smooth, detested parasites, Contreous destroyers, affable wolves, meek bears,
You fools of fortune, trencher-friends, time's flies, Cap and knee slaves, vapours, and minute-jacks! Of man, and beast, the infinite malady Crust you quite o'er!—What, dost thou go? Soft, take thy phisick first—thou too,—and thou:— [Chores the dishes at them, and drives them out. Stay, I will lend thee money, borrow none.— What, all in motion? Henceforth be no feast, Whereat a villain's not a welcome guest. Burn, house; sink, Athens! henceforth hated be Of Timon, man, and all humanity. [Exit.

Re-enter the Lords, with other Lords and Senators.

1 Lord. How now, my lords?
2 Lord. Know you the quality of lord Timon's fortune?
3 Lord. Pish! did you see my cap?
4 Lord. I have lost my gown.
3 Lord. He's but a mad lord, and nought but humour sways him. He gave me a jewel the other day, and now he has beat it out of my hat:—Did you see my jewel?
4 Lord. Did you see my cap?
3 Lord. Here 'tis.
4 Lord. Here lies my gown.
1 Lord. Let's make no stay.
2 Lord. Lord Timon's mad.
3 Lord. I feel upon my bones.
4 Lord. One day he gives us diamonds, next day stones. [Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Without the Walls of Athens. Enter Timon.

Tim. Let me look back upon thee, O thou wall, That girdest in those wolves! Dive in the earth, And fence not Athens! Matrons turn continent; Obedience fall in children, slaves, and fools. Pluck the grave wrinkled senator from the bench, And minister in their steads! to general filths Convert 'o the instant, green virginitv! Do't in your parents' eyes! bankrupts, hold fast; Rather than render back, out with your knives, And cut your trusters' throats! bound servants, steal!
Large-handed robbers your grave masters are, And pill by law! maid, to thy master's bed; Thy mistress i'the brothel! son of sixteen, Pluck the lind'crutch from the old limping sire, With it beat out his brains! piety and fear, Religion to the gods, peace, justice, truth, Domestic awe, night-rest, and neighbourhood, Instruction, manners, mysteries, and trades, Degrees, observances, customs, and laws, Decline to your confounding contraries, And yet confusion live!—Plagues, incident to Your potent and infectious fevers hесп

On Athens, ripe for stroke! thou cold scatia, Cripple our senators, that their limbs may halt AS lamely as their manners! lust and liberty Creep in the minds and marrows of our youth; That 'gainst the stream of virtue they may strive, And drown themselves in riot! itchcs, blains, Sow all the Athenian bosoms; and their crop Be general leprosy! breath infect breath; That their society, as their friendship, may Be merely poison! Nothing I'll bear from thee, But nakedness, thou destetale town! Take thou that too, with multiplying banes! Timon will to the woods; where he shall find The unkindest beast more kinder than mankind. The gods confound (hear me, ye good gods all), The Athenians both within and out that wall! And grant, as Timon grows, his hate may grow To the whole race of mankind, high and low! Amen. [Exit.

Enter Flavius, with Two or Three Servants.

1 Serv. Hear you, master steward, where's our master?
Are we undone? cast off? nothing remaining?
Flav. Alack, my fellows, what should I say to you? Let me be recorded by the righteous gods, I am as poor as you.
1 Serv. Such a house broke! So noble a master fallen! All gone! and not One friend to take his fortune by the arm, And go along with him! 2 Serv. As we do turn our backs From our companion, thrown into his grave; So his familiars to his buried fortunes Slink all away; leave their false vows with him, Like empty purses pick'd; and his poor self, A dedicated beggar to the air,
With his disease of all-shunn'd poverty, Walks, like contempt, alone.—More of our fellows.

Enter other Servants.

Flav. All broken implements of a ruin'd house. 3 Serv. Yet do our hearts wear Timon's livery, That see I by our faces; we are fellows still, Serving alike in sorrow: Leak'd is our bark; And we, poor mates, stand on the dying deck, Hearing the surges threat: we must all part Into this sea of air.
Flav. The latest of my wealth I'll share amongst you. Wherever we shall meet, for Timon's sake, Let's yet be fellows; let's shake our heads, and say, As 'twere a knell unto our master's fortune, We have seen better days. Let each take some; [Giving them money.
Nay, put out all your hands. Not one word more: Thus part we rich in sorrow, parting poor.
[Exeunt Servants.

0, the fierce wretchedness that glory brings us! Who would not wish to be from wealth exempt, Since riches point to misery and contempt? Who'd be so mock'd with glory? or to live But in a dream of friendship? To have his pomp, and all what state compounds, But only painted, like his varnish'd friends? Poor honest lord, brough, low by his own heart, Undone by goodness! Strewed with cloaths of blood, When man's worst sin is, he does too much good! Who then dares to be half so kind again? For bounty, that makes gods, does still men men. My dearest lord,—bless'd, to be most accur'd, Rich, only to be wretched—thy great fortunes Are made thy chief afflictions. Alas, kind lord! He's flung in rage from this ungrateful seat Of monstrous friends; nor has he with him to supply his life, or that which can command it. I'll follow, and inquire him out; I'll ever serve his mind with my best will; Whilst I have gold, I'll be his steward still. [Exit.

SCENE III.—The Woods. Enter Timon.

Tim. O blessed breeding sun, draw from the earth Rotten humidity; below thy sister's orb Infect the air! Twinn'd brothers of one womb,— Whose procreation, residence, and birth, Scarce is divinit,—touch them with several fortunes; The greater scorns the lesser: Not nature, To whom all sores lay siege, can bear great fortune, But by contempt of nature.
Raise me this beggar, and denude that lord The senator shall bear contempt hereditary, The beggar native honour.
It is the pasture lards the brother's sides,
The want that makes him lean. Who dares, who dares',
In purity of manhood stand upright,
And say, This man's a flatterer? if one be,
So are they all; for every grize of fortune
Is smooth'd by that below: the learned pate
Ducks to the golden fool: All is oblique;
There's nothing level in our cursed natures,
But direct villainy. Therefore, be abhor'd,
All feasts, societies, and thronges of men!
His semblable, yea, himself, Timon disdains:
 Destruction fang mankind! -- Earth, yield me roots!

Who seeks for better of thee, sauce his palate,
With thy most operant poison! What is here?
Gold? yellow, glittering, precious gold? No, gods,
I am no idle votarist. Roots, you clear heavens!
Thus much of this, will make black, while; foul,

Wrong, right; base, noble; old, young; coward, valiant.

Ha, you gods! why this? What this, you gods?

Why this,
Will lug your priests and servants from your side:
Pluck stout men's pillows from below their heads:
This yellow slave
Will knit and break religions; bless the accurs'd;
Make the hoar leprosy advise; place thieves,
And give them title, knee, and approbation,
With senators on the bench: this is it,
That makes the wappen'd widow wed again;
She, whom the spital-house, and uleerous sores
Would make as garget at, this embalms and spices
To the April day again. Come, damned earth,
Thou common whore of mankind, that put'st odds
Among the rout of nations, I will make thee
Do thy right nature. -- [March afar off:] Ha! a

Drum, Thou're quick,
But yet I'll bury thee: Thou'll go, strong thief,
When gouty keepers of thee cannot stand:

Nay, stay thou out for earnest. [Keeping some gold.]

Enter Alcibiades, with drum and fife, in martial manner; Phrynia and Timandra.

Alcib.

What art thou there?

Speak.

Tim. A beast, as thou art. The canker gnaw thy heart.

For showing me again the eyes of man!

Alcib. What is thy name? Is man so hateful to thee,

That art thyself a man?

Tim. I am misanthropes, and hate mankind.

For thy part, I do wish thou wert a dog;

That I might love thee something.

Alcib.

I know thee well;

But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd and strange.

Tim. I know thee too; and more, than that I know thee,

I not desire to know. Follow thy drum;

With man's blood paint the ground, gules, gules:

Religious canons, civil laws are cruel;

Then what should war be? This fell whor'e of thine

Hath in her more destruction than thy sword,
For all her cherubin look.

Phry.

 Thy lips rot off!

Tim. I will not kiss thee; then the rot returns
To thine own lips again.

Alcib. How came the noble Timon to this change?

Tim. As the moon does, by wanting light to give:

But then renew I could not, like the moon;

There were no suns to borrow of.

Alcib.

Noble Timon,
What friendship may I do thee?

Tim.

Maintain my opinion.

Alcib.

What is it, Timon?

Tim.

Promise me friendship, but perform none: If

Thou wilt not promise, the gods plague thee for,

Thou art a man! if thou dost perform, confound

thee;

For thou art a man!

Alcib. I have heard in some sort of thy miseries.

Tim. Thou saw'st them, when I had prosperity.

Alcib. I see them now; then was a blessed time.

Tim. As thine is now, held with a brace of harlots

Timon. Is this the Athenian minion, whom the Voic'd so regardfully? [world]

Timan.

Art thou Timandra?

Timan.

Tim.

Be a whore still! they love thee not that use thee.

Give them diseases, leaving with thee their lust.

Make use of thy salt hours: season the slaves

For tubs, and baths; bring down rose-cheeked

youth

To the tub-fast, and the diet.

Timan.

Hang thee, monster!

Alcib. Pardon him, sweet Timandra; for his wits

Are drown'd and lost in his calamities.

I have but little gold of late, brave Timon,
The want whereof doth daily make revolt

In my penurious band; I have heard, and griev'd

How cursed Athens, mindless of thy worth,

Forgetting thy great deeds, when neighbour states,
But for thy sword and fortune, trod upon them.

Tim. I pr'ythee, beat thy drum, and get thee gone.

Alcib. I am thy friend, and pity thee, dear Timon.

Tim. How dost thou pity him, whom thou dost trouble?

I had rather be alone.

Alcib.

Why, fare thee well:

Here's some gold for thee.

Tim.

Keep't, I cannot eat it.

Alcib. When I have laid proud Athenos on a hemp, Thou'rt quick,

Tim. Warr'st thou 'gainst Athens? them

Alcib. Ay, Timon, and have cause.

Tim. The gods confound them all 1thy conquest; and

Thee after, when thou hast conquer'd!

Alcib.

Why me, Timon?

Tim. That,

By killing villains, thou wast born to conquer

My country.

Put up thy gold; Go on, --here's gold, --go on;

Be as a planetary plague, when Jove

Will o'er some high-vic'd city hang his poison

In the sick air: Let not thy sword skip one:

Pity not honour'd age for his white beard,

He's a market; Strike me the counterfeit matron!

It is her habit only that is honest,

Herself's a bawd: Let not the virgin's cheek

Make soft thy trenchant sword; for those milk

paps,

That through the window-bars bore at men's eyes,

Are not within the leaf of pity writ,

Set them down horrible traitors: Spare not the

babe,

Whose dimpled smiles from fools exhaust their mercy,

Think it a bastard, whom the oracle

Hast doubtfully pronounce'd thy throat shall cut,

And mine it sans remorse: Swear against objects;

Put armour on thine ears, and on thine eyes;

Whose proof, nor yells of mothers, maid's, nor babes,

Nor sight of priests in holy vestments bleeding,

Shall pierce a jot. There's gold to pay thy soldiers:

Make Him their confusion; and, thy fury spent,

Confounded be thyself! Speak not, begone.

Alcib. Hast thou gold yet? I'll take the gold thou giv'st me,

Not all thy counsel.

Tim.

Dost thou, or dost thou not, heaven's curse

upon thee!

Thou see more?

Phr, & Timan. Give us some gold, good Timon:

Hast thou more?
TIMON OF ATHENS.

Enter Apemantus.

More man? Plague! plague!

Apem. I was directed hither: Men report,
Thou dost affect my manners, and dost use them.

Tim. 'Tis then, because thou dost not keep a dog
Whom I would imitate: Consume, and catch thee!

Apem. This is in thee a nation, and but affected;
A poor unmanly melancholy, sprung
From change of fortune. Why this spade? this place?
This slave-like habit? and these looks of care?
Thy flattering yet wear silk, drink wine, lie soft;
Hug their diseast'd perfumes, and have forgot
That ever Timon was. Shame not these woods,
By putting on the cunning of a carper.
Be thou a flatterer now, and seek to thrive
By that which has undone thee: hinge thy knee,
And let his very breath, whom thou'lt observe,
Blow off thy cap; praise his most vicious strain,
And call it excellent: Thou wast told thus:
Thou gav'st thine ears, like tapsters, that bid welcome,
To knaves, and all approachers: 'Tis most just,
That thou turn rascal; had'st thou wealth again,
Rascals should hav'n. Do not assume my likeness.

Apem. Were I like thee, I'd throw away myself.

Apem. Thou hast cast away thyself, being like thyself:
A madman so long, now a fool: What, think'st
That the bleak air, thy boisterous chamberlain,
Will put thy skirt on warm? Will these moss'd trees,
That have out-liv'd the eagle, page thy heels,
And skip when thou point'st out? Will the cold brook,
Candied with ice, caudle thy morning taste,
To cure thy o'er-night's surfeit? call the creatures,
Whose naked natures live in all the spite
Of weakful heaven; whose bare unhoused trunks,
To the conflicting elements exposed,
Answer more nature,—bid them flatter thee;
O! thou shalt find—

Tim. A fool of thee: Depart.

Apem. I love thee better now than e'er I did.

Tim. I hate thee worse.

Apem. Why?

Tim. Thou flatter'st misery.

Apem. I flatter not; but say, thou art a calfiff.

Tim. Why dost thou seek me out?

Apem. Always a villain's office, or a fool's.

Dost please thyself in't?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. What? a knave too?

Apem. If thou didst put this sour-cold habit on To castigate thy pride; twere well;
but thou
Dost it enforcedly; thou'lt courtier be again
Wert thou not beggar. Willing misery
Outliv'st uncertain pomp, is crown'd before:
The one is filling still, never complete:
The other, at high wish: Best state, contentless,
Hath a distracted and most wretched being,
Worse than the worst, content.
Thou should'st desire to die, being miserable.

Tim. Not by his breath, that is more miserable.

Thou art a slave, whom Fortune's tender arm
With favour never claspt: but bred a dog.

Hadst thou, like us, from our first swab, proceeded
The sweet degrees that this brief world affords
To such as may the passive drugs of it Freely command, thou would'st have plung'd thyself
In general riot; melted down thy youth
In different beds of lust; and never learn'd
The ley precepts of respect, but follow'd
The sugar'd game before thee. But myself,
Who had the world as my confectionary:
The mouths, the tongues, the eyes, and hearts of men

Act 4.
At duty, more than I could frame employment; That numberless upon me stuck, as leaves Do on the oak, have with one winter's brush Fell from their boughs, and left me open, bare For every storm that blows; — I to bear this, That never knew but better, is some burden. Thy myriads incommence in suffrance, time Hath made thee hard in't. Why should'st thou hate men? They never flatter'd thee: What hast thou given? If thou wilt curse,—thy father, that poor rag, Must be thy subject; who, in spite, put stuff To some thee beggar, and compound thee Poor rogue hereditary. Hence! be gone!— If thou hadst not been born the worst of men, Thou hadst been a knife, and flatterer. Art thou proud yet?

Am. Ay, that I am not thee. I, that I was No prodigal. I, that I am one now: Were all the wealth I have, shut up in thee, I'd give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone.— That the whole life of Athens were in this! Thus would I eat it. [Eating a root. Here: I will mend thy feast. [Offering him something. First mend my company, take away thy self. So I shall mend mine own, by the lack of thine. 'Tis not well mended so, it is but botch'd; If not, I would it were. What would'st thou have to Athens? Thee thither in a whirlwind. If thou wilt, Tell them there I have gold; look, so I have. Here is no use for gold. The best, and truest: For here it sleeps, and does no hurt harm. Where ly'st o' nights, Timon? Under that's above me. Where feed'st thou, Apemantus? Where my stomach finds meat; or, rather, where I eat it. 'Would poison were obedient, and knew my mind! Where would'st thou send it? To sauce thy dishes. The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends: When thou wast in thy gait, and thy perfume, they mocked thee for too much curiosity; in thy rags thou knowest art less reproved, for the contrary. There's a medlar for thee, eat it. On what I hate, I feed not. Dost hate a medlar? Ay, though it look like thee. An thou hadst hated medlars sooner, thou should'st have loved thyself better now. What man didst thou ever know unthrift, that was beloved after his means? Who, without those means thou talkest of, didst thou ever know beloved? Myself. I understand thee; thou hastad some means to keep a dog. What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy flatterers? Women nearest; but men, men are the things themselves. What would'st thou do with the world, Apemantus, if it lay in thy power? Give it the beasts, to be rid of the men. Would'st thou have thyself fall in the confusion of men, and remain a beast with the beasts? Ay, Timon. A beastly ambition, which the gods grant thee to attain to! If thou wert the lion, the fox would beguile thee: if thou wert the lamb, the fox would eat thee: if thou wert the fox, the lion would suspect thee, when, peradventure, thou wert accused by the ass: if thou wert the ass, thy dulness would torment thee; and still thou livedst but as a breakfast to the wolf: if thou wert the wolf, thy greediness would afflict thee, and oft thou shouldst hazard thy life for thy dinner: when thou the unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee, and make thine own self the conquest of thy fiery; wert thou a bear, thou would'st be killed by the wolf, wert thou a horse, thou would'st be seized by the leopard; wert thou a sheep, thou wert german to the lion, and the spots of thy kindred were jurors on thy life; all thy safety were reparation; and thy defence, absence. What beast would'st thou be, that were not subject to a beast? and what a beast art thou already, that seest not thy loss in transformation?

If thou could'st please me with speaking to me, thou might'st have hit upon it here: The commonwealth of Athens is become a forest of beasts.

How has the ass broke the wall, that thou art out of the city? Yonder comes a poet, and a painter: The plague of company light upon thee! I will fear to catch it, and give way: When I know not what else to do, I'll see thee again.

When there is nothing living but thee, thou shalt be welcome. I had rather be a beggar's dog, than Apemantus. If thou wouldst have the cap of all the foids alive. Would thou well clean enough to spit upon. A plague on thee, thou art too bad to curse. All villains, that do stand by thee, are pure. There is no leprosy, but what thou art. If I name thee.— I'll beat thee,—but I should infect my hands. Would, my tongue could rot them off! Away, thou issue of a mangy dog! Chokes; he will kill me, that thou art alive; I swoon to see thee.

'Would thou would'st burst! Thou tell'stโรค; I am sorry, I shall lose A stone by thee. [Threw a stone at him. Beast! Slave! Toad! [Apemantus retreats backward, as going. I am sick of this false world; and will love nought But even the mere necessities upon it.

Then, Timon, presently prepare thy grave; Lie where the light foam of the sea may beat Thy grave-stone daily; make thine epitaph, That death in me at others' lives may laugh. O thou sweet king-killer, and dear divorce [Looking on the gold. Twixt natural son and sire! thou bright defiler Of Hymen's purest bed! thou valiant Mars! Thou ever young, fresh, lovd, and delicate wooer, Whose blush doth thaw the consecrated snow That lies on Dion's lap! thou visible god, That solder'st close impossibilities, And makest them kiss! that speak'st with every tongue, To every purpose! O thou touch of hearts! Think, thy slave man rebels; and by thy virtue Set them into confounding odds, that beasts May have the world in empire!

'Would twere so: —But not till I am dead! — I'll say, thou hast gold: Thou wilt be throng'd to shortly.

Throng'd to? Ay.

Thy back, I pry thee. Live, and love thy misery! Long live so, and so die! — I am quit. [Exit Apemantus. More things like men? — Eat, Timon, and abhor them. Enter Thieves. Thief. Where should he have this gold? It is some poor fragment, some slender ort of his remainder: The mere want of gold, and the falling from of his friends, drove him into this melancholy.

2 Thief. It is noise, he hath a mass of treasure.

3 Thief. Let us make the assay upon him; if he care not for't, he will supply us easily; If he covetously reserve for 'shalt's get it?

2 Thief. True; for he bears it not about him, tis hid.

1 Thief. Is not this he?

Thieves. Where?

2 Thief. 'Tis his description.

3 Thief. He; I know him.

Thieves. Save thee, Timon.

Tim. Now, thieves?

Thieves. Soldiers, not thieves.

Tim. Both too; and women's sons.

Thieves. We are not thieves, but men that much do want.

Tim. Your greatest want Is, you want much of men.

Why should you want? Behold, the earth hath roots.

Within this mile break forth a hundred springs:

The oaks bear mast, the briars scarlet hips;

The bounteous housewife, on each bush

Lays her full mess before you, and why want? I 1 Thief. We cannot live on grass, on berries, water,

As beasts, and birds, and fishes.

Tim. Nor on them, beasts themselves, the birds, and fishes:

You must eat men. Yet thanks I must you con,

That you are thieves profess'd; that you work not

In holier shapes: for there is boundless theft

In limited possessions. Rascal thieves,

Here's gold: Go, suck the subtle blood of the grape;

Till the high fever seeth your blood to froth,

And so 'scape hanging; trust not the physician;

His antidotes are poison, and he slays More than you rob: Take wealth and eyes together;

Do villains, do, since you profess to do,

Like workmen. I'll example you with thievry:

The sun's a thief, and with his great attraction

Rob's the vast sea; the moon an arrant thief,

And her pale fire the snatches from the sun:

The sea's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves

The moon into salt tears: the earth's a thief,

That feeds and breeds by a compo'ture stolen

From general excrement: each thing's a thief;

The waters, your earth and ships, in their rough power

Have uncheck'd theft. Love not yourselves; away

Rob one another. There's more gold: Cut throats;

All that you meet are thieves: To Athens, go,

Break open shops; nothing can you steal,

But thieves do lose it: Steal not less, for this

I give you; and gold confined and howsoever I

Amen.

[Timon retires to his cave.

3 Thief. He has almost charmed me from my profession, by persuading me to it.

1 Thief. 'Tis in the malice of mankind, that he thus advises us: not to have us thrive in our mystery.

2 Thief. I'll believe him as an enemy, and give over my trade.

1 Thief. Let us first see peace in Athens: There is no time so miserable, but a man may be true.

[Exeunt Thieves.

Enter Flavius.

Flav. O you gods! Is you despis'd and ruinous man my lord? Full of decay and falling? O monument

And wonder of good deeds everly bestow'd! What an alteration of honour has Desperate want made! What viler thing upon the earth, than friends, Who can bring noblest minds to basest ends! How rarely does it meet with this time's guise, When man was wish'd to love his enemies: Grant, I may ever love, and rather woo Those that would mischiefe me, than those that do!

He has caught me in his eye: I will present My honest thief unto him; and, as my lord, Still serve him with my life.—My dearest master!

Timon comes forward from his cave.

Tim. Away! what art thou?

Flav. Have you forgot me, sir? Tim. Why dost ask that? I have forgot all men; Then, if thou grant'st thou'rt man, I have forgot thee.

Flav. An honest poor servant of yours.

Tim. Then I know thee not: I ne'er had honest man About me, I; all that I kept were knaves, To serve in meat to villains.

Flav. The gods are witness, Ne'er did poor steward wear a truer grief For his undone lord, than mine eyes for you.

Tim. What, dost thou weep?—Come nearer:—then I love thee, Because thou art a woman, and disclaim'st Flinty mankind; whose eyes do never give, But thorough lust, and laughter. Pitiful sleeping: Strange times, that weep with laughing, not with weeping!

Flav. I beg of you to know me, good my lord, To accept me; gar, and me, in your poor wealth To entertain me as your steward still.

Tim. Had I a steward so true, so just, and now So comfortable? It almost turns

My dangerous nature wild. Let me behold Thy face.—Believe me, this man was born of woman—

Forgive my general and exceptless rashness, Perpetual-sor gods! I do proclaim One honest man,—mistake me not,—but one; No more, I pray,—and he is a steward.— How fain would I have hated all mankind, And thou redeem'st thyself: Eust all, save thee, I fell with curses.

Methinks, thou art more honest now, than wise;

For, by oppressing and betraying me,

Thou mightest have this man got another service:

For many so arrive at second masters,

Upon their first lord's neck. But tell me true, (For I must ever doubt, though ne'er so sure,) Is not thy kindness subtle, covetous, If not a using kindness; and as rich men deal gifts, Expecting in return twenty for one?

Flav. No, my most worthy master, in whose breast Doubt and suspect, alas, are plac'd too late;

You should have fear'd false times, when you did feast:

Suspicious still comes where an estate is least.

That which I show, heaven knows, is merely love,

Duty and zeal to your unmatch'd mind,

Care of your food and living: and, believe it,

My most honour'd lord,

For any benefit that points to me,

Either in hope, or present, I'd exchange

For this one wish, That you had power and wealth To require me, by making rich yourself.

Tim. Look thee, 'tis so!—Thou singly honest man,

Here take:—the gods out of mankind,

Have sent thee treasure. Go, live rich, and happy:

But thus condition'd: Thou shalt build from men;

 Hate all, curse all: show charity to none; But let the famish'd flesh slide from the bone,

Ere thou relieve the beggar: give to dogs

What thou deny'st to men; let prisons swallow them,

Debts wither them: Be men like blasted woods,

And may diseases lick up their false bloods!

And so, farewell, and thrive.

Flav. O, let me stay,

And comfort you, my master.

Tim.

If thou hast's

Curses, stay not; fly, whilst thou'rt bless'd and free;

Ne'er see thou man, and let me never see thee.

[Exeunt severally.
ACT V.

SCENE I.—The same. Before Timon’s Cave.

Enter Poet and Painter; Timon behind, unseen.

Poet. We are both here, and Timon behind, unseen.

Enter Poet and Painter. (To Poet.) What’s to be thought of him? Does the rumour hold for true, that he is so full of gold?

Poet. Certain: Alcibiades reports it; Thrymin and Timandra had gold of him; he likewise enriched poor straggling soldiers with great quantity:

Poet. Then this breaking of his has been but a try for his friends.

Poet. Nothing else: you shall see him a palm in Athens again, and flourish with the highest.

Poet. Excellent workman! Thou canst not paint a man so bad as I thyself.

Poet. Poet, what shall I say I have provided for him? It must be a personating of himself: a satire against the softness of prosperity; with a discovery of the infinite flatteries, that follow youth and opulence.

Poet. Must thou needs stand for a villain in thine own work? Will thou whip thine own faults in other men? So do, I have gold for thee.

Poet. Nay, let’s seek him:

Poet. Thou do we sin against our own estate, When we may profit and come too late.

Poet. True; When the day serves, before black-corner’d night, Find what thou want’st by free and offer’d light. Come.

Poet. I’ll meet you at the turn. What a god’s gold,

That he is worshipp’d in a baser temple,

Than where swine feed!

’Tis thou that rigg’st the bark, and plough’d the thickest foam;

Settest admiring reverence in a slave:

To thee be worship! and thy saints for aye be crown’d with plagues, that thee alone obey!

‘Fid I do meet them. [Advancing.

Poet. Hail, worthy Timon! Our late noble master.

Poet. Have I once liv’d to see two honest men?

Poet. Sir, Having often of your open bounty tasted,

But now you were retir’d, your friends fell off,

Whose thankless natures—O abhorred spirits! Not all the Whips of heaven are large enough—What! to you! Whose star-like nobleness gave life and influence To their whole being! I’m rapt, and cannot cover The monstrous bulk of this ingratitude With any size of words.

Poet. Let it go naked, men may see the better: You, that are honest, by being what you are, Make them best seen and known.

Poet. He, and myself, Have travelled in the great shower of your gifts, And sweetly felt it.

Poet. Ay, you are honest men.

Poet. We are hither come to offer you our service.

Poet. Honest men! Why, how shall I requite you?

Poet. What can we do, we’ll do, to do you service.

Poet. You are honest men: you have heard that I have gold;

Poet. I am sure, you have: speak truth: you are honest men.

Poet. So it is said, my noble lord: but therefore Came not my friend, nor I.

Poet. Good honest men: I’ll draw a counterfeit

Best in all Athens: thou art, indeed, the best; Thou counterfeitt’s most lively.

Poet. So, so, my lord.

Poet. Even so, sir, as I say—And, for thy fiction, [To the Poet. Why, thy verse swells with stuff so fine and smooth,

That thou art even natural in thine art—

But, for all this, my honest-natur’d friend,

I must needs say, you have a little fault:

Marry, ’tis not monstrous in you; neither wish I, You take much pains to mend.

[Both. Beseech your honour,

To make it known to us.

Poet. You’ll take it ill.

[Both. Most thankfully, my lord.

Poet. Will you, indeed?

[Both. Doubt it not, worthy lord.

Poet. There’s ne’er a one of you but trusts a knave,

That mightily deceives you.

[Both. Do we, my lord?

Poet. Ay, and you hear him cog, see him dissemble,

Know his gross patchery, love him, feed him,

Keep in your bosom: yet remain assur’d,

That he’s a made-up villain.

[Both. I know not such, my lord.

Poet. Look, I love you well; I’ll give you gold,

Rid me these villains from your companies:

Hang them, or stab them, drown them in a deep:

Confound them by some course, and come to me,

I’ll give you gold enough.

[Both. Name them, my lord, let’s know them.

Poet. You that way, and you this, but two in company—

Each man apart, all single and alone,

Yet an arch-villain keeps him company.

If where thou art, two villains shall not be,

Come not near him.—If thou wouldst not reside

[To the Painter. But where one villain is, then him abandon—

Hence! pack! there’s gold, ye came for gold, ye slaves:

You have a work for me, there’s payment:—

Hence! You are an alchemist, make gold of that:—

Out, rascal dogs! [Exit, beating and driving them out.

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter Flavius and two Senators.

Flavius. It is in vain that you would speak with Timon;

For he is so just to himself, That nothing but himself, which looks like man, Is friendly with him.

1 Sen. Bring us to his cave: It is our part, and promise to the Athenians, To open with Timon.

2 Sen. At all times alike Men are not still the same: ’Twas time, and griefs, That fram’d him thus: time, with his fairer hand,
Offering the fortunes of his former days,
The former man may make him: Bring us to him,
And chance it as it may.

Flav. Here is his cave,—
Peac'd content be here! Lord Timon! Timon!
Look out, and speak to friends: The Athenians,
By two of their most reverend senate, greet thee:
Speak to them, noble Timon.

Enter Timon.

Tim. Thou sun, that comfort'st, burn!—Speak, and be hang'd:
For each true word, a blister! and each false
Be as a caut'ring to the root o' the tongue,
Consuming it with speaking!

1 Sen. Worthy Timon,—
Tim. Of none but such as you, and you of Timon.
2 Sen. The senators of Athens greet thee, Timon.
Tim. I thank them; and would send them back the plague,
Could I but catch it for them.

1 Sen. O, forget
What we are sorry for ourselves in thee.
The senators, with one consent of love,
Entreat thee back to Athens; who have thought
On special dignities, with vacant lie
For thy best use and wearing.

2 Sen. They confess,
Toward thee, forgetfulness too general, gross;
Which now the publick body,—which doth seldom
Play the recantter,—feeling in itself
A lack of Timon's aid, hath sense withal
Of its own fall, restraining aid to Timon;
And send forth us, to make their sorrowed render,
Together with a recompense more fruitful
Than their offence can weigh down by the dram;—
Ay, even such heaps and sums of love and wealth,
As shall to thee blot out what wrongs were theirs,
And write in thee the figures of their love,
Ever to read them thine.

You witch me in it;
Surprize me to the very brink of tears:
Lend me a fool's heart, and a woman's eyes,
And I'll beweep these comforts, worthy senators.

1 Sen. Therefore, so please thee to return with us,
And of our Athens (thine, and ours,) to take
The captainship, thou shalt be met with thanks,
Allow'd with absolute power, and thy good name
Live with authority;—so soon we shall drive back
Of Alcibiades the approaches wild;
Who, like a bore too savage, doth root up
His country's peace.

2 Sen. And shak's his threatening sword
Against the walls of Athens.

Therefore, Timon,—
Tim. Well, sir, I will; therefore, I will: sir
Thus,—
If Alcibiades kill my countrymen,
Let Alcibiades know this of Timon.
That—Timon cares not. But if he sack fair Athens,
And take our goodly aged men by the beards,
Giving our holy virgins to the stain
Of contumacious, beastly, mad-brain'd war;
Then, let him know,—and tell him, Timon says it,
In pity of our aged, and our youth,
I cannot choose but tell him, that—I care not,
And let hi' take it at worst; for their knives care not,
While you have threats to answer: for myself,
There's not a whittle in the unruay camp,
But I do prize it at my love, before
The experience, or the news, which that in Athens.
So I leave you
To the protection of the prosperous gods,
As thieves to keepers.

Flav. Stay not, all's in vain.

Tim. Why, I was writing of my epitaph,
It will be seen to-morrow: My long sickness
Of health, and living, now begins to mend,
And nothing brings me all things. Go, live still;

Be Alcibiades your plague, you his,
And last so long enough!

1 Sen. We speak in vain.

Tim. But yet I love my country, and am not
One that rejoices in the common wreck,
Too common fruit doth put it.

1 Sen. That's well spoken.

Tim. Command me to my loving countrymen,—
1 Sen. These words become your lips as they pass

2 Sen. And enter in our ears, like great triumphers
In their applauding gates.

Tim. Command me to them;
And tell them, that, to ease them of their griefs,
Their fears of hostile strokes, their aches, losses,
Their pangs of love, with other incident throes
That nature's fragile vessel doth sustain
In life's uncertain voyage, I will some kindness do
them:
I'll teach them to prevent wild Alcibiades' wrath.
2 Sen. If I like this well, he will return again.
Tim. I have a tree, which grows here in my close,
That mine own use invites me to cut down,
And shortly must I fell it; Tell my friends,
Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree,
From high to low throughout, that whose please
To stop affliction, let him take his haste,
Come hither, ere my tree hath felt the axe,
And hang himself:—I pray you, do my greeting Flav.- Trouble me no further, thus you still shall find him.

Tim. Come not to me again: but say to Athens,
Timon hath made his everlasting mansion
Upon the beached verge of the salt flood,
Which once a day with his embossed froth
The turbulent surge shall cover; thither come,
And let my grave-stone be your oracle.—
Lips, let sour words go by, and language end:
What is amiss, plague and infection mend!
Graves only be men's works; and death, their gain!
Sue, hide thy beams! Timon hath done his reign.

[Exit Timon.]

1 Sen. His discontentes are unremovably
Coupled to nature.

2 Sen. Our hope in him is dead: let us return,
And strain what other means is left unto us
In our dear peril.

1 Sen. It requires swift foot. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Walls of Athens.

Enter Two Senators, and a Messenger.

2 Sen. Thou hast painfully discover'd; are his files
As full as thy report.

Mess. Besides, his expedition promises
Present approach.

2 Sen. We stand much hazard, if they bring not Timon.

Mess. I met a courier, one mine ancient friend;
Whom, though in general part we were oppos'd,
Yet our old love made a particular force,
And made us speak like friends:—this man was,
riding
From Alcibiades to Timon's cave,
With letters of entreaty, which imported
His fellowship the cause against your city,
In part for his sake mov'd.

Enter Senators from Timon.

1 Sen. Here come our brothers.

3 Sen. No talk of Timon, nothing of him expect—
The enemies' drum is heard, and fearful scouring
Both choke the air with dust: In, and prepare;
Ours is the fall, I fear; our foes the snare. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Woods. Timon's Cave, and a Tomb-stone seen.

Enter a Soldier, seeking Timon.

Sold. By all description this should be the place,
Who's here? speak, ho!—No answer?—What is this?
Timon is dead, who hath outstretch'd his span;
Some beast reared this; there does not live a man.
Dead, sure; and this his grave.—
What's on this tomb I cannot read; the character
I'll take with wax:—
Our captain hath in every figure skill;
An ag'd interpreter, though young in days:
Before prond Athens he's set down by this,
Whose fell the mark of his ambition is. [Exit.

SCENE V.—Before the walls of Athens.

Trumpets sound. Enter Alcibiades and Forces.

Alcib. Sound to this coward and lascivious
Our terrible approach. [A parley sounded.

Enter Senators on the walls.

Till now you have gone on, and fill'd the time
With all licentious measure, making your wills
The scope of justice; till now, myself, and such
As slept within the shadow of your power,
Have wander'd with our travers'd arms, and breath'd
Our sufferance vainly: Now the time is flush,
When crouching marrow, in the bearer stronger,
Cries, of itself, No more: now breathless wrong
Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease;
And pury insolence shall break his wind,
With fear, and horrid flight.

1 Sen. Noble, and young,
When thy first griefs were but a mere conceit,
Ere thou hadst power, or we had cause of fear,
We sent to thee, to give thy rage balm,
To wipe out our ingratitude with loves
Above their quantity.

2 Sen. So did we woo
Transformed Timon to our city's love,
By hnnhme message, and by promis'd means;
We were not all unkind, nor all deserve
The common stroke of war.

1 Sen. These walls of ours
Were not erected by their hands, from whom
You reeived'd your griefs; nor are they such
That these great towers, trophies, and schools should fall
For private faults in them.

2 Sen. Nor are they living,
Who were the motives that you first went out;
Shame, that they wanted cunning, in excess
Hath broke their hearts. March, noble lord,
Into our city with thy banners spread:
By decimation, and a rithed death,
(If thy revenges hanger for that food,
Which nature loathes,) take thou the destin'd tenth;
And by the hazard of the spotted die,
Let die the spotted.

1 Sen. All have not offended;
For those that were, it is not square, to take,
On those that are, revenges: crimes, like lands,
Are not inherited. Then, dear countryman,

Bring in thy ranks, but leave without thy rage:
Spare thy Athenian cradle, and those kin,
Which, in the bluster of thy wrath, must fall
With those that have offended: like a shepherd
Approach the fold, and cull the infected forth,
But kill not all together.

2 Sen. What thou wilt,
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile,
Thaew to't with thy sword.

1 Sen. Set but thy foot
Against our rampir'd gates, and they shall ope;
So thou wilt send thy gentle heart before,
To say thou'lt enter friendly.

2 Sen. Throw thy glove;
Or any token of thine honour else,
That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress,
And not as our confusion, all thy powers
Shall make their harbors in our town, till we
Have seal'd thy full desire.

Alcib. Then there's my glove;
Descend, and open your uncharged ports;
Those enemies of Timon's, and mine own,
Whom you yourselves shall set on for reproof,
Fall, and no more: and,—to atone your fears
With my more noble meaning,—not a man
Shall pass his quarter, or offend the stream
Of regular justice in your towns and cities,
But shall be remedied, to your public laws,
At heaviest answer.

Both. 'Tis most nobly spoken.

Alcib. Descend, and keep your words.

The Senators descend, and open the gates.

Enter a Soldier.

Sol. My noble general, Timon is dead;
Entomb'd upon the very hem o'the sea;
And, on his grave-stone, this inscription; which
With wax I brought away, whose soft impression
Interprets for my poor ignorance.

Alcib. [Reads.] Here lies a wretched corpse, of wretched soul bereft.

Seek not my name: A plague consume you wicked sailiffs left!

Here lie I Timon; who, alive, all living men did hate:
Pass by, and curse thy fill; but pass and stay not here thy gait.

These well express in thee thy latter spirits:
Though thou abhor'dst in us our human grief,
Scorn'dst our brain's flow, and those our droppers which
From niggard nature fall, yet rich conceit
Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for eye
On thy low grave, on faults forgiven. Dead
Is noble Timon; of whose memor-
Hereafter more.—Bring me into your city,
And I will use the olive with my sword:
Make war breed peace; make peace stilt war;
make each
Prescribe to other, as each other's leech.
Let our drums strike. [Exeunt.
ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter a company of mutinous Citizens, with staves, clubs, and other weapons.

1 Cit. Before we proceed any further, hear me speak.
2 Cit. Speak, speak. [Several speaking at once.
1 Cit. You are all resolved rather to die, than to famish?
2 Cit. Resolved, resolved.
1 Cit. First you know, Calus Marcius is chief enemy to the people.
2 Cit. We know't, we know't.
1 Cit. Let us kill him, and we'll have corn at our own price. Is't a verdict?
2 Cit. No more talking on't: let it be done: away, away.
2 Cit. One word, good citizens.
1 Cit. We are accounted poor citizens: the patricians, good: What authority surfeits on, would relieve us; if they would yield us but the superfluity, while it ware wholesome, we might guess, they relieved us humanely; but they think, we are too dear; the leanness that afflicts us, the object of our misery, is an inventory to particularize their abundance; our sufferance is a gain to them.
—Let us revenge this with our pikes, ere we become rakes: for the gods know, I speak this in honour for bread, not in thirst for revenge.
2 Cit. Would you proceed especially against Calus Marcius?
1 Cit. Against him first; he's a very dog to the commonalty.
2 Cit. Consider you what services he has done for his country?
1 Cit. Very well; and could be content to give him good report for't, but that he pays himself with being proud.
2 Cit. Nay, but speak not maliciously.
1 Cit. I say unto you, what he hath done famously, he did it to that end; though soft-conscience'd men can be content to say, it was for his country, he did it to please his mother, and to be partly proud; which he is, even to the altitude of his virtue.
2 Cit. What he cannot help in his nature, you account a vice in him: You must in no way say, he is covetous.
1 Cit. If I must not, I need not be barren of accusations; he hath faults, with surplus, to tire in repetition. [Shouts within.] What shouts are these? The other side o'the city is risen: Why stay we praying here? to the Capitol.
2 Cit. Come, come.
1 Cit. Soft; who comes here

CORIOLANUS.

PERSONS REPRESENTED.

Caius Marcius Coriolanus, a noble Roman.
Titus Lartius,
Cominius,
Menenius Agrippa, friend to Coriolanus,
Scinius Velutius,
Junius Brutus,
Young Marcius, son to Coriolanus.
A Roman Herald.
Tullus Aufidius, general of the Volscians.
Lieutenant to Aufidius.
Conspirators with Aufidius.

A Citizen of Antium.
Two Volscian Guards.
Volumnia, mother to Coriolanus.
Volscian, wife to Coriolanus.
Valeria, friend to Virgilia.
Gentlewoman, attending Virgilia.

Roman and Volscian Senators, Patricians, Eediles, Lieutenants, Soldiers, Citizens, Messengers, Servants to Aufidius, and other Attendants.

SCENE,—partly in Rome; and partly in the territories of the Volscians and Antiates.

Enter Menenius Agrippa.

2 Cit. Worthy Menenius Agrippa; one that hath always loved the people.
1 Cit. He's one honest enough; 'Would, all the rest were so!
Men. What work's, my countrymen, in hand? Where go you
With bats and clubs? The matter? Speak, I pray you.
1 Cit. Our business is not unknown to the senate; they have had inkling, this fortnight, what we intend to do, which now we'll show 'em in deeds. They say, poor suitors have strong breasts; they shall know, we have strong arms too.
Men. Why, masters, may good friends, mine honest neighbours,
Will you undo yourselves?
1 Cit. We cannot, sir, we are undone already.
Men. I tell you, friends, most charitable care Have the patricians of you. For your wants,
Your suffering in this dearth, you may as well Strike at the heaven with your staves, as lift them Against the Roman state; whose course will on The way it takes, cracking ten thousand curbs Of more strong link thanunder, than can ever Appear in your impediment: For the dearth,
The gods, not the patricians, make it; and Your knees to them, not arms, must help. Alack,
You are transported by calamity
Thither where you tend you; and you slander The helms o'the state, who care for you like fathers,
When you curse them as enemies.
1 Cit. Care for us!—True, indeed!—They never cared for us yet. Suffer us to famish, and their store-houses cram'd with grain; make edicts for usury, to support usurers: repeal daily any whole-some act established against the rich; and provide more piercing statutes daily, to chain up and restrain the poor. If the wars eat us not up, they will; and there's all the love they bear us.
Men. Either you must Confess yourselves wondrous malicious, Or be accus'd of folly. I shall tell you A pretty tale; it may be, you have heard it;
But, since it serves my purpose, I will venture To scale it a little more.
1 Cit. Well, I'll hear it, sir; yet you must not think to fob off our disgrace with a tale: but, an't please you, deliver.
Men. There was a time, when all the body's members Rebell'd against the belly; thus accus'd it— That only like a gulf it did remain I 'the midst o'the body, idle and inactive, Still cupboarding the viand, never bearing
Like labour with the rest; where the other instru-

did see, and hear, devise, instruct, walk, feel,
And, mutually participate, did minister
Unto the appetite and affection common
Of the whole body. The belly answered,—

1 CIt. Well, sir, what is the belly?—

Men. Sir, I shall tell you.—With a kind of smile,
Which ne'er came from the lungs, but even thus,
(For, look you, I may make the belly smile,
As well as speak,) it tauntingly replied
To the discontented members, the mutinous parts
That envied its receipt: even in the most filthy
As you malign our senators, for that
They are not such as you.

1 CIt. Your belly's answer: What?

The elegantly-crowned head, the vigilant eye,
The counsellor-heart, the arm our soldier,
Our steed the leg, the tongue our trumpeteer,
With other muniments and petty helps
In this our fabric, if that they

Men. What then?—

'Fore me, this fellow speaks!—what then? what then?

1 CIt. Should by the corromtant belly be restrain'd,
Who is the o' the body?

Men. Well, what then?

1 CIt. The former agents, if they did complain,
What could the belly answer?

Men. I will tell you;

If you'll bestow a small (of what you have little,) Patience, a while, you'll hear the belly's answer.

1 CIt. You are long about it.

Men. Note me this, good friend;
Your most grave belly was deliberate,
Not rash like his accusers, and thus answer'd:

True is it, my incorporeal friends, quoth he,
That I receive the general food at first,
Which you do live upon: and fit it is;
Because I am the store-house, and the shop
Of the whole body: But if you do remember,
I send it through the rivers of your blood,
Even to the court, the heart,—to the seat of the brain;
And, through the cranks and offices of man,
The strongest nerves, and small, inferior wins,
From me receive that natural competency
Whereby they live: And though that at all once,
You, my good friends, (this says the belly,) mark me,—

1 CIt. Ay, sir; well, well.

Men. Though all at once cannot
See that I do deliver out to ear,
Yet I can make my audit up, that all
From me do back receive the flower of all,
And leave me but the bran. What say you to't?

1 CIt. It was an answer: How apply you this?

Men. The senators of Rome are this good belly,
And you the mutinous members: For examine
Their counsels, and their cares; digest things
Rightly,
Touching the weal o'the common; you shall find,
No publick benefit, which you receive,
But it proceeds, or comes, from them to you,
And no way from yourselves.—What do you think?

You, the great toe of this assembly?—

1 CIt. If the great toe? Why the great toe?

Men. For that being one o'the lowest, basest,
Poorest,
Of this most wise rebellion, thou go'st foremost:
Thou rascal, that art worst in blood, to run
Lead'st first, to win some vantage.—

But make you ready your stiffs' bats and clubs;
Beastish rats are at the point of battle,
The one side must have bale.—Hail, noble Marcius!

Enter Caius Marcius.

Mar. Thanks.—What's the matter, you dissentious rogues,
That rubbing the poor itch of your opinion,
Make yourselves scabs?

1 CIt. We have ever your good word.

Mar. He that will give good words to thee, will do thee

Beneath abhorring.—What would you have, you
curs,
That like nor peace, nor war? the one affrights
you,
The other makes you proud. He that trusts you,
Where he should find you lions, finds you hares;
Where foxes, geeze: You are no surer, no,
Than is the coal of fire upon the ice,
Or halstone in the sun. Your virtue is,
To make him worthy, whose offence subdues him,
And curse that justice did it. Who deserves greatness,
Deserves your hate: and your affections are
A sick man's appetite, who desires most that
Which would increase his evil. He that depends Upon your favour, swims with fins of lead,
And hews down oaks with rushes. Hang ye! Trus-ye?

With every minute you do change a mind;
And call him noble, that was now your hate,
Him vile, that was your Garland. What's the matter,
That in these several places of the city
You cry against the noble senate, who,
Under the gods, keep you in awe, which else
Would feed on one another?—What's their seeking?

Men. For corn at their own rates; whereof, they say,
The city is well store'd.

Mar. Hang 'em! They say they

They'll sit by the fire, and presume to know
What's done i'the Capitol: who's like to rise,
Who thrives, and who declines: side factions, and True Conjectural marriage; making parties strong,
And feebling such as stand not in their liking,
Below their cobbled shoes. They say, there's grain enough.
Would the nobility lay aside their ruth,
And let me use my sword, I'd make a quarry
With thousands of these quarter'd slaves, as high
As I could pick my lance.

Men. Nay, these are almost thoroughly persuaded:
For though abundantly they lack discretion,
Yet are they passing cowardly. But, I beseech
you,
What says the other troop?

Mar. They are dissol'ed: Hang 'em!
They said, they were an hungry; sigh'd forth proverbs:—

That, hunger broke stone walls; that, dogs must eat;
That, meat was made for mouths; that, the gods sent not
Corn for the rich men only:—With these shreds
They t'ented their compliments; which being an-swer'd,
And a petition granted them, a strange one,
(To break the heart of generosity,
And make bold power look pale,) they threw their caps
As they would hang them on the horns o'the moon,
Shouting their emulation.

Men. What is granted them?

Mar. Five tribunes to defend their vulgar wis-
doms,
Of their own choice: One's Junius Brutus,
Sicinius Velutus, and I know not.—Sicinius
The rabble should have first unroof'd the city,
Ere so prevail'd with me; it will in time
Win upon power, and throw forth greater themes
For insurrection's arguing.

Men. This is strange.

Mar. Go, get you home, you fragments!

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. Where's Caius Marcius?

Mar. Here: What's the matter?
How the despatch is made; and in what fashion, More than in singularity, he goes
Upon his present action.

Bnu. Let's along. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Corioli. The Senate-House.

Enter Tullius Aufidius, and certain Senators.

1 S. n. So, your opinion is, Aufidius,
That they of Rome are enter'd in our counsels,
And know how we proceed.

Auf. Is it not yours?

What ever hath been thought on in this state,
That could be brought to bodily act ere Rome
Had circumvention? 'Tis not four days gone,
Since I heard thence; these are the words: I think,
I have the letter here; yes, here it is: [Reads.
They have press'd a power, but it is not known
Whether for east, or west: The death is great;
The people mutinous: and it is rumour'd,
Cominius, Marcus your old enemy,
(Who is of Rome worse hated than of you),
And Titus Lartius, a most valiant Roman,
These three lead on this preparation,
Whither 'tis bent: most likely, 'tis for you:
Consider of 't.]

Our army's in the field:
We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready
To answer us.

Auf. Nor did you think it folly,
To keep your great pretences veil'd, till when They needs must show themselves; which in the hatching,
It seem'd, appear'd to Rome. By the discovery,
We shall be shorten'd in our aim; which was,
To take in many towns, ere, almost, Rome
Should know we were afoot.

2 Sen. Noble Aufidius,
Take your commission; hie you to your bands:
Let us alone to guard Corioli:
If they set down before us, for the remove Bring up your army; but, I think, you'll find
They have not prepar'd for us.

O, doubt not that;
I speak from certainties. Nay, more.
Some parcels of their powers are forth already,
And only hitherward. I leave your honours.
If we and Caius Marcus chance to meet,
'Tis sworn between us, we shall never strike
Till one can do no more.

All. The gods assist you! Auf. And keep your honours safe!

1 Sen. Farewell.

2 Sen. Farewell.

All. Farewell. [Exeunt.

Enter Volumnia and Virgilia: They sit down on two low stools, and sen.

Vol. I pray you, daughter, sing; or express your-sell in a more comfortable sort: If my son were my husband, I should freelier rejoice in that absence wherein he won honour, than in the embrac-ements of his bed, where he would show most love.
When yet he was but tender-bodied, and the only son of my womb; when youth with comeliness plucked all gaze his way; when, for a day of kings' entertainis, a mother should not sell him an hour from her holding; I — considering how honour would become such a person; that it was no better than picture-like to hang by the wall, if renown made it not stir,—was pleased to let him seek danger where he was like to find fame. To a cruel war I sent him; from whence he returned, his brows bound with oak. I tell thee, daughters,—I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he was a man-child, than now in first seeing he had proved himself a man.

Vir. But had he died in the business, madam, in how then?
Vol. Then his good report should have been my son; I therein would have found issue. Hear me profess sincerely.—Had I a dozen sons,—each in my love alike, and none less dear than thine and my good Marcius,—I had rather had eleven die nobly for their country, than one voluptuously surfeit out of action.

Enter a Gentlewoman.

Gent. Madam, the lady Valeria is come to visit you.

Vir. 'Beshrew you, give me leave to retire myself.

Vol. Indeed, you shall not.

Methinks, I hear hither your husband's drum; See him pluck Auffidius down by the hair; As children from a bear, the Volces shunning him:

Methinks, I see him stamp thus, and call thus,—

"Come on, you cowards, you were in for fear, Though you were born in Rome: His bloody hrow With his mail'd hand then wiping, forth he goes; Like to a harvest-man, that task'd to mow
Or all, or lose his hire.

Vir. His bloody bow! O, Jupiter, no blood! Vol. Away, you fool! it more becomes a man, Than gild his trophies: The breasts of Hecuba, When she did suckle Hector, look'd not lovelier Than Hector's forehead, when it spit forth blood At Grecian swords' contending.—Tell Valeria, We are fit to bid her welcome.

[Exit Gent.

Vir. Heaven bless my lord from fell Auffidius! Vol. He'll beat Auffidius' head below his knee, And tread upon his neck.

Re-enter Gentlewoman, with Valeria and her Usher.

Val. My ladies both, good day to you.

Vol. Sweet madam,

Vir. I am glad to see your ladyship.

Val. How do you both? you are manifest house-keepers. What, are you sewing here? A fine spot, in good faith.—How does your little son?

Vir. I thank your ladyship; well, good madam.

Vol. He had rather see the swords, and hear a drum, than look upon his school-master.

Val. O' my word, the father's son: I'll swear, 'tis a very pretty boy. O' my truth, I looked upon him o' Wednesday half an hour together: he has such a confirmed countenance. I saw him run after a gilded butterfly; and when he caught it, he let it go again; and after it again; and over and over again; and up and again; and catched it again; or whether his fall enraged him, or how 'twas, he did so set his teeth, and tear it; O, I warrant, how he mammocked it!

Vol. One of his father's moods.

Vir. Indeed is, 'tis a noble child.

Vir. A crack, madam.

Val. Come, lay aside your stitches; I must have you play the idle huswife with me this afternoon.

Vir. No, good madam; I will not out of doors.

Vol. Not out of doors!

Val. She shall, she shall.

Vir. Indeed, no, by your patience: I will not over the threshold, till my lord return from the wars.

Val. Fye, you confine yourself most unreasonably; Come, you must go visit the good lady that lies in.

Vir. I will wish her speedy strength, and visit her with my prayers; but I cannot go thither.

Val. Why, I pray you?

Vir. 'Tis not to save labour, nor that I want love.

Val. You would be another Penelope: yet, they say, all the yarn she spun, in Ulysses' absence, did but fill the har of all her maid. Come: I would, your cambrick were as sensible as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for pity. Come, you shall go with us.

Vir. No, good madam, pardon me; indeed, I will not, Madam.

Val. In truth, I am, go with me; and I'll tell you excellent news of your husband.

Vir. O, good madam, there can be none yet.

Val. Verily, I do not jest with you; there came news from him last night.

Vir. Indeed, madam?

Val. In earnest, it's true; I heard a senator speak it. Thus it is:—The Volces have an army forth; against whom Cominius the general is gone, with one part of our Roman power; your lord, and Titus Lartius, are set down before their city Corioli; they nothing doubt prevailing, and to make it brief wars. This is true, on mine honour; and so, I pray, go with us.

Vir. Give me excuse, good madam; I will obey you in every thing hereafter.

Val. Let her alone; lady, as she is now, she will but disease our better mirth.

Val. In truth, I think, she would:—Pare you well then.—Come, good sweet lady.—Pr'ythee, Virginia, turn thy solemnness out o' door, and go along with us.

Vir. No; at a word, madam; indeed, I must not. I wish you much mirth.

Val. Well, then farewell. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Before Corioli.

Enter, with drums and colours, Marcia, Titus Lartius, Officers, and Soldiers. To them a Messenger.

Mar. Yonder comes news:—A wager, they have met.

Lart. My horse to yours, u.

Mar. 'Tis done.

Lart. Agreed.

Mar. Say, has our general met the enemy?

Mess. They lie in view; but have not spoke as yet.

Lart. So, the good horse is mine.

Mar. I'll buy him of you.

Lart. No, I'll nor sell, nor give him: lend you him, I will,

For half a hundred years.—Summon the town.

Mar. How far off lie these armies?

Mess. Within this mile and half.

Mar. Then shall we hear their laughter, and they ours.

Now, Mars, I pr'ythee, make us quick in work; That we with smoking swords may march from hence, and be before the enemy.

To help our fielded friends!—Come, blow thy blast.

They sound a parley. Enter, on the walls, some Senators, and others.

Tullus Auffidius, Is he within your walls?

1 Sen. No, nor a man that fears you less than he, That's lesser than a little. Hark, our drums [Alarums afar off. Are bringing forth our yonth: We'll break our walls, Rather than they shall pound us up: Our gates, Which yet seem shut, we have but pin'd with rushes; They'll open of themselves. Hark you, far off; [Other alarums.

There is Auffidius; list, what work he makes Amongst your cloven army.

Mar. O, they are at it!

Lart. Their noise be our instruction.—Ladders, ho!

The Volces enter, and pass over the stage.

Mar. They fear us not, but issue forth their city.

Now put your shields before your hearts, and fight With hearts more proof than shields.—Advance, brave Titus: They do disdain us much beyond our thoughts,
Which makes me sweat with wrath.—Come on, my fellows; He that retires, I'll take him for a Volsc, And he shall feel mine edge.

Aitrum, and exiunt Romans and Volscs, fighting. The Romans are beaten back to their trenches. Re-enter Marius.

Mar. All the contagion of the south light on you; You shames of Rome!—you herd of—Boils and plagues Plaster you o'er; that you may be abhor'd Further than seen; and one infect another Against the wind a mile! You souls of gese, That hear the shapes of men, how have you run From slaves that apes would beat! Pluto and hell! All hurt behind; backs red, and faces pale With flight and agued fear! Mendi, and charge Or, by the fires of heaven, I'll leave the foe, And make my wars on you; look to't; Come on; If you'll stand fast, we'll beat them to their wives; As they to our trenches followed.

Another alarum. The Volscs and Romans re-enter, and the fight is renewed. The Volscs retire into Corioli, and Marius follows them to the gates.

So, now the gates are ope.—Now prove good secons: 'Tis for the followers fortune widens them, Not for the fliers: mark me, and do the like. [He enters the gates, and is shut in.

1 Sol. Fool-hardiness; not I. 2 Sol. Nor I. 3 Sol. See, they have shut him in. [Alarum continues. All. To the pot, I warrant him. Enter Titus Lartius.

Lart. What is become of Marius?

All. Slain, sir, doubtless.

1 Sol. Following the fliers at the very heels, With them he enters: who, upon the sudden, Clapp'd-to their gates; he is himself alone, To answer all the city.

Lart. O noble fellow! Who, sensible, outdares his senseless sword, And, when it bows, stands up! Thou art e't, Marius: A carhuncle entire, as hig as thou art, Were not so rich a jewel. Thou wast a soldier Even to Caesar's wish and terrible. Only in strokes: but, with thy grim looks, And the thunder-like perception of thy sounds, Thou mad'st thine enemies shake, as if the world Were feverous, and did tremble.

Re-enter Marius, bleeding, assaulted by the enemy. 1 Sol. Look, sir. Lart. 'Tis Marius: Let's fetch him off, or make remain alike. [They fight, and att enter the city.

SCENE V.—Within the Town. A Street. Enter certain Romans, with spoils.

1 Rom. This will I carry to Rome. 2 Rom. And I this. 3 Rom. A murraim on't! I took this for silver. [Alarum continues still after off. Enter Marius and Titus Lartius, with a trumpet.

Mar. See here these movers, that do prize their hours, At a crack'd d'rachm! Cushions, leaden spoons, Irons of a doit, doublets that hangmen would Bury with those that wore them, these base slaves, Ere yet the flight be done, pack up.—Down with them.— And hark, what noise the general makes!—To him:

There is the man of my soul's hate, Aufidius, Piercing our Romans: Then, valiant Titus, take Convenient numbers to make good the city; Whilst I, with those that have the spirit, will haste To help Cominius.

Lart. Worthy sir, thou bleed'st; Thy exercise hath been too violent for a Second course of fight.

Mar. Sir, praise me not: My work hath yet not warm'd me: Fare you well. The blood I drop is rather physical Than dangerous to me; To Aufidius thus I will appear, and fight.

Lart. Now the fair goddess, Fortune, Fall deep in love with thee; and her great charms Misguide thy opposers' swords! I Bold gentleman, Prosperity be thy page!

Mar. Thy friend no less Than those she placeth highest! So, farewell. Lart. Thou wastiest Marius!—

[Exit Marius. Go, sound thy trumpet in the market-place; Call thither all the officers of the town, Where they shall know our mind: Away. [Exeunt.}

SCENE VI.—Near the Camp of Cominius. Enter Cominius and Forces, retreating.

Com. Breathe you, my friends; well fought: we are come off Like Romans, neither foolish in our stands, Nor cowardly in retire: believe me, sirs, We shall be charg'd again. Whiles we have struck, By interims, and conveying gusts, we have heard The charges of our friends:—The Roman gods, Lead their successes as we wish our own; That both our powers, with smiling fronts encoun tering,

Enter a Messenger.

May you give thankful sacrifice!—Thy news?

Mess. The citizens of Corioli have issued, And given to Lartius and to Marius battle; I saw our party to their trenches driven, And then I came away.

Com. Though thou speak'st truth, Methinks, thou speak'st not well. How long is't since?

Mess. Above an hour, my lord. Com. 'Tis not a mile; briefly we heard their drums; How could'st thou in a mile confound an hour, And bring thy news so late?

Mess. Spies of the Volscs Held me in chase, that I was forc'd to wheel Three or four miles about; else had I, sir, Half an hour since brought my e-port.

Enter Marius.

Com. Who's yonder, That does appear as he were flay'd? O gods! He has the stamp of Marius; and I have Before-time seen him thus.

Mar. Come I too late?

Com. The shepherd knows not thunder: from a tabor, More than I know the sound of Marius' tongue From every meaner man's.

Mar. Come I too late?

Com. Ay, if you come not in the blood of others, But mantled in your own.

Mar. 0! let me clip you In arms as sound, as when I woo'd; in heart As merry, as when our nuptial day was done, And tapers burn'd to hedward.

Com. Flower of warriers, How is't with Titus Lartius?

Mar. As with a man busied about decrees: Condemning some to death, and some to exile; Ransoming him, or pitying, threatening the other; Holding Corioli in the name of Rome,
Even like a fawning greyhound in the leash,
To let him slip at will.

Com. Where is that slave,
Which told me they had beat you to your trenches?
Where is he? Call him hither.

Mar. Let him alone,
He did inform the truth: But for our gentlemen,
The common file, (A plague!—Tribunes for them!) The mouse ne'er shunn'd the cat, as they did this budge.
From rascals worse than they.

Com. But how prevail'd you?
Mar. Will the time serve to tell? I do not think.
Where is the enemy? Are you lords of the field?
If not, why cease you till you are so?

Com. We have at disadvantage fought, and did Retire, to win out purpose.

Mar. How lies their battle? Know you on which side
They have plac'd their men of trust?

Com. As I guess, Marcus, Their bands in the vaward are the Antiates, Of their best trust; o'er them Anfibius, Their very heart of hope.

I do beseech you,
By all the battles wherein we have fought,
By the blood we have shed together, by the vows
We have made to endure friends, that you directly Set men against Anfibius, and his Antiates:
And that you not delay the present; but,
Filling the air with swords advance'd, and darts,
We prove this very hour.

Com. Though I could wish
You were conduct'd to a gentle bath,
And balms applied to you, yet dare I never Deny your asking; take your choice of those
That best can aid your action.

Mar. Those are they
That most are willing:—If any such be here,
(As it were sin to doubt,) that love this painting
Wherein you see me smear'd; if any fear
Lesser his person than an ill report;
If any think, brave death outweighs bad life,
And that his country's dearer than himself;
Let him, alone, or so many, so minded,
Wave thus, (waving his hand,) to express his disposition,
And follow Marcus.

[They all shout, and wave their swords; take him up in their arms, and cast up their caps.

O me, alone! Make you a sword of me?
If these shows be not outward, which of you
But is four Voices? None of you, but is Able to bear against the great Anfibius:
A shield as hard as his. A certain number,
Though thanks to all, must I select: the rest
Shall bear the business in some other fight,
As cause will be obey'd. Please you to march;
And four shall quickly draw out my command,
Which men are best inclin'd.

Com. March on, my fellows:
Make good this ostentation, and you shall Divide in all with us. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—The Gates of Corioli.

Titus Lartius, having set a guard upon Corioli, going with a drum and trumpet towards Cominius and Caius Marcus, enters with a Lieutenant, a party of Soldiers, and a Scout.

Lart. So, let the ports be guarded; keep your duties,
As I have set them down. If I do send, despatch Those carriages to our aid; the rest will serve
For a short holding: If we lose the field,
We cannot keep the town.

Lieu. Fear not our care, sir.

Lart. Hence, and shut your gates upon ns.—
Our guider, come to the Roman camp conduct us. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII.—A Field of Battle between the Roman and the Volscian Camps.

Alarum. Enter Marcus and Anfibius.

Mar. I'll fight with none but thee; for I do hate thee
Worse than a promise-breaker.

Anf. We hate like; Not Afric owns a serpent, I abhor
More than thy fame and envy: Fix thy foot.

Mar. Let the first bodger die the other's slave,
And the gods doom him after!

Anf. If I fly, Marcins,
Halloo me like a hare.

Mar. Within these three hours, Tullius,
Alone I fought in your Corioli walls,
And made what work I pleas'd: 'Tis not my blood,
Wherein thou seest me mask'd: for thy revenge,
Wrench up thy power to the highest.

Wert thou the Hector,
That was the whip of your brag'd progeny,
Thou should'st not scepe me here.—
They fight, and certain Voices come to the smart of Anfibius.

Officers, and not valiant—you have sham'd me
In your condemned seconds.

[Exeunt fighting, driven in by Marcus.]

SCENE IX.—The Roman Camp.

Alarum. A retreat is sounded. Flourish. Enter at one side, Cominius, and Romans; at the other side, Marcus, with his arm in a scarf, and other Romans.

Com. If I should tell thee o'er this thy day's work,
Though I believe thy deeds; but I'll report it,
Where senators shall mingle tears with smiles;
Where great patriots shall attend, and shrug
'T, the end, admire; where ladies shall be frighted,
And, gladly quak'd, hear more; where the dull
Dogs, dunces, smirch'd,
That, with the fusty plebeians, hate thine honours,
Shall say, against their hearts,—We thank the gods,
Our Rome hath such a soldier!—
Yet can't thou to a morsel of this feast,
Having fully din'd before.

Enter Titus Lartius, with his power, from the pursuit.

Lart. O general,
Here is the steed, we the caparison:
Hadst thou beheld—

Mar. Pray now, no more: my mother,
Who has a charter to extol her blood,
When she does praise me, grieves me. I have done,
As your command, that's what I can; induc'd
As you have been; that's for my country:
He, that has but effect'd his good will
Hath overtaken mine act.

Com. You shall not be
The grave of your deserving. Rome must know
The value of her own: 'twere a concealment
Worse than a theft, no less than a traducement,
To hide your doings; and to silence that,
Which, to the spite and top of praises vouch'd,
Would I did but modest. Therefore, I beseech you,
(In sign of what you are, not to reward
What you have done,) before our army hear me.

Mar. I have some wounds upon me, and they
To hear themselves remember'd.

Com. Should they not, Well might they fester 'gainst ingratitude,
And tent themselves with death. Of all the horses,
(Whereof we have taken good, and good stories,) of all
The treasure, in this field achiev'd, and city,
We render you the tenth: to be ta'en forth,
Before the common distribution, at
Your only choice.

Mar. I thank you, general.
But cannot make my heart consent to take
A bristle to pay my sword: I do refuse it;
And stand upon my common part with those
That have beheld the doing.
[Flourish. They all cry, Marcus! Marcus! Marcus! Cast up thy arms and lances: Cominius and Lartius stand bare.

Mar. May these same instruments, which you pro fane,
Never sound more! When drums and trumpets shall
I the stage to prove flatteners, let courts and cities be Made all of false-fact'd soothing! When steel grows
Soft as the parasite's silk, let him be made
An overseer of the wars! No more, I say;
For that I have not wash'd my nose that bled,
Or foil'd some debile wretch,—which, without
Here's many else have done,—you shoult me forth
In acclamations hyberbolical:
As if I loved my little should be dilet
In praises sauc'd with lies.
Com. Too modest are you;
More cruel to your good report, than grateful
To us that give you truly: by your patience,
If 'gainst yourself you be incens'd, we'll put you (Like one that means his proper harm,) in mana
Then reason safely with you;—Therefore, be it known,
As to us, to all the world, that Caius Marcius
Wears this war's garland: in token of the which
My noble steed, known to the camp, I give him,
With all his trim belonging; and, from this time,
For what he did before Corioli, call him,
With all the applause and clamour of the host,
Caius Marcius Coriolanus.—
Bear the addition nobly ever the [Flourish. Trumpets sound, and drums.
All. Caius Marcius Coriolanus! Cor. I will go wash;
And when my face is fair, you shall perceive
Whether I blush, or no: Howbeit, I thank you:—
I mean to stride your steed; and, at all times,
To undercress your good addition,
To the fairness of my power.
Com. So, to our tent:
Where, ere we do repose us, we will write
To Rome of our success. —You, Titus Lartius,
Must to Corioli back: send us to Rome
The best, with whom we may articulate,
For their own good, and ours.
Lart. I shall, my lord.
Com. The gods begin to mock me. I that now
Refts'd most princely gifts, am bound to beg
Of my lord general.
Com. Let it be,
Take it; 'tis yours. —What is't?
Cor. I sometime lay, here in Corioli,
At a poor man's house; he us'd me kindly:—
He cried tome; I saw him prisoner,
But then Aufidius was within my view,
And wrath o'erwhelm'd my pity: I request you
To give my poor host freedom. O, well begg'd!
Com. Were he the butcher of my son, he should Be free, as is the wind. Deliver him, Titus.
Lart. Marcius, his name?
Cor. By Jupiter, forget it:—
I am weary; yea, my memory is tir'd.—
Have we no wine here?
Com. We go to our tent:
The blood upon your visage dries; 'tis time
It should be look'd to: come. [Exeunt.

SCENE X.—The Camp of the Volscs.
[Flourish. Cornets. Enter Tullius Aufidius, bloody, with Two or Three Soldiers.

Auf. The town is ta'en! 1 Sol. 'Twill be deliver'd back on good condition.

Auf. Condition?
I would, I were a Roman; for I cannot,
Being a Volsc, be that I am.—Condition:

What good condition can a treaty find
I the part that is at mercy? Five times, Marcius,
I have fought with thee; so often hast thou beat
me;
And would'st do so, I think, should we encounter
As often as we eat—Like the elements,
If o'er again I meet him beard to beard,
He is mine, or I am his: Mine emulation
Hath not that honour i'lt, it had: for where
I thought to crush him in an equal force, (True sword to sword,) I'll pitch at him some way;
Or wrath, or craft, may get him.

1 Sol. He's the devil.

Auf. Bolder, though not so subtle: My valour's poison'd.
With only suffering stain by him; for them
Shall fly out of itself: nor sleep, nor sanctuary,
Being naked, sick; nor fame, nor Capitol,
The prayers of priests, nor times of sacrifice,
Embarque them all of fury, shall lift up
Their rotten privilege and custom 'gainst
My hate to Marcius: where I find him, were it
At home, upon my brother's guard, even there
Again the hospitable canon, would I Wash my fierce hand in his heart. Go you to the city.
Learn, how 'tis held; and what they are, that must
Be hostages for Rome.

1 Sol. Will not you go?

Auf. I am attended at the cypress grove:
I pray you,
(Tis south the city mils,) bring me word thither
How the world goes; that to the pace of it
I may spur on my journey.

1 Sol. I shall, sir. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Rome. A publick Place.

Enter Menenius, Sicinius, and Brutos.

Men. The augurer tells me, we shall have news
to-night.

Brut. Good, or bad?

Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they love not Marcius.

Sic. Nature teaches beasts to know their friends.

Men. Pray you, who does the wolf love?

Sic. The lamb.

Men. Ay, to devour him; as the hungry plebeians would the noble Marcius.

Brut. He's a lamb indeed, that bares like a bear.

Men. He's a bear indeed, that lives like a lamb.

You two are old men; tell me one thing that I shall ask you.

Both Trib. Well, sir.

Men. In what enormity is Marcius poor, that you two have not in abundance.

Brut. He's poor in no fault, but stored with all.

Sic. Especially, in pride.

Brut. And topping all others in boasting.

Men. This is strange now: Do you two know how you are censured here in the city, I mean of us' the right hand file? Do you?

Both Trib. Why, how are we censured?

Men. Because you talk of pride now.—Will you not be angry?

Both Trib. Well, well, sir, well.

Men. Why, 'tis no great matter: for a very little chief of occasion will rob you of a great deal of patience: give your disposition the reins, and be angry at your pleasures; at the least, if you take it as a pleasure to you, in being so. You blame Marcius for being proud?

Brut. We do it not alone, sir.

Men. I know you can do very little alone; for your helps are many; or else your actions would grow wondrous single; your abilities are too infant-like, for doing much alone. You talk of pride: O, that you could turn your eyes towards the napes of your necks, and make but an interior survey of your good selves! O, that you could!

Brut. What then, sir? What? Do you think that I should discover a brace of unmeriting, proud, violent, testy magistrates, (alias, fools,) as any in Rome.

Sic. Menenius, you are known well enough too.

Men. I am known to be a humorous patrician, and there is a way that I suppose, that with not a drop of allaying Tyberv in it, said to be something imperfect, in favouring the first complaint: hasty, and Tudor-like, upon too trivial motion: one that converses more with the butt of the night, than with the forehead of the morning. What I think, I utter; and I speak in my heart. Meeting them such as men as you are, (I cannot call you Lycurguses,) if the drink you give me, touch my palate adversely, I make a crooked face at it. I cannot say, your worship has delivered the matter well, when I find the ass in compound with the major part of your syllables: and though I must be content to bear with those that say you are reverend, grave men; yet they lie deadly, that tell, you have good faces. If you see this in the map of my mind, you will be known well enough too: What harm can your hisson conspectivities glean out of this character, if I be known well enough too?

Brut. Come, sir, come, we know you well enough. You know neither me, yourselves, nor any thing. You are ambitious for poor knaves caps and legs; you wear out a good wholesome forefront, in hearing a cause between an orange-wife and a fosseter-seller; and then rejourn the controversy of it, to a second day of audience. — When you are hearing a matter between party and party, if you chance to be pinched with the cholecyst, you make faces like mummers; set up the bloody flag against all patience; and, in roaring for a chamber-pot, dismiss the controversy bleeding, more entangled by your hearing: all the peace you make in their cause, is, calling both the parties knaves: You are a pair of strange ones.

Brut. Come, come, you are well understood to be a perfect giber for the table, than a necessary bencher in the Capitol.

Men. Our very priests must become mockers, if they shall encounter such ridiculous subjects as you are. When you speak hest unto the purpose, it is not worth the wagging of your heels; and your voice does not, so no honourable a grave, as to stuff a botch's cushion, or to be entombed in an ass's pack-saddle. Yet you must he saying, Marcus is proud: who, in a cheap estimation, is worth all your predecessors, since Deucalion, though, p'raventure, some of the best of them were hereditary hangmen. Good enter your worship; more of your conversation would infect my brain, being the herdsman of the beastly plebeians: I will be bold to take my leave of you.

[Brutus and Sicinius retire to the back of the scene.

Enter Volumnia, Virgilia, and Valeria, &c.

How now, my as fair as noble ladies, (and the moon, were she earthly, no nobler,) whither do you follow your eyes so fast?

Vol. Honorable Menenius, my boy Marcus approaches; for the love of Juno, let's go. Men. Ha! Marcus coming home?

Vol. Ay, worthy Menenius; and with most proper approbation.

Men. Take my cap, Jupiter, and I thank thee—

Hoo! Marcus coming home!

Two Ladies. Nay, 'tis true. Vol. Look, here's a letter from him; the state has sent, his wife another; and, I think, there's one at home for you.

Men. I will make my very house reel to-night; — a letter for me?

Vol. Yes, certain, there's a letter for you; I saw it.

Men. A letter for me? It gives me an estate of seven years' health; in which time I will make a lip at the physician: the most sovereign prescription in Galen is but empiric, and, to this prescription of no better report than a horse-drench. Is he not wounded? he was wont to come home wounded.

Vir. O, no, no, no, no.

Vol. O, he is wounded, I thank the gods fort. Men. So do I too, if he it not too much: — Brings a victory in his pocket? — The wounds become him.

Vol. On's hrows, Menenius: he comes the third time home with the oaken Garland.

Men. Has he disciplined Aufidius soundly?

Vol. Titus Lartius writes,—they fought together, but Aufidius got off.

Men. And 'twas time for him too, I'll warrant him that: au he had staid by him, I would not have been so fidussed for all the chests in Corioli, and the gold that's in them. Is the senate possessed of this?

Vol. Good ladies, let's go: — Yes, yes, yes: the senate has letters from the general, wherein he gives my son the whole name of the war: he hath in this action outdone his former deeds double.

Vol. In troth, there's wondrous things spoke of him.

Men. Wondrous? ay, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing.

Vir. The gods grant them true!

Men. True? I'll be sworn they are true: — Where is he wounded? — God save your good worship! [To the Tribunes, who come forward.] Marcus is coming home: he has more cause to be proud. — Where is he wounded?

Vol. 'Tis the shoulder, and 'tis the left arm: There will be large cicatrizes to show the people, when he shall stand for his place. He received in the repulse of Tarquin, seven hurts but the body.

Men. One in the neck, and two in the thigh; — there's nine that I know.

Vol. He had, before this last expedition, twenty-five wounds upon him.

Men. Now it's twenty seven: every gash was an enemy's grave: [a shout and flourish.] Hark! the trumpets.

Vol. These are the ushers of Marcus: before him He carries noise, and behind him he leaves tears; Death, so dark spirit, is n'ermly arm doth lie; Which being advanced, declines; and then men die.

A sen? t. Trumpets sound. Enter Cominius and Titus Lartius; between them, Corioli, crowned with an oaken garland; with Captains, Soldiers, and a Herald.

Her. Know, Rome, that all alone Marcus did fight
Within Corioli's gates: where he hath won, With fame, a name to Caius Marcus; these In honour follows, Coriolians: —

Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolians!

Cor. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolians! [Flourish.]

All. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolians! Cor. No more of this, it does offend my heart; Pray now, no more.

Com. Look, sir, your mother,—

Cor. You have, I know, petition'd all the gods O! For my prosperity. [Knells.

Vol. Nay, my good soldier, up; My gentle Marcus, worthy Caius, and By deed-achieving honour newly nam'd, What is this to Corioli, must I call thee? But O, thy wife—

Cor. My gracious silence, h311: Would'st thou have laugh'd, had I come coff'mn home, That weep'd to see me triumph? Ah, my dear,
Act 2.

Such eyes the widows in Corioli wear,
And mothers that lack sons.

Men. Now the gods crown thee!

Cor. And live you yet?—O my sweet lady, par-

[To Valeria.

Vol. I know not where to turn:—O welcome

And welcome, general:—And you are welcome all.

Men. A hundred thousand welcomes: I could

And I could laugh; I am light and heavy: Welcome:

A curse begin at very root of his heart,
That is not glad to see thee. You are three
That Rome should dot on: yet, by the faith of
We have some old crab-trees here at home, that will not

Be graff'd to your relish. Yet welcome, warriors;
We call a mettle, but a nettle; and
The faults of fools, but folly.

[To his wife and mother.

Vol. Ere in our own house I do shade my head,
The good patricians must be visit'd;
For whom I have receiv'd not only greetings,
But with them change of honours.

Vol. To see inherited my very wishes,
And the buildings of my fancy: only there
Is one thing wanting, which I doubt not, but
Our Rome will cast upon thee.

Cor. Know, good mother,
I had rather be their servant in my way,
Than sway with them in theirs.

[Flourish. Cornets. Exeunt in state, as before.

The Tribunes remain.

Bru. All tongues speak of him, and the blear'd sights
Are speckled to see him; Your prattling nurse
Into a rapture lets her baby cry,
While she chants it; the kitchen maidkin pins
Her richest lockram 'bout her reechy neck,
Clambering the walls to eye him: Stalls, bulks,
windows,
Are smother'd up, leads fill'd, and ridges hord's
With variable complexes; all agreeing
In earnestness to see him: seld-shown flammen
Do press among the popular thongs, and puff
To win a vulgar station: our well'd dames
Commit the war of white and damask, in
Their nicely-gawded cheeks, to the wanton spoll
Of Phæbus' burning kisses: such a pother,
As if that whatsoever god, who leads him,
Were slyly crept into his human powers,
And gave him graceful posture.

On the sudden,
I warrant him consul.

Bru. Then our office may,
During his power, go sleep.

Sic. He cannot temperately transport his honours
From where he should begin, and end; but will Lose those that he hath won.

Bru. In that there's comfort.

Sic. Doubt not, the commoners, for whom we stand,

But they, upon their ancient malice, will Forget, with the least cause, these his new ho-

Sic. Which that he'll give them, make as little question
As he is proud to do.

Bru. I heard him swear,
Were he to stand for consul, never would he Appear 't he market-place, nor on him put
The napless vesture of humility:
Nor, showing (as the manner is) his wounds
To the people, beg their stinking breaths.

Sic. 'Tis right.

Bru. It was his word: O, he would miss it, rather
Than carry it, but by the suit 'o the gentry to him,
And the desire of the nobles.

Sic. I wish no better,
Than have him hold that purpose, and to put it
In execution.

Bru. 'Tis most like, he will.

Sic. It shall be to him then, as our good wills;
A sure destruction.

Bru. So it must fall out
To him, or our authorities. For an end,
We must suggest the people, in what hatred
He still hath held them; that, to his power, he Would
Have made them mules, silence'd their pleaders, and Disproportion'd their freedoms: holding them,
In human action and capacity,
Of no more soul, nor fitness for the world,
Than camels in their war; who have their pro-

Only for bearing burdens, and sore blows
For sinking under them.

Sic. This, as you say, suggested
At some time when his soaring insolence
Shall teach the people, (which time shall not want,
If he be put upon; and that's as easy,
As to set dogs on sheep,) will be his fire
To kindle their dry stubble; and their blaze
Shall darken him for ever.

Enter a Messenger.

Bru. What's the matter?

Mes. You are sent for to the Capitol: 'Tis thought,

That Marcus shall be consul: I have seen
The dumb men throng to see him, and the blind
To hear him sp.ak: The matrons flung their gloves,

Ladies and maids their scarfs and handkerchiefs,
Upon him as he pass'd: the nobles bended,
As to Jove's statue; and the commons made
A shower, and thunder, with their caps, and shouts:

I never saw the like.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol;
And carry with us ears and eyes for the time,
But hearts for the event.

Sic. Have with you.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same. The Capitol.

Enter Two Officers, to lay cushions.

1 Qff. Come, come, they are almost here: How many stand for consulsips?

2 Qff. Three, they say: but 'tis thought of every one, Coriolanus will carry it.

1 Qff. That's a brave fellow; but he's vengeance proud, and loves not the common people.

2 Qff. 'Faith, there have been many great men that have flatter'd the people, who ne'er loved them; and there be many that they have loved, they know not wherefore: so that, if they love they know not why, they hate upon no better a ground: Therefore, for Coriolanus neither to care whether they love, or hate him, manifests the true knowledge he has in their disposition; and, out of his noble carelessness, let's them plainly see't.

1 Qff. If he did not care whether he had their love, or no, he waved indifferently 'twixt doing them neither good, nor harm; but he seeks their love with greater devotion than they can render it him; and leaves nothing undone, that may fully discover him their opposite. Now, to seem to affect the malice and displeasure of the people, is as bad as that which he dislikes, to flatter them for their love.

2 Qff. He hath deserved worthy of his country:
And his ascent is not by such easy degrees as those, who, having been supple and courteous to the people, bonneted, without any further deed to beave them at all into their estimation and report: but he hath so planted his honours in their eyes, and his actions in their hearts, that for their tongues to be silent, and not confess so much, were a kind of ingratitude to him; to report otherwise, were a malice, that, giving itself the lie, would pluck reproof and rebuke from every ear that heard it.
I off. No more of him: he is a worthy man.
Make way, they are coming.

A Sennet. Enter, with lictors before them, Comimins the Consul, Menenius, Coriolius, many Senators, Sicinius, and Brutus. The Senators take their places; the Tribunes take theirs also by themselves.

Men. Having determin'd of the Voices, and
To send for Titus Lartius, it remains,
As the main point of this our after-meeting,
To gratify his noble service, that Hath thus stood for his country: Therefore, please
you,
Most reverend and grave elders, to desire
The present consul, and last general
In our well-found successes, to report
A list of that worthy work perform'd
By Calus Marcus Coriolius, whom
We meet here, both to thank, and to remember
With honours like himself.

1 Sen. Speak, good Cominius:
Leave nothing out for length, and make us think,
Rather our state's defective for requital,
Than we to stretch it out. Masters o'the people,
We do request your kindest ears; and, after,
Your loving motion toward the common body,
We say wha. passes here.

Sir. We are convened
Upon a pleasing treaty; and have hearts
Inclining to honour and advance
The theme of our assembly.

Bru. Which the rather
We shall be bless'd to do, if he remember
A kinder value of the people, than
He hath hereto priz'd them at.

Men. That's off, that's off;
I would you rather had been silent: Please you
To hear Cominius speak?

Bru. Most willingly:
But yet my caution was more pertinent,
Than the rebuke you give it.

Men. He loves your people:
But tie him not to be their bedfellow.
Worthy Cominius, speak.—Nay, keep your place.
[Coriolius rises, and offers to go away.

1 Sen. Sit, Coriolius; never shame to hear
What you have nobly done.

Cor. Your honour's pardon:
I had rather have my wounds to heal again,
Than hear say how I got them.

Bru. I, Sir, I hope,
My words dis-bench'd you not.

Cor. No, sir; yet off,
When blows have made me say, I fled from words.
You sooth'd not, therefore hurt not: But, your people,
I love them as they weigh.

Men. Pray now, sit down.
Cor. I had rather have one scratch my head it
the sun,
When the alarum were struck, and idly sit
To hear my nothings monster'd.

[Exit Coriolius.

Men. Masters o'the people,
Your multiplying spawn how can he flatter,
(That 's thousand to one good one,) when you now see,
He had rather venture all his limbs for honour,
Than one of his ears to hear it?—Proceed, Cominius.

Com. I shall lack voice: the deeds of Coriolius
Should not be utter'd feebly.—It is held,
That valor is the chiefest virtue, and
Most dignifies the haver: if it he.
The man I speak of cannot in the world
Be singly counterpou'd. At sixteen years,
When Tarquin made a head for Rome, he fought
Beyond the mark of other: our then dictator,
Whom with all praise I pint at, saw him fight,
When with his Amazonian chin he drove
The briest lips before him: he bestrid
An o'er press'd Roman, and 't the o'sul's view
Newly three oppressors: Tarquin's self he met,
And struck him on his knee, in that day's feats,
When he might act the woman in the scene,
He prov'd best man i' the field, and for his deed
Was brow-bound with the oak. His papigle
Man-enter'd thus, he waxed like a sea;
And, in the brunt of seventeen battles since,
He lurch'd all swords o'the garland. For this last,
Before and in Corioli, let me say,
I cannot speak him home: He stopp'd the fliers;
And, by his rare example, made the coward
Turn terror into sport: as waves before
A vessel under sail, so men obey'd,
And fell below his stem: his sword (death's stamp)
Where it did mark, it took; from face to foot
He was a thing of blood, whenever motion
Was timed with dying cries: alone he enter'd
The mortal gate o'the city, which he painted
With shunless destiny, aidless came off,
And with a sudden re-enforcement struck
Corioli, like a planet: Now all's his;
By then by and by the din of war can pierce
His ready sense: then straight his doubled spirit
Requicken'd what in flesh was fatigate,
And to the battle came he; where he did
Run reeking o'er the lives of men, as if
'Twere a perpetual spoil: and, till we call'd
Both field and city ours, he never stood
To ease his breast with panting.

Men. Worthy man!
1 Sen. He cannot but with measure fit the ho-

Bru. nors
Which we devise him.

Com. Our spoils he kick'd at;
And look'd upon things precious, as they were
The common muck o'the world; he covets less
Than misery itself would give; rewards
His deeds with doing them; and is content
To spend the time, to end it.
Men. He's right noble;
Let him be call'd for.

1 Sen. Call for Coriolius.

Off. He doth appear.

Re-enter Coriolius.

Men. The Senate, Coriolius, are well pleased
To make thee consul.

Cor. I do owe them still
My life, and services.

Men. It then remains,
That you do speak to the people.

Cor. I do beseech you,
Let me o'er leap that custom: for I cannot
Put on the gown, stand naked, and entreat them,
For my wounds' sake, to give their suffrage: please
you,
That I may pass this doing.

Sir. The people
Must have their voices; neither will they bate
One jot of ceremony.

Men. Put them not to't:
Cor. Pray you, go fit you to the custom; and Take fo' you, as your predecessors have,
Your honour with your form.

Cor. It is a part
That I shall blush in acting, and might well
Be taken from the people.

Bru. Mark you that?
Cor. To brag unto them,—Thus I did, and thus;
Show them the unaking scars which I should hide,
As if I had receiv'd them for the hire
Of their breath only:
Men.

Do not stand upon it.—We recommend to you, tribunes of the people, Our purpose to them; and to our noble consul Wish we all joy and honour.

Sen. To Coriolanus come all joy and honour; [Flourish. Then exit Senators.

Brut. You see how he intends to use the people. Sic. May they perceive his intent! He will require, them, As if he did concern what he requested Should be in them to give. Brut. Come, we'll inform them Our proceedings here; on the market-place, I know they do attend us. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The same. The Forum.

Enter several Citizens.

1 Cit. Once, if he do require our voices, we ought not to deny him. 2 Cit. We may, sir, if we will. 3 Cit. We have power in our selves to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do: for if he show us his wounds, and tell us his deeds, we are to put our tongues into those wounds, and speak for them; so, if he tell us his noble deeds, we must also tell him our noble acceptance of them Ingratitude is monstrous; and Ingratitude to be ingrateful, were to make a monster of the multitude; of which, we being members, should bring ourselves to be monstrous members. 1 Cit. And to make us no better thought of, a little help will serve: for once, when we stood up about the corn, he himself stuck not to call us the many-headed multitude. 3 Cit. We have been called so of many; not that our heads are some brown, some black, some auburn, some bald, but that our wits are so diversely coloured: and truly I think, if all our wits were to issue out of one skull, they would fly east, west, north, south; and their consent of one direct way, should be at once to all points o' the compass. 2 Cit. Think you so? Which way, do you judge, my wit would fly? 3 Cit. Nay, your wit will not so soon out as another man's will, 'tis strongly wedged up in a block-head; but if it were at liberty, 'twould, sure, southward. 2 Cit. Why that way? 3 Cit. To lose itself in a fog; where being three parts melted away with rotten dews, the fourth would return for conscience sake, to help to get thee a wife. 2 Cit. You are never without your tricks:—You may, you may. 3 Cit. Are you all resolved to give your voices? But that's no matter, the greater part carries it. I say, if he were incline to the people, there was never a worthier man.

Enter Coriolanus and Menenius.

Here he comes, and in the gown of humility; mark his behaviour. We are not to stay altogether, but to come by him where he stands, by ones, by twos, and by threes. He's to make his requests by particular; wherein every one of us has a single honour, in giving him our own voices with our own tongues; therefore follow me, and I'll direct you how you shall go by him. [Exeunt. 1 Cit. O sir, you are not right: have you not known The worthiest men have done't? Cor. What must I say?—I pray sir,—Plague upon it! I cannot bring My tongue to such a pace:—Look, sir;—my wounds;—I got them in my country's service, when Some certain of your brethren roared, and ran From the noise of our own drums. Men. O me, the gods!
And mountainous error be too highly heap'd
For truth to over-peir.—Rather than fool it so,
Let the high office and the honour go
To one that would do thus,—I am half through;
The one part suffer'd, the other will I do.

Enter three other Citizens.

Here come more voices,—
Your voices : for your voices I have fought ;
Watch'd for your voices ; for your voices, bear
Of wounds two dozen odd ; battles thrice six.
I have seen and heard of ; for your voices, have Done many things, some less, some more : your voices :

Indeed, I would be consul.

5 Cit. He has done nobly, and cannot go without any honest man's voice.

6 Cit. Therefore let him be consul : The gods give him joy, and make him good friend to the people !

All. Amen, amen.—
God save thee, noble consul ! [Exeunt Citizens.]

Worthy voices !

Re-enter Menenius, with Brutus and Sicinlus.

Men. You have stood your limitation; and the tribunes
Endue you with the people's voice : Remains,
That, in the official marks invested, you
Anon do meet the senate.

Cor. Is this done?

Sic. The custom of request you have discharged;
The people do admit you; and are summons'd
To meet anon, upon your approbation.

Cor. Where? at the senate house?

Sic. There, Coriolanus.

Cor. May I then change these garments?

Sic. You may, sir,

Cor. That I'll straight do; and, knowing myself again,
Repair to the senate-house.

Men. I'll keep you company.—Will you along?

Brut. We stay here for the people.

Sic. Fare you well.

[Exeunt Coriol. and Menen.

He has it now; and by his looks, methinks,
'Tis warm at his heart.

Brut. With a proud heart he wore
His humble weeds: Will you dismiss the people?

[Re-enter Citizens.

Sic. How now, my masters? have you chose this man?

Cit. He has our voices, sir.

Brut. We pray the gods, he may deserve your loves.

2 Cit. Amen, sir: To my poor unworthy notice,
He mock'd us, when he begg'd our voices.

3 Cit. Certainly,

He flouted us down-right.

1 Cit. No, 'tis his kind of speech, he did not mock us.

2 Cit. Not one amongst us, save yourself, but says,
He us'd us scornfully: he should have show'd us
His marks of merit, wounds receiv'd for his country.

Sic. Why, so he did, I am sure.

Cit. No; no man saw 'em.

[Several speak.

3 Cit. He said, he had wounds, which he could Show in private:

And with his hat, thus waving it in scorn,
I would be consul, says he: aged custom,
But by your voices, will not so permit me:
Your voices therefore: When we granted that,
Here was,—I thank you for your voices,—thank
Your most sweet voices: now you have left your voices,
I have no further with you:—Was not this mockery?

Sic. Why, either, you were ignorant to see't;

Cor. seeing it, of such childish friendliness
To yield your voices.

Brut. Could you not have told him,
As you were less'd,—When he had no power,
But you a petty servant to the state,
He was your enemy; ever sanguine against
Your liberties, and the charters that you bear
The body of the weal: and now, arriving
A place of potency, and sway o'the state,
If he did think still malignantly remain
Fast foe to the plebeian, your voices might
Be curses to yourselves? You should have said,
That, as his worthy deeds did claim no less
Than what he stood for; so his gracious nature
Would think upon you for your voices, and translate
His malice towards you into love, standing
Your friendly lord.

Sic. Thus to have said,
As you were fore-adviz'd, had touch'd his spirit,
And try'd his inclination; from him pluck'd
Either his gracious promise, which you might,
As cause had call'd you up, have held him to;
Or else it would have gald'd his surly nature,
Which easily endures not article
Tying him to oath; so, putting him to rage,
You should have taken the advantage of his choler,
And pass'd him unelect'd.

Brut. Did you perceive,
He did solicit you in free contempt,
When he did need your loves; and do you think,
That his contempt shall not be bruising to you,
When he hath power to crush? Why, had your bodies
No heart among you? Or had you tongues, to cry
Against the rectorship of judgment?

Sic. Have you,
Ere now, deny'd the asker? and, now again,
On him, that did not ask, but mock, bestow
Your su'd-for tongues?

3 Cit. He's not confirm'd, we may deny him yet.

2 Cit. And will deny him:
I'll have five hundred voices of that sound.

1 Cit. I twice five hundred, and their friends to piece 'em.

Brut. Get you hence instantly; and tell those friends,
They have a chose a consil, that will from them take
Their liberties; make them of no more voice
Than dogs, that are as often beat for barking,
As therefore kept to do so.

Sic. Let them assemble;
And, on a safer judgment, all revok'd
Your ignorant election: Enforce his pride,
And his old hate unto you: besides, forget not
With what contempt he wore the humble weed;
How in his suit he scorn'd you; but your loves,
Thinking upon his services, took from you
The apprehension of his present portance,
Which glibly, ungravely he did fashion
After the inveterate hate he bears you.

Brut. Lay
A fault on us, your tribunes; that we labord
(No impediment between) but that you must Cast your election on him.

Sic. Say, you chose him
More after our commandment, than as guided
By your own true affections; and that, your minds
Pre-occupy'd with what you rather must do
Than what you should, made you against the grain
To voice him consul: Lay the fault on us.

Brut. Ay, spare us not. Say, we read lectures to How youngly he began to serve his country,

How long continued: and what stock he springs of,
The noble house o'the Marcians; from whence came
That Ancus Marcius, Numa's daughter's son.
Who, in that great Hostilus, here was king;
Of the same house Publius and Quintus were,
That our best water brought by conduits hither;
And Censorinus, darling of the people,
And nobly nam'd so, being censor twice,
Was his great ancestor.
Act 3.

CORIOLANUS.

Sic. One thus descended, That hath beside well in his person wrought To be set high in place, we did commend To your remembrances: but you have found, Scaling his present bearing with his past, That he's your fixed enemy, and revolve Your sudden approbation.

Brutus. Say, you ne'er had done't, (Harp on that still,) but by our putting on: And presently, when you have drawn your number, Repair to the Capitol.

Caius. We will so: almost all [Several speak.] Repent in their election. [Exeunt Citizens.

Coriolanus. Let them go on; This mutiny were better put in hazard, Than stay, past doubt, for greater: If, as his nature is, he fall in rage With their refusal, both observe and answer The vantage of his anger.

Sic. To the Capitol: Come; we'll be there before the stream o' the people; And this shall seem, as partly 'tis, their own, Which we have goaded onward. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The same. A Street.

Cornelia. Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, Cominius, Titus Lartius, Senators, and Patricians. Coriolanus. Tullus Aufidius then had made new head? Lartius. He had, my lord; and that it was, which caus'd Our swifter composition.

Coriolanus. So then the Voices stand but as at first; Ready, when time shall prompt them, to make road Upon us again. Cornelia. They are worn, lord consul, so, That we shall hardly in our ages see Their banners wave again.

Coriolanus. Saw you Aufidius? Lartius. On safe-guard he came to me; and did curse Against the Voices, for they had so vilely Yielded the town: he is retir'd to Antium. Coriolanus. Spoke he of me? Lartius. He did, my lord.

Coriolanus. How? what? Lartius. How often he had met you, sword to sword; That, of all things upon the earth, he hated Your person most: that he would pawn his fortunes To hopeless restitution, so he might Be call'd your vanquisher. Coriolanus. At Antium lives he? Lartius. At Antium. Coriolanus. I wish I had a cause to seek him there, To oppose his hatred fully.—Welcome home. [To Lartius.

Enter Sichinius and Brutus.

Coriolanus. Behold! these are the tribunes of the people, The tongues o'the common mouth. I do despise them; For they do prank them in authority, Against all noble sufferance. Sicinius. Pass no further.

Coriolanus. Have I had children's voices? Menenius. Tribunes, give way; he shall to the market-place. Brutus. The people are incens'd against him. Sicinius. Or all will fall in broil.

Coriolanus. Are these your herd? Must these have voices, that can yield them now, And straight disclaim their tongues? What are your offices? You being their mouths, why rule you not their teeth? Have you not set them on? Menenius. Be calm, be calm. Brutus. It is a purpose'd thing, and grows by plot, To curb the will of the nobility: Suffer it, and live with such as cannot rule, Nor ever will be rule'd.

Brutus. Call't not a plot: The people cry, you mock'd them; and, of late, When corn was given them gratis, you repind; Scandal'd the suppliants for the people; call'd them Time-pleasers, flatterers, foes to nobleness.

Coriolanus. Why, this was known before. Brutus. Not to them all. Coriolanus. Have you inform'd them since? Brutus. How! I inform them! Coriolanus. You are like to do such business. Brutus. Not unlike, Each way, to better yours. Coriolanus. Why then should I be consul? By your clouds, Let me deserve so ill as you, and make me Your fellow tribune. Sicinius. You show too much of that, For which the people stir: If you will pass To where you are bound, you must inquire your way, Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit; Or never be so noble as a consul, Nor yoke with him for tribune. Menenius. Let's be calm. Cominius. The people are abus'd:—Set on.—This pal'ting Becomes not Rome; nor has Coriolanus Deserv'd this so dishonour'd rub, laid falsely I the plain way of his merit. Coriolanus. Tell me of corn! This was my speech, and I will speak'nt again: Menenius. Not now, not now. Coriolanus. Now, as I live, I will,—My nobler friends, I crave their pardons: For the mutable, rank-scented many, let them Regard me as I do not flatter, and Therein behold themselves: I say again, In soothing them, we nourish 'gainst our senate The cockle of rebellion, insolence, sedition, Which we ourselves have plough'd for, sow'd and scatter'd, By mingling them with us, the honour'd number; Who lack not virtue, no, nor power, but that Which they have given to beggars. Menenius. Well, no more. Coriolanus. No more words, we beseech you. Menenius. How! no more? As for my country I have shed my blood, Not fearing outward force, so shall my lungs Coin words till their decay, against those meazels, Which we disdain should tetter us, yet sought The very way to catch them. Brutus. You speak o'the people, As if you were a god to punish, not A man of their infirmity. Sicinius. 'Twere well, We let the people know't. Menenius. What, what? his choler? Coriolanus. Choler! Were I as patient as the midnight sleep, By Jove, 'twould be my mind. Sicinius. It is a mind,
That shall remain a poison where it is,
Not poison any further.
Cor. Shall remain!—Hear you this Triton of the minnows? mark you His deliberate shall?
Com. 'Twas from the canon.
Cor. Shall I?
O good, but most unwise patriots, why,
You grave, but reckless senators, have you thus Given Brutus here to choose an officer,
That with his peremptory shall, being but
The horn and noise o'the monsters, wants not spirit
To say, he'll turn your current in a ditch,
And make your channel his? If he have power,
Then vail your ignorance: if none, awake
Your dangerous lenity. If you are learned,
Be not as common fools; if you are not,
Let them have cushions by you. You are plebelians,
If they be senators: and they are no less,
When both your voices blended, the greatest taste
Most palates theirs. They choose their magistrate;
And such a one as he, who puts his shall,
His proper shall, against a graver bench
Than ever frown'd in Greece! By Jove himself,
It makes the consuls base: and my soul akes,
To know, when two authorities are up,
Neither supreme, how soon confusion
May over 'twixt the gap of both, and take
The one by the other.
Com. Well—on to the market-place.
Cor. Whoever gave that counsel to give forth
The corn o'the store-house gratis, as 'twas us'd
Sometimes in Greece—
Men. Well, well, no more of that.
Cor. (Though there the people had more absolute power.)
I say, they nourish'd disobedience, fed
The ruin of the state.
Bru. Why, shall the people give
One, that speaks thus, their voice?
Cor. I'll give my reasons,
More worthier than their voices. They know, the corn
Was not our recompense; resting well assur'd
They ne'er did service fort: Being press'd to the war,
Even when the navel of the state was touch'd,
They would not thread the gates: this kind of service
Did not deserve corn gratis: being 't the war,
Their mutinies and revolts, wherein they show'd
Most valour, spoke not for them: The accusation
Which they have so often made against the senate,
All cause unborn, could never be the native
Of our so frank donation. Well, what then?
How shall this bosom multiplied digest
The senate's courtesy? Let deeds express
What's like to be their words.—We did request it;
We are the greater soul, and in true fear
They gave us our demands:—Thus we debate
The nature of our seats, and make the rabble
Call our cares, fears: which will in time break ope
The locks o'the senate, and bring in the crows to peck the eagles.
Men. Come, enough.
Bru. Enough, with over-measure.
Cor. No, take more.
What may be sworn by, both divine and human,
Seal what I end withal!—This double worship,
Where one part does disdain with cause, the other
Insult without all reason; where gentry, title, wisdom
Cannot conclude, but by the yea and no
Of general ignorance,—it must omit
Real necessities, and give way the while
To unstable sightliness: purposes so barr'd, it follows,
Nothing is done to purpose: Therefore, beseech you,
You that will be less fearful than discreet
That love the fundamental part of state,
More than you doubt the change of't; that prefer
A noble life before a long, and wish
To jump a body with a dangerous physick
That's sure of death without it,—at once pluck out
The multitudinous tongue, let them not lick
The sweet which is their poison: your dishonour
Mangles true judgment, and bereaves the state
Of that integrity which should become it;
Not having the power to do the good it would,
For the ill which doth control it.
Bru. He has said enough.
Sic. He has spoken like a traitor, and shall answer
As traitors do.
Cor. Thou wretch! despite o'erwhelm thee!—
What should the people do with these bald tribunes?
On whom depending, their obedience fails
To the greater bench: In a rebellion,
When what's not meet, but what must be, was law,
Then were they chosen; in a better hour,
Let what is meet, be said, it must be meet,
And throw their power i'the dust.
Bru. Manifest treason.
Sic. This a consul? no.
Bru. The Ediles, ho!—Let him be apprehended.
Sic. Go, call the people; [Exit Brutus.] in whose name, myself
Attach thee, as a traitorous innovator,
A foe to the public weal: Obey, I charge thee,
And follow to thine answer.
Cor. Hence, old goat!
Sen. & Pat. We'll surely him.
Com. Aged sir, hands off.
Cor. Hence, rotten thing, or I shall brake thy bones
Out of thy garments.
Re-enter Brutus, with the Ediles, and a rabble of Citizens.
Men. On both sides more respect.
Sic. Here's he, that would Take from you all your power.
Seize him, Ediles.
Cit. Down with him, down with him!
[Several speaek.
2 Sen. Weapons, weapons, weapons! [They all haste ab otd Coriolanus.
Tribunes, patribians, citizens!—what ho!—
Sicinius, Brutus, Coriolanus, citizens!
Cit. Peace, peace, peace; stay, hold, peace!—
Men. What is about to be? I am out of breath;
Confusion's near: I cannot speak:—You tribunes To the people,—Coriolanus, patience:
Speak, good Sicinius.
Sic. Here me, people:—Peace.
Cit. Let's hear our tribune:—Peace. Speak, speak, speak.
Sic. You are at point to lose your liberties:
Marcius would have all from you; Marcius, Whom late you have nam'd for consul.
Men. Fye, fye, fye!
This is the way to kindle, not to quench.
1 Sen. To rebuild the city, and to lay all flat.
Sic. What is the city, but the people?—
Cit. True, the people are the city.
Bru. By the consent of all, we were establish'd
The people's magistrates.
Cit. You so remain.
Men. And so are like to do.
Cor. That is the way to lay the city flat;
To bring the roof to the foundation;
And bury all, which yet distinctly ranges,
In heaps and piles of ruin.
Sic. This deserves death.
Bru. Or let us stand to our authority;
Or let us lose it:—We do here pronounce,
Upon the part o'the people, in whose power
Act 3

CORIOLANUS.

We were elected theirs, Marcus is worthy Of present death.

Sic. Therefore, lay hold of him; Bear him to the rock Tarpeian, and from thence Into destruction cast him.

Bru. _Ediles, seize him._

Cit. Yield, Marcus, yield.

Men. Be that you seem, truly your country's friend, And temperately proceed to what you would Thus violently redress.

Bru. _Sir, those cold ways,_ That seem like prudent helps, are very poisonous Where the disease is violent:—_Lay hands upon him,_ And bear him to the rock.

Cor. _No; I'll die here._

[Drawing his sword.

There's some among you have beheld me fighting; Come, try upon yourselves what you have seen me.

Men. Down with that sword:—_Tribunes, withdraw a while._

Bru. _Lay hands upon him._

Men. _Help, help, Marcus! help! You shall be noble: help him, young and old!_ Cit. _Down with him, down with him!_ [In this mutiny, the Tribunes, the _Ediles_, and the people, are all beat in.

Men. Go, get you to your house; be gone, away,

All will be naught else.

2 Sen. _Get you gone._

Cor. _Stand fast; We have as many friends as enemies._

Men. _Shall it be put to that?_ 1 Sen. _The gods forbid! I pr'ythee, noble friend, home to thy house; Leave us to cure this cause._

Men. _For 'tis a sore upon us, You cannot abstain yourself: you're gone, 'beseech you._

Com. _Come, sir, along with us._

Cor. I would they were babarins, (as they are, Though in Rome litter'd) not Romans, (as they are not, Though calv'd! the porch o'the Capitol.)—

Men. _Be gone; Put not your worthy rage into your tongue; One time will owe another._

Cor. _I could beat forty of them._

Men. _On fair ground, I could myself Take up a brace of the best of them; yea, the two tribunes._

Com. _But now 'tis odds beyond arithmetick; And manhood is cal'd fooleries, when it stands Against a falling fabric._—Will you hence, Before the tag return? whose rage doth rend Like interrupted waters, and o'ercast What they are used to bear._

Men. _Fray you, be gone! I'll try whether my old wit be in request._ With those that have but little; this must be patch'd With cloth of any colour.

Com. _Nay, come away._

[Exeunt Coriolanus, Cominius, and others.

1 Pat. _This man has marred his fortune._

Men. _His nature is too noble for the world: He would not flatter Neptune for his trident, Or Jove for his power to thunder. His heart's his mouth: What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent; And, being angry, does forget that ever He heard the name of death._

Here's good work! _A noise within._

2 Pat. _I would they were a-bed!_ Men. _I would they were in Tyber!—What, the vengeance, Could he not speak them fair?_
"I'll go to him, and undertake to bring him
Where he shall answer, by a lawful form,
(In peace) to his utmost peril.
1 Sen. Noble tribunes,
It is the humane way; the other course
Will prove too bloody; and the end of it
Unknown to the beginning.
Sic. Noble Menenius,
Be you then as the people's officer—
Masters, lay down your weapons.
Bru. Go not home.
Sic. Meet on the market-place:—We'll attend
Where, if you bring not Marcus, we'll proceed
In our first way.
Men. I'll bring him to you:—
Let me desire your company. [To the Senators.]
Or what is worst will follow.
1 Sen. Pray you, let's to him.
[Execut.]

SCENE II.—A Room in Coriolanus's House.

Enter Coriolanus and Patricians.

Cor. Let them pull all about mine ears; present me
Death on the wheel, or at wild horses' heels;
Or pile ten hills on the Tarpeian rock,
That the precipitation might down stretch
Below the beam of sight, yet will I still
Be thus to them.

Enter Volumnia.

1 Pat. You do the nobler.
Cor. I muse, my mother.
Does not approve me further, who was wont
To call them woollen vassals, things created
To buy and sell' with groats; to show bare heads
In congregations, to yaw, be still, and wonder,
When one hut of my ordinance stood up
To speak of peace, or war. I talk of you;
Why did you wish me milder? Would you have False to my nature? Rather say, I play
The man I am.
O, sirs, sirs, sirs,
I would had you had your power well on,
Before you had worn it out.
Cor. You might have been enough the man you were:
With striving less to be so: Lesser had been
The thwartings of your dispositions, if
You had not show'd them how you were dispos'd,
Ere they lack'd power to cross you.
Cor. Let them hang.

Enter Menenius and Senators.

Men. Come, come, you have been too rough,
something too rough;
You must return, and mend it.
1 Sen. There's no remedy;
Unless, by not so doing, our good city
Clear in the midst, and perish.
Cor. Pray be counsel'd: I have a heart as litt.e apt as yours,
But yet a brain, that leads my use of anger,
To better vantage.
Men. Well said, noble woman:
Before he should thus stoop to the herd, but that
The violent fit o'the time craves it as physic
For the whole state, I would put mine armour on,
Which I can scarcely bear.
Cor. What must I do?
Men. Return to the tribunes.
Cor. What then? What then?

Men. Repent what you have spoke.
Cor. For them;—I cannot do it to the gods;
Must I then do't to them?
Vol. You are too absolute; Though therein you can never be too noble,
But when extremities speak, I have heard you
Honour and policy, like unsever'd friends, [say,
I'll the way together:] Grant that, and tell me,
In peace, what each of them by th' other lose,
That they combine not there.
Cor. A good demand.
Men. If it be honour, in your wars, to seem
The same you are not, (which, for your best ends,
You adopt your policy,) how is it less, or worse,
That it shall hold companionship in peace
With love; Must, as in war; since that to both
It stands in like request?
Cor. Why force you this?
Vol. Because that now it lies you on to speak
To the people; not by your own instruction, [to,
Nor by the matter which your heart prompts you
But with such words that are but rost in
Your tongue, though but bastards, and syllables
Of no allowance, to your bosom's truth.
Now, this no more dishonours you at all,
Than to take in a town with gentle words,
Which else would put you to your fortune, and
The hazard of much blood.—
I would dissemble with my nature, where
My fortunes, and my friends, at stake, requir'd,
I should do so in honour: I am in this,
Your wife, your son, these senators, the nobles;
And you will rather show our general lowts
How you can frown, than spend a fawn upon them,
For the inheritance of their loves, and safeguard
Of what that want might ruin.
Men. Noble lady!—
Come, go with us; speak fair: you may save so,
Not what is dangerous present, but the loss
Of what is past.
Vol. I pr'ythee now, my son,
Go to them, with this bonnet in thy band;
And thus far having stretch'd it (here be with them,) Thy knee bussing the stones, (for in such business Action is eloquence, and the eyes of the ignorant More learned than the ears,) waving thy head,
Which often, thus, correcting thy stout heart,
Now humble, as the ripe mulberry,
That will not hold the handling: (or, say to them,
Thou art their soldier, and being bred in broils,
Hast not the soft way, with which thou dost confess,
Were fit for thee to use, as they to claim.
In asking their good loves; but thou wilt frame
Thyself, forsooth, hereafter theirs, so far
As thou hast power, and person.
Men. This but done,
Even as she speaks, why, all their hearts were yours;
For they have pardons, being ask'd, as free
As words to little purpose.
Vol. Go, and be ru'd: although, I know, thou had'st
Follow thine enemy in a fiery gulf, [rather Than flatter him in a bower. Here is Cominius.

Enter Cominius.

Com. I have been i' the market-place: and, sir,
You make strong party, or defend yourself 'tis fit By calmness, or by absence; all's in anger.
Men. Only fair speech.
Com. I think, 'twill serve, if he
Can thereto frame his spirit.
Vol. He must, and will:—
Pr'ythee now, say, you will, and go about it.
Cor. Must I go show them my unbarb'd sconce?
Men. With my base tongue, give to my noble heart A lie, that it must bear? Well, I will do't:
Coriolanus.

Yet were there but this single plot to lose,
This modius of Marcus, they to dust should grind it,
And throw it against the wind.—To the market-place:
You have put me now to such a part, which never
I shall discharge to the life.

Vol. I pr'ythee now, sweet son; as thou hast said,
My praises made thee first a soldier, so,
To have my praise for this, perform a part
That hast not done before.

Cor. Away, my disposition, and possess me
Some harlot's spirit! My throat of war be turn'd,
Which quired with my drum, into a pipe
Smaller than an eunuch, or the virgin voice
That babies lulls asleep! The smiles of knaves
Tent in my cheeks; and school-boys' tears take up
The glasses of my sight! A beggar's tongue
Make motion through my lips; and my arm's knees,
Who bow'd but in my stirrup, bend like his
That hath receiv'd an arm's!—I will not do't:
Lest I surcease to honour mine own truth,
And, by my body's action, teach my mind
A most inherent baseness.

Vol. At thy choly then:
To beg of thee, it is my more dishonour,
Than thou of them. Come all to ruin; let Thy mother rather feel thy pride, than fear
Thy dangerous stoutness; for I mock at death
With as big heart as thou. Do as thou list.
This valiancess was mine, thou suck'd it from
But owe thy pride thyself.

Cor. Pray, be content;
Mother, I am going to the market-place;
Chide me no more. I'll mountebank their loves,
Cog their hearts from them, and come home
below'd
Of all the trades in Rome. Look, I am going:
Command me to my wife. I'll return consul;
Or never trust to what my tongue can do
I'll allow of fatter, further.

Vol. Do your will. [Exit.]

Com. Away, the tribunes do attend you: arm yourself
To answer mildly: for they are prepar'd
With accusations, as I hear, more strong
Than are upon you yet.

Cor. The word is, mildly:—Pray you, let us go:
Let them accuse me by invention,
I will answer in mine honour.

Men. Ay, but mildly.
Cor. Well, mildly be it then; mildly. [Exeunt.]

Scene III.—The same. The Forum.

Enter Sicius and Brutus.

Bru. In this point charge him home, that he af-
Tyrranical power: If he evade us there, [sects
Enforce him with his envy to the people;
And that the spoil, got on the Antiates,
Was ne'er distributed.—

Enter an Ædile.

What, what will he come?
Æd. He's coming.
Bru. How accompanied?
Æd. With old Menenius, and those senators
That always favour'd him.

Sic. Have you a catalogue
Of all the voices that we have procur'd;
Set down by the poll?
Æd. I have; 'tis ready, here.
Sic. Have you collected them by tribes?
Æd. I have.

Sic. Assemble presently the people hither:
And when they hear me say, It shall be so
I' the right and strength o' the commons, be it either
For death, for fine, or banishment; then let them,
If I say, fine, cry fine: if death, cry death;
Insisting on the old prerogative
And power I' the truth o' the cause.

Æd. I shall inform them.
Bru. And when such time they have begun to cry,
Let them not cease, but with a din confus'd
Enforce the present execution
Of what we chance to sentence.

Sic. Make them be strong, and ready for this hint,
When we shall have to give them.

Bru. [Exit Ædile.

Go about it.—

Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, Cominius, Senators, and Patricians.

Sic. Well, here he comes.
Men. Calmly, I do beseech you.
Cor. Ay, as an hostier, that for the poorest piece
Will bear the knave by the volume.—The honour'd
gods
Keep Rome in safety, and the chairs of justice
Supplied with worthy men! plant love among us!
Throng our large temples with the shows of peace,
And not our streets with war!

[Sen. Amen, amen!

Men. A noble wish.

Re-enter Ædile, with Citizens.

Sic. Draw near, ye people.
Æd. List to your tribunes; audience: Peace, I
Cor. First, hear me speak. [Say, say.
Both Tri. Well; say,—Peace, ho.
Cor. Shall I be charg'd no further than this pre-
Must all determine here? [sent?
Sic. I do demand,
If you submit to the people's voices,
Allow their officers, and are content
To suffer lawful censure for such faults
As shall be prov'd upon you?
Cor. I am content.
Men. Lo, citizens, he says, he is content:
The warlike service he has done, consider;
Think on the wounds his body bears, which show
Like graves i' the holy churchyard.
Cor. Scratches with briars,
Scars to move laughter only.
Consider further,
That when he speaks not like a citizen,
You find him like a soldier: Do not take
His rougher accents for malicious sounds,
But, as I say, such as become a soldier,
Rather than envy you.

Com. Well, well, no more.
Cor. What's the matter,
That being pass'd for consul with full voice,
I am so dishonour'd, that the very hour
You take it off again?
Sic. Answer to us.
Cor. Say then: 'tis true, I ought so.
Sic. We charge you, that you have contriv'd to
From Rome all season'd office, and to wind [take Yourself into a power tyrannical;
For which you are a traitor to the people.
Cor. How! Traitor?
Cor. The fires I the lowest hell fold in the people!
Call me their traitor!—Thou injurious tribune!
Within thine eyes sat twenty thousand deaths,
In thy hands cloutch'd as many millions, in
Thy lying tongue both numbers, I would say,
Thou liest, unto thee, with a voice as free
As I do pray the gods.
Sic. Mark you this, people?
Cor. To the rock with him; to the rock with him
Sic. Peace.

We need not put new matter to his charge:
What you have seen him do, and heard him speak,
Beating your officers, cursing yourselves,
Opposing laws with strokes, and here defying
Those whose great power must try him; even
this,
So criminal, and in such capital kind,
Deserves the extremest death.

Brutus. But since he hath Coriolanus. Exeunt.

Exeunt. [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The same. Before a Gate of the City.

Enter Coriolanum, Volumnia, Virgilia, Menenius, Cominius, and several young Patricians.

Coriolanus. Please leave your tears; a brief farewell—the beast
With many heads hurts me away.—Nay, mother,
Where is your ancient courage? you were us'd To say, extremity was the trier of spirits;
That common chances common men could bear;
That, when the sea was calm, all boats alike
Show'd mastership in floating: fortune's blows,
When most struck home, being gentle wounded,
Craves
A noble running: you were not'd to load me
With precepts, that would make invincible
The heart that conn'd them.

Vir. O heavens! O heavens!

Coriolanus. Nay, I pr'ythee, woman,

Vol. Now the red pestilence strike all trades in and occupations perish!—[Exeunt. [Exeunt. [Exeunt. [Exeunt.

Coriolanus. What, what, what! I shall be lov'd, when I am lack'd.

Nay, mother, Resume that spirit, when you were wont to say,
If you had been the wife of Hercules,
Six of his labours you'd have done, and sav'd
Your husband so much sweat.—Cominius,

Droop not; adieu:—Farewell, my wife! my mother!

I'll do well yet.—Thon old and true Menenius,
By tears are sadder than a younger man's,

[Exeunt. [Exeunt. [Exeunt. [Exeunt.

And venomous to thine eyes.—My sometime gene-
I have seen thee stern, and thou hast oft heeded
Heart-hard'ning spectacles; tell these sad women,
'Tis said to wait inevitable strokes,
As 'tis to laugh at them.—My mother, you not well,
My hazards still have been your solace: and Believe't not lightly, (though I go alone,
Like to a lonely dragon, that his fen
Makes fear'd, and talk'd of more than seen,) your
Will, or exceed the common, or be caught
[son
With haughty baits and practice.

Vol. My first son,

Whither wilt thou go? Take good Cominius
With thee a while: Determine on some course,
More than a wild exposure to each chance
That starts t' the way before thee.

Coriolanus. O the gods!

Cominius. I'll follow thee a month, devise with thee
Where thou shalt rest, that thou may'st hear of us
And we of thee: so, if the time thrust forth
A cause for thy repeal, we shall not send
O'er the vast world, to seek a single man;
And lose advantage, which doth ever cool
The absence of the needer.

Coriolanus. Fare ye well:—

Thon hast years upon thee; and thou art too full
Of the wars' surfeits, to go rove with one
That's yet unbruiss'd: bring me h群里 out at gate.—
Come, my sweet wife, my dearest mother, and
My friends of noble touch, when I am forth,
Bid me farewell, and smile. I pray you, come.
While I remain above the ground, you shall Hear from me still; and never of me: augh.
But what is like me formerly.

Men. That's worthily

As a ear can hear.—Come, let's not weep.—
If I could shake off but one seven years
From these old arms and legs, by the good gods,
I'd with thee every foot.

Coriolanus. Give me thy hand:—

Come. [Exeunt.
SCENE II. — The same. A Street near the Gate.

Enter Sicinius, Brutus, and an Edile.

Sic. Bid them all home; he's gone, and we'll no further.

The nobility are vex'd, who, we see, have sided in his behalf.

Brut. Now we have shown our power, let us seem humble after it is done,

Then when it was a doing.

Sic. Bid them home:

Say, their great enemy is gone, and they stand in their ancient strength.

Brut. Dismiss them home. [Exit Edile.

Enter Volumnia, Virgilia, and Menenius.

Here comes his mother.

Sic. Let's not meet her.

Brut. Why?

Sic. They say, she's mad.

Brut. They have ta'en note of us:

Keep on your way.

Vol. O, you're well met: the hoarded plague

Requite your love! [o'the gods

Men. Peace, peace; be not so loud.

Vol. If that I could for weeping, you should hear,—

Nay, and you shall hear some. Will you be gone? [To Brutus.

Vir. You shall stay too: [To Sicin.] I would I, To say so to my husband. [had the power

Sic. Are you mankind?

Vol. Ay, fool,—Is that a shame?—Note but this fool,—

Was not a man my father. Hadst thou foxship

To banish him that struck more blows for Rome,
Than thou hast spock words?

Sic. He is a blessed heavens.

Vol. More noble blows, than ever thou wise words;

And for Rome's good,—I'll tell thee what:—Yet Nay, but thou shalt stay too:—I would my son Were in Arab's, and thy tribe before him,

His good sword in his hand.

Sic. What then?

Vir. What then?

He'd make an end of thy posterity.

Vol. Bustards, and all.

Good man, the wounds that he does bear for Rome

Men. Come, come, peace.

Sic. I would he had continu'd to his country,

As he began; and not unkit himself

The noble knot he made. I would he had.

Vol. I would he had! 'Twas you incens'd the Cats that can judge as fitly of his worth, [rabble

As I can of those mysteries which heaven

Will not have earth to know.

Brut. Pray, let us go.

Vol. Now, pray, sir, get you gone:

You have done a brave deed. Ere you go, hear As far as doth the Capitol exceed [this; The meanest house in Rome: so far, my son, (This lady's husband here, this, do you see,) Whom you have banish'd, does exceed you all.

Brut. Well, well, we'll leave you.

Sic. Why stay we to be bal'ded

With one that wants her wise

Vol. Take my prayers with you—

I would the gods had nothing else to do. [Exit Tribunes.

But to confirm my curses! Could I meet them But once a day, it would unclimb my heart Of what lies heavy 'tis.

Men. You have told them home, And, by my troth, you have cause. You'll sup with me?

Vol. Anger's my meat; I sup upon myself, And so shall starve with feeding.—Come, let's go:

SCENE III. — A Highway between Rome and Antium.

Enter a Roman and a Voice, meeting.

Rom. I know you well, sir, and you know me:

Your name, I think, is Adrian.

Vol. It is so, sir: truly, I have forgot you. Rom. I am a Roman; and my services are, as you are, against them: Know you me yet?

Rom. The same, sir.

Vol. You had more beard, when I last saw you; but your favour is well appeared by your tongue. What's the news in Rome? I have a note from the Volsian state, to find you out there: You have well saved me a day's journey.

Rom. There hath been in Rome strange insurrection: the people against the senators, patricians, and nobles.

Vol. Hath been! Is it ended then? Our state thinks not so; they are in a warlike preparation, and hope to come upon them in the heat of their division.

Rom. The main blaze of it is past, but a small thing would make it flame again. For the nobles receive so to heart the banishment of that worthy Coriolanus, that they are in a piteous case, to take all power from the people, and to pluck from them their tribunes for ever. This lies glowing, I can tell you, and is almost mature for the violent breaking out.

Vol. Coriolanus banished?

Rom. Banished, sir.

Vol. You will be welcome with this intelligence, Nicanor.

Rom. The day serves well for them now. I have heard it said, The fittest time to corrupt a man's wife, is when she's fallen out with her husband. Your noble Tullus Aufidius will appear well in these wars, his great opposer, Coriolanus, being now in no request of his country.

Vol. He cannot choose. I am most fortunate, thus accidentally to encounter you: You have ended my business, and I will merrily accompany you home.

Rom. I shall, between his and his supper, tell you most strange things from Rome; all tending to the good of their adversaries. Have you an army ready, say you?

Vol. A most royal one: the centurions, and their charges, distinctly billeted, already in the entertainment, and to be on foot at an hour's warning.

Rom. I am joyful to hear of their readiness, and am the man, I think, that shall set them in present action. So, sir, heartily well met, and most glad of your company.

Vol. You take my part from me, sir; I have the most cause to be glad of yours.

Rom. Well, let us go together. [Exeunt.

Enter Coriolanus, in mean apparel, disguised and muffled.

Cor. A goodly city is this Antium: City,

'Tis that made thy widows: many an heir
Of these fair edifices 'fore my wars

Have I heard groan, and drop; then know me not; Lest that thy wives with spits, and boys with stones,

Enter a Citizen.

In puny battle slay me. — Save you, sir.

Cit. And you.

Cor. Direct me, if it be your will,

Where great Aufidius lies: Is he in Antium?

Cit. He is, and feasts the nobles of the state,

At his house this night.
Cor. Which is his house, beseech you? Chin. This, here, before you. Cor. Thank you, sir; farewell. Exit Citizen. O, world, thy slippery turns! Friends now fast sworn, Whose double bosoms seem to wear one heart, Whose hours, whose bed, whose meal, and exercise, Are still together, who twin, as 'twere, in love Unseparable, shall within this hour, On a dissention of a doot, break out To bitter enmity: So, fallest foes, [sleep Whose passions and whose plots have broke their To strive the one the other, by some chance, Some trick not worth an egg, shall grow dear friends, And interjoin their issues. So with me: My birth-place hate I, and my love's upon This scene of mine. — I'll enter: if he slay me, He does fair justice; if he give me way, I'll do his country service. [Exit. SCENE V.—The same. A Hall in Aufidius's House. Music within. Enter a Servant. 1 Serv. Wine, wine, wine! What service is here? I think our fellows are asleep. [Exit. Enter another Servant. 2 Serv. Where's Cottus? my master calls for him. Cor. Coriolanus. Cor. A goodly house: The feast smells well: Appear not like a guest. [but I Re-enter the first Servant. 1 Serv. What would you have, friend? Whence are you? Here's no place for you; Pray, go to the door. Cor. I have deserv'd no better entertainment, In being Coriolanus. Re-enter second Servant. 2 Serv. Whence are you, sir? Has the porter his eyes in his head, that he gives entrance to such companions? Pray, get you out. Cor. A way! 2 Serv. Away! Get you away. Cor. Now thou art troublesome. 2 Serv. Are you so brave? I'll have you talked with anon. Enter a third Servant. The first meets him. 3 Serv. What fellow's this? 1 Serv. A strange one as ever I looked on: I cannot get him out o' the house: Pr'ythee, call my master to him. 3 Serv. What have you to do here, fellow? Pray you, avoid the house. Cor. Let me but stand; I will not hurt your hearth. 3 Serv. What are you? Cor. A gentleman. 3 Serv. A marvellous poor one. Cor. True, so I am. 3 Serv. Pray you, poor gentleman, take up some other station; here's no place for you; pray you, avoid: come. Cor. Follow your function, go! And batten on cold bits. [Pushes him away. 3 Serv. What, will you not? Pr'ythee, tell my master what a strange guest he has here. 3 Serv. And I shall. [Exit. 3 Serv. Where dwellest thou? 3 Serv. Under the canopy? Cor. Ay. 3 Serv. Where's that? Cor. I, the city of kites and crows.
CORIOLANUS.

I lov'd the maid I married; never man
Sighed truer breath; but that I see thee here,
Then I sigh'd twice as oft as any rapt heart,
Than when I first my wedded mistress saw [thee.
Beside my threshold. Why, thou Mars! I tell
We have a power on foot; and I had purpose
Once more to hew thy target from thy brawn,
Or at the shrine to turn, Thou hast best me out
Twelve several times, and I have nightly since
Dream't of encounters 'twixt thyself and me:
We have been down together in my sleep,
Unbuckling helms, fencing each other's throat,
And walk'd half dead with nothing. Worthy
Marcus,
Had we no quarrel else to Rome, but that
Thou art thence banish'd, we would muster all
From twelve to seventy; and, pouring war
Into the bowels of ingratitude Rome,
Like a bold flood o'er-beat. O, now go in,
And take our friendly senators by the hands;
Who now are here, taking their leaves of me,
Who am prepar'd against your territories,
Though not for Rome itself.

Cor.
You bless me, gods!

Aur. Therefore, most absolute sir, if thou wilt
The leading of thine own revenges, take [have
The one half of my commission; and set down,
As best thou canst experience, since thou know'st
Thy country's strength and weaknesses, thine own ways:
Whether to knock against the gates of Rome,
Or rudely visit them in parts remote,
To make them know the day. But come in:
Let me commend thee first to those, that shall Say, yes, to thy desires. A thousand welcomes!
And more a friend than e'er an enemy;
Yet, Marcus, that was much. Your hand! Most welcome!

Exeunt Coriolanus and Ausonius.

1 Serv. [Advancing.] Here's a strange alteration!

2 Serv. By my hand, I had thought to have strucken him with a cudgel; and yet my mind gave me, his clothes made a false report of him.

1 Serv. What an arm he has! He turned me about with his finger and his thumb, as one would set up a top.

2 Serv. Nay, I knew by his face that there was something in him: he had, sir, a kind of face, methought,—I cannot tell how to term it.

1 Serv. He had so; looking as it were,—
'Would I were hanged, but I thought there was more in him than I could think.

2 Serv. So did I; I'll be sworn; he is simply the rarest man j'the world.

1 Serv. I think, he is: but a greater soldier than he, you wot one.

2 Serv. Who? my master?

1 Serv. Nay, it's no matter for that.

2 Serv. Worth six of him.

1 Serv. Nay, not so neither; but I take him to be the greater soldier.

2 Serv. Faith, look you, one cannot tell how to say that: for the defence of a town, our general is excellent.

1 Serv. Ay, and for an assault too.

Re-enter third Servant.

3 Serv. O, slaves, I can tell you news; news, you rascals.

3 Serv. I would not be a Roman, of all nations,
I had it lie be a condemned man.

1. 2 Serv. Wherefore? wherefore?

3 Serv. Why, here's he that was wont to thwart our general,—Caicus Marcus.

1 Serv. Why do you say, thwart our general?
2 Serv. Do not we thwart our general; but he was always good enough for him.

3 Serv. Come, we are fellows, and friends: he was ever too hard for him; I have heard him say so himself.

1 Serv. He was too hard for him directly, to say the truth on't; before Coriolanus he stretched him and notched him like a carbacole.

2 Serv. An he had been cannibally given, he might have broiled and eaten him too.

1 Serv. But, more of thy news?

3 Serv. Why, he is so made on here within, as if he were son and heir to Mars; set at upper end the table, no question asked him by any of the senators, but they stand balf before him: Our general himself makes a mistress of him; sanctifies himself with his hand, and turns up the white o'the sleeve to his discourse. But the bottom of the news is, our general's cut i'the middle, and but one half of what he was yesterday; for the other has half, by the entreaty and grant of the whole table.
He'll go, he says, and sowle the porter of Rome gates by the ears: He will mow down all before him, and leave his passage poll'd.

2 Serv. And he's as like to do't, as any man I can imagine.

3 Serv. Do't? he will do't. For, look you, sir, he has as many friends as enemies: which friends,
sir, (as it were,) durst not (look you, sir,) show themselves (as we term it,) his friends, whilst he's in directitude.

1 Serv. Directitude! I what's that?

3 Serv. But when he shall rise, sir, his crest up again, and the man in blood, they will out of their burrows, like conies after rain, and revel all with
him.

1 Serv. But when does this forward?

3 Serv. To-morn, to-day presently. You shall have the drum struck up this afternoon: 'tis, as it were, a parcel of their feast, and to be executed
e're they wipe their lips.

2 Serv. Why, then we shall have a stirring world again: This peace is nothing, but to cast iron, increase tailors, and breed ballad-makers.

1 Serv. Let me have wars, say I; it exceeds peace, as far as does night; it's spritely, waking, audible, and full of vent. Peace is a very apoplexy, lethargy, mulled, deaf, sleepy, insensible; getter of more bastard children, than wars a destroyer of men.

2 Serv. 'Tis so: and as wars, in some sort, may be said to be a ravisher; so it cannot be denied, but peace is a greater ravisher. Peace, in it's rough, that the world goes well; who can not beard Dissentious numbers pestering streets, than see
Our tradesmen singing in their shops, and going
About their functions friendly.

Enter Meneius.

Stc. Were not of him, neither need we fear
His remedies are tame 'tis the present peace him; And quietness o'the people, which before
Were in wild hurry. Here do we make his friends brush, that the world goes well; who can not beard

Though they themselves did suffer by't, beheld
Dissentious numbers pestering streets, than see
Our tradesmen singing in their shops, and going
About their functions friendly.

Enter Meneius.

Bru. We stood to't in good time. Is this Me-enius?

Stc. 'Tis he, 'tis he: O, he is grown most kind late.—Hail, sir!

Men. Hail to you both!

Stc. Your Coriolanus, sir, is not much miss'd.
But with his friends; the common-wealth doth
And so would do, were he more angry at it. [stand;
Men. All's well; and might have been much
He could have tempore d better, if

Stc. Where is he, hear you?

Men. Nay, I hear nothing; his mother and his Hear nothing from him.

[wife
Enter Three or Four Citizens.

Cit. The gods preserve you both!

Sic. Good e'en, our neighbours.

Bru. Good e'en to you all, good e'en to you all.

1 Cit. Ourselves, our wives, and children, on our
Are bound to pray for you both. [kneels.

Sic. Live, and thrive: Bru. Farewell, kind neighbours: We wish'd
Had lov'd you as we did. [Coriolanus

Caius Marcius was
A worthy officer i'the war; but insolent,
Overcome with pride, ambitious past all thinking,
Self-loving,——

And affecting one sole throne,
Without assistance.

Men. I think not so.

Sic. We should by this, to all our lamentation,
If he had gone forth consuls, found it so.

Bru. The gods have well prevented it, and Rome
Sits safe and still without him.

Enter Edile.

Ed. Worthy tribunes,
There is a slave, whom we have put in prison,
Reports,—the Volscs with two several powers
Are enter'd in the Roman territories;
And with the deepest malice of the war
Destroy what lies before them.

Men. 'Tis Aufidius, Who, hearing of our Marcus' banishment,
Thrusts forth his horns again into the world;
Which were inshield'd, when Marcius stood for
And durst not once peep out.

[Rome,

Sic. Come, what talk you
Of Marcius?

Bru. Go see this rumourer whip'd.—It cannot
The Voices dare break with us.

Sic. Cannot be!

We have record, that very well it can;
And three examples of the like have been Within my age. But reason with the fellow,
Before you punish him, where he heard this:
Lest you shall chance to whip your informant,
And beat the messenger who bids beware
Of what is to be dreaded.

Tell not me:

I know, this cannot be.

Bru. Not possible.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The nobles, in most earnestness, are going
All to the senate-house: some news is come, That Turns their countenances.

Sic. 'Tis this slave;—
Go whip him 'fore the people's eyes:—his raising!
Nothing but his report!

Mess. Yes, worthy sir,
The slave's report is seconded; and more,
More fearful, is deliver'd.

Sic. What more fearful?

Mess. It is spoke freely out of many mouths,
(How probable, I do not know,) that Marcius,
Join'd with Aufidius, leads a power against Rome;
And vows revenge as spacious, as between
The young'st and oldest things.

This is most likely!

Bru. Rais'd only, that the weaker sort may wish
Good Marcius home again.

Men. This is unlikely:
He and Aufidius can no more alone,
Than violentest contrariety.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. You are sent for to the senate;
A fearful army, led by Caius Marcius,
Associated with Aufidius, rages
Upon our territories; and have already,
Overborne their way, consum'd with fire, and took
What lay before them.

Enter Cominius.

Com. O, you have made good work!

Men. What news? what news?

Com. You have help to ravish your own daugh ter
To melt the city leads upon your pates; [i.,
And to see your wives dishonour'd to your noses——

Men. What's the news? what's the news?

Com. Your temples burned in their cement;
And your franchises, whereon you stood, confin'd
Into an augre's bower.

Men. Pray now, your news?

You have made fair work, I fear me:—Pray, your news?

If Marcius should be join'd with Volsciants,

Com. He is his god; he leads them like a thing
Made by some other deity than nature,
That shapes man better: and they follow him,
Against his brats, with no less confidence,
Than boys pursuing summer butterflies,
Or butchers killing flies.

Men. You have made good work,
Yon, and your apron men; you that stood so much
Upon the voice of occupation, and
The breath of garlick-eaters:

He will shake
Your Rome about your ears.

As Hercules
Did shake down mellow fruit: You have made fair
Bru. But is this true, sir? [work

Com. Ay; and you'll look pale
Before you find it other. All the regions
Do smilingly revolt; and, who resist,
Are only mock'd for valiant ignorance,
[him?
And perish constant fools. No; it is not
Your enemies, and his, find something in him.

Men. We are all undone, unless
The noble man have mercy.

Com. Who shall ask it?

The tribunes cannot do for shame; the people
Deserve such pity of him, as the wolf
Does of the shepherds: for his best friends, if they Should say, Be good to Rome, they charg'd him
As those should do that bad serv'd his hate,
And therein show'd like enemies.

Men. 'Tis true:
If he were putting to my house the brand
That should consume it, I have not the face
To say, 'Beneath you, cease.'—You have made fair hands,
You, and your crafts! you have crafted fair!

Com. You have brought
A trembling upon Rome, such as was never
So incapable of help.

Tri. Say not, we brought it.

Men. How! Was it we? We lov'd him; but,
like beasts,
And cowardly nobles, gave way to your ciphers,
Who did hoot him out o'the city.

But, I fear,
They'll roar him in again. Tullus Aufidius,
The second name of men, obeys his points
As if he were his officer,—Desperation
Is all the policy, strength, and defence,
That Rome can make against them.

Enter a Troop of Citizens.

Men. Here come the ciphers.—

And is Aufidius with him?—You are they
That made the air unwholesome, when you cast
Your stinking, greasy caps, in hooting at Coriolanus' exile. Now he's coming;
And not a hair upon a soldier's head,
Which will not prove a whip; as many coxcombs,
As you throw caps up, will be tumble down,
And pay you for your voices. 'Tis no matter;
If he could burn us all into coal,
We have deserv'd it.

Cit. 'Faith, we hear fearful news.

Curtain falls for scene.

For my own part,
When I said, banish him, I said, 'twas pity.

2 Cit. And so did I.

3 Cit. And so did I; and, to say the truth, so did very many of us: That we did, we did for the best; and though we willingly submit to his banisht ment, yet it was against our will.

Com. You are goodly things, you voices!

Men. You have made Good work, you and your cry!—Shall we to the Ca-

Sic. Go, masters, get you home, be not dismay'd;
These are a side, that would be glad to have
This true, which they so seem to fear. Go home,
And shew no sign of fear.

1 Cit. The gods be good to us! Come, masters, let's home. I ever said, we were i'th' wrong, when we banished him.

2 Cit. So did we all. But come, let's home. [Exit Citizens.

Sic. Nor I.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol:—'Would, half my
Would buy this for a lie! [wealth

Sic. Pray, let us go. [Exit.

SCENE VII.—A Camp; at a small distance from Rome.

Enter Aufidius, and his Lieutenant.

Auf. Do they still fly to the Roman? [but Lieu. I do not know what witchcraft's in him;
Your soldiers use him as the grace 'fore meat,
Their talk at table, and their thanks at end;
And you are dark'en in this action, sir,
Even by your own.

Auf. I cannot help it now;
Unless, by using means, I lame the foot
Of our design. He bears himself more prouder
Even to my person, than I thought he would,
When first I did embrace him: Yet his nature
In that's no changeling; and I must excuse
What cannot be amended.

Lieu. Yet I wish, sir;
(I mean, for your particular,) you had not
Join'd in commission with him; but either
Had borne the action of yourself, or else
To him had left it sole,

Auf. I understand thee well; and be thou sure,
When he shall come to his account, he knows not What I can urge against him. Although it seems,
And so he thinks, and is no less apparent
To the vulgar eye, that he bears all things fairly,
And shows good husbandry for the Volscian state;
Fights dragon-like, and does achieve as soon
As draw his sword: yet he hath left undone
That, which shall break his neck, or hazard mine,
Whene'er we come to our account.

Auf. Rome?
Lieu. It rest you well, you think you'll carry
Auf. All places yield to him ere he sits down:
And the nobility of Rome are his:
The senators, and patricians love him too:
The tribunes are no soldiers; and their people
Will be as rash in the repeal, as hasty
To expel him thence. I think, he'll be to Rome,
As is the oyspee to the fish, who takes it
By sovereignty of nature. 'First he was
A noble servant to them; but he could not Carry his honours even: whether 'twas pride,
Which out of daily fortune ever taints
The happy man; whether defect of judgment,
To fail in the disposing of those chances
Which he was lord of; or whether nature
Not being other than the thing, not moving
From the casque to the cushion, but commanding
Even with the same austerity and garb
[peace
As he control'd the war; but, one of these,
(As he hath spices of them all, not all,
For I dare so far free him,) made him fear'd,
So hated, and so banish'd: But he has a merit,
To choke it in the utterance. So our virtues
Lie in the interpretation of the time:
And power, unto itself most commendable,
Hath not a tomb so evident as a chair
To extol what it hath done.

One fire drives out one fire: one nail, one nail;
Rights by rights fouler, strength by strengths do fail.

Come, let's away. When, Caius, Rome is thine,
Thou art poorst of all; then shortly art thou mine. [Exit.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Rome. A publick Place.

Enter Menenius, Cominius, Scinarius, Brutus, and others.

Men. No, I'll not go: you hear, what he hath said,
Which was sometime his general; who lov'd him
In a most dear particular. He call'd me, father:
But what o' that? Go, you that banish'd him,
A mile before his tent fell down, and kneel
The way into his mercy: Nay, if he could
To hear Cominius speak, I'll keep at home.

Com. He would not seem to know me.

Men. Do you hear?
Com. Yet one time he did call me by my name:
I urg'd our old acquaintance, and the drops
That we have bled together. Coriolanus
He would not answer to: forbade all names;
He was a kind of nothing, titleless,
Till he had forg'd himself a name i'th' fire
Of burning Rome.

Men. Why, so; you have made good work:
A pair of tribunes that have rack'd for Rome,
To make coals cheap: A noble memory!

Com. I minded him, how royal 'twas to pardon
When it was less expected: He replied,
It was a bare petition of a state
To one whom they had punish'd.

Men. Very well;
Com. Could he say less?

Com. I offer'd to awaken his regard
For his private friends: His answer to me was,
He could not stay to pick them in a pile
Of noisome musty chaff: He said, 'twas folly,
For one poor grain or two, to leave unburnt,
And still to nose the offence.

Men. For one poor grain
Or two? I am one of those; his mother, wife,
His child, and this brave fellow too, we are the grains:
You are the musty chaff; and you are smelt
Above the moon: We must be burnt for you.

Sic. Nay, pray be patient: If you refuse your aid
In this so never-heeded help, yet do not Upbraid us with our distress. But, sure, if you
Would be your country's pleader, your good tongue
More than the instant army we can make,
May stop our countryman.

Men. No; I'll not meddle.

Sic. I pray you, go to him.

Men. What should I do?

Brut. Only make trial what your love can do
For Rome, towards Marcius.

Men. Well, and say that Marcius
Return me, as Cominius is return'd,
Unheard; what then?
But as a discontented friend, grief-shot
With his unkindness? Say't be so?

Sic. Yet your good will Must have that thanks from Rome, after the mea-
As you intended well.
Men. I'll undertake it:
I think, he'll hear me. Yet to bite his lip,
And hum at good Cominius, much unhearts me
He was not taken well: he had not din’d: The veins unfil’d, our blood is cold, and then We pout upon the morning, are unapt To give or to forgive; but when we have stuff’d These cupboards, and these conveyances of our blood With wine and feeding, we have supplier souls Than in our priest-like fasts: therefore I’ll watch Till he be dieted to my request, [him And then I’ll set upon him. Bru. You know the long road into his kindness, And cannot lose your way.

Men. Good faith, I’ll prove him, Speed how it will. I shall ere long have knowledge Of my success. [Exit. Com. He’ll never hear him.

Sic. Not?

Com. I tell you, he does sit in gold, his eye Red as ‘twould burn Rome; and his injury The gaudier to his pity. I kneel’d before him;

Twas very faintly he said, Rise: dismiss’d me. Thus, with his speechless hand: what he would do, He sent in writing after me; what he would not, Bound with an oath, to yield to his conditions; So, that all hope is vain, Unless his noble mother, and his wife; When he’s here, mean to solicit him For mercy to his country. Therefore, let’s heuce, And with our fair entreaties haste them on.

SCENE II.—An Advanced Post of the Volscian Camp before Rome. The Guard of their stations. Enter to them Menenius.

1 G. Stay: Whence are you?

2 G. Stand, and go back.

Men. You guard like men; ’tis well: But, by I am an officer of state, and come [your leave, To speak with Coriolanus.

1 G. From whence?

Men. From Rome.

1 G. You may not pass, you must return: our Will no more hear from thence.

2 G. You’ll see your Rome embrac’d with fire, You’ll speak with Coriolanus. [before

Men. Good my friends, If you have heard your general talk of Rome, And of his friends there, it is lots to blanks, My name hath touch’d your ears: it is Menenius.

1 G. Be it so; go back: the virtue of your name Is not here passable.

Men. I tell thee, fellow, The general is my lover: I have been The book of his good acts, whence men have read His fame unparalleled, haply, amplified; For I have ever verified his friends, (Of whom he’s chief,) with all the size that verity Would without lapsing suffer: nay, sometimes, Like to a bowl upon a subterr ground, I have tumblest past the throw; and in his praise Have, almost, stamp’d the leasing: therefore, fell I must have leave to pass. [low

1 G. ’Faith, sir, if you had told as many lies in his behalf, as you have uttered words in your own, you should not pass here: no, though it were as virtuous to lie, as to live chastly. Therefore, go back.

Men. Pr’ythee, fellow, remember my name is Menenius, always factionary on the party of your general.

2 G. Howsoever you have been his liar, (as you say, you have,) I am one that, telling true under him, must say, you cannot pass. Therefore, go back.

Men. Has he dined, canst thou tell? for I would not speak with him till after dinner.

1 G. You are a Roman, are you?

Men. I am as thy general is.

2 G. Then you should hate Rome, as he does. Can you, when you have pushed out your gates the very defender of them, and in a violent popular ignorance, given your enemy your shield, think to front his revenges with the easy groans of old women, the virginal palms of your daughters, or with the palsied intercession of such a decayed dotant as you seem to be? Can you think to blow out the intended fire your city is ready to flame in, with such weak breath as this? No, you are deceived: you have back to back to back to back to back to back to back to back to prepare for your execution: you are condemned, our general has sworn you out of reprieve and pardon.

Men. Sirrah, if thy captain knew I were here, he would use me with estimation.

2 G. Come, my captain knows you not.

Men. I mean, thy general.

1 G. My general cares not for you. Back, I say; go, lest I set forth your half pint of blood:—back, —that’s the utmost of your having:—back.

Men. Nay, but fellow, fellow.—

Enter Coriolanus and Aufidius.

Cor. What’s the matter?

Men. Now, you companion, I’ll say an errand for you! you shall know now, that I am in estimation! you shall perceive that a Jack gardian cannot office me from my son Coriolanus: guess, but by my entertainment with him, if thou stand’st not in the state of hanging, or of some death more long in spectatorship, and crueler in suffering; behold how he is sworn what’s to come upon thee. The glorious gods sit in hourly synod about thy particular prosperity, and love thee no worse than thy old father Menenius does! O, my soul! my soul! thou art preparing fire for us; look, how the water, no water to quench it. I was hardly moved to come to thee: but being assured, none but myself could move thee, I have been blown out of your gates with sighs: and conjure thee to pardon Rome, and thy petitionary countrymen, men who adhered to thee, the gods assur’d by thee, and turn the dregs of it upon this varlet here; this, who, like a block, hath denied my access to thee.

Cor. Away!

Men. How away?

Cor. Wife, mother, child, I know not. My affairs Are servanted to others: though I owe My revenge properly, my remission lies In Volscian breasts. That we have been familiar, Ingrate forgetfulness shall poison, rather Than pity note how much.—Therefore, be gone. Mine ears against your suits are stronger, than Your gates against my force. Yet, for I lov’d thee, Take this along; I writ it for thy sake. [Gives a letter.

And would have sent it. Another word. Menenius, I will not hear thee speak.—This man, Aufidius, Was my beloved in Rome; yet thou beholdst’st—

Auf. You keep a constant temper.

[Exit Coriolanus and Aufidius.

1 G. Now, sir, is your name Menenius, will I not hear thee speak.—This man, Aufidius, Was my beloved in Rome; yet thou behold’st’st—

Auf. You keep a constant temper.

[Exit Coriolanus and Aufidius.

SCENE III.—The Tent of Coriolanus.

Enter Coriolanus, Aufidius, and others.

Cor. We will before the walls of Rome to-morrow Set down our host.—My partner in this action, You must report to the Volscian lords, how plainly I have borne this business.

Auf. Only their ends You have respected: stopp’d your ears against The general suit of Rome; never admitted
A private whisper, no, not with such friends
That thought them sure of you.

Cor. This last old man, whom with a ranc'd heart I have sent to Rome,
Lov'd me above the mean; he was a father;
Nay, called me, indeed. Their latest refuge
Was to send him: for whose old love, I have (Though I show'd sourly to him,) once more offer'd
The first conditions, which they did refuse,
And cannot now accept, to grace him only.
That thought he could do more; a very little
I have yielded: Fresh embassies, and suits,
Nor from the state, nor private friends, hereafter
Will I lend ear to.—Ha! what shou't is this?

Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow
In the same time 'tis made? I will not.—

Enter, in mourning habilis, Virgilia, Volumnia, leading young Marcius, Valeria, and Attendants.

My wife comes foremost; then the honour'd moudl
Wherein this trunk was fram'd, and in her hand
The grand-child to her blood. But, out, affliction!
All I'mend and privy'd of nature, break!
Let it be virtuous, to be obstante.—

What is that curt'sy worth? or those doves' eyes,
Which can make gods forsrown?—I melt, and am not
Of stronger earth than others.—My mother bow's;
As if Olympus to a molehill should
In supplication nod: and my young boy
Hath an aspect of intercession, which
Great nature cries, Deny not.—Let the Volscyes
Plough Rome, and harrow Italy: I'll never
Be such a gosling to obey instinct: but stand,
As if a man were author of himself,
And knew no other kin.

Vir. My lord and husband! Cor. These eyes are not the same I wore in Rome.

Vir. The sorrow, that delivers us thus chang'd,
Makes you think so.

Cor. As like a dull actor now, I have
I forget my part, and I am out,
Even to a full disgrace. Best of my flesh,
Forgive my tyranny; but do not say,
For that, Forgive our Romans.—O, a kiss
Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge;
Never in the queen of my heart kiss,
That kiss I carried from thee, dear; and my true lip
Hath virgîn'd it e'er since.—You gods! I prate,
And the most noble mother of the world
Leave unsaltéd: Sink, my knee, I the earth!—

Knelt.

Of thy deep duty more impression show
That of common sons.

Vol. O, stand up bless'd! Whilst, with no softer cushion than the flint,
I Besel before thee; and unproperly
Show duty, as mistaken all the while
Between the child and parent. [Knelt.

Cor. What is this? Your knees to me? to your corrected son?
Then let the pebbles on the hungry beach
Fillip the stars; then let the mutinous winds
Strike the proud cedars 'gainst the fiery sun;
Mur'dring'impossibility, to make
What cannot be, slight works.

Vol. Thou art my warrior; I holp to frame thee. Do you know this lady? Cor. The noble sister of Publicola,
The moon of Rome; chaste as the icele,
That's cur'd by the frost from purest snow,
And chas'd by the sun light, from Dian and Valeria! Vol. This is a poor epitome of yours,
Which by the interpretation of full time
May show like all yourself.

Vol. The god of soldiers,
With the consent of supreme Jove, inform'me
Thy thoughts with nobleness; that thou may'st
To shame unvulnerable, and stick i' the wars
Like a great sea-mark, standing every flaw,
And saving those that eye thee! Your knee, sirrah.

Cor. That's my brave boy.

Vol. Even he, your wife, this lady, and myself,
Are suitors to you.

Cor. I beseech you, peace:
Or, if you'd ask, remember this before;
The things, I have forsworn, and may never
Be held by you denials. Do not bid me
Dismiss my soldiers, or capitulate
Again with Rome's meannickens:—Tell me not Wherein I seem unnatural: Desire not
To allay my rages and revenges, with
Your colder reasons.

Vol. O, no more, no more! You have said, you will not grant us any thing
For we have nothing else to ask, but that
Which you deny already; yet we will ask;
That, if you fall in our request, the blame
May hang upon your hardness: therefore hear us.

Cor. Auffidius, and you Volscyes, mark; for we'll Hear nought from Rome in private.—Your request.

Vol. Should we be silent and not speak, our rai-
And state of bodies would bewray what life [ment,
We have led since thy exile. Think with thyself,
How more unfortunate than all living women
Are we come hither: since that thy sight, which Should shou't on comforts,
Make our eyes flow with joy, hearts dance with Constrains them weep, and shake with fear and sorrow;

Making the mother, wife, and child, to see
The son, the husband, and the father, tearing
His country's bowels out. And to poor we,
Thine enmy's most capital; thou bann'st us
Our prayers to the gods, which is a comfort
That all but we enjoy: For how can we,
Alas! how can we our country pray,
Whereeto we are bound; together with thy victory,
Whereeto we are bound? Alack! or we must lose
The country, our dear nurse; or else thy person,
Our comfort in the country. We must find
An evident calamity, though we had
Our wish, which side should win: for either thou
Must, as a foreign recreant, be led
With manacles through our streets, or else
Triumphantly tread on thy country's ruin;
And bear the palm of the envying devly
Thy wife and children's blood. For myself, son,
I purpose not to wait on fortune, till
These wars determine: if I cannot persuade thee
Rather to show a noble grace to both parts,
As I next hope, than to run on to the sooner
March to assault thy country, than to tread
(Trust to't, thou shalt not,) on thy mother's womb,
That brought thee to this world.

Vir. Ay, and on mine,
That brought you forth this boy, to keep your name
Living to time.

Boy. He shall not tread on me;
I'll run away till I am bigger, but then I'll fight.

Cor. Not of a woman's tenderness to be,
Requires nor child nor woman's face to see.
I have sat too long. [Rising.

Vol. Nay, go not from us thus.

If it were so, that our request did tend
To save the Romans, thereby to destroy
The Volscyes whom you serve, you might condemn
As poisonous of your honour; 'Tis; our suit [fur,
Is, that you reconcile them: while the Volscyes
May say, 'This mercy we have show'd; the Romans,
This we receiv'd'; and each in either side
Have to the law to the Volscyes' d's
For making up this peace! Thou know'st, great
The end of war's uncertain; but this certain, [son.
That, if thou conquer Rome, the benefit
Which thou shalt thereby reap, is such a name,
Whose repetition will be dreg'd with curses;
Whose ynode thus writ:—'The man was noble,
But with his last attempt he wip'd it out;
Destroy'd his country; and his name remains
To the ensuing age, abhor'd. Speak to me, son: Thou hast affected the fine strains of honour,
To imitate the graces of the gods;
'Twixt our right shoulders the whole checks o' the air,
And yet to charge thy sulphur with a bolt
That should but rive an oak. Why dost not speak?
Think'st thou it honourable for a noble man
Still to remember wrongs?—Daughter, speak you:
He can't be wearied of his envoy there:
Ask thou, boy; Perhaps, thy childhoodishness will move him more
Than can our reasons. There is no man in the world [prate.
More bonnd to his mother; yet here he lets me
Like one of the stocks. Thou hast never in thy life
Show'd thy dear mother any courtesy:
When she, (poor hen!) fond of no second brood,
Has cluck'd thee to the wars, and safely home,
Loaden with honour. Say, my request's unjust,
And spurn me back; But, if it be not so, [thee.
Thou art not honest; and the gods will plague
That thou restrain'st from me the duty, which
To a mother's part belongs.—He turns away:
Down, ladies; let us shame him with our knees.
To his surname Coriolanus's longs more pride,
Than pity to his prayers. Down: An end:
This is the last:—So we will home to Rome,
And die among our neighbours.—Nay, behold us:
This boy, that cannot tell what he would have,
But kneels, and holds up hands, for fellowship,
Does render our petition with such courtesy
Than thou hast to deny't.—Come, let us go:
This fellow had a Volscian to his mother;
His wife is in Coriol, and his child
Like him by chance:—Yet give us our despatch:
I am hush'd until our city be afeare,
And then I'll speak a little. O mother, mother!
[ Holding Volumnia by the hands, silent.
What have you done? Behold, the heavens do ope,
The gods look down, and this unnatural scene
They laugh at. O my mother, mother! O!
You have won a happy victory to Rome:
But, for your son,—believe it, O, believe it,
Most dangerously you have with him prevail'd,
If not most mortal to him. But, let it come:—
Aufidius, though I cannot make true wars,
I'll frame convenient peace. Now, good Aufidins,
Were you in my stead, say, would you have heard
A mother less? or granted less, Aufidius? [Auf.
I was mov'd withal.
Cor. I dare be sworn, you were:
And, sir, It is no little thing, to make
Mine eyes to sweat compassion. But, good sir,
What peace you'll make, advise me: for my part,
I'll not to Rome, I'll back with you; and pray you,
Stand to me in this cause.—O mother! wife! [Auf.
I am glad, thou hast sent thy mercy and thy honour
At difference in thee: out of that I'll work
Myself a former fortune. [Aside.
[The Ladies make signs to Coriolanus.
Ay, by and by: [To Volumnia, Virgilia, &c.
But we will drink together; and you shall hear
A better witness back than words, which we,
On like conditions, will have counter-seal'd.
Come, enter with us. Ladies, you desire
To have a temple built you: all the swords
In Italy, and her confederate arms,
Could not have made this peace. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Rome. A publick Place.

Enter Menenius and Sicinius.

Men. See you yond' coign o'the Capitol; yond' coign
Of the gods' sittings.

Sic. Why, what of that?
Men. If it be possible for you to displace it with Your little finger, there is some hope the ladies of Rome, especially his mother, may prevail with him. But I say, there is no hope in't; our throats are sentenced, and stay upon execution.

Sic. Is't possible, that so short a time can alter the condition of a man?

Men. There is difference between a grub, and a butterfly: yet your butterfly was a grub. This Marcus is grown from man to dragon; he has wings; he's more than a creeping thing.

Sic. He loved his mother dearly.

Men. So did he me: and he no more remembers him in his wrath, than an eight year old horse.
The taintness of his face sour's ripe grapes. When he walks, he moves like an engine, and the ground shinks before his treading. He is able to pierce a corset with his eye; talks like a knell, and his hiss is a battery; a thing made for Alexander.
What he bids be done, is finished with his bidding.
He wants nothing of a god, but eternity, and a heaven to throne in.

Sic. Yes, mercy, if you report him truly.

Men. Lucius is dislodg'd, and Marcius gone:
A merrier day did never yet greet Rome,
No, not the expulsion of the Tarquins.

Sic. Friend, Art thou certain this is true? Is it most certain?
Men. As certain, as I know the sun is fire.
Where have you lurk'd, that you make doubt of it?
Ne'er through an arch so hurried the blown tide,
As the recomforted through the gates. Why,
Hark you;
[Trumpets and hautboys sounded, and drums beaten, all together. Shouting also within.
The trumpets, sackbuts, psalteries, and fifies,
Tabors, and cymbals, and the shouting Romans,
Make the sun dance. Hark you! [Shouting again.
Men. I paint him in the character. This is good news:
I will go meet the ladies. This Volumnia
Is worth of consuls, senators, patricians,
A city full; of tribunes, such as you,
A sea and land full: You have pray'd well to-day;
This morning, for ten thousand of our throats
I'd not have given a doit. Hark, how they joy!
[Shouting and music.

Sic. First, the gods bless you for their tidings:
Accept my thankfulness. [next,
Men. Sir, we have all
Great cause to give great thanks.
Sic. They are near the city?

Sic. Almost at point to enter.

Men. We will meet them,
And help the joy. [Going.

Enter the Ladies, accompanied by Senators, Patricians, and People. They pass over the Stage.

1 Sen. Behold our patrones, the life of Rome:
Call all your tribes together, praise the gods,
And make triumphant fires; strew flowers before
Unshout the noise that banish'd Marcus, [them
Repeal him with the welcome of his mother;
Cry. Welcome, ladies, welcome, welcome !
All. Welcome, ladies !
Welcome! [A flourish with drums and trumpets.]

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Antium. A publick Place.
Enter Tullius Aufidius, with Attendants.

Auf. Go tell the lords of the city, I am here:
Deliver them this paper: having read it,
Bid them repair to the market-place; where I,
Even in theirs and in the common'ears,
Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse,
The city ports by this hath enter'd, and Intends to appear before the people, hoping
To purge himself with words: Despatch.

[Exeunt Attendants.

Enter Three or Four Conspirators of Aufidius’ faction.

Most welcome!

1 Con. How is it with our general?

Auf. Even so,
As with a man by his own alms empoison'd,
And with his charity slain.

2 Con. Most noble sir,
If you do hold the same intent wherein
You wish'd us parties, we'll deliver you
Of your great danger.

Sir, I cannot tell;
We must proceed, as we do find the people.

3 Con. The people will remain uncertain, whilst Twixt you there's difference; but the fall of either
Makes the survivor heir of all.

And my pretext to strike at him admits
A general destruction: I raise him, and I pawn'd
Mine honour for his truth: Who being so heighten'd,
He water'd his new plants with dews of flattery,
Seducing so my friends: and, to this end,
He made him joint servant with me; gave him way
In all his own desires: nay, let him choose
Out of his楼盘, his projects and bung, my Best and freshest men; serv'd his designments
In mine own person; hop to remake the
Which he did end all his; and took some pride
To do myself this wrong: till, at the last,
I seem'd his follower, not partner; and
He wag'd me with his countenance, as if
I had been mercenary.

1 Con. That I would have spoke of:
Being banish'd for't, he came unto my heart,
Presented to my knife his throat: I took him;
Made him joint servant with me; gave him way
In all his own desires; nay, let him choose
Out of his projects, his blood and labour
Of our great action; Therefore shall he die,
And I'll renew me in his fall. But, hark!

[Drums and trumpets sound, with great noise of the people.

1 Con. Your native town, you enter'd like a post,
And had no welcomes home; but he returns,
Splitting the air with noise.

2 Con. And patient fools, whose children he hath slain, their base throats
With giving him glory.

3 Con. Therefore, at your vantage,
Ere he express himself, or move the people
With what he would say, let him feel your sword,
Which we will second. When he lies along,

After your way his tale pronounced shall bury
His reasons with his body.

Auf. Say no more;
Here come the lords.

[Enter the Lords of the City.

Lords. You are most welcome home.

Auf. I have no desire'd it; But, worthy lords, have you with heed perus'd
What I have written to you?

Lords. We have,

1 Lord. And desire to hear it.

What faults he made before the last, I think,
Might have found easy fines: but there to end,
Where he was to begin, and give away
The benefit of our levies, answering us
With our own charge; making a treaty, where
There was a yielding: This admits no excuse.

Auf. He approaches, you shall hear him.

[Enter Coriolanus, with drums and colours; a crowd of Citizens with him.

Cor. Hail, lords! I am return'd your soldier;
No more infected with my country's love,
Than when I parted hence, but still subsisting
Under your great command. You are to know,
That prosperously I have attempted, and
With bloody passage, led your enemies, even to
The gates of Rome. Our spoils we have brought home,
Do more than counterpoise, a full third part,
The charges of the action. We have made peace,
With no less honour to the Allies,
Than shame to the Romans: and we here deliver,
Subscribed by the consuls and patricians,
Together with the seal o'the senate, what
We have compounded on.

Auf. Read it not, noble lords;
But tell the traitor, in the highest degree
He hath abused your powers.

Cor. Traitor!—How now?—

Auf. Ay, traitor, Marcius. Cor.

Cor. Ay, Marcius, Caius Marcius!—Dost thou think
I'll grace thee with that robbery, thy stol'n name.
Coriolanus in Corioli?
You lords and heads of the state, perfidiously
He has betray'd your business, and given up,
For certain drops of salt, your city Rome
I say, your city, to his wife and mother:
Breaking his oath and resolution, like
A twist of rotten silk; never admitting
Counsel o' the war; but at his nurse's tears
He whin'd and roar'd away your victory;
That pages blush'd at him, and men of heart
Look'd wondering each at other.

Cor. Hearst thou, Mars?—

Auf. Name not the god, thou boy of tears.—

Cor. No more.

Cor. Measureless liar, thou hast made my heart
Too great for what contains it. Boy! O slave!—
Pardon me, lords, 'tis the first time that ever
I was forc'd to scold. Your judgments, my grave lords,
Must give this cur the lie: and his own notion (Who wears my stripes impress'd on him; that must bear
My beating to his grave:) shall join to thrust
The lie unto him.

1 Lord. Peace, both, and hear me speak.
Cor. Cut me to pieces, Volscis; men and lads,
Stain all your edges on me.—Boy! False hound!—
If you have writ your annals true, 'tis there,
That like an eagle in a dove-cote,
I Flutter'd your Volscis in Corioli:—
Alone I did it.—Boy!—

Auf. Why, noble lords,
Will you be put in mind of his blind fortunate,
Which was your shame, by this unholy braggart,
'Fore your own eyes and ears?
Coriolanus. Insolent Mend Acl conspirators. My what Philippi thus when let O, I He" His Bear me: am You, Being ITpon WTiat Whatius, Marcus Cicero, M. 3mil. Lepidus. Enter Marcus Brutus, Cassius, Cassca, Trebonius, Ligarius, Decius Brutus, Metellus Cimber, Cinna, Flavius and Marullus, tribunes.

Scene.—during a great part of the Play, at Rome; afterwards at Sardis; and near Philippi.

ACT I.

Flav. Hence; home, you idle creatures, get you home: Is this a holiday? What is to be done? Being mechanical, you ought not walk. Upon a labouring day, without the sign Of your profession?—Speak, what trade art thou? 1 Cit. Why, sir, a carpenter. Mar. Where is thy leather apron, and thy rule? What dost thou with thy best apparel on?— You, sir: what trade are ye? 2 Cit. Truly, sir, in respect of a fine workman, I am but, as you would say, a cobbler. Mar. But what trade art thou? Answer me directly. 2 Cit. A trade, sir, that, I hope, I may use with a safe conscience; which is, indeed, sir, a mender of bad soles. Mar. What trade, thou knave, thou naughty knave, what trade? 2 Cit. Nay, I beseech you, sir, be not out with me: yet, if you be out, sir, I can mend you. Mar. What meanest thou by that? Mend me, thou saucy fellow? 2 Cit. Why, sir, cobbler you. Flav. Thou art a cobbler, art thou? 2 Cit. Truly, sir, all that I live by is, with the

And do you now strew flowers in his way,
That comes in triumph over Pompey's blood?
Be gone;
Run to your houses, fall upon your knees,
Pray to the gods to intermit the plague
That needs must light on this ingratitude.

Flau. Go, go, good countrymen, and, for this assemble all the poor men to your Com to Tyburn, and weep your tears
Into the channel, till the lowest stream
Do kiss the most exalted shores of all.

[JExeunt Citizens.

See, wher' their basest metal be not mov'd;
They vanish tongue-tied in their gulliness.
Do you go down that way towards the Capitol!
This way will I: Disrobe the images,
If you do find them deck'd with ceremonies.

Mar. May we do so?
You have the feast of Lupercal.
Flau. It is no matter; let no images
Be hung with Caesar's trophies, I'll about,
And drive away the vulgar from the streets:
So do you too, where you perceive them thick.
These growing feasts, pluck'd from Caesar's wing,
Will make him fly an ordinary pitch;
Who else would soar above the view of men,
And keep us all in servile fearfulness.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A publick Place.

Enter, in procession, with music, Caesar; Antony, for the course; Calphurnia, Portia, Decius,
Cicero, Brutus, Cassius, and Casca, a great crowd following; among them a Soothsayer.

Cass. Calphurnia,—
Peace, ho! Caesar speaks.
[Music ceases.

Cal. Here, my lord.

Cass. Stand you directly in Antonius' way,
When he doth run his course,—Antonius!
Ant. Caesar, my lord.

Cass. Forget not, in your speed, Antonius,
To touch Calphurnia: for our elders say,
The barren, touched in this holy chase,
Shake off their sterile curses.

I shall remember:
When Caesar says, Do this, it is perform'd.

Sooth. Caesar.

Cas. Hal! who calls?

Casca. Bid every noise be still:—Peace yet again.

Cas. Who is't in the press, that calls on me?

I hear a tongue, shriller than all the music,
Cry, Caesar: Speak; Caesar is turn'd to hear.

Sooth. Bear it the ides of March.

Cas. What man is that?

Bru. A soothsayer, bids you beware the ides of March.

Cas. Set him before me, let me see his face.

Cass. Fellow, come from the throng: Look upon Caesar.
[again.

Cas. What says't thou to me now? Speak once.

Sooth. Beware the ides of March.

Cas. He is a dreamer; let us leave him:—pass.

[Sennet. Exeunt all but Bru. and Cas.

Cas. Will you go see the order of the course?

Bru. Not I.

Cas. I pray you, do.

Bru. It were a jugglome; I do lack some part
Of that quick spirit that is in Antony;

Let me not hinder, Cassius, your desires;
I'll leave you.

Cass. Brutus, I do observe you now of late:
I have not from your eyes that gentleness
And shew of love, as I was wont to have:
You bear too stubbish and too strange a hand
Over your friend that loves you.

Bru. Cassius,
Be not deceived: If I have writ'd my look,

I turn the trouble of my conscience
Merely upon myself:—Vexed I am
Of late, with passions of some difference,
Conceptions only proper to myself,
Which give some soil, perhaps, to my behaviours;
But let not therefore my good friends be griev'd;
And for which Cassius, if you love me,
Nor construe any further my neglect,
Than that poor Brutus, with himself at war,
Forgets the shows of love to other men.

Cass. Then, Brutus, I have much mistook your Brutans whereof, this breast of most high buried
Thoughts of great value, worthy cogitations.
Tell me, good Brutus, can you see your face?

Bru. No, Cassius: for the eye sees not itself,
But by reflection, by some other things.

Cass. 'Tis just:
And it is very much lamented, Brutus,
That you have no such mirror, as will turn
Your hidden worthiness into your eye,
That you might see your shadow.
I have heard,
Where many of the best respect in Rome,
(Except immortal Caesar,) speaking of Brutus,
And groaning underneath this age's yoke,
Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes.

—Bru. Into what dangers would you lead me, Cassius,
That you would have me seek into myself [sius,
For that which my life is?

Cass. Therefore, good Brutus, be prepar'd to hear:
And, since you know you cannot see yourself
So well as by reflection, I, your glass,
Will modestly discover to yourself
That of yourself which you yet know not of.
And be not jealous of me, gentle Brutus:
Were I a common laughor, or did use
To stale with ordinary oaths my love
To every new protestor; if you know,
That I do fawn on men, and have them hard,
And after scandal them; or if you know
That I profess myself in banqueting
To all the rout, then hold me dangerous.

[Flourish, and short.

Bru. What means this showing? I do feir, the Choose Caesar for their king!
[people Cass.

Ay, do you fear it?

Then must I think you would not have it so.

Bru. I would not, Cassius; yet I love him well:
But wherefore do you tell me this at all?
What is it that you would impart to me?
If it be sought toward the general good,
Set honour in one eye, and death in the other,
And I will look on both indifferently:
For, let the gods so speed me, as I love
The name of honour more than I fear death.

Cass. I know that virtue to be in you, Brutus,
As well as I do know your outward favour.
Well, honour is the subject of my story.
I cannot tell, what you and other men
Think of this life; but, for my single self,
I had as lief not be, as live to be
In awe of such a thing as I myself;
I was born free as Caesar; so were you.
We both have fed on blood; and we can both
Endure the winter's cold, as well as heat:
For once, upon a raw and gusty day,
The troubled Tyber chafing with her shores,
Cassard said to me, Dar'st thou, Cassius, now
Loap in with me into this angry flood,
And swim to yonder point?—Upon the word,
Accouter'd as I was, I plunged in,
And bade him follow: so, indeed, he did.
The torrent roar'd; and we did buffet it
With lusty-sigh'd enow; and now we chas'd
And stemming it with hearts of controversy.
But ere we could arrive the point propos'd,
Cassius cry'd, Help me, Cassius, or I sink.
I, as Eneas, our great ancestor
Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder
The old Anchises bear; so, from the waves of Tyber
Did I the tired Caesar: and this man
Is now become a god; and Cassius is
A wretched creature, and must bend his body,
If Caesar carelessly but nod on him.
He had a fever when he was in Spain,
And, when the fit was on him, I did mark
How he did shake: 'tis true, this god did shake:
His eyes did swell, his lips did from their colour fly;
And that same evening, when I bend down the world,
Did lose his lustre: I did hear him groan:
Ay, and that tongue of his, that bade the Romans
Mark him, and write his speeches in their books,
Alas! it cried, Give me some drink, Titinius,
And give me something strong, give me some
Of that fierce temper should
So get the start of the majestick world,
And bear the palm alone.

(Shout. Flourish.
Cæs. Another general shout I
I do believe, there's none but now
For some new honours that are heasp'd on Caesar.
Cas. Why, man, he doth beseide the narrow
Like a Colossus; and we petty men
[world, Walk under his huge legs, and peep about
To find ourselves dishonourable graves.
Men at some time are masters of their fates:
The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
But in ourselves, that we are underlings.
Brutus, and Caesar: What should be in that Caesar?
Why should that name be sounded more than yours?
Write them together, yours is as fair a name;
Soothd them, it doth become the mouth as well;
Weigh them, it is as heavy; conjure with them,
Brutus, and Caesar; and the spirit of Caesar.
(Shout.
Now in the names of all the gods at once,
Upon what meats doth this our Caesar feed,
That he is grown so great? Age, thou art sham'd:
Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble bloods!
Which is not done by age, but by the great flood,
But it was fam'd with more than with one man:
When could they say, till now, that talk'd of Rome,
That her wide walks encompass'd but one man?
Now is it Rome indeed, and room enough,
Where there is but one man; that man himself.
O! you and I have heard our fathers say,
There was a Brutus once, that would have brook'd
The eternal devil to keep his state in Rome,
As easily as a king.

Brut. That you do love me, I am nothing jealous;
What you would work me to, I have some aim;
How I have thought of this, and of these times,
I shall recount hereafter; for this present,
I would not, so with love I might entreat you, Be mou'd. What you have said, I will consider;
What you have to say, it. And I will with patience hear: and find a time
Both meet to hear, and answer, such high things.
Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this; Brutus had rather be a willing man
Than to repute himself a sov of Rome
Under these hard conditions as this time
Is like to lay upon us.

Cas. I am glad, that my weak words [Brutus.
Have struck but thus much show of fire from Re-enter Caesar, and his Train.

Bru. The games are done, and Caesar is returning.

Cas. As they pass by, pluck Casca by the sleeve;
And he will after his sour fashion, tell you
What hath proceeded, worthy uote, to-day.

Bru. I will do so:—But, look you, Cassius,
The angry spot doth glow on Caesar's brow,
And all the rest look like a chinian train;
Calphurnia's cheek is pale; and Cicero,
Looks with such ferret and such fiery eyes,
As we have seen him in the Capitol,
Being crou'd in conference by some senators.

Cas. Cassia will tell us what the matter is.
[Exit. Act 2.

Ant. Caesar.

Cas. Let me have men about me that are fat;
Sleek-headed men, and such as sleep o' nights:
Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look;
He thinks too much: such men are dangerous.

Ant. Fear him not, Caesar, he's not dangerous;
He is a noble Roman, and well given.
Cas. 'Would he were fatter:—But I fear him
Yet if my name were liable to fear, [not:
I do not know the man I should avoid.
No sooner, in that case, I should lose
The man that spare Casca. He reads much;
He is a great observer, and he looks
Quite through the deeds of men: he loves no plays,
As thou dost, Antony; he hears no music:
Seldom he smiles; and smiles in such a sort,
As if he could not himself, and scorn'd his spirit
That could be mov'd to smile at any thing.
Such men as he be never at heart's ease,
Whiles they beheld a greater than themselves;
And therefore are they very dangerous.
I rather think, since this is to be spoken:
Than what I fear, for always I am Caesar.
Come on my right hand, for this ear is deaf,
And tell me truly what thou thinkest of him.
[Exeunt Caesar and his Train. Cassa stays behind.

Casca. You pull'd me by the cloak; Would you speak with me?

Bru. Ay, Cassia; tell us what hath chanc'd to Day, That Caesar looks so sad?
Casca. If you were with him, were you not?

Bru. I should not then ask Ca'sia what hath chanc'd.

Casca. Why, there was a crown offer'd him:
And being offer'd him, he put it by with the back of his hand; and then he said, and then he shot him.

Bru. What was the second noise for?

Casca. Why, for that too.

Cas. They shouted thrice; What was the last cry for?

Casca. Why, for that too.

Bru. Was the crown offer'd him thrice?

Casca. Ay, marry, was't, and he put it by thrice, every time gentler than other; and at every put-ing by, more honest neighbours shout.

Cas. Who's that in it but him from the crown?

Casca. Why, Antony.

Bru. Tell us the manner of it, gentle Cassia.

Casca. I can as well be hanged, as tell the manner of it: it was mere foolery. I did not mark it. I saw Mark Antony offer him a crown; yet 'twas not a crown neither, was one of these coronets:—and, as I told you, he put it by once; but, for all that,
to my thinking, he would fain have it. Then he offer'd it to him again; then he put it by a second time, to my thinking, he was very loath to lay his fingers on it; and then he offer'd it the third; time he put it the third time: by still as he refused it, the rabblement hooted, and clapped their chopped hands, and threw up their switty night-caps, and uttered such a deal of stinking breath because Caesar refused the crown, that it had almost choked Caesar; for he swooned, and fell down at it: And for mine own part, I durst not laugh, for fear of opening my lips, and receiving the bad air.

Cas. But, soft. I pray you: What? did Caesar
Cassandra fell down in the market-place, and fainted at mouth, and was speechless.

Bru. 'Tis very like: he hath the falling sickness.

Cas. No, Caesar hath it not; but you, and I,
And honourable Cassia, we have it.

Casca. I know not what you mean by that; but,
I am sure, Caesar fell down. If the tag-rag people did not clap him, and hiss him, according as he pleased, and displease them, as they use to do the players in the market-place, I am no true man.

Bru. What said he, when he came unto himself?

Cassia. Marray, before he fell down, when he perceived the common herd was glad he refused the crown, he pluck'd me ope his doublet, and offered them the crown, and that to cut—And I, as a man of any occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might go to hell among the rogues:—and so he fell. When he came to himself again, he said, if he had done, or said, any thing amiss, he desired their worship to think it was his infirmitie. Three or four wenches, where I stood, cried, Alas, good soul!--and forgave him with all their hearts: but there's no need to be taken of them: if Caesar had stabbed their mothers, they would have done it.

Brut. And after that, he came, thus sad, away?

Casca. Ay.

Cas. Did Cicero say any thing?

Casca. Ay, he spoke Greek.

Cas. To whom, or, Nay, an I tell you, that I'll never look you it the face again: But those, that understood him, smiled at one another, and shook their heads: but, for mine own part, it was Greek to me. I could tell you two things: Marullus and Flavius, for pulling scarfs off Caesar's images, are put to silence.
Fare you well. There was more foolery yet, if I could remember it.

Cas. Will you sup with me to-night, Casca?

Casca. No, I am promised forth.

Cas. Will you dine with me to-morrow?

Casca. Ay, if I he alive, and your mind hold, your dinner worth the eating.

Brut. What a blunt fellow is this grown to be?
He was quick mettle, when he went to school.

Cas. So is he now, in execution
Of any bold or noble enterprize,
How ever he puts on this tardy form.
This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit,
Which gives men stomach to digest his words
With better appetite.

Brut. And so it is. For this time I will leave
To-morrow, if you please to walk with me, (you: I will come home to you; or, if you will,
Come home, and I will wait for you.

Cas. I will do so: till then, think of the world.

[Exit Brutus.

Well, Brutus, thou art noble; yet, I see,
Thy honourable metal may be wrought
From that it is dispos'd: 'T herefore 'tis meet
That noble minds keep ever with their likes:
For who so firm, that cannot be seduced?
Caesar doth bear me hard: But he loves Brutus:
If I were Brutus now, and he were Cassius,
He should not humour me. I will this night,
In several hands, in at his windows throw,
As if they came from several citizens,
Writings, all tending to the great opinion
That old men, and old fools, and wights, who were Caesar's ambition shall be glanced at:
And, after this, let Caesar sit him sure;
For we will shake him, or worse days endure.

[Exit.

SCENE III.—The same. A Street.

Thunder and lightning. Enter, from opposite sides,
Casca, with his sword drawn, and Cicero.

Cic. Good even, Casca: Brought you Caesar home?

Casca. Are not you mov'd, when all the sway
Shakes, like a thing unfirm? O Cicero, [earth
I but have seen to-night, when the howling winds
Have riv'd the knotty oaks; and I have seen
The ambitious ocean swell, and rage, and foam,
To be exalted with the threatening clouds:
But never till to-night, never till now,
Did I go through a tempest dropping fire.
Either there is a civil strife in heaven;
Or else the world, too saucy with the gods,
Incenses them to send destruction.

Cic. Why, saw you any thing more wonderful?

Casca. A common slave (you know him well by sight).

[Exit.

Brutus.

Besides, I have not since put up my sword,
Against the Capitol I met a lion,

Who glare'd upon me, and went surly by,
Without annoying me: and there were drawn
Upon a heap a hundred ghastly women,
Transformed with their fear; who swore they saw
Men, all in fire, walk up and down the streets.
And, yesterday, the bird of night did sit,
Even at noon-day, upon the market-place,
Hooting, and shrieking. When these prodigies
Do so conjointly meet, let not men say,
These are their rears. The Cat is about.

For, I believe, they are portentous things
Unto the climate that they point upon.

Cic. Indeed, it is a strange-disposed time:
But men may construe things after their fashion,
To purpose of the times. But, for myself,
Comes Caesar to the Capitol to-morrow?

Casca. He doth; for he did bid Antonius,
Send word to you, he would be there to-morrow.

Cic. Good night then, Casca: this disturbed sky
Is not to walk in.

Casca. Farewell, Cicero. [Exit Cicero.

Enter Cassius.

Cas. Who's there?

Casca. A Roman.

Casca. By your voice.

Casca. Your ear is good. Cassius, what night is
A very pleasing night to honest men. [this?

Casca. Who ever knew the heavens menace so?

Cas. Those that have known the earth so full of faults.

For my part, I have walk'd about the streets,
Submitting me unto the perilous night;
And, thus unbraced, Casca, as you see,
Have bar'd my bosom to the thunder-stone:
And, when the cross-blue lightning seem'd to open
The breast of heaven, I did present myself
Even in the air and very flesh of it. [heavens

Casca. But wherefore did you so much tempt the
It is the part of men to fear and tremble,
When the most mighty gods, by their omens, send
Such dreadful heralds to astonish us.

Cas. You are dull, Casca; and those sparks of
That should be in a Roman, you do want, [life
Or else you use not. You look pale, and gaze,
And put on fear, and cast yourself in wonder,
To see the strange impatience of the heavens:
But if you would consider the true cause,
Why all these fires, why all these gliding ghosts,
Why birds and beasts, from quality and kind;
Why old men, and old fools, and wights, who were
Why all these things change, from their ordinance,
Their natures, and pre-formed faculties,
To monstrous quality; why, you shall find,
That heaven hath infused them with these spirits,
To make them instruments of fear, to warn,
Unto some monstrous state. Now could I, Casca,
Name to thee a man most like this dreadful night;
That thunders, lightens, opens graves, and roars
As doth the lion in the Capitol:
A man no mightier than thyself, or me,
In personal action; yet prodigious grown,
And fearful, as these strange eruptions are.

Casca. 'Tis Caesar that you mean: Is it not, Cassius?

Cas. Let it be, who it is: for Romans now
Have theews and limbs like to their ancestors;
But, woe the while! our fathers' minds are dead,
And we are govern'd with our mothers' spirits;
Our yoke and sufferance show us womanish.

Casca. Indeed, they say, the senators to-morrow
Mean to establish Caesar as a king:
And he shall wear his crown by sea and land,
In every place, save here in Italy.

Cas. I know where I will wear this dager then;

Cassius from bonds will deliver Cassius:
Therein, ye gods, you make the weak most strong
Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat:
Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass,
Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron,
Can be retentive to the strength of spirit.
But life, being weary of these worldly bars,
Never lacks power to dismiss itself.
If I know this, know all the world besides.
That part of tyranny, that I do bear,
I can shake off at pleasure.
Casca. So can I:
So every bondman in his own hand bears
The power to cancel his capricious fate.
Cas. And why should Caesar, be a tyrant then?
Poor man! I know, he would not be a wolf,
But that he sees, the Romans are but sheep:
He were no lion, were not Romans ends.
These that with haste will make a mighty fire,
Begin it with weak straws: What trash is Rome, What rubbish, and what offal, when it serves
For the base matter to illuminate.
So vile a thing as Caesar? But, O, grief!
Where hast thou led me? I, perhaps, speak this Before a willing bondman then I know
My answer must be made: But I am arm'd,
And dangers are to me indifferent.
Casca. You speak to Casca; and to such a man,
That is no fleeting tell-tale. Hold my hand:
Be factions for redress of these great griefs;
And I will set this foot of mine as far,
As who goes farthest.
Cas. There's a bargain made.
Now know you, Casca, I have mod'st already Something of the most eminent Romans,
To undergo with me an enterprise
Of honourable-dangerous consequence,
And I do know by this, they stay for me
In Pompey's porch: For now, this fearful night,
Their fear or walking these dark streets;
And the complexion of the element
Is favour'd, like the work we have in hand,
Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible.

Enter Cinna.
Casca. Stand close awhile, for here comes one in haste.
Cas. 'Tis Cinna, I do know him by his gait;
He is a friend.—Cinna, where haste you so?
Cin. To find out you: Who's that? Metellus
Cas. No, it is Casca; one incorporate [Cimber]
To our attempts. Am I not staid for, Cinna?
Cin. I am glad out. What a fearful night is this?
There's two or three of us have seen strange sights.
Cas. Am I not staid for, Cinna? Tell me.
Cin. Yes, you are. O, Cassius, if you could but win
The noble Brutus to our party—
Cas. Be you content: Good Cinna, take this pa-
And look you, lay it in the praetor's chair, [per,
Where Brutus may but find it; and throw this
In at his window: set this up with wax
Upon Brutus' statue: all this done;
Repair to Pompey's porch, where you shall find us.
Is Decius Brutus, and Trebonius, there?
Cin. All but Metellus Cimber; and he's gone
To seek you at your house. Well, I will 'hie,
And so bestow these papers as you bade me.
Cas. That done, repair to Pompey's theatre.
[Exeunt Cinna and Casca.

Enter Brutus.
Come, Casca, you and I will, yet, ere day,
See Brutus at his house: three parts of him
Is ours already; and the man entire,
Upon the next encounter, yields him ours.
Casca. O, he sits high, in all the people's hearts:
And that which would appear offence in us,
His countenance, like richest alchymy,
Will change to virtue, and to worthiness.
Cas. Him, and his worth, and our great need of
You have right well conceived. Let us go, [him.
For it is after midnight; and, ere day,
We will awake him, and be sure of him.
[Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The same. Brutus' Orchard.

Enter Brutus.

Bru. What, Lucius! ho!—

I cannot, by the progress of the stars,
Give guess how near to day.—Lucius, I say!—
I would it were my fault to sleep so soundly.—
When, Lucius, when? Awake, I say: What, Lucius?

Enter Lucius.

Luc. Call'd you, my lord?

Bru. Get me a taper in my study, Lucius:
When it is lighted, come and call me here.

Luc. I will, my lord.

[Exit.

Bru. It must be by his death: and, for my part,
I know no personal cause to spur him on.
But for the general. He would be crown'd—
How that might change his nature, there's the question.
It is the bright day, that brings forth the adder;
And that craves wary walking. Crown him?—
And if not, will the people put a crown in him? [That—
That at his will he may do danger with.
The abuse of greatness is, when it disjoins [Cesar,
Remorse from power: And, to speak truth of I have not know when his affectious sway'd
More than his reason. But 'tis a common proof,
That lowliness is young ambition's ladder,
Whereeto the climber upward turns his face,
But when he once obtained the upmost round,
He then unsaw the ladder turns his back,
Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees
By which he did ascend: So Caesar may:
Then, lest he may prevail. And, since the quae:
Will bear no colour for the thing he is, [re-
Fashion it thus: that what he is, augmented,
Would not be tried, or walk'd on, and these extremities:
And therefore think him as a serpent's egg,
Which, hatch'd, would, as his kind, grow mis-
And kill him in the shell. [chievous
Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. The taper burneth in your closet, sir.
Searching the window for a flint, I found
This paper, thus seal'd up; and, I am sure,
It did not lie there, when I went to bed.

Bru. Get you to bed again, it is not day.
Is not to-morrow, boy, the ides of March?

Luc. I know not, sir.

Bru. Look in the calendar, and bring me word.

[Exit Lucius.

Bru. The exhalations, whizzing in the air,
Gives so much light, that I may read by them.

[Opens the letter, and reads.

Brutus, thou sleep'st! awake, and see thyself.
Shall Rome, &c. Speak, strike, redress! Brutus,
Brutus, thou sleep'st! awake!—

Such instigations have been often dropp'd,
Where I have took them up.
Shall Rome, &c. Thus must I place it out;
Shall Rome stand and awake? What! I know,
My ancestors did from the streets of Rome [Rome?
The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a king.
Speak, strike, redress!—Am I entreated then
To speak, and strike? O Rome! I make the proof
If the redress will follow, thou receivest [mise,
Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus!

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, March is wasted fourteen days.

Bru. 'Tis good. Go to the gate: somebody [Knock within.

Knocks. [Exit Lucius.

Since Cassius first did what me against Caesar, I have not slept.
Between the acting of a dreadful thing
And the first motion, all the Interim is Like a phantasma, or a hideous dream:
The genius, and the mortal instruments
Are then in council; and the state of man,
Like to a little kingdom, suffers then
The nature of an insurrection.

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, 'tis your brother Cassius at the door,
Who doth desire to see you.
JULIUS CAESAR.

ACT 2.

JULIUS.

Is he alone?

LUC. No, sir, there are more with him.

BRU. Do you know them?

LUC. No, sir; their hats are pluck'd about their And half their faces buried in their cloaks, [ears,]

That by no means I may discover them By mark of favour.

BRU. Let them enter. [Exit Lucius.

They are the faction. O conspiracy!

Sham'st thou to show, or to hide us thus by night, When evils are most free? O, then, by day,
Where wilt thou find a cavern dark enough To mask thy monstrous visage? Seek none, but Conceal it in smiles, and at all hazard. [spiration;]

For if thou path, they are thy own, and will stand on your
Not Ephesus itself was dim enough To hide thee from prevention.

Enter Cassius, Casca, Decius, Cinna, Metellus Cimber, and Trebonius.

CAS. I think we are too bold upon your rest:
Good morrow, Brutus; Do we trouble you?

BRU. I have been up this hour; awake, all night.
Know these men; that come along with you?

CAS. Yes, every man of them; and no man here, But our good friends: and every one doth wish, You had but that opinion of yourself,
Which every noble Roman bears of you.

This is Trebonius.

BRU. He is welcome hither.

CAS. This Decius Brutus.

BRU. He is welcome too.

CAS. This, Casca; this, Cinna;
And this, Metellus Cimber.

BRU. Why? They are all welcome.

What watchful cares do interpose themselves Betwixt your eyes and night?

CAS. Shall I entreat a word? [They whisper.

DEC. Here lies the east; Doth not the day break
CASNO. Here? Here? Here?

CAS. As soon as, sir, is doth; and you grey lines, That fret the clouds, are messengers of day.

CASCA. You shall confess, that you are both de-
Here, as I point my sword, the sun arises; [celv'd.
Which is a great way growing on the south,
Weighing the youthful season of the year.

Some two months hence, up higher toward the He first presents his fire; and the high east [north
Stands, as the Capitol, directly here.

BRU. Give me your hands all over, one by one.

CAS. And let's swear our resolutions.

BRU. No, not an oath: If not the face of men, The sufferance of our souls, the time's abuse,— If these be motives weak, break off betimes, And every man hence to his idle bed;
So let high-sighted tyranny range on, Till each man drop by lottery. But if these, As I am sure they do, bear fire enough To kindle cowards, and to steel with valour The melting spirits of women; then, countrymen, What need we any spur, but our own cause, To prick us to redress what other bond, Than secret Romans, that have spoke the word, And will not palter, and what other oath, Than honesty to honest engag'd. What this shall be, or we will fall for it? Swear priests, and cowards, and men cautious, Old feeble carrions, and such suffering souls That welcome wrongs; unto bad causes swear Such creatures as men doubt: but do not stain The virtuous course of an enterprise, Nor the insupportable metal of our spirits, To think, that, or our cause, or our performance, Did need an oath; when every drop of blood, That every Roman bears, and nobly bears, Is bastard of a several bastard,
If he do break the smallest particle Of any promise that hath pass'd from him.

CAS. But what of Cicero? Shall we sound him?

I think, he will stand very strong with us.

CASCA. Let us not leave him out.

CAS. Then leave him out.

CASCA. Indeed, he is not fit.

CAS. Shall no man else be touch'd but only
CAS. Decius, well urg'd.— I think it is not meet, Mark Antony, so well belov'd of Caesar.

Should outlive Caesar: We shall end all of him A shrew'd contriver; and, you know, his means, If he improve them, may well stretch so far, As to annoy us all: which to prevent, Let Antony, and Caesar, fall together. [Cassius,

BRU. Our course will seem too bloody, Cassius To cut the head off, and then hack the limbs; Like wrath in death, and envy afterwards: For Antony is but a limb of Caesar.

Let us be sacrificers, but no butchers, Cassius, we all stand up against the soul of Caesar; And in the spirit of men there is no blood: O, that we then could come by Caesar's spirit, And not dismember Caesar! But, alas,
Cæsar must bleed for it! And, gentle friends, Let's kill him boldly, but not wholly: Let's carse him as we shall fit for the gods, Not hew him as a carricase fit for hounds: And let our hearts, as subtle masters do, Stir up their servants to an act of rage; And after seem to chide them. I shall make Our purpose necessary, and not envious: Which so appearing to the common eyes, We shall be call'd purgers, not murderers. And for Mark Antony, think not of him: For he can do no more than Caesar's arm, When Caesar's head is off:—

CAS. Yet I do fear him: For in the ingrafted love he bears to Caesar.

BRU. Alas, good Cassius, do not think of him: If he love Caesar, all that he can do Is to himself; take thought, and die for Caesar And that were much he should; for he is given To sports, to wildness, and much company.

TREB. There is no fear in him; let him not die; For he will live, and laugh at this hereafter.

BRU. Peace, count the clock.

CAS. The clock hath stricken three.

TREB. 'Tis time to part.

CAS. But it is doubtful yet, Where Caesar will come forth to-day, or no: For he is superstitious grown of late: Quite from the main opinion he held once Of fantasy, of dreams, and ceremonies: It may be, these apparent prodigies, The unaccustomed terror of this night, And the persuasion of his augurers, May hold him from the Capitol to-day.

DEC. Never fear that: If he be so resolv'd, I can oversway him: for he loves to hear That unaccustomed may be betray'd with trees, And bears with glasses, elephants with holes, Lions with toils, and men with flatterers: But, when I tell him, he hates flatterers, He says, he does; being then most flattered. Let me work to this end:

For I can give his humour the true bent; And I will bring him to the Capitol.

CAS. Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch him.

BRU. By the eleventh hour: Is that the uttermost?

CAS. Be that the uttermost, and fail not then.

MET. Calus Ligarius doth bear Caesar hard, Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey; I wonder, none of you have thought of him.

BRU. Now, good Metellus, go along by him;
He loves me well, and I have given him reasons;
Send him but hither, and I'll fashion him.

Cas. The morning comes upon us: We'll leave you, Brutus.—[Exit.

And, friends, use yourselves: but all remember
What you have said, and show yourselves true Romans.

Bru. Good gentlemen, look fresh and merrily;
Let not our looks put on our purposes;
But bear it as our Roman accent,
With untird spirits, and formal constancy:
And so, good-morrow to you every one.

[Exeunt all but Brutus.

Boy! Brutus!—Fast asleep! It is no matter; Enjoy the honey-heavy dew of slumber:
Thou hast no figures, nor no fantasies,
Which busy care draws in the brains of men:
Therefore thou sleepest so sound.

Enter Portia.

Por. Brutus, my lord!—

Bru. Portia, what mean you? Wherefore rise you now?

It is not for your health, thus to commit
Your weak condition to the raw-cold morning.

Por. Nor for yours neither. You have ungently, Brutus,
Stole from my bed: And yesternight, at supper,
You suddenly arose, and walk'd about,
Musing, and sighing, with your arms across:
And while we walk'd, you what I call'd matter was,
You star'd upon me with ungentle looks:
I urg'd you further; then you scratch'd your head,
And too impatiently stamp'd with your foot:
Yet I insisted, yet you answer'd not;
But, with an angry wafture of your hand,
Gave sign for me to leave you: So I did;
Fearing to strengthen that impatience,
Which seem'd too much enkindled; and, withal,
Hoping it was but an effect of humour,
Would not destroy his heart with every man.
It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep:
And, could it work so much upon your shape,
As it hath much prevail'd on your condition,
I should not know you, Brutus. Dear my lord,
Make me acquainted with your cause of grief.

Bru. I am not well in health, and that is all.

Por. Brutus is wise, and, were he not in health,
He would embrace the means to come by it.

Bru. Why, so I do.—Good Portia, go to bed.

Por. Is Brutus sick? and is it physical
To walk unbraced, and suck up the humours
Of the dank morning? What, is Brutus sick?
And will he steal out of his wholesome bed,
To dare the vile contagion of the night?
And tempt the unmy'ed and unpurged air
To add unto his sickness? No, my Brutus;
You have some sick offence within your mind,
Which, by the right and virtue of my place,
I ought to know of: And, upon my knees,
I charm you, by my once commended beauty,
By all your vows of love, and that great vow
Which did incorporate and make us one,
That you unfold to me, yourself, your half,
Why you are heavy; and what men to-night
Have had resort to you: for here have been
Some six or seven, who did hide their faces
Even from darkness.

Bru. Kneel not, gentle Portia.

Por. I should not need, if you were gentle Brutus.

Within the bond of marriage, tell me, Brutus,
Is it excepted, I should know no secrets
That appertain to you? Am I yourself,
But, as it were, in sort, or limitation?
To keep with you at meals, comfort your bed,
And sometimes whisper in your ear?

Bru. You are my true and honourable wife;
As dear to me, as are the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart.

Por. If this were true, then should I know this Grant, I am a woman; but, withal, [secret.
A woman that lord Brutus took to wife:
I grant, I am a woman; but, withal,
A woman that became, I say, his daughter.
Think you, I am no stronger than my sex,
Being so father'd, and so husband'd?
Tell me your counsels, I will not disclose them:
I have made strong proof of my constancy,
Giving myself a voluntary wound
Here, in the thigh: Can I bear that with patience,
And not my husband's secrets?

Bru. O ye gods,
Render me worthy of this noble wife!

[Knocking within.

Hark, hark! one knocks: Portia, go in a while;
And by and by thy bosom shall partake
The secrets of my heart.
All my engagements I will construe to thee,
All the charactery of my sad brows:

[Exit Portia.

Enter Lucius and Ligarius.

Lucius, who's that, knocks?

Lucius. Here is a sick man, that would speak with you.

Bru. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus spoke of.—
Boy, stand aside.—Caius Ligarius! how?

Lig. Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble near me,
Caius, you, which doth speak for Caius Ligarius, that
Bru. O, what a time have you chose out, brave
To wear a kerchief? 'Would you were not sick!
Lig. I am not sick, if Brutus have in hand
Any exploit worthy the name of honour.

Bru. Such as I exploit have I in hand, Ligarius,
Had you a healthful ear to hear of it.

Lig. By all the gods that Romans bow before,
I here discard my sickness. Soul of Rome!
Brave son, deriv'd from honourable joins!
 Thou, like an exorcist, hast conjur'd up
My mortified spirit. Now bid me run,
And I will strive with things impossible:
Yea, get the better of them. What's to do?

Bru. A piece of work, that will make sick men whole.

Lig. But are not some whole, that we must make
Bru. That must we also. What is it, my Caius,
I shall unfold to thee, as we are going,
To whom it must be done.

Lig. Set on your foot;
And, with a heart new fr'd, I follow you,
To do I know not what: but it sufficeth,
That Brutus leads me on.

Bru. Follow me then.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same. A Room in Caesar's Palace.
Thunder and lightning. Enter Caesar, in his night-gown.

Cæs. Nor heaven, nor earth, have been at peace
to-night:
Thrice hath Calphurnia in her sleep cried out,
Help, ho! They murder Caesar! Who's within?

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord.

Cæs. Go bid the priests do present sacrifice,
And bring me their opinions of success.

Serv. I will, my lord.

[Exit Servant.

Enter Calphurnia.

Cal. What mean you, Caesar? Think you to walk forth?
You shall not stir out of your house to-day.

Cæs. Caesar shall forth: The things that threaten end me.

Ne'er look'd but on my back; when they shall see
The face of Caesar, they are vanished.

Cal. Caesar, I never stood on ceremonies.
Yet now they fright me. There is one within.
Besides the things that we have heard and seen,
JULIUS CAESAR.

Act 2.

Recounts most horrid sights seen by the watch. A lioness hath whelped in the streets; and graves have yawn'd, and yielded up their dead: Fierce fiery warriors fight upon the clouds, In ranks, and squadrons, and straight into war, Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol; The noise of battle turmoil'd in the air, Horses did neigh, and dying men did groan; And ghosts did shriek, and squeal about the streets. O Caesar! these things are beyond all use, And I do fear them.

What can be avoided, Whose end is purpos'd by the mighty gods? Yet Caesar shall go forth: for these predictions And the world in general, mark Caesar.

Cal. When beggars die, there are no comets seen; The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes.

Cowards die many times before their deaths; The valiant never taste of death but once. Of all the wonders that I yet have heard, It seems to me most strange that men should fear; Seeing that death, a necessary end, Will come, when it will come.

Re-enter a Servant.

What say the augurers? Serv. They would not have you to stir forth to Plucking the entrails of an offering forth, [day. This, in the face of such a day, and to find the heart.

Caes. The gods do this in shame of cowardice: Caesar should be a beast without a heart, If he should stay at home to-day for fear. No, Caesar shall not: Danger knows full well, The Caesar is more dangerous than he. We were two lions lither'd in one day, And I the elder and more terrible; And Caesar shall go forth.

Cal. Alas, my lord, Your wisdom is consum'd in confidence. Do not go forth to-day: Call it my fear, That keeps you in the house, and not your own. We'll send Mark Antony to the senate-house; And he shall say, you are not well to-day: Let me, upon my knee, prevail in this.

Caes. Mark Antony shall say, I am not well; And, for thy humour, I will stay at home.

Enter Decius.

Here's Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so.

Dec. Caesar, all hail! Good morrow, worthy I come to fetch you to the senate-house. [Caesar: Caes. And you are come in very happy time, To bear my greeting to the senators, And tell them, that I will not come to-day; Cannot, is false; and that I dare not, is false; I will not come to-day: Tell them so, Decius. Cal. Say, he is sick.

Shall Caesar send a lie? Have I in conquest stretch'd my arm so far, To be afraid to tell grey-beards the truth? Decius, go tell them, Caesar will not come.

Dec. Most mighty Caesar, let me know some Leat he laugh'd at, when I tell them so. [cause, Caes. The cause is in my will, I will not come; That is enough to satisfy the senate. But, for your private satisfaction, Because I love you, I will let you know; Calphurnia here, my wife, stays me at home: She dreamt to-night she saw my statues, Which like a fountain, with a hundred spouts, Did run pure blood; and many lusty Romans Came smiling, and did bathe their hands in it. And these does she apply for warnings, portents, Anvil's imminent; and on her knee Hath begged, that I will stay at home to-day.

Dec. This dream is all amiss interpreted; It was a vision, fair and fortunate: Your statue spouting blood in many pipes, In which so many smiling Romans bath'd, Signifies that from you great Rome shall suck Reviving blood; and that great men shall press For tinctures, stains, relics, and cognizance. This by Calphurnia's dream is signified.

Caes. And this way have you well expounded it. Dec. I have, when you have heard what I can say, And know it now; the senate have concluded To give, this day, a crown to mighty Caesar. If you shall send them word, you will not come, Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mock Apt to be render'd, for some one to say, Break up the senate till another time,

When Caesar's wife shall meet with better dreams. If Caesar hide himself, shall they not whisper, Let, Caesar is afraid! Pardon me, Caesar; for my dear, dear love To your proceeding bids me tell you this; And reason to my love is liable.

Caes. How foolish do your fears seem now, Cal! I am ashamed I did yield to them.— [Calphurnia? Give me my robe, for I will go:—

Enter Publius, Brutus, Ligarius, Metellus, Cassa, Trebonius, and Cinna.

And look where Publius is come to fetch me.

Pub. Good morrow, Caesar.

Caes. Welcome, Publius.—What, Brutus, are you stirr'd so early too? Good morrow, Cassa.—Caius Ligarius, Caesar was ne'er so much your enemy, As that sameague which hath made you lean. What is't o'clock?

Brut. Caesar, 'tis strucken eight.

Caes. I thank you for your pains and courtesy.

Enter Antony.

See! Antony, that revels long o' nights, Is notwithstanding up:

Good morrow, Antony.

Ant. So to most noble Caesar.

Caes. Did them prepare within:— I am not blame to be waited. Now, Cinna:—Now, Metellus:—What, Trebonius? I have an hour's talk in store for you; [nius! Remember that you call on me to-day: Be near me, that I may remember you.

Tr. Caesar, I will;—and so near will I be,

That your best friends shall wish I had been further,

[Aside: with me:

Caes. Good friends, go in, and taste some wine And we, like friends, will stir and go together. Brut. That every like is not the same. O Caesar, The heart of Brutus yearns to think upon it.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The same. A Street near the Capitol.

Enter Artemidorus, reading a paper.

Art. Caesar, beware of Brutus; take heed of Cassius; come not near Casca; have an eye to Cinna; trust not Trebonius; mark well Metellus Cimber; Decius Brutus loves thee not; thou hast wronged Caius Ligarius. There is but one mind in all these men, and it is bent against Caesar. If thou best not immortal, look about you: Security gives way to conspiracy. The mighty gods defend thee! Thy lover, Artémidorus. Here will I stand, till Caesar pass along, And as a sutor will I give him this, My heart laments, that virtue cannot live Out of the teeth of emulation. If thou read this, O Caesar, thou may'st live; If not, the fates with traitors do contrive. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—The same. Another part of the same Street, before the House of Brutus.

Enter Portia and Lucius.

Por. I pr'ythee, boy, run to the senate-house; Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone; Why dost thou stay?

Luc. To know my errand, madam.

2 Q.
Por. I would have had thee there, and here again, Ere I can tell thee what thou should'st do there,— 0! constancy, be strong upon my side! Set a large mark in the wide world, pour out Heart and tongue! I have a man's mind, but a woman's might. How hard it is for women to keep counsel!— Art thou here yet?
LUC. Madam, what should I do?
Por. Read to the Capitol; read nothing else?
And so return to you, and nothing else?
[well.
Por. Yes, bring me word, boy, if thy lord look For he went sickly forth: And take good note, What Caesar doth, what suitors press to him. Har, boy! what noise is that?
LUC. I hear none, madam.
Por. Pr'ythee, listen well; I heard a bustling rumour, like a fray, And the wind brings it from the Capitol.
LUC. Sooth, madam, I hear nothing.

Enter Soothsayer.

Por. Come hither, fellow; Which way hast thou been?
Sooth. At mine own house; good lady.
Por. What is't o'clock?
Sooth. About the ninth hour, lady.
Por. Is Caesar yet gone to the Capitol?
Sooth. Madam, not yet; I go to take my stand, To see him pass on to the Capitol.
[not.
Por. Thou hast some suit to Caesar, hast thou? Sooth. That I have, lady: if it will please Caesar To be so good to Caesar, 'as to hear me, I shall beseech him to befriend himself.
Por. Why, know'st thou any harm's intended to wards him?
Sooth. None that I know will be, much that I fear may chance. Good morrow to you. Here the street is narrow: The throng that follows Caesar at the heels, Of senators, of preachers, common suitors, Will crowd a foole man almost to death: I'll get me to a place more void, and there Speak to great Caesar as he comes along. [Exit.
Por. I must go in.—Ah me! how weak a thing The heart of woman is! O Brutus! The heavens speed thee in thine enterprise! Sire, the boy heard me:—Brutus hath a suit, That Caesar will not grant.—O, I grow faint:— Run, Lucins, and commend me to my lord; Say, I am merry: come to me again, And bring me word what he doth say to thee.

[Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE 1.—The same. The Capitol; the Senate sitting.

A crowd of people in the street leading to the Capitol; among them Artemidorus, and the Soothsayer. Flourish. Enter Caesar, Brutus, Cassius, Casca, Decius, Metellus, Trebonius, Cinna, Antony, Lepidus, Popilius, Publius, and others.

CASS. The ides of March are come.

Sooth. Ay, Caesar; but not gone.

Art. Hail, Caesar! Read this: Thehe of the Capitol.
Dec. Trebonius doth desire you to o'er-read, At your best leisure, this his humble suit.
Art. O, Caesar, read mine first; for mine's a suit That touches Caesar nearer: Read it, great Caesar.
Cas. What touches us ourself, shall be last serv'd.
Art. Delay not, Caesar; read it instantly.
Cas. What is, the fellow mad?
Pub. Sirrah, give place.
Cas. What, urge you your petitions in the street? Come to the Capitol.

CAESAR enters the Capitol, the rest following. All the Senators rise.

Pop. I wish, your enterprise to-day may thrive.
Cas. What enterprise, Popilius?
Act 3.

JULIUS CAESAR.

Br u. People, and senators! be not affrighted; Fly not; stand still: ambition's debt is paid. Cas ca. Go to the pulpit, Brutus. Deci. And Cassius too.

Br u. Where's Publius? Cin. Here, quite confounded with this mutiny. Met. Stand fast together, lest some friend of Should chance.—[Cæsar's voice.]

Br u. Talk not of standing;—Publius, good There is no harm intended to your person, [cheer; Nor to no Roman else: so tell them, Publius. Cas. And leave us, Publius; lest that the people, Rushing on us, should do your age some mischief. Brut. Do so: and let no man abide this deed, But we the doers.

Re-enter Trobonius.

Cas. Where's Antony? Tre. Fled to his house amaz'd: Men, wives, and children, stare, cry out, and run, As it were doomsday.

Br u. Fates! we will know your pleasures:— That we shall die, we know; 'tis but the time, And drawing days out, that men stand upon. Cas. Why, he that cuts off twenty years of life, Cuts off so many years of fearing death. Brut. Grant that, and then is death a benefit: So were Caesar's friends, that have abridg'd His time of fearing death.—Stoop, Romans, stoop, And let us bathe our hands in Caesar's blood Up to the elbows, and besmear our swords; Then walk we forth, even to the market-place; And, waving our red weapons o'er our heads. Let's all cry Peace! Freedom! and Liberty!

Cas. Stoop then, and wash.—How many ages Shall this our lofty scene be acted over, [hence, In states unborn, and accents yet unknown? Brut. How many times shall Caesar bleed in sport, That now on Pompey's brows lies along, No worthier the dust than the.

Cas. So oft as that shall be, So often shall the knot of us be call'd The men that gave our country liberty. Decr. What, shall we forth?

Cas. Ay, every man away: Brutus shall lead; and we will grace his heels With the most boldest and best hearts of Rome.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me kneel; Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down: And he, whom he so coloured, made me say. Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest: Caesar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving: Say, I love Brutus, and I honour him: Say, I fear'd Caesar, honour'd him, and lov'd him. If Brutus will vouchsafe, that Antony May safely come to him, and be resolv'd How Caesar hath deserv'd to lie in death, Mark Antony shall not love Caesar dead So well as Brutus living; but will follow The fortunes and affairs of Brutus, Though the hazards of this undotred state, With all true faith. So says my master Antony. Brut. Thy master is a wise and valiant Roman; I never thought him worse. Tell him, so please him come unto this place, He shall be satisfied; and, by my honour, Depart untouch'd.

Serv. I'll fetch him presently. [Exit Servant.

Br u. I know that we shall have him well to friend.

Cas. I wish, we may: but yet have I a mind, That fears him much; and my misgiving still Falls shrivelly to the purpose.

Re-enter Antony.

Br u. But here comes Antony.—Welcome, Mark Antony.

Ant. O mighty Caesar! Dost thou lie so low? Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils, Drunk to this measure?—Fare thee well.— I know not, gentlemen, what you intend, Who else must be let blood, who else is rank: If I myself, there is no hour so fit As Caesar's death's hour; nor no instrument Half that the fears our swords, made With the most noble blood of all this world. [rich I do beseech ye, if you bear me hard, Now, whilst your purpled hands do reek and smoke, Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years, I shall not find myself so apt to die: No place will please me so, no mean of death, As here by Caesar, and by you cut off, The choice and master spirits of this age. Brut. O Antony! beg not your death of us. Though now we must appear bloody and cruel, As by our hands, and this our present act, You see we do; yet see you but our hands, And this the bleeding business they have done: Our hearts you see not, they are pitiful; And pity to the general wrong of Rome (As fire drives out fire, so pity, pity,) Hath done this deed on Caesar. For your part, To our swords have leaden points, Mark Antony: Our arms, in strength of malice, and our hearts, Of brothers' temper, do receive you in With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence. Cas. Your voice shall be as strong as any man's, In the disposing of new dignities. Brut. Only be patient, till we appear'd The multitude, beside themselves with fear, And then we will deliver you the cause, Why I, that did love Caesar when I struck him, Have thus proceeded.

Ant. I doubt not of your wisdom. Let each man render me his bloody hand: First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you: Next, Calus Cassius, do I take your hand; [telus; Now, Decius Brutus, yours;—now yours, Me- Yours, Cinna;—and, my valiant Cassius, yours;— Though last, not least in love yours, good Trebo- Gentlemen all,—alas! what shall I say? [nius. My credit now stands on such slippery ground, That one of two bad ways you must conceit me, Either a coward or a flatterer:— That I did love thee, Caesar, O, 'tis true: If then thy spirit look upon us now, Shall it not grieve thee, dearer than thy death, To see thy Antony making his peace, Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes, Most noble! in the presence of our corps? Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds, Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood, It would become me better, than to close In terms of friendship with thine enemies. [hart; Pardon me, Julius! Here wast thou bay'd, brave Here didst thou fall; and here thy hunters stand, Sign'd in thy spoil, and crimson'd in thy lute. O world! thou wast the forest to this hart; And this, indeed, O world, the heart of thee.— How like a deer, stroke by many princes, Dost thou here lie!

Cas. Mark Antony,—

Ant. Pardon me, Calus Cassius: The enemies of Caesar shall say this: Then, in a friend, it is cold modesty. Cas. I blame you not for praising Caesar so; But what compact mean you to have with us? Will you be prick'd in number of our friends? Or shall we on, and not depend upon you? [deed, And. Therefore I took your hands, but was, In- Sway'd from the point, by looking down on Caesar. Friends am I with you all, and love you all; Upon this hope, that you shall give me reasons, Why, and wherein Caesar was dangerous. Brut. Or else were this a savage sacrifice; Our reasons are so full of good regard, That were you, Antony, the son of Caesar, You should be satisfied.
Scene II.—The same. The Forum.
Enter Brutus and Cassius, and a throng of Citizens.

Cit. We will be satisfied; let us be satisfied.

Bru. Then follow me, and give me audience, Cassius; go you into the other street, [friends.—And part the numbers.—Those that will hear me speak, let them stand here; Those that will follow Cassius, go with him; And publick reasons shall be rendered Of Caesar's death.

1 Cit. I will hear Brutus speak.

2 Cit. I will hear Cassius; and, compare their When severally we hear them rendered. [reasons, [Exit Cassius, with some of the Citizens.]

3 Cit. The noble Brutus is ascended: Silence! Brutus be patient till the last.

Romans, countrymen, and lovers! hear me for my cause; and be silent, that you may hear: believe me for mine honour; and have respect to mine honour, that you may believe: censure me in your wisdom; and awake your senses, that you may the better judge. If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of Caesar's, to him I say, that Brutus' love to Caesar was no less than his. If then that friend demand, why Brutus rose against Caesar, this is my answer.—Not that I loved Caesar less, but that I loved Rome more. Had you rather Caesar were living, and die all slaves; than that Caesar were dead to live all free men. As Caesar loved me, I weep for him; as he was fortunate, I rejoice at it; as he was valiant, I honour him: but, as he was ambiguous, I slew him: There is tears, for his love; joy, for his fortune; honour, for his death; and, death, for his ambition. Who is here so base, that would be a Traitor to this cause? If any speak, for him I have offended. Who is here so rude, that would not be a Roman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so vile, that will not love his country? If any, speak; for his cause speak I now, and will be silent.

Cit. None, Brutus, none.

[Several speaking at once.

Bru. Then none have I offended. I have done no more to Caesar, than you should do to Brutus. The question of his death is enrolled in the Capitol; his glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy; nor his offences enforced, for which he suffered death.

Enter Antony and others, with Caesar's body.

Here comes his body, mourn'd by Mark Antony: who, though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the commonwealth; As which of you shall not? With this I depart; That, as I slew my best lover for the good of Rome, I have the same dagger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death.

Cit. Live, Brutus! live! live!

1 Cit. Brin him with triumph home unto his house.

2 Cit. Give him a statue with his ancestors.

3 Cit. Let him be Caesar.

4 Cit. Caesar's better parts Shall now be crown'd in Brutus.

1 Cit. We'll bring him to his house with shaws and clouts.

Bru. My countrymen,—[and clouts.

2 Cit. Peace; silence! Brutus speaks.

1 Cit. Peace, ho! Brutus. Good countrymen, let us be patient alone, And, for my part, I stay here with Antony: Do grieve not Caesar's corpse, and grace his speech Tending to Caesar's glories; which Mark Antony, By our permission, is allow'd to make. I do entreat you, not a man depart, Save I alone, till Antony have spoke. [Exit.

1 Cit. Stay, ho! and let us hear Mark Antony.

2 Cit. Let him go up into the publick chair; We'll hear him: Noble Antony, go up.

Ant. For Brutus' sake, I am beholden to you.
Act 3

JULIUS CESAR

597

4 Cit. What does he say of Brutus?

3 Cit. He says, for Brutus' sake, he finds himself beholden to us all.

4 Cit. 'Twere best he speak no harm of Brutus

1. This Caesar was a tyrant, [here]

3 Cit. Nay, that's certain:

We are bless'd, that Rome is rid of him.

2 Cit. Peace; let us hear what Antony can say.

Ant. You gentle Romans,

And, friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears;

I come to bury Caesar, not to praise him.

The evil, that men do, lives after them;

Thieves steal not only with their hands;

So let it be with Caesar. The noble Brutus

Hath told you, Caesar was ambitious:

If it were so, it was a grievous fault;

And grievously hath Caesar answer'd it.

Here, under leave of Brutus, and the rest,

(For Brutus is an honourable man;

So are they all, all honourable men;) Come I to speak in Caesar's funeral.

He was my friend, faithful and just to me:

But Brutus says, he was ambitious;

And Brutus is an honourable man.

He hath brought many captives home to Rome,

Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill:

Did this in Caesar seem ambitious?

When that the poor had cried, Caesar hath wept;

Ambition should be made of sterner stuff:

Yet Brutus says, he was ambitious;

And Brutus is an honourable man.

You all did see, that on the Lupercaal,

I presented him a golden crown,

Which he did thrice refuse. Was this ambition?

Yet Brutus says, he was ambitious;

And, sure, he is an honourable man.

I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke,

But here I must profess what I do know.

You all did see him once, not without cause;

What cause withholds you then to mourn for him?

O judgment, thou art fitter for the earth,

And no mistaken; let me, as you are wise,

And hear me speak to Caesar!—Hear with me;

My heart is in the coffin there with Caesar,

And I must pause till it come back to me.

1 Cit. Methinks, there is much reason in his saying.

2 Cit. Consider rightly of the matter, Caesar has had great wrong.

3 Cit. Has he, masters?

I fear, there will a worse come in his place.

4 Cit. Mark'd ye his words? He would not take

Therefore, 'tis certain, he was not ambitious.

1 Cit. If it be found so, some will dare abide it.

2 Cit. Poor soul! his eyes are red as fire with weeping.

[Antony.

3 Cit. There's not a nobler man in Rome, than

4 Cit. Now mark him, he begins again to speak.

Ant. But yesterday, the word of Caesar might

Have stood against the world: now lies he there,

And none so poor to do him reverence.

O masters! if I were your lord:

Your hearts and minds to mutiny and rage, I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong,

Who, you all know, are honourable men:

I will not do them wrong; I rather choose

To wrong the dead, to wrong myself, and you,

Than I will wrong such honourable men.

But here's a parchment, with the seal of Caesar,

I found it in his closet, 'tis his will:

Let but the commons hear this testament,

(Which pardon me, I do not mean to read,) and they would go and kiss dead Caesar's wounds, and dip their napkins in his sacred blood; Yea, beg a hair of him for memory, and, dying, mention it within their wills, Begging that thing, as a rich legacy, Unto their issue.

4 Cit. We'll hear the will: Read it, Mark Antony.

Ant. The will, the will; we will hear Caesar's will.

[read it;

Ant. Have patience, gentle friends, I must not

It is not meet you know how Caesar lov'd you.

If you are not worthy, you are not stones, but men;

And, being men, hearing the will of Caesar,

It will inflame you, it will make you mad:

'Tis good you know not that you are his heirs;

For if you should, O, what would come of it!

1 Cit. Read the will; we will hear, Antony;

You shall read us the will; Caesar's will.

Ant. Will you be patient? Will you stay a while? I have o'er-shot myself, to tell you of it.

I fear I wrong the honourable men,

Whose daggers have stabb'd Caesar: I do fear it.

4 Cit. They were traitors: Honourable men!

Ant. The will! the testament!

2 Cit. They were villains, murderers: The will! read the will!

Ant. You will compel me then to read the will? Then make a ring about the corpse of Caesar,

And let me show you him that made the will.

Shall I descend? And will you give me leave?

1 Cit. Come down.

2 Cit. Descend.

[He comes down from the pulpit.

3 Cit. You shall have leave.

4 Cit. A ring; stand round.

2 Cit. Stand from the hearse, stand from the body.

2 Cit. Read it, Antony;—most noble Antony.

Ant. Nay, press not so upon me; stand far off.

Cit. Stand back! room! hear back!

Ant. If you have tears, prepare to shed them now.

You will now must this mantle: I remember

The first time ever over Caesar's crown,

'Twas on a summer's evening, in his tent;

That day he overcame the Nervil:—

Look! In this place, ran Cassius' dagger through:

See, what a rent the envious Cassius made!

Through this, the noblest and most beloved Brutus stab'd; And, as he pluck'd it, his cursed steel away,

Mark how the blood of Caesar follow'd it; As rushing out of doors, to be resolv'd

If Brutus was unkindly knock'd, or no; For Brutus, as you know, was Caesar's angel:

Judge, O you gods, how dearly Caesar lov'd him! This was the most unkindest cut of all:

For when the noble Caesar saw him stab,

Ingratitude, world, and all things false,

Quite vanquish'd him; then burst his mighty heart, And, in his mantle mufling up his face, Even at the base of Pompey's statue,

Which all the while ran blood, great Caesar fell.

0, what a fall was there, my countrymen! Then I, and you, and all of us fell down,

Whilst bloody treason flourish'd over us.

O, now you weep; and, I perceive, you feel The dint of pity: these are gracious drops.

Kind souls, what weep you, when you but behold Our Caesar's vesture wounded? Look you here, Here is himself, marr'd, as you see, with traitors.

1 Cit. O piteous spectacle!

2 Cit. O noble Caesar!

3 Cit. O woeful day!

4 Cit. O traitors, villains!

1 Cit. O most bloody sight!

2 Cit. We will be revenged: revenge; about,— see, burn,—fire,—kill,—slay:—let not a traitor live.

Ant. Stay, countrymen.

1 Cit. Peace there:—Hear the noble Antony.

2 Cit. We'll hear him, we'll follow him, we'll die with him.

Ant. Good friends, sweet friends, let me not stir To such a sudden flood of mutiny. [you up They, that have done this deed, are honourable; What private griefs they have, alas, I know not, That made them do it; they are wise and ho-—

Bess Number.

And will, no doubt, with reasons answer you.

I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts; I am no orator, as Brutus is:
Where do I dwell? Am I a married man, or a bachelor? Then to answer every man directly, and briefly, wisely, and truly. Wisely I say, I am a bachelor.
2 C. That's as much as to say, they are fools that marry: You'll bear me a bang for that, I fear.
Proceed; directly.
Ciu. Directly, I am going to Caesar's funeral.
1 C. As a friend, or an enemy?
Ciu. As a friend.
2 C. That matter is answered directly.
4 C. For your dwelling.—briefly.
Ciu. Briefly, I dwell by the Capitol.
3 C. Your name, sir, truly.
Ciu. Truly, my name is Cinna.
1 C. Tell him to pieces, he's a conspirator.
Ciu. I am Cinna the poet, I am Cinna the poet.
4 C. Tell him for his bad verses, tear him for his bad verses.
2 C. It is no matter, his name's Cinna; pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going.
3 C. Tell him, tear him. Come, brands, ho! fire-brands. To Brutus', to Cassius; burn all.
Some to Decius' house, and some to Casca's; some to Ligarius': away; go.
[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The same. A Room in Antony's House.

Antony, Octavius, and Lepidus, seated at a table.

Ant. These many then shall die; their names are pricked.
[Lepidus?]
Oct. Your brother too must die; Consent you,
Let, I do consent.
Lep. Upon condition Fulvius shall not live,
Who is your sister's son, Mark Antony.
Ant. He shall not live; look, with a spot I damn But, Lepidus, let him to Caesar's body in the holy place.
Fetch the will hither, and we will determine
How to cut off some charge in legacies.
Lep. What, shall I find you here?
Oct. Or here, or at the Capitol.
Ant. This is a slight unmeritable man,
Meet to be sent out errands: Is it fit,
The three-fold world divided, he should stand One of the three to share it?
Oct. So you thought him;
And took his voice who should be pricked to die,
In our black sentence and proscription.
Ant. Octavius, I have seen more days than you
And though we lay these honours on this man,
To ease ourselves of divers slanderous loads,
He shall but bear them as the ass bears gold,
To groan and sweat under the business,
Either led or driven, as we point the way;
And having brought our treasure where we will,
Then take we down his load, and turn him off,
Like to the empty ass, to shake his ears,
And graze in commons.
Oct. You may do your will;
But he's a tried and valiant soldier.
Ant. So is my horse, Octavius; and, for that,
I do appoint him store of provender.
It is a creature that I teach to fight,
To wind, to stop, to run directly on;
His corporal motion govern'd by my spirit.
And, at his last taste, is Lepidus but so?
He must be taught, and trained, and bid go forth:
A barren-spirited fellow; one that feeds
On objects, arched and imitations;
Which, out of use, and stale'd by other men,
Begs in his fashion: Do not talk of him,
But as a property. And now, Octavius,
Listen great things.—Brutus and Cassius
Are leery powers: we must straight make head:
Therefore, let our alliance be combin'd,
Our best friends made, and our best means stretch'd
And let us presently go sit in council.
How covert matters may be best disclosed,
And how the perils surest answered.
Oct. Let us do so; for we are at the stake,
And bay'd about with many enemies;
And some, that smile, have in their hearts, I fear,
Millions of mischief. [Exeunt.]

SCENE I.—Before Brutus' Tent, in the Camp near Sardis.

Drum. Enter Brutus, Lucilius, Lucius, and Soldiers: Titinius and Pindarus meeting them.

Brut. Stand here.
Luc. Give the word, ho! and stand.

Brut. What now, Lucilius? is Cassius near?
Luc. He is at hand: and Pindarus is come
To do you salutation from his master.

[Enter Titinius and Pindarus.

Brut. He greets me well.—Your master, Pin-
In his own change, or by ill officers, [dariis,
Hath given me some worthy cause to wish
Things done, undone: but, if he be at hand,
I shall be satisfied.

Pin. I do not doubt,
But that my noble master will appear
Such as he is, full-of-regard, and honour.

Brut. He is not doubted.—A word, Lucilius;
How he receiv'd you, let me be resolv'd.

Luc. With courtesy, and with respect enough:
But not with such familiar instances,
Nor with such free and friendly conference,
As he hath used of old.

Brut. Thou hast describ'd
A hot friend cooling: every note, Lucilius,
When love begins to sink and decay,
It useth an enforced ceremony.
There are no tricks in plain and simple faith:
But hollow men, like horses hot at hand,
Make gallant show and promise of their mettle:
But when they should endure the bloody spur,
They fall their crests, and, like deceitful Jades,
Sink in the trial. Comes his army on?

Luc. They mean this night in Sardis to be quar-
the greater part, the horse in general, [ter'd;]
Are come with Cassius. [March within.

Bru. Hark, he is arriv'd:—
March gently on to meet him.

Enter Cassius and Soldiers.

Cas. Stand, ho!
Brut. Stand, ho! Speak the word along.

Within. Stand.
Within. Stand.

Cas. Most noble brother, you have done me
wrong.
I have not, so, how should I wrong a brother?

Brut. Judge me, you gods? Wrong I mine
And, if not so, how should I wrong a brother?

Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours hides
And when you do them— [wrong; Brutus, he content,
Speak your griefs softly;—I do know you well:—
Before the eyes of both our armies here,
Which should perceive nothing but love from us,
Let us not wrangle: Bid them move away;
Then to my tent, Cassius, enlarge your griefs,
And I will give you audience.

Cas. Pindarus,
Bid our commanders lead their charges off
A little from this ground:

Brut. Lucilius, do the like; and let no man
Come to our tent, till we have done our conference.
Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Within the Tent of Brutus.

Lucius and Titinius at some distance from it.

Enter Brutus and Cassius.

Cas. That you have wrong'd me doth appear in this:
You have condemn'd and noted Lucius Pella,
I or taking bribes here of the Sardians;

Wherein, my letters, praying on his side,
Because I knew the man, were slighted off.

Bru. You wrong'd yourself, to write in such a case. In such a time as this, it is not meet [case]
That every nice offence should bear his comment.

Bru. Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself
Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm;
To sell and mart your offices for gold,
To underserves.

Cas. I am an itching palm?
You know, that you are Brutus that speak this,
Or, by the gods, this speech were else your last.

Brut. The name of Cassius honours this corruption;
And chastisement doth therefore hide his head.

Cas. Chastisement!—remember! Did not great Julius bleed for justice' sake?
Which villain touch'd his body, that did stab,
And not for Justice? What, shall one of us,
That struck the foremost man of all this world,
But for supporting robbers; shall we now
Contaminate our fingers with base bribes?
And sell the mighty space of our large honours,
For so much trash, as may be grasped thus?—
I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon,
Than such a Roman.

Cas. Brutus, bay not me,
I'll not endure it: you forget yourself,
To hedge me in; I am a soldier, I,
Older in practice, abier than yourself
To make conditions.

Bru. Go to; you're not, Cassius.

Cas. I am.

Cas. I say, you are not.

Cas. Urge me no more, I shall forget myself;
Have mind upon your health, tempt me no further.

Bru. Away, slight man!

Cas. Is't possible?

Bru. Hear me, for I will speak.

Must I give way and room to your rash choler?
Shall I be frighted with a madman stares?

Cas. O ye gods! ye gods! Must I endure all this?

Bru. All this? ay, and more: Fret, till your proud heart break;
Go, show your slaves how choleric you are,
And make your bondmen tremble. Must I budge?
Must I observe you? Must I stand and crouch
Under your tempest humour? By the gods,
You shall digest the venom of your spleen,
Though it do split you: for, from this day forth,
I'll use you for my mirth, yea, for my laughter;
When you are waspish.

Cas. Is it come to this?

Bru. You say, you are a better soldier:
Let it appear so; make your vaunting true,
And it shall please me well; For mine own part,
I shall be glad to learn of noble men.

Cas. You wrong me every way; you wrong me,
I said, an elder soldier, not a better: [Bruatus;
Did I say better?

Bru. If you did, I care not.

Cas. When Caesar liv'd, he durst not thus have mov'd me.

Cas. Peace, peace; you durst not so have tempt-
Cas. I durst not? [ed him.

Bru. No.

Cas. What? durst not tempt him?

Bru. For your life you durst not.

Cas. Do not presume too much upon my love,
I may do that I shall be sorry for.

Bru. You have done that you should be sorry for.

There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats;
For I am arm'd so strong in honesty,
That they pass by me, as the idle wind,
Which I respect not. I did send to you
For certain sums of gold, which you deny'd me:—
For I can raise no money by vile means:
By heaven, I had rather coin my heart,
And drop my blood for drachmas, than to wring
From the hard hands of peasants their vile trash,
By any indirection. I did send

JULIUS CAESAR. 599
To you for gold to pay my legions,
Which you denied me: Was that done like Cassius?
Should I have answer'd Cassius so? [sius?
When Mars, therefore, Brutus grows so covetous,
To lock such rascal counters from his friends,
Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts,
Dash him to pieces!

Cas. And come yourselves, and bring Messala
Immediately to us. [Exit Lucullus and Titinius.

Bru. Lucullus, a bowl of wine.

Cas. I did not think, you could have been so angry.

Bru. O Cassius, I am sick of many griefs.

Cas. If your philosophy you make no use,
If you give place to accidental evils.

Bru. No man bears sorrow better:—Portia is Cas. Ha! Portia? [dead.

Bru. She is dead.

Cas. How scap'd I killing, when I cross'd you
O insupportable and touching loss!—
Upon what sickness?

Bru. Impatient of my absence;
And grief, that young Octavius with Mark Antony
Have made themselves so strong:—for with her death
That tidings came:—With this she fell distract,
And her attendants absent, swallow'd fire.

Cas. And died so?

Bru. Even so.

Cas. O ye immortal gods!

Enter Lucius, with wine and tapers.

Bru. Speak no more of her.—Give me a bowl of wine:
In this I burn all unkindness, Cassius. [Drinks.

Cas. My heart is thirsty for that noble pledge:—
Fill, Lucius, till the wine overflow the cup;
I cannot drink too much of Brutus' love. [Drinks.

Re-enter Titinius with Messala.

Bru. Come in, Titinius! Welcome, good Messala.
Now sit we close about this taper here, [sala—
And call in question our necessities.

Cas. Portia, art thou gone?

Bru. Do more, I pray you.

Messala, I have here received letters,
That young Octavius, and Mark Antony,
Come down upon us with a mighty power,
Bending their expedition toward Philippi.

Mes. Myself have letters of the self-same tenour.

Bru. With what addition?

Mes. That by proscription, and bills of outlawry,
Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus,
Have put to death an hundred senators.

Bru. Therein our letters do not well agree;—
Mine have note of seventy senators, that died,
By their proscriptions, Cicero being one.

Cas. Cicero one?

Mes. Ay, Cicero is dead,
And by that order of proscription.—
Had you letters from your wife, my lord?

Bru. No, Messala.

Mes. Nor nothing in your letters writ of her?

Mes. That, methinks, is strange.

Bru. Why ask you? Hear you aught of her in
Mes. No, my lord. [your—

Bru. Now, as you are a Roman, tell me true.

Mes. Then like a Roman bear the truth I tell:
For certain she is dead, and by strange manner.

Bru. Why, farewell, Portia.—We must die,
Messala:

Cas. With meditating that she must die once,
I have the patience to endure it now.

Mes. Even so great men great losses should end.
Cas. I have as much of this in art as you. [dure.
But yet my nature could not bear it so.

Bru. Well, to our work alive. What do you think
Of marching to Philippi presently?

Cas. I do not think it good.

Bru. Your reason?

Cas. 'Tis better, that the enemy seek us:
So shall he waste his means, weary his soldiers,
Doing himself offence; whilst we, lying still,
Are full of rest, defence, and nimbleness. [better.

Bru. Good reasons must, of force, give place to
The people, 'twixt Philippi and this ground,
Do stand but in a fore'd affection;
For they have grudg'd us contribution:
The enemy, marching along by them,
By them shall make a fuller number up,
Come on refresh'd, new added, and encourag'd;
From which advantage shall we cut him off,
If at Philippi we do face him there,
These people at our back.

Cas. Hear me, good brother.

Bru. Under your pardon,—You must note be
That we have try'd the utmost of our friends, [side
Our legions are brim-full, our cause is ripe:
The enemy increaseth every day,
We, at the height, are ready to decline.
There is a tide in the affairs of men,
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows, and in miseries.
On such a full sea are we now adown;
And we must take the current when it serves,
Or lose our ventures.

Cas. Then, with your will, go on:
We'll along ourselves, and meet them at Philippi.
The deep of night is crept upon our talk,
And nature must obey necessity;
Which we will niggard with a little rest.
There is no more to say?

Cas. No more. Good night;
Early to-morrow will we rise and hence.

Bru. Lucius, my gown. [Exit Lucius.] Farewell, good Messala:—
Good night, Titinius:—Noble, noble Cassius,
Good night, and good repose.

Cas. O my dear brother! This was an ill beginning of the night;
Never come such division 'twixt our souls
Let it not, Brutus.

Bru. Every thing is well.

Cas. Good night, my lord.

Bru. Good night, good brother.

Tit. Mes. Good night, lord Brutus.

Bru. Farewell, every one.

[Exeunt Cas. Tit. and Mes.

Re-enter Lucius, with the gown.

Give me the gown. Where is thy instrument?

Luc. Here in the tent.

What, thou speak'st drowsily?
Poor knave, I blame thee not; thou art overwatch'd.

Call Claudius, and some other of my men;
I'll have them sleep on cushions in my tent.

Luc. Varro, and Claudius!

[Enter Varro and Claudius.

Var. Calls my lord?

Bru. I pray you, sirs, lie in my tent, and sleep;
It may be, I shall raise you by and by
On business to my brother Cassius.

Var. So please you, we will stand, and watch your pleasure.

Bru. I will not have it so: lie down, good sirs;
It may be, I shall otherwise betheak me.

Look, Lucius, here's the book I sought for so:
I put it in the pocket of my gown.

[Servants lie down.

Luc. I was sure, your lordship did not give it me.

Bru. Bear with me, good boy, I am much for-
Canst thou hold up thy heavy eyes awhile, getful.
And touch thy instrument a strain or two?

Luc. Ay, my lord, an it please you.

Bru. It does, my boy:
I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing.

Luc. It is my duty, sir.

Bru. I should not urge thy duty past thy might;
I know, young bloods look for a time of rest.

Luc. I have slept, my lord, already.

Bru. It is well done; and thou shalt sleep again;
I will not hold thee long: if I do live,
I will be good to thee. [Musick, and a Song.

This is a sleepy tune:—O murd'rous lumber!
Lay'st thou thy leader mace upon my boy,

That plays thee musick?—Gente knave, good
night;
I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee.
If thou dost nod, thou break'st thy instrument;
I'll take it from thee: and, good boy, good night.
Let me see, let me see:—Is not the leaf turn'd
Where I left reading? Here it is, I think. [down,
[He sits down.

Enter the Ghost of Caesar.

How ill this taper burns!—Ha! who comes here?
I think, it is the weakness of my eyes,
That shapes this monstrous apparition.
It comes upon me:—Art thou any thing?
Art thou some god, some angel, or some devil,
That mak'st my blood cold, and my hair to stare?
Speak to me, what thou art.

Ghost. Thy evil spirit, Brutus.

Bru. Why com'st thou? Thou art;
Ghost. To tell thee, thou shalt see me at Philippi.

Bru. Well;

Then I shall see thee again?

Ghost. Ay, at Philippi.

[Ghost vanishes.

Bru. Why, I will see thee at Philippi then.—
Now I have taken heart, thou vanishest:
Ill spirit, I would hold more talk with thee.—
Boy! Lucius!—Varro! Claudius! Sirs, awake!—
Claudius!

Luc. The strings, my lord, are false.

Bru. He thinks, he still is at his instrument.

Lucius, awake.

Luc. My lord! [cry'dst out

Bru. Didst thou dream, Lucius, that thou so
Luc. My lord, I do not know that I did cry.

Bru. Yes, that thou didst: Didst thou see any
Luc. Nothing, my lord. [thing

Bru. Sleep again, Lucius.—Sirrah, Claudius:
Fellow thou awake.

Var. My lord!

Cla. My lord!

Bru. Why didst thou so cry out, sirs, in your sleep.

Var. Clau. Did we, my lord?

Bru. Ay; Saw you any thing?

Var. No, my lord, I saw nothing.

Cla. Nor I, my lord.

Bru. Go, and commend me to my brother Cas-
Bid him set on his powers betimes before, [sius;
And we will follow.

Var. Clau.

It shall be done, my lord.

[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Plains of Philippi.

Enter Octavius, Antony, and their Army.

Oct. Now, Antony, our hopes are answered:
You said, the enemy would not come down,
But keep the hills and upper regions;
It proves not so: their battles are at hand;
They mean to warn us at Philippi here,
Answering before we do demand of them.
Ant. Tutt, I am in their bosoms, and I know
Wherefore they do it; they could be content
To visit other places; and come down
With fearful bravery, thinking, by this face,
To fasten in our thoughts that they have courage;
But 'tis not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, generals:
The enemy comes on in gallant show;
Their bloody sign of battle is hung out,
And something to be done immediately.
Ant. Octavius, lead your battle softly on,
Upon the left hand of the even field.

Oct. Upon the right hand I, keep thou the left.

Ant. Why do you cross me in this exigent?

Oct. I do not cross you; but I will do so.

[March.
As we were sickly prey; their shadows seem
A canopy most fatal, under which
Our army lies, ready to give up the ghost.

Mes. Believe not so.

Cas. I but believe it partly;
For I am fresh of spirit, and resolv'd
To meet all perils very constantly.

Bru. Even so, Lucilius.

Cas. The gods to-day stand friendly; what may,
Lovers in peace, lead on our days to age!
But, since the affairs of men rest still uncertain,
Let's reason with the worst that may befall.
If we do lose this battle, then is this
The very last time we shall speak together:
What are you then determined to do?

Bru. Even by the rule of that philosophy,
By which I did blame Cato for the death
Which he did give himselves:—I know not how,
But I do find it cowardly and vile,
For fear of what might fall, so to prevent
The time of life—arming myself with patience,
To stay the providence of some high powers,
That govern us below.

Then, if we lose this battle,
You are contented to be led in triumph
Thorough the streets of Rome?

[Roman,

Bru. No, Cassius, no: think not, thou noble
That ever Brutus will go bound to Rome;
He bears too great a mind. But this same day
Must end that work, the issue of March begun;
And whether we shall meet again, I know not.
Therefore our everlasting farewell take:
For ever, and for ever, farewell, Cassius!
If we do meet again, why, we shall smile;
If not, why then this parting was well made.

Cas. For ever, and for ever, farewell, Brutus
If we do meet again, we'll smile indeed;
If not, 'tis true, this parting was well made.

Bru. Why then, lead on.—O, that a man might
The end of this day's business, ere it come! I know
But it sufficeth, that the day will end,
And then the end is known,—Come, ho! away!

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—The same. The Field of Battle.

Avalorum. Enter Brutus and Messallus.

Bru. Ride, ride, Messalla, ride, and give these Unto the legions on the other side:—[bills

[Exeunt Octavius, Antony, and their Army.

Cas. Why now, blow, wind; swell, billow; and Swim, bark!
The storm is up, and all is on the hazard.

Luc. My lord.

[Brutus and Lucullus converse apart.

Mes. What says my general?

Cas. Messallus,—

This is my birth-day; as this very day
Was Cassius born. Give me thy hand, Messallus:
Be thou my witness, that, against my will,
As Pompey was, am I compell'd to set
Upon the battle to all our liberties.
You know, that I held Epicurus strong,
And his opinion: now I change my mind,
And partly credit things that do presage.
Coming from Sardis, on our former ensign
Two mighty eddies fell; and there they perch'd,
Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands;
Who to Philippo here consorted us;
This morning are they fled away; and gone;
And in their steads, do ravens, crows, and kites,
Fly o'er our heads, and downward look on us,

Scene III.—The same. Another Part of the Field.

Avalorum. Enter Cassius and Titinius.

Cas. O, look, Titinius, look, the villains fly!
Myself have to mine own turn'd enemy:
This ensign here of mine was turning back;
I slew the coward, and did take it from him.

Tit. O, Cassius, Brutus gave the word too early:
Who having some advantage on Octavius,
Took it too eagerly; his soldiers fell to spoil,
Whilst we by Antony are all enclos'd.

Enter Findarbus.

Pis. Fly further off, my lord, fly further off;
Mark Antony is in your tents, my lord!
Fly therefore, noble Cassius, fly, far off. [nins;

Cas. This hill is far enough. Look, look, Titinius:
Are those my tents, where I perceive the fire?

Tit. They are, my lord.

Cas. Titinius, if thou lov'st me, mount thou my horse, and Bide thy spurs in him, Till he have brought thee up to yonder troops,
And here again; that I may rest assur'd,
Whether yond' troops are friend or enemy.

[Exit.}
July 5.

Julius Caesar.

Act III.

Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I will do his bidding. — Brutus, come space, and see how I regarded Caius Cassius. — By your leave, gods: — This is a Roman's part: — Come, Cassius' sword, and find Titinius' heart.

Alarum. Re-enter Messala, with Brutus. [Dies.]

Cato. Where, where, Messala, doth his body lie? — Mess. Lo, yonder; and Titinius mourning it. — Cato. Titinius' face is upward. — Brutus. O Julius Caesar, thou art mighty yet: — Thy spirit walks abroad, and turns our swords in our own proper entralis. — Low alarums. — Cato. Look, where he have not crown'd dead Cassius! — Brutus. Are yet these Romans living such as these? — The last of all the Romans, fare thee well! — It is impossible, that ever Rome should breed thy fellow. — Friends, I owe more — To this dead man, than you shall see me pay. — I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time. — Come, therefore, and to Thasses send his body; — His funerals shall not be in our camp, — Lest it discomfort us. — Lucilius, come; — And come, young Cato; let us to the field. — Lafeo, and Flavius, set our battles on: — 'Tis three o'clock; and, Romans, yet another night — We shall try fortune in a second fight. — [Exeunt.]

Scene IV. Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter fighting, Soldiers of both Armies, then Brutus, Cato, Lucilius, and others.

Brutus. Yet, countrymen, O, yet hold up your heads! — Cato. What bastard doth not? Who will go with I will proclaim my name about the field: — I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho! — A foe to tyrants, and my country's friend; — I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho! —

[Charges the enemy.]

Brutus. And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I; — Brutus, my country's friend; know me for Brutus. — [Exit, charging the enemy. Cato is overpowered, and falls.]

Luc. O young and noble Cato, art thou down? — Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titinius; — And may'st be honour'd being Cato's son. — I sold. Yield, or thou diest. — Luc. Only I yield to die; — There is much, that thou wilt kill me straight; — [Offering money.]

Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death. — 1 sold. We must not. — A noble prisoner! — 2 sold. Room, ho! Tell Antony, Brutus is ta'en. — I sold. I'll tell the news. — Here comes the general: —

Enter Antony.

Brutus is ta'en, Brutus is ta'en, my lord. — Ant. Where is he? — Luc. Safe, Antony; Brutus is safe enough; — I dare assure thee, that no enemy shall ever take alive the noble Brutus: — The gods defend him from so great a shame! — When you do find him, or alive, or dead, — He will be found like Brutus, like himself. — Ant. This is not Brutus, friend; but, I assure a prize no less in worth: keep this man safe, — You, Give him all kind offices: I had rather have Such men my friends, than enemies. — Go on, — And see where Brutus be alive, or dead: — And bring us word, unto Octavius' tent, — How every thing is chanc'd. — [Exit.]

Scene V. Another Part of the Field.

Enter Brutus, Dardanius, Citius, Strato, and Volumnius.

Brutus. Come, poor remains of friends, rest on the rock.
That but have laboured to attain this hour.

[Alarum. Cry within; Fly, fly, fly.

Cly. Fly, my lord, fly.]

Bru. Hence: I will follow thee.

[Exeunt Clitus, Dardanius, and Volumnius.]

I pray thee, stay thou by thy lord:
Thou art a fellow of a good respect;
Thy life hath had some smack of honour in it:
Hold then my sword, and turn away thy face,
While I do run upon it. Wilt thou, Strato?

Strat. Give me your hand first: Fare you well, my lord.

Bru. Farewell, good Strato.—Cæsar, now be
I kill it not with half so good a will. [still:

[He runs on his sword, and dies.

Alarum. Retreat. Enter Octavius, Antony, Messalas, Lucilius, and their army.]

Ocť. What man is that? [master? Mes. My master’s man.—Strato, where is thy stra. Free from the bondage you are in, Messala;

The conquerors can but make a fire of him;
For Brutus only overcame himself,
And no man else hath honour by his death. [Bru tus,
Luc. So Brutus should be found.—I thank thee,
That thou hast provid Lucilius' saying true.
Oct. All that serv'd Brutus, I will entertain them,
Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me?

stra. Ay, if Messala will prefer me to you.

Ocť. Do so, Messala.

Mes. How did my master, Strato? Stra. I held the sword, and he did run on it.

Mes. Octavius, then take him to follow thee,
That did the latest service to my master.

Ant. This was the noblest Roman of them all.
All the conspirators, save only he,
Did that they did in envy of great Caesar;
He, only, in a general honest thought,
And common good to all, made one of them.
His soul was gentle; and the elements
So mix'd in him, that Nature might stand up,
And say to all the world, This was a man! Ocť. According to his virtue let us use him,
With all respect, and rites of burial.
Within my tent his bones to-night shall lie,
Most like a soldier, order'd honourably.

So, call the field to rest: and let's away,
To part the glories of this happy day. [Exeunt.

O'erflows the measure: those his goodly eyes,
Act I.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

Flourish. Enter Antony and Cleopatra, with their Trains; Eunuchs fanning her.

Take but good note, and you shall see in him The triple pillar of the world transform'd Into a trumpeter's fool: behold and see.

Cleo. If it be love indeed, tell me how much.

Ant. There's beggary in the love that can be reck'n'd.

Cleo. I'll set a bourn how far to be belov'd.

Ant. Then must thou needs find out new heaven, new earth.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. News, my good lord, from Rome.

Ant. I grate me:—The sum.

Cleo. Nay, hear them, Antony: Fulvia, perchance, is angry; Or, who knows If the scarce-bearded Caesar have not sent His powerful mandate to you, Do this, or this; Take in that kingdom, and enfranchise that; Perform't, or else we damn thee.

Ant. How, my love! Cleo. Perchance,—nay, and most like, You must not stay here longer, your dismission Is come from Caesar; therefore hear it, Antony.— Where's Fulvia's process? Caesar's, I would say?— Both?— Call in the messengers.—As I am Egypt's queen, Thou blindest, Antony; and that blood of thine Is Caesar's homager: else so thy cheek pays shame, When shrill-tongu'd Fulvia scolds.—The messengers.

Ant. Let Rome in Tyber melt! and the wide arch Of the rang'd empire fall! Here is my space; Kingdoms are clay: our dungy earth alike Feeds beast as man: the nobleness of life Is to do thus; when such a mutual pair, [Embracing, And such a twain can do't, in which, I bind On pain of punishment, the world to weet, We stand up peerless.

Cleo. Excellent falsehood! Why did he marry Fulvia, and not love her?— I'll seem the fool I am not; Antony Will be himself.

Ant. But stirr'd by Cleopatra,— Now, for the love of Love, and her soft hours, Let's not confound the time with conference harsh; There's not a minute of our lives should stretch Without some pleasure now: What sport to-night? Cleo. Hear the ambassadors.

Ant. Fye, wrangling queen! Whom every thing becomes, to chide, to laugh, To weep; whose every passion fully strives To make itself, in thee, fair and admir'd! No messenger; but thine and all alone, To-night, we'll wander through the streets, and The qualities of people. Come, my queen; [note Last night you did desire it:—Speak not to us. [Exeunt Ant. and Cleop. with their Train.

Dem. Is Caesar with Antonius priz'd so slight? Phi. Sir, sometimes, when he is not Antony, He comes too short of that great property Which still should go with Antony.

Dem. Then I'm full sorry.

Cleo. That he approves the common liar, who Thus speaks of him at Rome: But I will hope Of better deeds to-morrow. Rest you happy! [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same. Another Room.

Enter Charmian, Iras, Alexas, and a Soothsayer.

Char. Lord Alexas, sweet Alexas, most any thing Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, where's the soothsayer that you praised so to the queen? O, that I knew this husband, which, you say, must change his horns with garlands!

Alex. Soothsayer.

Sooth. Your will? [things? Char. Is this the man?—Is't you, sir, that know

Sooth. In nature's infinite book of secrecy, A little I can read.

Alex. Show him your hand.

Enter Enobarbus.

Eno. Bring in the banquet quickly; wine enough, Cleopatra's health to drink.

Char. Good sir, give me good fortune.

Sooth. I make not, but foresee.

Char. Pray then, foresee me one.

Sooth. You shall be yet far fater than you are.

Char. He means, in flesh.

Iras. No, you shall paint when you are old.

Char. Wrinkles forbid!

Alex. Vex not his prescience; be attentive.

Char. Hush!

Sooth. You shall be more believing, than beloved.

Char. I had rather heat my liver with drinking.

Alex. Nay, hear him.

Char. Good now, some excellent fortune! Let me be married to three kings in a forenoon, and widow them all: let me have a child at fifty, to whom Herod of Jewry may do homage: find me to marry me with Octavius Caesar, and companion me with my mistress.

Sooth. You shall outlive the lady whom you serve.

Char. O excellent! I love long life better than figs.

Sooth. You have seen and proved a fairer former Than which is to approach. [fortune

Char. Then, belike, my children shall have no names: Pr'ythee, how many boys and wenches must I have? Sooth. If every of your wishes had a womb, And fertile every wish, a million.

Char. Out, fool! I forgive thee for a witch.

Alex. You think, none but your sheets are pry to your wishes.

Char. Nay, come, tell Iras hers.

Alex. We'll know all our fortunes. Eno. Mine, and most of our fortunes, to-night, shall be—drunk to bed.

Iras. There's a palm presages chastity, if nothing else.

Char. Even as the o'erroving Nilus presages famine.

Iras. Go, you wild bedfellow, you cannot soothsay.

Char. Nay, if an oily palm be not a fruitful prognostication, I cannot scratch mine ear.—Pr'ythee, tell her but a worky-day fortune.

Sooth. Your fortunes are alike.

Iras. But how, but how? give me particulars.

Sooth. I have said.

Iras. Am I not an inch of fortune better than she?

Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better than I, where would you choose it?

Iras. Not in my husband's nose.

Char. Our worser thoughts heavens mend? Alexas,—come, his fortune, his fortune.—O, let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, I beseech thee! And let her die too, and give him a worse! and let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, fifty-fold a cuckold! Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight; good Isis, I beseech thee!

Iras. Amen. Dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people! for, as it is a heart-breaking to see a handsome man loose-wived, so is a deadly sorrow to behold a foul knave uncuckolded: Therefore, dear Isis, keep decorum, and fortune him accordingly!

Char. Amen.

Alex. Lo, now! if it lay in their hand to make a cuckold, they would make themselves whores, but they'd not.

Char. Not he, the queen
Enter Cleopatra.

Cleo. Saw you my lord?

Eno. No, lady.

Char. No, madam. [sudden]

Cleo. He was disposed to mirth; but on the Roman thought hath struck him. — Enobarbus.

Eno. Madam.

Cleo. Seek him, and bring him hither. Where's Alexas? [approaches.]

Alex. Here, madam, at your service. — My lord, Enter Antony, with a Messenger and Attendants.

Cleo. We will not look upon him: Go with us. [Exit Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Alexas, Iras, Charmian, Soothsayer, and Attendants.]

Mess. Fulvia thy wife first came into the field. [Exit.]

Ant. Against my brother Lucius?

Mess. Ay.

But soon that war had end, and the time's state Made friends of them, joining their force 'gainst Whose better issue in the way, from Italy, [Caesar; Upon the first encounter, drave them.]

Ant. Well, What worst?

Mess. The nature of bad news infects the teller. [Exit.]

Ant. When it concerns the fool, or coward.—On; Things, that are past, are done with me.—'Tis th' th' Which tells me true, though in his tale lie death, I hear him as he flatter'd.

Mess. Labienus. [This is still news] hath, with his Parthian force, Extended—Asia from Ephrætes; His conquering banner shook, from Syria To Lydia, and to Ionias; [whilst.]

Ant. Antony, thou wouldst say, —

Mess. O, my lord!

Ant. Speak to me home, mince not the general Name Cleopatra as she's call'd in Rome: [tongue; Rail thou in Fulvia's phrase; and taunt my faults With such full licence, as both truth and malice Have power to utter. O, then we bring forth weeds.]

When our quick winds lie still; and our ill told Is as our earing. Fare thee well a while. [us,]

Mess. At thy noble pleasure. [Exit.]

Ant. From Sicily how the news? Speak there. 1 Att. The desert from Sicily. — Is there such an one? [Exit.]

Ant. He stays upon your will; — [one?]

Let him appear,—

These strong Egyptian fetters I must break.

Enter another Messenger.

Or lose myself in bondage. — What are you? 2 Mess. Fulvia thy wife is dead.

Ant. Where died she?

2 Mess. In Sicily: Her length of sickness, with what else more serious Importeth thee to know, this bears. [Gives a letter.]

Ant. Forbear me—

[Exit Messenger.]

There's a great spirit gone! Thus did I desire it: What our complaints do often hurt from us, We wish it ours again; the present pleasure, By revolution lowering, does become The opposite of itself; she's good, being gone; The hand could pluck her back, that should her I must from this enchanting queen break off; [on. Ten thousand harms, more than the ills I know, My idleness doth hatch.—How now! Enobarbus!

Enter Enobarbus.

Eno. What's your pleasure, sir? —

Ant. I must with haste from hence. —

Eno. Why, then, we kill all our women: We see how mortal an unkindness is to them; if they suffer our departure, death's the word.

Ant. I must be gone.

Eno. Under a compelling occasion, let women die; it were pity to cast them away for nothing, though, between them and a great cause, they should be esteemed nothing. Cleopatra, catching but the least noise of this, dies instantly; I have seen her die twenty times upon far poorer moment: I think, there is mettle in death, which commits some strong acting upon her, she hath such a celerity in dying.

Ant. She is cunning past man's thought.

Eno. Black, sir, no; her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure love: We cannot call her winds and waters, sighs and tears; they are greater storms and tempests than ma- nacks can report: this cannot be cunning in her, if it be, she makes a shower of rain as well as Jove.

Ant. 'Would I had never seen her!

Eno. Sir? —

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Fulvia?

Ant. Dead.

Eno. Why, sir, give the gods a thankful sacrifice. When it pleaseth their deities to take the wife of a master from them, it shows to man the tailors of the earth; comforting therein, that when old robes are worn out, there are members to make new. If there were no more women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut, and the case to be lamented; this grace is compensated with consolation; your old smock brings forth a new petticoat: and, indeed, the tears live in an onion, that should water this sorrow.

Ant. The business she hath broached in the state, Cannot endure my absence.

Eno. And the business you have broached here cannot be without you; especially that of Cleo- patra's, which wholly depends on your abode.

Ant. No more light answers. Let our officers Have notice what we purpose. I shall break The cause of our experience to the queen, And get her love to part. For not alone The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches, Do strongly speak to us; but the letters too Of many our contriving friends in Rome Petition us at home: Sextus Pompeius Hath given the bare to Caesar, and commands The empire of the sea: our slippery people (Whose love is never link'd to the deserver,) Fill the desert from the west, but the desert is past, begin to throw Pompey the great, and all his dignities, Upon his son; who, high in name and power, Higher than both in blood and life, stands up For the main soldier: whose quality, going on, The sides o'the world may danger: Much is breeding, Which, like the courser's hair, hath yet but life, And not a serpent's poison. Say, our pleasure, To such whose place is under us, requires Our quick remembrance from hence.

Eno. I shall do't. [Exit.]

SCENE III.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. Where is he?

Char. I did not see him since.

Cleo. See where he is, who's with him, what he did not send you; — If you find him sad, [does Say, I am dancing; if in mirth, report That I am sudden sick: Quick, and return.

Char. Madam, methinks, if you did love him You do not hold the method to enforce [dearly, The like from him.

Cleo. What should I do, I do not?

Char. In each thing give him way, cross him in nothing.

[Exit Alex.]

Cleo. Thou teachest like a fool: the way to lose
ACT I.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA

Chor. Tempt him not so far: I wish, forbear;
In time we hate that which we often fear.

Enter Antony.

But here comes Antony.

Cleo. I am sick, and sullen.

Ant. I am sorry to give breeding to my purpose.

Cleo. Help me away, dear Charmian, I shall fail;
It cannot be thus long, the sides of nature
Will not sustain it.

Now, my dearest queen,—

Ant. Pray you, stand further from me.

What's the matter?

Cleo. I know, by that same eye, there's some Good news.

What says the married woman?—You may go;
Would she had never given you leave to come!
Let her not say, 'tis I that keep you there.
I have no power upon you; hers you are.

The gods best know,—

Cleo. Nay, pray you, seek no colour for your going,
But bid farewell, and go: when you need staying,
Then was the time for words: No going then:—
Eternity was in our lips, and eyes;
Bliss in our brows' bent; none our parts so poor,
But was a race of heaven: They are so still,
Or thou, the greatest soldier of the world,
Art turn'd the greatest liar.

Cleo. How now, lady! I would, I had thy inches; thou shouldst
There were a heart in Egypt. [know.

Ant. Hear me, queen;
The strong necessity of time commands
Our services a while; but my full heart
Pursues in use with you. Our Italy
Shines o'er with civil swords; Sextus Pompeius
Makes his approaches to the port of Rome;
Equality of two dominick powers
Breeds scurrilous faction: The hated, grown to Strength are newly grown to love: the condemn'd Pompey,
Rich in his father's honour, creeps apace
Into the hearts of such as have not thriv'd
Upon the present state, whose numbers threaten;
And quietness, grown sick of rest, would purge
By any desperate change: My more particular,
And that which most with you should safe my
Is Fulvia's death. [going.

Cleo. Though age from folly could not give me Freedom.
It does from childishness—Can Fulvia die?

Ant. She's dead, my queen; Look here, and, at thy sovereign leisure, read
The garboils she awak'd; at the last, best;
Seep, when, and where she died.

Cleo. Where be the sacred vials thou shouldst fill
With sorrowful water? Now I see, I see,
In Fulvia's death, how mine receive'd shall be.

Ant. O never more, but he prepar'd to know
The purporses I bear; which are, or cease,
As you shall give the advice; Now, by the fire,
That quickens Nitus' slime, I go from hence,
Thy soldier, servant; making peace or war,
As thou affect'st.

Cleo. Cut my lace, Charmian, come:—But let it be.—I am quickly ill, and well:
So Antony loves.

Ant. My precious queen, forbear;
And give true evidence to his love, which stands
An honourable trial.

Cleo. Still of our love:—So Fulvia told me.
I pr'ythee, turn aside, and weep for her;
Then bid'adieu to me, and say, the tears
Belong to Egypt: Good now, play one scene
Of excellent dissembling; and let it look Like perfect honours. Be it so.

You'll heat my blood: no more.
Cleo. You can do better yet; but this is meetly.

Now, by my sword,—

Ant. And target,—Still he mends;
But this is not the best. Look, pr'ythee, Charmian,
How this Herculean Roman does become
The carriage of his charfe.

Cleo. Courteous lord, one word.
Sir, you and I must part,—but that's not it:
Sir, you and I have lov'd,—but there's not it:
That you know well; Something it is I would,—
O, my oblivion is a very Antony,
And I am all forgotten.

But that your royalty
Holds idleness your subject, I should take you
For idleness itself.

Tis sweating labour,
To bear such idleness so near the heart
As Cleopatra bears this. Farmer, forgive me;
Since my becomings kill me, when they do not
Eye well to you: Your honour calls you hence;
Therefore be deaf to my unpitied folly,
And all the gods go with you! upon your sword
Sit laurel'd victory and smooth success
Be strew'd before your feet.

Let us go. Come;
Our separation so abide, and flies,
That thou residing here, go'st yet with me,
And, hence fleeing, here remain with thee.
Away.

[Exeunt.

Enter Octavius Caesar, Lepidus, and Attendants.

Caes. You may see, Lepidus, and henceforth
It is not Cæsar's natural vice to hate
One great competitor: from Alexandria
This is the news; He fishes, drinks, and wastes
The lamps of night in revel; is not more manlike
Than Cleopatra; nor the queen Potency
More womanly than he: Let him, therefore, see,
Vouchsaft to think he had partners: You shall
A man, who is the abstract of all faults [find there
That all men follow.

Lep. I must not think, there are
Evils enough to darken all his goodness;
His faults, in him, seem as the spots of heaven,
More fiery by night's blackness; hereditary,
Rather than purchas'd; what he cannot change,
Than what he chooses.

Caes. You are too indulgent: Let us grant, it is Amiss to tumble on the bed of Potency; [not
To give a kingdom for a mirth; to sit
And keep the turn of tippling with a slave;
To reel the streets at noon, and stand the buffet
With knaves that smell of sweat:—say, this becomes (As his composure must be rare indeed, [him, Whom these things cannot blemish,) yet must
No way excuse his soils, when we do bear [Antony
So great weight in his lightness. If he fill'd
His vacancy with his voluptuousness,
Full surfeits, and the dryness of his bones,
Call on him for't: but, to confound such time,
That drums him from his sport, and speaks as loud
As his own state, and ours,—'tis to be child.
As we rate boys; who being mature in knowledge,
Pawn their experience to their present pleasure,
And so rebel to judgment.

Enter a Messenger.

Lep. Here's more news.

Mess. Thy biddings have been done; and every hour,

Most noble Caesar, shalt thou have report
How 'tis abroad. Pompey is strong at sea;
And it appears, he is belov'd of those
That only have fear'd Caesar: to the ports
The discontents repair, and men's reports
Give him much wrong'd.

Ces. I should have known no less:
It hath been taught ns from the primal state,
That he, which is, was wish'd, until he were:
And the ebb'd man, ne'er lov'd, till ne'er worth love,
Comes deard, by being lack'd. This common
Like a vagabond flag upon the stream,
Body, goes to, and back, lackeying the varying tide,
To rot itself with motion.

Mess. Caesar, I bring thee word,
Menocrates and Menas, famous pirates, [wound
Hirtius and Pansa, consuls, at thy heel
Did famine follow: whom thou fough'tst against,
Though daintily brought up, with patience more
Than savages could suffer: Thou didst drink
The stale of horses, and the gilded pudding
Which beasts would cough at: thy palate then
The roughest berry on the roudest hedge;
Yea, like the stag, when snow the pasture sheets,
The banks of trees thou brows'ist; on the Alps,
It is reported, thou didst eat strange flesh,
With some did die to look on: And all this
(This woundst thine honour, that I speak it now,) Was borne so like a soldier, that thy cheek
So much as lank'd not.

Lep. Cae. It is pity of him.

Ces. Let his shames quickly
Drive him to Rome: 'Tis time we twain
Did show ourselves i' the field; and, to that end,
Assembly we immediate council; Pompey
Thrive in our idleness.

Lep. To-morrow, Caesar,
I shall be furnish'd to inform you rightly
Both what by sea and land I can be able,
To 'front this present time.

Ces. It is my business too. Farewell.

Lep. Farewell, my lord: What you shall know mean time
Of stirs abroad, I shall beseech you, sir,
To let me be partaker.

Ces. Doubt not, sir; [Exeunt.
I knew it for my bond.

SCENE V.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Mardian.

Cleo. Charmian,—
Char. Madam.
Cleo. Ha, ha!—
Give me to drink mandragora.
Char. Why, madam?
Cleo. That I might sleep out this great gap of My Antony is away. [time,
Char. You think of him much.
Cleo. O, treasur !
Char. Madam, I trust, not so.
Cleo. Thou, eunuch! Mardian!
Char. What's your highness' pleasure?
Cleo. Not now to hear thee sing; I take no pleasure
In angh't eunuch has: 'Tis well for thee,
That, being unsemann'd, thy freer thoughts
May not fly forth of Egypt. Hast thou affections?

Cleo. Indeed?
Mar. Not in deed, madam; for I can do nothing
But what in deed is honest to be done:
Yet I have fierce affections, and think,
What Venus did with Mars.
Cleo. O Charmian,
Where think'st thou he is now? Stands he, or sits
Or does he walk? or is he on his horse? [he
O happy horse, to bear the weight of Antony!
Do bravely, horse! for wot'st thou whom thou
Upon a morrow.

The demi-Atlas of this earth, the arm
And burgonet of men.—He's speaking now,
Or murmuring, Where's my serpent of old Nile?
For so he calls me; Now I feed myself
With fast things he did, do I think on me,
That am with Phoebus' amorous pinches black,
And wrinkled deep in time? Broad-fronted Caesar,
When thou wast here above the ground, I was
A morsel for a monarch: and great Pompey
Would stand, and make his eyes grow in my brow;
There would he anchor his aspect, and die
With looking on his life.

Enter Alexas.

Alex. Sovereign of Egypt, hail!
Cleo. How much unlike art thou Mark Antony!
Yet, coming from him, that great medicine hath
With his tinct gilded thee.

How goes it with my brave Mark Antony?
Alex. With all things he did, do I think on me,
He kis'd, the last of many double kisses,
This orient pearl:—His speech sticks in my heart.
Cleo. Mine ear must pluck it thence.

Alex. Good friend, quoth he,
Say, The firm Roman to great Egypt sends
This treasure of an oyster; at whose foot
To mend the petty present, I will piece
Her opulent throne with kingdoms; all the east,
Say, thou, shall call her mistress. So he nodded,
And soberly did mount a termagant steed,
Who neigh'd so high, that what I would have spoke
Was beastly dumb'd by him.
Cleo. What, was he sad, or merry?
Alex. Like to the time o' the year between the extremes
Of heat and cold; he was nor sad, nor merry.
Cleo. O well-divided disposition!—Note him,
Note him, good Charmian, 'tis the man; but now
He was not sad; for he would shine on those
That make their looks by his: he was not merry;
Which seem'd to tell them, his remembrance lay
In Egypt with his joy: but between both;
O heavenly mingle!—Be'st thou sad, or merry,
The violence of either thee becomes;
So does it no man else.—Met'st thou my posts?
Alex. Ay, madam, twenty several messengers:
Why do you send so thick?
Cleo. Who's born that day
When I forget to send to Antony,
Shall die a beggar.—Ink and paper, Charmian.—
Welcome, my good Alexas.—Did I, Charmian,
Ever love Caesar so?
Char. O that brave Caesar!
Alex. Be chok'd with such another emphasis!
Say, the brave Antony.
Char. The valiant Caesar!
Cleo. By Isis, I will give thee bloody teeth,
If thou with Caesar paragon again
My man of men.
Char. By your most gracious pardon,
I sing but after you.
Cleo. When I was green in judgment,—Cold in blood,
To say, as I said then!—But, come, away,
Get me ink and paper: he shall have every day
A several greeting, or I'll unpeopile Egypt.
[Exeunt.
ACT II.

SCENE I.—Messina.  A Room in Pompey's House.
     Enter Pompey, Menecrates, and Menas.

Pom. If the great gods be just, they shall assist
     The deeds of justest men.

Men. Know, worthy Pompey,
     That they do delay, they do not deny.  [says
     Pom. While we are suitors to their throne, de-
     The thing we sue for.

Men. We, ignobrant of ourselves,
     Beg often our own harms, which the wise powers
     Deny us for our good; so find we profit,
     By losing of our prayers.

Pom. I shall do well:
     The people love me, and the sea is mine;
     My power's a crest, and my surging hope
     Says, it will come to the full.  Mark Antony
     In Egypt sits at dinner, and will make
     No wars without doors: Caesar gets money, where
     He loses hearts: Lepidus flatters both,
     Of both is flatter'd; but neither loves,
     Nor either cares for him.

Cesar & Lepidus

Men. Are in the field; a mighty strength they carry.
     Pom. Where have you this? 'tis false.

From Silvius, sir.

Men. He dreams; I know, they are in Rome together,
     Looking for Antony: But all charms of love
     Salt Cleopatra, soften thy wan'd lip!
     Let witchcraft join with beauty, better with both!
     Tie up the libertine in a field of feasts,
     Keep his brain fuming: Epicurean cooks,
     Sharpen with cloyless sauce his appetite;
     That sleep and feeding may procruge his honour,
     Even till his leth'rd dusts.  —How now, Varrius?

Enter Varrius.

Var. This is most certain that I shall deliver:
     Mark Antony is every hour in Rome
     Expected; since he went from Egypt, 'tis
     A space for further travel.

Pom. I could have given less matter
     A better ear.—Menas, I did not think,
     This amorous surfeiter would have don'd his helm
     For such a petty war: his soldiers
     Is twice the other twain: but let us rear
     The higher our opinion, that our stirring
     Can from the lap of Egypt's widow pluck
     The ever last-wearied Antony.

Men. I cannot hope,
     Caesar and Antony shall well greet together:
     His wife, that's dead, did trespass to Caesar;
     His brother war'd upon him; although, I think,
     Not mov'd by Antony.

Pom. I know not, Menas,
     How lesser enmities may give way to greater.
     Wre't not that we stand up against them all,
     'Twere pregnant they should square between them;
     For they have entertained cause enough [selves;
     To draw their swords: but how the fear of us
     May cement their divisions, and bind up
     The petty difference, we yet not know.
     Be it as our gods will have it! It only stands
     Our lives upon, to use our strongest hands.

Come, Menas.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Rome.  A Room in the House of Lepidus.

Enter Enobarbus and Lepidus.

Lep. Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy deed,
     And shall beco' you well, to entreat your captain
     To soft and gentle speech.

Eno. I shall entreat him to answer like himself: if Caesar move him,
     Let Antony look over Caesar's head,
     And speak as loud as Menas.  By Jupiter,
     Were I the wearer of Antonius' beard,
     I would not shav't to day.

For private stomaching.

Eno. Every time
     Serves for the matter that is then born in it.

Lep. But small to greater matters must give way.
     Eno. Not if the small come first.

Lep. Your speech is passion:
     But, pray you, stir no embers up.  Here comes
     The noble Antony.

Enter Antony and Ventidius.

Eno. And yonder Caesar.

Enter Caesar, Mecenas, and Agrippa.

Ant. If we compose well here, to Parthia
     Hark you, Ventidius.

Ces. I do not know, Mecenas; ask Agrippa.

Lep. Noble friends, [not
     That which combined us was most great, and let
     A leaner action rend us.  What's amiss,
     May it be gently heard: When we debate
     Our trivial difference loud, we do commit
     Murder in healing wounds: Then, noble partners,
     (The rather, for I earnestly beseech,)  Touch you the sourest points with sweetest terms,
     Nor curstness grow to the matter.

Ant. 'Tis spoken well:
     Were we before our armies, and to fight,
     I should do thus.

Ces. Welcome to Rome.

Ant. Thank you.

Ces. Sit.

Ant. Sit, sir!  Nay, [so;
     Ant. I learn, you take things ill, which are not
     Or, being, concern you not.

I must be laugh'd at,
     If, or for nothing, or a little, I
     Should say myself offended; and with you
     Chiefly: the world: more laugh'd at, that I should Once name you derogately, when to sound your
     It not concern'd me.

[Name Antony.

What was't to you?

Ces. No more than my residing here at Rome
     Might be to you in Egypt: Yet if you there
     Did practise on my state, your being in Egypt
     Might be my question.

Ant. How intend you, practis'd?

Ces. You may be pleas'd to catch at mine intent,
     By what did here befal you.  Your wife, and brother,
     Made wars upon me; and their contention
     Was theme for you, you were the word of war.

Ant. You do mistake your business; my brother
     Did urge me in his act; I did enquire it:  [never
     And have my learning from some true reports,
     That drew their swords with you.  Did he not Discredit my authority with yours: [rather
     And make the wars alike against my stomach,
     Having alike your cause?  Of this, my letters
     Before did satisfy you.  If you'll patch a Quarrel,
     As matter whole you have not to make it with,
     It must not be with this.

Ces. You praise yourself
     By laying defects of judgment to me; but
     You patch'd up your excuses.

Ant. Not so, not so;
     I know you could not lack, I am certain on't,
     Very necessity of this thought, that I
     Your partner in the cause 'gainst which he fought,
     Could not with graceful eyes attend those wars
     Which 'fronted mine own peace.  As for my wife,
     I would you had her spirit in such another:
     The third o'the world is yours: which with a
     You may pace easy, but not such awife... [snaffle Eno. Would we had all such wives, that the men might go to wars with the women!

Ant. So much uncurable, her gabells, Caesar,
     Made out of her impatience, (which not wanted
     Shrewdness of policy too,) I grieveing grant,
Did you too much disquiet: for that, you must
But say, I could not help it.

Antony. I wrote to you,
When rioting in Alexandria: you,
Did pocket up my letters, and with taunts
Did give my missive out of audience.

Ant. Sir, he fell upon me, ere admitted: then
There were things I had newly feasted, and did wish
Of what I was: the morning: but, next day,
I told him of myself; which was as much
As to have asked'd him pardon: Let this fellow
Be nothing of our strife; if we contend;
Out of our question wip him.

Cas. You have broken
The article of your oath; which you shall never Have tongue to charge me with.

Lep. Ant. No, Lepidus, let him speak;
The honour's sacred which he talks on now,
Supposing that I lack'd it: But on, Caesar;
The article of my oath,—

Cas. To lend me arms, and aid, when I requir'd
The which you both denied. [Theem; Ant.
Neglected, rather; And then, when poison'd hours had bound me up
From mine own knowledge. As nearly as I may,
I'll play the penitent to you: but mine honesty
Shall not make poor me shew my power
Work without it: Truth is, that Fulvia,
To have me out of Egypt, made wars here;
For which myself, the ignorant motive, do
So far ask pardon, as hefts mine honour
To stop in such a case.

Lep. 'Tis nobly spoken.
Mec. If it might please you, to enforce no further
The griefs between ye: to forget them quite,
Were to remember that the present need
Sparks to atone you.

Lep. Worthily spoke, Mecenas.

Eno. Or, if you borrow one another's love
For the instant, you may, when you hear no more word's
Of Pompey, return it again; you shall have time to wangle in, when you have nothing else to do.
Ant. Thou art a soldier only; speak no more.

Eno. That truth should be silent, I had almost foget. [no more.

Ant. You wrong this presence, therefore speak
Eno. Go then; your considerate stone.

Cass. I did not much dislike the matter, but
The manner of his speech: for it cannot be,
We shall remain in friendship, our conditions
So differing in their acts. Yet, if I knew What hoop should hold us staunch, from edge to edge of the world I would pursue it. [edge

Agr. Give me leave, Caesar;

Cas. Speak, Agrrippa.

Agr. Thou hast a sister by the mother's side,
Admir'd Octavia: great Mark Antony
Is now a widower.

Cas. Say not so, Agrrippa;
If Cleopatra heard you, your reproof
Were well deserv'd of rashness.

Ant. I am not married, Caesar: let me hear
Agrrippa further speaks.

Agr. To hold you in perpetual amity,
To make you brothers, and to knit your hearts
With an unslipping knot, take Antony
Octavia to his wife: whose beauty claims
No worse a husband than the best of men;
Whose virtue, and whose general graces, speak
That which none else can utter. By this marriage,
All little jealousies, which now seem great,
And all great fears, which now import their dangers,
Would, then, be nothing: truths would be but tales,
Where now half tales be truths: her love to both,
Would, each to other, and all loves to both,
Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke:
For I am studid, not a present thought,
By duty ruminated.

Ant. Will Caesar speak?

Cas. Not till he hears how Antony is touch'd
With what is spoke already.

Ant. What power is in Agrrippa:
If I would say, Agrrippa, be it so,
To make this good.

Cas. The power of Caesar, and
His power unto Octavia.

Ant. May I never
To this good purpose, that so clearly shows
Dreams of impediment—Let me have thy hand:
Further this act of grace; and, from this hour,
The heart of brothers govern in our loves,
And sway our great designs!

Cas. There is my hand.
A sister I bequeath you, whom no brother
Did ever love so dearly: Let her live
To join our kingdoms, and our hearts; and never Fly off our loves again!

Lep. Happily, amen.

Ant. I did not think to draw my sword 'gainst
Pompey;
For he hath laid strange courtesies, and great,
Of late upon me: I must thank him only,
Lest my remembrance suffer ill report;
At heel of that, defy him.

Lep. Time calls upon us:
Of us must Pompey presently be sought,
Or else he seeks out us.

Ant. And where lies he?

Cas. About the Mount Misenum.

Ant. What's his strength
By land?

Cas. Great, and increasing: but by sea
He is an absolute master.

Ant. So is the fame.

Lep. Would, we had spoke together! Haste we for it:
Yet, ere we put ourselves in arms, despatch we
The business we have talk'd of.

Ant. With most gladness;
And do invite you to my sister's view,
Whither straight I will lead you.

Let us, Lepidus,
Not lack your company.

Noble Antony,
Not sickness should detain me.

[Flourish. Eminent Caesar, Ant. and Lepidus.

Mec. Welcome from Egypt, sir.

Eno. Half the heart of Caesar, worthy Mecenas!
—my honourable friend, Agrrippa!—
Agr. Good Emilius! Mec.

Mec. We have cause to be glad, that matters are so well digested. You stay'd well by it in Egypt.

Eno. Ay, sir; we did sleep day out of countenance,
And made the night light with drinking.

Mec. Eight wild bears roasted whole at a breakfast, and but twelve persons there; Is this true?

Eno. This was but as a fly by an eagle: we had much more monstrous matter of feasts, which worthily deserved noting.

Mec. She's a most triumphant lady, if report be square to her.

Eno. When she first met Mark Antony, she pursu'd up his heart, upon the river of Cydnus.

Agr. There she appeared indeed; or my reporter devis'd well for her.

Eno. I will tell you:
The large she sat in, like a burnish'd throne,
Burn'd on the water: the poop was beaten gold;
Purple the sails, and so perfumed, that [silver; The winds were love-sick with them: the oars were
Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and made
The water, which they beat, to follow faster,
As amorous of their strokes. For her own person,
It beggar'd all description: she did lie
In her pavilion, (cloth of gold, of tissue,) O'er-picturing that Venus, where we see,
The fancy out-work nature: on each side her,
Stood pretty dimpled boys, like smiling Cupids,
With divers-colour'd fans, whose wind did seem
To blow the delicate checks which they did cool,
And with which they undid, did.

Agr. O, rare for Antony
Eno. Her gentlewomen, like the Nerides,
So many mermaids, tended her the eyes,
And made their hand amors: in the same
A seeming Mermaid steers; the whole sail
Swell with the touches of those flower-hand softs,
That rarely frame the office. From the barge
A strange invisible perfume hits the sense
Of the adjacent wharf. The city cast
Her people out upon her; and Antony,
Enthron'd in the market-place, did sit alone;
Whistling to the air; which, but for vacancy,
Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too,
And made a gap in nature.

ACT. 2.

Sotho. To none but thee; no more, but when to
If thou dost play with him at any game, [thee
Thou art sure to lose; and, of that natural luck,
He beats thee against the odds; thy lustre thickens,
When he shines by: I say again, thy spirit
Is all afraid to govern thee near him;
But, he away, 'tis noble.

Agr. Get thee gone:
Say to Ventidius, I would speak with him—
[Exeunt Soothsayer.
He shall to Parthia. Be it art, or hap,
He hath spoken true: The very dice obey him;
And, in our sports, my better cunning faints
Under his chance: if we draw lots, he speeds:
His cocks do win the battle still of mine,
When it is all to nought; and his quails ever
Beat mine, in hoop'd, at odds. I will to Egypt:
And though I make this marriage for my peace,

Enter Ventidius.

I' the east my pleasure lies:—O, come, Ventidius,
You must to Parthia; your commission's ready:
Follow me, and receive it.

[Exeunt.

ACT. IV.

SCENE IV.—The same. A Street.

Enter Lepidus, Mecenas, and Agrippa.

Lep. Trouble yourselves no further: pray you,
Your generals after.

Agr. [hasten
Sir, Mark Antony
Will e'en but kiss Octavia, and we'll follow.

Lep. Tell I shall see you in your soldier's dress,
Which will become you both, farewell.

Mec. We shall,
As I conceive the journey, be at mount
Before you, Lepidus.

Lep. Your way is shorter,
My purposes do draw me much about;
You'll win two days upon me.

Mec. Agr.
Sir, good success!
Lep. Farewell.
[Exeunt.

ACT. V.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. Give me some music: music, moody
Of us that trade in love.

[food Attend.

The music, ho!

Enter Mardian.

Cleo. Let it alone; let us to billiards:
Come, Charmian.

Char. My arm is sore, best play with Mardian.
Cleo. As well a woman with an eunuch play'd,
As with a woman. Come, you'll play with me.
Mar. As well as I can, madam.

Cleo. And when good will is show'd, though it come too short,
The actor may plead pardon. I'll none now:
Give me mine angle.—We'll to the river: there,
My music playing far off, I will betray
Tawny-finn'd fishes; my bended hook shall pierce
Their slimy jaws; and, as I draw them up,
I'll think them every one an Antony,
And say, Ah, ha! you're caught.

Char. [sigh
'Twas merry, when
You wager'd on your angling; when your diver
Did hang a salt-fish on his hook, which he
With fervency drew up.

Cleo. That time!—O times!—
I laugh'd him out of patience; and that night
I laugh'd him into patience; and next morn,
Ere the ninth hour, I drank him to his bed;
Then put my tires and mantles on him, whilst
I wore his sword Philippian. Of from Italy;

Enter a Messenger.

Ram thou thy fruitful tidings in mine ears,
That long time have been barren.

Iras. Madam, madam—
Cleo. Antony's dead?—
If thou say so, villain, thou kill'st thy mistress.
But well and free.
If thou so yield him, there is gold, and here
My bluest veins to kiss; a hand, that kings
Have lipp'd, and trembled kissing
Mess. First, madam, he's well.
Cleo. Why, there's more gold. But, sirrah, mark; we use
To say, the dead are well! bring it to that,
Though I'll give thee, will I melt, and pour
Down thy illuttering throat.
Mess. Good madam, hear me.
Cleo. Well, go to, I will;
But there's no goodness in thy face: If Antony
Be mad, and healthful,—why so tart a favour?
To trumpet such good tidings? If not well,
Thou should'st come like a fury crown'd
With Not like a formal man.
Mess. Will't please you, hear me? Cleo. I have a mind to strike thee, ere thou Yet, if thou say, Antony lives, is well, (speak'st:
Or friends with Caesar, or not captive to him,
I'll set thee in a shower of gold, and hail
Rich pearls upon thee.
Mess. Madam, he's well.
Cleo. Well said. Mess. And friends with Caesar.
Cleo. Thou'rt an honest man. Mess. Caesar and he are greater friends than ever.
Cleo. Make thee a fortune from me.
Mess. But yet, madam,—
Cleo. I do not like but yet, it does allay
The good precedence; (eye upon but yet:
But yet is as a gaoler to bring forth
Some monstrous malefactor. Pr'ythee, friend,
Pour out the pack of matter to mine ear,
The good and had together: He's friends with Caesar;
In state of health, thou say'st; and, thou say'st,
Mess. Free, madam! no; I made no such re-
He's bound unto Octavia. [port.]
Cleo. For what good turn?
Mess. For the best turn i' the head.
Cleo. I am pale, Charman.
Mess. Madam, he's married to Octavia.
Cleo. The most infectious pestilence upon thee!
[Strikes him down.
Mess. Good madam, patience.
Cleo. What say you?—Hence, [Strikes him again.
Horrible villain! or I'll spur the eyes
Like hales before me; I'll unhair the head;
[She hates him up and down.
Thou shalt he whipp'd with wire, and stew'd in Smarting in ling'ring pickle. [Irone.
Mess. Gracious madam, I, that do bring the news, made not the match.
Cleo. Say, 'tis not so, a province I will give thee,
And make thy fortunes proud: the blow thou
Shall make thy peace, for moving me to rage;
And I will boot thee with what gift beside Thy modesty can heg.
Mess. He's married, madam.
Cleo. Rogue, thou hast liv'd too long.
[Drums a dagger.
Mess. Nay, then I'll run --
What mean you, madam? I have made no fault.
[Exit.
Char. Good madam, keep yourself within your-
The man is innocent.
Cleo. Some innocents 'scape not the thunder-
Melt Egypt into Nile! and kindly creatures
Turn all to serpents!—Call the slave again;
Though I am mad, I will not hit him:—Call.
Char. He is afraid to come.
I will not hurt him:—
These hands do lack nobility, that they strike
A meaner than myself; since I myself
Have given myself the cause.—Come hither, sir.
[Re-enter Messenger.
Though it be honest, it is never good
To bring had news: Give to a gracious message
An host of tongues; but let ill tidings tell
Themselves, when they be felt.
I have done my duty.
Cleo. Is he married?
I cannot hate thee worse than I do,
If thou again say, Yes.
Mess. He is married, madam.
Cleo. The gods confound thee I dost thou hold
Mess. Should I lie, madam?
Cleo. O, I would, thou didst;—
So half my Egypt were submerg'd, and made
A cistern for scald's snakes! Go, get thee hence:
Hast thou Narcissus in thy face, to me
Thou would'st appear most ugly. He is married?
Mess. I crave your highness' pardon.
Cleo. He is married?
Mess. Take no offence, that I would not offend
To punish me for what you make me do, [you
Seems much unequal: He is married to Octavia.
Cleo. O, that his fault should make a knife of thee,
[they hence: That art not!—What? thou'rt sure of't?—Get
The merchandise which thou hast brought from Rome,
Are all too dear for me; lie they upon thy hand,
And be undone! 'ny! [Exit Messenger.
Char. Good your highness' patience.
Cleo. In praising Antony, I have displeas'd Caesar.
Char. Many times, madam.
Cleo. I am paid for't now.
Lead me from hence, Charman.—'Tis no matter:—
Go to the fellow, good Alexas; bid him
Report the feature of Octavia, our greats,
Her inclination; let him not leave out
The colour of her hair:—bring me word quickly.—
[Exit Alexas.
Char. Let him for ever:—Let him not—Charman,
Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon,
'Tother way he's a Mars:—Bid you Alexas
'To Mardian.
Bring me word, how tall she is.—Pity me, Char-
But do not speak to me.—Lead me to my chamber.
[Exit.

SCENE VI.—Near Misenum.

Enter Pompey and Menas, at one side, with drum and trumpet: at another, Caesar, Lepidus, Antony, Enobarbus, Mecenas, with Soldiers marching.

Pom. Your hostages I have, so have you mine;
And we shall talk before we fight. Most meet,
That first we come to words; and therefore have
Our written purposes before us sent;
Which, if thou hast consider'd, let us know
If 'twill tie up thy discontented sword;
And carry back to Sicily much tall youth,
That else must perish here.

Pom. To you all three,
The senators alone of this great world,
Chief factors for the gods,—I do not know,
Wherefore my father should revenge want,
Having a son, and friends; since Julius Caesar,
Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted,
There saw you labouring for him. What was it,
That mov'd pale Cassius to conspire? And what
Made the all-honour'd, honest, Roman Brutus,
With the arm'd rest, courtiers of haughty,
To drench the Capitol; but that they would
Have one man but a man? And what is it,
Hath made me rig my navy; at whose burden
The anger'd ocean foams; with which I meant
To scourge the ingratitude that despiteful Rome
Cast on my noble father.

Pom. Take your time.

Ant. Thou canst not fear us, Pompey, with thy sails,
We'll speak with thee at sea: at land, thou know'st how much we do o'er-count thee.

Pom. At land, indeed, thou dost o'er-count me of my father's house; but, since the cuckoo builds not for himself, remain in't, as thou may'st.

Lep. Be pleas'd to tell us, (for this is from the present,) how you take the orders we have sent you.

Cas. There's the point.

Ant. Which do not be entreated to, but weigh what it is worth embrac'd.

Pom. To try a larger fortune. You have made me offer

Of Sicily, Sardinia; and I must Rul all the sea of pirates; then, to send Measures of wheat to Rome: this 'greed upon, To start with unack'd edges, and bear back Our targe untindertied.

Cas. Ant. Lep. That's our offer.

Pom. Know then, I came before you here, a man prepar'd To take this offer: but Mark Antony put me to some impatience;—though I lose The praise of it by telling, you must know, When Caesar and your brothers were at blows, Young Antony came to Sicily, and did find Her welcome friendly.

Ant. I have heard it, Pompey; and am well studied for a liberal thanks, Which I do owe you.

Pom. Let me have your hand: I did not think, sir, to have met you here. [you, Ant. The beds the east are soft; and thanks to That call'd me, timelier than my purpose, hither; For I have gain'd by it.

Cas. Since I saw you last, There is a change upon you.

Pom. Well, I know not what counts harsh fortune casts upon my face; But in my bosom shall she never come, To mar my heart her vassal.

Lep. Well met here.

Pom. I hope so, Lepidus:—thus we are agreed: I crave, our composition may be written, And seal'd betwixt us.

Cas. That's the next to do.

Pom. Well, we'll feast each other, ere we part; and draw lots, who shall begin. [let us

Ant. That will I, Pompey.

Pom. No, Antony, take the lot: but, first, Or last, your fine Egyptian cookery [Cesar Shal have the fame. I have heard, that Julius Grew fat with feasting there.

Ant. You have heard much.

Pom. I have fair meanings, sir;

And fair words to them. [Then so much have I heard:—

And I have heard, Apollodorus carried—

E no. No more of that:—he did so.

Pom. What, what, I pray you? [Cesar A certain queen to Caesar in a mattress. [Know thee now; How far'st thou, soldier? E no. Well; And well I am like to do; for, I perceive, Four feasts are toward.

Pom. Let me shake thy hand; I never hated thee: I have seen thee fight, When I have envied thy behaviour.

E no. Sir, I never lov'd you much; but I have prais'd you, When you have well deserv'd ten times as much As I have said you did.

Men. Thy father, Pompey, would never have made this treaty...—[Aside]—you and I have known, sir.

Eno. At sea, I think.

Men. We have, sir.

Eno. You have done well by water.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. I will praise any man that will praise me; though it cannot be denied what I have done by land.

Men. Nor what I have done by water.

Eno. Yes, something you can deny for your own safety: you have been a great thief by sea.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. There I deny my land service. But give me your hand, Menas: if our eyes had authority, here they might take two thieves kissing.

Men. All men's faces are true, whatsoever their hands are.

Eno. But there is never a fair woman has a true face.

Men. No slander; they steal hearts.

Eno. We came hither to fight with you.

Men. For my part, I am sorry it is turned to a drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his fortune.

Eno. If he do, sure, he cannot weep it back again.

Men. You have said, sir. We looked not for Mark Antony here; pray you, is he married to Cleopatra?

Eno. Caesar's sister is call'd Octavia.

Men. True, sir; she was the wife of Caius Marcellus.

Eno. But she is now the wife of Marcus Antonius.

Men. Pray you, sir?

Eno. 'Tis true, sir.

Men. Then is Caesar, and he, for ever knit together.

Eno. If we were bound to divinity of this unity, I would not prophesy so.

Men. I think, the policy of that purpose made more in the marriage, than the love of the parties.

Eno. I think so too. But you shall find, the band that seems to tie their friendship together, shall be the very strangler of their amity: Octavia of a holy, cold, and still composition.

Men. Who would not have his wife so?

Eno. Not he, that himself is not so; which is Mark Antony. He will to his Egyptian dish again: then shall the sights of Octavia blow the fire up in his heart, and make his brain his purpose. Men. And thus it may be. Come, sir, will you aboard? I have a health for you.

Eno. I shall take it, sir: we have used our thraots in Egypt.

Men. Come; let's away. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—On board Pompey's Galley, lying near Misenum.

Musick. Enter Two or Three Servants, with a banquet.

1 Serv. Here they'll be, man: some o' their plants are ill-rooted already; the least wind 't the world will blow them down.

2 Serv. Lepidus is high-coloured.

1 Serv. They have made him drink alms-drink.

2 Serv. As they pinch one another by the disposition, he cries out, no more; reconciles them to his entreaty, and himself to the drink.

1 Serv. But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion.

2 Serv. Why, this it is to have a name in great men's fellowship: I had as lief have a reed that will do me no service, as a partizan I could not heave.
1 Serv. To be called into a huge sphere, and not to be seen to move in't, are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disaster the cheeks.

A senet sounded. Enter Caesar, Antony, Pompey, Lepidus, Agrippa, Mecenas, Enobarbus, Menas, with other captains.

Ant. Thus do they, sir: [To Caesar.] They take the flow o' the Nile.
By certain scales i'th pyramid; they know,
By the height, the lowness, or the mean, if death,
Or foizou, follow: The higher Nilus swells,
The more it promises: as it ebbs, the seedman
Upon the sable and o'er-scatters his grain,
And shortly comes to harvest.

Lep. You have strange serpenters there.

Ant. Ay, Lepidus.

Lep. Your serpent of Egypt is bred now of your mud by the operation of your sun: so is your crocodile.

Ant. They are so.

Pom. Sit,—and some wine.—A health to Lepidus.

Lep. I am not so well as I should be, but I'll ne'er out.

Eno. Not till you have slept; I fear me, you'll be in, till then.

Lep. Nay, certainly, I have heard the Ptolomeys' pyramids are very goodly things; without contradiction, I have heard that.

Men. Pompey, a word. [Aside]

Pom. Say in mine ear: what is't?

Men. Forsake thy seat, I do beseech thee, captain.

[Aside]

And hear me speak a word.

Pom. Forbear me till anon.

This wine for Lepidus.

Lep. What manner o' thing is your crocodile?

Ant. It is as mad, sir, like itself; and it is as broad as it hath breadth: it is just so high as it is,
And moves with its own organs: it lives by that Which nourisheth it: and the elements once out of
It, it transmigrates.

Lep. What colour is it of?

Ant. Of its own colour too.

Lep. 'Tis a strange serpent.

Ant. 'Tis so. And the tears of it are wet.

Cas. Will this description satisfy him?

Ant. With the health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very epicure.

Pom. [To Menas aside.] Go hang, sir, hang!
Tell me of that? away!

Do as I bid you.—Where's this cup I call'd for?
Men. If for the sake of merit thou wilt hear me,
Rise from thy stool. [Aside]

Pom. I think, thou'rt mad. The matter?

[Rees, and walks aside.

Men. I have ever held my cap off to thy fortunes.

Pom. Thou hast serv'd me with much faith:
Be jolly, lords. [What's else to say?

Ant. These quick-sands, Lepidus, keep off them, for you sink.

Men. Wilt thou be lord of all the world?

Pom. What say'st thou?

Men. Wilt thou be lord of the whole world?

Pom. How should that be?

[That's twice?

Men. But entertain it, and,
Although thou think me poor, I am the man
Will give thee all the world.

Pom. Has thou drunk well?

Men. No, Pompey, I have kept me from the Thou art, if thou dar'st be, the earthly Jove: [cup.
What'er the ocean pales, or sky inclips,
I'll else, if thou wilt have't.

Pom. Show me which way

Men. These three world-sharers, these competi-
Are in thy vessel: Let me cut the cable; [tars,
And, when we are put off, fall to their throats:
All there is thing;

Pom. Ah, this thou shouldn't have done,
And not have spoke out! In me, 'tis villainy:

In thee, it had been good service. Thou must

'Tis not my profit that does lead mine honour;
Mine honour, it. Repent, that e'er thy tongue
Hath so betray'd thine act: Being done unknown,
I should have found it afterwards well done;
But must confound it now. Desist, and drink.

Men. For this,

Pom. I'll never follow thy pall'd fortunes more—
Who seeks, and will not wait, when once 'tis offer'd,
Shall never find it more.

This health to Lepidus.

Ant. Bear him ashore.—I'll pledge it for him,

Eno. Here's to thee, Menas. [Pompey.

Eno. Enobarbus, welcome.

Pom. Fill, till the cup be hid.

Eno. There's a strong fellow, Menas.

[Pointing to the Attendant who carries off

Men. Lepidus.

Men. He bears

The third part of the world, man; See'st not ?

Men. The third part then is drunck: 'Would it
That it might go on wheels! [were all,

Eno. Drink thou; increase the reeds.

Men. Come.

Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian feast.

Ant. It ripens towards it.—Strike the vessels, ho! Here is to Caesar.

Cas. I could well forbear it.

It's monstrous labour, when I wash my brain,
And it grows fouler.

Ant. Be a child o' the time.

Cas. Possit me, I'll make answer: but I had rather fast
From an, four days, than drink so much in one.

Eno. Ha, my brave emperor! [To Antony.

Shall we dance now the Egyptian Bacchanals,
And celebrate our drink?

Pom. Let's ha', good soldier.

Ant. Come, let us all take hands!

Till that the conquering wine hath steep'd our
In soft and delicate Lethe.

[Eno.

Men. All take hands.

Make battery to our ears with the loud musick
The while, I'll place you: Then the boy shall
The holding every man shall bear, as loud [sing;
As his strong sides can volley.

[Musick plays.

Enobarbus places them hand in hand.

SONG.

Come, thou monarch of the vine,

Plumpy Bacchus, with pink eye:

In thy vats our cares be drown'd;

With thy grapes our hairs be crown'd;

Cup us, till the world go round;

Cup us, till the world go round!

Cas. What would you more ?—Pompey, good

Antony, Good brother,

Let me request you off: our gravier business
Turns at this levity.—Gentle lords, let's part;

You see, we have burnt our cheeks: strong Enobar-

is weaker than the wine; and mine own tongue

Splits what it speaks: the wild disguise hath almost

Antick'd us all. What needs more words? Good

Antony, your hand. [night.

Men. I'll try you on the shore.

Ant. And shall, sir: give's your hand.

Pom. O, Antony,

You have my father's house.—But what? we are Come, down into the boat; [friends:

Eno. Take heed, you fail not.—

[Exeunt Pompey, Caesar, Antony, and Attendants.

Menas, I'll not on shore.

Men. No, to my cabin—

These drums!—these trumpets, flutes! what!—

Let Neptune hear we bid a loud farewell
ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Plain in Syria.

Enter Ventidius, as after conquest, with Silius, and other Romans, Officers, and Soldiers; the dead body of Paurus borne before him.

Ven. Now, daring Parthia, art thou struck; and please'd fortune does of Marcus Crassus' death
Make me revenger.—Bear the king's son's body
Before our army: Thy Paurus, Orodes,
Pays this for Marcus Crassus.

Sit. Noble Ventidius,
Whilst yet with Parthian blood thy sword is warm,
The fugitive Parthians follow; spur through Media,
Mesopotamia, and the shelters whither
The routed fly: so thy grand captain Antony
Shall set thee on triumphant chariots, and Put garlands on thy head.

O Silius, Silius,
I have done enough: A lower place, note well,
May make too great an act: For learn this, Silius;
Better leave undone, than by our deed acquire
Too high a fame, when he who serves is away.
Cæsar, and Antony, have ever won
More in their officer, than person: Sossilus,
One of my place in Syria, his lieutenant,
For quick accumulation of renown,
Which he achiev'd by the minute, lost his favour.
Who does the wars more than his captain can,
Becomes his captain's captain; and ambition,
The soldier's virtue, rather makes choice of loss,
Than gain, which darkens him.

I could do more to do Antonius good,
But 'twould offend him; and in his offence
Should my performance perish.

Sit. Thou hast, Ventidius,
That without which a soldier, and his sword,
Grants scarce distinction. Thou wilt go to Antony?

Ven. I'll humbly signify what in his name,
That magical word of war, we have effect'd;
How, with his hammers, and his well-paid ranks,
The ne'er-yet-beaten horse of Parthia
We have jaded out of the field.

Sit. Where is he now?

Ven. He purposes to Athens: whither with what haste
The weight we must convey with us permit,
We shall appear before him.—On, there; pass along.

[Exeunt.

Enter Agrippa, and Enobarbus, meeting.

Agr. What, are the brothers parted? [gone;]
Eno. They have despatch'd with Pompey, he is
The other three are sealing. Octavia weeps
To part from Rome: Cæsar is sad; and Lepidus,
Since Pompey's death, as Menas says, is troubled
With the green sickness.

Agr. 'Tis a noble Lepidus.

Eno. A very fine one: O, how he loves Cæsar!
Agr. Nay, but how dearly he adores Mark Antony:

Eno. Spake you of Cæsar? How? the nonparell?

Agr. O Antony! O thou Arabian bird!

Eno. Would you praise Cæsar, say,—Cæsar—go no further.

Agr. Indeed, he ply'd them both with excellent praises.

Eno. But he loves Cæsar best;—Yet he loves Antony: [cannot]

Ho! hearts, tongues, figures, scribes, bards, poets,
Think, speak, cast, write, sing, number, ho, his
To Antony. But as for Cæsar,
[love
Kneel down, kneel down, and wonder.

Agr. Both he loves.

Eno. They are his shards, and he their beetle.
So,—[Trumpets.

This is to horse—Adieu, noble Agrippa.

Agr. Good fortune, worthy soldier; and farewell.

Enter Cæsar, Antony, Lepidus, and Octavia.

Ant. No further, sir.

Ces. You take from me a great part of myself;
Use me well in it.—Sister, prove such a wife
As my thoughts make thee, and as my furthest band
Shall pass on thy approbation.—Most noble Antony,
Let not the piece of virtue, which is set
Betwixt us, as the cement of our love,
To keep it builded, be the ram, to batter
The fortress of it: for better might we
Have loved without this mean, if on both parts
This be not cherish'd.

Ant. Make me not offended
In your distrust.

Ces. I have said.

Ant. You shall not find,
Though you be therein curious, the least cause
For what you seem to fear: So, the gods keep you,
And make the hearts of Romans serve your ends!
We will here part.

Ces. Farewell, my dearest sister, fare thee well;
The elements be kind to thee, and make
Thy spirits all of comfort! fare thee well.

Octa. Sir, look well to my husband's house; and—

What, Octavia?

Ces. I'll tell you in your ear.

Ant. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can
Her heart inform her tongue: the swan's down
That stands upon that well at full of tide, [feather
And neither way inclines.

Eno. Will Cæsar weep? [Aside to Agrippa.

Agr. He has a cloud in his face.

Eno. He were the worse for that, were he a
So is he, being a man. [horse.

Agr. Why, Enobarbus?

When Antony found Julius Cæsar dead,
He cried almost to roaring: and he wept,
When at Philippi he found Brutus slain.

Eno. That year indeed, he was troubled with a Rheum;
What willingly he did confound, he wail'd:
Believe it, till I weep too.

Ces. No, sweet Octavia,
You shall hear from me still; the time shall not Outgo my thinking on you.

Ant. Come, sir, come;
I'll wrestle with you in my strength of love:
Look, here I have you; thus I let you go,
And give you to the gods.

Ces. Adieu; be happy!

Lep. Let all the number of the stars give light
To thy fair way!

Ces. Farewell, farewell! [Kisses Octavia.

Ant. Farewell! [Trumpets sound. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. Where is the fellow?

Alex. Half afraid to come.

Cleo. Go to, go to:—Come hither, sir.

Enter a Messenger.

Alex. Good majesty,
Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you
But when you are well pleas'd.
But Madam, my Thanks Excellent. I most at there. [lady, when She -' Antony's Our JIake Come Madam, [near. Three and She he A The 'Twill Wars What [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The same. Another Room in the same. Enter Enobarbus and Eros, meeting.

Eno. How now, friend Eros? Eros. There's strange news come, sir. Eno. What, man? Eros. Caesar and Lepidus have made wars upon Pompey. Eno. This is old; What is the success? Eros. Caesar, having made use of him in the wars'gainst Pompey, presently denied him rivalry; would not let him partake in the glory of the action; and not resting here, accuses him of letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey; upon his own appeal, seizes him: So the poor third is up, till death enlarge his confines. [more; Eno. The world, thou hast a pair of chaps, no And throw between them all the food thou hast, They'll grind the one the other. Where's Antony? Eros. He's walking in the garden—thus; and spurns. The rush of the lives before him; cries, Fool, Lepidus! And threatsthe throat of that his officer, That murder'd Pompey. Eros. Our great navy's rigged. Got. Eros. For Italy, and Caesar. More, Domitius! My lord desires you presently; my news I might have told hereafter. Got. 'Twill be naught: But let it be.—Bring me to Antony. Eros. Come, sir. [Exeunt.

Ces. Contemning Rome, he has done all this: A And more; In Alexandria—here's the manner of it,— I' the market-place, on a tribunal silver'd, Cleopatra and himself in chairs of gold Were publicly enthron'd: at the feet, sat Cesarean, had they called my father's son; And all the unlawful issue, in their lust Since then hath made between them. Unto her He gave the 'stablishment of Egypt; made her Of lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia, Absolute queen. Ces. This in the publick eye? Ces. 'Tis the common show-place, where they exercise. His sons he there proclaimed, The kings of kings:
Till we perceive 'd, both how you were wrong led, And we in negligent danger. Cheer your heart:
Be you not troubled with the time, which drives
O'er your content these strong necessities;
But let determin'd things to destiny
Hold unbewail'd their way. Welcome to Rome:
Nothing more dear to me. Beyond the mark of thought:
To do you justice, make them ministers
Of us, and those that love you. Best of comfort;
And ever welcome to us.

Each heart in Rome does love and pity you:
Only the adulterous Antony, most large
In his abominations, turns you off;
And gives his potent regiment to a trull,
That noises it against us.
Oct. Is it so, sir? Cas. Most certain. Sister, welcome: Pray you,
Be ever known to patience: My dearest sister!

[Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—Antony's Camp, near to the Promontory of Actium.

Enter Cleopatra and Enobarbus.

Cleo. I will be even with thee, doubt it not.
Eno. But why, why, why? Cleo. Thou hast forspok my being in these wars;
And say'st, it is not fit.
Eno. Well, is it, is it? Cleo. Is't not? Denounce against us, why should
Be there in person? [not we
Eno. [Aside.] Well, I could reply——
If we should serve with horse and mares together,
The horse were merely lost; the mares would bear
A soldier, and his horse.

Cleo. What is't you say?
Eno. Your presence needs must puzzle Antony;
Take from his heart, take from his brain, from his time,
What should not then be spar'd. He is already
Traduc'd for levity; and 'tis said in Rome,
That Phoebus an eunuch, and your maids,
Manage this war.
Cleo. Sink Rome; and their tongues rot,
That speak against us! A charge we bear i'the war,
And, as the president of my kingdom, will Appear there for a man. Speak not against it;
I will not stay behind.
Eno. Nay, I have done:
Here comes the emperor.

Enter Antony and Cædinius.

Ant. Is't not strange, Cædinius, That from Tarentum, and Brundusium,
He could so quickly cut the Ionian sea,
And take in Toreyne?—You have heard on't, sweet?
Cleo. Cælery is never more admired,
Than by the negligent.
Ant. A good rebuke,
Which might have well becom'd the best of men,
To taunt at slackness.—Cædinius, we
Will fight with him by sea.
Cleo. Cædinius' sister! By sea! What else?
Can. Why will my lord do so?
Ant. For he dares us to't.
Eno. So hath my lord dar'd him to single fight.
Can. Ay, and to wage this battle at Pharsalia,
Where Cæsar was fought with Pompey: But these offers,
Which serve not for his vantage, he shakes off;
And so should you.
Eno. Your ships are not well mann'd:
Your mariners are muleteers, reapers, people
Ingres'd by swift impress; In Caesar's fleet
Are those, that often have 'gainst Pompey fought
Their ships are yare; yours, heavy. No disgrace
Shall fall you for refusing him at sea,
Being prepar'd for land.
Ant. By sea, by sea.
Eno. Most worthy sir, you therein throw away
The absolute soldiership you have by land;
Distract your army, which doth most consist
Of war-mark'd footmen: leave unexecuted
Your own renowned knowledge; quite forego
The way which promises assurance; and
Give up yourself merely to chance and hazard,
From firm security.

Ant. I'll fight at sea.

Cleo. I have sixty sails, Caesar none better.
Ant. Our overplus of shipping will we burn;
And, with the rest full-mann'd, from the head of Actium
Beat the approaching Caesar. But if we fail,
Enter a Messenger.

We then can do't at land.—'Tb thy business?
Mess. The news is true, my lord; he is descried;
Cæsar has taken Turyne.
Ant. Can he be there in person? 'tis impossible;
Strange, that his power should be so.—Canidius,
Our nineteen legions thou shalt hold by land,
And our twelve thousand horse:—We'll to our ship;

Enter a Soldier.

Away, my Thetis!—How now, worthy soldier?
Sold. O noble emperor, do not fight by sea;
Trust not to rotten planks: Do you misdoubt
This sword, and these my wounds? Let the Egypt
And the Phœnicians, go a ducksing: we [flans,
Have used to conquer, standing on the earth,
And fighting foot to foot.

Ant. Well, well, away.
[Exeunt Antony, Cleopatra, and Enobarbus.

Sold. By Hercules, I think, I am i'the right.
Can. Soldier, thou art: but his whole action
Not in the power on't: So our leader's led, [grows
And we are women's men.

Ant. You keep by land
The legions and the horse whole, do you not?
Can. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Justeins,
Publicola, and Caecilius, are for sea;
But we keep whole by land. This speed of Caesar's
Carries beyond belief.

Sold. While he was yet in Rome,
His power went out in such distractions, as Beguiled all spies.
Can. Who's his lieutenant, hear you?
Sold. They say, one Taurus.
Can. Well, I know the man.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The emperor calls for Canidius.
Can. 'With news, the time's with labour: and threes forth,
Each minute, some.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—A Plain near Actium.

Enter Caesar, Taurus, Officers, and others.

Cæs. Taurus.—

Taur. My lord.

Cæs. Strike not by land; keep whole;
Provoked not battle, till we have done at sea.
Do not exceed the prescript of this scroll:
Our fortune lies upon this jump.

[Exeunt.

Enter Antony and Enobarbus.

Ant. Set we our squadrons on your side o'the hill,
In eye of Caesar's battle; from which place
We may the number of the ships behold,
And so proceed accordingly.

[Exeunt.

Enter Candins, marching with his land Army one way over the stage; and Taurus, the Lieutenant of Cæsar, the other way. After their going in, is heard the noise of a sea-fight.

Alarum. Re-enter Enobarbus.

Euno. Naught, naught, all naught! I can behold
The Antoniad, the Egyptian admiral, [no longer:
With all their sixty, fly, and turn the rudder;
To see't, mine eyes are hlasted.

Enter Scars.

Gods, and goddesses,
All the whole synod of them!

Euno. What's thy passion?

Scars. The greater castle of the world is lost
With very ignorance; we have kiss'd away
Kingdoms and provinces.

Euno. How appears the fight?

Scars. On our side like the toker's pestilence,
Where death doth smite. Von'ribal-rid nag of Egypt,
Whom leprosy o'ertake! 'tis the midit o' the fight.—
When vantage like a pair of twins appear'd,
Both as the same, or rather ours the elder,
The brize upon her, like a cow in June,
Hoists sails, and flies.

Euno. That I beheld: mine eyes
Did sicken at the sight on't, and could not Endure a further view.

Scars. She once being loof'd,
The noble ruin of her magic, Antony,
Claps on his sea-wing, and like a dotting mallard
Leaving the fight in height, flies after her:
I never saw an action of such shame;
Experience, manhood, honour, ne'er before
Did violate so itself.

Euno. Alack, alack!

Enter Canidius.

Can. Our fortune on the sea is out of breath;
And sinks most lamentably. Had our general
Been what he knew himself, it had gone well:
O, he has given example for our flight,
Most grossly, by his own. [night
Euno. Ay, are you thereabouts? Why then, good
Indeed.

Can. Towards Peloponnese are they fled.
Scars. 'Tis easy to't; and there I will attend
What further comes.

Can. To Caesar will I render
My legions, and my horse; six kings already
Show me the way of yielding.

Euno. I'll yet follow
The wounded chance of Antony, though my reason
Sits in the wind against me.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IX.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antony and Attendants.

Ant. Hark, the land bids me tread no more upon't,
It is asham'd to bear me!—Friends, come hither,
I am so lated in the world, that I
Have lost my way for ever:—I have a ship
 Laden with gold; take that, divide it; fly,
And make your peace with Caesar. Fly! I not we;
Ant. I have fled myself; and have instructed
Cowards [gone;
To run, and show their shoulders.—Friends, be
I have myself resolv'd upon a course,
Which has no need of you; be gone:
My treasure's in the harbour, take it.—O,
I follow'd that I blush to look upon:
My very hairs do mutiny; for the white
Reprove the brown for rashness, and they them
For fear and doting.—Friends, be gone; you shall Have letters from me to some friends, that will Sweep your way for you. Pray you, look not sad,
Nor make replies of loathness: take the hint
Which my despair proclaims; let that be left
Which leaves itself; to the sea side straightway:
I will possess you of that ship and treasure.
Leave me, I pray, a little; 'pray you now:—
Nay, do so; for, indeed, I have lost command,
Therefore I pray you—I'll see you by and by.

[Sit down.

Enter Eros and Cleopatra, led by Charmian and Iris.

Eros. Nay, gentle madam, to him—Comfort
him.

Or take his life there: This if she perform,
She shall not sue unheard. So to them both.

Eup. Fortune pursue thee!

Cas. Bring him through the bands.

To try thy eloquence, now 'tis time: Despatch.
From Antony win Cleopatra: promise,

[To Thyeus.

And in our name, what she requires: add more,
From thine invention, offers: women are not,
In their best fortunes, strong; but want will perjure

Thyr.

Cleo. Observe how Antony becomes his faw;
And what thou think'st his very action speaks
In every power that moves.

Thyr. Caesar, I shall. [Exeunt.

SCENE XI.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Charmian, and Iras.

Cleo. What shall we do, Enobarbus?

Eno. Think, and die.

Cleo. Is Antony, or we, in fault for this?

Eno. Antony only, that would make his will Lord of his reason. What although you fleed
From that great face of war, whose several ranges
Frighted each other? why should he follow?
The itch of his affection should not then
Have nick'd his captainship; at such a point,
When half to half the world oppos'd, he being
The mered question: "I was a shame no less
Than was his loss, to course your flying flags,
And leave his navy sailing.

Cleo. Pr'ythee, peace.

Enter Antony, with Euphranous.

Ant. Is this his answer?

Eup. Ay, my lord.

Ant. The queen

Shall then have courtesy, so she will yield
Us up.

Eup. He says so.

Ant. Let her know it.

To the boy Caesar send this grizzled head,
And he will fill thy wishes to the brim
With principalities.

Cleo. That head, my lord?

Ant. To him again: Tell him, he wears the rose
Of youth upon him; from which, the world should Note

Something particular: his coin, ships,legions,
May be a coward's; whose ministers would prevail
Under the service of a child, as soon.
As 1 the command of Caesar: I care him therefore
To lay his gay comparisons apart,
And answer me declin'd, sword against sword,
Ourselves alone: 1'll write it; follow me.

[Exeunt. Antony and Euphranous.

Eno. Yes, like enough, high-battled Caesar will Unstate his happiness, and be stag'd to the show,
Against a swordsman.—I see, men's judgments are
A parcel of their fortunes; and things outward
Do draw the inward quality after them.
To suffer all alike. That he would dream,
Knowing all measures, the full Caesar will Answer his emptiness!—Caesar, thou hast subdued
His judgment too.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. A messenger from Caesar.
Cleo. What, no more ceremony?—See, my women!—Against the blown rose may they stop their nose, That kneel'd unto the hinds.—Admit him, sir. Eno. Mine honesty, and I, begin to square. [Aside.

The loyalty, well held to fools, does make Our faith more folly:—Yet, he, that can endure To follow with allegiance a fallen lord, Does conqu'rs him that did his master conquer, And earns a place it the story.

Enter Thuryes.

Cleo. Caesar's will?
Thyr. Hear it apart.
Cleo. None but friends; say boldly.
Thyr. So—thy friends to Antony, Eno. He needs as many, sir, as Caesar has; Or needs not us. If Caesar please, our master Will leap to be his friend: For us, you know, Whose he is, we are; and that's, Caesar's.

Thyr. Thus then, thou most renown'd; Caesar entreats, Not to consider in what case thou stand'st, Further than he is Caesar.

Cleo. Go on: Right royal. Thyr. He knows, that you embrace not Antony As you did love, but as you fear'd him.
Cleo. O! Thyr. The scars upon your honour, therefore, he Does pity, as constrained blemishes, Not as deser'd.
Cleo. He is a god, and knows What is most right: Mine honour was not yield'd, But conquer'd merely.

Eno. To be sure of that, [Aside.
I will ask Antony.—Sir, sir, thou'rt so leaky, That we must leave thee to thy sinking, for Thy dearest quitt thee.

[Exit Enobarbus. Thyr. Shall I say to Caesar What you require of him? for he partly begs To be desired to give. It much would please him, That of his fortunes you should make a staff To lean upon: but it would warm his spirits, To hear from me you had left Antony, And put yourself under his shrowd, The universal landlord.

Cleo. What's your name?
Cleo. Thy name is Thuryes.

Eno. Most kind messenger, Say to great Caesar this, In disputation I kiss his conqu'ring hand: tell him, I am prompt To lay my crown at his feet, and there to kneel; Tell him, from his all-obeying breath I hear The doom of Egypt.

Thyr. "Tis your noblest course. Wisdom and fortune combining together, If that the former dare but what it can, No chance may shake it. Give me grace to lay My duty on your hand.

Your Caesar's father
Oh, when he hath m'sd of taking kingdoms in, Bestow'd his lips on that unworthy place, As it rain'd kisses.

Re-enter Antony and Enobarbus.

Ant. Favours, by Jove that thunder's!—What art thou, fellow?—
Thyr. One, that bnt performeth The bidding of the fullest man, and worthiest To have command obey'd.

Eno. Approach, there:—Ay, you kile!—Now gods and devils!

Authority melts from me; Of late, when I cry'd, ho! Like boys unto a musk, kings would start forth, And cry, Your will? Have you no ears? I am

Enter Attendants.

Antony yet. Take hence this Jack, and whip him.
Eno. 'Tis better playing with a lion's whelp, Than with an old one dying.

Ant. Moon and stars! Whip him:—Were't twenty of the greatest tributaries, That do acknowledge Caesar, should I find them So sanguy with the hand of she here, (What's her name, Since she was Cleopatra?)—Whip him, fellows, Till, like a boy, you see him cringe his face, And whine aloud for mercy: Take him hence. Thyr. Mark Antony,

Ant. Tug him away: being whipp'd, Bring him again:—This Jack of Caesar's shall Bear us an errand to him.

[Exit Attend. with Thuryes.

Ant. You were half bled ere I knew you.—Ha! Have I my pillow left unpress'd in Rome, Forborne the getting of a lawful race, And by a stem of women, to be abus'd By one that looks on feeders? Good my lord,—

Ant. You have been a hogger ever:— But when we in our vicious grow hard, (O misery on't!) the wise gods send our eyes; In our own filth drop our clear judgments; make Adore our errors; laugh at us, while we strut [as To our confusion.

Ant. O, is it come to this?
Ant. I found you as a morsel, cold upon Dead Caesar's trencher: nay, you were a fragment Of Cneius Pompey's; besides what hotter hours, Unregister'd in vulgar fame, you have Luxuriously pick'd off:—For, I am sure, Though you can guess what temperance should be, You know not what it is.

Cleo. Wherefore is this?
Ant. To let a fellow that will take rewards, And say, God quit you! be familiar with My most low, your hand; this kingly seal, And plighter of high hearts:—O, that I were Upon the hill of Basan, to outstrip The horned herd! for I have savage cause; And to proclaim it civilly, were like A halter'd neck, which does the hangman thank For being yare about him:—is he whipp'd?

Re-enter Attendants, with Thuryes.

1 Att. Soundly, my lord.
Ant. 'Tis he? and begg'd he pardon?
Ant. If that thy father live, let him repent Thou wast not made his daughter; and be thou To follow Caesar in his triumph, since [sorry Thou hast been whipp'd for following him: hence The white fellow of a lady fever thee, [forth, Shake thou to look on!—Get thee back to Caesar, Tell him thy entertainment: Look, thou say, He makes me angry with him: for he seems Proud and disdainful; harping on what I am; Not what he knew I was: He makes me angry; And at this time most easy 'tis to do'; When my good stars, that were my former guides, Have empty left their orbs, and shot their fires Into the asham of hell. If he mislike My speech, and what is done; tell him, he has Hipped me and my stand for enfranchis'd beams, whom He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture, As he shall like, to quiet me: Urge it thou: Hence, with thy stripes, begone. [Exit Thuryes. Cleo. Have you done yet?

Ant. Alack, our terrerene moon is now eclips'd; and it portends alone The fall of Antony!

Cleo. And, to flatter Caesar, would you mingle eyes With one that ties his points?
Cleo. Not know me yet?
Ant. Cold-hearted toward me?
Cleo. Ah, dear, if I be so, From my cold heart let her own engender hail, And poison it in the source; and the first stone Drop in my neck: as it determines, so Dissolve my life! The next Caesarion smite!
Till, by degrees, the memory of my womb,
Together with my brave Egyptians all,
By the discarding of this pelleted storm,
Lie groansless; till the flies and gnats of Nile
Have buried them for prey!

Ant. I am satisfied. Caesar sits down in Alexandria; where
I will oppose his fate. Our force by land
Hath nobly held; our sead'ry now too [like.
Have knok again, and fleet, threating'nest sea.-
Where hast thou been, my heart? - Dost thou hear,
If from the field I shall return once more [lady?
To kiss these lips, I will appear in blood;
I am my sword will earn our chronicle;
There is hope in it yet.

Cleo. That's my brave lord! Ant. I will be treble-sinew'd, hearted, breath'd,
And fight maliciously: for when mine hours
 Were nice and lucky, men did ransom lives
Of me for jests; but now, I'll set my teeth,
And send to darkness all that stop me.—Come,
Let's have one of these other gaudy night: call to me
All my sad captains, fill our bowls; once more
Let's mock the midnight bell.
Cleo. It is my birth-day: I had thought, to have held it poor; but, since my
Is Antony again, I will be Cleopatra. [lord
Ant. We'll yet do well.
Cleo. Call all his noble captains to my lord.
Ant. Do so, we'll speak to them; and to-night
I'll force [queen;
The wine peer through their scars.—Come on, my There's sap in't yet. The next time I do fight,
I'll make death love me; for I will contend
Even with his pestilest scythe.
[Exit Antony, Cleopatra, and Attendants.
Eno. Now he'll out-stare the lightning. To be furious.
Is, to be frighted out of fear: and in that mood,
The dove will peck the estridge; and I see still,
A diminution in our captain's brain
Restores his heart: When valour preys on reason,
It eats the sword it fights with. I will seek
Some way to leave him.
[Exit.}

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Caesar's Camp at Alexandria.

Enter Caesar, reading a letter: Agrippa, Mecænas, and others.

Cas. He calls me boy; and chides, as he had
To beat me out of Egypt: my messenger [power
He hath whipp'd with rods; dares me to personal combat,
Caesar to Antony: Let the old ruffian know,
I have many other ways to die; mean time,
Laugh at his challenge. Caesar must think,
When one so great begins to rage, he's hunted
Even to falling. Give him no breath, but now
Make boot of his distraction: Never anger
Made good guard for itself.

Cas. Let our best heads
Know, that to-morrow the last of many battles
We mean to fight:—Within our files there are
Of those that serv'd Mark Antony but late,
Enough to fetch him in. See it be done:
And feast the army: we have store to do't,
And they have earn'd the waste. Poor Antony! [Exit.

SCENE II.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antony, Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Charmian,
Iras, Alexas, and others.

Ant. He will not fight with me, Domitius.
Eno. No.
Ant. Why should he not? Eno. He thinks, being twenty times of better
He is twenty men to one. [fortune,
SCENE IV.—The same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antony and Cleopatra; Charmian, and others, attending.

Ant. Eros! mine armour, Eros! Cleo. Sleep a little. Ant. No, my chuck. Eros, come; mine armour, Eros!

Enter Eros, with armour. Come, my good fellow, put thine iron on:—If fortune be not ours to-day, it is Because we brave her.—Come.

Cleo. What's this for?

Ant. Ah, let be, let be! thou art The armourer of my heart;—False, false; this, this. Cleo. Sooth, Ia, I'll help: Thus it must be.

Ant. Well, well: We shall thrive now.—Seest thou, my good fellow? Go, put on thy defences.

Eros. Briefly, sir. Cleo. Is not this buckled well?

Ant. Rarely, rarely; He that unbucks this, till we do please To doff't for our repose, shall hear a storm.—Thou fumbliest, Eros; and my queen's a squire More tight at this, than thou: Despatch. —O love, That thou could'st see my wars to-day, and knew'st The royal occupation! thou should'st see Enter an Officer, armed. A workman't.—Good morrow to thee; welcome: Thou look'st like him that knows a warlike charge: To business that we love, we rise betime, And go to it with delight.

1 Off. A thousand, sir, Early though it be, have on their riveted trim, And at the port expect you.

[Shout. Trumpets. Flourish.]

Enter other Officers, and Soldiers.

2 Off. The morn is fair. Good morrow, general. All. Good morrow, general. Ant. 'Tis well blown, lads. This morning, like the spirit of a youth That means to be of note, begins betimes.—So, so; come, give me that: this way; well said. Fare thee well, dame, what'ers becomes of me: This is a soldier's kiss: it saves, to stand On more mechanic compliment; I'll leave thee Now, like a man of steel,—You, that will fight, Follow me close; I'll bring you to't.—Adieu.

[Exit Antony, Eros, Officers, and Solders.]

Char. Please you, retire to your chamber? Cleo. Lead me. He goes forth gallantly. That he and Caesar might Determine this great war in single fight!

Then, Antony,—But now,—Well, on.

SCENE V.—Antony's Camp near Alexandria.

Trumpets sound. Enter Antony and Eros; a Soldier meeting them.

Sold. The gods make this a happy day to Antony! Ant. 'Would, thou and those thy scars had once To make me fight at land! [prevail'd]

Sold. Had'st thou done so, The kings that have revolted, and the soldier That has this morning left thee, would have still Follow'd th'heels.

Ant. Who's gone this morning? Who?

One ever near thee: Call for Enobarbus; He shall not hear thee; or from Caesar's camp Say, I am none of thine.

Ant. What say'st thou?

Sold. He is with Caesar. Eros. Sir, his chest and treasure He has not with him.

Ant. Is he gone?

Sold. Go, Eros, send his treasure after; do it; Detain no jot, I charge thee: write to him (I will subscribe) gentle adiues, and greetings: Say, that I wish he never find more cause To change a master.—O, my fortunes have Corrupted honest men:—Eros, despatch. [Exit.

SCENE VI.—Cæsar's Camp before Alexandria.

Flourish. Enter Cæsar, with Agrippa, Enobarbus, and others.

Cæs. Go forth, Agrippa, and begin the fight, Our will is, Antony be taken alive; Make it so known.

Agri. Cæsar, I shall. [Exit Agrippa and others. The time of universal peace is near: Prove this a prosperous day, the three-nook'd world Shall bear the olive freely.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Antony Is come into the field. Cæs. Go, charge Agrippa: Plant those that have revolted in the van, That Antony may seem to spend his fury Upon himself. [Exit Caesar and his Train. Eros. Alexander did revolt; and went to Jewry, On affairs of Antony; there did persuade Great Herod to incline himself to Cæsar, And leave his master Antony; for this pains, Cæsar hath hang'd him. Cambidus, and the rest That fell away, have entertainment, but No honourable trust. I have done ill; Of which I do accuse myself so sorely, That I will joy no more.

Enter a Soldier of Cæsar's.

Sold. Enobarbus, Antony Hath after thee sent all thy treasure, with His bounty overplus: The messenger Came on my guard; and at thy tent is now, Unloading of his mules.

Eros. I give it you.

Sold. Mock me not, Enobarbus. I tell you true: Best that you sa'ld the bringer Out of the host; I must attend mine office, Or would have done't myself. Your emperor Continues still a Jove. [Exit Soldier. Eros. I am alone the villain of the earth, And feel I am so most. O Antony Thou mine of bounty, how would'st thou have paid My better service, when my turpitude [heart: Thou dost so crown with gold! This blows my I swift thought break it not, a swifter mean Shall destroy thought: but thought will do'st, I I fight against thee!—No: I will go seek Some ditch, wherein to die; the foul'st best fits My latter part of life. [Exit
SCENE VII.—Field of Battle between the Camps.

Alarum. Drums and trumpets. Enter Agrippa, and others.

Ag. Retire, we have engaged ourselves too far: Caesar himself has work, and our oppression exceeds what we expected. [Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter Antony and Scarsus, soundly.

Scar. O my brave emperor, this is fought indeed! Had we done so at first, we had driven them home With clouts about their heads.

Ant. Thou bleed'st apace. Scar. I had a wound here that was like a T, But now 'tis made an H.

Ant. They do retire.

Scar. We'll beat 'em into bench-holes; I have Room for six, and the rest on.

[Yet Enter Eros.

Eros. They are beaten, sir; and our advantage For a fair victory.

[Servants present.

Ant. Let us score their backs, and snatch 'em up, as we take hares, behind; 'Tis sport to mail a runner.

Ant. I will reward thee Once for thy sprightly comfort, and ten-fold For so good a valour. Come, have thy way.

Scar. I'll hail after. [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—Under the Walls of Alexandria.

Alarum. Enter Antony, marching; Scarsus, and Forces.

Ant. We have beat him to his camp; Run one before,

[Row, And let the queen know of our guests.—To-morrow Before the sun shall see us, we'll spill the blood That has to-day escap'd. I thank you all; For doughty-handed are you; and have fought Not as you serv'd the cause, but as it had been Each man's like mine; you have shown all Hectors. Enter the city, clog your wives, your friends, Tell them your feats; whilst they with joyful tears Wash the congealment from your wounds, and Kiss the honour'd gashes whole.—Give me thy hand: [To Scarsus.

Enter Cleopatra, attended.

To this great fairy I'll commend thy acts, [world, Make her thanks bless thee.—O thou day o' the Chain mine arm'd neck; leap thou, attire and all, Through proof of harness to my heart, and there Ride on the pants triumphant.

Cleo. Lord of lords! O infinite virtue! com'st thou smiling from The world's great snare uncaught?

Ant. My nightingale, We have beat them to their beds. What, girl? though grey, Do something mingle with our brown; yet have we A brain that nourishes our nerves, and can Get goal for goal of youth. Behold this man; Command unto his lips thy favouring hand; — Kiss it, my warrior;—He hath fought to-day, As if a god, in hate of mankind, had Destroy'd in such a shape.

Cleo. I'll give thee, friend, An armour all of gold; it was a king's.

Ant. he has deserved it, were it carbuncled Like holy Phoebus' car.—Give me thy hand; Through Alexandria make a jolly march; Bear our hack'd targets like the men that owe Had our great palace the capacity [them: To camp this host, we all would sup together, And drink carouses to the next day's fate, Which promises royal peril.—Trumpeters, With brazen din blast you the city's ear; Make mingle with our rattling tabourines; That heaves and earth may strike their sounds to- gether, Applauding our approach. [Exeunt.

SCENE IX.—Caesar's Camp.

Sentinels on their post. Enter Enobarbus.

1 Sold. If we be not reliever'd within this hour, We must return to the court of guard; The night Is shiny; and, they say, we shall embattle By the second hour! the morn.

2 Sold. This last day was A shrewd one to us.

Eno. O, bear me witness, night,—

3 Sold. What man is this?—

2 Sold. Stand close, and list to him.

Eno. Be witness to me, O thou blessed moon, When men revolted shall upon record Hear hateful memory, poor Enobarbus did Before thy face repent!—

1 Sold. Enobarbus! Peace;

3 Sold. Hark further.

Eno. O sovereign mistress of true melancholy, The poisonous damp of night dispone upon me; That life, a very rebel to my will, May hang no longer on me: Throw my heart Against the flint and hardness of my fault; Which, being dried with grief, will break to pow, And finish all foul thoughts. O Antony, [der, Nobler than my revolt is infamous, Forgive me in thine own particular; But let the world rank me in register A master-leaver, and a fugitive: O Antony! O Antony! [Dies.

2 Sold. Let's speak To him.

1 Sold. Let's hear him, for the things he speaks May concern Caesar.

3 Sold. Let's do so. But he sleeps.

1 Sold. Swoons rather; for so bad a prayer as his Was never yet for sleeping.

2 Sold. Go to him.

3 Sold. Awake, awake, sir; speak to us.

2 Sold. Hear you, sir?—

1 Sold. The hand of death hath raught him.

Hark, the drums. [Drums after off. Demurely wake the sleepers. Let us bear him To the court of guard; he is of note; our hour Is fully out.

3 Sold. Come on, then;

Hark he may recover yet. [Exeunt with the body.

SCENE X.—Between the two Camps.

Enter Antony and Scarsus, with Forces marching.

Ant. Their preparation is to-day by sea; We please them not by land.

Scar. But for both, my lord.

Ant. I would, they'd fight! the fire, or in the air; We'd fight there too. But this it is; Our foot Upon the hills adjoining to the city, Shall stay with us; order for sea is given; They have put forth the haven: Further on, Where their appointment we may best discover, And look on their endeavour. [Exeunt.

Enter Caesar, and his Forces marching.

Ces. But being charg'd, we will be still by land, Which, as I take't, we shall; for his best force Is forth to man his gallies. To the vales, And hold our best advantage. [Exeunt.

Re-enter Antony and Scarsus.

Ant. Yet they're not join'd? Where yonder pine does stand, I shall discover all; I'll bring thee word Straight, how 'tis like to go. [Exit.

Scar. Swallows have built In Cleopatra's sails their nests: the augurers Say, they know not,—they cannot tell:—look grily, And dare not speak their knowledge. Antony Is valiant and dejected: and, by starts, His fretted fortunes give him hope, and fear, Of what he has, and has not.
Antony. All is lost; This foul Egyptian hath betrayed me: My fleet hath yielded to the foe; and yonder They cast their caps up, and close together Like friends long lost.—Triple-turn'd whore tis Hast told me to this novice; and my heart [thou Makes only wars on thee.—Bid them all fly; For when I am reveng'd upon my charm, I have done all.—Bid them all fly, be gone. [Exeunt Scarsus. O sun, thy rise shall I see no more; Fortune and Antony part here; even here Do we shake hands.—All come to this?—The hearts is That spaniel'd me at heels, to whom I gave Their blessings, do discandy, melt their sweets On blossoming Caesar; and this pine is bark'd, That overtopp'd them all. Betray'd I am: O this false soul of Egypt! this grave charm, Whose eye beck'd forth my wars, and call'd them home; Whose bosom was my crownet, my chief end, Like a right gipsy, hath, at fast and loose, Replied to the very heart of loss.— What, Eros, Eros! Enter Cleopatra. Ah, thou spell! Avaunt. Cleo. Why is my lordungen'd against his love? Ant. Vanish; or I shall give thy thy deserving, And blemish Caesar's triumph. Let him take thee, And hoist thee up to the shouting plebeians: Follow his chariot, like the greatest spot Of all the sex; monster-like, be shown For poor'st diminutives, to do'st; And let Patient Octavia plough thy visage up With her prepared nails. [Exeunt Cleo.] 'Tis well thou'rt gone, If it be well to live; But better 'twere Thou fell'st into my fury, for one death Might have prevented many.—Eros, ho! The shirt of Nessus is upon me: Teach me, Alcides, thou mine ancestor, thy rage: Let me lodge Lichas on the horns o'the moon; And with these hands, that grasp'd the highest club, Subdue my worthiest rival. The witch shall die; To the Roman hoy she hath sold me, and I fall Under this plot: she dies for't.—Eros, ho! [Exeunt.] SCENE XI.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace. Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Mardian. Cleo. Help me, my women! O, he is more mad Than Telamon for his shield; the boar of Thessaly Was never so emboss'd. Char. To the monument; There lock yourself, and send him word you are The soul and body rive not more in parting; [dead. Than greatness going off. Cleo. To the monument:— Mardian, go tell him I have slain myself; Say that the last I spoke was, Antony, And word it piteously: Hence, Mardian; and bring me how he takes my death.— To the monument. [Exeunt.] SCENE XII.—The same. Another Room. Enter Antony and Eros. Ant. Eros, thou yet behold'st me? Eros. Ay, my lord. Ant. That is now a horse, even with a thought, The rack dislimns; and makes it indistinct, As water is in water. Eros. It does, my lord. Ant. My good knave, Eros, now thy captain is Even such a body: here I am Antony; Yet cannot hold this visible shape, my knave, I made these wars for Egypt; and the queen,— Whose heart, I thought, I had, for she had mine; Which, whilst it was mine, had annex't unto A million more, now lost,—she, Eros, has Pack'd cards with Caesar, and false play'd my glory Unto an enemy's triumph. Nay, weep not, gentle Eros; there is left us Ourselves to end ourselwes.—O, thy vile lady! Enter Mardian. She has robb'd me of my sword. No, Antony; My mistress love'd thee, and her fortunes mingled With thine entirely. Ant. Hence, sancy emmich; peace; She hath betray'd me, and shall die the death. Mar. Death of one person can be paid but once, And that she has discharge'd: but thou wouldst be Is done unto thy hand; the last she spake [do, Was, Antony! most noble Antony! Then in the midst a tearing groan did break The name of Antony; it was divided Between her heart and lips; she render'd life, Thy name so buried in her. Ant. Dead then? Mar. Dead. Eros, unarm, the long day's task is done, And we must sleep.—That thou depart'st hence safe, Does pay thy labour richly; Go.—Off, pluck off;— [Exeunt Mardian. The seven-fold shield of Ajax cannot keep The battery from my heart. O, cleave, my sides! Heart, once be stronger than thy continent. Crack thy frail case!—Apace, Eros, apace. No more a soldier:—Bruised pieces, go; You have been nobly borne. From me a while. [Exeunt Eros. I will o'ertake thee, Cleopatra, and Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for now All length is torture:—Since the torch is out, Lie down, and stray no further: Now all labour Many are the woes; yea, very woes; I will Itself with strength; Seal then, and all is done.— Eros! I come, my queen.—Eros!—Stay for me: Where souls do couch on flowers, we'll hand in hand, And with our sprightly port make the ghosts gaze: Dido and her Aeneas shall want troops, And all the haunt be ours.—Come, Eros, Eros! Re-enter Eros. Eros. What would my lord? Ant. Since Cleopatra died, I have liv'd in such dishonour, that the gods Detest my baseness. I, that with my sword Quarrel't the world, and o'er green Neptune's back With ships made cities, condemn myself, to lack The courage of a woman; less noble mind Than she, which, by her death, our Caesar tells, I am conqueror of myself. Thou art sworn, Eros, That, when the exigent should come, (which now Is come, indeed,) when I should see behind me The inevitable prosecution of Disgrace and horror, that, on my command, Thou then would'st kill me; do't; the time is Thou strik'st not me, 'tis Caesar thou defeat'st. Put colour in thy cheek. Eros. The gods withhold me Shall I do that, which all the Parthian darts, Though enemy, lost aim, and could not? Ant. Eros,
Wouldst thou be window'd in great Rome, and see
Thy master thus with pleas'd arm's, bending down
His corrigible neck, his face subdue'd
To penetrative shame; whilst the wheel'd seat
Of fortunate Caesar, drawn before him, branded
His baseness that ensued?

Eros. I would not see't.

Ant. Come then; for with a wound I must be cur'd.

Draw that thy honest sword, which thou hast worn
Most useful for thy country.

Eros. O, sir, pardon me.

Ant. When I did make thee free, swear'st thou
Not to do this when I bade thee? Do it at once;
Or thy precedent services are all
But accidents unpurpo'd. Draw, and come.

Eros. Turn from me then that noble countenance,
Wherein the worship of the whole world lies.

Ant. Then let it do at once

The thing why thou hast drawn it.

Eros. My dear master,
My captain, and my emperor; let me say,
Before I strike this bloody stroke, farewell.
Ant. 'Tis said, man;—and farewell.

Eros. Farewell, great chief. Shall I strike now?

Ant. No, Eros.

Eros. Why, there then. [Pulling on his sword.

Thus do I escape the sorrow
Of Antony's death.

[Dies.

Ant. Thrice nobler than myself! Thou teachest me, O valiant Eros, what [Eros I should, and thou couldst not. My queen and Have, by their brave instruction, got upon me
A nobleness in record: But I will be
A bridegroom in my death, and run into't
As to a lover's bed. Come then; and, Eros,
Thy master dies thy scholar; to do thus [Putting on his sword.

I learn'd of thee. How I not yet dead? not dead?—
The guard!—ho!—O, despatch me.

Enter Dercetas and guard.

1 Guard. What's the noise? Ant. I have done my work ill, friends; O, make
Of what I have begun. [an end

2 Guard. The star is fallen.

1 Guard. And time is at his period.

2 Guard. Alas, and woe! Ant. Let him that loves me, strike me dead.

1 Guard. Not I.

2 Guard. Nor I.

3 Guard. Nor any one. [Exeunt Guard.

Der. Thy death and fortunes bid thy followers fly.
This sword but shown to Caesar, with this tidings,
Shall enter me with him.

Enter Diomedes.

Dis. Where's Antony?

Der. There, Diomed, there.

Ant. Art thou there, Diomed? Draw thy sword,
Sufficing strokes for death.

Dis. Most absolute lord,
My mistress Cleopatra sent me to thee.

Ant. When did she send thee?

Dis. Now, my lord.

Ant. Where is she?

Dis. Lock'd in her monument. She had a prophesy'g fear
Of what hath come to pass; for when she saw
(Which never shall be found,) you did suspect
She had dispos'd with Caesar, and that your rage
Would not be purg'd, she sent you word she was dead;
But, fearing since how it might work, hath sent
Me to proclaim the truth; and I am come,
I dread, too late.

Ant. Too late, good Diomed.—Call my guard,
I pr'ythee.

Dis. What, ho! the emperor's guard! The Come, your lord calls. [guard, what, ho! Enter some of the Guard.

Ant. Bear me, good friends, where Cleopatra bides;
'Tis the last service that I shall command you.
1 Guard. Woe are we, sir, you may not live to
All your true followers out.

[wear All. Most heavy day! Ant. Nay, good my fellows, do not please sharp fate
To grace it with your sorrows: bid that welcome Which comes to punish us, and we punish it;
'Tis pleasing to hear it lightly. 'Take me up!' I have led you oft; carry me now, good friends,
And have my thanks for all.

[Exeunt, bearing Antony. SCENE XIII. The same. A Monument.

Enter above, Cleopatra, Charmian, and Iras.

Cleo. O Charmian, I will never go from hence. Char. Be comforted, dear madam.

Cleo. I strike. No, I will not
All strange and terrible events are welcome,
But comforts we despise; our size of sorrow,
Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great Enter Diomedes.

As that which makes it.—How now? is he dead? Dis. His death's upon him, but not dead.

Look out o' the other side your monument,
His guard have brought him thither.

Enter Antony, borne by the Guard.

Cleo. O thou sun
Burn the great sphere thou mov'st in!—darkling stand The varying shore o'the world!—O Antony! Antony, Antony!—Charmian, help; help, Iras; Help, friends below; let's draw him hither.

Ant. Peace Not Caesar's valour hath o'erthrown Antony, But Antony's hath triumphed on itself.

Cleo. So it should be, that none but Antony Should conquer Antony; but woe 'tis so!

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying; only
I here impart a truth a while, until
Of many thousand kisses the poor last
I lay upon thy lips.—

Cleo. I dare not, dear (Dear my lord, pardon,) I dare not, Lest I be taken: not the imperious show Of the full-fur'nd Caesar ever shall Be brooch'd with me; if knife, drugs, serpents, Edge, sting, or operation, I am safe: [have Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes, And still conclusion, shall acquire no honour Demurring upon me. But come, come, Antony,— Help me, my women,—we must draw thee up,— Assist, good friends.

Ant. O, quick, or I am gone. Cleo. Here's sport, indeed!—How heavy weigh Our strength is all gone into heaviness, [my lord! That makes the weight: Had I great Juno's power, The strong-wing'd Mercury should fetch thee up, And set thee by Jove's side. Yet come a little,— Wishes were ever fools;—O, come, come, come; [They draw Antony up. And welcome, welcome! die, where thou hast liv'd; Quicken with kissing; had my lips that power, Thus would I wear them out.

Ant. A heavy sight! Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying; Give me some wine, and let me speak a little.

Cleo. No, let me speak; and let me rail so high, That the false housewife Fortune break her wheel, Provok'd by my offence. 2 S
And. One word, sweet queen:
Of Caesar seek your honour, with your safety—O—!
Cle. They do not go together.
And. Gentile, hear me
None about Caesar's trust, but Proculeius.
Cle. My resolution, and my hands, I'll trust;
None about Caesar.
And. The miserable change now at my end,
Lament nor sorrow at; but please your thoughts,
In feeding them with those my former fortunes
Wherein I liv'd, the greatest prince of the world,
The noblest; and do now not basely die,
Nor cowardly; put off my helmet to
My triumvir, a Roman, by a Roman Violently vanquish'd. Now, my spirit is going;
I can no more. [Dies.
Cle. Noblest of men, woot dle?
Hat thou no care of me? shall I abide
In this dull world, which in thy absence is
No better than a sty?—O, see my women,
The crown o' the earth doth melt,—My lord!—
O, wither'd is the garland of the war,
The soldier's pole is fallen; young boys, and girls,
Are level now with men; the gods are gone,
And there is nothing left remarkable.
Beneath the visiting moon. [She faints.
Char. O, quietness, lady! I
Iras. She is dead too, our sovereign.
Cle. Lady. Madam,
Iras. O madam, madam, madam! I
Empress!
Cle. Peace, peace, Iras.
Cle. No more, but e'en a woman; and com-
By such poor passion as the maid that milks,
And does the meanest charies. It were for me
To throw my scepter at the injurious gods;
To tell them, that this world did equal theirs,
Till they had stolen our jewel. All's but naught;
Patience is sottish; and impatience
Does become a dog that's mad: Then is it sin,
To rush into the secret house of death,
ERE death dare come to us?—How do you, women?
What, what? good cheer! Why, bow now, Chamrian?
My noble girls!—Ah, women, women I look,
Our lamp is spent, it's out.—Good sirs, take
The guard, and keep—[To the Guard.
We'll bury him: and then, what's brave, what's
Let's do it after the high Roman fashion, [noble,
And make death proud to take us. Come, away;
This case of that huge spirit now is cold.
Ah, women, women I come; we have no friend
But resolution, and the briefest end.
[Exeunt; those above bearing off Antony's body.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Caesar's Camp before Alexandria.

Enter Caesar, Agrippa, Dolabella, Mecenæus, Gal-lius, Proculeius, and others.

Caes. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield;
Being so frustrate, tell him, be mocks us by
The pauses that he makes.

Dol. Caesar, I shall. [Exit Dolabella.

Enter Dercetas, with the sword of Antony.

Caes. Wherefore is that? and what art thou, that Appear thus to us? [dare's

I am call'd Dercetas;
Mark Antony I serv'd, who best was worthy
Best to be serv'd; whilst he stood up, and spoke,
He was my master; and I wore my life,
To spend-upon his haters: if thou please
To take me to thee, as I was to him.
I'll be to Caesar; if thou pleasest not,
I yeld thee up my life.

Caes. What is't thou say'st?
Antony. Pray, hold, and rather Proculeius, realms so, gentle what's though they which if in hear and what, yet, for, rise, be which I'll do of my blow I'll once are never given kneel'd him sweet have him comfort have, that will, pray in aid for kindness, where he for grace is kneel'd to.

Cleo. [Within.] Pray you, tell him I am his fortune's vassal, and I send him the greatness he has got. I hourly learn a doctrine of obedience; and would gladly look him in the face.

Pro. This I'll report, dear lady. Have comfort; for, I know, your plight is pitied of him that caus'd it.

God. You see how easily she may be surpriz'd; [Here Proculeius, and two of the Guard, ascend the Monument by a ladder placed against a window, and having descended, come behind Cleopatra. Some of the Guard unbar and open the gates. Guard her till Caesar come. [To Proculeius and the Guard. Exit Gallus. Iras. Royal queen! Char. O Cleopatra! thou art taken, queen! — Cleo. Quick, quick, good hand; [Drawing a dagger. Hold, worthy lady, hold; [Seizes and disarms her. Do not yourself such wrong, who are in this relieve'd, but not betray'd.

Cleo. What, of death too
That rides our dogs of languish?

Pro, Cleopatra, do not abuse my master's bounty, by the undoing of yourself: let the world see his nobleness well acted, which your death will never let come forth.

Cleo. Where art thou, death? Come hither, come! come, come, and take a queen with many babes and beggars! O, temperance, lady! Pro. Cleo. Sir, I will eat no meat, I'll not drink, sir; if idle talk will once be necessary, I'll not sleep neither: this mortal house I'll ruin, do Caesar what he can. Know, sir, that I will not wait plinon'd at your master's court; nor once be chastis'd with the sober eye Of dull Octavia. Shall they hoist me up, and show me to the shouting variety Of censoring Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt be gentle grave to me! rather on Nilus' mud Lay me stark naked, and let the water-flies Blow me into abhorring! rather make My country's high pyramids my gibbet, and hang me up in chains!

Pro. You soo extend These thoughts of horror further than you shall Find cause in Caesar.

Enter Dolabella.

Dol. Proculeius, What thou hast done thy master Caesar knows, and he hath sent for thee: as for the queen, I'll take her to my guard.

Pro. So, Dolabella, it shall content me best: be gentle to her.—To Caesar I will speak what you shall please.[To Cleopatra.

If you'll employ me to him.

Cleo. Say, I would die.

[Exeunt Proculeius, and Soldiers.

Dol. Most noble empress, have you heard of me? Cleo. I cannot tell.

Dol. Assuredly, you know me. Cleo. No matter, sir, what I have heard, or known. You laugh, when boys, or women, tell their dreams; Is't not your trick?

Dol. I understand not, madam.

Cleo. I dream'd, there was an emperor Antony; — O, such another sleep, that I might see But such another man!

Dol. If it might please you,— Cleo. His face was as the heavens; and therein stuck A sun, and moon; which kept their course, and the little O, the earth. [Lighted. Most sovereign creature,

Cleo. His legs bestrid the ocean: his rear'd arm Crested the world: his voice was propertied As all the tuned spheres, and that to friends; But when he meant to quail and shake the orb, He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty, There was no winter in't; an autumn 'twas, That grew the more by reaping: His delights Were dolphin-like; they show'd his back above The element they liv'd in: in his liver Walk'd crowns, and crowne's; realms and islands As plates drop'd from his pocket. [were

Dol. Cleopatra,— Cleo. Think you, there was, or might be, such a As this I dream'd of? [man

Dol. Gentle madam, no.

Cleo. You lie, up to the hearing of the gods. But, if there be, or ever were one such, It's past the size of dreaming: Nature wants stuff To vie strange forms with fancy; yet, to imagine An Antony, were nature's piece 'gainst fancy, Condemning shadows quite. Dol. Hear me, good madam: Your loss is as yourself, great; and you bear it As answering to the weight; 'Would I might never O'take pursu'd success, but I do feel, By the rebound of yours, a grief that shoots My very heart at root.

Cleo. I thank you, sir.

Know you, what Caesar means to do with me? Dol. I am loath to tell you what I would you Cleo. Nay, pray you, sir,— [knew.

Dol. Though he be honourable,— Cleo. He'll lead me then in triumph.

Dol. Madam, he will; I know it.

Within. Make way there,—Cesar.

Enter Caesar, Gallus, Proculeius, Mccenas, Seleucus, and Attendants.

Cas. Which is the queen Of Egypt?

Dol. *'Tis the emperor, madam. [Cleopatra kneels.

Cas. Arise, You shall not kneel: I pray you, rise; rise, Egypt.

Cleo. Sir, the gods Will have it thus; my master and my lord I must obey.
Ces. Take to you no hard thoughts: The record of what injuries you did us, Though written in our flesh, we shall remember As things but done by chance.

Cleo. Sole sir o'the world, I cannot project mine own cause so well To make it clear; but do confess, I have been laden with like frailties, which before Have often sham'd our sex.

Ces. Cleopatra, know, We will extenuate rather than enforce; If you apply yourself to our intents, (Which towards you are most gentle,) you shall A benefit in this change; but if you seek [find To lay on me a cruelty, by taking Antony's course, you shall bereave yourself Of my good purposes, and put your children To that destruction which I'll guard them from, If thereon you rely. I'll take my leave. [and we

Cleo. And may, through all the world: 'tis yours: Your 'scutcheons, and your signs of conquest, shall Hang in what place you please. Here, my good Ces. You shall advise me in all for Cleopatra. Cleo. This is the brief of money, plate, and jewels, I am posses'd of: 'tis exactly valued; Not petty things admitted.—Where's Seleucus? Sel. Here, madam. Cleo. And my messenger; let him speak, my Upon his peril, that I have reserv'd [lord, To myself nothing. Speak the truth, Seleucus. Sel. Madam, I had rather see my lips, than, to my peril, Speak that which is not.

Cleo. What have I kept back? Sel. Enough to purchase what you have made known.

Ces. Nay, blush not, Cleopatra; I approve Your wisdom in the deed.

Cleo. See, Caesar! O, behold, How pomp is follow'd! mine will now be yours; And, should we shift estates, yours would be The ingratitude of this Seleucus does mine. Even make me wild: O slave, of no more trust Than love that's hir'd!—What, guest thou back? thou shalt Go back, I warrant thee; but I'll catch thine eyes, Though they had wings: Slave, soul-less villain, Only base [dog; Good queen, let us entreat you. Ces. O Caesar, what a wounding shame is this; That thou, vouchsafing here to visit me, Doing the honour of thy lordliness To one so meek, that mine own servant should Parcel the sum of my disgraces by Addition of his envy! Say, good Caesar, That I some lady trifles have reserv'd, Immoments, things of such dignity As we great modern friends withal; and say, Some nobler token I have kept apart For Livia, and Octavia, to induce Their mediation; must I be unfolded With one that I have bred? The gods! it smites Beneath the fall I have. Prythee, go hence; [me Forbear, Seleucus. Out shall I show the cinders of my spirits Through the ashes of my chance:—Wert thou a Thou would'st have mercy on me. [man, Ces.

[Exit Seleucus.

Cleo. Be it known, that we, the greatest, are mis-thought For things that others do; and, when we fail, We anger others' merits in our name, Are therefore to be pitied.

Ces. Cleopatra, [ledg'd, Not what you have reserv'd, nor what acknowledge Put we 't the rol of conquest: still be it yours, Bestow it at your pleasure; and believe Caesar's no merchant, to make prize with you Of things that merchants sold. Therefore be cheer'd; Make not your thoughts your prisons: no, dear For we intend so to dispose you, as [queen Yourself shall give us counsel. Feed, and sleep: Our care and pity is so much upon you, That we remain your friend; and so adieu. Cleo. My master, and my lord!

Ces. [Exeunt Caesar, and his Train.

Cleo. He words me, girls, he words me, that I should not Be noble to myself: but hark thee, Charmian. [Whispers Charmian.

Iras. Finish, good lady; the bright day is done. And we are for the dark.

Cleo. Hie thee again: I have spoke already, and it is provided; Go, put it to the haste.

Char. Madam, I will. Re-enter Dolabella.

Dol. Madam, as thereto sworn by your command, Which my love makes religion to obey, I tell you this: Caesar through Syria Intends his journey: and, within three days, You with your children will be sent before: Make your best use of this: I have perform'd Your pleasure, and my promise. Cleo. Dolabella, I shall remain your debtor. Dol. I your servant. Adieu, good queen; I must attend on Caesar. Cleo. Farewell, and thanks. [Exit Dol.] Now, Iras, what think'st thou? Thou, an Egyptian puppet, shalt be shown In Rome, as well as I: mechanick slaves With greasy aprons, rules, and hammers, shall Uplift us to the view; in their thick breaths, Rank of gross diet, shall we be enclosed, And fore'd to drink their vapour.

Iras. The gods forbid!

Cleo. Nay, tis most certain, Iras. Saucy lictors Will catch at us, like strumpets; and scald rhymer Ballad us out o' tune: the quick comedians Extemporally will stage us, and present Our Alcibiades, which revels The gods of his hire. And, I shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall see Some squeaking Cleopatra boy my greatness I the posture of a whore. Iras. O the good gods! Cleo. Nay, that is certain. Iras. I'll never see it; for, I am sure, my nails Are stronger than mine eyes.

Cleo. Why, that's the way To fool their preparation, and to conquer Their most absurd intents.—Now, Charmian?— Enter Charmian.

Show me, my women, like a queen:—Go fetch My best attire;—I am again for Cydus, To meet Mark Antony.—Sirrah, Iras, go. Now, noble Charmian, we'll despatch indeed: And, when thou hast done this chare, I'll give thee leave To play till dooms-day. Bring our crown and all. Wherefore's this noise? [Exit Iras. A noise within. Enter one of the Guard.

Guard. Here is a rural fellow, That will not be denied your highness' presence; He brings you figs.

Cleo. Let him come in. How poor an instrument [Exit Guard. May do a noble deed! he brings me liberty. My resolution's plac'd, and I have nothing Of woman in me: Now from head to foot I am marble-constant: now the fleeting moon No planet of mine.
Re-enter Guard, with a Clown bringing in a basket.

Guard. This is the man.

Cleo. Avoid, and leave him. [Exit Guard.

Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilus there, That kills and pains not? [Exeunt Cleopatra and Antony to his right]

Guard. I hear of one of them no longer than yesterday: a very honest woman, but something given to lie; as a woman should do not, but in the way of honesty; how she died of the biting of it, what pain she felt. Truly, she makes a very good report of the worm: But he that will believe all that they say, shall never be saved by half that they do: But this is most fallible, the worm's an odd worm.

Cleo. Get thee hence; farewell.

Clown. I wish you all joy of the worm.

Cleo. Farewell. [Clown sets down the basket.

Clown. You must think this, look you, that the worm will do his kind.

Cleo. Ay, ay; farewell.

Clown. Look you, the worm is not to be trusted, but in the keeping of wise people: for, indeed, there is no goodness in the worm.

Cleo. Take thou no care; it shall be heeded.

Clown. Very good: give it nothing, I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.

Cleo. Will it eat me?

Clown. You must not think I am so simple, but I know the devil himself will not eat a woman: I know, that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dress her not. But, truly, these same whore-son devils do the gods great harm in their women; for in every ten that they make, the devils mar five.

Cleo. Well, get thee gone; farewell.

Clown. Yes, forsooth; I wish you joy of the worm. [Exit.

Re-enter Iris, with a robe, crown, &c.

Cleo. Give me my robe, put on my crown; I have immortal longings in me: Now no more The juice of Egypt's grape shall moist this lip:— Yare, yare, good Iris; quick—Methinks, I hear Antony call; I see him rouse himself To raise my noble act; I hear him mock The luck of Caesar, which the gods give men To exult in after death. Husband, I come: Now to that name my courage prove my title! I am fire, and air; my other elements I give to baser life.—So,—have you done? Come, take, and let the last warmth of my lips Farewell, kind Charmian;—Iras, long farewell. [Kisses them. Iris falls and dies.

Have I the aspick in my lips? Dost fall? If thou and nature can so gently part, The stroke of death is as a lover's pinch, Which hurts, and is desired. Dost thou lie still? If thus thou vanishest, thou tell'st the world It is not worth leave-taking.

Char. Dissolve, thick cloud, and rain; that I To gods themselves do weep. [may say, Cleo. This proves me base, If she first meet the cruel Antony, He'll make demand of her; and spend that kiss, Which is my heaven to have. Come, mortal woes To the asp, which she applies to her breast.

With thy sharp teeth this knot intrinsicate Of life at once untie: poor venomous fool, Be angry, and despatch. O, could'st thou speak! That I might hear thee call great Caesar, as Unpoliced! Char. O eastern star! Peace, peace!

Cleo. Dost thou not see my baby at my breast, That suck's the nurse asleep?

SCENE I.—sometimes in Britain; sometimes in Italy.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Britain. The Garden behind Cymbeline’s Palace.

Enter Two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Yon do not meet a man, but frowned: our bloods
No more obey the heavens, than our courtilrs
Still seem, as does the king’s.

2 Gent. But what’s the matter?

1 Gent. His daughter, and the heir of his kingdom, whom
He purpos’d to his wife’s sole son, (a widow,)
That late he married,) hath refer’d herself
Unto a poor, but worthy, gentleman: She’s wed
Her husband banish’d; she imprison’d: all dêd;
Is outward sorrow; though, I think, the king
Be touch’d at very heart.

2 Gent. None but the king?

1 Gent. He, that hath lost her, too: so is the queen,
That most desir’d the match: But not a courier,
Although they wear their faces to the bent
Of the king’s looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.

2 Gent. And why so?

1 Gent. He that hath miss’d the princess, is a thing
Too bad for bad report; and he that hath her,
(I mean, that married her,—slack, good man!—
And therefore banish’d,) is a creature such
As, to seek through the regions of the earth
For one his like, there would be something failing
In him that should compare. I do not think,
So fair an outward, and such stuff within,
Endows a man but he.

2 Gent. Yon speak him far.

1 Gent. I do extend him, sir, within himself;
Crush him together, rather than unfold
His measure duly.

2 Gent. What’s his name, and birth?

1 Gent. I cannot delve him to the root: His father
Was call’d Sicilius, who did join his honour,
Against the Romans, with Cassibelan,
But had his titles by Tenantius, whom
He serv’d with glory and admir’d success:
So gain’d the sur-addition, Leonatus.
And bad, besides this gentleman in question,
Two other sons, who, in the wars of the time,
Died with their swords in hand; for which, their father
(Then old and fond of issue,) took such sorrow,
That he quit being; and his gentle lady,
Big of this gentleman, our theme, deceased

As he was born. The king, he takes the babe
To his protection; calls him Posthumus;
Breeds him, and makes him of his bed-chamber:
Puts him to all the learnings that his time
Could make him the receiver of; which he took,
As we do air, fast, as ’twas minister’d: and
In his spring became a harvest: Liv’d in court,
(Which rare it is to do,) most prais’d, most lov’d:
A sample to the youngest; to the more mature,
A glass that feared them; and to the graver,
A child that guided dotards: to his mistress,
For whom he now is banish’d,—her own price
Proclaims how she esteem’d him and his virtue;
By her election may be truly read,
What kind of man he is.

2 Gent. I honor him
Even out of your report. But, ‘pray you, tell me
Is she sole child to the king?

1 Gent. He had two sons, (if this be worth your hearing, Mark it,) the eldest of them at three years old,
I the swathing clothes the other, from their nursery
Were stolen; and to this hour no guess in Which way they went.

2 Gent. Long since is this ago?

1 Gent. Some twenty years. [Ye’v’d!]

2 Gent. That a king’s children should be so con
So slackly guarded! And the search so slow,
That could not trace them?

1 Gent. Howso’er ’tis strange,
Or that the negligence may well be lann’d at,
Yet it is true, sir.

2 Gent. I do well believe you.

2 Gent. We must forbear: Here comes the queen, and princess.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter the Queen, Posthumus, and Imogen.

Queen. No, be assured, ye shall not find me,
After the slander of most step-mothers, [daughter,
Evil-ey’d unto you: you are my prisoner, but
Your gaoler shall deliver you the keys
That lock up your restraint. For you, Posthumus,
So soon as I can win the offender king,
I will be known your advocate: marry, yet
The fire of rage is in him; and ’twere good,
You learn’d unto his sentence, with what patience
Your wisdom may inform you.

Post. Your highness,
I will from hence to-day.

Queen. You know the peril:
I’ll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying
The pangs of barr’d affections; though the king
Hath charg’d you should not speak together.

Exit Queen.
Cymbeline.

Act 1.

Imo. O Dissembling courtesy! How fine this tyrant Can tickle where she wounds.—My dearest husband, I something fear my father’s wrath; but nothing, (Always reserved my holy duty,) what His rage can do on me: You must be gone; And I shall here abide the hourly shot Of angry eyes; not comforted to live, But that there is this jewel in the world, That I may see again.

Post. My queen! my mistress!— O, lady, weep not more; lest I give cause To be suspected of more tenderness Than doth become a man. I will remain The loyalest husband that did e’er plight troth. My residence in Rome, at one Flahario’s; Who to my father was a friend, to me Known but by letter: thither write, my queen, And with mine eyes I’ll drink the words you send, Though ink be made of gall.

Re-enter Queen.

Queen. Be brief, I pray you: If the king come, I shall incur I know not How much of his displeasure: Yet I’ll move him [Aside.]

To walk this way: I never do him wrong, But he does buy my injuries, to be friends; Pays dear for my offences. [Exit.]

Post. Should we be taking leave As long a term as yet we have to live, The loathness to depart would grow: Adieu! Imo. Nay, stay a little: Were you but riding forth to air yourself, Such parting were too petty. Look here, love; This diamond was my mother’s: take it, heart; But keep it till you woo another wife, When Imogen is dead.

Post. How! how! another!— You gentle gods, give me but this I have, And seal up my embracings from a next With bonds of death—Remain thou here [Putting on the ring.]

While sense can keep it on! And sweetest, fairest, As I my poor self did exchange for you, To your so infinite loss; so, in our trifles I still think of you: For my sake, wear this; It is a manacle of love; I’ll place it Upon this fairest prisoner. [Putting a bracelet on her arm.]

Imo. O, the gods! WHEN SHALL WE SEE AGAIN?

Enter Cymbeline and Lords.

Post. Alack, the king! Cym. Thou basest thing, avoid! hence, from my sight! If, after this command, thou fraud the court With thy unworthiness, thou diest: Away! Thou art poison to my blood.

Post. The gods protect you! And bless the good remainders of the court! I am gone. [Exit.]

Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death More sharp than this is.

Cym. O disloyal thing, That shouldst repair my youth; thou heapest A year’s age on me! Imo. I beseech you, sir, Harm not yourself with your vexation; I Am senseless of your wrath; a touch more rare Subdues all pangs, all fears.

Cym. Past grace? obedience? Imo. Past hope, and in despair; that way, past grace! [Queen.

Cym. That might’st have had the sole son of my Imo. O bless’d, that I might not: I chose an And did avoid a puttock. [Eagle, Cym. Thou tookst a beggar; wouldst have A seat for baseness. [made my throne

Imo. No; I rather added

A justre to it.

Cym. O thou vile one!

Imo. Sir, It is your fault that I have lov’d Posthumus: You bred him as my playfellow; and he is A man, worth any woman; overbuys me Almost the sum he pays.

Cym. What! art thou mad Imo. Almost, sir: Heaven restore me!— Would A neath-herd’s daughter! and my Leonatus [I were Our neighbour shepherd’s son!—

Re-enter Queen.

Queen. Thou foolish thing!— They were again together: you have done Not after our command. Away with her, And pen her up.

Queen. Beseech your patience! Peace, Dear lady daughter, peace;—sweet sovereign, Leave us to ourselves; and make yourself some Out of your best advice. [comfort

Cym. Nay, let her languish A drop of blood a day; and, being aged, Die of this folly! [Exit.

Enter Pisanio.

Queen. Fye!—you must give way: Here is your servant. How now, sir? What news? Pis. My lord your son drew on my master.

Queen. Ha! No harm, I trust, is done? Pis. There might have been, But that my master rather play’d than fought, And had no help of anger: they were parted By gentlemen at hand.

Queen. I am very glad on’t. Imo. Your son’s my father’s friend; he takes his To draw upon an exile!—O brave sir!— [part.

I would they were in Afric both together; Myself by with a needle, that I might prick The goer back.—Why came you from your master? Pis. On his command: He would not suffer me To bring him to the haven: left these notes Of what commands I should be subject to, When it pleased you to employ me.

Queen. This hath been Your faithful servant; I dare lay mine honour, He will remain so.

Pis. I humbly thank your highness.

Queen. Pray, walk a while.

Imo. About some half hour hence, I pray you, speak with me: you shall, at least, Go see my lord aboard: for this time, leave me.

Exeunt.

Scene III.—A publick Place.

Enter Cloten and Two Lords.

1 Lord. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt; the violence of action hath made you reek as a sacrifice: Where air comes out, air comes in: there’s none abroad so wholesome as that you vent. Clo. If my shirt were bloody, then to shift it— Have I hurt him? 2 Lord. No, faith; not so much as his patience.

1 Lord. Hurt him? his body’s a passable carcass, if he be not hurt: it is a thoroughfare for steel, if it be not hurt. 2 Lord. His steel was in debt: it went o’ the backside the town. Clo. The villain would not stand me. 2 Lord. No; but he fled forward still, toward your face. Clo. I would stand you! You have land enough of your own: but he added to your having; gave you some ground.

Lord. As many inches as you have oceans: Puppies! Clo. I would, they had not come between us.
2 Lord. So would I, till you had measured how long a fool you were upon the ground. [Aside.

Clo. And that she should love this fellow, and refuse me!

2 Lord. If it be a sin to make a true election, she is damned. [Aside.

1 Lord. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together: She's a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.

2 Lord. She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her. [Aside.

Clo. Come, I'll to my chamber: 'Would there had been some hurt done!' [Aside.

2 Lord. I wish not so; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt.

Clo. You'll go with us?

1 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

Clo. Nay, come, let's go together.

2 Lord. Well, my lord. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Imogen and Pisanio.

Imo. I would thou gav'est unto the shores o'the haven,

And question'dst every sail: if he should write,

And I not have it, 'twere a paper lost,

As offer'd mercy is. What was the last

That he spake to thee?

Pis. 'Twas, His queen, his queen!

Imo. Then war'd his handkerchief?

Pis. And kiss'd it, madam.

Imo. Senseless linen I happen therein 1:

And that was all?

Pis. No, madam; for so long

As he could make me with this eye or ear

Distinguish him from others, he did keep

The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief,

Still waving, as the fits and stirs of his mind

Could best express how slow his soul sail'd on,

How swift his ship.

Imo. Thou shoul'dst have made him

As little as a crow, or less, ere left

To after-eye him.

Pis. Madam, so I did.

Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings;

crack'd them, but

To look upon him; till the diminution

Of space had pointed him sharp as my needle:

Now, when the wish, till he had rest'd from

The smallness of a gnat to air; and then

Have turn'd mine eye, and wept.—But, good

When shall we hear from him?

[Pisanio.

Pis. Be assur'd, madam,

With his next vantage.

Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had

Most pretty things to say: ere I could tell him,

How I would think on him, at certain hours,

Such thoughts, and such; or I could make him

The shes of Italy should not betray

Mine interest, and his honour; or have charg'd him,

At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at midnight,

To encounter me with orisons, for then

I had heav'n for him; or ere I could

Give him that parting kiss, which I had set

Betwixt two charming words, comes in my father,

And, like the tyrannous breathing of the north,

Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. The queen, madam,

Desires your highness' company.

Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them de-

I will attend the queen. [spatch'd.

Pis. Madam, I shall. [Exeunt.

Enter Philaris, Iachimo, a Frenchman, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Iach. Believe it, sir; I have seen him in Britian;

he was then of a crescent note; expected to prove so worthy, as since he hath been allowed the name of:

but I could then have looked on him without the help of admiration; though the catalogue of his endowments had been tabulated by his side, and I to pencil him by items.

Phi. You speak of him when he was less furnished, than now he is, with that which makes him both without and within.

French. I have seen him in France: we had very many there, could behold the sun with as firm eyes as he.

Iach. This matter of marrying his king's daughter, (wherein he must be weighed rather by her value, than his own,) words him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter.

French. And then his banishment:

Iach. Ay, and the approbation of those, that weep this lamentable divorce, under her colours, are wonderfully to extend him; be it but to forfeit her judgment, which else an easy batterie might lay flat, for taking a beggar without more quality. But how comes it, he is to sojourn with you? How creeps acquaintance?

Phi. His father and I were soldiers together; to whose I have been often bound for no less than my life:

Enter Posthumus.

Here comes the Briton: Let him be so entertained amidst your, as suits, with gentlemen of your knowing, to a stranger of his quality.—I beseech you all, be better known to this gentleman; whom I commend to you, as a noble friend of mine: How worthy he is, I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his France.

French. Sir, we have known together in Orleans.

Post. Since when I have been debtor to you for courtesies, which I will ever to pay, and yet pay still.

French. Sir, you o'er-rate my poor kindness: I was glad I did atone my countryman and you; it bad been pity, you should have been put together with so mortal a purpose, as then each bore, upon importance of so slight and trivial a nature.

Post. By your pardon, sir, I was then a young traveller: rather shunned to go even with what I heard, than in my every action to be guided by others' experiences: but, upon my mended judgment, (if I offend not to say it is mended,) my quarrel is not altogether slight.

French. 'Faith, yes, to be put to the arbitrement of words; and by such two, that would, by all likelihood, have confounded one the other, or have fallen both.

Iach. Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference?

French. Safely, I think: 'twas a contention in publik, which may, without contradiction, suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses: This gentleman at that time vouching (and upon warrant of bloody affirmations) his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant-qualified, and least attemptable, than any the rest of our fair ladies in France.

Iach. That lady is not now living; or this gentleman's opinion, by this, worn out.

Post. She holds her virtue still, and I my mind.

Iach. You must not so far piefer her 'fore ours of Italy.

Post. Being so far provoked as I was in France, I would abate her nothing; though I profess myself her adorer, not her friend.

Iach. As fair, and as good, (a kind of hand-in-hand acquaintance,) had been something too fair, and too good, for any lady in Britain. If she went before others I have seen, as that diamond of yours out-lustres many I have beheld, I could not but believe she excelled many; but I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the lady.

Post. I praised her as I rated her: so do I my stone.
Iach. What do you esteem it at?
Post. More than the world enjoys.
Iach. Which of your house shall be mistress of the gods?
Post. You are mistaken: the one may be sold, or given; if there were wealth enough for the purchase, or merit for the gift: the other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods.
Iach. Which of the gods have given you?
Post. Which, by their graces, I will keep.
Iach. You may wear her in tithe yours: but, you know, strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds. You may lose her by the breath of an unprizeable estimation; the one is but frail, and the other casual; a cunning thief, or a that-way-accomplished curliter, would hazard the winning both of first and last.
Post. Your Italy contains none so accomplished a courtier, to convince the honour of my mistress; if, in the bolding or loss of that, you term her frail.
Iach. I do nothing doubt, you have store of thieves; notwithstanding I fear not my ring.
Phi. Let us leave here gentlemen.
Post. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy signor, I thank him, makes no stranger of me; we are familiar at first.
Iach. With five times so much conversation, I should make her a fair mistress: make her go back, even to the yielding; had I admittance, and opportunity to friend.
Post. No, no.
Iach. I dare, thereupon, pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring; which, in my opinion, o'ervalues it something: But I make my wager rather against your confidence, than her reputation: and, to bar your offence herein too, I durst attempt it against any lady in the world.
Post. You are a great deal abused in too bold a person: I doubt not you sustain what you're worthy of, by your attempt.
Iach. What's that?
Post. A repulse: Though your attempt, as you call it, deserve more; a punishment too.
Phi. Gentlemen, enough of this: it came in too suddenly; let it die as it was born, and, I pray you, be better acquainted.
Iach. 'Would I had put my estate, and my neighbour's, on the approbation of what I have spoke.
Post. What lady would you choose to assail?
Iach. Yours; whom in constancy, you think, stands so safe. I will lay you ten thousand ducats to your ring, that, commend me to the court where your lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a second conference, and I will bring from thence that honour of hers, which you imagine so reserved.
Post. I will wage against your gold, gold to it: my ring I hold dear as my finger; 'tis part of it.
Iach. You are a friend, and therein the wiser. If you buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, you cannot preserve it from tainting: But, I see you have some religion in you, that you fear.
Post. This is but a custom in your tongue; you bear a greater purpose, I hope.
Iach. I am the master of my speeches; and would undergo what's spoken, I swear.
Post. Will you?—I shall but lend my diamond till your return.
Iach. Let there be covans drawn between us: My mistress exceeds in goodness the huggeness of your unworthy thinking: I dare you to this match: here's my ring.
Phi. I will have it no longer.
Post. Is it done?—If I bring you no sufficient testimony that I have enjoyed the dearest bodily part of your mistress, my ten thousand ducats are yours; so is your diamond too. If I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have her jewel, this is your jewel, and my gold are yours—provided, I have your commendation, for my more free entertainment.
Post. I embrace these conditions; let us have articles betwixt us:—only, thus far you shall answer. If you make your voyage upon her, and give me directly to understand you have prevail'd, I am no further your enemy, she is not worth our debate: if she remain unseduced, (you not making it appear otherwise,) for your ill opinion, and the assault you have made to her chastity, you shall answer me with your sword.
Iach. Your hand; a covenant: We will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain; lest the bargain should catch cold, and starve: I will fetch my gold, and have our two wagers recorded.
Post. Agreed. [Exeunt Posthumus and Iachimo.
Iach. Will this hold, think you?
Phi. Signior Iachimo will not from it. Pray, let us follow 'em.

SCENE VI.—Britain. A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Queen, Ladies, and Cornelia.

Queen. Whiles yet the dew's on ground, gather those flowers;

Make haste: Who has the note of them?

1 Lady. I, madam.

Queen. Despatch. [Exeunt Ladies.

Now, master doctor; have you brought those drugs?

Cor. Pleases, for your highness, and they are, madam:

[Presenting a small box.

But I beseech your grace, (without offence; My conscience bids me ask;) wherefore you have Commanded of me these most poisonous compounds,

Which are the movers of a languishing death;

But, though slow, deadly?

Queen. I do wonder, doctor, Thou ask'st me such a question: Have I not been told

Thy pupil long ago? or taught me how To make perfumes? distil? preserve? yes; so,

That our great king himself doth woo me o'er For my confessions? Having thus far proceeded, (Unless thou think'st me devilish,) is't not meet That I did amplify my judgment in Other conclusions? I will try the forces Of these thy compounds on such creatures as We count not worth the hanging, (but none hu-

To try the vigour of them, and apply [man, Allayments to their act; and by them gather At the several virtues, and effects.

Your highness Shall from this practice but make hard your heart: Besides, the seeing these effects will be Both noisome and infectious.

Queen. O, content thee.

Enter Pisanio.

Here comes a flattering rascal; upon him [Aside. Will I first work: he's for his master, And enemy to my son. How now, Pisanio?— Doctor, your service for this time is ended; Take your own way.

Cor. I do suspect you, madam;—

[Aside. You shall do no harm.

Queen. Hark thee, a word—

Pisanio. To Pisanio.

Cor. [Aside.] I do not like her. She doth think, she has Strange lingering poisons; I do know her spirit, And will not trust one of her malice with A drug of such damn'd nature; Those she has, Will stupefy and dull the sense awhile: Which first, perchance, she'll prove on cats, and Then afterward up higher; but there is no danger in what you know of death, it makes, More than the locking up the spirits a time, To be more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd With a most false effect; and I the truer, So to be false with her.

Queen. No further service, doctor.

Until I send for thee.
Cymbeline.

Act 1.

Scene VII—Another Room in the same.

Enter Imogen.

I'mo. A father cruel, and a step-dame false:—A foolish suitor to a wedded lady,—[band] That hath her husband banish'd:—0, that hus-
My supreme crown of grief! and those repeated
Vexations of it! Had I been thief-stolen,
As my two brothers, happy! but most miserable
Is the desire that's glorious: Blessed be those,
How mean soe'er, that have their honest wills,
Which seasons comfort.—Who may this be? Fye!

Enter Pisanio and Iachimo.

Pis. Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome;
Comes from my lord with letters.

Iach. Change you, madam? The worthy Leonatus is in safety,
And greets your highness dearly. [Presenta a letter.

I'mo. Thanks, good sir, you are kindly welcome.

Iach. All of her, that is out of door, most rich! [Aside.

If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare,
She is alone the Arabian bird; and I
Have lost the wager. Boldness be my friend!
Arm me, audacity, from head to foot!
Or, like the Parthian, I shall flying fight;
Ride, be dirk. [Exit.

I'mo. [Reads.] He is one of the noblest note, to Whose kindness I am most infinitely tied. Reflect Upon him accordingly, as you value your trust
Leonatus.

So far I read aloud:

But even the very middle of my heart
Is warm'd by the rest, and takes it thankfully. —
You are as welcome, worthy sir, as I
Have words to bid you; and shall find it so,
In all that I can do.

Iach. Thanks, fairest lady,—

Well are men mad? Hath nature given them
To see this vaulted arch, and the rich crop [eyes
Of sea and land, which can distinguish twixt
The fiery orbs above, and the twin'd stones
Upon the number'd beach? and can we not Parison make with spectacles so precious
'Twixt fair and foul? infl

I'mo. What makes your admiration?

Iach. It cannot be t'he eye; for apes and monkeys,

'Twixt two such shes, would chatter this way, and Contemn with mows the other: Nor t'he jugde:
For idiots, in this case of favour, would ment;
Be wisely definite: Nor t'he appetite;
Smitery, to such neat excellence oppos'd,
Should make desire vomit emptiness,
Not so allur'd to feed.

I'mo. What is the matter, trow?

Iach. The cloyed will,

(That satiate yet unsatisfied desire,
Whose club both fild' and running,) ravishing first
The lamb, longs after for the garbage.

I'mo. What, dear sir,

Thus raps you? Are you well?

Iach. Thanks, madam; well:—Beseech you, sir;

[To Pisanio.
My man's abode where I did leave him: he
Is strange and peevish.

I'mo. I was going, sir,

To give you welcome. [Exit Pisanio.

Iach. Continue well my lord? His health, he?

Iach. Well, madam. [Exit. I'mo. Is he dispose'd to mirth? I hope, he is.

Iach. Exceeding pleasant; none a stranger there
So merry and so gameous: he is call'd
The Briton reveiler.

I'mo. When he was here,

He did incline to sadness; and oft-times
Not knowing why.

Iach. I never saw him sad.

There is a Frenchman his companion, one
An eminent specimen, that, it seems, much loves
A Gallian girl at home: he furnaces
The thick sighs from him; whiles the jolly Briton
(Your lord, I mean,) laughs from his free lungs,
Cries, 0! Can my heart behold, to think, that man,—who knows
By history, report, or his own proof,
What woman is, yea, what she cannot choose
But must be,—will his free hours languish for Aimed bondage? Will my lord say so?

I'mo. Iach. Ay, madam; with his eyes in flood with
It is a recreation to be by, [laughter.
And hear him mock the Frenchman: But, heavens;
Some men are much to blame. [know.

I'mo. Not he, I hope.

Iach. Not he: But yet heav'n's bounty towards him
Might be us'd more thankfully. In himself, 'tis much;—
In you,—which I count his, beyond all talents,—
Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pity too.

I'mo. What do you pity, sir?

Iach. Two creatures, heartily.

I'mo. Am I one, sir? You look on me; What wreck discern you in me,
Deserves your pity?

Iach. Lamentable! What! To hide me from the radiant sun, and solace
The dungeon by a snuff?

I'mo. I pray you, sir,

Deliver with more openness your answers
To my demands. Why do you pity me?

Iach. That others do,
I was about to say, enjoy your—But
It is an office of the gods to venge it,
Not mine to speak on't.

I have spoke this, to know if your alliance
Were deeply rooted; and shall make your lord
That which he is, new o'er: And he is one
Of the truest manner'd; such a holy witch,
That he enchants societies unto him:
Half all men's hearts are his.

You make amends.

He sits 'mongst men, like a descended god:
He hath a kind of honour sets him off,
More than a mortal seeming. Be not angry,
Most mighty princess, that I have adventur'd
To try your taking a false report; which hath Honour'd with confirmation your great judgment
In the election of a sir so rare.

Which you know, cannot err: The love I bear him
Made me to fan you thus; but the gods made you,
Unlike all others, charless. Fray, your pardon.

All's well, sir: Take my power i' the court for yours.

I have almost forgot To entertain your grace but in a small request, And yet of moment too, for it concerns Your lord; myself; and other noble friends, Who are partners in the business.

Pray, what is't?

Some dozen Romans of us, and your lord, (The best feather of our wing,) have mingled sums, To buy a present for the emperor; Which I, the faction of the rest, have done In France: 'Tis plate, of rare device; and jewels, Of rich and exquisite form; their values great; And I am something curious, being strange, To have them in safe stowage: May it please you To take them in protection?

Willingly;

And pawn mine honour for their safety: since My lord hath interest in them, I will keep them In my bed-chamber.

They are in a trunk, attended by my men: I will make bold To send them to you, only for this night; I must abound to-morrow.

O, no, no.

Yes, I beseech; or I shall short my word, By length'ning my return. From Galia I crossed the seas on purpose, and on promise To see your grace.

I thank you for your pains;

But not away to-morrow?

O, I must, madam: Therefore, I shall beseech you, if you please To greet your lord with writing, do't to-night: I have outstayed my time; which is material To the tender of our present.

I will write. Send your trunk to me; it shall safe be kept, And truly yielded you: You are very welcome. [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Court before Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Cloten and Two Lords.

Cloten. Was there ever man had such luck! when I kissed the jack upon an up-cast, to be hit away! I had a hundred pound on't: And then a whoreson jackanapes must take me up for swearing; as if I borrowed mine oaths of him, and might not spend them at my pleasure.

1 Lord. What got he by that? you have broke his pate with your howl.

2 Lord. If his wit have been like him that broke it, it would have ran all out. [Aside.

Cloten. When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oaths: Ha?

2 Lord. No, my lord; nor [Aside] crop the ears of them.

Cloten. Whoreson dog!—I give him satisfaction? Would, he had been one of my rank.

2 Lord. To have smelt like a fool. [Aside.
Cymbeline.

Act 2.

Cloe. I am not more vexed at any thing in the earth, — A pox on 't! I had rather not be so noble as I am; they dare not fight with me, because of the queen my mother; every jack-slaw hath his belly full of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that no body can match.

2 Lord. You are a cock and capon too; and you crow, cock, with your comb on.

Cloe. What thou say'st?

1 Lord. It is not fit, your lordship should undertake every companion that you give offence to.

Cloe. No, I know that: but it is fit, I should commit offence to my inferiors.

2 Lord. Ay, it is fit for your lordship only.

Cloe. Why, so I say.

1 Lord. Did you hear of a stranger, that's come to court to-night?

Cloe. A stranger! and I not know on't!

2 Lord. He's a strange fellow himself, and knows it not.

1 Lord. There's an Italian come; and, 'tis thought, one of Leonatus' friends.

Cloe. Leonatus! a banished rascal; and he's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this strange make?

1 Lord. One of your lordship's pages.

Cloe. Is it fit, I went to look upon him? Is there no derogation in't?

1 Lord. You cannot derogate, my lord.

Cloe. Not entirely, I think.

2 Lord. You are a fool granted; therefore your issues being foolish, do not derogate.

Cloe. Come, I'll go see this Italian: What have I lost to-day at bowls, I'll win to-night of him.

2 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

[Exit Cloten and first Lord.

That such a crafty devil as is his mother Should yield the world this ass? a woman, that Bears up her head with her brain; and this her son Cannot take two from two from for his heart, And leave eighteen. Alas, poor princess, Thou divine Imogen, what thou endurest! Betwixt a father by thy step-dame govern'd; A mother hourly concluding plots; a wiser, More hateful than the foul expulsion is Of thy dear husband, than that horrid act Of the divorce he'd make! The heavens bend firm The walls of thy dear honour; keep ushak'd That temple, thy fair mind; that thou may'st stand, To enjoy thy banish'd lord, and this great land! [Exit.

SCENE II.—A Bed-Chamber; in one part of it a Trunk.

Imogen reading in her bed, a Lady attending.

Imo. Who's there? my woman Helen?

Lady. Please you, madam.

Imo. What hour is it?

Lady. Almost midnight, madam.

I mo. I have read three hours then: mine eyes are weak.

Fold down the leaf where I have left: To bed: Take not away the taper, leave it burning; And if you canst awake by four o'the clock, I pr'ythee, call me. Sleep hath seiz'd me wholly.

[Exit Lady.

To your protection I commend me, gods! From fairies, and the tempters of the night, Guard me, beseech ye!

[Sleeps. Ichimoho, from the trunk.

Iach. The crickets sing, and man's over-labour'd Repairs itself by rest: Our Tarquin thus [sense Did solace, so the rushes, ere he wak'n'd The chastity he wound'd—Cytherea, How bravely thou becom'st thy bed! fresh lily! And whiter than the sheets! That I might touch! But kiss; one kiss! — Rubies unparagon'd, How dearly they do!—'Tis her breathing that Perfuces the chamber thus: The flame o'the taper Bows toward her; and would under-peep her lids, To see the enclosed lights, now canopied Under these wavers, spent and gone, ced, With blue of heaven's own tinct.—But my design? To note the chamber:—I will write all down:— Such, and such, pictures:—There the window:—Such

The adornment of her bed:—The arras, figures, Why, such, and such:—And the contents o'the story,— Ah, but some natural notes about her body, Above ten thousand meaner moveables Would testify, to enrich mine inventory: O sleep, thou ape of death, lie dull upon her! And be her sense but as a monument, Thus in a chapel lying!—Come off, come off; [Taking off her bracelet. As slipperily, as the Gordion knot was hard,— 'Tis mine; and this will witness outwardly, As strongly as the conscience does within, To the madding of her lord. On her left breast A mole cinque-spotted, like the crimson drops I' the bottom of a cowslip. Here's a voucher, Stronger than ever law this secret will. Will force him think I have pick'd the lock, and talen [end The treasure of her honour. No more.—To what Why should I write this down, that's riveted, Screw'd to my memory? She hath been reading late The tale of Tereus; here the leaf's turn'd down, Where Philomel gave up:—I have enough: To the trunk again, and shut the spring of it. Swift, swift, you dragons of the night!—that dawning May bare the raven's eye: I lodge in fear; Though this a heavenly angel, hell is here. [Clock strikes. One, two, three.—Time, time! [Goes into the trunk. The scene closes.

SCENE III.—An Anti-Chamber, adjoining Imogen's Apartment.

Enter Cloten and Lords.

1 Lord. Your lordship is the most patient man I know, the most coldest that ever turned up ace.

Cloe. It would make any man cold to lose.

1 Lord. But not every man patient after the noble temper of your lordship; You are most hot, and furious, when you win.

Cloe. Winning would put any man into courage. If I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have gold enough; It's almost morning, is't not?

1 Lord. Day, my lord.

Cloe. I would this musick would come; I am advised to give her musick o' mornings; they say, it will penetrate.

Enter Musicians.

Come on; tune: If you can penetrate her with your fingering, so; we'll try with tongue too: If none will do, let her remain; but I'll never give her a most excellent good-conceived thing; after, a wonderfull sweet air, with admirable rich words to it,—and then let her consider.

SONG.

Hark! hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings, And Phoebus' gins arise, Hearts dead to water at those springs On chalied flowers that lies; And twinkling Mary-buds begin To ope their golden eyes; With every thing that pretty bin: My lady sweet, arise; Arie, arise.

So, get you gone: If this penetrate, I will consider your musick the better: if it do not, It is a vice in her ears, which horse-hairs, and cats-guts, nor the voice of unpaved eunuch to boot, can never amend.

[Exeunt Musicians.]

Enter Cymbeline and Queen.

2 Lord. Here comes the king.

Clo. I am glad, I was up so late; for that's the reason I was up so early! He cannot choose but take this service I have done, fatherly.—Good morrow to your majesty, and to your gracious mother.

Cym. Attend you here the door of our stern
Will she not forth?

[daughter?]

Clo. I have assaulted her with music, but she would not remove.

Cym. The exile of her minion is too new:
She hath not yet forgot him: some more time
Must wear the print of his remembrance out,
And then she's yours.

Queen. You are most bound to the king; who lets go by no vantages, that may Prefer you to his daughter; Frame yourself
To orderly solicits; and be friended
With aptness of the season; make denials
Increase your services; so seem, as if You were insipid to do those duties which
You tender to her; that you in all obey her,
Save when command to your disposition tends,
And therein you are senseless.

Clo. Senseless? not so.

[Enter a Messenger.]

Mess. So like you, sir, ambassadors from Rome; The one is Calius Lucius.

Clo. A worthy fellow, Albeit he comes on angry purpose now:
But that's no fault of his: We must receive him
According to the honour of his sender;
And towards him his goodness forespent on us.
We must extend our notice.—Our dear son,
When you have given good morning to your mistress,
Attend the queen, and us; we shall have need
To employ you towards this Roman.—Come, our queen.

[Exeunt Cym. Queen, Lords, and Mess.]

Clo. If she be up, I'll speak with her; if not,
Let her lie still, and dream.—By your leave, ho!—

[Knocks.]

I know her women are about her: What
If I do line one of their hands? 'Tis gold
Which buys admittance; oft it doth; yea, and Dianna's rangers false themselves, yield up [makes]
Their deer to the stand of the steealer; and 'tis gold
Which makes the true man kill'd, and saves the thief;
Nay, sometime, hangs both thief and true man:
Can it not do, and undo? I will make
What one of her women lawyer to me; for
I yet not understand the case myself.
By your leave.

[Knocks.]

Enter a Lady.

Lady. Who's there, that knocks?

Clo. A gentlewoman.

Lady. No more?

Clo. Yes, and a gentlewoman's son.

Lady. That's more
Than some, whose tailors are as dear as yours,
Can justly boast of: What's your lordship's pleasure?

Clo. Your lady's person; Is she ready?

Lady. Ay,

To keep her chamber.

Clo. There's gold for you; sell me your good report.

Lady. H ow ! my good name? or to report of you
What I shall think is good?—The princess—

Enter Imogen.

Clo. Good-morrow, fairest sister: Your sweet hand;

Imo. Good-morrow, sir: You lay out too much

For purchasing but trouble: the thanks I give,
Is telling you that I am poor of thanks,
And scarce can pay them.

Clo. Still, I swear, I love you.

Imo. If you but said so, 'twere as deep with me:
If you swear still, your recompence is still
That I regard it not.

Clo. This is no answer. [silent.]

Imo. But that you shall not say I yield, being
I would not speak. I pray you, spare me: if faith,
I shall unfold equal discourtesy
To your best kindness; one of your best knowing
Should learn, being taught, forbearance.

Clo. To I will leave you in your madness, 'twere my sin:

I. I. Fools are not mad folks.

Clo. Do you call me fool?

Imo. As I am mad, I do.

If you're patient, I'll no more be mad;
That cures us both. I am much sorry, sir,
You put me to forget a lady's manners,
By being so verbal; and learn now, for all,
That I, which know my heart, do here pronounce,
By the best truth of it, I care not for you,
And am so near the lack of charity,
[To accuse myself] I hate you; which I had rather
You felt, than make't my boast.

Clo. You sin against Obedience, which you owe your father. For
The contract you pretend with that base wretch,
(One, bred of alms, and foster'd with cold dishes,
With scraps o'the court,) it is no contract, none:
And though it be allow'd in meaner parties,
[Yet who, than he, more mean?] to knit their souls
[On whom there is more dependency]
But brats and beggary in self-figur'd knot;
Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement by
The consequence o'the crown; and must not soil
The precious note with it, with a base slave,
A hilding for a livery, a squire's cloth,
A pantler, not so eminent.

Imo. Profane fellow!

Wert thou the son of Jupiter, and no more,
But what thou art, besides, thou wert too base
To be his groom: thou wert dignified enough,
Even to the point of envy, if 'twere made
Comparative for your virtues, to be sty'd
The under-hangman of his kingdom; and hated
For being prefer'd so well.

Clo. The south-fog rot him!

Imo. He never can meet more miscarriage, than come
To be but nam'd of thee. His meanest garment,
That ever hath but clipp'd his body, is dearer
In my respect, than all the hairs above thee.
Were they all made such men.—How now, Pisario?

Enter Pisario.

Clo. His garment? Now, the devil—

Imo. To Dorothy my woman lie thee presently:—

Clo. His garment?

Imo. I am sprightled with a fool;
Frighted, and anger'd worse:—Go, bid my woman
Search for a jewel, that too casually
Hath left mine arm; it was thy master's: 'shrew
If I would lose it for a revenue

[me,]
Of any king's in Europe. I do think,
I saw't this morning: confident I am,
Last night 'twas on mine arm; I kiss'd it:
I hope, it be not gone, to tell my lord
That I kiss aught but he.

Pis. 'Twill not be lost.

Imo. I hope so: go, and search.

[Exit Pis.]

You have abuse'd me:—

His meanest garment?

Imo. Ay; I said so, sir.

If you will make't an action, call witness to't.

Clo. I will inform your father.

Imo. Your mother too:
She's my good lady; and will conceive, I hope,
But the worst of me. So I leave you, sir,
To the worst of discontent.

[Exit.]
Enter Posthumus and Philario.

Post. Fear it not, sir; I would, I were so sure
To win the king, as I am bold, her honour
Will remain hers.

Phi. What means do you make to him?
Post. Not any; but abide the change of time;
That quaker in the present winter's state, and wish
That warmer days would come: In these fear'd
I barely gratify your love; they failing, [hopes,]
I must die much to your debtor.

Phi. Your very goodness, and your company,
O'er pays all I can do. By this, your king
Hath heard of great Augustus: Caius Lucius
Will do his commission thoughtfully: And, I think,
He'll grant the tribute, send the arraenges,
Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance
Is yet fresh in their grief.

Post. I do believe,
(Stating, though I am none, nor like to be,) That this will prove a war; and you shall hear
The legions, now in Gallia, sooner landed
In our not-fearing Britain, than have tidings
Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen
Are men more order'd, than when Julius Caesar
Smill'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage
Worthy his frowning at: Their discipline
(Now mingled with their courages) will make
To their approvers, they are people, such
That mend upon the world.

Enter Iachimo.

Phi. See! Iachimo?
Post. The swiftest harts have posted you by land;
And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails,
To make your vessel nimble.

Phi. Welcome, sir.
Post. I hope, the briefness of your answer made
The speediness of your return.

Iach. Your lady
Is one the fairest that I have look'd upon.
Post. And therewithal, the best: or let her beauty
Look through a casement to allure false hearts,
And be false with them.

Iach. Here are letters for you.
Post. Their tenor good, I trust.

Iach. 'Tis very like.

Phi. Was Caius Lucius in the Britain court,
When you were there?

Iach. He was expected then,
But not approach'd.

Post. All is well yet—
Sparkles this stone as it was wont? or is't not Too dull for your good wearing?

Iach. If I have lost it,
I should have lost the worth of it in gold.
I'll make a journey twice as far, to enjoy
A second night of such sweet shortness, which
Was mine in Britain; for the ring is won.

Post. The stone's too hard to come by.

Iach. Not a whit,
Your lady being so easy.

Post. Make not, sir,
Your loss your sport: I hope, you know that we Must not continue friends.

Iach. Good sir, we must,
If you keep covenant: Had I not brought
The knowledge of your mistress home, I grant
We were to question further: but I now
Profess myself the winner of her honour,
Together with your ring; and not the wronger
Of her, or you, having proceeded but
By both your wills.

Post. If you can make't apparent
That you have tasted her in bed, my hand,
And ring, is yours: If not, the foul opinion
You had of her pure honour, gains, or loses,
Your sword, or mine; or masterless leaves both
To whom shall find them.

Iach. Sir, my circumstances,
Being so near the truth, as I will make them,
Must first induce you to believe: whose strength
I will confirm with oath; which, I doubt not,
You'll give me leave to spare, when you shall find
You need it not.

Post. Proceed.

Iach. First, her bed-chamber,
Where, I confess, I slept not; but, profess,
Had that was well worth watching.) It was hang'd
With tapestry of silk and silver; the story
Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,
And Cyduns swell'd above the banks, or for
The press of boats, or pride: A piece of work
So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
In workmanship, and value; which I wonder'd,
Could be so rarely and exactly wrought,
Since the true life on't was—

Post. This is true;
And this you might have heard of here, by me;
Or by some other.

Iach. More particulars
Must justify my knowledge.

Post. Or do your honor injury.

Iach. The chimney
Is south the chamber; and the chimney-piece,
Chaste Dian, bathing; never saw I figures
So likely to report themselves: the cutter
Was another nature, damn: outwent her,
Motion and breath left out.

Post. This is a thing,
Which you might from relation likewise reap;
Being, as it is, mnnch spoke of.

Post. The roof o' the chamber
With golden cherubins is fretted: Her andirons
(I had forgot them,) were two winking Cupids
Of silver, each on one foot standing, nicely
Depending on their brands.

Post. This is her honour—
Let it be granted, you have seen all this, (and Praise
Be given to your remembrance,) the description
Of what is in her chamber, nothing saves
The wager you have laid.

Iach. Then, if you can,
[Pulling out the bracelet.
Be pale; I beg but leave to air this jewel: See—
And now 'tis up again: It must be married
To that your diamond; I'll keep them.

Post. Once more let me behold it: Is it that
Which I left with her?

Iach. Yes, (I thank her,) that:
She stripp'd it from her arm; I saw her yet;
Her pretty action did out-carry her gift,
And yet enrich'd it too: She gave it me, and said,
She priz'd it once.

Post. May be, she pinck'd it off;

Iach. She writes so to you? doth she?

Post. O, no, no, no; 'tis true. Here, take this [ Gives the ring.
It is a basilisk unto mine eye,
Kills me to look on't:—Let there be no honor,
Where there is beauty; truth, where semblance;
love,
Where there's another man: The vows of women
Of you more bondage be, to where they are made,
Than they are to their virgins; which is nothing:
O, above measure false;

Phi. Have patience, sir,
And take your ring again; 'tis not yet won:
It shall, I hope, the other, reject it: or
Who knows if one of her women, being corrupted,
Hath stolen it from her?

Post. Very true;
And so, I hope, he came by't:—Back my ring;
Act 2.

Enter Posthumus.

Post. Is there no way for men to be, but women Must be half so old as that? I'll write against them, Detest them, curse them; — yet 'tis greater skill In a true hate, to pray they have their will: The very devils cannot plague them better. [Exit

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Britain. A Room of State in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, and Lords, at one door; and at another, Caius Lucius and Attendants.

Cym. Now say, what would Augustus Caesar With us? [yet

Luc. When Julius Caesar (whose remembrance Lives in men's eyes; and will to ears, and tongues, Be theme, and hearing ever,) was in this Britain, And conquer'd it, Cassibellam, thine utile, (Famous in Caesar's praises, no whit less Than in his feats deserving it,) for him, And his succession, granted Rome a tribute, Yearly three thousand pounds; which by thee Is left unrender'd. [lately

Queen. And, to kill the marvell, Shall be so ever.

Clo. There be many Caesars, Ere such another Julius. Britain Is a world by itself; and we will nothing pay, For wearing our own noses. — That opportunity Which then they had to take from us, to resume We have again.—Remember, sir, my liege, The kings your ancestors; together with The natural bravery of your isle; which stands As Neptune's park, ribbed and paled in With rock's unscaleable, and roaring waters; With sands, that will not bear your enemies' boats, [conquest

But suck them up to the topmast. A kind of Caesar made here; but made not here his brag Of, came, and saw, and overcame: with shame (The first that ever touch'd him,) he was carried From off our coast, twice beaten; and his shipping (Poor ignorant baser!) on our terrible seas, Like egg-shells mov'd upon their surges, crack'd As easily 'gainst our rocks: For joy whereof, The fam'd Cassibellam, who was once at point (O, rigot fortune!) to master Caesar's sword, Made Laud's town with rejoicing fires bright, And Britons strait with courage.

Clo. Come, there's no more tribute to be paid: Our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time; and, as I said, there is no more such Caesars: other of them may have crooked noses; but, to owe such straight arms, none.

Cym. Son, let your mother end.

Clo. We have yet many among us can gripe as hard as Cassibellam: I do not say, I am one; but I have a hand.—Why tribute? why should we pay tribute? if Caesar can hide the sun from us within a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light; else, sir, no more tribute, pray you now.

Cym. You must know, Till the injurious Romans did extort [tion, This tribute from us, we were free: Caesar's ambi- (Which swept'd so much, that it did almost stretch The sides o'the world,) against all colour, here Did put the yoke upon us: why should to shake off, Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon Ourselves to be. We do say then to Caesar, Our ancestor was that which Multumus, which Ordain'd our laws; (whose use the sword of Caesar Hath too much mangled; whose repair, and fran- chise, Shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed, Though Rome be therefore angry;) Multumus Who was the first of Britain, which did put

Not half so old as that. I'll write against them, Detest them, curse them; — yet 'tis greater skill In a true hate, to pray they have their will: The very devils cannot plague them better. [Exit

PCYMBELINE.

369

Render to me some corporal sign about her, More evident than this; for this was stolen.

Iach. By Jupiter, I had it from her arm.

Post. Hark you, he swears; by Jupiter he swears. 'Tis true; — nay, keep the ring—'tis true, I am She would not lose it: her attendants are [sure, All sworn, and honourable; — they induc'd to steal it! And by a stranger! — No, he hath enjoy'd her: The cognizance of her incontinency [dearly.— Is this,—she hath bought the name of whom thus That, a take thy hire; and all the flames of hell Divide themselves between you!

Phi. Sir, be patient! This is not strong enough to be believ'd

Of one persuaded well of——

Post. Never talk on't; She hath been colt'd by him. If you seek

For further satisfying, under her breast (Worthy the pressing,) lies a mole, right proud Of that most delicate lodging: By my life, I kiss'd it; and it gave me present hunger To feed again, though full. You do remember This stain upon her?

Post. Ay, and it doth confirm Another stain, as big as hell can hold, Were there no more but it.

Iach. Will you hear more?

If you will swear you have not done't, you lie; And I will kill thee, if thou dost deny Thou hast made me cuckold. I will deny nothing.

Post. O, that I had her here, to tear her limb-mean!

I will go there, and do'lt: I'll the court; before Her father — I'll do something——

[Exit

PHI. Quite besides The government of patience! — You have won: Let's follow him, and pervert the present wrath He hath against himself.

Iach. With all my heart. [Exeunt

SCENE V.—The same. Another Room in the same.

Enter Posthumus.

Post. Is there no way for men to be, but women Must be half so old as that? We are bastards all; And that most venerable man, which I Did call my father, was I know not where When I was stamp'd; some coiner with his tools Made me a counterfeit: Yet my mother seem'd The Diana of that time: so doth my wife The nonpareil of this. — O vengeance, vengeance! Me of my lawful pleasure she restrain'd, And pray'd me, oft, for forbearance: did it with A pendency so rosy, the sweet view on't; [her Might well have warm'd old Saturn: that I thought As chaste as unsum'd snow: — o, all the devils!— This yellow latchimo, in an hour, — was not 0? — Or, less,—at first: Perchance he spoke not; but, Like a full-acorn'd boar, a German one, Cry'd, oh! and mounted: found no opposition But what he look'd for should oppose, and she Should from encounter guard. Could I find out The woman's part in me! For there's no motion That does to vice in man: I affirm It is the woman's part: Be it how, note it, The woman's; flattering, hers; deceiving, hers; Lust and rank thoughts, hers, hers; revenge, hers; Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, disdain, Naiad knockings, mutinies, snares, her; All faults that may be nam'd, nay, that hell knows, Why, hers, in part, or all; but, rather, all: For ev'n to vice They are not constant, but are changing still One vice, but of a minute old, for one
His brows within a golden crown, and call'd Himself a king.

Luc.  I am sorry, Cymbeline, That I am to pronounce Augustus Caesar (Caesar, that hath more kings his servants, than Thyself domestic officers,) thine enemy: Receive it from me, then:—War, and confusion, In Cæsar's name pronounce I'gainst thee: look For fury not to be resisted:—Thus defined, I thank thee for myself.

Cym. Thou art welcome, Caius. Thy Caesar knighted me; my youth I spent Much under him; of him I gathered honour; Which he to seek of me in his assaults, Before I keep at utterance: I am perfect, That the Pannonians and Dalmatians, For their liberties, are now in arms; a precedent Which, not to read, would show the Britons cold: So Cæsar shall not find them.

Luc. Let proof speak.

Cle. His majesty bids you welcome. Make pastime with us a day, or two, longer: if you seek us afterwards in other terms, you shall find us In our salt-water gilders; if you beat us out of it, it will content you. But if you fall In the adventure, our crowns shall fare the better for you; and there's an end.

Luc. So, sir. Cym. I know your master's pleasure, and he All the remain is, welcome. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Another Room in the same. Enter Pisanio.

Pis. How! of adulteries? Wherefore write you What monster's her accuser?—Leonatus! [not O, master! what a strange infection Is fallen into thy ear? what false Italian (As poisonous tongue'd, as handed,) hath prevail'd On thy too ready hearing?—Disloyal? No! She's pure as her truth: if any, beggars goes, More goddess-like than wife-like, such assaults As would take in some virtue,—O, my master! Thy mind to her is now as low, as were Thy fortunes.—How! that I should murder her? Upon the love, and truth, and vows, which I Have made to thy command?—I, her?—If it be so to do good service, never [blood? Let me be counted serviceable. How look I, That I should seem to lack humanity, So much as this fact comes to?—Do'T: The letter That I have sent her, by her own command Shall give thee opportunity: O damn'd paper! Black as the ink that's on thee! Senseless bauble, Art thou a foalery for this action, and look'st So virgin-like without? Lo, here she comes. Enter Imogen. I am ignorant in what I am commanded.

Imo. How now, Pisanio? Pis. Madam, here is a letter from my lord.

Imo. Who? thy lord? that is my lord? Leonatus? O, learnt indeed were that astronomer, That knew the stars, as I his characters: Here lay the future open.—You good gods, Let what is here contain'd relish of love, Of my lord's health, of his content,—yet not, That we two are asunder, let that grieve him, (Some grieves are medicinable:) that is one of them, For true love of his content. [Reads. He, all but in that!—Good wax, thy leave:—Besid's You bees, that make these locks of counsel! lovers, And men in dangerous hoods, pray not alike; Though forfeitors you cast in prison, yet You clasp young Cupid's tabs:—Good news, gods! [Reads.

Justice, and your father's wrath, should take me in his dominion, could not be so cruel to you, O the dearest of creatures, would not even renew me with your eyes. Take notice, that I am in Cambria, at Milford-Haven: What your own love will, out of this, advise you, follow. So, he relishes all happiness, that remains loyal to his own, and your, increasing in love, Leonatus Posthumus.

O, for a horse with wings!—Hear'st thou, Pisanio? He is at Milford-Haven: Read, and tell me How far's thy thither. If one of mean affairs May hold it a week, why, and why, why Glide thither in a day?—Then, true Pisanio, (Wholost'g, like me, to see thy lord; who long'st, O, let me bate,—but not like me:—yet long'st, But in a fainter kind—O, not like me; For mine's beyond beyond,) say, and speak thick, (Love's counsellor should fill the bores of hearing, To the smothering of the sense,) how far it is To this same blessed Milford: And, by the way, Tell me how Wales was made so happy, as To in a haren: But I say, how we may steal from hence; and, for the gap That we shall make in time, from our hence-going, And our return, to excuse:—but first, how get Why should excuse be born or e'er begot? [hence] We'll talk of that hereafter. Prythee, speak, How many score of miles may we well ride Twixt hour and hour? Pis. One score, 'twixt sun and sun, Madam, 's enough for you; and too much too.

Imo. Why, one that rode to his execution, man, Could not go so slow: I have heard of riding waggers, Where horses have been nimblier than the sands That run 't the clock's behalf. But this is Go, bid my woman feign a sickness: say [foolery She's gone to her father: and provide me, pre-A riding suit; no costlier than would fit [sently, A franklin's housewife. Pis. Madam, you're best consider. Imo. I must before me, man, nor here, nor here, Nor what ensues: but have a fog in them, That I cannot look through. Away, I prythee, Do as I bid thee: There's no more to say: Accessible is none but Milford way. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Wales. A mountaineous Country, with a cave.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Aturiragus.

Bel. A goodly day not to keep house, with such Whose roof's as low as ours! Stoop, boys: This gate Instructs you how to adore the heavens; and hows you To your late holy office: The gates of monarchs Are arch'd so high, that giants may yet through And keep their impious turbans on, without Good morrow to the sun.—Hail, thou fair heaven! We house it the rock, yet use thee not so hardly As prouder livers do.

Guiderius. Hail, heaven! Bel. Now for our mountain sport: Up to you hill, Your legs are young: I'll tread these flats. Con. When I above perceive me like a crow, [sider, That it is place, which lessens, and sets off. And you may then revolving what tales I have told Of courts, of princes, of the tricks in war: [you This service is not service, but an empty dominoe But being so allow'd: To apprehend thus, Draws us a profit from all things we see: And often, to our comfort, shall we find The sharded beetle in a safer hold Than is the full-wing'd eagle. In this life Is master, than attending for a check; Richer than doing nothing for a bade; Prouder, than rustling in unpaid-for silk: Such gain the cap of him, that makes them fine, Yet keeps his book uncross'd; no life to ours.

Guiderius. By your proof you speak: we, poor unfeidg'd, Have never wing'd from view o' the nest; nor know What air's from home. Haply, this life is best, (not If quiet life be best; sweeter to you, That have a sharper known; well corresponding With your stuff'age: but, unto us, it is Cymbeline.

A cell of ignorance; travelling abed;
A prison for a debtor, that not dares
To stride a limit.

Arv. What should we speak of,
When we are old as you? when we shall hear
The rain and wind beat dark December, how,
In this our pinching cave, shall we discourse
The freezing hours away? We have seen nothing:
We are but as the fox, for prey;
Like warlike as the wolf, for what we eat:
Our valour is, to chase what flies; our cage
We make a quire, as doth the prison'd bird,
And sing our bondage freely.

How you speak!
Did you but know the city's usuries,
And felt them knowingly: the art o'the court,
As hard to leave, as keep; whose top to climb
Is certain falling, or so slippery, that
The fear's as bad as falling: the toll of the war,
A pain that only seems to seek out danger
I' the name of fame, and honour: which dies i'the
And hath as oft a slanderous epitaph, [search; as record of fair act: nay, many times,
Doth ill deserve by doing well: what's worse,
Must court'sey at the censure:—O, boys, this story
The world may read in me: My body's mark'd
With Roman swords; and my report was once
First with the best of note: Cymbeline lov'd me;
And when a soldier was the theme, my name
Was not far off: Then was I as a tree,
Whose boughs did bend with fruit: but, in one
A storm, or robbery, call it what you will, [night,
Shook down my mellow hangings, nay, my leaves,
And left me bare to weather.

Gu. This is an uncertain favour!
Bel. My fault being nothing, (as I have told you oft)
But that two villains, whose false oaths prevailed Before my perfect honour, swore to Cymbeline, I was confederate in the Romans' plot,
Follow'd my banishment; and, this twenty years,
This rock, and these desmesmes, have been my world;
Where I have liv'd at honest freedom: paid
More pious debts to heaven, than in all [tains;
The fore-end of my time.—But, up to the mountThis is not hunters' language:—He, that strikes
The venison first, shall be the lord o'the feast;
Two other shall be courted:
And we will fear no poison, which attends
In place of greater state. I'll meet you in the valleys. [Exeunt Gu. and Arv.
How hard it is, to hide the sparks of nature!
There is little: they know the king:
Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive.
They think, they are mine: and, though train'd up
thus meanly
The cave, wherein they how, their thoughts do hit
The roofs of palaces; and nature prompts them,
In simple and low things, to prance it, much
Beyond the trick of others. This Polydore—
The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, whom
The king his father call'd Guiderius.—Jove! Thou didst accuse him of impiety:
Tell the warlike feats I have done, his spirits fly out
Into my story: say,—Thus mine enemy fell; And thus I set my foot on his neck; even then
The princely blood flows in his cheek, he sweats,
Strains his young nerves, and puts himself in posture
That acts my words. The younger brother, Cad (Once Arvlagus), in as like a figure, [wal,
Strikes life into my speech, and shows much more
Himself conceiving; I am round'd:—
O Cymbeline! heaven, and my conscience, knows,
Thou didst unjustly banish me: whereon,
At three, and two years old, I stole these babs;
Thinking to bear thee of succession, as
Thou rearedst me of my lands. Eurithile,
Thou wast their nurse; they took thee for their mother,
And every day do honour to her grave:

Myself, Belarius, that am Morgan call'd,
They take for natural father. The game is up.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.—Near Milford-Haven.

Enter Pisanio and Imogen.

Imo. Thou told'st me, when we came from horse,
The place
Was near at hand:—Ne'er long'd my mother so
To see me first, as I have now.—Pisanio! Man! Where is Posthumus? What is in thy mind,
That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh.
From the inward of thee? One, but painted thus,
Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd
Beyond self-explanation: Put thyself
Into a haven of less fear, ere wildness
Vanguish my staidler senses. What's the matter?
Why tender'st thou that paper to me, with
A look untender? If it be summer news,
Smile to't before: if winterly, thou need'st [hand!
But keep that countenance still:—My husband's That drug-damn'd Italy hath out-craft'd him,
And he's at some hard point.—Speak, man; thy tongue
May take off some extremity, which to read
Would be even mortal to me.

Pis. Please you, read:
And you shall find me, wretched man, a thing
The most disdain'd of fortune.

Imo. [Reads.] Thy mistress, Pisanio, hath played the trumpet in my bed; the testimonies whereof lie bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak surmises; but from proof as strong as my grief; and as certain as I expect my revenge. That part, thou, Pisanio, must act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of hers. Let thine own hands take away her life: I shall give the opportunities at Milford-Haven: she hath my letter for the purpose: Where, if thou fear to strike, and to make me certain it is done, thou art the pandar to her dishonour, and equally to me disloyal.

Pis. What shall I need to draw my sword? the paper Hath cut her throat already. No, 'tis slander; Whose edge is sharper than the sword; whose tongue Outvomens all the worms of Nile; whose breath Rides on the postind winds, and doth belie All corners of the world: kings, queens, and states, Maids, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave This vipersous slander enters.—What cheer, madam?

Imo. False to his bed! What is it, to be false? To lie in watch there, and to think on him? To weep 'twixt clock and clock? if sleep charge To break it with a fearful dream of him, [nature, And cry myself awake? that's false to his bed? Is it?

Pis. Alas, good lady!

Imo. False? Thy conscience witness:—Iachimo
Did shun the fatal monument; thou didst accuse him of impiety:
Thou then look'dst like a villain; now, methinks, Thy favour's good enough.—Some joy of Italy, Whose mother was her painting, hath betray'd Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion; [him: And, for I am richer than to hang by the wall, I must beripp'd:—to pieces with me!—O,
Men's rows are women's traitors! All good seemBy thy revolt, O husband, shall be thought [ing,
Put on for villainy; not born, where't grows; But, corn, a bait for ladies.

Pis. Good madam, hear me.

Imo. True honest men being heard, like false

Æneas, Were, in his time, thought false; and Simon's Did scandal mark a holy face; took pity [weeping From most true wretchedness: So, thou, Posthu-Will lay the leave on all proper men: [mus, Goodly, and gallant, shall be false, and perjur'd,
From thy great fall.—Come, fellow, be thou honest:
Do thou thy master's bidding: When thou see'st
A little witness my obedience: Look! [him,
I draw the sword myself: take it; and hit
The innocent mansion of my love, my heart:
Fear not; 'tis empty of all things, but grief:
'Tis my master is not there; who was, indeed,
The fruition of it: Do his bidding: strike.
Thou may'st be valiant in a better cause;
But now thou seem'st a coward.

Pis. Hence, vile instrument!
Thou shalt not damu my hand.

Iwo. Why, I must die;
And if I do not by thy hand, thou art
No servant of thy master's: Against self-slaughter
There is a prohibition so divine, [heart;
That cravens my weak hand. Come, here's my Something's afoot';—Soft, soft; we'll on defence;
Obedient as the scabard.—What is here?
The scriptures of the loyal Leonatus,
All turn'd to heresy? Away, away,
Corruptors of my faith! thou shalt no more
Be stomachers to my heart! Thus may poor fools
Believe false teachers: Though those that are be
Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor [tay'd
Stands in worse case of woe.

And thou, Posthumus, thou that didst set up
My disobedience against the kiss of my father,
And make me put into contempt the suits
Of princely fellows, shalt hereafter find
It is no act of common passage, but
A strain of rareness: and I grieve myself,
That thus thou hast disdained me, my heart's dearest
That now thou tirst' on, how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me.—Frythee, despatch:
The lamb entreats the butcher: Where's thy knife?
Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding,
Wilt thou deseire it too.

Pis. O gracious lady,
Since I receiv'd command to do this business,
I have not slept one wink.

Iwo. Do't, and to bed then.

Pis. I'll make mine eye-balls blind first.

Iwo. Wherefore then
Didst undertake it? Why hast thou abus'd
So many miles, with a pretence? this place?
Mine action, and thine own? our horses' labour?
To do what is such? the precious'g'd by her
For my being absent; whereunto I uver
Purpose return? Why hast thou gone so far,
To be unbell, when thou hast ta'en thy stand,
The elected deer before thee?

Pis. But to win time
To lose so bad employment: in the which
I have consider'd of a course; Good lady,
Hear me with patience.

Iwo. Talk thy tongue weary; speak;
I have heard, I am a trumpeter; and mine ear,
Therein false struck, can take no greater wound,
Nor tent, to bottom that. But speak.

Pis. Then, madam,
I thought you would not back again.

Iwo. Most like;
Bringing me here to kill me.

Pis. Not so, neither.

Iwo. But if I were as wise as honest, then
My purpose would prove well. It cannot be,
But that my master knows
Some villain, ay, and singular in his art,
Hath done you both this cursed injury.

Iwo. Some Roman countenance.

Pis. Not on my life.

Iwo. I'll give but notice you are dead; and send him
Some bloody sign of it; for 'tis commanded
I should do so: You shall be miss'd at court,
And that will well confirm it.

Iwo. What shall I do the while? Where hide? How
Or in my life what comfort, when I am [live?
Dead to my husband?

Pis. If you'll back to the court,—

Iwo. No court, no father; nor no more ado
With that harsh, noble, simple, nothing:
That Cloten, whose love-suit hath been to me
As fearful as a siege.

Pis. If not at court,
Then not in Britain must you bide.

Iwo. Where then?
Hath Britain all the sun this times? Day, night,
Are they not but in Britain? I'm the world's volume
Our Britain seems as of it, but not in it;
In a great pool, a swan's nest; Frythee, think
There's lives out of Britain.

Iwo. I am most glad
You think of other place. The ambassador,
Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven
To-morrow; now, if you could wear a mind
Dark as your fortune is; and bnt disguise
That, which, to appear itself, must not yet be;
But by self-danger; you should tread a course
Pretty, and full of view: yea, haply, near
The residence of Posthumus: so uigh, at leat,
That though his actions were not visible, yet
Report should render him hourly to your ear,
As truly as he moves.

Iwo. O, for such meaus!
Though peril to my modesty, not death on't,
I would adventure.

Pis. Well then, here's the point
You must forget to be a woman; change
Command into obedience; fear, and uincees.
(The handmaids of all women, or, more truly,
Woman its pretty self,) to a waggish courage;
Ready in giber, quick-answer'd, sarsity,
And quarellous as the weasel; nay, you must
Forget that rarest treasure of your cheek,
Exposing it (but, O, the harder heart!
Alack no remedy!) to the greedy touch
Of common-kissing Titian: and forget
Your laboursome and dainty trims, whereu
You made great Juno angry.

Iwo. Nay, be brief;
I see into thy end, and am almost
A man already.

Pis. First, make yourself but like one.
Fore-thinking this, I have already st
('Tis in my cloak-bag,) doubled, hat, hose, all
That answer to them: Would you, in their serv-
And with that imitation you can borrow
(In, from quarrellous as the weasel; nay, you must Presume, desire his service, tell him
Wherein you are happy, (which you'll make him kno
If that his head have ear in music,) doubtless Double this, that he will embrace you; for he's honourable,
And, doubling that, most holy. Your means
You have me, rich; and I will never fail [abroad:
Beginning, nor supplyment.

Iwo. Thou art all the comfort
The gods will diet me with. Frythee, away:
There's more to be consider'd; but we'll even
All that good time will give us: This attempt
I'm soldier to, and will abide it with
A prince's courage. Away, I pr'ythee.

Pis. Well, madam, we meditate a short farewell;
Lest, being miss'd, I be suspected
Of your carriage from the court. My noble mistress,
Here is a box: I had it from the queen;
What's in't is precious; if you are sick at sea,
Or stomach-qualm'd at land, a dram of this
Will drive away distemper. — To some shade,
And fit you to your manhood: — May the gods
Direct you to the best!

Iwo. Amen: I thank thee.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, Lucius, and Lords.

Cym. Thus far; and so farewell.

Luc. Thanks, royal sir.

My emperor hath wrote: I must from hence;
And am right sorry, that I must report ye my master's enemy.

Cyn. Our subjects, sir, will not endure his yoke; and for ourselv es to show less sovereignty than they, must needs appear unkingle.

Luc. So, sir, I desire of you a conduct over land, to Milford-Haven.—Madam, all joy befall your grace, and you! Cyn. My lords, thou art appointed for that office: the due of honour in that point:—So, farewell, noble Lucius.

Luc. Your hand, my lord. Sirrah, and, the, and, _Tis_ or and, Royal let Sirrah, and, and, I that make of Britain. Re-enter Coten.

Cyn. Receive it friendly: but it honours what we have given him cause.

'Tis all the better: Your valiant Britons have their wishes in it; Cyn. Lucius hath wrote already to the emperor; How it goes here. It fits us therefore, ripe, our chariots and our horsemen be in readiness: The powers that he already hath in Gallia Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he moves his war for Britain.

Queen. 'Tis not sleepy business; But must be look'd on speedily, and strongly.

Cyn. Our expectation that it would be thus, Hath made us forward. But, my gentle queen, Where is our daughter? She hath not appear'd before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd The duty of the day: She looks us like A thing more made of malice, than of duty: We have noted it. Call her before us; for We have been too slight in sufferance.

[Exit an Attendant. Royal sir, Since the exile of Posthumus, most retir'd Hath her life been; the cure whereof, my lord, 'Tis time must do. 'Beseech your majesty, Forbear sharp speeches to her: she's a lady So tender of rebukes, that words are strokes, And strikes death to her. Re-enter an Attendant.

Cyn. Where is she, sir? How Can her contempt be answer'd?

Attendant. Please you, sir, her chambers are all lock'd; and there's no answer That will be given to the loud'st of noise we make.

Queen. My lord, when last I went to visit her, She pray'd me to excuse her keeping close; Whereunto constrain'd by her infirmity, She should that duty leave unpaid to you, Which daily she was bound to proffer: this She wish'd me to make known; but our great court Made me to blame in memory. Cyn. Her doors lock'd?

Queen. Not seen of late? Grant, heavens, that, which I fear, Prove false! Son, I say, follow the king. Clo. That man of hers, Pisanio, her old servant, I have not seen these two days.

Queen. Go, look after.—[Exit Coten. Pisanio, thou that stand'st so for Posthumus!—He hath a drug of mine: I pray, his absence Proceed by swallowing that; for he believes It is a thing most precious. But for her, Where is she gone? Happy, despair hath seiz'd her; Or, wing'd with fervour of her love, she's flown To her desir'd Posthumus: Gone she is To death, or to dishonour; and my end Can make good use of either: she being down, I have the possession of the British crown. Re-enter Coten.

How now, my son? Cyn. 'Tis certain, she is flied. Go in, and cheer the king; he rages; none Dare come about him.

Queen. All the better; May this night forestall him of the coming day! [Exit Queen.

Cyn. I love, and hate her: for she's fair and royal, And that she hath all courtly parts more exquisite Than lady, ladies, woman; from every one The best she hath, and she, of all compounded, Outuells them all: I love her therefore; But, Disdaining me, and throwing favours on The low Posthumus, slander's her judgment, That what's else rare, is chok'd; and, in that point, I will conclude to hate her, nay, indeed, To be reveng'd upon her. For, when fools

Enter Pisanio.

Shall.—Who is here? What! are you packing, sirrah? Come hither: Ah, you precious pandar! Villain, Where is thy lady! In a word; or else Thou art straightforward with the friends. Pisan. Clo. Where is thy lady? or, by Jupiter I will not ask again. Close villain, I'll have this secret from thy heart, or rip Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus? From whose so many weights of baseness cannot A dram of worth he drawn.

Pisan. Alas, my lord, How can she be with him? When was she miss'd? He is in Rome.

Clo. Where is she, sir? Come nearer; No further halting: satisfy me home, What is become of her? Pisan. O, my all-worthy lord! Clo. Discover where thy mistress is, at once, At the next word.—No more of worthy lord,— Speak, or thy silence on the instant Thy condemnation and thy death.

Pisan. Then, sir, This paper is the history of my knowledge, Touching her flight. [Presenting a letter. Clo. Let's see't: I will pursue her Even to Augustus' throne. Pisan. Or this, or perish. She's far enough; and what he learns by this, May prove his travel, not her danger.

Clo. Humph! Pisan. I'll write to my lord she's dead. O Imogen, Safe may'st thou wander, safe return again! [Aside. Clo. Sirrah, is this letter true?

Pisan. Clo. It is Posthumus' hand; I know't. Sirrah, If thou would'st not be a villain, but do me true service; undergo those employments, wherein I should have cause to use thee, with a serious industry,—that is, what villainy so'e'er I bid thee do, to perform it, directly and truly,—I would think thee an honest man; thou shoudst neither want my means for thy relief, nor my voice for thy preferment.

Pisan. Well, my good lord.

Clo. Wilt thou serve me? For since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not in the course of gratitude but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt thou serve me?

Pisan. Sir, I will.

Clo. Give me thy hand, here's my purse. Hast any of thy late master's garments in thy possession? Pisan. I have, my lord, at my lodging, the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mirth, Clo. The first service thou dost me, fetch that suit hither: let it be thy first service; go.

Pisan. I shall, my lord. [Exit Pisan. Clo. Meet thee at Milford-Haven:—I forgot to ask him one thing; I'll remember anon:—Even there thou villain, Posthumus, will I kill thee.—I would, these garments were come. She said upon a time, (the bitterness of it, I now relish from my heart,) that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back, will I ravish her. First kill him, and in her eyes; there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her conceit. He on the ground, my speech of insult ended on his dead body,—and when my lust hath dined, (which, as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the clothes that she so praised,) to the court I'll knock her back, foot her home again. She hath despised me rejoicingly, and I'll be merry in my revenge.

Re-enter Pisanio, with the clothes.

Be those the garments?

Pis. Ay, my noble lord.

Clo. How long is't since she went to Milford-Haven?

Pis. She can scarce be there yet.

Clo. Bring this apparel to my chamber; that is the second thing that I have commanded thee: the third (if thou wilt) and a contrary mute to my design. Be bat duteous, and true, preferment shall tender itself to thee.—My revenge is now at Milford; 'Would I had wings to follow it!—Come, and be true.

Pis. Thou bidd'st me to my loss: for, true to Were to prove false, which I will never be, [thee, To him that is most true. To Milford go,

And find not her whom thou pursu'st. Flow, flow,

You heavenly blessings, on her! This fool's speed Be cross'd with slowness: labour be his need! [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Before the Cave of Belarius.

Enter Imogen, in boy's clothes.

Imo. I see, a man's life is a tedious one:

I have tir'd myself; and for two nights together

I have made the ground my bed. I should be sick,

But that my resolution helps me.—Milford

When from the mountain-top Pisanio show'd thee,

Thou wast within a ken: O joy! I think,

Foundations fly the wretched: such I mean,

Where they would be rejected. Two beggars told

I could not miss my way: Will poor folks lie, [me,

That have affiliations on them; knowing 'tis

A punishment, or trial? Yes, no wonder,

When rich ones scarce tell true: To lapse in ful.

Is soer, to lie for need; and falsehood less

Is set in kings, than beggars.—My dear lord!

Thou art one of the false ones: Now I think on thee,

My hunger's gone; but even before, I was

At point to sink for food.—But what is this?

Here is a path to it: 'Tis some savage hold:

I was best not call; I dare not call; yet famine,

Ere clean it o'erthrow nature, makes it valiant.

 Plenty, and peace, breeds cowards; hardness ever

Of hardiness is mother.—Ho! who's here? If any thing that's civil, speak; if savage,

Take, or rob me. Ho!—No!—Now I'll enter,

Best draw my sword; and if mine enemy

But fear the sword like me, he'll scarcely look on't;

Such a foe, good heavens! [She goes into the cave.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arrivagus.

Bel. You, Polydore, have prov'd best woodman.

Are master of the feast: Cadwal, and I, [and

Will play the cook, and servant; 'twas our match:

The sweat of industry would dry, and die,

But my soul works to. Gore; our stomachs

Will make what's homely, savoury: Weariness

Can snore upon the flint, when restive sloth

Finds the down pillow hard.—Now, peace be here,

Poor house, that keep'st thyself.

Guil. I am thoroughly weary.

Arv. I am weak with toil, yet strong in appetite.

Guil. There is cold meat 'tis the case: we'll browse

Whilst what we have kill'd be cook'd. [on that,

Bel. Stay; come not in: [Looking in.

But that it eats our victuals, I should think

Here were a fairy.

Guil. What's the matter, sir?

Bel. By Jupiter, an angel! or, if not,

An earthly paragon!—Behold divineness

No elder than a boy!

Enter Imogen.

Imo. Good masters, harm me not.

Before I enter'd here, I call'd; and thought

To have begged, or bought what I have took:

Good truth, [found

I have stolen nought; nor would not, though I had

Gold strew'd o'th' floor. Here's money for my

I would have left it on the board, so soon [meat

As I had made my meal; and parted

With prayers for the provider.

Are. All gold and silver rather torn to dirt!

As 'tis no better reckond, of those Who worship dirty gods.

Imo. I see you are angry:

Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should

Have died, had I not made it.

Bel. Whither bound?

Imo. To Milford-Haven, sir.

Bel. What is your name?

Imo. Fidele, sir: I have a kinsman, who

Is bound for Italy; he embark'd at Milford;

To whom being gone, almost spent with hunger,

I am fallen in this offence.

Bel. Pr'ythee, fair youth,

Think us no churls; nor measure our good minds

By this rude place we live in. Well encounter'd:

'Tis almost night: you shall have better cheer

Here you depart; and thanks, to stay and eat it—

Boys, bid him welcome.

Guil. Were you a woman, youth,

I should woo hard, but be your groom.—In

I bid you for, as I'd buy. [honesty,

I'll make't my comfort,

He is a man; I'll love him as my brother—

And anch a welcome as I'd give to him,

After long absence, such as yours:—Most wel-

Be sprightly, for you fall 'mongst friends. [come! Imo.

'Mongst friends? If brothers?—Would it had been so, that they [prize

Had been my father's sons, then had my Aide

Been less; and so more equal ballasting

To thee, Posthumus.

He wrings at some distress.

Guil. 'Wold, I could free't!

Arr. Or I: what'er it be,

What pain it cost, what danger! Gods!

Bel. Hark, boys.

[Whispering.

Imo. Great men,

That had no court no bigger than this cave.

That did attend themselves, and had the virtue

Which their own conscience seal'd them, (laying by

That nothing gift of differing multitude,

Could not out-peep these twin.' Pardon me, gods! I

'd change my sex to be companions with them,

Since Leonatus false.

Bel. It shall be so: [in

Boys, we'll go dress our hunt.—Fair youth, come

Discourse is heavy, fasting; when we have sopp'd,

We'll mannerly demand thee of thy story,

So far as thou wilt speak it.

Guil. Pray, draw near.

Arr. The night to the owl, and morn to the lark, less welcome.

Imo. Thanks, sir.

Arr. I pray, draw near. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—Rome.

Enter Two Senators and Tribunes.

1 Sen. This is the tenour of the emperor's writ;
That since the common men are now in action 'Gainst the Pannonians and Dalmatians; And that the legions now in Gallia are Full weak to undertake our wars against Theirs. The immediate commissions; that we do incite The gentry to this business: He creates Lucius pro-consul: and to you the tribunes, For this immediate levy, he commands His absolute commission. Long live Caesar! 2 Sen. Is Lucius general of the forces? Ay. 2 Sen. Remaining now in Gallia? With those legions Which I have spoke of, whereunto your levy Must be supplyant: The words of your commission Will tie you to the numbers, and the time Of their despatch.

Tri. We will discharge our duty.

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Forest, near the Cave.

Enter Cloten.

Clo. I am near to the place where they should meet, if Pisanio have mapped it truly. How fit his performances seem! Why should his mistress, who was made by him that made the tailor, not be fit too? the rather (saving reverence of the word) for 'tis said, a woman's fitness comes by fits. Therein I must play the workman. I dare speak it to myself, (for it is not vain-glory, for a man and his glass to confer; in his own chamber, I mean,) the lines of my body are as well drawn as his: no less young, more strong, not beneath him in fortunes; beyond him in the advantage of the time; above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions: yet this imperceiverent thing loves me in my despite. What mortality is! Posthumus, thy head, which now is growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour be off; thy mistress enforced; thy garments cut to pieces before thy face: and all this done, spurn her home to her father: who may, haply, he a little angry for so rough usage: but my mother, having power of his testines, shall turn all into my commendations. My horse is tied up safe: Out, sword! I am for a purpose! Fortune, put them into my hand! This is the very description of their meeting-place; and the fellow dares not deceive me.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Before the Cave.

Enter, from the Cave, Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, and Imogen.

Bel. You are not well: [To Imogen.] remain here in the cave; We'll come to you after hunting.

Arv. Brother, stay here:

[To Imogen.]

Are we not brothers?

Imo. So man and man should be; But clay and clay differs in dignity, Whose dust is both alike. I am very sick.

Gui. Go you to hunting, I'll abide with him.

Imo. So sick I am, I fear:—yet I am not well: But not so citizen a wanton, as To seem to die, ere sick:—so please you, leave me; Stick to your journal course: the breach of custom Is breach of all. I am ill; but your being by me Can find no amends: Society is no court To one not socable: I'm not very sick, Since I can reason of it. Pray you, trust me here: I'll rob none but myself; and let me die, Staining so poorly.

Bel. And I love thee; I have spoke it: How much the quantity, the weight as much, As I do love my father.

Bel. What? how? how?
Thy words, I grant, are bigger: for I wear not
My dagger in my mouth. Say, what thou art;
Why should I yield to thee?

Thou villain base,
Know'st me not by my clothes?

No, not thy tailor, rascal;
Who is thy grandfather; he made those clothes,
Which, as it seems, make thee.

Thou precious varlet,
My tailor made them not.

Hence then, and thank
The man that gave them thee. Thou art some fool;
I am loath to beat thee.

Thou injurious thief,
Hear but my name, and tremble.

What's thy name?

It, Cloten, thou villain.

Cloten, thou double villain, be thy name,
I cannot tremble at it; were't toad, or adder, spider,
'Twould move me sooner.

To thy further fear,
Nay, to thy mere confusion, thou shalt know
I'm son to the queen.

I'm sorry for it; not seeming
So worthy as thy birth.

Art not afraid?

Those that I reverence, those I fear; the
At fools I laugh, not fear them.

Die the death:
When I have slain thee with my proper hand,
I'll follow those that even now fled hence,
And on the gates of Lud's town set your heads;
Yield, rustick mountaineer. [Exit, fighting.]

Enter Belarius and Arviragus.

Bel. No company's abroad. [Sure.

Arv. None in the world: You did mistake him,
Bel. I cannot tell: Long it is since I saw him,
But time hath nothing burred those lines of favour
Which then he wore; the snatches in his voice,
And burst of speaking, were as his: I am absolute,
Twas very Cloten.

In this place we left them:
I wish my brother made good time with him,
You say he is so fell.

Bel. Being scarce made up,
I mean, to man, he had not apprehension
Of running terrors; for the effect of judgment
Is oft the cause of fear: But see, thy brother.

Re-enter Guiderius, with Cloten's head.

Gui. This Cloten was a fool; an empty parse,
There was no money in't; not Hercules
Could have knock'd out his brains. He had not Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne
My head, as I do his.

Bel. What hast thou done?

Gui. I am perfect, what: cut off one Cloten's
Son to the queen, after his own report; [head,
Who call'd me traitor, mountaineer; and swore,
With his own single hand he'd take us in,
Displace our heads, where (thank the gods!) they
And set them on Lud's town.

Bel. We are all undone.

Gui. Why, worthy father, what have we to lose,
But, that he swore to take, our lives? The law
Protects not us: Then why should we be tender,
To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us;
Play judge, and executioner, all himself;
For we do fear the law? What company
Discover you abroad?

Bel. No single soul
Can we set eye on, but in all safe reason,
He must have some attendants. Through his humour
Was nothing but mutation; ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse: not frenzy, not Absolute madness could so far have rav'd
To bring him here alone. Although, perhaps,
It may be heard at court, that such as we
Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time
May make some stronger head: the which he hear-
(As it is like him,) might break out and swear [ing,

He'd fetch us in; yet it's not probable
To come alone, either he so undertaking,
Or try so suffering: then on good ground we fear
If we do fear this body hath a tail
More perilous than the head.

Arv. Let ordinance
Come as the gods forsay it: hawwso'er,
My brother hath done well. I had no mind
To hunt this day: the boy Fidele's sickness
Did make my way long forth.

Bel. With his own sword, and
Which he did wave against my throat, I have taken
His head from him: I'll throw't into the creek
Behind our rock; and let it to the sea,
And tell the fishes, he's the queen's son, Cloten:
That's all I teck.

K. I fear, 'twill be reveng'd:
Would, Polydore, thou hast'd not done't! though
Becomes thee well enough. [value

Arv. 'Would I had done't,
So the revenge alone pursued me!—Polydore,
I love thee brotherly; but envious,
Thou hast robb'd me of this deed: I would, re-
That possible strength might meet, would seek us
And put us to our answer. [through,

Bel. Well, 'tis done:
We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger
Where there's no profit. I pray thee, to our rock;
You and Fidele play the cooks: I'll stay
Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him
To dinner presently.

Arv. Poor sick Fidele! I
Willingly to him: To gain his colour,
I'd let a parish of such Clotens' blood,
And raise myself for charity. [Exit.

Bel. O thou goddess,
Thou divine NATURE, how thyself through lazโรงแรม
In these two princely safe! They are as gentle
As zephyrs, blowing below the violet,
Not wagging his sweet head: and yet as rough,
Their royal blood enchaf'd, as the rudest wind,
That by the top doth take the mountain pine,
And make him stoop to the vale. 'Tis wonderful,
That an invisible instinct should frame them
To royalty unlearn'd; honour untaught;
Civility not seen from other: valour,
That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop
As if it had been sow'd! Yet still it's strange,
What Cloten's being here to portends;
Or what his death will bring us.

Re-enter Guiderius.

Gu. Where's my brother?

Bel. Where to sent Cloten's clotpoll down the stream,
In embassy to his mother; his body's hostage
For his return. [Solem music.

Bel. My lugubrious instrument!
Hark, Polydore, it sounds! what but occasion
Hath Cadwal now to give it motion! Hark!

Gui. Is he at home?

Bel. He went hence even now.

Gui. What does he mean? since death of my dear's mother.

It did: then speak before. All solemn things
Should answer solemn accidents. The matter?
Triumphs for nothing, and lamenting toys,
Is jollity for apes, and grief for boys,
Is Cadwal mad?

Re-enter Arviragus, bearing Imoene as dead in his

Bel. Look, here he comes,
And brings the dire occasion in his arms,
Of what we blame him for!

Arv. The bird is dead,
That we have made so much on. I had rather
Have skipp'd from sixteen years of age to sixty,
To have turn'd my leaping time into a crutch,
Than have saw this.

Gui. O sweetest, fairest lily!
My brother wears thee not the one-half so well,
As when thou grew'st thyself.

Bel. O, melancholy!
Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? find
The ooze, to show what coast thy sluggish crare
Might easiest harbour in?—Thou blessed thing!
Jove knows what man thou might'st have made;
but I,
Thou diest, a most rare boy, of melancholy!
How found you him?

Arv. Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber,
Not as death's dart, being laugh'd at: his right
Reposing on a cushion. [cheek

Gui. Where?

Arv. O' the floor;
His arms thus leagued: I thought, he slept; and put [nesh
My clouted brogues from off my feet, whose rude-
Answer'd my steps too loud.

Gui. Why, he but sleeps:
If lie be gone, he'll make his grave a bed;
With female fairies will his tomb be honor'd,
And worms will not come to thee.

Gui. With fairest flowers,
Whilst summer lasts, and I live here, Fidele,
I'll sweeten thy sad grave: Thou shalt not lack
The flower, that's like thy face, pale primrose; nor
The azur'd hare-bell, or like thee veins, no, nor
The leaf of eglantine, whom not to slander,
Out-sweet in th'azure, that didst not Ruddock would
With charitable bill [O bill, sore-shaming
Those rich-left heirs, that let their fathers lie
Without a monument! bring thee all this;
Yes, and furr'd moss besides, when flowers are
To winter-ground thy corse.

Pr'ythee, have done; And do not play in wench-like words with that
Which is so serious. Let us bury him,
And not protract with admiration what
Is now due debt. To the grave:

Gui. Say, where shall lay'st him?

Gui. By good Euphrile, our mother.

Arv. Be't so! And let us, Polydore, though now our voices
Have got the mannick crack, sing him to the ground,
As once our mother; use like note, and words,
Save that Euphrile must be Fidele.

Cass. I cannot sing: I'll weep, and word it with thee:
For notes of sorrow, out of tune, are worse
Than priests and fanes that lie.

Gui. We'll speak it then.

Bel. Great griefs I see, medicine the less: for Cloten Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son, boys:
And, though he came our enemy, remember,
He was paid for that: Though mean and mighty,
Together, have one dust; Yet reverence, [rotting
(That angel of the world,) doth make distinction
Of place 'twixt high and low. Our foe was prince:
And though you took his life, as being our foe, [ly
Yet bury him as a prince.

Thersites' body is as good as Ajax,
When neither are alive.

Gui. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to the
My father hath a reason for't.

Gui. If you'll go fetch him,
We'll say our song the whilst. —Brother, begin.

Gui. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to the
My father hath a reason for't.

Gui. Come on then, and remove him.

Gui. So,—Begin.

SONG.

Guil. Fear no more the heat o' the sun,
Nor the furious winter's rage;
Thou thy worldly task hast done,
Home art gone, and ta'en thy wages:

Golden lads and girls all must,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.

Arv. Fear no more the frown o' the great,
Thou art past the tyrant's stroke;
Care no more to clothe and eat;
To thee the reed is as the oak:
The sceptre, learning, physic, must
All follow this, and come to dust.

Gui. Fear no more the lightning-flash,
Nor the all-destroying thunder-stone.
Fear not slander, censure rash;
Thou hast finish'd joy and moan:
Both. All lovers young, all lovers must
Consign to thee, and come to dust.

Gui. No exorciser harm thee!
Nor any witchcraft charm thee!
Ghost un laid forbear thee!
Nothing ill come near thee!
Both. Quiet consummation have;
And renowned be thy grave!

Re-enter Belarius with the body of Cloten.

Gui. We have done our obsequies: Come, lay him down.

Bel. Here's a few flowers; but about midnight,
The herds, that have on them cold dew o' the night,
Are strewings fit'st for graves. — Upon their faces:
You were as fair as angels; even so
These herb'lets shall, which we upon you strew:
Come on, away: apart upon our knees.
The ground, that gave them first, has them again:
Their pleasures here are past, so is their pain.

Euriphile, Gui.nderius, and Arviragus.

Imo. 'Awaking! 'Ere, sir, to Milford-Haven;
Which is the way?

[thither
I thank you. — By you bush? — Pray, how far
'Ods pittikins! — can it be six miles yet? — [sleep,
You have gone all night; — Faith, I'll lie down and
But, soft! no bedfellow! — O, gods and goddesses! [seeing the body]

These flowers are like the pleasures of the world;
This bloody man, the care on! — I hope, I dream;
For, so, I thought I was a cave-keeper,
And cook to honest creatures: But 'tis not so;
'Twas but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing,
Which the brain makes of fumes: Our very eyes
Are sometimes like our judgments, blind.
Good if trembling still betheet fear: But if there [faith,
Yet left in heaven as small a drop of pity
As a wren's eye, fear'd gods, a part of it!
The dream's here still: even when I wake, it
Without me, as within me; not imag'd, felt.
A headless man! — The garments of Posthumus!
I know the shape of his leg: this is his hand;
His foot Mercurial: his Martial thigh;
The brawns of Hercules: but his Jovial face—
Murder in heaven? — How? — 'Tis gone.—Pisanio,
All curses madd'd Hecuba gave the Greeks,
And mine to boot, be darte on thee! Thou,
Conspire'd with that irregular devil, Cloten,
Hast here cut off my lord.—To write, and read,
Be henceforth treacherous! — Dam'd Pisanio
Hath with his beard'd letter wond'ried Pisanio—
From this most bravest vessel of the world
Struck the main-top! — O, Posthumus! alas,
Where is thy head? where's that? Ah me! where's Pisanio might have kill'd thee at the heart, [that
And left this head on. — How should this be?
Pisanio?
'Tis he, and Cloten: malice and lure in them
Have laid this woe here. O, 'tis pregnant, pregnant!
The drug he gave me, which, he said, was precious
And cordial to me, have I not found it
Murd'rous to the senses? That confirms it home:
This is Pisanio's deed, and Cloten's: O—
Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood,
That we the horrid may seem to those
Which chance to find us: O, my lord, my lord.
Enter Lucius, a Captain, and other Officers, and a Soothsayer.

Cap. To them, the legions garrison'd in Gallia, After your will, have cross'd the sea; attending You here at Milford-Haven, with your ships: They are here in readiness.

LUC. But what from Rome? Cap. The senate hath stirr'd up the confederates, And gentlemen of Italy; most willing spirits, That promise noble service: and they come Under the conduct of bold Tacitum, Sienna's brother.

LUC. When expect you them? Cap. With the next benefit o' the wind.

LUC. This forwardness Makes our hopes fair. Command, our present numbers Be muster'd; bid the captains look to't. Now, sir, What have you dream'd, of late, of this war's purpose?

SOOTH. Last night the very gods show'd me a (I fast, and pray'd, for their intelligence,) Thus—I saw Jove's bird, the Roman eagle, wing'd From the spungy south to this part of the west, There vanish'd in the sunbeam's glare, which portends, (Unless my sins abuse my divination,) Success to the Roman host.

LUC. Dream often so, And never false. Soft, ho! what trunk is here, What's the run on? That sometime It was a worthy building. How! a page!— Or dead, or sleeping on him? But dead, rather: For nature doth abhor to make his bed With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.— Let's see the boy's face. Cap. He is alive, my lord.

LUC. He'll then instruct us of this body. Young Inform us of thy fortunes; for, it seems, [one, They crave to be demanded. Who is this, Tho' makest thy bloody pillow? Or who was he, That, otherwise than noble nature did, Hath alter'd that good picture? What's thy interest In this sad wreck? How came it? Who is it? What art thou?

IMO. I am nothing: or if not, Nothing to be were letter. This was my master. A very valiant Briton, and a good, That here by mountaineers lies slain:— alas! There are no more such masters: I may wander From east to occident, cry out for service, Try many, all good, serve truly; never Find such another master.

LUC. 'Lack, good youth! Thou mov'st no less with thy complaining, Than thy master in bleeding; Say his name, good friend.

IMO. Richard da Champ. If I do lie, and do No harm by it, though the gods hear, I hope They'll pardon it. [Aside.] Say you, sir? LUC. Thy name? IMO. Fidele.

LUC. Thou dost approve thyself the very same: Thy name well fits thy faith; thy faith, thy name. Wilt thou chance with me? I will not say, Thou dost well master; but, be sure, No less belov'd. The Roman emperor's letters, Sent by a consul to me, should not sooner Than thine own worth prefer thee; Go with me. IMO. I'll follow, sir. But first, an't please the' ll hide my master from the flies, as deep [as gods, As these poorpickaxes can dig: and when With wild wood-leaves and weeds I have strew'd And on it said a centuary of prayers, [this grave, Such as I can, twice over, I'll weep, and sigh; And, leaving so his service, follow you, So please you entertain me.

LUC. Ay, good youth; and rather father thee, than master thee.— My friends, The boy hath taught me many duties: Let us Find out the prettiest daizied plot we can, And make him with our pikes and parisians A grave; Come; arm him. Boy, he is prefer'd By thee to us; and he shall be interr'd, As soldiers can. Be cheerful; wipe thine eyes: Some falls are means the happier to arise. [Exeunt. SCENE III.—A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Lords, and Pisani.

CYM. Again; and bring me word, how 'tis with A fever with the absence of her son; [her. A madness, of which her life's in danger.— Ha ven, How deeply you at once do torch me! I mogen, The great part of my comfort, gone; my queen Upon a desperate bed; and in a time, When fearful war's point at me, her son gone, So needful for this present: It strikes me, past The hope of comfort.—But for thee, fellow, Who needs must know of her departure, and Dost seem so ignorant, we'll enforce it from thee By a sharp torture.

PIS. Sir, my life is yours, I humbly set it at your will: But, for my mistress, I nothing know where she remains, why gone, for when she purposes return. 'Besech you Hold me your loyal servant. [highness, 1 Lord. Good my liege, The day that she was missing, he was here: I dare be bound he's true, and shall perform All parts of his subjection loyalty.

For Cloten— There wants no diligence in seeking him, And will, no doubt, be found.

Cym. The time's troublesome: We'll slip you for a season; but our jealousy Does yet depend.

1 Lord. So please your majesty, The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn, Are landed on your coast; and, with a supply Of Roman gentlemen, by the senate sent. CYM. Now for the counsel of my son, and queen! I am amaz'd with matter.

1 Lord. Good my liege, Your preparation can afford no less; you're ready: Than what you hear of: come more, for more The want is, but to put those powers in motion, That long to move.

Cym. And meet the time, as it seems, with a supply To yield me often tidings: Neither know I What can from Italy annoys us: but We grieve at chances here. [Away. [Exeunt. PIS. I heard no letter from my master, since I wrote him, I mogen was slain: 'Tis strange; Nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise To yield me often tidings: Neither know I What is betid to Cloten; but remain Perplex'd in all. The heavens still must work: Wherein I am false, I am honest: not true, to be Sure. These present wars shall find I love my country, Even to the note o' the king, or I'll fall in them. All other doubts, by time let them be cleared: Fortune brings in some boats, that are not steer'd. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Before the Cave.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

GUI. The noise is round about us. BEL. Let us from it. ARV. What pleasure, sir, find we in life, to lock it From action and adventure?

GUI. Nay, what hope Have we in hiding us? this way, the Romans Must or for Britons slay us; or receive us For barbarous and unnatural revolts During their use, and slay us after. BEL. Son, We'll higher to the mountains; there secure us. To the king's party there's no going: newness.
Of Cloten's death (we being not known, not mus-
Among the hands, may drive us to a render [ter'd]
Where we have liv'd; and so extort from us
That which we've done, whose answer would be Drawn on with torture. {death
Gus. This is, sir, a doubt,
In such a time, nothing becoming you,
Nor satisfying us.

Arm. It is not likely,
That when they hear the Roman horses neigh,
Behold their quarter'd fires, have both their eyes,
And ears so col'd importantly as now,
That they will waste their time upon our note,
To know from whence we are.

Bel. Q, I am known
Of secrecy in the army: many years
[Aside. Though Cloten then but young, you see, not wore
From my remembrance. And, besides, the king
Hath not deserv'd my service, nor your loves;
Who find in my exile the want of breeding,
The certainty of this hard life; aye hopeless
To have the courtesy your cradle promis'd,
But to be still hot summer's tanlings, and
The shrinking slaves of winter.

Gui. Better to cease to be. Pray, sir, to the army:
I and my brother are not known; yourself,
So out of thought, and thereto so o'ergrown,
Cannot be question'd.

Arm. By this sun that shines,
I'll theor: What thing is it, that I never Did see man die? scarce ever look'd on blood;
But that of coward hares, hot goats, and venison?
Never bestrid a horse, save one, that had
A rider like myself, who ne'er wore robe
Nor iron on his head, that am shad'm
To look upon the holy sun, to have
The benefit of his bless'd beams, remaining
So long a poor unknoun.

Gui. By heavens, I'll go;
If you will bless me, sir, and give me leave,
I'll take the better care; but if you will not,
The hazard therefore due fall on me, by
The hands of Romans!

Arm. So say I; Amen.

Bel. No reason I, since on your lives you set
So slight a valuation, should reserve
My crack'd one to more care. Have with you, boys:
If in your country wars you chance to die,
That is my bed too, lads, and there I'll lie:
Lead, lead. The time seems long; their blood
Thinks scorn,
Till it fly out, and show them princes born.
[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Field between the British and Roman Camps.

Enter Posthumus, with a bloody handkerchief.

Post. Yea, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee; for I wish'd
Thou shouldst be colour'd thus. You married ones,
If each of you would take this course, how many
Must murder wives much better than themselves,
For crying but a little?—O, Pisanio!
Every good servant does not all commands
No bond, but to do just ones.—Gods! if you
Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults, I never Had liv'd to put on this: so had you saved
The noble Imogen to repent; and struck Me, wretch, more worth your vengeance. But,
alack,
You snatch some hence for little faults; that's
To have them fall no more: you some permit [love,
To stand ill with ill, each elder worse;
And make them dread it to the doers' thirft.
But Imogen is your own: Do your best wills, [hither
And make me bless'd to obey!—I am brought
Among the Italian gentry, and to fight Against my lady's kingdom: 'Tis enough
That, Britain, I have kill'd thy mistress; peace
I'll give no wound to thee. Therefore, good
Heart patient in my purpose: I'll disrobe me
Of these Italian weeds, and suit myself
As does a Briton peasant: so I'll fight
Against the part I come with; so I'll die
For thee, O Imogen, even for whom my life
Is, every breath, a death: and this unknown,
Pitted nor hated, to the face of peril
Myself I'll dedicate. Let me make men know
More value in me, than my habits show.
Gods, put the strength o' the Leonati in me!
To shone the guile o' the world, I will begin
The fashion, less without, and more within. [Exit

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter at one side, Lucius, Iachimo, and the Roman army; at the other side, the British army; Leonatus
Posthumus following it, like a poor soldier.
They march over, and go out. Alarums. Then enter again in skirmish, Iachimo and Posthumus:
he vanquisheth and discarrieth Iachimo, and then leaves him.

Iach. The heaviness and guilt within my bosom
Takes off my manhood: I have belied a lady,
The princess of the sly ruddy, and this country,
Revengeingly enfeebles me; Or, could this car.
A very drudge of nature's, have subdud me,
In my profession? Kindness and honours, borne
As I wear mine, are titles but of scorn.
If that thy gentry, Britain, go before
This lout, as he exceeds our lords, the odds
Is, that we scarce are men, and you are gods. [Exit

The battle continues: the Britons fly; Cymbeline is taken: then enter, to his rescue, Belarius,
Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. Stand, stand! We have the advantage of the ground;
The lane is guarded; nothing routs us, but
The villainy of our fears.

Gui. Arm. Stand, stand, and fight!

Enter Posthumus, and seconds the Britons: They rescue Cymbeline, and exeunt. Then, enter Lucius, Iachimo, and Imogen.

Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and save thyself:
For friends kill friends, and the disorder's such
As war were hood-wink'd.

Iach. 'Tis their fresh supplies.

Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely. Or betimes
Let's re-enforce, or fly. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter Posthumus and a British Lord.

Lord. Cam'st thou from where they made the stand?

Post. Though you, it seems, come from the fliers.

Lord. I did.

Post. No blame be to you, sir; for all was lost,
But that the heavens fought: The king himself
Of his wings destitute, the army broken,
And but the back of Britons, all a flying
Through a strait lane; the enemy full-hearted.
Lolling the tongue with slaughterings, having work
More plentiful than tools to do't, struck down
Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling Merely through their fear; that the strat pass was damned
With dead men, hurt behind, and cowards living
To die with lengthen'd shame.

Lord. Where was this lane?

Post. Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf;
Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier,—
An honest one, I warrant; who deserv'd
So long a breeding, as his white beard came to,
In doing this for his country;—atthwart the lane,
He, with two striplings, (lads more like to run
The part by chance, than to commit such slaughter;
With faces fit for masks, or rather fairer
Than those for preservation cast'd, or shame,)
Made good the passage: cry'd to those that died,
Our Britain's haris disfig'ring, not our men:
To darkness fleet, souls that fly backwards! Stand;
Or we are Romans, and will give you that
Like beasts, which you shun beastly; and may save,
But to look back in frown: stand, stand.—These three
Three thousand confident, in act as many,
(For three performers are the file, and more charming,
With their own nobleness, (which could have
A distaff to a lance,) gilded pale looks, (turn'd;
Part, shame, part, spirit renew'd; that some
But by example (O, a sin in war, [turn'd coward Damm'd in the first beginners!) gan to look
The way that they did, and to grin like lions
Upon the broken; the hunters then began
A stop i'the chace, a retire; anon,
A rout, confusion thick: Forwith, they fly
Chickens, the way which they stoop'd eagles;
And flies.

The strides they victors made: And now our
Like fragments in hard voyages, became [open
The life o' the need; having found the back-door
Of the ungarded hearts, Heavens, how they
Would have us [friends
Some, shain before; some, dying; some, the O'erborne i'the former wave: ten, chac'd by one,
Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty:
Those, that would die or ere resist, are grown
The mortal bugs o'the field.

Lord: This was strange chance:
A narrow lane! an old man, and two boys!
Post. Nay, do not wonder at it: You are made
Rather to wonder at the things you bear,
Than to work any. Will you rhyme upon it,
And vent it for a mockery? Here is one:
Two boys, an old man twice a boy, a lane,
Preserv'd the Britons, was the Romans' bane.
Lord. Nay. be not angry, sir,
Post. What, black, to what end?
I know, he'll quickly fly my friendship too.
You have put me into rhyme.
Lord. Farewell; you are angry.
Exeunt.

2 Cap. There was a fourth man, in a zilly habit,
That gave the affront with them.
1 Cap. So 'tis reported:
But none of them can be found.—Stand! who is
A Roman; [there?]
Who had not now been drooping here, if seconds
Had answer'd him.
2 Cap. Lay hands on him; a dog!
A leg of Rome shall not return to tell [service
If these crows have peck'd them here: He brags his
As if he were of note: bring him to the king.

Enter Cymbeline, attended : Belarius, Guiderius,
Arriragus, Pisanio, and Roman Captains.
The Captains present Posthumus to Cymbeline, who delivermes over to a Gaoler: after which, all go out.

SCENE IV.—A Prison.

Enter Posthumus, and Two Gaolers.

1 Goo. You shall not now be stolen, you have
So, grace, as you find pasture. [locks upon you;
2 Goo. Ay, a story:—[Gaolers.

Post. Most welcome, bondage! for thou art a
I think, to liberty: Yet am I better [way,
Than one that's sick o' the gout: since he had ra-
Dropt the way to secrecy, than be cur'd
By the sure physician, death; who is the key.
To unbar these locks. My conscience! thou art fetter'd
[give me
More than in my shanks, and wrists: You good gods,
The pen of instrument, to pick that bolt.
Then, free for ever! 'tis enough, I am sorry
So children temporal fathers do appease;
Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent?
I cannot do it better than in gyres,
Dress'd more than constraint'd: to satisfy,
If of my freedom 'tis the main part, take
No stricter render of me, than my all.
I know, you are more excellent than vile men,
Who of their broken debters take a third,
A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again
On their abatement: that's not my desire:
For Imogen's dear life, take mine; and though
'Tis not so dear, yet 'tis a life; you coin'd it:
Two men and man, they weigh not every
Though light, take pieces for the figure's sake:
You rather mine, being yours: And so, great
If you will take this audit, take this life, [powers,
And cancel these cold bonds. O Imogen!
I'll speak to thee in silence.
[He sleeps.

Solemn music. Enter, as an appari tion, Sicilius
Leonatus, father to Posthumus, an old man,
Attired like a warrior; leading in his hand an ancient matron, his wife, and mother to Posthumus,
With music before them. Then, after other mu-ic, follow the two young Leonati, brothers to Posthumus, with wounds, as they died in the wars. They circle Posthumus round, as he lies sleeping.

Stel. No more, thou thunder-master, show
Thy spite on mortal flies:
With Mars fall out, with Juno chide,
That thy adulteries
Razes and revenges.
Hath my poor boy done aught but well,
Whose face I never saw?
I died, whilst in the womb he stay'd
Attending Nature's law.
Whose father then (as men report,
Thou orphans' father art,)
Thou should'st have been, and shielded him
From this earth-exing smart.

Moth. Lucina lent not me her aid,
But took me in my threes;
That from me was Posthumus ript,
Came crying 'mongst his foes,
A thing of pity!
Act 5.

Cymbeline.

Sici. Great nature, like his ancestry, Moulded the stuff so fair, That he deserv'd the praise o'the world, As great Sicilius' heir.

1 Bro. When once he was mature for man, In Britain where was he That could stand up in this parallel; Or fruitful object be In eye of Imogen, that best Could deem his dignity?

Moth. With marriage wherefore was he mock'd, To be exil'd, and thrown From Leonati seat, and cast From her his dear delight, Sweet Imogen?

Sici. Why did you suffer Iachimo, Slight thing of Italy, To taint his nobler heart and brain With needless jealousy; And to become the gheck and scorn O' the other's villainy?

2 Bro. For this, from stiller seats we came, Our parents, and us twain, That, striking in our country's cause, Fell bravely, and were slain; Our featly, and Tenantius' right, With honour to maintain.

1 Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus hath To Cymbeline perform'd; Then Jupiter, thy king of gods, Whay hast thou thus adjourn'd The graces for his merits due; Being all to dolours turn'd?

Sici. Thy crystal window ope; look out; No longer exercise, Upon a valiant race, thy harsh And potent injuries:

Moth. Since, Jupiter, our son is good, Take off his miseries.

Sici. Peep through thy marble mansion; help! Or we poor ghosts will cry To the shining synod of the rest, Against thy deity.

2 Bro. Help, Jupiter; or we appeal, And from thy justice fly.

Jup. No more, you petty spirits of region low, Offend our hearing: hush!—How dare you ghosts, Accuse the thunderer, whose bolt you know, Sky-plant'd, batters all rebelling coasts? Poor shadows of Elysium, hence! and rest Upon your never-withering banks of flowers: Be not with mortal accidents opprest: No care of yours it is: you know, 'tis ours. Whom best I love, I cross; to make my gift, The more delay'd, delighted. Be content; Your low-laid row, our godhead will uplift: His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent. Our Jovial star reign'd at his birth, and in Our temple was he married.—Rise, and fade I! He shall be lord of lady Imogen, And the glesier much, and his ascension made. This tablet lay upon his breast; wherein Our pleasure his full fortune dot confine; And so, away: no further with your din Express impatience, lest you stir up mine— Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline. [Ascends. Sici. He came in thunder; his celestial breath Was sulphurous to smell: the holy eagle Stoop'd, as to foot us: his ascension is More sweet than our bless'd fields: his royal bird Prunes the immortal wing, and cloys his beak, As when his god is pleas'd.

All. Thanks, Jupiter! Sici. The marble pavement closes, he is enter'd His radiant roof:—Away! and, to be blest, Let us with care perform his great behest. [Ghosts vanish.

Post. [Waking.] Sleep, thou hast been a grand sire, and begot A father to me: and thou hast created A mother, and two brothers: But, (O scorn!) Gone! they were born so soon as they were born. And so I am awake.—Poor wretches that depend On greatness' favour, dream as I have done; Wake, and find nothing.—But, alas, I swerve: Many dream not to find, neither deserve, And yet are steep'd in favours; so am I. That have this golden chance, and know not why, What fairies haunt this ground? A book? O, rare Be not, as is our fangled world, a garment [one! Nobler than that it covers: let thy effects So follow, to be most unlike our courtiers, As good as promise.

[Reads.] When as a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be cut off a branch, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow; then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty.

'Tis still a dream; or else such stuff as madmen Tongue, and brain not: either both, or nothing: Or senseless speaking, or a speaking such As sense cannot unite. Be what it is, The action of my life is like it, which I'll keep, if but for sympathy.

Re-enter Gaolers.

Gaol. Come, sir, are you ready for death?

Gaol. Hanging is the word, sir; if you be ready for that, you are well cooked.

Post. So, if I prove a good repast to the spectators, the dish pays the shot.

Gaol. A heavy reckoning for you, sir: But the comfort is, you shall be called to no more payments, fear no more tavern bills; which are often the sadness of parting, as the procuring of mirth: you come in faint for part of meat, depart feeling with too much drink; sorry that you have paid too much, and sorry that you are paid too much; purse and brain both empty; the brain the heavier for being too light, the purse too light, being drawn of heaviness: O! of this contradiction you shall now be quit.—O, the charity of a penny cord! it sums up thousands in a trice; you have no true debtor and creditor but it; of what's past, is, and to come, the discharge:—Your neck, sir, is pen, book, and counters; so the acquaintance follows.

Post. I am merrier to die, than thou art to live.

Gaol. Indeed, sir, he that sleeps feels not the tooth-ache: But a man that were to sleep your sleep, and a hangman to help him to bed, I think, he would change places with his officer: for, look you, sir, you know not which way you shall go.

Post. Yes, indeed, do I, fellow.

Gaol. Your death has eyes in's head then; I have not seen him so pictured: you must either be directed by some that take upon them to know; or take upon yourself that, which I am sure you do not know; or jump the after-enquiry on your own peril: and how you shall speed in your Journey's end, I think you'll never return to tell one.

Post. If I tell thee, fellow, there are none want eyes to direct them the way I am going, but such as wink, and will not use them.

Gaol. What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes, to see the way of blindness! I am sure, hanging's the way of winking.
Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Knock off his manacles; bring your prisoner to the king.

Post. Thou bringest good news;—I am called to be made free.

Cym. I'll be hanged then.

Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a gaoler; no bolts for the dead.

[Exeunt Posthumus and Messenger.

Cym. Unless a man would marry a gallows, and beget young giblets, I never saw one so prone. Yet, the more to believe, there are verier knives desire to live, for all he be a Roman: and there be some of them too, that die against their wills; so should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good; 0, there were desolation of Gaolers, and gallowses! I speak against my present profit; but my wish hath a preferment in't.

SCENE V.—Cymbeline's Tent.

Enter Cymbeline, Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, Pisanio, Lords, Officers, and Attendants.

Cym. Stand by my side, you whom the gods have made Preservers of my throne. Woe is my heart, That the poor soldier, that so richly fought, [breath Whose rags sham'd glad arms, whose naked Stepp'd before targe of proof, cannot be found: He shall be happy that can find him, if Our grace can make him so.

Bel. Such noble fury in so poor a thing: Such precious deeds in one that promis'd nought But beggary and poor looks.

Cym. No tidings of him?

Pis. He hath been search'd among the dead, and But no trace of him. [living

Cym. To my grief, I am The heir of his reward; which I will add To you, the liver, heart, and brain of Britain, [To Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus. By whom I grant she lives: 'Tis now the time To ask of whence you are.—report it.

Bel. Sir, in Cambria are we born, and gentlemen: Further to boast, were neither true nor modest, Unless I add, we are honest.

Cym. Bow your knees: Arise, my knights o'the battle; I create you Companions to our person, and will you With dignities becoming your estates.

Enter Cornelius and Ladies.

There's business in these faces:—Why so sadly Greet you our victory? you look like Romans, And not of the court of Britain.

Cor. To sour your happiness, I must report The queen is dead.

Cym. Whom worse than a physician Would this report becall?—I know you, By medicine life may be prolong'd, yet death Will seize the doctor too.—How ended she? Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life; Which, being cruel to the world, concluded Most cruel to herself. What she confess'd I will report, so please you: These her women Can trip me, if I err; who, with wet cheeks, Were present when she finish'd.

Cym. Pr'ythee, say.

Cor. First, she confess'd she never lov'd you; Affected greatness got by you, not you: [only Married your royalty, was wife to your place; Abhor'd your person.

Cym. She alone knew this: And, but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed. [love Cor. Your daughter, whom she bore in hand To such integrity, she did confess

Was as a scorpion to her sight; whose life, But that her flight prevented it, she had To'urn off by poison.

Cym. O most delicate fiend! Who is't can read a woman?—is there more? Cor. More, sir, and worse. She did confess, She for you a mortal mineral; which, being took, [had Should be the minute feed on life, and, l'ing'ting, By inches waste you: In which time she purpos'd, By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to (Exeunt with you her show; yes, and in time, (Which she had fitt'd you with her craft,) to Her son into the adoption of the crown. [work But failing of her end by his strange absence, Gave shameless-desperate; open'd, in despite Of heaven and men, her purposes; repented The evils she hatch'd were not effect'd; so, Despairing, died.

Cym. Heard you all this, her women?

Lady. We did so, please your highness.

Cym. Mine eyes Were not in fault, for she was beautiful; Mine ears, that heard her flatt'ry; nor my heart, That thought her like her seeming: it had been vic'rous, Have mistrusted her: yet, my daughter! That is a tale, I must not say, nor prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all!

Enter Lucius, Iachimo, the Soothsayer, and other Roman prisoners, guarded; Posthumus behind, and Imogen.

Thou com'st not, Caius, now for tribute; that The Britons have raz'd out, though with the loss Of many a bold one; whose kinsmen have made suit, [slaughter That their good souls may be appealed with Of you their captives, which ourselves have granted: So, think of your estate.

Luc. Consider, sir, the chance of war: the day Was yours by accident; had it gone with us, We should not, when the blood was cool, have threat'red Our prisoners with the sword. But since the gods Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives May be call'd ransom, let it come: sufficeth, A Roman with a Roman's heart can suffer: Augustus could not think on't:—and so much For my peculiar care. This one thing only I will entreat; My boy, a Briton born, Let him be ransom'd: never master had A page so kind, so duteous, diligent, So tender over his occasion that I ask, So fest, so nurse-like; let his virtue Join With my request, which, I'll make bold, your highness Cannot deny; he hath done no Briton harm, Though he have serv'd a Roman; save him, sir, And spare no blood beside.

Cym. I have surely seen him His favour is familiar to me.—

Boy, thou hast look'd thyself into my grace, And not for his sake nor for thy, nor wherefore, To say, live, boy: ne'er thank thy master; live: And ask of Cymbeline what boon thou wilt, Fitting my bounty, and thy state, I'll give it; Yea, though thou do demand a prisoner, The noblest ta'en.

Imo. I humbly thank your highness.

Luc. I do not bid thee hag my life, good lad; And yet I, know, thou wilt.

Imo. No, no: alack, There's other work in hand; I see a thing; Bitter to me as death: your life, good master, Must shuffle for itself.

Luc. The boy disdains me, He leaves me, scorns me: Briefly die their joys, That place them on the truth of girls and boys.— Why stands he so perplex'd?

Cym. What would'st thou, boy? I love thee more and more; think more and more

What's best to ask. Know'st him thou look'st on?

Speak,

Will have him live? Is he thy kin? thy friend?

Imo. He is a Roman; no more kin to me,

Than to your highness; who, being born your

Am something nearer. [vassal.

Cym. Wherefore es't he so?

Imo. I'll tell you, sir, in private, if you please

To give me hearing.

Aye, with all my heart,

And lend my full attention. What's thy name?

Imo. Fidele, sir.

Cym. Thou art my good youth, my page;

I'll be thy master: Walk with me; speak freely.

[Cymbeline and Imogen converse apart.

But, Is this boy reviv'd from death?

Cym. No more resembles: That sweet rosy lad,

Who died, and was Fidele:—What think you?

Guif. The same dead thing alive.

Bel. Peace, peace! see further; he eyes us not;

forbear;

Creatures may be alike: were't he, I am sure

He would have spoke to us.

Guif. But we saw him dead.

Bel. Be silent; let's see further.

Pis. It is my mistress.

[Aside.

Since she is living, let the time run on,

To good, or bad.

[Cymbeline and Imogen come forward.

Cym. Come, stand thou by our side;

Make thy demand aloud.—Sir, [to Iach.] step you forth;

Give answer to this hoy, and do it freely;

Or, by our greatness, and the grace of it,

Which is our honour, bitter torture shall

[him.

Winnow the truth from falsehood.—On, speak to

Imo. My boon is, that this gentleman may render

Of whom he had this ring.

Post. What's that to him?

[Aside.

Cym. That diamond upon your finger say,

How came it yours?

Iach. Thou'lt torture me to leave unspoken that

Which, to be spoke, would torture thee.

Cym. I am glad to be constrain'd to utter that Torments me to conceal. By vassalry [which

I got this ring; 'twas Leonatus' jewel;

Whom thou diest banish; and (which more may

As doth meth), a nobler sir ne'er liv'd

'Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more, my

Cym. All that belongs to this. [lord?

Iach. That paragon, thy daughter—

For whom my heart drops blood, and my false spirits

Quail to remember,—Give me leave; I faint.

Cym. My daughter! what of her? Renew thy

strength:

I had rather thou should'st live while nature will,

Than die ere I hear more: strive, man, and speak.

Iach. Upon a time, (unhappy was the clock

That struck the hour 'tis it was in Home, (accurs'd

The mansion where!) 'twas at a feast, (O would

Our lands had been poison'd or, at least,

Those which I heas'd to head!) the good Posthumous

(What should I say? he was too good, to be [mus,

Where ill men were; and was the best of all

Amongst the rast of good ones,) sitting sadly,

Hearing us praise our loves of Italy

For beauty that made barren the swell'd boast

Of him that best could speak: for feature, laming

The shrine of Venus, or straight-pight Minerva,

Postures beyond brief nature; for condition,

A shop of all the qualities of Italy

Loves woman for: besides, that hook of wiving,

Fairness, which strikes the eye:—

Cym. Come to the matter.

Iach. All too soon I shall,

 Unless thou would'st grieve quickly.—This Post-

(Most like a noble lord in love, and one [humus,

That had a royal lover,) took his hint;

And, not displeasing whom we prais'd, (therein

He was as calm as virtue) he began [made,

His mistress' picture; which by his tongue being

And then a man mind in't, either our being

Were crack'd of kitchen trull's, or his description

Prov'd us unspeaking sots.

Cym. Nay, nay, to the purpose.

Iach. Your daughter's chastity.—There it begins.

She spake of her, as Dian had hot dreams,

And she alone were cold: Whereat, I wretch!

Made scruple of his praise; and wager'd with him

Pieces of gold, 'gainst this which then he wore

Upon his honour'd finger, to attain

In suit the place of his bed, and win this ring

By hers and mine adultery: he, true knight,

No lesser of her honour confident

Than I did truly find her, stakes this ring;

And would so, had it been a carbuncle

Of Phæbus' wheel; and might so safely, had it

Been all the worth of his car. Away to Britain

Post I in this design: Well may you, sir,

Remember me at court, where I was taught

Of your chaste daughter the wide difference

'Twixt amourous and villainous. Being thus quench'd

Of hope, not longling, mine Italian brain

'Gain in your duller Britain operate

Most viliely: for my vantage, excellent;

And, to be brief, my practice so prevail'd,

That I return'd with simulur proof enough

To make the noble Leonatus mad,

By wounding his belief in her renown

With tokens thus, and thus; averring notes

Of chamber-hanging pictures, this her bracelet,

(0, cunning, how I got it!) nay, some marks

Of secret on her person, that he could not

But think her bond of chastity quite crack'd,

I having ta'en the forfeit. Whereasupon,—

I think's, I see him now,——

Ay, so thou dost, [Coming forward.

Italian fiend!—Ah me, most credulous fool,

Egregious murderer, thief, any thing

That's due to all the villains past, in being.

To come!—O, give me cord, or knife, or poison,

Some upright justice! Thou, king, send out

For torturers ingenious: it is I

That all the abhorred things o' the earth amend,

Fly being worse than they. I am Posthumus,

That kill'd thy daughter—villainise, I lie;

That caus'd a lesser villain than myself.

A sacrilegious thief, to do't:—the temple

Of virtue was she; yea, and she herself.

Spit, and throw stones, cast mire upon me, set

The dogs o'the street to bay me: every villain

He call'd, Posthumus Leonatus; and

Be villainy less than 'twas L—O Imogen!

My queen, my life, my wife! O Imogen,

Imogen, Imogen!

Peace, my lord; hear, hear.

Post. Shall's! have a play of this? Thou scornful

page,

There lie thy part. [Striking her: she falls.

Pis. O, gentlemen, help, help.

Mine, and your mistress.—O, my lord Posthumus!

You ne'er kill'd Imogen till now:—Help, help!

Mine honour'd lady!

Cym. Does the world go round?

Post. How come these staggers of Italy?

Pis. Wake, my mistress!

Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me

To death with mortal joy.

Pis. How fares my mistress?

Imo. O, get thee from that sight

Thou gav'st me poison: dangerous fellow, hence!

Breathe not where princes are.

Pis. The tune of Imogen!

Pis. Lady,

The gods throw stones of sulphur on me, if
That box I gave you was not thought by me:
A precious thing; I had it from the queen.

Cym. New matter still? [To the guard.]

Imo. It poison'd me. [For O gods!—]

I left out one thing which the queen confess'd,
Which must approve thee honest: If Pisanio
Have, said she, given his mistress that confection
Which I gave him for cordial, she is serv'd
As I would serve a rat.

Cym. What's this, Cornelius? [To the guard.]

Cor. The queen, sir, very oft importun'd me
To temper poisons for her; still pretending
The satisfaction of her knowledge, only
In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs.

Cym. Deaf and dumb, I dread the purpose
Was of more danger, did compend for her
A certain stuff, which, being ta'en, would cease
The present power of life; but, in short time,
All offices of nature should again
Do their due functions.—Have you ta'en of it?

Imo. Most like I did, for I was dead. [To the guard.]

Bel. There was our error.

Gui. This is sure, Fidele.

Bel. Why did you throw your wedded lady from Think, that you are upon a rock; and now,
Throw me again. [Embracing him.]

Post. Hang there like fruit, my soul,
Till the tree die!

Cym. How now, my flesh, my child?
What, mak'st thou me a drollard in this act?
Wilt thou not speak to me?

Imo. Your blessing, sir.

Bel. Though you did love this youth, I blame ye
You had a motive for it.

[To Guiderius and Arviragus.]

Cym. My tears, that fall,
Pour holy water on thee! Imogen,
Thy mother's death.

Imo. I am sorry for't, my lord,
Now fear is from me, I'll speak truth. Lord Cloten,
Upon my lady's missing, came to me
With his sword drawn; foam'd at the mouth, and Swore:

If I discover'd not which way she was gone,
It was my instant death: By accident,
I had a feigned letter of my master's
Then in my pocket; which directed him
To seek her on the mountains near to Milford;
Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments,
Which he incord'd from me, away he postes
With unchaste purpose, and with oath to violate
My lady's honour: what became of him,
I further know not.

Gui. Let me end the story:
I slew him there.

Cym. Marry, the gods forewarn'd!
I would not thy good deeds shroud from my lips
Pluck a hard sentence: pr'ythee, valiant youth,
Deny't again.

Gui. I have spoke it, and I did it.

Cym. He was a prince.

Gui. A most uncivil one: The wrongs he did me
Were nothing prince-like; for he did provoke me
With language that would make me spurn the sea,
If it could so roar to me: I cut off's head;
And am right glad, he is not standing here
To tell this tale of mine.

Imo. That headless man
Thought had been my lord.

Cym. And take him from our presence.

Bel. Stay, sir king:

This man is better than the man he slew,
As well descend'd as thyself; and hath
More of thee merited, than a band of Cloten's
Had ever scar for.—Let his arms alone;

They were not born for bondage.

Cym. Why, old soldier,
Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for,
By tasting of our wrath? How of descent
As good as we?

Avv. In that he spake too far.

Cym. And thou shalt die for't.

Bel. We will die all three
But I will prove, that two of us are as good
As I have given out him.—My sons, I must,
For our own wrongs, not fortell some dangerous speech,
Though, haply, well for you.

Avv. Your danger is Ours.

Gui. And our good his.

Bel. Have at it then.—

By leave:—Thou hadst, great king, a subject, who Was call'd Belarius.

Cym. Of what him? he is
A banish'd traitor.

Bel. He it is, that hath Assum'd this age: indeed, a banish'd man;
I know not how, a traitor.

Cym. The whole world shall not save him.

Bel. Not too hot: First pay me for the nursing of thy sons;
And let it be confiscate all, so soon
As I have receiv'd it.

Gui. Nursing of my sons?

Bel. I am too blunt, and saucy: Here's my knee;
Ere I arise, I will prefer my sons;
Then, spare not the old father. Mighty sir,
These two young gentlemen, that call me father,
And think they are my sons, are none of mine;
They are the issue of your loins, my liege,
And blood of your begettings.

Cym. How! my issue?

Bel. So sure as you your father's. I, old Morgan,
Am that Belarius whom you sometime banish'd:
Your pleasure was my mere offence, my punishment
Itself, and all my treason; that I suffer'd,
Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes
(For such, and so they are,) these twenty years
Have known me as you: those arts they have, as I Could put into them; my breeding was, sir, as
Your highness knows. Their nurse, Euriphe,
Whom for the theft I wedded, stole these children
Upon my banishment: I mov'd her to;
Having receiv'd the punishment before,
For that which I did then: Heaven for loyalty,
Excited me to treason: Their dear loss,
The more of you was felt, the more it shap'd
Unto my end of stealing them. But, gracious sir,
Here are your sons again; and I must lose
Two of the sweetest companions in the world:—
The benediction of these covering heavens
Fall on their heads like dew! for they are worthy
To inlay heaven with stars.

Cym. Thou weep'st, and speakest.

Bel. The service, that you three have done, is more
Unlike than this thou tell'st: I lost my children;
If these be they, I know not how to wish
A pair of worthier sons.

Gui. Be pleas'd a while.—

This gentleman, whom I call Polydore,
Most worthy prince, as yours, is true Guiderius
This gentleman, my Cadwal, Arviragus,
Your younger princely son; he, sir, was lapp'd
In a most curious mantle, wrought by the hand
Of his queen mother, which, for more probation,
I can with ease produce.

Gui. Guiderius had Upon his neck a mole, a sanguine star;
It was a mark of wonder.

Bel. This is he;
Who hath upon him still that natural stamp:
It was wise nature’s end in the donation,
To be his evidence now.

Cym.
O, what am I
A mother to the birth of three? Ne’er mother
Rejoiced deliverance more: I’ll say may be you be,
That, after this strange starting from your orbs,
You may reign in them now!—O Imogen,
Thou hast lost by this a kingdom.

Imo.
No, my lord; I have got two worlds by’t.—O my gentle brothers,
Have we thus met? O never say hereafter,
But I am truest speaker: you call’d me brother,
When I was but your sister; I you brothers,
When you were so indeed.

Cym.
Did you ever meet?

Arv. Ay, my good lord.

Cym.
And at first meeting lov’d?
Continued so, until we thought he died.
Cor. By the queen’s dram she swallowed’d.

Cym.
O rare instinct!
When shall I hear all through? This fierce abridgement,
Hath to it circumstantial branches, which [you?]
Distinction should be rich in.—Where, how liv’d
And when came you to serve our Roman captive?
How parted with your brothers? how first met them?
Why fled you from the court? and whither? These,
And your three motives to the battle, with
I know not how much more, should be demanded;
And all the other by-dependencies,
From chance to chance; but nor the time, nor
Will serve the long intergatories. See, [place,
Posthumus anchors upon Imogen;
And she, like harmless lightning, throws her eye
On him, her brothers, me, her master; hitting
Each object with a joy; the counterchange
Is severally in all. Let’s quit this ground,
And smoke the temple with our sacrifices.
Thou art my brother; so we’ll hold thee ever.

[To Belarius.]

Imo. You are my father too; and did relieve me,
To see this gracious season.

Cym.
All o’erjoy’d, Save these in bonds; let them be joyful too,
For they shall taste our comfort.

Imo.
I will yet do you service.

Luc. Happy be you! I am, sir.

Cym.
The forlorn soldier, that so nobly fought,
He would have well become’d this place, and grac’d
The thankings of a king.

Post.
The soldier that did company these three
In poor beseeming; ‘twas a fitiment for
The purpose I then follow’d;—That I was he,
Speak, Ichimo: I had you down, and might
Have made you finish.

Luc.
I am down again; [Kneeling,
But now my heavy conscience sinks my knee,
As then your force did. Take that life, beseech
Which I so often owe: but, your ring first; [you,
And here the bracelet of the trustiest princess,
That ever swore her faith.

Post.
Kneel not to me; The power that I have on you, is to spare you;
The malice towards you, to forgive you: Live,
And deal with others better.

Cym.
Nobly doom’d; We’ll learn our freeness of a son-in-law;
Pardon’s the word to all.

Arv.
You help us, sir,

As you did mean indeed to be our brother;
Joy’d are we, that you are.

Post.
Your servant, princes.—Good my lord of Rome,
Call forth your soothsayer: As I slept, methought, Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back,
Appeard to me, with other spriently shows
Of mine own kindred; when I wak’d, I found
This label on my bosom; whose containing
Is so from sense in hardness, that I can Make no collection of it; let him show
His skill in the construction.

Luc.
Here, my good lord.

Philarmonus.

Luc.
Read, and declare the meaning.

Sooth. [Reads.] When as a lion’s whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking, find, and be embrac’d by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grove; then shall Posthumus end his miseries. Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty.

Thou, Leonatus, art the lion’s whelp;
The fit and apt construction of thy name, Being Leo-natus, doth import so much:
The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter, Forlorn Cymbeline.

Which we call mollia aer: and mollis aer
We term it mulier: which mulier I divine,
Is this most constant wife; who, even now,
Answering the letter of the oracle,
Unknown to you, unsusught, were clipp’d about
With this most tender air.

This hath some seeming.

Sooth.
The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline,
Personates thee: and thy lopp’d branches point
Thy two sons forth: who, by Belarius stolen,
For many years thought dead, are now revi’d,
To the majestic cedar join’d; whose issue
Promises Britain peace and plenty.

Cym.
Well, My peace we will begin.—And, Caesars Lucius,
Although the victor, we submit to Caesar,
And to the Roman empire; promising
To pay our wondrous tribute, from the which
We were dissuaded by our wicked queen:
When heavens, in justice, (both on her, and hers,) Have laid most heavy hand.

Sooth.
The fingers of the powers above do tune
The harmony of this peace. The vision
Which I made known to Lucius, ere the stroke
Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant
Is full accomplished. For the Roman eagle,
From south to west on wing soaring aloft,
Lessen’d herself, and in the beams o’the sun
So vanish’d: which foreshow’d our princely eagle,
The imperial Caesar, should again unite
His favour with the radiant Cymbeline,
Which shines here in the west.

Cym.
Laud we the gods;
And let our crooked smoke’s climb to their nostrils
From our bless’d altars! Publish we this peace
To all our subjects. Set we forward: Let
A Roman and a British ensign wave
Friendly together: so through Lud’s town march;
And in the temple of great Jupiter
Our peace we’ll ratify; seal it with feasts.—
Set on there: Never was a war did cease,
Ere bloody hands were wash’d, with such a peace.

[Exeunt.]
TITUS ANDRONICUS.

PERSONS REPRESENTED.

Saturninus, son to the late Emperor of Rome, and afterwards declared Emperor himself.
Cassius, brother to Saturninus; in love with Lavinia.
Titus Andronicus, a noble Roman, general against the Goths.
Marcus Andronicus, tribune of the people; and brother to Titus.
Lucius, Quintus, Martius, Mutius, Young Lucius, a boy, son to Lucius.
Publius, son to Marcus the tribune.
Emilius, a noble Roman.
Alarbus, Chiron, sons to Tamora.
Demetrius, Aaron, a moor, beloved by Tamora.
A Captain, Tribune, Messenger, and Clown: Romans.
Goths and Romans.
Tamora, Queen of the Goths.
Lavinia, daughter to Titus Andronicus.
A Nurse, and a black Child.
Kinsmen of Titus, Senators, Tribunes, Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rome. Before the Capitol.

The tomb of the Andronici appearing; the Tribunes and Senators alight, as in the Senate. Enter, below,
Sat. Noble patricians, patrons of my right,
Defend the justice of my cause with arms;
And, countrymen, my loving followers,
Plead my successive title with your swords:
I am his first-born son, that was the last
That ware the imperial diadem of Rome;
Then let my father’s honours live in me,
Nor wrong mine age with this indignity.
Bas. Romans,—friends, followers, favourers of
If ever Bassianus, Caesar’s son,
Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome,
Keep then this passage to the Capitol;
And suffer not dishonour to approach
The imperial seat, to virtue consecrate,
To justice, contention, and nobility;
But let set in pure election shine;
And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice.

Enter Marcus Andronicus, alight, with the crown.

Mar. Princes—that strive by factions, and by Ambitiously for rule and empery,—
Friends, know, that the people of Rome, for whom we
A special party, have, by common voice, [stand
In election for the Roman empery,
Chosen Andronicus, surnamed Pius
For many good and great deserts to Rome;
A noble man, a braver warrior,
Lives not this day within the city walls:
He by the senate is accosted home,
From weary wars against the barbarous Goths;
That, with his sons, a terror to the foes,
Hath yok’d a nation strong, train’d up in arms.
Ten years are spent, since first he undertook
This cause of Rome, and chastised with arms
Our enemies’ pride: Five times he hath return’d
Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant sons
In coffins from the field;
And now at last, laden with honour’s spoils,
Returns the good Andronicus to Rome,
Renowned Titus, flourishing in arms.
Let us entreat,—By honour of his name,
Whom, worthy, you would have now succeed;
And in the Capitol and senate’s right,
Whom you pretend to honour and adore,—
That you withdraw you, and abate your strength;
Dismiss your followers, and, as suitors should,
Flee your deserts in peace and humbleness.

Sat. How fair the tribune speaks to calm my
Bas. Marcus Andronicus, so I do aby [thoughts!]
In thy uprightness and integrity,
And so I love and honour thee and thine,
Thy nobler brother Titus, and his sons,
And her, to whom my thoughts are humbled all,
Gracious Lavinia, Rome’s rich ornament,
That I will here dismiss my loving friends;
And to my fortunes, and the people’s favour,
Commit my cause in balance to be weigh’d.

Sat. Friends, that have been thus forward in my
I thank you all, and here dismiss you all; [right,
And to the love and favour of my country
Commit myself, my person, and the cause.

[Execut the Followers of Saturni:ns.

Rome, be as just and gracious unto me,
As I am confident and kind to thee.—
Open the gates, and let me in.

Bas. Tribunes! and me, a poor competitor.
[Sat. and Bas. go into the Capitol, and execut with Senators, Marcus, &c.

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter a Captain and others.

Cap. Romans, make way: The good Andronicus,
Patron of virtue, Rome’s best champion,
Successful in the battles that he fights,
With honour and with fortune is return’d,
From where he circumambled with his sword,
And brought to yoke, the enemies of Rome.

Flourish of trumpets, &c. Enter Mutius and Mar-tius: after them, two men bearing a coffin covered with black; then Quintus and Lucius. After them, Titus Andronicus; and then Tamora, with Alarbus, Chiron, Demetrius, Aaron, and other
Goths, prisoners; Soldiers and People, following.
The bearers set down the coffin, and Titus speaks.

Tif. Hail, Rome, victorious in thy mourning weeds! Lo, as the bark, that hath discharge’d her fraught,
Returns with precious lading to the bay,
From whence at first she weigh’d her anchorage,
Cometh Andronicus, bound with laurel boughs,
To re-salute his country with his tears;
Tears of true joy for his return to Rome.—
Thou great defender of this Capitol,
Stand gracious to the rites that we intend!—
Romans, of five and twenty valiant sons,
Half of the number that king Priam had,
Behold the poor remains, alive, and dead! These,
That survive, let Rome reward with love;
These, that I bring unto their latest home,
With burial amongst their ancestors:
TITUS ANDRONICUS.

Here Goths have given me leave to sheath my sword.
Titus, unkind, and careless of thine own,
With hopeless hope, thou thy brother's obsequies;
To hover on the dreadful shore of Styx.
Make way to lay them by their brethren.

[The tomb is opened.]

There greet in silence, as the dead are wont,
And sleep in peace, slay in your country's wars!
Sacrificed to the lusts of the Goths,
That we may mew his limbs, and, on a pile,
Sacrifice his flesh,
Before this earthy prison of their bones;
That so the shadows be not appeas'd,
Now in cheerful conversation;
Titus. I give him you; the noblest that survives,
The eldest son of this distrest queen.
Tam. Stay, Roman brethren;—Gracious con-victorious Titus, rue the tears I shed, [queror, A mother's tears in passion for her son:
And, if thy sons were ever dear to thee,
O, think my son to be as dear to me.
Sufficed not, that we are brought to Rome,
To beautify thy triumphs, and return,
Captive of Rome, and to the streets escape;
But must my sons be slaughter'd in the streets,
For vainall doings in their country's cause?
O! If to fight for king and common weal
Were pitiful in it, they are now.
And how hast thou drawn near the nature of the gods?
Wilt thou draw near then in being merciful:
Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge;
Thrice-noble Titus, spare my first-born son.
Luc. Give us the prisoner, that we may pardon him.
These are their brethren, whom thou Goths beheld
Alive, and dead; and for their brethren slain,
Religiously they ask a sacrifice:
To this thy son inark'd, and die he must,
To appease their groaning shadows that are gone.
Luc. Away with him; and make a fire straight;
And with our swords, upon a pile of wood,
Let's hew his limbs, till they be clean consum'd.
[Exit Lucius, Quintus, Martius, and Mutius.
TAM. O cruel, irreligious piety!
Chi. Was ever Scythia half so barbarous?
Dem. Oppose not Scythia to ambitious Rome.
And we are ready to rest, and we survive;
To tremble under Titus' threatening look.
Then, madam, stand resolv'd; but hope withal,
The self-same gods, that arm'd the queen of Troy
With opportunity of sharp revenge
Upon the Thracian and the tyrant,
May favour Tamora, the queen of Goths,
(When Goths were Goths, and Tamora was queen,)To quiet the bloody wounds upon her foes.

Re-enter Lucius, Quintus, Martius, and Mutius, with their swords bloody.
Luc. See, lord and father, how we have perfum'd Our Roman rites; Alarbus' limbs are lopp'd,
And entrails feed the sacrificing fire,
Whose smoke, like incense, doth perfume the sky.
Remaineth nought, but to inter our brethren,
And with loud lamentations welcome them to Rome.
Tit. Let it be so, and let Andronicus
Make this his latest farewell to their souls.
Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells,
Here grow no damned grudges; here, are no storms,
No noise, but silence and eternal sleep.

Enter Lavinia.

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons! LAV. In peace and honour live lord Titus long;
My noble lord and father, live in fame!
Lo! at this tomb my tributary tears
I render, for my brother's obsequies;
And at thy feet I kneel, with tears of joy
Shed on the earth, for thy return to Rome:
O, bless me here with thy victorious hand,
Whose fortunes Rome's best citizens applaud.
Tit. Kind Rome, that hast this truly serv'd
The cordial of mine age to glad my heart!—
Lavinia, live; outlive thy father's days,
And fame's eternal date, for virtue's praise!

Enter Marcus Andronicus, Saturninus, Bassianus, and others.

Mar. Long live lord Titus, my beloved brother,
Gracious triumpher in the eyes of Rome!—[ceus.
Tit. Thanks, gentle tribune, noble brother Mar.
Mar. And welcome, nephews, from successful You that survive, and you that sleep in fame. [wars, Fair lords, your fortunes are alike in all,
That in your country's service drew your swords:
But safer triumph is this funeral pomp,
That hath aspired to Solon's happiness.
And triumphs over chance, in honour's bed.—
Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome,
Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been,
Send thee by me, their tribune, and the trust,
This palliation, that the sword may be true,
And name thee in election for the empire,
With these our late deceased emperor's sons:
Be candidatus then, and put it on,
And help to set a head on headless Rome.
Tit. A better heed than glory's noble body fits,
Than his, that shakes for age and feebleness:
What should I don this robe, and trouble you? Be chosen with proclamations to-day:
To-morrow, yield up rule, resign my life,
And set abroad new business for my age?
Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years,
And buried one and twenty valiant sons,
Knield in field, slain manfully in arms,
In right and service of their noble country:
Give me a staff of honour for mine age,
But not a scepter to control the world:
Upright he held it, lords, that held it last.
Mar. Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the empery.
Sat. Proud and ambitious tribune, canst thou Tit. Patience, prince Saturnus Alarbus.
Sat. Romans, do me right;—
Patricians, draw your swords, and sheath them not Till Saturninus be Rome's emperor;—
Andronicus, 'would thou wert shipp'd to hell, Rather than one of the people's hearts.
Luc. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good
That noble-minded Titus means to thee!—
Tit. Content thee, prince; I will restore thee
The people's hearts, and wean them from them.- Bass. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee, [selves.
But honour thee, and will do till I die:
My faction if thou strengthen with thy friends,
I will most thankful be; and thanks, to men Of noble minds, is honourable reward.
Tit. People of Rome, and people's tribunes here,
I ask your voices, and your suffrages;
Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus? Trib. To gratify the good Andronicus, And make tincture of virtue in the age,
The people will accept whom he admits.
Tit. Tribunes, I thank you; and this suit I make,
That you create your emperor's eldest son,
Lord Saturnine; whose virtues will, I hope, Restore Titus' line laid in the tomb.
In peace and honour rest you here, my sons;
None of them readiest champions, repose you here,
Secure from world's chances and mischaps!
Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells,
Here grow no damned grudges; here, are no storms,
No noise, but silence and eternal sleep:

Enter Lavinia.

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons! LAV. In peace and honour live lord Titus long; [A long flourish.

Sat. Titus Andronicus, for thy favours done To us in our election this day,

2 U
I give thee thanks in part of thy deserts, And will with deeds requite thy gentleness: And, for an onset, Titus, to advance Thy name, and honourable family, Lavinia will I make my empress, Rome's royal mistress, mistress of my heart, And so be pleas'd, the sport of my purpose;
Tell me, Andronicus, doth this motion please thee?

Titus. It doth, my worthy lord; and, in this match, I hold me highly honor'd of thy grace: And here, in sight of Rome, to Saturnine, King and commander of our common-weal, The wide world's emperor, do I consecrate My sword, my chariot, and my prisoners; Present well worthy Rome's imperial lord: Receive them then, the tribute that I owe, Minors' estates blemished at thy feet.

Sat. Thanks, noble Titus, father of my life. How proud I am of thee, and of thy gifts, Rome shall record; and, when I do forget The least of these unspakable deserts, Romans, forget thy fealty to me.

Titus. Now, madam, are you prisoner to an emperor;
[To Tamora.]
To him, that for your honour and your state, Will use you nobly, and your followers. Sat. A goodly lady, trust me; of the hue That I would choose, were I to choose anew. Clear up, fair queen, that cloud countenance; Though chance of war hath wrought this change of cheer.

Thu. How could I not be made a scorn in Rome: Princely shall be thy usage every way. Rest on my word, and let not discontent Daunt all your hopes; Madam, he comforts you, Can make you greater than the queen of Goths— Lou. In our hearts are not displeas'd with this? Lut. Not I, my lord; such true nobility Warrants these words in princely courtesy.

Sat. Thanks, sweet Lavinia. Romans, let us go: Ransomeless here we set our prisoners free: Proclaim our honours, lords, with trump and drum.

Bas. Lord Titus, by your leave, this maid is mine. [Sending Lavinia.]

Titus. How, sir? Are you in earnest then, my lord? Bas. Ay, noble Titus; and resolve'd withal, To do myself this reason and this right. [The Emperor courts Tamora in dumb show. Mar. Suum cuique is our Roman justice: This prince in justice seizeth but his own. Luc. And that he will, and shall, if Lucius live. Titus. Traitors, awa! Where is the emperor's Treason, my lord; Lavinia is surpriz'd. [guard. Sat. Surpriz'd! By whom? Bas. By him that justly may Bear his betroth'd from all the world away. [Exeunt Marcus and Bassianus, with Lavinia. Mut. Brothers, help to convey her hence away, And with my sword I keep this door safe. [Exeunt Lucius, Quintus, and Martius. Titus. Follow, my lord, and I'll soon bring her back. Mut. My lord, you pass not heed of me. [Exeunt. Titus. Barr'st me my way in Rome? [Titus kills Mutins. Mut. Help, Lucius, help! [Exeunt. Lucius. Luc. My lord, you are unjust; and, more than so, In wrongful quarrel you have slain your son. Titus. Nor thou, nor he, are any sons of mine: My sons would never so dishonour me: I thank thee, Lavinia, to the emperor. Luc. Dead, if you will; but not to be his wife, That is another's lawful promis'd love. [Exit. Sat. No, Titus; no; the emperor needs her not, Nor her, nor thee, nor any of thy stock: I'll fast, by leisure, him that seeks me once; Thee never, nor thy traitorous haughty sons, Confederates all thus to dishonour me. Was there none else in Rome to make a state of, But Saturnine? Full well, Andronicus, Agree these deeds with that proud brag of thine, That said'st, I begg'd the empire at thy hands. Titus. O monstrous! what reproachful words are these? [piece. Sat. But go thy ways; go, give that changing To him that flourish'd for her with his sword: A world, and me, he hath then propos'd: One fit to bandy with thy lawless son. Titus. To ruffle in the commonwealth of Rome. Titus. These words are razors to my wounded heart. [Goths,- Sat. And therefore, lovely Tamora, queen of That like the stately Phœbe 'mongst her nymphs, Dost overshine the gallant'st dames of Rome, If thou be pleas'd with this my sudden choice, Behold, I choose thee, Tamora, for my bride, And will create thee emperor of Rome. [choice? Speak, queen of Goths, dost thou applaud me? And here I swear by all the Roman Gods,— Sith priest and holy water are so near, And tapers burn so bright, and every thing In readiness for Hymeneus stance, I will not re-salute the streets of Rome, Or climb my palace, till from forth this place I lead espous'd my bride along with me. Tam. And here, in sight of heaven, to Rome If Saturnine advance the queen of Goths, [sware, The very mendicant be to his will, A loving nurse, a mother to his youth. [compar. Sat. Ascend, fair queen, Pantheon.—Lords, ac— Your noble emperor, and his lovely bride, Sent by the heavens for prince Saturnine, Whose issue hath their fathers' kingdom sever'd: There shall we consommate our spousal rites. [Exeunt Saturninus, and his Followees: Tamora, and her sons; Aaron, and Goths. Titus. I am not bid to wait upon this bride; Titus, we have sworn thou shalt walk alone, Dishonour'd thus, and challenged of wrongs? [Re-enter Marcus, Lucius, Quintus, and Martius. Mar. O, Titus, see, O, see, what thou hast done! In a bad quarrel, this a virtuous life I. Titus. No, foolish tribune, no; no son of mine,— Nor thou, nor these, confederates in the deed That hath dishonour'd all our family; Unworthy brother, and unworthy sons! Let us see what we can do to undo these, Give Mutius burial with our brethren.

Titus. Traitors, away! he rests not in this tomb. This monument five hundred years hath stood, Which I have sumptuously re-edified: This porch with hundred soldiers, and with pavilions, Repose in fame; none basely slain in brawls; Bury him where you can, he comes not here. Mar. My lord, this is impiety in you; My nephew Mutius' deeds do plead for him; He must be buried with his brethren.

Quin. Mart. And shall, or him we will accom— [word. Titus. And shall? What villain was it spoke that Quin. He that would vou'th'n in any place but here. Titus. What, would you bury him in my despite? Mar. No, noble Titus; but entreat of thee To pardon Mutius, and to bury him. [Crest, Titus. Marcus, even thou hast struck upon my And, with these boys, mine honour thou hast My foes I do repute you every one; Wounded. So trouble me no more, but get you gone. Mart. He is not with himself; let us withdraw. Quin. Not I, till Mutius' bones be buried. Mar. Mar. and the sons of Titus kneel. [Re-enter Marcus. Mar. Brother, for in that name doth nature plead. [speak. Quin. Father, and in that name doth nature Titus. Speak thou no more; if all the rest will speed. Mar. The renowned Titus, more than half my soul, Luc. Dear father, soul and substance of us all,— Mar. Suffer thy brother Marcus to inter His noble nephew here in virtue's nest,
That died in honour and Lavinia's cause.

Thou art a Roman, be not barbarous.
The Greeks, upon advice, did bury Ajax
That slew himself; and wise Laertes' son
Did gravely plead for his funeral,
Let not young Mutius then, that was thy joy,
Be barr'd his entrance here.

Tit. Rise, Marcus, rise:—
The dismal'd it day is this, that e'er I saw,
To do honours by my son in Rome—
Well, bury him, and bury me the next.

[Mutius is put into the tomb.]

Luc. There lie thy bones, sweet Mutius, with thy friends.
Till we with trophies do adorn thy tomb!—
All. No man shed tears for noble Mutius;
He lives in fame that died in virtue's cause.

Mar. My lord,—to step out of these dreary dumps,
How comes it, that the subtle queen of Goth
Is of a sudden thus advance'd in Rome?

Tit. I know not, Marcus; but, I know, it is;
Whether by device, or no, the heavens can tell:
Is she not then beholden to the man
That brought her for this high good turn so far?
Yes, and will nobly him remunerate.

Flourish. Re-enter at one side, Saturninus, attended;
Tamora, Chiron, Demetrius, and Aaron:
At the other, Bassianus, Lavinia, and others.

Sat. So Bassianus, you have play'd your prize;
God give you joy, sir, of your gallant bride.
Bas. And you of yours, my lord: I say no more,
Nor wish no less; and so I take my leave.

Sat. Traitor, if Rome have law, or we have power,
Thou and thy faction shall repent this rape.
Bas. Rape, call you it, my lord, to seize my own,
My true betrothed love, and now my wife?
But I have break'd my laws out of despair all:
Mean while I am possess'd of that is mine.

Sat. 'Tis good, sir: You are very short with us;
But, if we live, we'll be as sharp with you.
Dis. My lord, what I have done, as best I may,
Answer I must, and shall do with my life.

Only thus much I give your grace to know,
By all the duties that I owe to Rome,
This noble gentleman, lord Titus here,
Is in opinion, and in honour, wrong'd;
That, in the rescue of Lavinia,
With his own hand did slay his youngest son,
In zeal to you, and highly mov'd to wrath
To be control'd in that he frankly gave:
Receive him then to favour, Saurinie;
That hath express'd himself, in all he sees,
A father, and a friend, to thee, and Rome.

Tit. Prince Bassianus, leave to plead my deeds;
'Tis thou, and those, that have dishonour'd me:
Rome and the righteous heavens be my judge,
How I was love'd and honour'd Saturnine.

Tam. My worthy lord, if ever Tamora
Were gracious in those princely eyes of thine,
Then bear me speak indifferently for all;
And at my suit, sweet, pardon what is past.

And I in thy behalf shall boldly open,
And basely put it up without revenge?

Tam. Not so, my lord; The gods of Rome fore
Should be author to dishonour you! [fend,
But, on mine honour, dare I undertake
For good lord Titus' innocence?
Whose fury, not dissembled, speaks his griefs:
Then, at my suit, look graciously on him;
Lose not so noble a friend on vain suppose,
Nor with sour looks afflict his gentle heart.—
My learned friend, he would by words,
Dissemble all your griefs and discontent:
You are but newly planted in your throne;
Lest then the people, and patricians too,
Upon a just survey, take Titus' part,
And from thee proclaim us for his master.
(Which Rome repute to be a heinous sin,) Yield at entreats, and then let me alone;

I'll find a day to massacre them all,
And raze their faction, and their family,
The cruel father, and his traitorous sons,
To whom I sued for my dear son's life:
And make them know, what 'tis to let a queen
Kneel in the streets, and beg for grace in Come, come, sweet emperor,—come, Andronicus,
Take up this good old man, and cheer the heart
That dies in tempest of thy angry frown.

Sat. Rise, Titus; rise; my empire hath prevail'd.

Tit. I thank your majesty, and her, my lord:
These words, these looks, infuse new life in me.

Tom. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,
A Roman now adopt'd happily,
And must advise the emperor for his good.
This day all quarells die, Andronicus;—
And let it be mine honour, good my lord,
That I have reconcile'd your friends and you.—
For you, prince Bassianus, I have pass'd
My word and promise to the emperor.
That you will be more mild and tractable,—
And fear not, lords,—and you, Lavinia:—
By my advice, all humbled on your knees,
You shall ask pardon of his majesty; [highness.

Luc. We do; and vow to heaven, and to his
That, what we did, was mildly, as we might,
Tend'ring our sister's honour, and our own.

Mar. That on mine honour here I do protest.

Sat. Away, now, I'll talk not; trouble us no more.

Tam. Nay, nay, sweet emperor, we must all be friends:
The tribune and his nephews kneel for grace;
I will not be denied. 'Sweet heart, look back,
At] that, in Rome,
And by your gracious kindness,
And at my lovely Tamora's entreats,
I do remit these young men's heinous faults.

Stand up.
Lavinia, though you left me like a churl,
I found a friend in my friend as I swore,
And I would not part a bachelor from the priest.
Come, if the emperor's court can feast two brides,
You are my guest, Lavinia, and your friends:
This day shall be a love-day, Tamora.

Tit. To-morrow, an it please your majesty,
To hunt the panther and the hart with me,
With horn and hound, we'll give your grace bon jour.

Sat. Be it so, Titus, and gramercy too. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I. — The same. Before the Palace.

Enter Aaron.

Aar. Now climbeth Tamora Olympus' top,
Safe out of fortune's shot; and sits aloft,
Secure of thunder's crack, or lightning's flash:
Advanc'd above pale envy's threat'ning reach.
As when the golden sun salutes the morn,
And, having gilt the ocean with his beams,
Gallop the rosidack in his glistering coach,
And overlooks the highest-peering hills;
So Tamora,—
Upon her wit doth earthly honour wait,
And virtue stoops and trembles at her frown.
Then, Aaron, arm thy heart, and fit thy thoughts,
To mount aloft with thy imperial mistress,
And mount her pitch; whom thou in triumph long
Hast prisoner held, fetter'd in amorous chains;
And faster bound to Aaron's charming eyes,
Than is Prometheus tied to Caucasus.
Away with slavish words, and idle thoughts!
I will be bright, and shine in pearl and gold,
To wait upon this new-made empress.
To wait, said I? to wanton with this queen,
This goddess, this Semiramis;—this queen,
This tyrant, that will charm Rome's Saturnine,
And see his shipwreck, and his common-weals!
Holla! what storm is this?
Enter Chiron and Demetrius, braving.

Dem. Chiron, thy years want wit, thy wit wants edge, and maturers, to Intrude where I am graced; and may, for saught thou know'st, affected he. Chi. Demetrius, thou dost over-ween in all; and so in this to bear me down with braves. "Why not the difference of a feather or two, makes me less gracious, thee more fortunate: I am as able, and as fit, as thou, to serve, and to deserve my mistress' grace; and that my sword upon thee shall approve, and please my passions for Lavinia's love.

Aar. Clubs, clubs! these lovers will not keep the peace.

Dem. Why, boy, although our mother, unadvis'd, gave you a dancing-rapier by your side, are you so disorderly, to threat your friends? go to: have your lath glued within your sheath, till you know better how to handle it.

Chi. Mean while, sir, with the little skill I have, Full well shalt thou perceive how much I dare.

Dem. Ay, boy, grow ye so brave? [They draw.

Chi. Why, how now, lords? so near the emperor's palace dare you draw, and maintain such a quarrel openly? Full well I wot the ground of all this grudge; I have maint. for a million of a vengeance to execute, will we acquittance with all that we intend; and she shall file our engines with advice, that will not suffer you to square yourselves, but to your wishes' height advance you both. There is my court is like an house of fame, the palace full of tongues, of eyes, of ears. the woods are ruthless, dreadful, deaf, and dull; there speak, and strive, brave boys, and take your turns: there by your lust, shadow'd from heaven's eye, and revel in Lavinia's treasury.

Dem. Siths and nefis, till I find the stream

To cool this heat, a charm to calm these fits, Per Stygas, per maes vehor. [Exeunt.

Enter Titus Andronicus, with Hunters, &c. Marcus, Lucius, Quintus, and Martius.

Tit. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and grey, the fields are fragrant, and the woods are green: Uncouple here, and let us make a hay, and wake the emperor and his lovely bride, and rouse the prince; and ring a hunter's peal, that all the court may echo with the noise. Sons, let it be your charge, as it is ours: to tend the emperor's person carefully: I have been troubled in my sleep this night, but Dawning day new comfort hath inspir'd.

Horns wind a peal. Enter Saturninus, Tamora, Bassianus, Lavinia, Chiron, Demetrius, and Attendants.

Tit. Many good morrows to your majesty:—Madam, to you as many and as good!—I promised your grace a hunter's peal. Sat. And you have rung it lustily, my lords, somewhat too early for new-married ladies. Bass. Lavinia, how say you? "I am, no; I have been brood awake two hours and more. Sat. Come on then, horse and chariots let us have, and to our sport:—Madam, now shall ye see: Our Rainy and vengeance you intimate. To Tamora. Mar. I have dogs, my lord, will rouse the proudest panther in the chase, and climb the highest promontory top. Tit. And I have horse will follow where the wind makes, and run like swallows over the plain.
Dem. Chiron, we hunt not, we, with horse nor hound,
But hope to pluck a dainty doe to ground. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A desert Part of the Forest.
Enter Aaron, with a bag of gold.

Aar. He that had wit, would think that I had
To bury so much gold under a tree, [none,
And never after to inherit it.
Let him, that thinks of me so abjectly,
Know, that this gold must coin a stratagem;
Which, cunningly effected, will beget
A very excellent piece of villany:
And so repose, sweet gold, for their unrest.
[Hides the gold.
That have their alms out of the empress' chest.

Enter Tamora.

Tam. My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st thou sad?
When every thing doth make a gleeful boast?
The birds chaunt melody on every bush;
The snake lies rolled in the cheerful sun;
The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind,
And make a chequer'd shadow on the ground;
Under their sweet shade, Aaron, let us sit,
And—whilst the babbling echo mocks the hounds,
Replying shrilly to the well-tun'd horns,
As if a double hunt were heard at once,—
Let us sit down, and mark their yelling noise:
And, as thou lookest, an ostrich thou'ldst be.
The wandering prince of Dido once enjoy'd,
When with a happy storm they were surpriz'd,
And curtain'd with a counsel-keeping cave.—
We may, each wreathed in the other's arms,
Our pantings done, possess a golden slumber;
Whiles hounds and hounds, and sweet melodious
Be unto us, as is a nurse's song [birds,
Of tullaby, to bring her babe asleep.

Aar. Madam, though Venus govern your desires,
Saturn is domiciliary in your house:
What signifies my deadly-standing eye,
My silence, and my cloudy melancholy?
My fleece of woolly hair that now uncurls,
Even as an adder, when she doth unroll,
To do some fatal execution?
No, madam, these are no venereal signs;
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,
Blood and revenge are hammering in my head.
Hark, Tamora,—the empress of my soul,
Whose passions done, possess a golden slumber;
This is the day of doom for Bassianus. [thee,—
His Philomel must lose her tongue to-day:
Thy sons make pillage of her chastity,
And wash their hands in Bassianus' blood.
Seest thou this letter? take it up, I pray thee,
And give the king this fatal-plotted scroll—
Now question me no more, we are espied;
Here comes a parcel of our hopeful booty,
Which dreads not yet their lives' destruction.
Tom. When spring a sweet Moor, sweeter to me than life!

Aar. No more, great empress, Bassianus comes;
Be cross with him; and I'll go fetch thy sons
To back thy quarrels, whatsoever they be. [Exit.

Enter Bassianus and Lavinia.

Bass. Who have we here? Rome's royal empress,
Unfurnished of her well-beseeming troop?
Or is it Dian, habited like her;
What hath abandoned her bare groves,
To see the general hunting in this forest?

Tam. Saucy controller of our private steps!
Had I the power, that, some say, Dian had,
Thy temples should be painted presently
With the same painted pansies: and the hounds
Should drive upon thy new-transformed limbs,
Unmannerly intruder as thou art!

Lav. Under your patience, gentle empress,
'Tis thought you have a goodly gift in horning;
And to be doubted, that your Moor and you
Are single forth to try experiments;
Jove shield your husband from his hounds to-day.
'Tis pity, they should take him for a stag.

Tam. Believe me, queen, your swarthy Cinemarian
Doth make your honour of his body's hue,
Spotted, detested, and abominable.

Why are you so cross'd from your train?
Dismounted from your snow-white goodly steed,
And wander'd hither to an obscure plot,
Accompanied with a barbarous Moor,
If foul desire had not conducted you?

Lav. And, being intercepted in your sport,
Great reason that my noble lord be rated
For sauciness.—I pray you, let us hence,
And let her 'joy her raven-colour'd love;
This valley fits the purpose passing well. [this.

Bass. The king, my brother, shall have note of you.

Lav. Ay, for these slips have made him noted
Good king! to be so mightily abus'd! [long:

Tam. Why have I patience to endure all this?

Enter Chiron and Demetrius.

Dem. How now, dear sovereign, and our gracious mother,
Why doth your highness look so pale and wan?

Tam. Have I no reason, think you, to look pale?
These two have tied me hither from my place,
A barren detested vale, you see, it is:
The trees, though summer, yet forlorn and lean,
O'recome with moss, and baleful mistake.
Here never shines the sun; here nothing breeds,
Unless the night, or fury, or fate you bid,
And, when they show'd me this abhorred pit,
They told me, here, at dead time of the night,
A thousand fiends, a thousand hissing snakes,
Ten thousand swelling toads, as many urchins,
With such fearful and confus'd cries,
As any mortal body, hearing it,
Should straight fall mad, or else die suddenly.
No sooner had they told this hellish tale,
But straight they told me, they would bind me
Unto the body of a dismal yew; [here
And leave me to this miserable death.
And then they call'd me, soul adulteress,
Lascivious Goth, and all the bitterest terms
That ever ear did hear to such effect,
And, had you not by wondrous fortune come,
This vengeance on me had they executed
Revenge it, as you love your mother's life,
Or be ye not henceforth call'd my children.

Dem. This is a witness that I am thy son.

Chi. And this for me, struck him to make my strength.
[Stabbing him likewise.

Lav. Ay come, Semiramis,—nay, barbarous Tar—
For no name fits thy nature but thy own! [mora
Tam. Give me thy poniard; you shall know my boys.

Your mother's hand shall right your mother's
Lem. Stay, madam, here is more belongs to her;
First, thrust the corn, then after burn the straw:
This minion stoned her chastity,
Upon her nuptial vow, her loyalty,
And with that painted hope bravest your mighti—
And shall she carry this unto her grave? [ness:
Chi. An if she do, I would I were an eunuch.
Drag hence her husband to some secret hole,
And make his dead trunk pillow to our lust.

Tam. But when you have the honey you desire,
Let not this wax outlive, us both to sting.

Chi. I warrant you, madam; we will make that Come, mistress, now perforse we will enjoy
That nice-preserved honesty of yours.

Lav. O Tamora! thou hast a woman's face,—
Tam. I will not hear her speak; away with her.
Lav. Sweet lady, entreat her hear me but a word.

Dem. Listen, fair madam: Let it be your glory
To see her tears; but be your heart to them,
As unrelenting flint to drops of rain. [dam?
Lav. When did the tiger's young ones teach the O, do not learn her wrath; she taught it thee:
The milk, thou suck'dst from her, did turn to quarts.
Even at thy test thou hadst thy tyranny.
Yet every mother breeds not sons alike;
Do thou entreat her a woman pity.

[To Chiron.]

Chi. What! would'st thou have me prove myself a bastard?
Lav. 'Tis true; the raven doth not hatch a lark:
Yet I have heard, (O could I find it now)
The lion, mov'd with pity, did endure
To have his princely paws par'd all away.
Some say that ravens foster forlorn children:
The whilst their own birds famish in their nests:
O, be to me, though thy hard heart say no,
Nothing so kind, but something pitiful!
Tam. I know not what it means; away with her.
Lav. O, let me teach thee; for my father's sake,
That gave thee life, when well he might have
Be not obdurate, open thy deaf ears.
[slain thee,
Tam. Had thou in person ne'er offended me,
Even for his sake am I pitiless:
Remember, boys, I pour'd forth tears in vain,
To save thy brother from the sacrifice;
But fierce Andronicus would not relent.
Therefore away with her, and use her as you will;
The worse to her, the better lov'd of me.
Lav. Be she the murder'd queen,
And with thine own hands kill me in this place:
For 'tis not life, that I have begg'd so long;
Poor I was slain, when Bassianus died.
Tam. What begg'dst thou then? fond woman, let me more.
Lav. 'Tis present death I beg; and one thing
That womanhood denies my tongue to tell:
0, keep me from their worse than killing lust,
And tumble me into some loathsome pit;
Where never spring, nor sun, nor wind can come:
Do this, and be a charitable murderer.
Tam. So should I rob my sweet sons of their fee:
No, let them satisfy their lust on thee.
Dem. Away, for thou hast staid us here too long.
Lav. No grace? no womanhood? Ah, beauty creature!
The blot and enemy to our general name!
Confusion fall—
Chi. Nay, then I'll stop your mouth—Bring thou her husband; [Draughts off Lavinia.]
This is the hole where Aaron bid us hide him.
[Exeunt.]

Tam. Farewell, my sons: see, that you make her sure.
Ne'er let my heart know merry cheer indeed,
Till all the Andronic be made away.
Now will I hence to seek my lovely Moor,
And let my spleenful sons this trull defoul.[Exit.]

SCENE IV.—The same.

Enter Aaron, with Quintus and Martius.

Aar. Come on, my lords; the better foot before:
Straight will I bring you to the loathsome pit,
Where I esp'y'd the panther fast asleep.
Quin. My sight is very dull, whatsoever it bodes.
Mart. And mine, I promise you; we't not for shame,
Well could I leave our sport to sleep awhile.
[Martius falls into the pit.]

Quin. What art thou fallen? What subtle hole is this,
Whose mouth is cover'd with rude-growing briers;
Upon whose leaves are drops of new-shed blood,
As fresh as morning's dew distill'd on flowers?
A very servile morning; how can I find
That ever eye, with sight, made heart lament.
Aar. [Aside.] Now will I fetch the king to find
That he thereby may give a likely guess,
How these were they that made away his brother.
[Exit Aaron.

Mart. Why dost not comfort me, and help me,
From this unhallow'd and blood-stained hole?
Quin. I am surpriz'd with an uncoth fear:
A chilling sweat o'er-runs my trembling joints;
My heart suspends more than mine eye can see.

Mart. To prove thou hast a true-divining heart,
Aaron, thou look down into this den,
And see a fearful sight of blood and death.
Quin. Aaron is gone; and my compassionate
Will not permit mine eyes once to behold [heart
The thing, whereat it trembles by surmise:
O, tell me how best; for I'll look for it.
Was I a child, to fear I know not what.
Mart. Lord Bassianus lies embrewed here,
All on a heap, like to a slaughter'd lamb,
In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit.
Quin. If it be dark, how dost thou know 'tis he?
Mart. Upon his bloody finger he doth wear
A precious ring, that lightens all the hole,
Which, like a taper in some monument,
Doth shine upon the dead man's earthly cheeks,
And shows the ragged entrails of this pit:
So pale did shine the moon on Pyramus,
When he by night lay bath'd in maiden blood.
O brother, help me with thy fainting hand,—
If fear hath made thee faint, as me it hath,—
Upon this moment bring me the queen,
As hateful as Coecytus' misty mouth.

Quin. Reach me thy hand, that I may help thee
Or, wanting strength to do thee so much good,
I may be lack'd into the swallowing womb
Of this deep pit, poor Bassianus pit.
I have no strength to pluck thee to the brink.

Mart. Nor I no strength to climb without thy help.
Quin. Thy hand once more; I will not loose
Till thou art here aloft, or I below;
[again
Thou canst not come to me, I come to thee.

[Throws in.

Enter Saturninus and Aaron.

Sat. Along with me:—I'll see what hole is here,
And what he is, that now is leap'd into it.
Say, who art thou, that lately didst descend
Into this gaping abode of the earth?
Mart. The unhappy son of old Andronicus;
Brought hither in a most unlucky hour,
To find thy brother Bassianus dead.
Sat. Thy brother dead? I know, thou dost but
He of this moment both are at the earth's base:—[jest
Upon the north side of this pleasant chase;
'tis not an hour since I left him there.
Mart. We know not where you left him all alive,
But, out alas! here have we found him dead.

Enter Tamora, with Attendants; Titus Andronicus, and Lucius.

Tam. Where is my lord, the king?
Sat. Here, Tamora: though griev'd with killing
Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus? [grief.
Sat. Now to the bottom dost thou search my poor Bassianus here lies murdered.
Tam. Then all too late I bring this fatal write,
[Giving a letter.

The complot of this timeless tragedy;
And wonder greatly, that man's face can fold
In pleasing smiles such murderous tyranny.

Sat. [Reads.] An if we miss to mock him hand-somely,

Sweet huntsman, Bassianus 'tis we mean,
Do thou so much as dig the grave for him:
[shovel
It shows not our meaning: Look for thy reward
Among the nettles at the elder tree,
Which overshares the mouth of that same pit,
Where we decreed to bury Bassianus.
Do this, and purchase us thy lastling friends.
O, Tamora! thou was ever heard to say
This is the pit, and this the elder-tree:
Look, sirs, if you can find the huntsman out,
That should have murder'd Bassianus here.
Aa. My gracious lord, here is the bag of gold. [Showing it.]

Sat. Two of thy whelps, [to Tit.] fell curs of bloody kind.

Have here bereft my brother of his life:
Sirs, drag them from the pit unto the prison;
There let them bite, until we have devised
Some never-heard-of torturing pain for them.

Tarn. What, are we to answer to this? 0 wondrous
How easily murder is discovered! [thing]

Tit. High emperor, upon my feeble knee
I beg this boon, with tears not lightly shed,
That this tell fault of my accursed son,
And if the fault be proved in them.

Sat. If it be proved you see, it is apparent.
Who found this letter? Tamora, was it you?

Tam. Andronicus himself did take it up.
Tit. I did, my lord; yet let me be his ball;
For by my father's reverend tomb, I vow,
They shall be ready at your highness' will,
To answer their suspicion with their lives.

Sat. Thou shalt not bail them; see, thou follow thee.

Some bring the murder'd body, some the murder-
Let them not speak a word, the guilt is plain;
For, by our soul, there were worse end than death,
That end upon them should be executed.

Tam. Andronicus, I will entreat the king:
Plead not the cause, they shall do well to stay.

Tit. Come, Lucius, come; stay not to talk with them. [Exit severally.

SCENE V.—The same.

Enter Demetrius and Chiron, with Lavinia, ravished;
her hands cut off, and her tongue cut out.

Dem. So, now go tell, an if thy tongue can speak,
Who was that cut thy tongue, and ravish'd thee.

Chi. Write down thy mind, bewray thy meaning so;
And, if thy stumps will let thee, play the scribe.

Dem. See, how with signs and tokens she can speak. [Hands.

Chi. Go home, call for sweet water, wash thy head. She hath no tongue to call, nor hands to
And so let her leave to her silent walks. [wash;
Chi. An' twere my case, I should go hang myself.

Dem. If thou hast hands to help thee knit the cord. [Exit Demetrius and Chiron.

Enter Marcus.

Mar. Who's this,—my niece, that flies away so fast?

Cousin, a word; Where is your husband?—
If I do dream, 'would all my wealth would make
If I do wake, some planet strike me down, me!
That I may slumber in eternal sleep!—
Speak, gentle niece, what stern ungentle hands
Have lopp'd, and hew'd, and made thy body bare
Of her two branches? those sweet ornaments,
Whose circling shadows kings have sought to sleep
And might not gain so great a happiness, [in:
As half thy love? Why dost not speak to me?—
Alas, a crimson river of warm blood,
Like to a bubbling fountain stirr'd with wind,
Doth rise and fall between thy rosy lips,
Coming and going with thy honey breath.
But, sure, some Tereus hath defloured thee;
And, lest thou shouldn't detect him, cut thy tongue.
Ah, now thou turn'st away face for shame!
And, notwithstanding all this loss of blood,—
As from a conduit with three issuing spouts,—
Yet doth a swan seek his mate as his face,
Blushing to be encountered, with a cloud;
Shall I speak for thee? shall I say, 'tis so?
O, that I knew thy heart; and knew the beast,
That I might rail at him to ease my mind!
Sorrow concealed, like an oven stopped,
Doth burn the heart to cinders where it is.
Pair Philomela, she but lost her tongue.
And in a tedious sampler swed her mind;
But, lovely niece, that mean is cut from thee;
A craftier Tereus hast thou met withal,
And he hath cut those pretty fingers off,
That could have better sew'd than Philomel.
O, had the monster some; those lids hands
Tremble, like aspen leaves, upon a light breeze.
And make the silken strings delight to kiss them;
He would not then have touch'd them for his life:
Or, had he heard the heavenly harmony,
Some sweet song that he had sung?
He would have dropp'd his knife, and fell asleep,
As Cerberus at the Thracian poet's feet.
Come, let us go, and make thy father blind:
For such a sight will blind a father's eye:
One hour's storm's buffetings work as much means;
What will whole months of tears thy father's eyes?
Do not draw back, for we will mourn with thee;
O, could our mourning ease thy misery! [Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter Senators, Tribunes, and Officers of justice, with Martius and Quintus, bound, passing on to the place of execution; Titus going before, pleading.

Tit. Hear me, grave fathers! noble tribunes, stay!
For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent
In dangerous wars, whilst you securely slept;
For all my blood in Rome's great quarrel shed;
For all the frosty nights that I have watch'd
And for these bitter tears, which now you see
Filling the aged wrinkled in my cheeks;
Be pitiful to my condemned sons,
Whose souls are not corrupted as 'tis thought!
For two and twenty sons I never wept,
Because they died in honour's lofty bed,
For these, these tribunes, in the dust I write
[Throwing himself on the ground.
My heart's deep languor, and my soul's sad tears.
Let my tears stanch the earth's dry appetite;
My sweet's death will make it shame and blush.
[Exeunt Sen., Trib., &c. with the prisoners.
O earth, I will befriend thee more with rain,
That shall distil from these two ancient urns,
Than youthful April shall with all his showers;
In summer's drought, I'll drop upon thee still;
In winter, with warm tears I shall melt the snow,
And keep eternal spring-time on thy face,
So thou refuse to drink my dear sons' blood.

Enter Lucius, with his sword drawn.

O, reverend tribunes! gentle aged men!
Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death;
And let me say, that never wept before,
My tears are now prevailing orators.

Luc. O, noble father, you lament in vain;
The tribunes hear you not, no man is by,
And you recount your sorrows to a stone.

Tit. Ah, Lucius, for thy brothers let me plead:
Grave tribunes, once more I entreat of you.

Luc. My gracious lord, no tribune hears you speak.

Tit. Why, 'tis no matter; man: if they did hear,
They would not mark me; or, if they did mark,
All bootless to them, they'd not pity me.
Therefore I tell my sorrows to the stones;
Who, though they cannot answer my distress,
Yet in some sort they're better than the tribunes,
For that they will not intercept my tale:
When I do weep, they humbly at my feet
Reprove me; turn to me; fall upon my head;
And, were they but attired in grave weeds,
Rome could afford no tribune like to these.
A stone is soft as wax, tribunes more hard than
A stone is silent, and offended not; [stones:
And tribunes with their tongues doom men to death.
[drawn?
But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon
Luc. To rescue my two brothers from their death:
For which attempt, the judges have pronounce'd
My everlasting doom of banishment.
TIT. O happy man! they have befriended thee.
Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceive,
That Rome is but a wilderness of tigers?
There is no pity, and Rome holds no prey,
But me and mine: How happy art thou then,
From these devouners to be banished?
But who comes with our brother Marcus here?

Enter Marcus and Lavinia.

Mar. Titus, prepare thy noble eyes to weep;
Or, if not so, thy noble heart to break;
I bring consumming sorrow to thine age.
TIT. Will it consume me? let me see it then.
Mar. This is the likeness.
TIT. Why, Marcus, so she is.
Luc. Ah me! this object kills me!
TIT. Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon Speak, my Lavinia, what accurséd hand [her:—
Hath made thee handless in thy father's sight?
What fool hath added water to the sea?
Or brought a faggot to bright-burning Troy?
My grief was at the height, before thou came'st,
And now, like Niils, it disdaineth bounds.
Give me a sword, I'll chop off my hands;
For they have fought for Rome, and all in vain;
And they have nurs'd thee woe, in feeding life;
In bootless prayer have they been held up,
And they have serv'd me to effectless use.
Now, all the service I require of them
Is, that they will help to cut off this other—
'Tis well, Lavinia, that thou hast no hands;
For hands, to do Rome service, are but vain.
Luc. Speak, gentle sister, who hath martyr'd thee?
Mar. O, that delightful engine of her thoughts,
That blab'd them with such pleasing eloquence,
Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage;
Where, like a sweet melodious bird, it sung
Sweet varied notes, enchanting every ear! [deed
Luc. Hath for her, whom thou hast done this
Mar. O, thus I found her, straying in the park,
Seeking to hide herself; as doth the deer,
That hath receiv'd some unrecouning wound.
TIT. It was my deer; and he that wounded her,
Hath hurt me more, than had he kill'd me dead:
For now I stand as one upon a rock,
Environ'd with a wilderness of sea;
Who marks the washing tide grow wave by wave,
Expecting ever when some ensuizg surge
Will wash my varnish'd thoughts, out to a sand-hill;—
This way to death my wretched sons are gone;
Here stands my other son, a banish'd man;—
And here my brother, weeping at my woes:
But that which gives my soul the greatest span,
Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul—
Had I but seen thy picture in this plight,
It would have madd'd me; What shall I do
Now! behold thy lively body so?
Thou hast no hands, to wipe away thy tears;
Not tongue, to tell me who hath martyr'd thee;
Thy husband is dead; and, for his death,
Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this:—
Look, Marcus! ah, son Lucius, look on her!
When I did name her brothers, then fresh tears
Stood on her cheeks; as doth the honey daw
Upon a gather'd lily almost wither'd.
Mar. Perchance, she weeps because they kill'd her husband:
Perchance, because she knows them innocent.
TIT. If they did kill thy husband, then be joyful,
Because the law hath ta'en revenge on them—
No, no, they would not do so foul a deed;
Witness the sorrow that their sister makes.—
Gentle Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips;
Or make some sign how I may ease thee ease:
Shall thy good uncle, and thy brother Lucius,
And thou, and I, sit round about some fountain;
Looking all downwards, to behold our cheeks
How they are stain'd; like meadows, yet not dry
With myr lime slime left on them by a flood?

And in the fountain shall we gaze so long,
Till the fresh taste be taken from that clearness,
And make a brine-pit with our bitter tears?
Or shall we cut away our hands, like thine?
Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb shows
Pass the remainder of our hateful days?
What shall we do? let us, that have our tongues.
Plot some device of further misery,
To make us wonder'd at in time to come. [grief,
Luc. Sweet father, cease your tears; for, at your See,
Now my wretched sister sob and weep.
Mar. Patience, dear niece:—good Titus, dry thine eyes.
TIT. Ah, Marcus, Marcus! brother, well I wot,
Thy napkin cannot drink a tear of mine, [own
For mine is deeper, and my water daff'd with thine
Luc. Ah, my Lavinia, I will wipe thy cheeks.
TIT. Mark, Marcus, mark! I understand her signs:
Had she a tongue to speak, now would she say
That to her brother which I said to thee;
His napkin, with his true tears all bewet,
Can do no service on her sorrowful cheeks.
O, what a sympathy of woe is this?
As far from help as limbo is from bliss!

Enter Aaron.

Aar. Titus Andronicus, my lord the emperor
Sends thee this word:—That, if thou love thy sons,
Let Marcus, Lucius, or thyself, old Titus,
Or any one of you, chop off your hand,
And he that will be king: shall have, in Rome,
Will send thee hither both thy sons alive;
And that shall be the ransom for their fault.
TIT. O, gracious emperor! O, gentle Aaron!
Did ever raven sing so like a lark?
That gives sweet tidings of the man's uprise?
With all my heart, I'll send the emperor
My hand;
Good Aaron, wilt thou help to chop it off?
Luc. Stay, father: for that noble hand of thine,
That hath thrown down so many enemies,
Shall not be sent: my hand will serve the turn:
My youth can better spare my blood than yon:
And therefore mine shall save my brothers' lives.
Mar. Which of your hands hath not defended
And rear'd aloft the bloody battle-axe, [Rome,
Writing destruction on the enemy's castle?
0, none of both but are of high desert:
My hand hath been bnt idle; let it serve
To ransom my two nephews from their death;
Then have sweet tidings of the man's uprise.
Aar. Nay, come agree, whose hand shall go
For fear they die before their pardon come. [along.
Mar. My hand shall go.
Luc. By heaven, it shall not go.
TIT. Sirs, strive no more; such wither'd herbs as these Are meet for pinicking up, and therefore mine.
Luc. Sweet father, if I shall be thought thy son,
Let me redeem my brothers both from death.
Mar. And tell, for our father's sake, and mother's
Now let me show a brother's love to thee. [care.
TIT. Agree between you; I will spare my hand.
Luc. Then I'll go fetch an axe.
Mar. But I will use the axe.

[Exeunt Lucius and Marcus.

TIT. Come hither, Aaron; I'll deceive them both;
Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine.
Aar. If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest,
And never do whilst I live, deceive men so:—
But I'll deceive you in another sort,
And that you'll say, ere half an hour can pass.

[Aside.

He cuts off Titus's hand.

Enter Lucius and Marcus.

TIT. Now, stay your strife; what shall be, is despatch'd.—
Good Aaron, give his majesty my hand:
Tell him, it was a hand that warded him
From thousand dangers; bid him bury it;
More hath it merited, that let it have.
As for my sons, say, I account of them
As jewels purchas'd at an easy price;
And yet dear too, because I bought mine own.

Aar. I go, Andronicus; and, for thy hand,
Lent me a sight of thee to each one of you,
That I may turn my eyes to it again.
They head's mean. — O, how this villainy! [Aside.
Doth fat me with the very thoughts of it!
Let fools do good, and fair men call for grace,
Aaron will have his soul black like his face. [Exit.

Tit. There, here I lift this one hand to heaven,
And bow this feeble root to the earth:
If any power pities wretched tears,
To that I call: — What, wilt thou kneel with me?
[To Lavinia.

Do then, dear heart; for heaven shall hear our prayers:
Or with our sighs we'll breathe the welkin dim,
And stain the sun with fog, as sometime clouds,
When they do hug him in their melting bosoms.

Mar. Of brother, speak with possibilities,
And do not break into these deep extremes.

Tit. Is not my sorrow deep, having no bottom?
Then be my passions bottomless with them.

Mar. But yet let reason govern thy lament.
To if there were no miseries,
Then into limits could I bind my woes: — flow?
When heaven doth weep, doth not the earth o'er-
The winds rage, doth not the sea wax mad,
Threat'ning the welkin with his big-swolin face?
And wilt thou have a reason for this woe?
I am the sea; hark, how her sighs do blow!
She is the weeping welkin, I the earth:
Then must my sea be moved with her sighs;
Then must my earth with her continual tears
Become a deluge, overflow'd and drown'd:
For why? my bowels cannot hide her woes,
But like a drunkard must I vomit them.
Then give me leave; for losers will have leave
To ease their stomachs with their bitter tongues.

Enter a Messenger with two heads and a hand.

Mess. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid
For that good hand thou send'st the emperor.
Here are the heads of thy two noble sons;
And here's thy hand, in scorn to thee sent back;
Thy griefs their sports, thy resolution mock'd:
That woe is mine to think upon thy woes,
More than remembrance of my father's death.
[Exit.

Mar. Now let hot Etna cool in Sicily,
And be my heart an ever-burning hell!
These miseries are more than may be borne!
To weep with them that weep doth ease some deal,
But sorrow flouted at is double death.

Luc. Ah, that this sight should make so deep
And yet detested life not shrink thereat! [wound,
That ever death should let life bear his name,
Where life hath no more interest but to breathe!

Lavinia kisses him.

Mar. Alas, poor heart, that kiss so comfortless,
As frozen water to a starved snake.

Tit. When will this fearful slumber have an end?
Mar. Now, farewell, flattery; Die, Andronicus;
You dost not slumber; see, thy two sons' heads;
That way-like hand; thy mangled daughter here;
Thy other banish'd son, with this dear sight
Struck pale and bloodless; and thy brother, I,
Even like a snowy image, cold and numb.

Luc. I know no more will I control thy griefs;
Refrain these filthy hands,
Gnawing with thy teeth; and be this dismal sight
The closing up of our most wretched eyes!
Now is a time to storm; why art thou still?
Tit. Ha! Ha! [Exit.

Mar. Why dost thou laugh? It fits not with this.

Tit. Why, I have not another tear to shed:
Besides, this sorrow is an enemy,
And would usurp upon my watry eyes,
And make them his tribute tears;
Then which way shall I find revenge's cave?

For these two heads do seem to speak to me;
And threat me, I shall never come to bliss,
Till all these mischief he return'd again,
Even in their threats that have committed them.
Come, let me see what task I have to do—
You heavy people, circle me about;
That I may turn my eyes to each one of you,
And sweat upon my soul to right your wrongs.
The vow is made.—Come, brother, take a head;
And in this hand the other will I bear:
Lavinia, thou shalt be employed in these things;
Bear thou my hand, sweet wench, between thy teeth.
As for thee, hoy, go, get thee from my sight;
Thou art an exile, and thou must not stay:
He to the Goths, and raise an army there:
And, if you love me, as I think you do,
Let's kiss and part, for we have much to do.
[Exeunt Titus, Marcus, and Lavinia.

Luc. Farewell, Andronicus, my noble father;
The woeful man that ever liv'd in Rome!
Farewell, proud Rome! till I cuisus come again,
He leaves his pledges dearer than his life.
Farewell, Lavinia, my noble sister; 0,
'Would thou wert as thou 'forest hast been;
But now nor Lucius, nor Lavinia lives;
But in oblivion, and hateful griefs.
If Lucius live, he will requite your wrongs;
And make proud Saturninus and his empress
Beg at the gates, like Tarquin and his queen.
Now will I to the Goths, and raise a power,
To be reveng'd on Rome and Saturnine.
[Exit.

Enter Titus, Marcus, Lavinia, and young Lucius, a boy.

Tit. So, so; now sit: and look, you eat no more
Than will preserve just so much strength in us
As will revenge these bitter woes of ours.
Mar. unkin that sorrow-wrack'd and tear-burnt; —
Thy niece and I, poor creatures, want our hands,
And cannot passionate our tenfold grief
With folded arms. This poor right hand of mine
Is left to tyrannize upon my breast;
And when my heart, all mad with misery
Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh,
Then thus I thumb it down: —

Thou map of woe, that thus dost talk in signs!

[To Lavinia.

When thy poor heart beats with outrageous beats;
Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still. [ing,
Wound it with sighing, girl, kill it with groans;
Or get some little knife between thy teeth,
And just against thy heart make thou a hole;
That all the tears that thy poor eyes let fall,
May run into that sink, and soaking it,
Drown the lamenting fou in sea-salt tears.

Mar. Fye, brother, fye! teach her not thus to lay
Such violent hands upon her tender life. [already]

Tit. How now, that you so much the worse dote
Why, Marcus, no man should be mad but I.
What violent hands can she lay on her life!
Ah, wherfore dost thou urge the name of hands; —

To bid. Eness tell the tale twice o'er,
How Troy was burnt, and he made miserable? —
Oh, handle not the theme, to talk of hands;
Lest we remember still, that we have none.
Fye, fye, how frantickly I square my talk!
As if we should forget we had no hands,
If Marcus did not name the word of hands! —
Come, let's fall to; and, gentle girl, eat this:—
Here is no drink! Hark, Marcus, what she says; —
I can interpret all her martyr'd signs; —
She says, she drinks no other drink but tears,
Brew'd with her own sorrow, mesh'd with her cheek's:—
Speechless complainer, I will learn thy thought;
In thy dumb action will I be as perfect,
As begging hermits in their holy prayers: [yes,
Thou shalt not sigh, nor hold thy stumps to hea-
Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make a sign,
ACT IV.

Enter Titus and Marcus. Then enter young Lucius, Lavinia running after him.

Boy. Help, grandsire, help! my aunt Lavinia, Follows me every where, I know not why —
Good uncle Marcus, see how swift she comes! Alas, sweet aunt, I know not what you mean. Mar. Stand by me, Lucius; do not fear thine aunt. Tit. She loves thee, boy, too well to do thee any harm. Boy. Ay, when my father was in Rome, she did. Mar. What means this, my niece Lavinia by these signs? [mean?]

Tit. Fear her not, Lucius: — Somewhat doth she see, Lavinia, see, how much she makes of thee; Somewhither would she have thee go with her. Ay, boy, Cornelia never with more care Read to a heaven, than she hath read to thee, Sweet poetry, and Tully's Orator. Canst thou not guess wherefore she pleaseth thus? Boy. My lord, I know not, I, nor can I guess, Unless some fit or frenzy do possess her. For I have heard my grandsire say full oft, Extremity of griefs would make men mad; And I have read, that Hecuba of Troy Ran mad through sorrow: That made me to fear; Although, my lord, I know, my noble aunt Lavinia筑s it, but I have no power to fly; And would not, but in fury, fright my youth Which made me down to throw my books, and fly;

Causes, perhaps: But pardon me, sweet aunt: And, madam, if my uncle Marcus go, I will most willingly attend your ladyship.

Mar. Lucius, I will. [Lavinia turns over the books which Lucius has let fall.]

Tit. How now, Lavinia? — Marcus, what means this? Some book there is that she desires to see: — Which is it, girl, of these? — Open them, boy, — But thou art deeper read, and better skilled; Come, and take choice of all my library, And so beguil me sorrow, till the heavens Reveal the damn'd contriver of this deed. — Why lifts she up her arms in sequence thus? Mar. I think, she means, that there was more than one. Confedrate in the fact: — Ay, more there was: Or else to heaven she heaves them for revenge. Tit. Lucius, what book is that she tosseth so? Boy. Grandsire, 'tis Ovid's Metamorphosia; My mother gav't me. Mar. For love of her that's gone, Perhaps she cul'd it from among the rest. Tit. Soft! see, how busily she turns the leaves! [Exeunt.]

What would she find? — Lavinia, shall I read? This is the tragic tale of Philomel, And treats of Tereus' treason, and his rape; And rape, I fear, was root of thin annoyance. Mar. So, grandsire, see; note, how she quotes the leaves. [girl.

Tit. Lavinia, wert thou thus snrpriz'd, sweet Ravish'd, and wrong'd, as Philomela was, Forc'd in the ruthless, vast, and gloomy woods? — See, see, she. Ay, such a place there is, where we did hunt, (O, had we never, never, hunted there!) Pattern'd by that the poet here describes, By nature made for murders, and for rapes. Mar. So, grandsire, see, — In the depth do foul a den, Unless the gods delight in tragedies! Tit. Give signs, sweet girl, — for here are none but friends, — What Roman lord it was durst do the deed: Or clunk not Saturnine, as Tarquin erst, That left the camp to sin in Lucrce's bed? Mar. Sit down, sweet niece; — brother, sit down Apollo, Pallas, Jove, or Mercury, [by me. — Inspire me, that I may this treason find! — My lady looks here; — Look here, Lavinia: This sandy plot is plain: guide, if thou canst, This after me, when I have writ my name Without the help of any hand at all. [He writes his name with his staff, and guides it through the earth with his feet and with his staff. —

Curs'd be that heart, that forc'd us to this shift! — Write thou, good niece; and here display, at last, What God will have discover'd for revenge: Heaven guide thine pen to print thy sorrow plain, That we may know the traitors, and the truth! [She takes the staff in her mouth, and guides it through the earth with her stumps, and writes.

Tit. O, do you read, my lord, what she hath Stuprum — Chiron — Demetrius. [write signs? Mar. What, what? —the faultless sons of Tamora Performers of this heinous, bloody deed? Tit. Magne Dominator poli, Tam lentus audia sceleras I tam lentus vides! O, calm thee, gentle lord! although I There is enough written upon this earth, [know, To stir a mutiny in the mildest thoughts, And arm the minds of infants to exclaims. My lord, kneel down with me; Lavinia, kneel; And kneel, sweet boy, the Roman Hector's hope. And kneel before me, —as with the woful seers, And father, of that chaste dishonour'd dame, Lord Junius Brutus swear for Lucrce's rape, — That we will prosecute, by good advice, More enraged upon these mutinous Goths, And see their blood, or die with this reproach. Tit. 'Tis sure enough, an you knew how,
But if you hurt these bear selps, then beware:
The dam will wake; and, if she wind you once,
She with the lion deeply still in league.
And lulls him whilst she playeth on her back.
And, when he sleeps, will she do what she list.
You're a young huntsman, Marcus; let it alone;
And, come, I will go get a leaf of brass,
And with a gad of steel will write these words,
And lay it by: the angry northern wind
Will blow these sands, like Sybil's leaves, abroad,
And where's your lesson then?—Boy, what say you?
Boy. I say, my lord, that if I were a man,
There's no bed-chamber should not be safe
For these bad-bondmen to the yoke of Rome.
Mar. Ay, that's my boy! thy father hath full oft
For this ungrateful country done the like.
Boy. And, uncle, so will I, an if I live.
Tit. Come go with me into mine armoury;
Lucius, I'll fit thee; and, whithal, my boy
Shall carry from me to the empress' sons
Presents, that I intend to send them both: [not]
Come, come; thou'd do thy message, wilt thou
Boy. Ay, with my dagger in their bosoms, grand-sire.
Tit. No, boy, not so; I'll teach thee another
Lavinia, come:—Marcus, look to my house;
Lucius and I'll go brave it at the court;
Ay, marry, will we go; and we'll be waited on.
[Execute Titus, Lavinia, and Boy.
Mar. O heavens, can you hear a good man groan,
And not relent, or not compass him?
Marcus, attend him in his ecstasy;
That hath more scarce of sorrow in his heart,
Than foemen's marks upon his batter'd shield:
But yet so just, that he will not revenge:—
Revenge the heavens for old Andronicus! [Exit.

SCENE II.—The same. A Room in the Palace.
Enter Aaron, Chiron, and Demetrius, at one door;
at another door, young Lucius, and an Attendant, with a bundle of weapons, and verses writ upon
them.
Chi. Demetrius, here's the son of Lucius;
He hath some message to deliver to us. [father
Aar. Ay, some mad message from his mad grand-
Boy. My lords, with all the humbleness I may,
I greet your honours from Andronicus;—
And pray the Roman gods, confound you both.
[Aside.
Dem. Gramercy, lovely Lucius: What's the news?
Boy. That you are both decipher'd, that's the
For villains mark'd with rape. [Aside. May it please you,
My grandsire, well-adv'd, hath sent by me
The goodliest weapons of his armoury,
To gratify your honourable youth,
The hope of Rome; for so he bade me say;
And so I do, and with his gifts present
Your lordships, that whenever you have need,
You may be armed and appointed well;
And so I leave you both. [Aside. Like bloody vil-ains, he sends the emperor's son and an Attendant.
Dem. What's here? [a scroll; and written round
Let's see; [about?
Integer vita, scelerisque purus,
Non ego, Mauri jaculis, nee arcu.
Chi. O, 'tis a verse in Horace; I know it well:
I read it in the grammar long ago. [have it
Aar. Ay, just!—a verse in Horace;—right, you
Now, what a thing it is to be an ass!
Here's what is found on the old man hath
Their guile; and sends the weapons wrapp'd about with lines, [quick.
That wound, beyond their feeling, to the heart,
Wore with our witty empress; she would not be safe
She would applaud Andronicus' conceit.
But let her rest in her unrest awhile,—
And now, young lords, was't not a happy star
Led us to Rome, strangers, and, more than so,
Captors, to be advanced to this height?
It did me good, before the palace gate
To brave the tribune in his brother's hearing.
Dem. But me more good, to see so great a lord
Basely insinuate, and send us gifts.
Aar. Had he not reason, lord Demetrius?
Did you not use his daughter very friendly?
Dem. I would, we had a thousand Roman dames
At such a day, by turn to serve our lust.
Chi. A charitable wish, and full of love.
Aar. Here lacks but your mother for to say amen.
Chi. And that would she for twenty thousand
Dem. Come, let us go; and pray to all the gods,
For our beloved mother in her pains.
Aar. Pray to the devils; the gods have given us
[Aside. Flourish.
Aar. Why do the emperor's trumpets flourish
thus?
Chi. Belike, for joy the emperor hath a son.
Dem. Soft; who comes here?

Enter a Nurse, with a black-a-moor child in her arms.
Nur. Good morrow, lords:
O, tell me, did you see Aaron the Moor.
Aar. Well, more or less, or ne'er a whit at all,
Here Aaron is; and what with Aaron now?
Nur. O, gentle Aaron, we are all undone!
Now help, or we betide thee evermore!
Aar. Why, what a caterwauling dost thou keep?
What dost thou range and fumble in thine arms?
Nur. O, that which I would hide from heaven's eye,
Our empress' shame, and stately Rome's disgrace;
She is deliver'd, lords, she is deliver'd.
Aar. To whom?
Nur. I mean, she's brought to bed.
Aar. Well, God
Give her good rest! What hath she sent her?
Aar. Why, then she's the devil's dam; a joyful issue.
Nur. A joyless, dismal, black, and sorrowful is Here the babe, as losslambe as a toad
Amongst the fairest breeders of our clime.
The empress sends it thee, thy stamp, thy seal,
And bids thee christen it with thy dagger's point.
Aar. Out, out, you whore! is black so base a hue?—
Sweet blowe, you are a baseuous blossom, sure.
Dem. Villain, what hast thou done?
Aar. Done! that which thou
Canst not undo.
Chi. Thou hast undone our mother.
Aar. Villain, I have done thy mother.
Dem. And therein, bellish dog, thou hast undone.
Woe to her chance, and damn'd her loathed choice!
Accurs'd the offspring of so foul a fiend!
Chi. It shall not live.
Aar. It shall not die.
Nur. Aaron, it must: the mother wills it so.
Aar. What must it, nurse? the, or no, let no man,
Do execution on my flesh and blood. [but I
Dem. I'll broach the tadpole on my rapier's point;
Nurse, give it me; my sword shall soon despatch it.
Aar. Sooner this sword shall plow thy bowels up.
[ Takes the child from the Nurse, and draws.
Stay, murderous villains! will you kill your bro-
Now, by the burning tapers of the sky ther?
That shone so bright when the pest was got,
He dies upon my scimitar's sharp point,
That touches this my first-born son and heir!
I tell you, younglings, not Enceladus,
With all his threatening band of Typhon's brood,
Nor great Alpsis, nor the god of war,
Shall seize this prey out of his father's hands.
What, what; ye sanguine, shallow-hearted boys!

SCENE III.—The same. A publick Place.

Enter Titus, bearing arrows, with letters at the ends of them; with him Marcus, young Lucius, and other Gentlemen, with bowls.

Tit. Come, Marcus, come.—Kinsmen, this is Sir boy, now let me see your archery: [the way: Look ye draw home enough, and 'tis there straight:
Terras Astra re uitque:
You be remember'd, Marcus, she's gone, she's fled.
Sir, take, and try it, your tools, 'tis you shall Go sound the ocean, and cast your nets;
Happily you may find her in the sea;
Yet there's as little justice as at land:
No: Publins and Sempronius, you must do it:
'Tis not for you to dig with mattock and spade,
And pierce the inmost center of the earth:
Then, when you come to Pluto's region,
I pray you, deliver him this petition:
Tell him, it is for justice, and for aid:
And that it comes from old Andronicus,
Shaken with sorrows in ungrateful Rome.—
Ah, Rome!—Well, well; I made thee miserable,
What time I threw the people's snarflages
Over him that thus doth tyrannize o'er me—
Go, get, and write gone; and pray be all,
And leave you not a man of war unsearch'd;
This wicked emperor may have ship'd her hence,
And, kinsmen, then we may go pipe for justice.
Marcus, Publius, is not this a heavy case,
To see thy noble uncle thus discover'd?
Pub. Therefore, my lord, it highly us concerns,
By day and night to attend him carefully;
And feed his humour kindly as we may,
Then take some beget some careful remedy.
Mar. Kinsmen, his sorrows are past remedy.
Join with the Gouts; and with revengeful war
Take wreak on Rome for this ingratitude,
And vengeance on the traitor Saturnine.
What, Tit. Publius, how now? how now, my masters? Have you your old uncle's letters? [word
You will to him this:
Pub. No, my good lord; but Pluto sends you
If you will have revenge from hell, you shall:
Marry, for Justice, she is so employ'd,
He did it thou this?
Tt. He doth me wrong, to feed me with delays.
I'll dive into the burning lake below,
And pull her out of Acheron by the heels.—
Marcus, we can cut no shrubs, no cedars, or
No big-bond' men, fram'd of the Cyclops' size:
But metal, Marces, steel to the very back: [bear
Yet wrung with wrongs, more than our backs can
And, sith there is no justice in earth nor hell,
We will solicit heaven, and move the gods,
To send down justice for to wreak our wrongs:
Come, to this gear. You are a good archer, Marcus.
[He gives them the arrows.

Ad Jerem, that's for you.—Here, ad Apollinem:—
Ad Naecum, that's for you, and to the people.
Here, boy, to Pallas:—Here, to Mercury;
To Saturn, Calus, not to Saturnine,—
You were as good to shoot against the wind:—
To it, boy, Marcus, loose when I bid:
O'more, as it is not to be written, I say:
There's not a god left unsolicited.
Mar. Kinsmen, shoot all your shafts into the

Tit. Now, masters, draw. [They shoot.] O, well
Lucius: Good boy, in Virgo's lap; give it Pallas.
Mar. My lord, I aim a mile beyond the moon;
Your letter is with Jupiter by this.
Tit. Ha! Publius, Publius, what hast thou done
Act 4.

TITUS ANDRONICUS.

See, see, thou hast shot off one of Taurus' horns.

Mar. This was the sport, my lord: when Publius shot,
The bull being gall'd, gave Arius such a knock
That down fell both the ram's horns in the court;
And who should find them but the empress' villain?
She laugh'd, and told the Moor, he should not
But give them to his master for a present. [joy.

Tit. Why, there it goes: God give your lordship
Enter a Clown, with a basket, and two pigeons.

News, news from heaven! Marcus, the post is come.

Sirrah, what tidings have you any letters?
Shall this play justice? says Jupiter?

Clo! Ho! the gibbet-maker? Why, says he, that he hath taken them down again, for the man must not be hang'd next the wall.

Tit. But what says Jupiter, I ask thee?

Clo. Alas, sir, I know not Jupiter; I never drank with him in all my life.

Tit. Why, villain, art thou not the carrier?

Clo. Ay, of my pigeons, sir; nothing else.

Tit. Why, didst thou not come from heaven?

Clo. From heaven? alas, sir, I never came there: God forbid, I should bring you to press to heaven in my young days. Why, I am going with my pigeons to the tribunal plebs, to take up a matter of brawl betwixt my uncle and one of the emperor's [choose.

Mar. Why, sir, that is as fit as can be, to serve for your oration; and let him deliver the pigeons to the emperor from you.

Tit. Tell me, can you deliver an oration to the emperor, and grace away as well?

Clo. Nay, truly, sir, I could never say grace in all my life.

Tir. Sbirah, come hither: make no more ado,
But give your pigeons to the emperor:
Be not so slow, thou hast justice at his hands.
Hold, hold;—mean while, here's money for thy Great pin and ink.—[charges.

Sirrah, can you with a grace deliver a supplication?

Clo. Ay, sir.

Tit. Then here is a supplication for you. And when you come to him, at the first approach, you must kneel; then kiss his foot; then deliver up your pigeons; and then look for your reward. I'll be at hand, sir; see you do it bravely.

Clo. I warrant you, sir; let me alone.

Tit. Sirrah, hast thou a knife? Come, let me here, Marcus, fold it in the oration; [see it.

For thou hast made it like an humble suppliant;—
And when thou hast given it to the emperor,
Keep at thy door, and tell me what he says.

Clo. God be with you, sir; I will.

Tit. Come, Marcus, let's go.—Publius, follow me. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The same. Before the Palace.

Enter Saturninus, Tamora, Chiron, Demetrius, Lords, and others: Saturninus, with the arrows in his hand, that Titus shot.

Sat. Why, lords, what wrongs are these? Was an emperor of Rome thus overborne; [ever seen
Troubled. confronted thus; and, for the extent
Of legal justice, us'd in such contempt?
My lords, you know, as do the mighty gods;
However these disturbers of our peace
Buzz in the people's ears, there hath nought pass'd,
But even with law, against the wilful sons
Of old Andronicus. And what an if
His sorrows have so overwhell'd his wits,
Shall we be thus afflicted in his wicks,
His fits, his frenzy, and his bitterness?
And now he writes to heaven for his redress:
See, here's to Jove, and this to Mercury;
This to Apollo; this to the god of war;
Sweet scrolls to fly about the streets of Rome!
What's this, but libelling against the senate,

And blazoning our injustice every where?
A goodly humour, is it not, my lords?
As who would say, in Rome no justice were.
But, if I live, his feigned ecstasies
Shall be no shelter to these outrages:
But he and his shall know, that justice lives
In Saturninus' heart still, whether he sleep,
He'll so awake, as she in fury shall
Cut off the proud'st conspirator that lives.

Tam. My gracious lord, my lovely Saturnine,
Lord of my life, commander of my thoughts,
Calm thee, and bear the faults of Titus' age,
The effects of sorrow for his valiant sons;
Whose loss hath pierc'd him deep, and scar'd his
And rather comfort his distressed plight, [heart;
Who prosecute the meaneast, or the best,
For these contemptuous wrongs. Why, shall they not Become High-witted Tamora to glove with all? [Aside
But, Titus, I have touch'd thee to the quick,
Thy life-blood out; if Aaron now be wise,
Then is all safe, the anchor's in the port.—

Enter Clown.

How now, good fellow, wouldn't speak with us?

Clo. Yes, forsooth, an your mistership be imperial. Empress I am but, yonder sits the emperor.

Clo. This be.—God, and saint Stephen, give you good den; I have brought you a letter, and a couple of pigeons here. [Saturninus reads the letter.

Sat. Go, take this away, and bring him presently.

Clo. How much money must I have?

Tam. Come, sirrah, you must be hang'd.

Clo. Hang'd! By'r lady, then I have brought up a trick to a fair end. [Exit, guarded.

Sat. Despightful and intolerable wrongs!

Shall I endure this monstrous villainy?
I know from whence this same device proceeds;
May this be borne?—as if his traitorous sons,
That died by law for murder of our brother,
What they have by my means been butcher'd shamefully,—
Go, drag the villain hither by the hair;

Nor age, nor honour, shall shade privilege:
For this proud mock, I'll be thy slaughter-man;
Sil frantick wretch, that holp'st to make me great,
In hope thyself should govern Rome and me.

Enter Æmilius.

What news with thee, Æmilius? [more cause!

Æmil. Arm, arm, my lords; Rome never had
The Goths have had here a battle, and with a power
Of high-resolved men bent to the spoil,
They hither march amain, under conduct
Of Lucius, son to old Andronicus;
Who threatens, in course of this revenge, to do
As much as ever Coriolanus did.

Sat. Is warlike Lucius general of the Goths?

These tidings nip me; and I hang the head
As flowers with frost, or grass beat down with

Ay, now begin our sorrows to approach: [storms.

Tis he, the common people love so much;
Myself hath often over-heard them say,
(When I have walked like a private man,)
That Lucius' banishment was wrongfully,
And they have wish'd that Lucius were their emperor.

[strong.

Tam. Why should you fear? is not your city

Sat. Ay, but the citizens favour Lucius;
And will revolt from me, to succour him.

Tam. King, be thy thoughts imperious, like thy

The eagle suffers little birds to sing,
And is not careful what they mean thereby;
Knowing that, with the shadow of his wings,
He can at pleasure stint their melody
Even so may'st thou, the sovereign lord of Rome.
Then cheer thy spirit: for know, thou emperor,
I will enchant the old Andronicus,
With words more sweet, and yet more dangerous,
Than baits to fish, or honey-stalks to sheep;
When as the one is wounded with the bait,
Act 5

Scene 1.—Plains near Rome.

Enter Lucius and Goths, with drum and colours.

Luc. Approved warriors, and my faithful friends, I have received letters from the city of Rome, Which signify, what hate they bear their emperor, And how desirous of our sight they are. Therefore, great lords, be, as your titles witness, Imperious, and impatient of your wrongs; And, wherein Rome hath done you any scathe, Let it with me embitter satisfaction.

[Drum. Amon the hearse.]

Luc. Brave slip, sprung from the great Anagnus; Whose name was once our terror, now our comfort; Whose high exploits, and honourable deeds, Ingratate Rome with universal contempt, Be bold in us: we'll follow where thou leadest,— Like stinging bees in hottest summer's day,— Led by their master to the flower'd fields,— And be aveng'd on cursed Tamora.

Goths. And, as he saith, so say we all with him. Luc. I humbly thank him, and I thank you all. But who comes here, led by a lusty Goth?

Enter a Goth, leading Aaron, with his child in his arms.

2 Goth. Renowned Lucius, from our troops I To gaze upon a ruinous monastery; [stray'd, And as I earnestly did fix my eye Upon the wasted building, suddenly I heard a child cry underneath a wall; I made unto the noise; when soon I heard The crying babe compounded with this discourse: Peace, famine slave; half me, and half thy dam! Did not thy hue benvray whose brat thou art, Had nature lent thee but thy mother's look, Villain, thou might'st have been an emperor: But where the bull and cow are both milk-white, They never be begot to a coal-black elf. Peace, villain, peace! — even thus he rates the babe, For I must bear thee to a trusty Goth; Who, when he knows thou art the empress' babe, Will hold thee dearly for thy mother's sake. With this, my weapon drawn, I rush'd upon him, Surpriz'd him suddenly; and brought him hither, To use as you think needful of the man.

Luc. O worthy Goth! this is the incarnate devil, That robb'd Andronicus of his good hand; This is the pearl that pleased your empress' eye; And here's the base fruit of his burning lust.— Say, wall-eyed slave, whither would'st thou convey This growing image of thy fiend-like face? [word? Why dost not speak? What! dead? No; not a halter, soldier: hang him on this tree, And by his side his fruit of bastardy.

Aar. Touch not the boy, he is of royal blood. Luc. Too like the sire for ever being good.— First, hang the child, that he may see it sprawl; A sight to vex the father's soul withal. Get me a halter, [A ladder brought, which Aaron is obliged to ascend. Luc. Save the child; And bear it to me to the empress. If by this, I'll show thee wonderful things, That highly may advantage thee to hear: If thou wilt not, befall what may befall, I'll speak no more; but vengeance rot you all! Luc. Say on; and, if it please me which thou thinkest. Thy child shall live, and I will see it nourish'd. Aar. An if it please thee? why, assure thee, Lucius, 'Twixt eydthy soul to hear, when I shall speak; For I must talk of murders, rapes, and massacres, Acts of black night, abominable deeds, Complots of mischief, treason; villanies Ruthful to hear, yet piteously perform'd; And this shall all be buried by my death, Unless thou swear to me, my child shall live.

Luc. Tell on thy mind; I say, thy child shall live.

Aar. Swear, that he shall, and then I will begin. Luc. Who shold I swear by? thou believ'st no god. That granted, how canst thou believe an oath? Aar. What if I do not? as, indeed, I do not: Yet,—for I know thou art religious, And hast a thing within thee, called conscience; And two or three popish tricks and ceremonies, Which I have seen thee careful to observe,— Therefore I urge thy oath:—For that, I know, An idiot holds his banche for a god, And keeps the oath, which by that god he swears; I'll urge thee hence. —The child must go By that same god, what god se'ener it be, That thou adost hast and reverence,— To save my boy, to nourish, and bring him up; Or else I will discover nought to thee. Luc. Even by my god, I swear to thee, I will. Aar. First, know thou, I begot him on the empress. Luc. O most insatiate, luxurious woman! Aar. Tut, Lucius! this was but a deed of charity, To that I thoroughly shall bear me anon.

Twas her two sons that murder'd Bassianus: They cut thy sister's tongue, and ravish'd her, And cut her hands; and trimm'd her as thou saw'st. [trimming?] Luc. O detestable villain! I call'st thou that Aar. Why, she was wash'd, and cut, and trimm'd; and was Trim sport for them that had the doing of it. Luc. O,barbarous, beastly villains, like thyself: I need, I was their tutor to instruct them. That coddling spirit had they from their mother, As sure a card as ever won the set; That bloody mind, I think, they learn'd of me, As true a dog as ever fought at head. The deed of deed be witness, from the earth, I train'd thy brethren to that guileful hole, Where the dead corpse of Bassianus lay: I wrote the letter that thy father found, And hid the gold within the letter mention'd, Confedurate with the queen, and her two sons; And what not done, that thou hast cause to rue, Wherein I had no stroke of mischief in it? I play'd the cheater for thy father's hand; And, when I had it, drew myself apart, And broke my heart with talking to my daughter. I led me through the crevice of a wall, When, for his hand, he had his two sons' heads; Befiled his tears, and laugh'd so heartily, That both mine eyes were rainy like to his: And when I told the empress of this sport, She swounded almost at my pleasing tale, And, for my tidings, gave me twenty kisses.
For our proud empress, mighty Tamora:
Is not thy coming for my other hand?
She is thy enemy, and I thy friend.
I am Revenge; sent from the infernal kingdom,
To ease the gnawing vulture of thy mind,
By working woe and suffering in thy foes,
Come down, and welcome me to this world's light;
Confer with me of murder and of death:
There's not a hollow cave, or lurking-place,
No vast obscurity, or misty vale,
Where bloody murder, or dextre's rape,
Can couch for fear, but I will find them out;
And in their ears tell them my dreadful name,
Revenge, which makes the foul offender quake.
Tit. Art thou Revenge? and art thou sent to me,
To be a tormenter of my enemies?
[me.
Tit. I am; therefore come down, and welcome
Tit. Do me some service, ere I come to thee.
Lo, by thy side where Rape, and Murder, stands;
Now give some 'surance that thou art Revenge,
Stab them, or tear them on thy chariot wheels;
And then I'll come, and be thy waggoner,
And whirll along with thee about the globes.
Provide thee proper palfries, black as jet,
To take thine wengeful waggon swift away,
And find out murderers in their guilty caves:
And when thy car is loaded with their heads,
I will dismount, and by the waggon wheel
Troth, like a servile footman, all day long;
Even from Hyperion's rising in the east,
Until his very downfall in the sea.
And day by day I'll do this heavy task,
So thou destroy Rapine and Murder there.
Tit. These are my ministers, and come with me.
Tit. Are they thy ministers? what are they call'd?
Tit. Rapine, and Murder; therefore called to,
'Cause they take vengeance of such kind of men.
Tit. Good lord, how like the empress' sons they
And you, the empress! But we worldly men [are]
Have miserable, mad, mistaking eyes.
O sweet Revenge, now do I come to thee:
And, if one arm's embracement will content thee
I will embrace thee in it by and by.
[Exit Titus, from above.
Tit. This closing with that
Titus. What wouldst thou have us do, Andronico?
Dem. Show me a murderer, I'll deal with him.
Tit. Who dost molest my contemplation? Is it your trick, to make me ope the door; That so my sad decrees may fly away; And all my study be to no effect? You are deceiv'd: for what I mean to do, See here, in bloody lines I have set down; And what is written shall be executed.
Tit. Your Titus, I am come to take with thee.
Tit. No; not a word: How can I grace my talk, Wanting a hand to give it action? Thou hast the odds of me, therefore no more.
Tit. If thou didst know me, thou wouldst talk with me.
Tit. I am not mad; I know thee well enough: Witness this wretched stump, these crimson lines; Witness these tremors, made by grief and care; Witness the tiring day, and heavy night; Witness all sorrow, that I know thee well.
Tit. Doth Jolnest mock my contemplation? Is it your trick, to make me ope the door; That so my sad decrees may fly away; And all my study be to no effect? You are deceiv'd: for what I mean to do, See here, in bloody lines I have set down; And what is written shall be executed.

Titus Andronicus

Good rapine, stab him; he is a ravisher.—
Go thou with them; and in the emperor's court
There is a queen, attended by a Moor;
Well may'st thou know her by thy own proportion,
For up and down she breeds most dreadable thee;
I pray thee, do on them some violent death,
They have been violent to me and mine.

Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd us; this shall we
But what it please thee, good Andronicus, [do] To send for such a son, thus thric'e valiant son,
Who leads towards Rome a band of warlike Goths,
And bid him come and banquet at thy house:
When he is here, even at thy solemn feast,
I will bring in the empress and her sons,
The emperor himself, and all the Goths;
And at thy mercy shall they stoop and kneel,
And on them shalt thou ease thy angry heart.
What says Andronicus to this device?
Tit. Marcus, my brother!—tis a sad Titus calls.

Enter Marcus.

Go, gentle Marcus, to thy nephew Lucius;
Thou shalt inquire him out among the Goths;
Bid him repair to me, and bring with him Some of the chiefest princes of the Goths;
Bid him encamp his soldiers where they are:
Tell him, the emperor and the empress too
Feast at my house: and he shall feast with them.
This do thou for my love; and so let him,
As he regards his aged father's life.
Mar. This will I do, and soon return again.

Tam. Now will I hence about thy business,
And take my ministers along with me.
Tam. Nay, say, let Rape and Murder stay with
Or else I'll call my brother back again,
And cleave to no revenge but Lucius.
Tam. What say you, boys? will you abide with Whiles I go tell my lord the emperor,
How I have govern'd our determin'd jest?
Yield to his humour, smooth and speak him fair,
And tarry with him, till I come again.

[Aside.]

Tid. I know them all, though they suppose me
And will o'er-reach them in their own devices,
A pair of cursed hell-hounds, and their dam.

[Aside.]

Dem. Madam, depart at pleasure, leave us here.
Tam. Farewell, Andronicus: Revenge now goes
To lay a compot to betray thy foes. [Exit Revenge.
Tit. Tit. I know thou dost; and, sweet Revenge, farewell. [ploys?]
Chi. Tell us, old man, how shall we be en?
Tit. Tit. I have work enough for you to do.—
Publius, come hither, Caius, and Valentine!

Enter Publius, and others.

Pub. What's your will?
Tit. Tit. Know you these two?

I take them, Chiron and Demetrius. [devi'd.]
Tit. Fye, Publius, fye! thou art too much
The one is Murder, Rape is the other's name:
And therefore bind them, gentle Publius;
Caius, and Valentine, lay hands on them:
Oft have I heard me wish for such an hour,
And now I find it; therefore bind them sure;
And stop their mouths, if they begin to cry.

[Exit Titus.—Publius, &c. lay hold on Chiron and Demetrius.

Chi. Villains, forbear; we are the empress' sons.
Pub. And therefore do we what we are commanded.

[word.]
Stop close their mouths, let them not speak a
Is he sure bound? look, that you bind them fast.

Re-enter Titus Andronicus, with Lavinia; she bearing a bason, and he a knife.

Tit. Come, come, Lavinia: look, thy foes are bound:—
Sirs, stop their mouths, let them not speak to me; But let them hear what fearful words I utter.

O villains, Chiron and Demetrius! [mad.]
Here stands the spring whom you have stain'd with This goodly summer with your winter mix'd.
You kill'd her husband; and, for that vile fault, Two of her brothers were condemned to death;
My hand cut off, and made a merry jest: [dear
Both her sweet hands, her tongue, and that, or ther Than hands or tongue, her spotless chastity,
Inhuman traitors, you constrain'd and for'd.
What would you say, if I should let you speak?
Villains, for shame you could not beg for grace.
Hark, wretches, how I mean to martyr you.
This one hand yet is left to cut your throats;
Whilst that Lavinia 'tween her stumps doth hold
The bosom, that shall receive the guilty blood.
You know, your mother means to feast with me, And calls herself, Revenge, and thinks me mad.—
Hark, villains: I will grind your bones to dust, And with your blood and it, I'll make a paste; And of the paste a coffin I will rear, And make two pasties of your shameful heads; And bid that strumpet, your unhallow'd dam, Like to the earth, swallow her own increase.
This is the feast that I have bid her to, And this the banquet she shall surfeit on;
For worse than Philomel you'd my daughter, And worse than Progne I will be revenge'd:
And now prepare your throats.—Lavinia, come,
[He cuts their throats.
Receive the blood: and, when that they are dead, Let me go grind their bones to powder small, And with this hateful liquor temper it; And in that paste let their vile heads be bak'd.
Come, come, be every one officious
To make this banquet; which I wish may prove
More stern and bloody than the Cenotars' feast.
So, now hring them in, for I will play the cook, And see them ready 'gainst their mother comes.
[Exit, bearing the dead bodies.

SCENE III.—The same. A PavilHon with Tables, &c.

Enter Lucius, Marcus, and Goths, with Aaron, prisonar.

Luc. Uncle Marcus, since 'tis my father's mind,
That I repair to Rome, I am content.

[will.]
1 Goth. And ours, with thine, befall what fortune
Luc. Good uncle, take you in this barbarous thine; for, O tiger! this a Centaur's feast.
More stern and bloody than the Cenotars' feast.
So, now hring them in, for I will play the cook,
And see them ready 'gainst their mother comes.
[Exit, bearing the dead bodies.

Enter Saturninus and Tamora, with Tribunes,
Senators, and others.

Sat. What, hath the firmament more suns than one?
Luc. What boots it thee, to call thyself a sun?
Mar. Rome's emperor, and nephew, break the
These quarrels must be quietly debated. [parie;]
The feast is ready, which the careful Titus
Hath ordain'd to an honourable end,
For peace, for love, for league, and good to Rome;
Please you, therefore, draw nigh, and take your Seat, Marcus, we will. [places.
[Harbours sound. The company sit down at table.

Enter Titus, dressed like a cook, Lavinia, veiled, young Lucius, and others. Titus places the dishes on the table.

Tit. Welcome, my gracious lord; welcome, dread queen;
Welcome, ye warlike Goths; welcome, Lucius; And welcome, all: although the cheer be poor, Twill fill your stomachs; please you eat of it.

Sat. Why art thou thus attir'd, Andronicus? Tit. Because I would be sure to have all well, To do the business of my sacred vow.

Tom. We are beholden to you, good Andronicus. Tit. And if thy hightness knew my heart, you were. My lord the emperor, resolve me this; Was it well done of rash Virginius, To slay his daughter and op'd their right hand, Because she was enforc'd, stain'd, and defor'd?

Sat. It was, Andronicus. Tit. Thy reason, mighty lord! [shame, Sat. Because the girl should not survive her father's, And by her presence, fall to his sorrows. Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectual; A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant, For me, most wretched to perform the like:— Die, die, Laevin, and thy shame with thee; And, with thy shame, thy father's sorrow die!

Sat. What hast thou done, unnatural, and unkind! [me blind.

Tit. Kill'd her, for whom my tears have made I am a greater as Virginius was: And have a thousand times more cause than he To do this outrage; and it is now done. Sat. What, was that she ravish'd? tell, who did the deed? Highness feed! Tit. Will't please you eat? with your pleasure.

Tom. Why hast thou slain thine only daughter thus?

Tit. Not 1; 'twas Chiron, and Demetrius: They ravish'd her, and cut away her tongue. And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong. Sat. Go, fetch them hither to us presently.

Tit. Why, there they are both, baki'd in that p'ye; Whereof their mother daintily hath fed, Eating the flesh that herself hath shed. 'Tis true, 'tis true; witness my knife's sharp point.

[Killing Tamora.

Sat. Die, frantick wretch, for this accurs'd deed.

[Killing Titus.

Luc. Can the son's eye behold his father's blood?

Tit. Not: 'twas Chiron, and Demetrius: They ravish'd her, and cut away her tongue. And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong. Sat. Go, fetch them hither to us presently.

Sat. Die, frantick wretch, for this accurs'd deed.

[Killing Titus.

Luc. Can the son's eye behold his father's blood? Thare's need for meed, death for a deadly deed.

Mar. You sad-fac'd men, people and sons of By uproot sever'd, like a flight of fowl [Romne, Scatter'd by winds and high tempestuous gusts, O, let me teach you how to knit again This scattered people, and preserve the peace of These broken limbs again into one body.

Sen. Let Rome herself be bane unto herself; And she, whom mighty kingdoms court'sty to, Like a forlorn and desperate cast-aways, Do shameful execution on herself. But if my frosty signs and chaps of age, Grave witnesses of true experience, Cannot induce you to attend my words,— Speak, Rome's dear friend; [To Lucius.] as erst When with his solemn tongue he did discourse, To love-sick Didos's sad attending ear, The story of that baleful burning night, When subtle Greeks surpriz'd king Priam's Troy; Tell us, what Simon hath bewitch'd our ears, Or who hath brought the fatal engine in, That gives our Troy, our Rome, the civil wound.— My heart is not compact of flint, nor steel; Nor can I utter all our bitter grief, But floods of tears will drown my oratory, And break my very utterance; even 'tis the time When it should move you to attend me most, Lending your kind commiseration: Here is a captain, let him tell the tale; Our hearts will throb and weep to hear him speak.

Luc. Then, noble auditory, be it known to you, That cursed Chiron and Demetrius Were they that murdered our emperor's brother; And they it were that ravish'd our sister; For their fell faults our brothers were beheaded; Our father's tears despir'd; and basely cozen'd Of that true hand, that fought Rome's quarrel out, And sent her name into the pleasant way. Lastly, myself unkindly banish'd, The gates shut on me, and turn'd weeping out, To beg relief among Rome's enemies; Who drown'd their enmity in my true tears, Steps, and plotter of these vile acts. And I am the turn'd-forth, be it known to you, That have preserv'd her welfare in my blood; And from her bosom took the enemy's point, Sheathing the steel in my advent'rous body. Alas! I know I am a wretch, I know, My scars can witness, doubt although they are, That my report is just, and full of truth. But, soft; methinks, I do digress too much, Citing my worthless praise: O, pardon me; For when no friends are by, men praise themselves.

Mar. Now is my turn to speak; Behold this child, [Pointing to the child in the arms of an Attendant. Of this was Tamora delivered; The issue of an irreligious Moor, Chief architect and plotter of these woe's; The villain is alive in Titus' house, Damn'd as he is, to witness this is true. Now Judge, what cause had Titus to revenge death of these wrongs, past patience, Or more than any living man could bear. [mams? Now you have heard the truth, what say you, Ro- Have we done ought amiss? Show us wherein, And, from the place where you behold us now, The poor remnant of his most wretched race, Will, hand in hand, all headlong cast us down, And on the ragged stones beat forth our brains, And make a mutual closure of our house. Speak, Romans, speak; and, if, you say, we shall, Lo, hand in hand, Lucius and I, [EMIL. Come, come, thou reverend man of Rome, And bring our emperor gently in thy hand, Lucius our emperor; for, well I know, The common voice do cry, it shall be so.

Rom. [Several speak.] Lucius, all hail; Rome's royal emperor!

Lucius, &c. descend.

Mar. Go, go into old Titus' sorrowful house;

[To an Attendant. And hither hale that misbelieving Moor, To be adjudge'd some direful slaughtering death, A punishment for this most wretched race. [Several speak.] Lucius, all hail; Rome's gracious conqueror!

Luc. Thanks, gentle Romans; May I govern so, To heal Rome's harms, and wipe away her woe! But, gentle people, give me eye at wile.— For nature puts me to a heavy task; Stand all aloof;—but, uncle, draw you near, To shed obsequious tears upon this trunk:— O, take this warm kiss on thy pale cold lips, Our ancestress Titus. These sorrowful drops upon thy blood-stain'd face, The last true duties of thy noble son!

Mar. Fear for tear, and loving kiss for kiss, Thy brother Marcus tenders on thy lips: O, were the sum of them that I should pay, Countless and infinite, yet would I pay them!

Luc. Come hither, boy; come, come, and learn of us To melt in show'rs: Thy grandsire lov'd thee well; Many a time he danc'd thee on his knee, Sung thee asleep, his loving breast thy pillow: Many a matter hath he told to thee, Meet, and agreeing with thine infancy; In that respect then, like a loving child, Shed yet some small drops from thy tender spring, Because kind nature doth require it so: Friends should associate friends in grief and we—
Bid him farewell; commit him to the grave; Do him that kindness, and take leave of him.

Boy. O grandsire, grandsire! even with all my soul! Would I were dead, so you did live again! (heart broken, I cannot speak to him for weeping; My tears will choke me, if I ope my mouth.

Enter Attendants, with Aaron.

1 Rom. You sad Andronici, have done with Sorrow; That has a sadder breed of these dire events. Luc. Set him breast-deep in earth, and famish him: There let him stand, and rave and cry for food: If any one relieves or pities him, For the office he did: This is our doom. Some stay, to see him fasten'd in the earth. Aar. O, why should wrath be mute, and fury in my face? I am no baby, I, that with base prayers,  1 dumb?

1 I should repeat the evils I have done; Ten thousand, worse than ever yet I did, Would I perform, if I might have my will. If one good deed in all my life I did, I do repent it from my very soul.

Luc. Some loving friends convey the emperor And give him burial in his father's grave: [hence, My father, and Lavinia, shall forthwith Be closed in our household's monument. As for that heinous tiger, Tamora, No funeral rites, nor man in mournful weeds, No mournful bell shall ring her burial; But throw her forth to beasts, and birds of prey. Her life was beast-like, and devoid of pity; And, being so, shall have like want of pity. See justice done to Aaron, that damn'd Moor, By whom our heavy haps had their beginning: Then, afterwards, to order well the state; That like events may ne'er it ruinate.  1 Exeunt.

PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

PERSONS REPRESENTED.

Bouti, their servant. Gower, as Chorus.

SCENE,—dispersely in various Countries.

ACT I.

Enter Gower.

Before the Palace of Antioch.

To sing a song of old was sung, From ashes ancient Gower is come; Assuming man's infortunes, To glad your ear, and please your eyes. It hath been sung at festivals, On ember-eyes, and holy-ales; And lords and ladies of their lives Have read it for restoratives: 'Purpose to make men glorious, Et quo antiquus, eo melius.

If you, born in these latter times, When wit's more ripe, accept my rhymes, And that to hear an old man sing, May to your wishes pleasure bring, I life would wish, and that I might Waste it for you, like taper-light.— This city then, Antioch the great Built up for his chiefest seat; The fairest in all Syria; (I tell you what mine authors say;) This king unto him took a pheare, Who died and left a female heir, So buxom, blythe, and full of face, As he had lent her all his grace; With whom the father liking took, And her to incest did provoke: Bad father! to entice his own To evil, should be done by none. By custom, what they did begin, Was with long up, and account no sin. The beauty of this sinful dame Made many princes thither frame, To seek her as a bed-fellow, In marriage pleasures play-fellow To sing her, and make her wise.

Which to prevent, he made a law, (To keep her still, and men in awe,) That whose ask'd her for his wife, His riddle told not, lost his life: So for her many a wight did die, As you grim looks do testify. What now ensues, to the judgment of your eye I give, my cause who best can justify. [Exit.

SCENE I.—Antioch. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antiochus, Pericles, and Attendants.

Ant. Young prince of Tyre, you have at large The danger of the task you undertake: [receive'd Per. I have, Antiochus, and with a soul Embolden'd with the glory of her praise, Thinks death no hazard, in this enterprise. [Music. Ant. Bring in our daughter, clothed like a bride, For the embracements even of Jose himself; At whose conception, (till Lucina reign'd,) Nature this dowry gave, to glad her presence, The senate-house of planets all did sit, To knit in her their best perfections. [Enter the Daughter of Antiochus.

Per. See, where she comes, apparell'd like the spring, Grace her subjects, and her thoughts the king Of every virtue, fittest renown to men! Her face, the book of praises, where is read Nothing but curious pleasures, as from thence Sorrow were ever ras'd, and angry wrath Could never be her mild companion. Ye gods that made me man, and fray in love. That have inflam'd desire in my breast, To taste the fruit of ye celestial tree. Or die in the adventure, be my helps, As I am son and servant to your will,
To compass such a boundless happiness!  Ant. Prince Pericles,

Per. That would be son to great Antiochus.

Ant. Before thee stands this fair Hesperides.

With golden fruit, but dangerous to be touch'd;

For death-like dragons here affright thee hard:
Her face, like heaven, enticeth thee to view
A countless glory, which desert must gain:
And in all, save that, and such fair, fair eye
Presumes to reach, all thy whole heap must die.
Yon sometime famous princes, like thyself,

Drawn by report, advent'rous by desire, [pale,

Tell thee with speechless tongues, and semblance
That here thou seest, as one, the brightening, raving stars,
They here stand marching, slain in Cupid's wars;
And with dead cheeks advise thee to desist,
For going on death's net, whom none resist.

Per. Antiochus, I thank thee, who hath taught
My frail mortality to know itself,
And by those fearful objects to prepare
This body, like to them, to what I must:
For death remember'd, should be like a mirror,
Who tells us, life's but breath; to trust it, error.
I'll make my will then; and as sick men do,
Who know the world but in their hour, but feeling weak,
Gripe not at earthly joys, as erst they did;
So I bequeath a happy peace to you,
And all good men, as every prince should do;
My riches to the earth from whence they came:
But my unsannot fire of love return to you;
[To the Daughter of Antiochus.

Thus ready for the way of life or death,
I wait the sharpest blow, Antiochus,
Scorning advice.

Ant. Read the conclusion then;
Which read and not expounded, 'tis decreed,
As these before thee, thou thyself shalt bleed.

Daugh. In all, save that, may'st thou prove pros.
In all, so blessed, I wish thee happiness! [pensive

Per. Like a bold charger for the lists the time,
Nor ask advice of any other thought
But faithfulness, and courage.

[He reads the Riddle.]

I am no viper, yet I feed
On mother's flesh, which did me breed:
I sought a husband, in which labour,
I found that kindness in a father.
He's father, son, and husband mild,
I mother, welst, and yet his child.
How they may be, and yet in two,
As you will live, resolve if you.

Sharp physick is the last: but O my powers!
That give heaven countless eyes to view men's acts,
Why cloud they not their sights perpetually,
If this be true, which makes me pale to read it?
Fair glass of light, I lov'd you, and could still,
A hold of the hand of the Princess.

Were not this glorious casket stord with ill:
But I must tell you, now, my thoughts revolt;
For he's no man on whom perfection wait,
That knowing sin within, will touch the gate.
You're a fair world, and your sense the strings:
Who, finger'd to the heart, his lawful musick,
Would draw heaven down, and all the gods to
But, being play'd upon before your time, [hearken;
Hell only danceth at so harsh a clime:
Good sooth, I care not for you.

Ant. Prince Pericles, touch not upon thy life,
For that's an article within our law,
As dangerous as the rest. Your time's expir'd;
Either expound now, or receive your sentence.

Great King,
Few love to hear the sins they love to act;
'Twould braid yourself too near for me to tell it.
Who has a book of all that monarchs do,
He's more secure to keep it shut, than shown;
For the very wind, is like the wind's winged wind,
Blows dust in others' eyes, to spread itself;
And yet the end of all is bought thus dear,
The breath is gone, and the sore eyes see clear:

To stop the air would hurt them. The blind mole casts Copp'd hills towards heaven, to tell, the earth is
By man's oppression; and the poor worm doth die fort.
Kings are earth's gods: in vice their law's their
And if Jove stray, who dares say, Jove doth ill?
It is enough you know; and it is fit;
What being more known, grows worse, to smother,
All love the womb that their first beings bred,
Then give my tongue like leave to love my head.

Ant. Heaven, that I had thy head! he has found

The meaning:—
But I will glide with him. [Aside.] Young prince
Though by the tenour of our strict edict, [of Tyre,
Your exposition misinterpreting,
We might proceed to cancel of your days;
Yet hope, succeeding from so fair a tree
As your fair self, doth tune us otherwise:
Forty days longer we do respite you;
If by which time our secret be undone,
This mercy shows, we'll joy in such a son:
And until then, your entertain shall be,
As doth befit our honour, and your worth.
[Enter Antiochus, his daughter, and Attendants.

Per. How courtsey would seem to cover sin!
When what is done is like an hypocrite,
The which is good in nothing but in sight.
If it be true that I interpret false,
Then were it certain, you were not so bad,
As with foul incest to abuse your soul;
Where now you're both a father and a son,
By your untimely clasping with your child,
(Which pleasure fits an husb'd, nor a father;) And she an eater of her mother's flesh,
By the defiling of her parent's bed;
And both like serpents are, who though they feed
On sweetest flowers, yet they poison breed.
Antiochus, farewell! for wisdom sees, those men
Blush not in actions blacker than the night,
Will shun no course to keep them from the light.
One sin, I know, another doth provoke;
Murder's as near to lust, as flame to smoke.
Poison and treason are the hands of sin,
A y, and the targets to put off the shame:
Then, lest my life be copp'd to keep you clear,
By flight I'll shun the danger which I fear. [Exit.

Re-enter Antiochus.

Ant. He hath found the meaning, for which
To have his head.

Tha. Doth your highness call?

Ant. Thaiard, you're of our chamber, and our Partakes her private actions to your secrecy: [mind
And for your faithfulness we will advance you.

We hate the prince of Tyre, and thou must kill
It fits thee not to ask the reason why,
[him;
Because we bid it. Say, is it done?

Tha. Because done.

Enter a Messenger.

Ant. Enough;
Lest your breath cool yourself, telling your haste.
Mess. My lord, prince Pericles is fled.

Ant. As thou
Will live, fly after: and, as an arrow, shot
From a well-experienced archer, hits the mark
His eye doth level at nor so e'er return,
Unless thou say, Prince Pericles is dead.

Tha. My lord, if I

2 x 2
Can get him once within my pistol's length,
I'll make him sure: so farewell to your highness.
[Exit.

Ant. Thaiilardi, adieu! till Pericles be dead,
My heart can lend no succour to my head.
[Exit.

SCENE II.—Tyre.  A Room in the Palace.

Enter Pericles, Helicanus, and other Lords.

Per. Let none disturb us: Why this charge of thoughts?
The sad companion, dull-ey'd melancholy,
By me so us'd a guest is, not an hour,
In the day's glorious walk, or peaceful night;
(The tomb where grief should sleep,) can breed me quiet!
Here pleasures court mine eyes, and mine eyes shun
And danger, which I feared, is at Antioch,
Whose arm seems far too short to hit me here:
Yet neither pleasure's art can joy my spirits,
Nor yet the other's distance comfort me.
Then it is thus: the passions of the mind,
That have their first conception by mis-dread,
Have after-nourishment and life by care;
And what was first but fear what might be done,
Grows elder now, and cares it be not done.
And so with me;—the great Antiochus
(Gainst whom I am too little to contend,
Since he's so great, can make his will his act,)
Will think me speaking, though I swear to si-
Nor boots it me to say, I honour him, [fence;
If he suspect I may displease him:
And what may make him flush in being known,
He'll stop the course by which it might be known;
With both he might be the king, that flourishes land,
And with the ostent of war will look so huge,
Amazement shall drive courage from the state;
Our men be vanquish'd, ere they do resist,
And subjects punish'd that ne'er thought offence:
When am no more husht as the tops of trees, [them,]
Which fence the roots they grow by, and defend
Makes both my body pine, and soul to languish,
And Punish that before, that he would punish.
I Lord.  Joy and all comfort in your sacred breath!

2 Lord.  And keep your mind, till you return to Peaceful and comfortable!

Hel.  Peace, peace, my lords, and give experience:
They do not be the king, that flourishes land, [tongue.
For flattery is the bellows blows up sin;
The thing the which is flatter'd, but a spark,
To which that breath gives heat and stronger
Whereas reproach, obedient, and in order, [glowing;
This make the king, that flourishes land,
When signor Sooth here does proclaim a peace,
He flatters you, makes war upon your life:
Prince, pardon me, or strike me, if you please;
I cannot be much lower than my knees.

Per.  All leave us else; but let your cares o'erlook
What shipping, and what lading's in our haven,
And then return to us.  [Exeunt Lords.]

Helicanus,

thou

Hast pr'ythee us: what seemest thou in our looks?

Hel.  A fiery brow, dread lord.

Per.  If there be such a dart in princes' frowns,
How durst thy tongue move anger to our face?

Hel.  How dare the plants look up to heaven, from
They have their nourishment.

[whence

Per.  Then know'st I have power
To take thy life.

Hel.  [Kneeling.]  I have ground the axe myself;
Do you but strike the blow.

[Exit.

Hel.  Sit down, sit down; thou art no flatterer.
They thank thee for it; and high heaven forbid,
That kings should let their ears hear their faults
Fit counsellor, and servant for a prince, [bid:
Who by thy wisdom mak'st a prince thy servant,
What wouldst thou have me do?

Hel.  With patience bear such griefs as you do lay upon yourself.

Per.  Thou speakest like a physician, Helicanus:
Who minister'st a potion unto me,
That thou would'st tremble to receive thyself.
Attend me then.  I went to Antioch,
Where, as thou know'st, against the face of death,
I sought the purchase of a glorious beauty,
From whence an issue I might propagate,
Bring arms to princes, and to subjects joys.
Her face made mine eye beyond all wonder;
The rest (hark in thine ear,) I ask as black as incest;
Which by my knowledge found, the sinful father
Seem'd not to strike, but smooth: but thou know'st
'Tis time to fear, when tyrants seem to kiss, [thia,
Which fear so grew in me, I hither fled,
Under the covering of a careful night,
Who seem'd my good protector; and being here.
Bethought me what was past, what might succeed.
I knew him tyrannous; and tyrants' fears
Decrease not, but grow faster than their years:
And should he doubt it, (as no doubt he doth,)
That I should open to the listening air,
How many worthy princes' bloods were shed,
To keep his hold of blackness unaided,—
To top that doubt, he'll fill this land with arms,
And make pretence of wrong that I have done him.
When all, for mine, if I may call't offence,
Must feel war's blow, who spares not innocence:
Which love to all (of which thyself art one,
Who now reprovest me for it)—

Hel.  Alas, sir!

Per.  Drew sleep out of mine eyes, blood from my cheeks,
Musings into my mind, a thousand doubts
How I might stop this tempest, ere it came;
And finding little forces, not sufficient ground,
I thought it princely charity to grieve them.

Hel.  Well, my lord, since you have given me leave to speak,
Freely I'll speak.  Antiochus you fear,
And justly too, I think, you fear the tyrant,
Who either by publick war, or private treason,
Will take away your life.
Therefore, my lord, go travel for a while,
Till that his rage and anger be forgot,
Or Destinies do cut his thread of life.
Your rule direct to any; if to me,
Day serves not light more faithful than I'll be.

Per.  I do not doubt thy faith;
But should he wrong my liberties in absence—

Hel.  With this little power, as black as incest,
From whence we had our being and our birth.

Per.  Tyre, I now look from thee then, and to Tharsus
Intend my travel, where I'll hear from thee;
And by whose letter I'll dispose myself.
The care I had and have of subjects' good,
On thee I lay, whose wisdom's strength can bear it.
I'll take thy word for faith, not ask thine oath;
Who shuns not to break one, will sure crack both:
But in one case, I'll live so round and safe,
That time of both this truth shall ne'er convince,
Thou show'st a subject's shine, I a true prince.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Tyre.  An Ante-chamber in the Palace.

Enter Thaiilardi.

Thal.  So, this is Tyre, and this is the court.
Here must I kill King Pericles; and if I do not, I am sure to be hanged at home: 'tis dangerous.
Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow, and had good discretion, that being bid to ask what he would of the king, desired he might know none of his secrets: if I do so, I see him reason for it:
for if a king bid a man be a villain, he is bound by the indenture of his oath to be one.—Hush, here come the lords of Tyre.

Enter Helicanus, Escanes, and other Lords.

Hel.  You shall not need, my fellow peers of Tyre,
Further to question of your king's departure.
Scene IV.—Tarsus. A Room in the Governor's House.

Enter Cleon, Dionyza, and Attendants.

Cleon. My Dionyza, shall we rest us here, and by relating our mother's griefs, See if 'twill teach us to forget our own? [it; Dio. That were to blow at fire, in hope to quench For who digs hills because they do aspire, Throws down one mountain, to cast up a higher. O, my distressed eye, even such our griefs; Here they're but felt, and seen with misty eyes, But to groves, being topp'd, they higher rise. Cleon. O Dionyza, Who wanteth food, and will not say he wants it, Or come we to console his hunger, till he famish? Our tongues are dry, and sorrows do keep our woes Into the air: our eyes do weep, till lungs [that, Fetch breath that may proclaim them louder; If heaven slumber, while their creatures want, They will awake their helps to comfort them. I'll then discourse our woes, felt several years, And wanting breath to speak, help me with tears. Dio. I'll do my best, sir. Cleon. This Tarsus, o'er which I have government, (A city, on whom plenty held full hand,) For riches, strew'd herself even in the streets; Whose towers bore heads so high, they kiss'd the clouds, And strangers ne'er beheld, but wonder'd at; Who by desire of homes so jetted and adorn'd, Like one another's grace to trim the place! Their tables were stor'd full, to glad the sight, And not so much to feed on, as delight; All poverty was scorn'd, and pride so great, The name of god was not grievous to repeat. Dio. O, 'tis too true. [change. Cleon. But see what heaven can do! By this our These mouths, whom but of late, earth, sea, and Were all too little to content and please, [air, Although they gave their creatures in abundance, As houses are des' d for want of use. They are now starv'd for want of exercise: Those palates, who not yet two summers younger, Must have inventions to delight the taste, Would now be glad of bread and beer for it; Those mothers who, to nurse up their babes, Thought not too curious, are ready now, To eat those little darlings whom they lov'd. So sharp are hunger's teeth, that man and wife Draw lots, who first shall die to lengthen life: Here stands a lord, and there a lady weeping; Here many sing the fate which see them fall, Have scarce strength left to give them burial. Is not this true? Dio. Our cheeks and hollow eyes do witness it. Cleon. O, let those cities, that of Plenty's cup And her prosperity, so late and taste, With their superfluous riots, hear these tears! The misery of Tharsus may be theirs.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Where's the lord governor? Cleon. Here. Speak out thy sorrow which thou bring'st in haste. For comfort is too far for us to expect. Lord. We have descried, upon our neighbouring A portly sail of ships make hitherward. [shore, Cleon. I thought as much. One sorrow never comes, but brings an heir, That may succeed as his inheritor; And so in ours: some neighbour ing nation, Taking advantage of our misery, Have stuff'd these hollow vessels with their power, To beat us down, the which is done already; And make a conquest of unhappy me, Whereas no glory's got to overcome. [blanche Lord. That's the least fear; for, by the sem Of their white flags display'd, they bring us peace, And come to us as favourers, not as foes. Cleon. Thou speak'st like him's untutored to repeat, Who makes the fairest show, means most deceit. But bring they what they will, what need we fear? The ground's the lowest, and we are half way there. Go tell their general, we attend him here, To know for what he comes, and whence he comes, And what he craves. Lord. I go, my lord. [Exit. Cleon. Welcome is peace, if he on peace consist; If wars, we are unable to resist. Enter Pericles, with Attendants.

Per. Lord governor, for so we hear you are, Let not our ships and number of our men, Be, like a beacon fir'd, to amaze your eyes. We have heard your miseries as far as Tyre, And seen the desolation of your streets: Nor come we to add sorrow to your tears, But to relieve them of their heavy load; And these our ships you happily may think Are, like the Trojan horse, war-stuff'd within, With bloody views, expecting overthrow, Are stow'd with corn, to make your needy bread, And give them life, who are hunger-starr'd, half All. The gods of Greece protect you! [dead. And we'll pray for you. Per. Rise, I pray you, rise; We do not look for reverence, but for love, And harbou rage for ourselves, our ships, and men. Cleon. The which when any shall not gratify, Or pay you with unthankfulness in thought, Be it our wives, our children, or ourselves, The curse of god and men succeed their evils! Till then, (the which, I hope, shall ne'er be seen,) Your grace is welcome to our town and us. [while, Per. Which welcome we'll accept; feast here a Until our stars that frown, lend us a smile. [Exeunt. ACT II.

Enter Gower.

Gower. Here have you seen a mighty king His child, I wis, to incest bring: A better prince, and benign lord, Prove awful both in deed and word. Be quiet then, as men should be, Till he hath past his necessity. I'll show you those in troubles reign, Losing a mine, a mount ain gain. The good in conversation
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE

Act 2

Enter at one door Pericles, with Cleon, and all the Train with them. Enter at another door a Gentleman, with a letter to Pericles; Pericles shews the letter to Cleon; then gives the Messenger a reward, and knights him. Exeunt Pericles, Cleon, &c. severally.

Gow. Good Helicane hath staid at home, Not to eat honey like a drone, From others' labours; forth he strive To killen bad, keep good alive; And, to fulfil his prince's desire, Sends word of all that hap in Tyre; How Thallard came full bent with sin, And hid intent, to murder him; And that in Tharazus was not best Longer for him to make his rest; He looks to do so; put forth his arms, Where when men been, there's seldom ease: For now the wind begins to blow; Thunder above, and deeps below, Make such unquiet, that the ship should house him safe, is wreck'd and split; And he, good prince, having all lost, By waves from coast to coast is lost; All perishen of man, of pelf, Ne'er aught escape but himself; This is the third time mad; Threw him ashore, to give him glad, And here he comes: what shall be next, Pardon old Gower; this long's the text. [Exit.

SCENE I.—Pentapolis. An open Place by the Sea Side.

Per. Yet cease your ire, ye angry stars of heaven! Wind, rain, and thunder, remember, earthly man Is but a substance that must yield to you; And I, as fits my nature, do obey you. Also see hasten me out of this storm, Wash'd me from shore to shore, and left me breath Nothing to think on, but ensuing death: Let it suffice the greatness of your powers, To have bereft a prince of all his fortunes; And having made him from your watry grave, Here to have death in peace, is all he'll crave.

Enter Three Fishermen.

1 Fish. What, ho, Pliche!

2 Fish. He! come, and bring away the nets.

3 Fish. What say you, master?

1 Fish. Look how thou stirrest now! come away, or I'll fetch thee with a wannon.

3 Fish. Faith, master, I am thinking of the poor men that were cast away before us, even now. 1 Fish. Alas, poor souls, it grieved my heart to hear what pitiful cries they made to us, to help them, when, well-a-day, we could scarce help ourselves.

3 Fish. Nay, master, said not I as much, when I saw the porpus, how he bounded and tumbled? they say, they are half fish, half flesh: a plague on them, they ne'er come, but I look to be washed. Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea.

1 Fish. Why, as men do a-land; the great ones eat up the little ones: I can compare our rich misers to nothing so fitly as a whale: 'a plays and tumbles, driving the poor fry before him, and at last devours them all at a mouthful. Such whales have I heard on a'the land, who never leave gaping, till they've swallow'd the whole parish church, steeple, bells and all.

Per. A pretty moral.

3 Fish. But, master, if I had been the sexton, I would have been that day in the belfry.

2 Fish. Why, master? 3 Fish. Because he should have swallowed me too: and when I had been in his belly, I would have kept such a jangling of the bells, that he should never have left, till he cast bells, steeples, churches, and priests, up again. But if the good king Simonides were of my mind—

Per. Simonides?

3 Fish. We would purge the land of these drones, that rob the bee of her honey.

Per. How do the sooty subject of the sea These fishes tell the infirmities of men; And from their watry empire recollect All that may men approve, or men detect. Peace be at your labour, honest fishermen.

2 Fish. Honest! good fellow, what's that? if it be a day fits you, scratch it out of the calendar, and nobody will look after it. Per. Nay, see, the sea hath cast upon your coast—

3 Fish. What a drunken knave was the sea, to cast thee in our way!

Per. A man whom both the waters and the wind, In that vast tennis-court, hath made the ball For them to play upon, entreats you pity him: He asks of that never used to beg.

1 Fish. No, friend, cannot you beg? here's them in our country of Greece, gets more with begging, than we can do with working.

3 Fish. Canst thou catch any fishes then? Per. I never practis'd it.

2 Fish. Nay, then thou wilt starve sure; for here's nothing to be got now a-days, unless thou can'st fish for't.

Per. What I have been, I have forgot to know; But what I am, want teaches me to think on; A man shrunk up with cold: my veins are chill, And have no more of life, than may suffice To give my tongue that heat, to ask your help; Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead, For I am a man, pray see me buried.

1 Fish. Die quoth-a. Now gods forbid! I have a gown here; come, put it on; keep the warm. Now, afore me, a handsome fellow! Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for holidays, fish for fastings, days, and more or less puddings and flap-jacks; and thou shalt be welcome.

Per. I thank you, sir.

2 Fish. Hark you, my friend, you said you could not beg.

Per. Did but crave.

2 Fish. But crave? Then I'll turn craver too, and so I shall 'scape whipping.

Per. Why, are all your baggers whipped then?

2 Fish. O, not all, my friend, not all; for if all your baggers were whipped, I would wish no better office, than to be beside. But, master, I'll go draw up the net. [Exeunt Two of the Fishermen.

Per. How well this honest mirth becomes their labour!

1 Fish. Hark you, sir! do you know where you are?

Per. Not well.

1 Fish. Why, I'll tell you: this is called Pentapolis, and our king, the good Simonides.

Per. The good king Simonides, do you call him?

1 Fish. Ay, sir; and he deserves to be so called, for his peaceable reign, and good government.

Per. He is a happy king, since from his subjects He gains the name of good, by his government. How far is his court distant from this shore?

1 Fish. About a day's journey, and I'll tell you, he hath a fair daughter, and to-morrow is her birthday; and there are princes and knights come from all parts of the world, to just and tourney for her love.

Per. Did but my fortunes equal my desires, I'd wish to make one there.

1 Fish. O, sir, things must be as they may; and what a man cannot get, he may lawfully deal for—his wife's soul.

Re-enter the Two Fishermen, drawing up a net.

2 Fish. Help, master, help; here's a fish hangs in the net, like a poor man's right in the law; 'twill hardly come out. Ha! I'm on't, 'tis come at last, and 'tis turned to a rusty armour. [Pericles, 2.6.79.]

Jove! how honour 'twas my host. [Enter Pericles, as he leaves his life in that manner, and is mounted on a horse, with a shroud over his head.]

Per. An armour, friends! I pray you, let me
Thank, fortune, yea, that after all my crosses,
Thou giv'st me something 'gainst to repair myself;
And, though it was mine own, part of mine heral—
Which my dead father did bequeath to me, (tage,
With this strict charge, even as he left his life,) Keep it, my Pericles; it hath been a shield
Twixt me and death; (and point with this brace:) For that so sav'd me, keep it; in like necessity,
Which gods protect thee from! it may defend thee.
It kept where I kept, I so dearly lov'd it;
Till the rough seas, that spare not any man,
Took it in rage, though calm'd, they giv'n again:
I thank thee for't; my shipwreck's now no ill,
Since I have here my father's gift by will.

1 Fish. What mean you, sir? [To the king, kind friends, this coat of
For it was sometime my target to a kind breath, and I know it by this mark. He lov'd me dearly,
And for his sake, I wish the having of it;
And that you guide me to your sovereign's court,
We are wish'd to appear a gentleman;
And if that ever my low fortunes better,
I'll pay your bounties; till then, rest your debtor.

1 Fish. Why, wilt thou tourney for the lady?

Per. I'll show the virtue I have borne in arms.

1 Fish. Why, do ye take it, and the gods give thee good on't!

2 Fish. Ay, but hark you, my friend; 'twas we that made up this garment through the rough seams of the waters: there are certain condolements, certain walls, I hope, sir, if you thrive, you'll remember from whence you had it.

Per. Believe't, I will.

Now, by your furtherance, I am cloth'd in steel;
And spite of all the rupture of the sea,
This jewel holds his setting on my arm;
Unto thy value will I mount myself
Upon a courser, whose delightful steps
Shall make the gazer joy to see him tread—
Only, my friend, I yet am unprovided
Of a pair of bascinets.

2 Fish. We'll sure provide: thou shalt have my best gown to make thee a pair; and I'll bring thee to the court myself.

Per. Then honour be but a goal to my will;
This day I'll rise, or else arise ill to. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same. A publick Way, or Platform, leading to the Lists. A Pavilion by the side of it, for the reception of the King, Princess, Lords, &c.

Enter Simenides, Thaisa, Lords, Knights, and Attendants.

Sim. Are the knights ready to begin the triumph? 1 Lord. They are, my liege;
And stay your coming to present yourselves.
Sim. Return them, we are ready; and our daughter,
In honour of whose birth these triumphs are,
Sits here, like beauty's child, whom nature gat
For men to see, and seeing wonder at. [Exit a Lord.]

Thais. It pleaseth you, my father, to express
My compliments great, whose merit's less.
Sim. 'Tis fit it should be so; for princes are
A model, which heaven makes likely to itself;
As jewels lose their glory, if neglected,
So princes their renown, if not respected.
'Tis now your honour, daughter, to explain
The labour of each knight, in his device. [form.

Thais. Which, to preserve mine honour, I'll perform.

Enter a Knight; he passes over the stage, and his Squire presents his shield to the Princess.

Sim. Who is the first that doth prefer himself?

Thais. A knight of Sparta, my renowned father;
And the device he bears upon his shield
Is a black Ethiop, reaching at the sun;
The word, Lux tua vita mih; 2 Lord. He loves you well, that holds his life of you. [The second Knight passes.

Sim. Who is the second, that presents himself?
Thais. A prince of Macedon, my renowned father;
And the device he bears upon his shield
Is an arm'd knight, that's conquer'd by a lady:
The motto thus, in Spanish, Pin per duleura que per durea. [The third Knight passes.

Sim. And what's the third?
Thais. The third of Antioch;
And his device, a wreath of chivalry:
The word, Me Pompe proverxit apex. [The fourth Knight passes.

Sim. What is the fourth?

Thais. A burning torch, that's turned upside
The word, Quod me altit, me extinguit. [down;
Sim. Which shows, that beauty hath his power—
Which can as well inflame, as it can kill.

Thais. The fifth Knight passes.

Thais. The fifth, an hand environed with clouds,
Holding out gold, that's by the touchstone tried:
The motto thus, Sic spectanda fides. [The fifth Knight passes.

Sim. And what's the sixth and last, which the knight himself
With such a graceful courtesy deliver'd?
Thais. He seems a stranger; but his present is
A wither'd branch, that's only green at top;
The motto, In hac sep tivo. Sim. A pretty moral;
From the dejected state wherein he is,
He hopes by you his fortunes yet may flourish.

1 Lord. He had need mean better than his outward show
Can any way speak in his just commend;
For, by his rusty outside, he appears [lance.
To have practis'd more the whispstock, than the 2 Lord. He well may be a stranger, for he comes to

An honour'd triumph, strangely furnished.

3 Lord. And on set purpose let his armour rust
Until this day, to scour it in the dust.
Sim. Opinion's but a fool, that makes us scan
The outward habit by the inward man.
But stay, the knights are coming; we'll withdraw into the gallery. [Exeunt.

[Great shouts, and all cry, The mean knight.

SCENE III.—The same. A Hall of State. A Banquet prepared.

Enter Simenides, Thaisa, Lords, Knights, and Attendants.

Sim. Knights, To say you are welcome, were superfluous.
To place upon the volume of your deeds,
As in a title-page, your worth in arms,
Were more than you expect, or more than's fit,
Since every wound in show commends itself.
Prepare for mirth, for mirth becomes a feast:
You are my guests.

Thais. But you, my knight and guest;
To whom this wrath of victory I give,
And crown you king of this day's happiness.
Per. 'Tis more by fortune, lady, than my merit.
Sim. Call it by what you will, the day is yours;
And here, I hope, is none that envies it.

Per. Opinion's but a fool, that makes us scan
The outward habit by the inward man.
To make some good, but others to exceed,
And you're her labour's scholar. Come, queen o'the feast,
(For, daughter, so you are.) here take your place:
Marschal the rest, as they deserve their grace.

Knights. We are honour'd much by good Simenides.
[love.
Sim. Your presence glads our days; honour we
For who hates honour, hates the gods above.

March. Sir, yond's your place.
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE. Act 2.

Per. Some other is more fit. 1 Knight. Contend not, sir, for we are gentlemen, That neither in our hearts, nor outward eyes, Envy the great, nor do the low despise. Per. You are right courteous knights. Sim. Per. By Jove, I wonder, that is king of thoughts, These cates resist me, she not thought upon. Thai. By Juno, that is queen Of her marriage, all the virgins that I eat Do seem unsavoury, wishing him my meat? Sure he's a gallant gentleman. He's but A country gentleman; He has done no more than other knights have Broken a staff, or so; so let it pass. —done; Thai. To me he seems like diamond to glass. Per. You king's to me, like to my father's pic-Which tells me, in that glory once he was; [tire, Had princes sit, like stars, about his throne, And he the sun, for them to reverence. None that beheld him, but like lesser lights, Did vail their crowns to his supremacy; Where now his son's a glow-worm in the night, The which hath fire in darkness, none in light; Whereby I see that Time's the king of men. For he's their parent, and he is their grave, And gives them what he will, not what they crave. Sim. What, are you merry, knights? [sence? 1 Knight. Who can be other, in this royal presence, But do as much as in you is to do. (As you do love, fill to your mistress' lips,) [brim, We drink this health to you. Knights. We thank your grace. Sim. Yet pause a while; You knight, methinks, do sit too melancholy, As if the entertainment in our court Had not a show might countervail his worth. Note it not you, Thaisa? Thai. What is it To move, my father? Sim. O, attend, my daughter; Princes, in this, should live like gods above, Who freely give to every one that comes To honour them; and princes, not doing so, Are like to gnats, which make a sound, but kill'd are wonder'd at. Therefore to make'st entrance more sweet, here say, We drink this standing-bowl of wine to him. Thai. Alas, my father, it befits not me Upon my younger knights to be so joyous; He may my proffer take for an offence, Since men take women's gifts for impudence. Sim. How! Do as I bid you, or you'll move me else. Thai. Now, by the gods, he could not please me better. [Aside Sim. And further tell him, we desire to know, Of a'heence he is, his name and parentage. Thai. The king my father, sir, has drunk to you. —thank him. Thai. Wishing it so much blood unto your life, Per. I thank both him and you, and pledge him freely. Thai. And further he desires to know of you, Of whence you are, your name and parentage. Per. A gentleman of Tyre—(my name, Pe- My education being in arts and arms :)— [ricles; Who looking for adventures in the world, Was by the rough seas rest of ships and men, And he, them driven upon this shore. Thai. He thanks your grace; names himself Pe- A gentleman of Tyre, who only by [ricles, Misfortune of the sea has been bereft Of ships and men, and cast upon this shore. Thai. I thank the gentleman, and will awake him from his melancholy. Come, gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles, And waste the time, which looks for other revels. Even in your armours, as you are address'd Will very well become a soldier's dance. I will not have excuse, with saying this Lord musick is too harsh for ladies' ears; Since they love men in arms, as well as beds. [The Knights dance. So, this was well ask'd, 'twas so well perform'd. Some, sir. Here's a lady that wants breathing too; And I have often heard, you knights of Tyre Are excellent in making ladies trip; And that their measures are as excellent. [lord. Per. In those that practise them, they are, my Sim. O, that's so much as you would be denied [The Knights and Ladies dance Of your fair courtesy.—Unclap, uncclasspath; Thanks, gentlemen, to all: all have done well, But you the best. [To Pericles.] Pages and lights, These knights unto their several lodgings: Yours, We have given order to be next our own. [sir, Per. I am at your grace's pleasure. Sim. Princes, it is too late to talk of love. For that the mark I know you level at: Therefore each one betake him to his rest; To-morrow, all for speeding do their best. [Exeunt. SCENE IV.—Tyre. A Room in the Governor's House. Enter Helicanus and Escanes. Hel. SCENE V.—Pentapolis. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Simonides, reading a letter, the Knights meet him.

1 Knight. Good morrow to the good Simonides.
Sim. Knights, from my daughter this I let you know,
That for this twelvemonth, she'll not undertake
A married life.
Her reason to herself is only known,
Which from herself by no means can I get.

2 Knight. May we not get access to her, my lord?
Sim. 'Faith, by no means; she hath so strictly
To her chamber, that it is impossible,
Tied her one twelve moons more, she'll wear Diana's livery;
This by the eye of Cynthia hath she vow'd,
And her virgin honour will not dishonour it.

3 Knight. Though loath to bid farewell, we take our leaves.

Sim. So [letter];
They're well despatch'd: now to my daughter's
She tells me here, she'll wed the stranger knight,
Or never more to view nor day nor light.
Mistress, 'tis well, your choice agrees with mine;
I like that well:—nay, how absolute she's in't,
Not minding whether I dislike or no:
Well, I commend her choice; and
Will no longer have it be delay'd.
Soft, here he comes:—I must dissemble it.

Enter Pericles.

Per. All fortune to the good Simonides!
Sim. To you as much, sir! I am beholden to you,
For your sweet musick this last night: my ears,
I do protest, were never better fed
With such delightful pleasing harmony.
Per. It is your grace's pleasure to commend;
Not my desert.
Sim. Sir, you are musick's master.
Per. The worst of all her scholars, my good lord;
Sim. Let me ask one thing. What do you think,
My daughter? [sir, of Per.]
As of a most virtuous princess,
Sim. And she is fair too, is she not?
Per. As a fair day in summer; would't not seem.
Sim. My daughter, sir, thinks very well of you;
Ay, so well, sir, that you must be her master,
And she'll your scholar be; therefore look to it.

Per. Unworthy I to be her schoolmaster.
Sim. She thinks not so: perseus this writing else.
Per. What's here?

A letter, that she loves the knight of Tyre?
'Tis the king's suituity, to have my life.

Sim. Thou hast bewitch'd my daughter, and thou
A villain.

[art]
Per. By the gods, I have not, sir.
Never did thought of mine levy offence;
Nor never did my actions yet commence
A deed might gain her love, or your displeasure.
Sim. Traitor, thou liest.

Per. Traitor!
Sim. Ay, traitor, sir.
Per. Even in his throat, (unless it be the king,) That calls me traitor, I return the lie.
Sim. Now, by the gods, I do applaud his courage.

[Aside.]

Per. My actions are as noble as my thoughts,
That never relish'd of a base descent,
I came unto your court for honour's cause,
And not to be a rebel to her state;
And he that otherwise accounts of me,
This sword shall prove, he's honour's enemy.

Sim. No—

Here comes my daughter, she can witness it.

Enter Thaisa.

Per. Then, as you are as virtuous as fair,
Resolve your angry father, if my tongue
Did e'er soli't, or my hand subscribe
To any syllable that made love to you?
Thaisa. Why, sir, say if you had,
Who takes offence at that would make me glad?
Sim. Yea, mistress, are you so peremptory?
I am glad of it with all my heart. [Aside.] I'll tame
I'll bring you in subjection.—
Will you not, having my consent, bestow
Your love and your affections on a stranger?
(Who, for aught I know to the contrary,
Or think, may be as great in blood as I.) [Aside.]
Hear therefore, mistress; frame your will to mine,
And you, sir, hear you.—Either be rule'd by me,
Or I will make you—man and wife.
Nay, come; your hands and lips must seal it too.—
And being join'd, I'll thus your hopes destroy;
And for a further grief,—(God give you joy!)
What, are you both pleased?

Thaisa. Yes, if you love me, sir.
Per. Even as my life, my blood that fosters it.
Sim. What, are you both agreed?

Both. Yes, 'tis your majesty.
Sim. It pleaseth me so well, I'll see you wed;
Then with what haste you can, get you to bed.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

Enter Gower.

Gow. Now sleep y'sladk hath the rout
No din but snores, the house about,
Made louder by the o'er-fed breast
Of this most pompous marriage feast.
The cat, with eyne of burning coal,
Now couches 'fore the mouze's hole;
And crickets sing at th' oven's mouth,
As the blitter for their drouth.
Hymen hath brought the bride to bed,
Where, by the loss of maidenhead,
A babe is moulded;—lie attent,
And time that is so briefly spent,
With your fine fancies quaintly eche;
What's dumb in show, I'll plain with speech.

Enter Pericles and Simonides at one door, with Attendants; a Messenger meets them, kneels, and gives Pericles a letter. Pericles shews it to Simonides, the Lords kneel to the former. Then enter Thalsa with child, and Lychorida. Simonides shews his daughter the letter; she rejoices: she and Pericles take leave of her father, and depart. Then Simonides, &c. retire.

Gow. By many a dear and painful perch,
Of Pericles the careful search
By the four opposing colons in Art,
Which the world together joins,
Is made, with all due diligence,
That horse, and sail, and high expense,
Can stand the quest. At last from Tyre (Fame answering the most strong inquirer,
To the court of king Simonides
Are letters brought; the tenour these:
Antiochus and his daughter's dead;
The men of Tyrus, on the head
Of Helicanus would set on
The crown of Tyre, but he will none:
The mutiny there he hastes t' appease;
Says to them, if king Pericles
Come not, in twelv six moons, home, He, obedient to their doom, Will take the crown. The sum of this, Brought hither to Pentapolis, I-varied them the regions round, And every one with claps, 'gan sound, Our heir apparent is a king: Who dream'd, who thought of such a thing? Brief, he must hence depart to Tyre: For flesh with child makes her desire (Which who shall cross?) along to go; (Omit we all their dole and woe;) Lychorida, her nurse, she takes, And so to sea. Their vessel shakes Their hails hissow; half in the flood, Hath their keel cut; but fortune's mood Varies again; the grizzled north Disgorges such a tempest fast, That, as a duck for life that dives, So up and down the poor ship drives, The lady shrieks, and, well-a-near! Doth fall in travail with her fear: And what ensues in this fell storm, Shall, for itself, itself perform. I will relate, action may Conveniently the rest convey: Which might not what by me is told, In your imagination hold This stage, the ship, upon whose deck The sea-twist prince appears to speak. ...Exeunt...

SCENE I.

Enter Pericles, on a ship at sea.

Per. Thy God, of this great vast, rebuke these surges. (bass) Which wash both heaven and hell; and then, that Upon the winds command, bind them in brass, Call'd them from the deep? 0! still thy dea'ning, Thy dreadful thunderers; gently quench thy nimble, Sulphureous flashes! 0 how, Lychorida, [mourns] How does my queen?—Thou storm, thou! ven0-Wilt thou spit all thyself?—The seaman's whistle Is as a whisper in the ears of death, Unheard.—Lychorida—Lucina, O Divinest patroness, and midwife, gentle To those that cry by night, convey thy deity Aboard our dancing boat; make swift the pangs Of my queen's travails!—Now, Lychorida—

Enter Lychorida, with an infant.

Lyc. Here is a thing Too young for such a place, who, if it had Conceit, would die as I am like to do. Take in your arms this piece of your dead queen. Per. How! how, Lychorida! Lyc. Patience, good sir; do not assist the storm. Here's all that is left living of your queen,— A little daughter for the sake of it, Be manly, and take comfort. Per. Why do you make us love your goodly gifts, And snatch them straight away? We, here below, Recall not what we give, and therein may We honour with yourselves. Lyc. Patience, good sir, Even for this charge. Per. Now, mild may be thy life! For a more blustering birth had never bae: Quiet and gentle thy conditions Were for thee, the rudest we command'd to this world, That e'er was prince's child. Happy what follows! Thou hast as chiding a nativity, As fire, air, water, earth, and heaven can make, To herald thee from the womb; even at the first, Thy presence more than thy portage quit, With all thou canst find here. Now the good Throw their best eyes upon it! —Exeunt Two Sailors. Sail. What courage, sir? God save you. Per. Courage enough: I do not fear the flaw; It hath done to me the worst. Yet, for the love Of this poor infant, this fresh-new sea-farer, I would, it would be quiet. Look, the billows there; thou wilt not, wilt thou? Blow, and split thyself. 2 Sail. But sea-room, an the brine and cloudy billow kiss the moon, I care not. 1 Sail. Sir, your queen must overboard; the sea works high, the wind is loud, and will not lie till the ship be cleared of the dead. Per. That's your superstition. 1 Sail. Pardon us, sir; with us at sea it still hath been observed; and we are strong in earnest. Therefore briefly yield her; for she must overboard straight. Per. Be it as you think meet.—Most wretched Lyc. Here she lies, sir. [queen Per. A terrible child-bed hast thou had, my No light, no fire; the unfriendly elements; [dear; Forgot thee utterly; nor have I time To give thee ballow'd to thy grave, but straight Must cast thee, scarcely coffin'd, in the oze; Where, for a monument upon thy hones, And eye-remaining lamps, the belching whale, And humming water must o'erwhelm thy corpse, Lying with simple shells. Lychorida, Bid Nestor bring me spices, ink and paper, My casket and my jewels; and bid Nicander Bring me the sattin coffer; lay the babe Upon the pillow; be thee, whiles I say A priestly farewell to her: suddenly, woman. Sail. Sir, we have a chest beneath the hatches, canik'd and hitum'd ready. Per. I thank thee. Mariner, say what coast is 2 Sail. We are near Tharsus. [this / Per. Thidier, gentle mariner, After thy course for Tyre. When canst thou reach 2 Sail. By break of day, if the wind cease. [it? Per. O make for Tharsus. There will I visit Cleon, for the sake Cannot hold out to Tyrus; there I'll leave it At careful nursing. Go thy ways, good mariner; I'll bring the body presently. [Exeunt...

SCENE II.—Ephesus. A Room in Cerimon's House. Enter Cerimon, a Servant, and some persons who have been shipwrecked. Cer. Philemon, ho! Enter Philemon. Phil. Doth my lord call? Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men. It has been a turbulent and stormy night. Serv. I have been in many; but such a night as Till now, I ne'er endur'd. [this, Cer. Your master will he dead ere you return; There's nothing can be minister'd to nature, That can recover him. Give this to the phocery, And tell me how it works. [To Philemon. [Exeunt Philemon, Servant, and those who had been shipwrecked. Enter Two Gentlemen. Gent. Good morning, sir 2 Gent. Good morrow to your lordship. Cer. Gentlemen, Why do you stir so early? Gent. Our lodgings, standing bleak upon the sea, Shook, as the earth did quake; The very principals did seem to rend, And all to topple; pure surprise and fear Made me to quit the house. 2 Gent. That is the cause we trouble you so 'Tis not our husbandry. [early; Cer. O, you say well. [having 1 Gent. But I much marvel that your lordship Rich care about you, should at these early hours,
Act 3.

PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

Shake off the golden slumber of repose.
It is most strange,
Nature should be so conversant with pain,
Being thereto not compell’d.

Cer. I held it ever,
Virtue and cunning were endowments more
Than nobleness and riches; careless heirs
May the two latter darken and expend;
But immortality attains the former,
Making a man a god. 'Tis known, I ever
Have studied physic, through which secret art,
By turning o'er authorities, I have Together with my practice,) made familiar
To me and to my aid, the best infusions
That dwell in vegetines, in metals, stones;
And I can speak of the disturbances
That nature works, and of her cures; which gives
A more content in course of true delight
Than to be thirsty after towering honour,
Or tie my treasure up in silken bags,
To please the fool and death. [pour'd forth

Enter Two Servants with a chest.

Serv. So; lift there.
Cer. Serv. Sir, even now
Did the sea toss upon our shore this chest;
'Tis of some wreck.
Cer. Set down, let's look on it.

2 Gent. 'Tis like a coffin, sir.
Cer. Whate'er it be,
'Tis wondrous heavy. Wrench it open straight; If the sea's stomach be o'ergorg'd with gold, It is a good constraint of fortune, that It bejelches upon us.

2 Gent. 'Tis so, my lord.
Cer. How close 'tis caul'd and butt'md!—

Did the sea cast it up?
Serv. I never saw so huge a bilow, sir,
As toss'd it upon shore.

Cer. Come, wrench it open.
Soft, soft!—it smells most sweetly in my sense.

2 Gent. A delicate odour.
Cer. As ever hit my nostril; so,—up with it.
O you most potent gods! What's here? a corsie! 1 Gent. Most strange! [entreast'ur'd
Cer. Shrouded in cloth of state; balm'd and With bags of spices full! A passport too! Apollo, perfect me! the characters!

[Unfolds a scroll.

Here I give to understand, [Reads.
(If e'er this coffin drive a-hand,) I, king Pericles, have lost
This queen, worth all our mundane cost.
Who finds her, give her burying,
She was the daughter of a king:
Besides this treasure for a fee;
The gods requite his charity!

If thou liv'st, Pericles, thou hast a heart
That even cracks for woe!—This chance'd to-night.

2 Gent. Most likely, sir.
Cer. Nay, certainly to-night;
For look, how fresh she looks!—They were too rough,
That threw her in the sea. Make fire within;
Fetch hither all the boxes in my closet.
Deaths may usurp on nature many hours,
And yet the fire of life kindle again
The oppressed spirits. I have heard
Of an Egyptian, had nine hours lien dead,
By good appliance was recovered.

Enter a Servant, with boxes, napkins, and fire.

Well said, well said; the fire and the cloths.—
The rough and woful musick that we have,
Cause it to sound, beseech you. [block
The vial once more:—How thou stir'st, thou
The musick there.—I pray you, give her air:—

Gentlemen,
This queen will live; nature awakes; a warmth
Breathes out of her, she hath not been encranc’d
Above five hours. See, how she 'gins to blow
Into life's flower again!

1 Gent. The heavens, sir,
Through you, increase our wonder, and set up Your fame for ever.
Cer. She is alive; behold,
Her eyelids, cases to those heavenly jewels Which Pericles hath lost.
Begin to part their fringes of bright gold;
The diamonds of a most prais’d water
Appear, to make the world twice rich. O live,
And make us weep to hear your fate, fair creature, Rare as you seem to be! [She moves.

Thal. O dear Diana, [this?
Where am I? Where's my lord? What world is

2 Gent. Is not this strange?

1 Gent. Most rare.

Cer. [hush, gentle neighbours;
Lend me your hands: the next chamber hear
Get linen; now this matter must be look'd to, [her.
For her relapse is mortal. Come, come, come;
And [Esclusipus guide us!

SCENE III.—Tharsus. A Room in Cleon's House.

Enter Pericles, Cleon, Dionyzia, Lychorida, and Marina.

Per. Most honour'd Cleon, I must needs be gone; My twelve months are expir'd, and Tyrus stands In a litigious peace. You, and your lady, Take from my heart all thankfulness! The gods Make up the rest upon you! 1 Cleo. Your shafts of fortune, though they hurt Yet glance full wand'ringly on us. [you mortally, Dion.
O your sweet queen! That the strict fates had pleas'd you had brought To have bless'd mine eyes! [her hither, Per.
We cannot but obey
The powers above us. Could I rage and roar As doth the sea she lies in, yet the end Must be as 'tis. My babe Marina (whom or she was born at sea, I have nam'd so,) here I charge your charity withal, and leave her The infant of your care; beseeching you To give her princely training, that she may Be manner'd as she is born. 1 Cleo. Fear not, my lord:
Your grace, that fed my country with your corn, (For which the people's prayers still fall upon you,) Must in your child be thought on. If negligence Should therein make me vile, the common body, By you reliev'd, would force me to my duty: But if to that my nature need a spur, The gods revenge it upon me and mine, To the end of generation! [Per.
I believe you;
Your honour and your goodness teach me credit, Without your vows. Till she be married, madam, By bright Diana, whom we honour all, Unmiscarr'd shall this hair of mine remain, Though I show will 'in't. So I take my leave. Good madam, make me blessed in your care In bringing up my child.

Dion. I have one myself,
Who shall not be more dear to my respect,
Than yours, my lord.

1 Cleo. Kind ad, madam, my thanks and prayers.

Cle. We'll bring your grace even to the edge o'the shore;
Then give you up to the mask'd Neptune, and The gentlest winds of heaven.

Per. I will embrace Your offer. Come, dearst madam.—O, no tears, Lychorida, no tears.
Look to your little mistress, on whose grace You may depend hereafter.—Come, my lord.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Ephesus. A Room in Cerimon’s House.

Enter Cerimon and Thaisa.

Cer. Madam, this letter, and some certain jewels, Lay with you in your coffer: which are now At your command. Know you the character?

That. It is my lord’s.

That I was ship’d at sea, I well remember, Even in mine eating time; whether there Delivered or no, by the holy gods, I cannot rightly say: But since king Pericles, My wedded lord, I ne’er shall see again, A vestal livery will I take me to, And never more have joy.

Cer. Madam, if this you purpose as you speak, Diana’s temple is not distant far, Where you may ’bide until your date expire. Moreover, if you please, a niece of mine Shall you have, and me you do.

That. My recompence is thanks, that’s all; Yet my good will is great, though the gift small.

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV

Enter Gower.

Gow. Imagine Pericles at Tyre, Welcom’d to his own desire.
His woful queen leave at Ephesus, To Dion there a votress.
Now to Marina bend your mind, Whom our fast growing scene must find
At Tharsus, and by Cleon train’d in musick, letters; who hath gain’d Of education all the grace, Which makes her both the heart and place Of general wonder. But alack! That monster envy, oft the wrack Of earned praise, Marina’s life Seeks to |ke off by treason’s knife. And in this kind hath our Cleon One daughter, and a wench full grown, Even ripe for marriage fight; this maid Hight Philoten: and it is said For certain in our story, she Would ever with Marina be:
Be’t when she wear’d it, gildèd silk With fingers, long, small, white as milk; Or when she would with sharp needl wound The cambrick, which she made more sound By hurting it; or when to the lute She sung, and made the night-bird mite, That still records with moan; or when She would with rich and constant pen Vail to her mistress Dion; still This Philoten contends in skill With absolute Marina: so With the dove of Paphos might the crow Vie feathers white. Marina gets All praises, which are paid as debts, And not as given. This so darks In Philoten all gracefull marks, That Cleon’s wife, with envy rare, A present murderer does prepare For good Marina, that her daughter Might stand peerless by this slaughter. The sooner her vile thoughts to stead, Lychoria, our nurse, is dead; And cursed Dionyza bathe The pregnant instrument of wrath Frest for this blow. The unborn event I do commend to your content: Only I carry, winged time Post on the lame feet of my rhyme; Which never could I so convey. Unless your thoughts went on my way.

Dionyza does appear, With Leonte, a murderer.

[Exit.]

SCENE I.—Tharsus. An open Place, near the Sea-shore.

Enter Dionyza and Leonte.

Dion. Thy oath remember; thou hast sworn to it:
’Tis but a blow, which never shall be known. Thou canst not do a thing; the world so soon, To yield thee so much profit. Let not conscience, Which is but cold, inflame thy bosom, inflame too nicely, nor let pity, which Even hopes to have cast off, melt thee, but be A soldier to thy purpose.

Leon. I’ll do’t; but yet she is a goodly creature.

Dion. The fitter then the gods should have her. Here!

Weeping she comes for her old nurse’s death. Thou art resolv’d?

Leon. I am resolv’d.

Enter Marina, with a basket of flowers.

Mar. No, no, I will rob Telius of her weed, To stew thy green with flowers: the yellows, blues, The purple violets, and marigolds, Shall, as a chaplet, hang upon thy grave, While summer days do last. Ah me! poor maid, Born in a tempest, when my mother died, This world to me is like a lasting storm, With no room more from my friends. [alone]

Dion. How now, Marina! why do you keep How chance my daughter is not with you? Do not Consume your blood with sorrowing: you have A nurse of me. Lord! how your favour’s chang’d With this unprofitable woe! Come, come;
Give me your wreath of flowers, ere the sea mar it. Walk forth with Leonte: the air is quick there, Piercing, and sharpens well the stomach. Come; —
Leonte, take her by the arm, walk with her.

Mar. No, I pray you; I’ll not bereave yon of your servant.

Dion. Come, come; I love the king your father, and yourself, With more than foreign heart. We every day Expect him here: when he shall come, and find Our people and all reports thus blast’d, He will repent the breadth of his great voyance; Blame both my lord and me, that we have ta’en No care to your best courses. Go. I pray you, Walk, and be cheerful once again; reserve That excellent complexion, which did steal The eyes of young and old. Care not for me; I can go home alone.

Mar. Well, I will go;
But yet I have no desire to it.

Dion. Come, come, I know ’tis good for you. Walk half an hour, Leonte, at the least;
Remember what I have said.

Leon. I warrant you, madam.

Dion. I’ll leave you, my sweet lady, for a while; Pray you walk softly, do not heat your blood: What! I must have a care of you.

Mar. Thanks, sweet madam.—

[Exit Dionyza.]

Is this kind westerly that blows?

South-west.

Mar. When I was born, the wind was north.

Leon. Was’t so?

Mar. My father, as nurse said, did never fear, But cry’d, good seaward! to the sailors calling His hearty hands with hauling of the ropes. And, clasping to the mast, endur’d a sea [tackle That almost burst the deck, and from the ladder- Wash’d off a canvas climber: Ha: says one, Will out I and, with a dropping industry, [tied, and To the topmost stay tenn: the boatswain whis- The master calls, and trebles their confusion.

Leon. And when was this?

Mar. It was when I was born; Never was waves nor wind more violent.
Leon. Come, say your prayers speedily.
Mar. What mean you?
Leon. If you require a little space for prayer, I grant it: Pray; but be not tedious, for the gods are quick of ear, and I am sworn To do my work with haste.
Mar. Why will you kill me?
Leon. To satisfy my lady.
Mar. Why should she have me kill'd?
Now, as I can remember, by my troth, I never did her hurt in all my life; I never spake bad word, nor did ill turn To any living creature; believe me, I, I never kill'd a mouse, nor hurt a fly: I trod upon a worm against my will, But I wept for it. How have I offended, Wherein my death might yield her profit, or My life imply her danger?
Leon. My commission Is not to reason of the deed, but do it.
Mar. You will not do't for all the world, I hope. You are well-fav'rd, and your looks foreshow You have a gentle heart. I saw you lately, When you caught hurt in parting two that fought: Good sooth, I shou'd well in you; do so now! Your lady seeks your life; come you between, And save poor me, the weaker.
Leon. I am sworn, And will despatch.

Enter Pirates, whilst Marina is struggling.

1 Pirate. Hold, villain! [Leonine runs away.
2 Pirate. A prize! a prize!
3 Pirate. Half-part, mates, half-part. Come, let's have her aboard suddenly.

[Exeunt Pirates with Marina.

SCENE II.—The same.

Re-enter Leonine.

Leon. These roving thieves serve the great pirate And they have seiz'd Marina. Let her go: There's no hope she'll return. I'll swear she's dead, And thrown into the sea.—But I'll see further; Perhaps they will but please themselves upon her, Not carry her aboard. If she remain, Whom they have ravish'd, must by me be slain.

[Exit.

SCENE III.—Mitylene. A Room in a Brothel.

Enter Pandar, Bawd, and Boult.

Pand. Boult.
Boult. Sir.
Pand. I would buy the market narrowly; Mitylene is full of gallants. We lost too much money this mart, by being too whench.
Bawd. We were never so much out of creatures. We have but poor three, and they can do no more than they can do; and with continual action are even as good as rotten.
Pand. Therefore let's have fresh ones, whate'er we pay for them. If there be not a conscience to be us'd in every trade, we shall never prosper.
Pand. Thou say'st true: 'tis not the bringing up of poor bastards, as I think, I have brought up some eleven.
Boult. Ay, to eleven, and brought them down again. But shall I search the market?
Bawd. What else, man? The stuff we have, a strong wind will blow it to pieces, they are so pitifully sodden.
Pand. Thou say'st true; they are too unwholesome—of conscience. The poor Transylvanian is dead, that lay with the little baggage.
Boult. Ay, she quickly po'd him; she made him roast meat for worms:—but I'll go search the market.

[Exit Boult.
Pand. Three or four thousand chequins were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and so give over.

Bawd. Why, to give over, I pray you? is it a shame to get when we are old?
Pand. O, our credit comes not in like the commodity; nor the commodity wags not with the danger; therefore, if in our youths we could pick up some pretty estate, 'tis not amiss to keep our door hatch'd. Besides, the sore terms we stand upon with the gods, will be strong with us for giving over.
Boult. Come, other sorts offend as well as we.
Pand. As well as we! ay, and better too; we offend worse. Neither is our profession any trade; it's no calling:—but here comes Boult.

Enter the Pirates and Boult, dragging in Marina.

Boult. Come your ways. [To Marina.]—My masters, you say she's a virgin?

1 Pirate. O, sir, we doubt it not.
Boult. Master, I have gone thorough for this piece, you see: if you like her, so; if not, I have lost my earnest.
Bawd. Boult, has she any qualities?
Boult. She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good clothes; there's no further necessity of qualities can make her be refused.
Bawd. What's her price, Boult?
Boult. I cannot be bated one doit of a thousand pieces.
Pand. Well, follow me, my masters; you shall have your money presently. Wife, take her in; instruct her what she has to do, that she may, not be raw in her entertainment.

[Exeunt Pandar and Pirates.

Bawd. Boult, take you the marks of her; the colour of her hair, complexion, height, age, with warrant of her virginity: and cry, He that will give most, shall have her first. Such a maidenhead were no cheap thing, if men were as they have been. Get this done as I command you.
Boult. Performance shall follow. [Exit Boult.
Mar. Alack, that Leonine was so slack, so slow! (He should have struck, not spoke) that of these pirates, (Not enough barbarous,) had not overboard Thrown me, to seek my mother!
Bawd. Why lament you, pretty one?
Mar. That I am pretty.
Bawd. Come, the gods have done their part in you.
Mar. I accuse them not.
Bawd. You are lit into my hands, where you are like to live.
Mar. The more my fault,
To 'scape his hands, where I was like to die.
Bawd. Ay, and you shall live in pleasure.
Mar. No.
Bawd. Yes, indeed, shall you, and taste gentlemen of all fashions. You shall fare well; you shall have the difference of all complexions. What! do you stop your ears?

Mar. Are you a woman?
Bawd. What would you have me be, an I be not a woman?
Mar. An honest woman, or not a woman.
Bawd. Marry, whip the girl, gutting: I think I shall have something to do with you. Come, you are a young foolish sapling, and must be bowed as I would have you.
Mar. The gods defend me!
Bawd. If it please the gods to defend you by men, then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men must stir you up.—Boult's returned.

Enter Boult.

Now, sir, hast thou cried her through the market?
Boult. I have cried her almost to the number of her hairs; I have drawn her picture with my voice.
Bawd. And I pr'ythee tell me, how dost thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort?
Boult. 'Faith, they listened to me, as they would have hearkened to their father's testament. There was a Spaniard's mouth so watered, that he went to bed to her very description.

Bawd. We shall have him here to-morrow with his boots ruff.

Boul. To-night, to-night. But, mistress, do you know the French knight that owes i'the hams ?

Bawd. Who? monsieur Veroles ?

Boul. Ay ; he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation ; but he made a groan at it, and swore he would see her to-morrow.

Bawd. Well, well ; as for him, he brought his disease hither: here he does but repair it. I know, he will come in our shadow, to scatter his crowns in the sun.

Boul. Well, if we had of every nation a traveller, we shall lodge them with this sign.

Bawd. Pray you, come hither awhile. You have fortunes coming upon you. Mark me; you must seem to do that fearfully, which you commit willingly ; to despise profit, where you have most gain. To weep that you live as you do, makes pity in your lovers: Seldom, but that pity begets a good opinion, and that opinion a mere profit.

Mar. I understand you not.

Boul. O, take her home, mistress, take her home, the rest of the business must be quenched with some present practice.

Bawd. Thou say'st true, I'faith, so they must : for your bride goes to that with shame, which is her way to go with warrant.

Boul. Faith, some do, and some do not. But, mistress, if I have bargain'd for the joint.

Bawd. Thou may'st cut a morsel off the spit.

Boul. I may so.

Bawd. Who should deny it ? Come, young one, I like the manner of your garments well.

Boul. Ay, by my faith, they shall not be changed yet.

Bawd. Boul, spend thou that in the town: report what a sojourner we have; you'll lose nothing by custom. When nature framed this piece, she meant thee a good turn; therefore say what a pagon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report.

Boul. I warrant you, mistress, thunder shall not so awake the beds of eels, as my giving out her beauty stir up the lewdly inclined. I'll bring home some to-night.

Bawd. Come your ways; follow me.

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters urgent, I still my virgin knot will keep. [deep.

Diana, at a distance.

Diana. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us ? [Exit.

Scene IV.—Tharsus. A Room in Cleon's House.

Enter Cleon and Dionyzia.

Dion. Why, are you foolish? Can it be undone?

Cle. O Dionyzia, such a piece of slaughter
The sun and moon ne'er look'd upon !

Dion. I think
You'll turn a child again.

Cle. Were I chief lord of all the spacious world, I'd give it to undo the deed. O lady, Much less in blood than virtue, yet a princess To equal any single crown o' the earth, I'the justice of compare! 0 villain Leonine, Whom thou hast poison'd too! If thou hadst drunk to him, it had been a kindness Becoming well thy feat: what can'st thou say, When he's passion stands for true old woe? And Pericles, in sorrow all devour'd, [show'd, With sighs shot through, and biggest tears o'er Leave's Tharsus, and again embarks. He swears Never to wash his face, nor cut his hairs; He puts on sackcloth, and toad-sea. He bears A tempest, which his mortal vessel tears, And yet he rides it out. Now please you writ The epitaph is for Marina writ By wicked Dionyzia.

Dion. Be one of those, that think
The pretty wrens of Tharsus will fly hence, And open this to Pericles. I do shame
To think of what a noble strain you are, And of how cow'd a spirit.

Cle. To such proceeding
Who ever but his approbation added, Though not his pre-consent, he did not flow From honourable courses.

Dion. Be it so then:
Yet some does know, but you, how she came dead, Nor none can know, Leonine being gone. She did disdain my child, and stood between Her and her fortunes: None would look on her, But cast their gazes on Marina's face; Whilst she was but a child, at, and held a matkin, Not worth the time of day. It pierced me thorough; And though you call my course unnatural, You not your child well loving, yet I find, It grieves me, as an enterprise of kindness, Perform'd to your sole daughter.

Cle. Heavens forgive it !

Dion. And as for Pericles
What should he say? We wept after her hearse, And even yet we mourn: her monument Is almost finish'd, and her head must be, In glittering golden characters express A general praise to her, and care in us At whose expense 'tis done.

Cle. You art like the harpy,
Which, to betray, doth wear an angel's face, Seize with an eagle's talons.

Dion. You are like one, that superstition
Doth swear to the gods, that winter kills the flies; But yet I know you'll do as I advise. [Exit.

Enter Gower, before the monument of Marina at Tharsus.

Gow. Thus time we waste, and longest leagues make short ;
Sail seas in cockles, have, and wish but for 't ;
Making, (to take your imagination,) From bourn to bourn, region to region.
By you being pardon'd, we commit no crime
To use one language, in each several clime,
Where our scenes seem to live. I do beseech you,
To learn of me, who stand i'the gaps to teach you
The stages of our story. Pericles
Is now again thwarting the wayward seas, (Attended on by many a lord and knight,) To bear his daughter, all his life's delight.
Old Escanes, whom Helicanus late
Advanc'd in time to great and high estate.
Is left to govern. Bear you it in mind
Old Helicanus goes along behind. [brought Well-sailing ships, and bounteous winds have
This king to Tharsus, (think his pilot thought: So with his steereage shall your thoughts grow on.)
To fetch his daughter home, who first is gone. Like moes and shadows see them move awhile,
Your ears unto your eyes I'll reconcile

Dumb show.

Enter at one door, Pericles with his Train : Cleon and Dionyzia, at the other. Cleon shows Pericles the tomb of Marina; whereat Pericles makes lamentation, puts on sackcloth, and in a mighty passion departs. Then Cleon and Dionyzia retire.

Gow. See how belief may suffer by foul show ! Then uses his passion stand for true old woe; And Pericles, in sorrow all devour'd, [show'd, With sighs shot through, and biggest tears o'er Leaves Tharsus, and again embarks. He swears Never to wash his face, nor cut his hairs; He puts on sackcloth, and toad-sea. He bears A tempest, which his mortal vesselears, And yet he rides it out. Now please you writ The epitaph is for Marina writ By wicked Dionyzia.
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE. 687

Act 4.

[Reads the inscription on Marina's monument.] The fairest, sweetest, and best, lies here, Who wither'd in her spring of year. She was of Tyria, the king's daughter, On whom foul death had made this slaughter; Marina was she call'd; and at her birth, [earth, Thetis, being proud, swallow'd some part o' the Therefore the earth bearing to be deflow'd, Hath Thetis' birth-child on the heauen bestow'd: Wherefore she does, (and swear she'll never stint,) Make raging battery upon shores of limb. No visor does become black villainy, So well as soft and tender flattery. Let Pericles believe his daughter's dead, And bear his courses to be ordered By lady fortune; while our scenes display His daughter's wo and heavy well-a-day, In her unholy service. Patience then, And think you now are all in Mytyleen. [Exeunt.] SCENE V.—Mitylene. A Street before the Brothel. Enter, from the Brothel, Two Gentlemen. 1 Gent. Did you ever hear the like? 2 Gent. No, nor never shall do in such a place as this, she being once gone. 1 Gent. But to have divinity preached there! did you ever dream of such a thing? 2 Gent. No, no. Come, I am for no more bawdy-houses: shall we hear the vestals sing? 1 Gent. I'll do any thing now that is virtuous; but I am out of the road of rutting, for ever. [Exeunt.] SCENE VI.—The same. A Room in the Brothel. Enter Pander, Bawd, and Bawd. Paud. Well, I had rather than twice the worth of her, she had ne'er come here. Bawd. Fye, fye upon her! she is able to freeze the god Priapus, and undo a whole generation. We must either get her ravished, or e'er rid of her. When she should do for clients her fitment, and do me the kindness of our profession, she has me her quirks, her reasons, her master-reasons, her prayers, her knees; that she would make a puritan of the devil, if he should cheapen a kiss of her. Bawd. Faith, I must ravish her, or she'll disfigure us of all our cavaliers, and make all our swearer priests. Paud. Now, the pox upon her green-sickness for me. Bawd. 'Faith, there's no way to be rid on't, but by the way to the pox. Here comes the lord Lyssmachus, disguised. Boult. We should have both lord and lown, if the peevish baggage would but give way to customers.

Enter Lyssmachus.

Lys. How now? How a dozen of virginities? Bawd. Now, the gods to-bless your honour! Boult. I am glad to see your honour in good health. Lys. You may so; 'tis the better for you that your ressorters stand upon sound legs. How now, wholesome iniquity? Have you that a man may deal withal, and defy the surgeon? Bawd. We have here one sir, if she would— but there never came her like in Mitylen. Lys. If she'd do the deeds of darkness, thou would'st say. Bawd. Your honour knows what 'tis to say, well enough. Lys. Well; call forth, call forth. Boult. For flesh and blood, sir, white and red, you shall see a rose; and she was a rose indeed, if she had but— Lys. What, pr'ythee? Boult. O, sir, I can be modest. Lys. That dignifies the renown of a bawd, no less than it gives a good report to a number to be chaste. Enter Marina. Bawd. Here comes that which grows to the stalk;—never plucked yet, I can assure you. Is she not a fair creature? Lys. 'Faith, she would serve after a long voyage at sea. Well, there's for you,—leave us. Bawd. I beseech your honour, give me leave: a word, and I'll have done presently. Lys. I beseech you, do. Bawd. First, I would have you note, this is an honourable man. [To Marina, whom she takes aside. Mar. I desire to find him so, that I may worthily note him. Bawd. Next, he's the governor of this country, and a man whom I am bound to. Mar. If he govern the country, you are bound to him indeed; but how honourable he is in that, I know not. Bawd. 'Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly? He will line your apron with gold. Mar. What he will do graciously, I will thankfully receive. Lys. Have you done? Bawd. My lord, she's not paced yet; you must take some pains to work her to your manage. Come, we will leave his honour and her together. [Exeunt Bawd, Pander, and Boult. Lys. Go thy ways.—Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade? Mar. What trade, sir? Lys. What I cannot name but I shall offend. Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade. Please you to name it. Lys. How long have you been of this profession? Mar. Ever since I can remember. Lys. Did you go to it so young? Were you a gamester at five, or at seven? Mar. Earlier too, sir, if now I be one. Lys. Why, the house you dwell in, proclaims you to be a creature of sale. Mar. Do you know this house to be a place of such resort, and will come into it? I hear say, you are of honourable parts, and are the governor of this place. Lys. Why, hath your principal made known unto you who I am? Mar. Who is my principal? Lys. Why, your herb-woman; she that sets seeds and roots of fame and iniquity. O, you have heard something of my power, and so stand aloof for more serious wooling. But I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not see thee, or else, look friendly upon thee. Come, bring me to some private place. Come, come. Mar. If you were born to honour, show it now; If put upon you, make the judgment good That thought you worthy of it. Lys. How's this? how's this?—Some more: Mar. For me, [be sage. That am a maid, though most ungentle fortune Hath plac'd me here within this loathsome stile, Where, since I came, diseases have been sold Dearer than physic,—O that the good gods Would set me free from this unhallow'd place. Though they did change me to the meavest bird That flies i' the purer air! Lys. I did not think Thou could'st have spoke so well; ne'er dream'd thou could'st. Had I brought hither a corrupted mind, Thy speech had alter'd it. Hold, here's gold for Persever still in that clear way thou goest, [thee And the gods strengthen thee! Lys. The gods preserve you! Mar. For me, be you thoughten That I came with no ill intent: for to me The very doors and windows savour villely.
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

Act 5

Scene I.—On board Pericles' Ship, off Mytilene.

A close Partition on deck, with a Curtain before it: Pericles not yet, recites on a Couch. A Barge lying beside the Tyrian Vessel.

Enter Two Sailors, one belonging to the Tyrian vessel, the other to the barge; to them Helicanus.

Tyrr. Sail. Where's the lord Helicanus? he can resolve you. [To the Sailor of Mytilene.]

O here he is.—Sir, there's a barge put off from Mytilene, And in it is Lysimachus the governor, Who craves to come aboard. What is your will? Hel. That he has his. Call up some gentlemen. Tyrr. Sail. Ho, gentlemen! my lord calls. Enter Two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Doth your lordship call?
Hel. Gentlemen, Then that which would of worth would come aboard: I To greet them fairly. [pray you,

[T he Gentlemen and the Two Sailors descend, and go on board the barge.

Enter, from thence, Lysimachus and Lords; the Tyrian Gentlemen, and the Two Sailors.

Tyrr. Sail. Sir, This is the man that can, in aught you would, Resolve you. [You wish me well. Barse is safe for them; the gods preserve you! Hel. And you, sir, to out-live the age I am, And die as I would do. Lys. Sir, this is the man you are; returning, and seeing this goodly vessel ride before us, I made it, to know of whom you are. Hel. First, sir, what is your place? Lys. I am governor of this place you lie before.
Pericles, Prince of Tyre - Act 5

Hel. Sir,
Our vessel is of Tyre, in it the king;
A man, who for this three months hath not spoken
To any one, nor taken sustenance,
But to pronounce his grief.

Lys. Upon what ground is his distemper?

Hel. Sir, it would be too tedious to repeat;
But the main grief of all springs from the loss
Of a beloved daughter and a wife.

Lys. May we not see him, then?

Hel. You may indeed, sir.

But bootless is your sight; he will not speak
To any one.

Lys. Yet, let me obtain my wish.

Hel. Behold him, sir; ['Pericles discovered.'] this was a goodly person,
Till the disaster, that, one mortal night,
Drove him to this. [Hail!]

Lys. Sir, king, all hail! the gods preserve you!

Hail, royal sir!

Hel. It is in vain; he will not speak to you.

Lord. Sir, we have a maid in Mytilene, I durst
Would win some words of him. [wager,

"Tis well bethought.
She, questionless, with her sweet harmony
And other choice attractions, would allure,
And make a battery against his desolation parts;
Whilome now are midway stopp'd;
She, all as happy as all the fairest,
Is, with her fellow maidens, now within
The leafy shelter that abuts against
The island's side.

[He whispers one of the attendants.]

Hel. Sure, all's effectless; yet nothing we'll omit
That bears recovery's name. But, since your kindness,
We have stretch'd thus far, let us beseech you furth;
For that our gold we may provision have, [ther,
Wherein we are not destitute for want,
But weary for the staleness.

Lys. O, sir, a courtesy,
Which if we should deny, the most just God
For every graff would send a caterpillar
And so inflect our province. — Yet once more
Let me entreat to know at large the cause
Of your king's sorrow.

Hel. Sit, sir, I will recount it:—
But, see, I am prevented.

Enter, from the barge, Lord, Marina, and a young Lady.

Lys. O, here is
The lady that I sent for. Welcome, fair one!
Is't not a goodly presence?

Hel. A gallant lady.

Lys. She's such, that were I well assur'd she came
Of gentle kind, and noble stock, I'd wish
No better choice, and think me rarely wed.
Fair one, all goodness that consists in beauty
Expect even here, where is a kingly patient;
If that thy prosperous artificial feat
Can draw him but to answer thee in aught,"Thy sacred physic shall receive such pay
As thy desire can wish.

Mar. Sir, I will use
My utmost skill in his recovery,
Provided none but I and my companion
Be suffer'd to come near him.

Lys. Come, let us leave her,
And the gods make her prosperous!

Marina sings.

Mark'd he your musick?

Mar. No, nor look'd on her.

Lys. See, she will speak to him.

Mar. Hail, sir! my lord, lend ear:—

Per. Hum! ha!

Mar. I am a maid,
My lord, that never before invited eyes,
But have been gaz'd on, comet-like: she speaks,
My lord, that, may be, hath endur'd a grief
Might equal yours, if both were justly weigh'd.

[Though wayward fortune did malign my state,
My derivation was from ancestors
Who stood equivalent with mighty kings;
But time hath rooted out my parentage,
And to the world and awkward casualties
Bound me in servitude.—I will desist;
But there is something glows upon my cheek,
And whispers in mine ear, Go not till he speak.

[Aside.

Per. My fortunes—parentage—good parentage—
To equal mine!—was it not thus? what say you? [Per.
Mar. I said, my lord, if you did know my pa
You would not do me violence.

[rentage, Per.

I pray you, turn your eyes again upon me.—
You are like something that—What countryw
Here of these shores?

[Mar.

No, nor of any shores:
Yet I was mortal brought forth, and am
No other than I appear. [ing.

Per. I am great with weep, and shall deliver weep.
My dearest wife was like this maid, and such a one
My daughter might have been; my queen's square
brows;
Her stature ten in., as wand-like straight;
As silver-voic'd; her eyes as jewel-like;
And cas'd as richly: in pace another Juno;
Who starves the ears she feeds, and makes them hungry,
[ live?

The more she gives them speech.—Where do you

Mar. Where am I but a stranger: from the deck
You may discern the place.

Per. Where were you bred?
And how achiev'd you these endowments, which
You make more rich to owe? [Mar.

Should I tell my history,
'Twould seem like lies disdain'd in the reporting.

Per. Pr'ythee speak;
Falseness cannot come from thee, for thou look'st
Mostly as noble, and thou seem'st a prince
For the crown'd truth to dwell in: I'll believe thee,
And make my senses credit thy relation,
To points that seem impossible; for thou look'st
Like one I lov'd indeed. What were thy friends?
Didst thou not say, when I did push thee back,
(Which was when I perceiv'd thee,) that thou
From good descending?

[Can'st

Mar. So indeed I did.

Per. Report thy parentage. I think thou say'st
Thou hadst been a tos'sd from wrong to injury,
And that thou thought'st thy griefs might equal
If both were open'd.

[mine,

Mar. Some such thing indeed
I said, and said no more but what my thoughts
Did warrant me was likely.

Tell thy story;
If thine consider'd prove the thousandth part
Of my endurance, thou art a man, and I
Have suffer'd like a girl: yet thou dost look
Like Patience, gazin' on king's graves, and smiling
Extremity out of act. What were thy friends?
How lost thou them? Thy name, my most kind virgin?
Recount, I do beseech thee; come, sit by me.

Mar. My name, sir, is Marina.

Per. O, I am mock'd,
And thou by some incense god sent hither
To make the world laugh at me;

Mar. Or here I'll cease.

Per. Nay, I'll be patient;
Thou little know'st how thou dost startle me,
To call thyself Marina.

Mar. The name Marina,
Was given me by one that had some power;
My father, and a king.

Per. How! a king's daughter?

And call'd Marina?

Mar. Thou said you would believe me;
But, not to be a troubler of your peace,
I will end here.

Per. But are you flesh and blood?

2 Y
How sure are you my daughter.—But what mu-
Hels. My lord, I hear none. [sick?
peri. None?
The music of the spheres: list, my Marina.
Lys. It is not good to cross him: give him way.
peri. Rarest sounds!
Do ye not hear?
Lys. Music? My lord, I hear—peri. Most heavenly music.
It nips me unto listning, and thick slumber
Hangs on mine eye-lids: let me rest. [He sleeps.
Lys. A pillow for his head;
{The curtain before the pavilion of Pericles is closed.
So leave him all. Well, my companion-friends,
If this but answer to my just relief,
I'll well remember you.
[Exeunt Lysimachus, Helicanus, Marina, and attendant Lady.

SCENE II.—The same.

Pericles on the deck asleep: Diana appearing to him
as in a vision.

Dian. My temple stands in Ephesus; thee thee
And do mine altar sacrifice. [thither,
There, when my maiden priests are met together,
Before the people all,
Reveal how thou at sea didst lose thy wife:
To mourn thy crosses, with thy daughter's call,
And give them repetition to the king.
Perform my bidding, or thou livest in woe:
Do't, and be happy, by my silver bow.
Awake, and tell thy dream. [Diana disappears.
peri. Celestial Dian, goddess argentine,
I will obey thee!—Helicanus!

{Enter Lysimachus, Helicanus, and Marina.

Hel. Sir.
peri. My purpose was for Tharsus, there to strike
The inhospitable Cleon; but now
For other service first: toward Ephesus
Turn our blown sails; eswoons I'll tell thee why.—
[To Helicanus.
Shall we refresh us, sir, upon your shore,
And give you gold for such provision
As our intents will need?—
Lys. With all my heart, sir; and when you come
I have another suit. [ashore.
peri. You shall prevail,
Were it to woo my daughter; for it seems
You have been noble towards her.
Lys. Sir, lend your arm.
peri. Come, my Marina.
[Exeunt.
\\n
Enter Gower, before the temple of Diana at Ephesus.

Gom. Now our sands are almost run
More a little, and then done.
This, as my last boon, give me,
(For such kindness must relieve me),
That you aptly will suppose
What pageantry, what feats, what shows,
That minstrelsy, and pretty din,
The regent made in Mitylene,
To greet the king. So he has th'ird,
That he is promis'd to be wiv'd
To fair Marina; but in no wise,
Till he had done his sacrifice,
As Dian bade: where'to be bound,
The interim, pray you, to confound,
In feather'd briefness sails are fill'd
And wishes fall out as they w'll'd.
At Ephesus, the temple see,
Our king, and all his company.
That he can hither come so soon,
is by your fancy's thankful boon. [Exit.

SCENE III.—The Temple of Diana at Ephesus.

Thaisa standing near the Altar, as high Priestess a number of Virgins on each side; Cerimon and other Inhabitants of Ephesus attending.
Enter Pericles, with his Train. Lysimachus, Helicanus, Marina, and a Lady.

Per. Hail, Dian! to perform thy just command, I here confess myself the king of Tyre; who, frightened from my country, did wed the fair Thaisa, at Pentapolis.

At sea in childhood died she, but brought forth a maid-child call'd Marina; who, O goddess, Wears yet thy silver livery. She at Tharsus Was nurs'd with Cleon; whom at fourteen years He sought to murder; but her better stars Brought her to Mytilene; against whose shore Riding, her fortunes brought the maid aboard us, Where, by her own most clear remembrance, she Made known herself my daughter.

Thais. Voice and favour!—
You are, you are—O royal Pericles!—[She faints.]
Per. What means the woman? she dies! help, gentlemen! If you have told Diana's altar true, This is your wife.

Per. Reverend appearer, no; I threw her o'erboard with these very arms. Cer. Upon this coast, I warrant you. Per. [To Thaisa.]
Cer. Look to the lady,—O, she's but o'erjoy'd.
Early, one bust'ring storm, this lady was thrown on this shore. I op'd the coffin, and Found there rich jewels; recover'd her, and plac'd her here in Diana's temple.

Hail, O, let me look!
If he be none of mine, my sanctity Will to my sense bend no licentious ear, But curb it, spite of seeing. O, my lord, Are you not Pericles? Like him you speak, Like him you are: Did you not name a tempest, A birth, and death?

Per. The voice of dead Thaisa!
Thaisa. That Thaisa am I, supposed dead, And drown'd.

Per. Immortal Dian! Thaisa. Now I know you better.—
When we with tears parted Pentapolis, The king, my father, gave you such a ring. [Shews a ring.]
Per. This, this: no more, you gods! your present kindness Makes my past miseries sport: You shall do well, That on the touching of her lips I may Melt, and no more be seen. O come, be buried A second time within these arms. Mar. My heart Leaps to be gone into my mother's bosom. [Kneels to Thaisa.]
Per. Look, who kneels here! Flesh of thy flesh, Thaisa; Thy burden at the sea, and call'd Marina, For she was yield'd there.

Thaisa. Bless'd, and mine own! Hel. Hail, madam, and my queen! Thaisa. I know you not.
Per. You have heard me say, when I did fly I left behind an ancient substitute. [From Tyre, Can you remember what I call'd the man?] I have nam'd him off. Thaisa. 'Twas Helicanus then. Per. Still confirmation: Embrace him, dear Thaisa; this is he. Now do I long to hear how you were found; How possibly preserv'd; and whom to thank, Besides the gods, for this great miracle. Thaisa. Lord Cerimon, my lord; this man Through whom the gods have shown their power From first to last resolve you. [That can Per. Reverend sir, The gods can have no mortal officer More like a god than you. Will you deliver How this dead queen re-lives?

Cer. I will, my lord. Beseech you, first to go with me to my house, Where shall be shown you all was found with her; How she came placed here within the temple; No needful thing omitted.

Per. Pure Diana! I bless thee for thy vision, and will offer My night oblations to thee. Thaisa, this Prince, the fair-betrothed of your daughter, Shall marry her at Pentapolis. And now, This ornament that makes me look so dismal, Will I, my lov'd Marina, clipping to form; And what this fourteen years no razor touch'd, To grace thy marriage-day, I'll beautify.

Thaisa. Lord Cerimon hath letters of good credit, Sir, that my father's dead. [To his queen.]
Per. Heavens make a star of him! Yet there, We'll celebrate their nuptials, and ourselves Will in that kingdom spend our following days; Our son and daughter shall in Tyrus reign: Lord Cerimon, we do our longing stay, To hear the rest unfold.—Sir, lead the way. [

[Exeunt.]

Enter Gower.

Gow. In Antioch, and his daughter you have heard Of monstrous lust the due and just reward: In Pericles, his queen and daughter, seen (Although assai'd with fortune fierce and keen,) Virtue preserv'd from fell destruction's blast, Led on by heaven, and crown'd with joy at last, In Helicanus may yet well descry A figure of truth, of faith, of loyalty: In reverend Cerimon there well appears The worth that learned charity aye wears. For wicked Cleon and his wife, when fame Had spread their cursed deed, and honour Of Pericles, to rage the city turn: [name That him and his they in his palace burn. The gods for murder seemed so content To punish them; although not done, but meant. So on your patience evermore attending, Now joy wait on you! Here our play has ending.

[Exit Gower.]
KING LEAR.

PERSONS REPRESENTED.

Lear, King of Britain.
King of France.
Duke of Burgundy.
Duke of Albany.
Earl of Kent.
Earl of Gloucester.
Edgar, son to Gloucester.
Edmund, bastard son to Gloucester.
Goneril.
Regan.

Knights attending on the King, Officers, Messengers, Soldiers, and Attendants.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A Room of State in King Lear’s Palace.

Enter Kent, Gloucester, and Edmund.

KENT. I thought the king had more affected the duke of Albany, than Cornwall.

GLO. It did always seem so to us: but now, in the division of the kingdom, it appears not which of the dukes he values most; for equalities are so weigh’d, that curiosity in neither can make choice of either’s moiety.

KENT. Is not this your son, my lord?

GLO. His breeding, sir, hath been at my charge: I have so often blush’d to acknowledge him, that now I am bailed to it.

KENT. I cannot conceive you.

GLO. Sir, this young fellow’s mother could: whereupon she grew round-womb’d; and had, indeed, sir, a son for her cradle, ere she had a husband for her bed. Do you smell a fault?

KENT. I cannot wish the fault undone, the issue of it being so proper.

GLO. But I have, sir, a son by order of law, some year elder than this, who yet is no dearer in my account: though this knave came somewhat sanctily into the world before he was sent for, yet was his mother fair; there was good sport at his making, and the whoreson must be acknowledged. Do you know this noble gentleman, Edmund?

EDM. No, my lord.

GLO. My lord of Kent: remember him hereafter as my honourable friend.

EDM. My services to your lordship.

KENT. I must love you, and sue to know you better.

EDM. Sir, I shall study deserving.

GLO. He hath been out nine years, and away he shall again:—The king is coming.

[Trumpets sound within.

Enter Lear, Cornwall, Albany, Goneril, Regan, Cordelia, and Attendants.

Lear. Attend the lords of France and Burgundy, Gloucester.

GLO. I shall, my liege.

Lear. Mean-time we shall express our darker purpose. [divided.

Give me the map there.—Know, that we have In three, our kingdom: and 'tis our fast intent, To shake all cares and business from our age: Conferring them on younger strengths, while we Unburden’d crawl toward death.—Our son of Cornwall,

And you, our no less loving son of Albany, We have this hour a constant will to publish Our daughters’ several dowers, that future strife May be prevented now. The princes, France and Burgundy, Great rivals in our youngest daughter’s love, Long in our court have made their amorous sojourn, [daughters, And here are to be answer’d.—Tell me, my (Since now we will divest us, both of rule, interest of territory, cases of state,) Which of you, shall we say, doth love us most? That we our largest bounty may extend Where merit doth most challenge it.—Goneril, Our eldest-born, speak first.

GON. Sir, I

Do you love me more than words can wield the matter, Dearer than eye-sight, space and liberty;
Beyond what can be valued, rich or rare; [nour: No less than life, with grace, health, beauty, ho- As much as child e’er lov’d, or father found.

Cor. What shall Cordelia do? Love, and be silent.

LEAR. Of all these hounds, even from this line to this,
With shadowy forests and with champains rich’d, With plenteous rivers and wide-skirted meads, We make thee lady: To thine and Albany’s issue Be this perpetual.—What says our second daughter, Our dearest Regan, wife to Cornwall?—Speak.

REG. I am made of that self metal as my sister, And prize me at her worth. In my true heart I find, she names my very deed of love; Only she comes too short,—that I profess Myself an enemy to all other joys, Which the most precious square of sense possesses; And find, I am alone felicitate In your dear highness’ love.

Cor. Then poor Cordelia! [Aside.
And yet not so, since I am sure, my love’s More richer than my tongue.

LEAR. To thee, and thine, hereditary ever, Remain this ample third of our fair kingdom; No less in space, validity, and pleasure, Than that confirm’d on Goneril. Now, our joy. Although the last, not least; to whose young love The vines of France, and milk of Burgundy, Strive to be interest’d; what can you say, to draw A third more opulent than your sisters? Speak.

Cor. Nothing, my lord.

LEAR. Nothing?

Cor. Nothing.

LEAR. Nothing can come of nothing: speak again.

Cor. Unhappy that I am, I cannot heave
Act I.

KING LEAR.

My heart into my mouth: I love your majesty
According to my bond; nor more, nor less.

Lear. How, how, Cordelia? mend your speech a
Lest it may mar your fortunes.

[King. Good my lord,
You have begot me, bred me, lov'd me: I
Return those duties back as are right fit,
Obey you, love you, and must honour you.
Why have my sisters husbands, if they say
They love you, all? Haply, when I shall wed,
That lord, whose hand must take my plight, shall carry

Half my love with him, half my care, and duty:
Sure, I shall never marry like my sisters,
To love my father ill.

Lear. But goes this with thy heart?

[King. Ay, good my lord.

Lear. So young, and so untender?

Cor. So young, my lord, and true.

[dower. Lear. Let it be so,—Thy truth then be thy
For, by the sacred radiance of the sun:
The mysteries of Hecate, and the night;
By all the operations of the orbs,
From whom we do exist, and cease to be;
Here I disclaim all my paternal care,
Propinquity and property of blood,
And as a stranger to my heart and me
Hold thee, from this, for ever. The barbarous Scy-
Or he that makes his generation messes
[thian,
To gorge his appetite, shall to my bosom
Be as well neighbour'd, pitied, and reliev'd,
As thou my sometime daughter.

Kent. Good my liege,—

Lear. Peace, Kent!

Come not between the dragon and his wrath:
I lov'd her most, and thought to set my rest
On her kind nursery.—Hence, and avoid my sight!

[To Cordelia.

So be my grave, my peace, as here I give
Her father's heart from her!—Call France;—
Who stirs?

Call Burgundy.—Cornwall, and Albany,
With my two daughters' dowers digest this third:
Let pride, which she calls plainness, marry her.
I do invest you jointly with my power,
Pre-eminence, and all the large effects
That troop with majesty—ourselves, by monthly
With reservation of a hundred knights, [course,
By you to be sustain'd, shall our abode
Make with you by due turns, only we still retain
The name, and all the additions to a king:
The sway,
Revenue, execution of the rest,
Beloved sons, be yours: which to confirm,
This coronet part between you.

[Giving the crown.

Kent. Royal Lear,
Whom I have ever honour'd as my king,
Lov'd as my father, as my master follow'd,
As my great patron thought on in my prayers,—
Lear. The bow is bent and drawn, make from the shaft.

Kent. Let it fall rather, though the fork invade
The region of my heart: be Kent unmannerly,
When Lear is mad. What would'st thou do, old man?

Think'st thou, that duty shall have dread to speak,
When power to flattery bows? To plainness honour's bound,

When majesty stoops to folly. Reverse thy doom;
And in thy best consideration, check
This hideous rashness: answer my life my judgment,
Thy youngest daughter does not love thee least;
Nor are those empty-hearted, whose low sound
Reverses no hollowness.

Lear. Kent, on thy life, no more.

Kent. My life I never held but as a pawn
To wage against thine enemies; nor fear to lose it,
Thy safety being the motive.

Lear. Kent. See better, Lear; and let me still remain
The true blank of thine eye.

Lear. Now, by Apollo,—

Kent. Now, by Apollo, king
Thou swearest thy gods in vain.

Lear. Thou, O, vassal! miscreant!

[Laughing his hand on his sword.

Cor. Kent. Do;
Kill thy physician, and the fee bestow
Upon the foul disease. Revoke thy gift;
Or, whilst I can vent clamour from my throat,
I'll tell thee, thou dost evil.

Lear.

Hear me, recreant!

On thine allegiance hear me!—
Since thou hast sought to make us break our vow,
(Which we durst never yet,) and, with strain'd pride,
To come betwixt our sentence and our power;
(Which nor our nature nor our place can bear,)
Our potency made good, take thy reward.
Five days we do allot thee, for provision
To shield thee from diseases of the world;
And, on the sixth, to turn thy hated back
Upon our kingdom: if, on the tenth day following,
Thy banish'd trunk be found in our dominions,
The moment is thy death: Away! by Jupiter,
This shall not be revok'd.

Lear. Kent. Take thee well, king: since thus thou wilt
Freedom lives hence, and banishment is here,—
The gods to their dear shelter take thee, maid,

[To Cordelia.

That justly think'st, and hast most rightly said.—
And your large speeches may your deeds approve.

[To Regan and Goneril.

That good effects may spring from words of love.
Thus Kent, O princes, bids you all adieu;
He'll shape his old course in a country new. [Exit.

Re-enter Gloster; with France, Burgundy, and Attendants.

Glo. Here's France and Burgundy, my noble lord.

Lear. My lord of Burgundy;
We first address towards you, who with this king
Hath rival'd for our daughter; What, in the least,
Will you require in present dower with her,
Or cease your quest of love?

Bur. Most royal majesty,
I crave no more than hath your highness offer'd,
Nor will you tender less.

Lear. Right noble Burgundy,
When she was dear to us, we did hold her so;
But now her price is fall'n! Sir, there she stands;
If aught within that little, seeming substance,
Or all of it, with our displeasure piece'd,
And nothing more, may fitly like your grace,
She's there, and she is yours.

Bur. I know no answer.

Lear. Sir,
Will you with those infirmities she owes,
Unfriend'd, new-adopted to our hate,
Dower'd with our curse, and stranger'd with our
Take her, or leave her?

[Exit,

Bur. Pardon me, royal sir;
Election makes not up on such conditions.

Lear. Then leave her, sir; for, by the power that made me,
I tell you all her wealth.—For you, great king,

[To France.

I would not from your love make such a stray,
To match you where I hate; therefore beseech you
To avert your liking a more worthy way,
Than on a wretch whom nature is asham'd
Almost to acknowledge her.

France. This is most strange!
That she, that even but now was your best object,
The argument of your praise, balm of your age,
The bestest, most dearest, should in this trice of time
Commit a thing so monstrous, to dismantle
So many folds of favour! Sure, her offence
Must be of such unnatural degree,
That monsters it, or your fore-vouch'd affection
Fall into taint: which to believe of her,
Must be a faith, that reason without miracle
Could never plant in me.
Cor. I yet beseech your majesty, (If for I want that glib and oily art, [tend, To speak and purpose not; since what I well in- will'd before I speak,) that you make known It is no vicious blot, murder, or foulness, No blameless action, or dishonour'd step, That hath depriv'd me of your grace and favour: But even for want of that, for which I am richer; A still-soliciting eye, and such a tongue That I am glad I have not, though, not to have it, Had lost me in your liking. Better thou [better.

But, Royal Lear,

Give but that portion which yourself propos'd, And here I take Cordelia by the hand, Duchess of Burgundy.

Lear: Nothing: I have sworn; I am firm.

Cor. I am sorry then, you have so lost a father, That you must lose a husband.

Cor. Peace be with Burgundy! Since that respects of fortune are his love, I shall not be his wife. [being poor:

France. Fairer Cordelia, that art most rich, Most choice, forsoaken; and most lov'd, despis'd!

Thy and thy virtues here I seize upon: Be it lawful, I take up what's east away, [neglect Gods, gods! 'tis strange, that from their cold'st My love should kindle to inflam'd respect.—

Thy dowerless daughter, king, thrown to my chance, Is queen of us, of ours, and our fair France: Not all the dukes of wath'rish Burgundy, Shall buy this unpriz'd precious maid of me.

Bid them farewell, Cordelia, though unkind: Thou lostest here, a better where to find.

Lear. Thou hast her, France; let her be thine; Have no such daughter, nor shall ever see [for we That face of hers again:—Therefore be gone, Without our grace, our love, our benison.

Come, noble Burgundy.

[Flourish. Exit Lear, Burgundy, Cornwall, Albany, Gloster, and Attendants.

France. Bid farewell to your sisters.

Cor. If our parent, with wash'd eyes Cordelia leaves you: I know what you are; And, like a sister, am most loath to Call your faults, as they are nam'd. Use well our father: To your professed bosoms I commit him: But yet, alas! stood I within his grace, I would prefer him to a better place.

So farewell to you both.

Gon. Prescribe not us our duties.

Reg. Be, to content your lord; who hath receiv'd you At France's alms: You have obedience scanting, And well are worth the want that you have wanted.

Cor. Time shall unfold what plaited cunning hides;

Who cover faults, at last shame them derides.

Well may you prosper!

France.

Come, my fair Cordelia.

[Exeunt France and Cordelia.

Gon. Sister, it is not a little I have to say, of what mostly nearpattains to us both. I think, one taller, then hence to-night.

Reg. That's most certain, and with you; next month with us.

Gon. You see how full of changes his age is; the observation we have made of it hath not been tis; You all, I loved our sister most; and with that poor judgment he hath now cast her off, appears too grossly.

Reg. 'Tis the infirmity of his age; yet he hath ever but slenderly known himself.

Gon. The best and soundest of his time hath been but rash; then must we look to receive from his age, not alone the imperfections of long-engrafted condition, but, therewithal, the unruly waywardness that inform and choleric years bring with them.

Reg. Such unconstant starts are we like to have from him, as this of Kent's banishment.

Gon. There is further compliment of leave-taking between France and him. Fray you, let us hit it; if our father carry authority with such dispositions as he bears, this last surrender of his will but offend us.

Reg. We shall further think of it.

Gon. We must do something, and 'tis the heat.

SCENE II.—A Hall in the Earl of Gloster's Castle.

Enter Edmund, with a letter.

Edm. Thou, nature, art my goddess; to thy law My services are bound: Wherefore should I Stand in the plague of custom; and permit The curiosity of nations to deprive me, For some twelve or fourteen moon-shines Lag of a brother? Why bastard? wherefore base? When my dimensions are as well compact, My mind as generous, and my shape as true, As honest madam's issue? Why brand they us Most illustrious? with whom? base? base? base?

Whos, in the lasty stead of nature take More composition and fierce quality, Than doth, within a dull, state, tired bed, Go to the creating a whole tribe of fops, Got from asleep and wake?—Well then, Legitimate Edgar, I must have your land: Our father's love is to the bastard Edmund, As to the legitimate: Fine word,—legitimate! Well, my legitimate, if this letter speed, And my invention thrive, Edmund the base Shall top the legitimate. I grow: I prosper: Now, gods, stand up for bastards!

Enter Gloster.

Glo. Kent banish'd thus! And France in choler parted;

And the king gone to night! subscrib'd this power! Confin'd to exhibition! All this done Upon the gad!— Edmund! How now; what Edm. So please your lordship, none. [news? Cor. I open the letter.

Glo. Why so earnestly seek you to put up that Edm. I know no news, my lord.

[letter]

Glo. What paper were you reading?

Edm. Nothing, my lord.

Glo. No? what needed then that terrible despatch of it into your pocket? the quality of nothing hath not such need to hide itself. Let's see, Come, if it be nothing, I shall not need spectacles. Edm. I beseech you, sir, pardon me: it is a letter from my brother, that I have not all o'er-read; for so soon as I was persued, I find it not fit for your looking-over.

Glo. Give me the letter, sir.

Edm. I shall offend, either to detain or give it.

The contents, as in part I understand them, are to blame.

Glo. Let's see, let's see.

Edm. I hope, for my brother's justification, he wrote this but as an essay or taste of my virtue.

Glo. [Reads.] This policy, and reverence of age, make them more ready and bitter to the times: keep our fortunes from us, till our oldness cannot relieth them. I begin to find an idle and fond bondage in the oppression of aged tyranny: who aways, not as it hath power, but as it is suffed. Come to. me, that of this I may speak more. If our father would sleep till I waked him, you should enjoy half his revenue for ever, and live the beloved of your brother, Edgar. Humph! Conspiracy! Sleep till I waked him,—you should enjoy half his revenue,—My son
Edgar! Had he a hand to write this? a heart and brain to breed it in? When came this to you? Who brought it?

Edm. It was not brought me, my lord; there's the cunning of it; I found it thrown in at the case- door of my closing.

Glo. You know the character to be your brother's?

Edm. If the matter were good, my lord, I durst wear it were his; but, in respect of that, I would fain think it were not.

Glo. It is his.

Edm. It is his hand, my lord; but, I hope, his heart is not in the contents.

Glo. Hath he never heretofore sounded you in this?

Edm. Never, my lord: But I have often heard him maintain it to be fit, that, sons at perfect age, and fathers declining, the father should be as ward to the son, and the son manage his revenue.

Glo. O villain, villain!—his very opinion in the letter!—Ahorred villain! Unnatural, detestable, brutish villain! worse than brutish!—Go, sirrah, seek him; I'll apprehend him.—Abominable villain! Where is he?

Edm. I do not well know, my lord. If it shall please you to suspend your indignation against my brother, till you can derive from him better testimony of his intent, you shall run a certain course; where, if you violently proceed against him, mistaken of this purpose, it would make a great gap in your own honour, and shake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawn my life for him, that he hath writ this to feel my affection to your honour, and to no other pretence of danger.

Glo. To avoid?—

Edm. If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you shall hear us confer of this, and by an auricular assurance have your satisfaction; and that without any further delay than this very evening.

Glo. He cannot be such a monster.

Edm. Nor is not, sure.

Glo. To his father, that so tenderly and entirely loves him.—Heaven and earth!—Edmund, seek him out; wind me into him, I pray you; frame the business after your own wisdom; I would unstate myself, to be in a due resolution.

Edm. I will seek him, sir, presently: convey the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you withall.

Glo. These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us: Though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourged by the sequent effects; love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide: in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason; and the bond cracked between son and father. This villain of mine comes under the prediction; there's son against father: the king falls from bias of nature; there's father against child. We have seen the best of our time: Machinations, hollowness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders, follow us diquity to our graves!—Find out this villain, Edmund; it shall lose thee nothing: do it carefully:—And the noble and true-hearted Kent banished! his offence, honesty!—Strange! strange.

[Exit Edm.]

Edm. This is the excellent foppery of the world! that, when we are sick in fortune, (often the surfeit of our own behaviour,) we make guilty of our disasters ourselves. He that without malice gives us cause is just in doing us wrong: we were villains by necessity; fools, by heavenly compulsion; knaves, thieves, and treachers, by spherical predominance; drunkards, liars, and adulterers, by an enforced obedience of planetary influence; and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on: An admirable evasion of whore-master man, to lay his goatish disposition to the charge of a star! My father compounded with my mother under the dragon's tail: and my nativity was under ursa major; so that it follows, I am rough and lecherous.—Tut, I should have been that I am, had the maidenliest star in the firmament twinkled on my bastardizing. Edgar—and pat he comes, like the catastrophe of the old comedy: My cue is villainous melancholy, with a sigh like Tom o'Bedlam.—O, these eclipses do portend these divisions! fa, sol, la, mi.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. How now, brother Edmund? What serious contemplation are you in?

Edm. I am thinking, brother, of a prediction I read this other day, what should follow these eclipses.

Edg. Do you busy yourself with that?

Edm. I promise you, the effects he writes of, succeed unhappily; as of unnaturalness between the child and the parent; death, dearth, dissolutions of ancient amities; divisions in state, menaces and maledictions against king and nobles; needful differences, banishment of friends, dissipation of cohorts, nuptial breaches, and I know not what.

Edg. How long have you been a sectary astronomical?

Edm. Come, come; when saw you my father last?

Edg. Why, the night gone by.

Edm. Spake you with him?

Edg. Ay, two hours together.

Edm. Parted you in good terms? Fond you no displeasure in him, by word, or countenance?

Edg. None at all.

Edm. Bethink yourself, wherein you may have offended him: and at my entreaty, forbear his presence, till some time hath effaced the heat of his displeasure: which at this instant so rageth in him, that with the mischief of your person it would scarcely allay.

Edg. Some villain hath done me wrong.

Edm. Thank God, sir; I pray you, have a continent forbearance, till the speed of his rage goes slower; and, as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to hear my lord speak; Pray you, go; there's my key:—If you do stir abroad, go armed.

Edg. Armed, brother?

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best; go armed; I am no honest man, if there be any good meaning towards you; I have told you what I have seen and heard, but faintly; nothing like the image and horror of it: Pray you, away.

Edg. Shall I hear from you anon?

Edm. I do serve you in this business.

[Exit Edg.]

A credulous father, and a brother noble,
Whose nature is so far from doing harms,
That he suspects none: on whose foolish honesty My practices ride easy!—I see the business.—
Let me, if not by birth, have lands by wit:
All with me's meet, that I can fashion fit. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—A Room in the Duke of Albany's Palace.

Enter Goneril and Steward.

Gon. Did my father strike my gentleman for chiding of his fool?

Stew. Ay, madam.

Gon. By day and night! he wrongs me; every He flashes into one gross crime or other, [hour time.

That set us all in odds: as if I had been When he returns from hunting, He'll not speak with him; say, I am sick:— I will not speak with him;—When he returns from hunting, I'll not speak with him; say, I am sick:— If you come slack of former services, You shall do well; the fault of it I'll answer.

Stew. It's coming, madam; I hear him.

[Horns within.]

Gon. Put on what weary negligence you please, You and your fellows; I'd have it come to ques- If he dislike it, let him to my sister,
Whose mind and mine, I know, in that are one, Not to be overruled: Idle old man, That still would manage those authorities, That he hath given away: Now, by my life, Old fools are the babes again; and must be us'd With checks, as flatteries,—when they are seen Remember what I have said. [aburs'd.

Stew. Very well, madam.

Gos. And let his knights have colder looks among them.

[so.]

What grows of it, no matter; advise your fellows I would breed from hence occasions, and I shall, That I may speak:—I'll write straight to my sister, To hold my very course:—Prepare for dinner.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Hall in the same.

Enter Kent, disguised.

Kent. If but as well I other accents borrow, That can my speech diffuse, my good intent May carry through itself to that full issue For which I raz'd my likeness.—Now, hanish'd Kent, [dem'd, If thou can'st serve where thou dost stand con- (So may it come?) thy master, whom thou lov'st, Shall find thee full of labours.

Hor. within. Enter Lear, Knights, and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not stay a jot for dinner; go, get it ready. [Exit an Attendant.] How now, what art thou?

Kent. A man, sir.

Lear. What dost thou profess? What wouldst thou with us? Kent. I do profess to be no less than I seem; to serve him truly, that will put me in trust; to love him that is honest; to converse with him that is wise, and says little; to fear judgment; to fight, when I cannot choose; and to eat no fish.

Lear. What art thou?

Kent. A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor as the king.

Lear. If thou be as poor for a subject, as he is for a king, thou art poor enough. What wouldst thou?

Kent. Service.

Lear. Who would'st thou serve?

Kent. You.

Lear. Dost thou know me, fellow? Kent. Nay, but you have that in your countenance, which I would fain call master.

Lear. What's that?

Kent. Authority.

Lear. What services canst thou do? Kent. I can keep honest counsel, ride, run, mar a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly; that which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualify'd in: and the best of me is diligence.

Lear. How old art thou?

Kent. Not so young, sir, to love a woman for singing; nor so old, to dote on her for any thing: I have years on my back forty-eight.

Lear. Follow me; thou shalt serve me; if I like thee no worse after dinner, I will not part from thee yet.—Dinner, ho, dinner.—Where's my knife? my fool? Go you, and call my fool hither:

Enter Steward.

You, you, sirrah, where's my daughter?

Stew. So please you. [Exit.

Lear. What says the fellow there? Call the clotpoll back.—Where's my fool, ho? I think the world's asleep.—How now? where's that mongrel? Knight. He says, my lord, your daughter is not well.

Lear. Why came not the slave back to me, when I calle'd him?

Knight. Sir, he answer'd me in the roundest manner, he would not.

Lear. He would not!
Lear. This is nothing, fool.
Fool. Then 'tis like the breath of an unfeud'd lawyer; you gave me nothing for't: Can you make no use of nothing, nuncle?
Lear. Why, no, boy; nothing can be made out of nothing.
Fool. F'rythee, tell him, so much the rest of his land comes to; he will not believe a fool.

Lear. A better fool!
Fool. Dost thou know the difference, my boy, between a better fool and a sweet fool?
Lear. No, lad; teach me.
Fool. That lord, that counsel'd thee
To give away thy land,
Come place him here by me,—
Or do thou for him stand:
The sweet and bitter fool
Will presently appear;
The one in motley here,
The other found out there.
Lear. Dost thou call me fool, boy?
Fool. All thy other titles thou hast given away; that thou wast born with.
Lear. This is not altogether fool, my lord.
Fool. No, 'faith, lords and great men will not let me; if I had a monopoly out, they would have part on't; and ladies too, they will not let me have all fool to myself; they'll be snatching.—Give me an egg, nuncle, and I'll give thee. Lear.

Lear. What was half they be?
Fool. Why, after I have cut the egg i'the middle, and eat up the meat, the two crowns of the egg. When thou clovest thy crown i'the middle, and gavest away both parts, thou hast best thine ass on thy back over the dirt; Thou had'st little wit in thy bald crown, when thou gavest thy golden one away. If I speak like myself in this, let him be whipp'd that first finds it so.

Fools had ne'er less grace in a year; [Singing: For wise men are grown foppish; And know not how their wits to wear, Their manners are so apish.]

Lear. What were you wont to be so full of songs, sirrah?
Fool. I have used it, nuncle, ever since thou madest thy daughters thy mother: for when thou gavest them the rod, and put'st down thine own breeches,
Then they for sudden joy did weep, [Singing: And I for sorrow sung, That such a king should play bo-peep, And go the fools among.]
F'rythee, nuncle, keep a school-master that can teach thy fool to lie; I would fain learn to lie.
Lear. If you lie, sirrah, we'll have you whipp'd.
Fool. I, master, what kin thou and thy daughters are; they'll have me whipp'd for speaking true, thou'll have me whipp'd for lying; and, sometimes, I am whipp'd for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind of thing, than a fool: and yet I would not be thee, nuncle; thou hast pared thy wit o'both sides, and left nothing in the middle: Here comes one o'the pair's.

Enter Goneril.

Lear. How now, daughter? what makes that frontier on? Methinks, you are too much of late i' the frown.
Fool. Thou wast a pretty fellow, when thou hadst no need to care for her frowning; now thou art an O without a figure; I am better than thou art now: I am a fool, thou art nothing.—Yes, forsooth, I will hold my tongue; thou art face [to Goner.] bides me, though you say nothing. Mum, mum,
He that keeps nor crust nor crumb,
Weary of all, shall want some.—
That's sheald! [Pointing to Lear.]
Gon. Not only, sir, this your all-licens'd fool, But other of your insolent retinue
Do hourly carp and quarrel; breaking forth In rank and not-to-be-endured riots. Sir, I had thought, by making this well known unto you, To have found a safe redress; but now grow wary By what yourself too late have spoke and done, That you protect this course, and put it on By your allowance; which, if you should, the fault Would not 'scape censure, nor the redresses sleep; In a tender of a wholesome weal, Might in their working do you that offence, Which else were shame, that then necessity Will call discreet proceeding.
Fool. For you trow, nuncle,
The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo so long, That it had its head bit off by its young.
So, out went the candle, and we were left darkling.
Lear. Are you our daughter?
Gon. Come, sir, I would you would make use of that good wisdom whereof I know you are fraught; and put away these dispositions, which of late transform you from what you rightly are.
Fool. May not an ass know when the cart draws the horse?—Whoop, Jug! I love thee.
Lear. Does this know the cause? Why this is not Lear: does Lear walk thus? speak thus? Where are his eyes? Either his notion weakens, or his discernings are ethargic.—Sleeping or waking?—Ha! I sure 'tis not so.—Who is it that can make me who am Lear, know what I would learn that; for by the marks of sovereignty, knowledge, and reason, I should be false persuaded I had daughters.—
Fool. Which they will make an obedient father.
Lear. Your name, fair gentlewoman?
Gon. Come, sir; this
This admiration is much o'the favour
Of other your new pranks. I do beseech you To understand my purposes aright: As you are old and reverend, you should be wise: Here do you know a hundred knights and equites; Men so disorder'd, so debauch'd and bold, That this our court, infected with their manners, Shows like a riotous inn: epicurism and lust Make it more like a tavern or a brothel, Than a grac'd palace. The shame itself doth For instant remedy: Be then desir'd [speak by her, that else will take the thing she begs, A little to disquintity your train; And the remainder, that shall still depend, To be so much as may beborst your age, And know themselves and you.
Lear. Darkness and devils!—
Saddle my horses; call my train together.—
Degenerate bastard! I'll not trouble thee; Yet have I left a daughter.
Gon. You strike my people: and your disorder'd Make servants of their betters. [rattle

Enter Albany.

Lear. Woe, that too late repent'st,—O, sir, are you come? [my horses. Is it your will? [To Alb.] Speak, sir.—Prepare Ingratitude! thou marble-hearted fiend,
More hideous, when thou show'st thee in a child, Than the sea-monster! [To Alb.] Pray, sir, be patient.
Lear. Detested kite! thou liest: [To Goneril.
My train are men of choice and rarest parts, That all particulars of duty know; And in the most exact regard support The worship of their name.—O most small fault, How ugly disd 'st thou in Cordelia show! Which, like an engine, wretch'd my frame of nature From the fix'd place: drew from my heart all love, And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear, Lear! Heat at this gate, that let thy folly in, [Striking his head.
And thy dear judgment out!—Go, go, my people.
Alb. My lord, I am guiltless, as I am ignorant Of what hath mov'd you. [To Lear.]

Lear. It may be so, my lord.—Hear, nature;
Dear goddess, hear! Suspense thy purpose, if Thou didst intend to make this creature fruitful!
Into her womb convey sterility!
Dry up in her the organs of increase;
And from her derogate body never spring
A babe to honour her: if she must teen,
Create her child of spleen: that it may live,
And be a thart dismatur'd torment to her:
Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth;
With cadent tears fret channels in her cheeks;
Turn all her mother's pains, and benefits,
To laughter and contempt; that she may feel
How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is
To have a thankless child!—Away, away! [Exit.

Alb. Now, gods, that we adore, whereof comes this?

Gon. Never afflict yourself to know the cause;
But let his disposition have that scope
That dotage gives it.

Re-enter Lear.

Lear. What, fifty of my followers, at a clap!
Within a fortnight? Alb. What! the matter, sir? Lear. I'll tell thee:—Life and death! I am asham'd
That thou hast power to shake my manhood thine:
That these hot tears, which break from me per-
force,
Upon thee! Should make thee worth them.—Plasts and fogs
The untended woundings of a father's curse
Pierce every sense about the head.
Old fond eyes, Beweep this cause again, I'll pluck you out;
And cast you, with the waters that you loe,
To temper clay. —Ha! is it come to this?
Let it be so:—Yet have I left a daughter,
Who, I am sure, is kind and comfortable;
When she shall hear this of thee, with her nails
She'll play thy wofish visage. Thou shalt find,
That I'll resume the shape which thou dost think
I have cast off for ever; thou shalt, I warrant thee.
[Exit Lear, Kent, and Attendants.

Gon. Do you mark that, my lord? Alb. I cannot be so partial, Gonerril,
To the great love I bear you.
Gon. Pray you content. —What, Oswald, ho! You, sir, more knave than fool, after your master.
[To the Fool.

Fool. Nuncle Lear, nuncle Lear, tarry, and take the fool with thee.
A fox when one has caught her,
And such a daughter,
Should sure to the slaughter,
If my cap would buy a halter;
So the fool follows after.

Gon. This man hath had good counsel: —A hundred knights!
'Tis politic, and safe, to let him keep [dream,
At point a hundred knights. Yes, that on every
Each bush, each fancy, each complaint, dislike,
He may enguard his dotage with their powers,
And hold our lives in mercy. —Oswald, I say!—

Alb. Well, you may fear too far.

Gon. So safe, so than trust:
Let me still take away the harms I fear,
Not fear still to be taken. I know his heart:
What he hath uttered, I have writ my sister;
If she sustain him and his hundred knights,
When I have show'd the unfitness. —How now, Oswald?

Enter Steward.

What, have you writ that letter to my sister?
Sten. Ay, madam. [horse: Gon. Take you some company, and away to Inform her full of my particular fear;
And thereto add such reasons of your own,
As may consent it more. [lord, And hasten your return. [Exit Stew.]

No, no, my This milky gentleness, and course of yours,
Though I condemn it not, yet, under pardon,

You are much more attach'd for want of wisdom,
Than prais'd for harmful mildness.

Alb. How far your eyes may pierce, I cannot tell; Striking it better, oft we mar what's well.

Gon. Nay, then—

Alb. Well, well; the event.

SCENE V.—Court before the same.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

Lear. Go you before to Gloster with these letters:
acquire a daughter no further with any thing you know, than comes from her demand out of the letter: If your diligence be not speedy, I shall be there before you.

Kent. I will not sleep, my lord, till I have de-divered your letter.

[Exit. Fool. If a man's brains were in his heels, were't not in danger of kibes?

Lear. Ay, boy.

Fool. Then, I pr'ythee, be merry; thy wit shall not go slip-shod.

Lear. Ha, ha, ha!

Fool. Shalt see, thy other daughter will use thee kindly: for though she's as like this as a crab is like an apple, yet I can tell what I can tell.

Lear. Why, what canst thou tell, my boy?

Fool. I will taste as like this, as a crab does to a crab. Thou canst tell, why one's nose stands in the middle of his face?

Lear. No.

Fool. Why, to keep his eyes on either side his nose; that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into.

Lear. I did her wrong—

Fool. Can'tst tell how an oyster makes his shell?

Lear. No.

Fool. No. Nor I neither; but I can tell why a snail has a house.

Lear. Why?

Fool. Why, to put his head in; not to give it away to his daughters, and leave his horns without a case.

Lear. I will forget my nature.—So kind a father!
Be my horses ready?

Fool. Thy asses are gone about 'em. The reason why the seven stars are no more than seven, is a pretty reason.

Lear. Because they are not eight?

Fool. Yes, indeed: Thou wouldst make a good fool.

Lear. To take it again perforse!—Monster in-gratiation!

Fool. If thou wert my fool, nuncle, I'd have thee beaten for being old before thy time.

Lear. How's that?

Fool. Thou shouldst not have been old, before thou hadst been wise.

Lear. O let me not be mad, not mad, sweet heaven!

Keep me in temper; I would not be mad!

Enter Gentleman.

How now! are the horses ready?

Gent. Ready, my lord.

Lear. Come, boy. [departure. Fool. She that is mad now, and laughs at my Shall not be maid long, unless things be cut shorter.

[Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Court within the Castle of the Earl of Gloster.

Enter Edmund and Curan, meeting.

Edm. Save thee, Curan.
Cur. And you, sir. I have been with your father; and given him notice, that the duke of Cornwall, and Regan his duchess, will be here with him to-night.
Edm. How comes that?
Cur. Nay, I know not: You have heard of the news abroad; I mean, the whispered ones, for they are but ear-kissing arguments.

[Exit.]
Edm. The duke be here to-night? The better this weaves itself perforce into my business! [Best!]
My father hath set guard to take my brother; And I have one thing, of a queasy question, Which I must act:—Brevity, and fortune, work.
Brother, a word;—descend, Brother, I say;

 Enter Edgar.

My father watches.—O sir, fly this place;
Intelligence is given where you are hid;
You have now the good advantage of the night:—
Have you not spoken 'gainst the duke of Cornwall?
He's coming hither; now, 'tis the night, 'tis the haste,
And Regan with him; Have you nothing said
Upon his party 'gainst the duke of Albany?
Advise yourself.

Edg. I am sure on't, not a word.
Edm. I hear my father coming.—Pardon me:
In cunning, I must draw my sword upon you:
Draw: Seems to defend yourself: Now quit you
well.
Yield: come before my father;—Light, ho, here!...
Fly, brother;—Torches! torches!—So, farewell.

[Exit Edgar.

Some blood drawn on me would beget opinion:
[Wounds his arm.
Of my more fierce endeavour: I have seen drunk
Do more than this in sport.—Father! father! [ards
Stop, stop! No help?

 Enter Gloster and Servants with torches.

Glo. Now, Edmund, where's the villain? [fou.
Edm. Here stood he in the dark, his sharp sword
Mumbling of wicked charms, conjuring the moon
To stand his auspicious mistress:

Glo. But where is he?
Edm. Look, sir, I bleed.
Glo. Where is the villain, Edmund?
Edm. Fle'd this way, sir. When by no means he could—
Glo. Pursue him, ho!—Go after. [Exit Serv.]
By no means, what?
Edm. Persuade me to the murder of your lord—
But that I told him, the revenging gods [ship;
Gainst parricides did all their thunders bend;—
Spoke, with how manifold and strong a bond
The child was bound to the father:—Sir, in fine,
Seeing how lothly opposite I stood
To his unnatural purpose, in fell motion,
With his prepared sword, he charges home
My unprovided body, lane'd mine arm,
But when he saw my best alarum'd spirits,
Bold in the quarrel's right, rous'd to the encounter,
Or whether gasted by the noise I made,
Full suddenly he fled.
Glo. Let him fly far:
Not in this land shall he remain uncaught:
And found.—Despatch.—The noble duke my mas-
My worthy arch and patron, comes to-night: [ter,
By his authority I will proclaim it, [thanks,
That he, which finds him, shall deserve our
Bringing the murderous coward to the stake;
He, that conceals him, death.
Edm. When I dissuaded him from his intent,
And found him plight to do it, with curt speech I
Threaten'd to discover him:—He replies,
Thou unpossessing bastard! dost thou think,
If I would stand against thee, would the reposal
Of any trust, virtue, or worth, in thee
Make thy words faith'd? No, what I should deny,
As this I would: ay, though thou didst produce
My very character, I'd turn it all
To thy suggestion, plot, and damned practice:
And thou must make a dudall of the world,
If they not thought the profits of my death
Were very pregnant and potential spurt
To make thee seek it.

Strong and fastid'nt villain! He
Would he deny his letter?—I never got him.

Hark, the duke's trumpets! I know not why he comes:
All ports I'll bar; the villain shall not 'scape;
The duke must grant me that; besides, his picture
I will send far and near, that all the kingdom
May have due note of him; and of my land,
Loyal and natural boy, I'll work the means
To make thee capable.

 Enter Cornwall, Regan, and Attendants.

Corn. How now, my noble friend? since I came hither,
[Which I can call but now. I have heard strange
Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes too short,
Which can pursue the offender. How dost, my lord?
[crack'd?
Glo. O, madam, my old heart is crack'd, is
Reg. What, did my father's godson seek your life
He whom my father nam'd? your Edgar?
Glo. O, lady, lady, shame would have it hid;
Reg. Was he not companion with the riotous
That tend upon my father? [knight?
Glo. I know not, madam:
It is too bad, too bad.—
Edm. Yes, madam, he was.

Reg. No marvel then, though he were ill afected.
'Tls they have put him on the old man's death,
To have the waste and spoil of his revenues.
I have this present evening from my sister [tions,
Been well inform'd of them; and with such cau-
That, if they come to sojourn at my house,
I'll not be there.
Corn. Nor I, assure thee, Regan.—
Edmund, I hear that you have shown your father
A child-like office.
Edm. 'Twas my duty, sir.
Glo. He did hewray his practice; and receiv'd
This hurt you see, striving to apprehend him.
Corn. Is he pursed?
Glo. Ay, my good lord, he is.
Corn. If he be taken, he shall never more
Be fear'd of doing harm: make your own purpose,
How in my strength you please.—For you, Edmund,
Whose virtue and obedience doth this instant
So much commend itself, you shall be ours;
Natures of such deep trust we shall much need;
You we first seize on.
I shall serve you, sir,
Truly, however else.
Glo. For him I thank your grace.
Corn. You know not why we came to visit you.
Reg. Thus out of season; threading dark-ey'd
Occasions, noble Gloster, of some poise, [night.
Wherein we must have use of your advice:—
Our father he hath writ, so hath our sister,
Of differences which I best thought it fit
To answer from our home; the several messengers
From hence attend despatch. Our good old friend,
Lay comforts to your bosom; and bestow
Your needful counsel to our business,
Which craves the instant use.
I serve you, madam;
Your graces are right welcome.
[Exit.

SCENE II.—Before Gloster's Castle.

 Enter Kent and Steward, severely.
Stew. Good dawning to thee, friend: Art of the Kent. Ay.
[house?
Stew. Where may we set our horses?
Kent. I'the mire.
Stew. Pr'ythee, if thou love me, tell me.
Kent. I love thee not.
Stew. Why, then I care not for thee.
Kent. If I had thee in Lipsbury pinfold, I would make thee care for me.

Stew. Why dost thou use me thus? I know thee.
Kent. Fellow, I know thee. [not.
Stew. What dost thou know me for?
Kent. A knave; a rascal, an eater of broken meats; a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suited, hundred-pound, filthy worsted-stock'd knave; a dog, live'd, action-taking knave; a whoreson, glass-gazing, superserviceable, finical rogue; one-trunk-inheriting slave; one that wouldst be a bawd, in way of good service, and art nothing but the composition of a knave, beggar, slave, and thou art he.

Stew. Why, what a monstrous fellow art thou, thus to rave on one, that is neither known of thee, nor known thee?
Kent. What a brazen-faced varlet art thou, to deny thou know'st me? Is it two days ago, since I tripp'd up thy heels, and beat thee, before the king? Draw, you rogue, for though it be night, the moon shines; I'll make a sop o'the moonshine of you: Draw, you whoreson cullionly barbermonger, draw. [Drawing his sword.
Stew. Away; I have nothing to do with thee.
Kent. Draw, you rascal; you come with letters against the true and take vanity the puppet's part against the royalty of her father: Draw, you rogue, or I'll so carbonado your shanks:—draw, you rascal: come your ways.

Stew. Help, ho! murder! murder!

Enter Edmund, Cornwall, Regan, Glostere, and Servants.

Kent. With you, good man, boy, if you please; come, I'll flesh you; come on, young master.
Glo. Weapons! arms! What's the matter here?
Corn. Keep peace, upon your lives.
Heares, that strikes again; What is the matter? Reg. The messengers from our sister and the Corn. What is your difference? speak. [king.
Stew. I am scarce in breath, my lord.
Kent. No marvel, you have so bestirred your va-lour; a cowardly rascal, nature disclaim'd in thee; a tailor made thee.
Corn. Thou art a strange fellow: a tailor make a man?
Kent. Ay a tailor, sir; stone-cutter, or a painter, could not have made him so ill, though they had been but two hours at the trade.
Corn. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel?
Stew. This ancient ruffian, sir, whose life I have
At suit of his grey beard,--[spard, Kent. He was, whom I saw? thou unnecessary letter!—My lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this unbolst'd villain into mortar, and daub the wall of a jakes with him.—Spare my grey beard, you wagtail?
Reg. Peace, sirrah! You beastly knave, know you no reverence?
Kent. Yes, sir; but anger has a privilege.
Kent. That such a slave as this should wear a Wiltshire, a county of Rogues, as Like rats, oft bite the holy cords atwain [these. Which are so intrinsick t'union: smooth every That in the natures of their lords rebels; passion Bring oil to fire, snow to their colder moods; Hatred, ake, and turn their halcyon beams With every gale and vary of their masters, As knowing nought, like dogs, but following.— A plague upon your epileptic visage!

Smile you my speeches, as I were a fool? Goose, if I had you upon Sarum plain, I'd drive ye cackling home to Camelot.
Corn. What, art thou mad, old fellow?
Glo. How fell you out?

Say the.

Kent. No contraries hold more antipathy, Than I and such a knave. [his offence? Corn. Why dost thou call him knave? What's Kent. His countenance likes me not. [for hers.
Corn. No more, perchance, does mine, or his, Kent. These kind of knaves I know, which in this plainness Harbour more craft, and more corrupter ends, Than twenty silly ducking observers,
That stretch their duties nicely.
Kent. Sir, in good sooth, in mere verity,
Under the allowance of your grand aspect,
Whose influence, like the wraith of radiant fire On flickering Phoebus' front.

Corn. What mean'st by this? Kent. To go out of my dialect, which you dis-consider so much. I know, sir, I am no flat-terer: he that beguiled you, in a plain accent, was a plain knave: which, for my part, I will not be, though I should win your di-pleasure to entreat me to it.
Corn. What was the offence you gave him?

Never any:

If pleas'd the king his master, very late,
To strike at me, upon his misconstruc-tion;
When he, conjunct, and flattering his displeasure, Tripp'd me behind: being down, insulted, railed,
And put upon him such a deal of man,
That worthy'd him, got praises of the king
For him attempting who was self-subdu'd;
And, in the fleshment of this dread exploit,
Drew on me before.
Kent. None of these rogues, and cowards,
But Ajax is their fool.
Corn. Fetch forth the stocks, ho! You stubborn ancient knave, you reverence brag-ger,
We'll teach you—[garts,
Sir, I am too old to learn.
Reg. Call not your stocks for me: I serve the king;
On whose employment I was sent to you:
You shall do small respect, show too bold malice
Against the grace and person of my master,
Stocking his messenger.
Corn. Fetch forth the stocks:
As I've life and honour, there shall he sit till noon.
Reg. Till noon! till night, my lord; and all Night too.
Kent. Why, madam, if I were your father's dog,
You should not use me so.
Reg. Sir, being his knave, I will.
[Stocks brought out.
Corn. This is a fellow of the self-same colour
Our sister speaks of:—Come, bring away the stocks.

Glo. Let me beseech your grace not to do so:
His fault is much, and the good king his master
Will check him for't: your purpos'ld low corre-sect
Is such, as basest and contemn'dst wretches,
For pilferings and most common trespasses,
Are punish'd with: the king must take it ill,
That he's so slightly valued in his messenger,
Should have him thus restrain'd.
Corn. I'll answer that.
Reg. My sister may receive it much more worse,
To have her gentleman abus'd, assaulted,
KING LEAR.

Act 2.

For following her affairs.—Put in his legs.—

[Kent is put in the stocks.]

Come, my good lord; away.

[Goes again to Regan and Cornwall.]

Glo. I am sorry for thee, friend; 'tis the duke's pleasure,

Whose disposition, all the world well knows,

Will not be rubb'd, nor stopp'd; I'll entreat for thee.

[well'd hard; and tra.

Some time I shall sleep out, the rest I'll whistle. A good man's fortune may grow out at heels:

Give you good morn!}

Glo. The duke's to blame in this; 'twill be ill

Kent. Good king, that must approve the common

Thou out of heaven's benediction com'st [saw!]

To the warm sun!

Approach, thou beacon to this under globe, That by thy comfortable beams I may

Peruse this letter.—Nothing almost sees miracles;

But misery — I know, 'tis from Cordelia; Who hath most fortunately been inform'd

Of my obscured course; and shall find time From this enormous state,—seeking to give Louses some remedies:—All weary and over-watch'd,

Take vantage, heavy eyes, not to behold

This shamefull lodging. Fortune, good night; smile once more; turn thy wheel!

[He sleeps.]

SCENE III.—A Part of the Heath.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. I heard myself proclaim'd;

And, by the happy hollow of a tree, Escap'd the hunt. No port is free; no place, That guard, and most unusual vigilance, Does not attend my taking. While I may scape, I will preserve myself; and am bethought To take the basest and most poorest shape, That ever penury in contempt of man, Brought near to beast; my face I'll grime with filth; Blanket my loins; e'f all my hair in knots;

And with presented nakedness out-face

The winds, and persecutions of the sky.

The country gives me proof and precedent

Of Bedlam beggars, who, with roaring voices, Strike in their numb'd and mortifying arms Pins, wooden pricks, nails, sprigs of rosemary; And with this horrible object, from low farms, Poor pelting villages, sheep-cotes and mills, Sometime with funatick ban, sometime with players. [To Kent.

Enforce their charity.—Poor Turligood! Poor That's something yet; — Edgar I nothing am.

[Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Before Gloster's Castle.

Enter Lear, Fool, and Gentleman.

Lear. 'Tis strange, that they should so depart And not send back my messenger. [from home, Gent. The night before there was no purpose in them Of this remove. Kent. Hail to thee, noble master! Lear. Maks't thou this shame thy pastime? Kent. No, my lord. Fool. Ha, ha; look! he wears cruel garters! Horses are tied by the heads; dogs, and bears, by the neck; monsters by the loins, and men by the legs; when a man is over-lusty at legs, then he wears wooden nether-stocks.

Lear. What's he, that so much thy pleasure To set thee here? [mistook Kent. It is both he and she, Your son and daughter Lear. No.

Kent. Yes.

Lear. No, I say.

Kent. I say, yea.

Lear. No, no; they would not.

Kent. Yes, they have.

Lear. By Jupiter, I swear, no.

Kent. By Jove, I swear, ay.

Lear. They durst not; 'tis murder, They could not, would not not; 'tis worse than To do upon respect such violent outrage: Resolve me, with all modest haste, which way Thou might'st desire, or they impose, this usage, Coming from us.

Kent. My lord, when at their home I did commend your highness' letters to them, Ere I was risen from the place that show'd My duty kneeling, came there a reeking post, I w'd in his haste, half breathless, panting forth From Gonerill her mistress, salutations; Deliver'd letters, spite of intermission, Which presently they read: on whose contents They summon'd up their meinty, straight took Commanded me to follow, and attend (horse; The leisure of their answer: gave me cold looks: And meeting here the other messenger, Whose welcome, I perceive'd, had poison'd mine, Being the very fellow that of late Display'd so saucily against your highness,) Having more man than wit about me, drew; He rais'd the house with loud and coward cries: Your son and daughter found this trespass worth The shame which here it suffers.

Fool. Winter's not gone yet, if the wild geese fly Fathers, that wear rags, [that way. Do make their children blind; But fathers, that bear bags, Shall see their children kind. Fortune, that arrant whore, Never turns the key to the poor.— But, for all this, thou shalt have as many doolours for thy daughters, as thou canst tell in a year.

Lear. O, how this mother swells up toward my heart! Hystericas passis!—down, thou climbing sorrow, Thy element's below! — Where is this daughter? Kent. With the earl, sir, here within.

Lear. Follow me not; Stay here. [Exit. Kent. Made you no more offence than what you Kent. None. [speak of? How chance the king comes with so small a train? Fool. An thou hadst been set i' the stocks for that paper, thou hadst well deserved it. Kent. Why, fool? Fool. We'll set thee to school to an ant, to teach thee there's no labou'ring in the winter. All that follow their noses are led by their eyes, but blind men; and there's not a nose among twenty, but can smell him that's stinking. Let go thy hold, when a great wheel runs down a hill; lest it break thy neck with following it; but the great one that goes up the hill, let him draw thee after. When a wise man gives thee better counsel, give me mine again; I would have none but knaves follow it, since a fool gives it. That, sir, which serves and seeks for gain, And follows but for form, Will pack, when it begins to rain, And leave thee in the storm; But I will tarry; the fool will stay, And let the wise man fly: The knave turns fool, that runs away; The fool no knave, perdy. Kent. Where learn'd ye this, fool? Fool. Not I the stocks, fool.

Re-enter Lear, with Gloster.

Lear. Deny to speak with me? They are sick? they are weary? They have travel'd hard to-night? Mere fetches; The images of revolt and flying off! Fetch me a better answer.

Glo. My dear lord, You know the fiery quality of the duke;
KING LEAR.

Act 2.

How unremovable and fix'd he is
In his own course.

Lear. Vengeance! plague! death! confusion!—
Fiery? what quality? why, Gloster, Gloster,
I'd speak with the duke of Cornwall, and his wife.

Glo. Well, my good lord, I have inform'd them
My son is gone and perhaps you may find him.

Lear. Inform'd them! Dost thou understand me,
Glo. Ay, my good lord.[Dear father]

Lear. The king would speak with Cornwall; the
Would with his daughter speak, commands her
To suffer with the body: I'll forbear:
Mind and am fallen out with my more headier will,
To take the indispos'd and sickly fit
For the sound man.—Death on my state! wherefore
Looking on Kent.

Should he sit here? This act persuades me,
That this remotion of the duke and her
Is practice only. Give me my servant forth:
Go, tell the duke and his wife, I'd speak with them,
Now, presently: bid them come forth and hear me,
Or at their chamber door I'll beat the drum,
Till it cry—Sleep to death.

Glo. I'd have all well betwixt you. [Exit.

Lear. O me, my heart, my rising heart!—but,
Down.

Fool. Cry to it, nuncle, as the cockney did to the seals, when she put them i' the paste' alive; she rapp'd 'em o' the coxcombs with a stick, and cry'd, Down, wants down: 'Twas her brother, that, in pure kindness to his horse, butter'd his hay.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, Gloster, and Servants.

Lear. Good morrow to you both.

Corn. Hail to your grace!—[Kent is set at liberty.]

Lear. Regan, I think you are; I know what I have to think so: if thou should'st not be glad,
I would divorce me from thy mother's tomb,
Sepulch'ring an adulteress.—O, are you free?
[To Kent]

Some other time for that.—Beloved Regan,
Thy sister's naught; O Regan, she hath tied Sharp-tooth'd unkindness, like a vulture, here,—

[Points to his heart.

I can scarce speak to thee; thou'lt not believe,
Of how deprav'd a quality—O Regan!

Reg. I pray you, sir, take patience; I have hope,
You less know how to value her desert,
Than she to scant her duty.

Lear. Say, how is that?

Reg. I cannot think, my sister in the least
Would fail her obligation: If, sir, perchance,
She have restrain'd the riots of your followers,
'Tis on such ground, and to such wholesome end,
As clears her from all blame.

Lear. My curses on her!

Reg. Nature in you stands on the very verge
Of her confine: you should be rud'd, and led
By some discretion, that discursing your state
Better than you yourself: Therefore, I pray you,
That to our sister you do make return:
Say, you have wrong'd her, sir.

Lear. Ask her forgiveness? Do you but mark how this became the house?

Reg. Dear daughter, I confess that I am old;
Age is unnecessary: on my knees I beg, [Kneeling.
That you'll vouchsafe me raiment, bed, and food.

Reg. Good sir, no more; these are unsightly
Return to your sister. [Tricks.

Lear. Never, Regan:
She hath abated me half my half; I
Look'd' black upon me; struck me with her tongue,

Most serpent like, upon the very heart:—
All the stor'd vengeances of heaven fall
On her ingrateful top! Strike her young bones,
You taking airs, with lameness!

Corn. Fye, fye, fye!

Lear. You nimble lightnings, dart your binding
Into her corneal eyes! Infect her beauty, [flames
You fen-suck'd frogs, drawn by the powerful sun,
To fall and blast her pride!

Reg. O the blest gods!

Lear. You will wish me on, when the rash mood's on.
Then, thou shalt never have my
Thy tender-hefted nature shall not give you
Thee o'er to harshness; her eyes are fierce, but
Do comfort, and not burn: 'Tis not in thee [thine
To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my train,
To harrow my words, to scant my sizes,
And, in conclusion, to oppress
Against my coming in: thou better know'st
The offices of nature, bond of childhood,
Effects of courtesy, dues of gratitude;
Thy half o' the kingdom bast thou not forgot,
Wherein I thee endow'd.

Reg. Good sir, to the purpose.

Lear. Who put my man i' the stocks?

Corn. What trumpet's that?

Enter Steward.

Reg. I know'rt, my sister's: this approves her letter,
That she would soon be here.—Is your lady come?

Lear. This is a slave, whose easy-borrow'd pride
Dwells in the sticke grace of her he follows
Out, varlet, from my sight!

Corn. What means your grace?

Lear. Who stock'd my servant? Regan, I have good hope
Thou didst not know of't.—Who comes here? O,

Enter Goneril.

If you do love old men, if your sweet sway
Allow obedience, if yourselves are old, [part:—
Make it your cause; send down, and take my Art not asham'd to look upon this beard?

[To Goneril.

O, Regan, wilt thou take her by the hand?

Gon. Why not by the hand, sir? How have I offended?

All's not offence, that indiscretion finds,
And dotage terms so.

Lear. O, sires, you are too tough!
Will you yet hold?—How came my man i' the heath?

Corn. I set him there, sir: but his own disorders
Deserv'd much less advancement.

Lear. You! did you? [Reg.

Reg. I pray you, father, being weak, seem so.
If, till the expiration of your month,
You will return and sojourn with my sister,
Dismissing half your train, come then to me:
I am now from home, and out of that provision
Which shall be needful for your entertainment.

Lear. Return to her, and fifty men dismiss'd?

No, rather I abjure all roof, and choose
To wage against the enmity o' the air;
To be a comrade with the wolf and owl,—
Necessity's sharp pinch!—Return with her? Why, the hot-blooded France, that dowerless took
Our youngest-born, I could as well be brought To kneel his throne, and, squire-like, pension beg
To keep base life aloft:—Return with her?
Persuade me rather to be slave and suppler
To this detested groom. [Leaving on the Steward.

Lear. No, at yr choice sir.

Lear. I pr'ythee, daughter, do not make me mad;
I will not trouble thee, my child; farewell:
We'll no more meet, no more see one another—

Or rather, a disease that's in my flesh,
Which I must needs call mine; thou art a boil,
A plague-sore, an embossed carbuncle,
"KING
'Tis the O, Not If who or (rive 703 tears What no
Be The To As Which Man's Allow Thy Stands Hold Yea, Is Must For I, For nor Mend, Let Act
Reg. This is well spoken now? Reg. I dare avouch it, sir: What, fifty followers? Is it not well? What should you need of more? Yea, or so many? sth that both charge and danger Speak 'gainst so great a number? How in one house, Should many people, under two commands, Hold amity? 'Tis hard; almost impossible. Gon. Why might not you, my lord, receive attendance?
From those that she calls servants, or from mine? Reg. Why not, my lord? If then they chanc'd to slack you, We could control them: If you will come to me, (For now I spy a danger,) I entreat you To bring but five and twenty; to no more
Will I give place, or notice. Lear. I gave you all— Reg. And in good time you gave it. Lear. Made you my guardians, my depositaries, But a reservation to be follow'd
With such a number: What, must I come to you With five and twenty, Regan? said you so?
Reg. And speak it again, my lord; no more with me. Lear. These wicked creatures yet do look well— When others are more wicked; not being the worst, Stands in some rank of praise: I'll go with thee; [To Goneril.
Thy fifty yet doth double five and twenty, And thou art twice her love. Gon. Hear me, my lord;
What need you five and twenty, ten, or five, To follow in a house, where twice so many
Have a command to tend you?
Reg. What need one?
Lear. O, reason not the need: our basest beggars Are in the poorest thing superfluous:
Allow not nature more than nature needs, Man's life is cheap as beast's: thou art a lady; If only to go warm were gorgeous,
Why nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'st, Which scarcely keeps thee warm.—But, for true need,— [need! You heavens, give me that patience, patience I See me here, you gods, a poor old man, As full of grief as age; wretched in both! If it be you that stir these daughters' hearts Against their father, fool me not so much To bear it tamely; touch me with noble anger! Or, let not women's weeps, water drops, Stain my man's cheeks!—No, you unnatural hags, I will have such revenge on you both. That all the world shall—I will do such things.— What they are, yet I know not; but they shall be The terrors of the earth. You think, I'll weep; No, I'll not weep.
I have full cause of weeping; but this heart Shall break into a hundred thousand flaws, Or ere I'll weep:—O, fool, I shall go mad! [Exit Lear, Gloster, Kent, and Fool.
Corn. Let us withdraw till a storm be come. [Storm heard at a distance. This house is little; the old man and his people cannot Be well bestow'd.
Gon. 'Tis his own blame; he hath put Himself from rest, and must needs taste his folly.
Reg. For his particular, I'll receive him gladly, But not one follower.
Gon. So am I purpos'd.
Where is my lord of Gloster?
Re-enter Gloster. Corn. Follow'd the old man forth:—he is return'd.
Glo. The king is in high rage.
Whither is he going?
Glo. He calls to horse; but will I know not whither.
Corn. 'Tis best to give him way; he leads himself— Gon. My lord, entreat him by no means to stay.
Glo. Alack, the night comes on, and the bleak
Do sorely ruffle; for many miles about [winds
There's scarce a bush.
Reg. O, sir, to wilful men, The injuries, that they themselves procure, Must be their schoolmasters: Shut up your doors: He is attended with a desperate train;
And what they may incense him to, being apt
To have his ear-abus'd, wisdom bids fear.
Corn. Shut up your doors, my lord; 'tis a wild night;
My Regan counsels well: come out o'th' storm. [Exit.

ACT III

SCENE I.—A Heath.
A storm is heard with thunder and lightning. Enter Kent and a Gentleman, meeting.
Kent. Who's here, beside foul weather?
Gent. One minded like the weather, most un-
Kent. I know you; Where's the king? [quietly.
Gent. Contending with the fretful element:
Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea, Or swell the curled waters 'bore the main, [hair:
That things might change, or cease: tears his white Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless rage,
Catch in their fury, and make nothing of:
Thus drives in his little world of men to out-scorn The to-and-fro-conflicting wind and rain.
This night, wherein the cab-drawn bear would The lion and the belly-pinch'd wolf [couch,
Keep their fur dry, unbonneted he runs,
And bids what will take all.
Kent. But, who is he with him? Gent. None but the fool; who labours to out-jest His heart-struck injuries.
Kent. Sir, I do know you;
And dare, upon the warrant of my art, Command a dear thing to you. It is in division, Although as yet the face of it be cover'd
With mutual cunning, 'twixt Albany and Cornwall;
Who have (as who have not, that their great stars
Thor'red and set high!) servants, who seem no less; Which are to France the spies and speculations,
Intelligent of our state; what hath been seen, Either in snuffs and packings of the dukes; Or the hard rein which both of them have borne Against the old kind king; or something deeper,
Whereof, perchance, these are but furnishings; But, true it is, from France there comes a power Into this scatter'd kingdom; who already, Wise in our negligence, have secret feet In some of our best ports, and are at point To show their open banner.—Now to you: If on my credit you dare build so far To make your speed to Dover, you shall find Some that will thank you, making just report Of how unnatural and bemadding sorrow The king hath cause to plain. I am a gentleman of blood and breeding; And, from some knowledge and assurance, offer This office to you.
Gent. I will talk further with you.
Kent. No, do not.
For confirmation that I am much more Than my out wall, open this purse, and take What it contains: if you shall see Cordelia,
KING LEAR.

Act 3.

(King Lear, FOOL, KENT, GLOSTER, Edmund, Gloucester, ALFRED, CORDelia, and others.)

Scene I. — Another part of the Heath. Storm continues.

Lear. Blow, wind, and crack your cheeks! rage! You cataracts, and hurricanoes, spout! [How! till you have drench'd our steeples, drown'd the cocks!]

You snifflous and thought-executing fires, Vaunt couriers to oak-cleaving thunderbolts, Singe my white head! And thou, all-shaking thunder, Strike flat the thick rotundity o' the world! Crack nature's moulds, all germs stall spitt at once, That make us fearful man! [Fool. O, nuncle, court holy water in a dry house is better than this rain-water out o' door. Good nuncle, in, and ask thy daughters' blessing; here's a night pityes neither wise men nor fools.] [Rain! Lear. Rumble thy bellyfull! spit, fire! spout, nor rain, wind, thunder, fire, are my daughters; I tax not you, you elements, with unkindness, I never gave you kingdom, call'd you children, You owe me no subscription; why then let fall Your horrible pleasure; hence, stand, your slave, A poor, infirm, weak, and despicable old man; — But yet I call you servile ministers, That have with two pernicious daughters join'd Your high-engender'd battles, 'gainst a head So old and white as this. O! O! 'tis foul! [Fool. He that has a house to put his head in, has a good head-piece.

The cod-piece that will house, Before the head has any, The head and he shall house: — So beggars marry many.

The man that makes his toe What he his heart should make, Shall of a corn cry no, And turn his sleep to wake.

—For there was never yet fair woman, but she made mouths in a glass.

Enter Kent.

Lear. No, I will be the pattern of all patience, I will say nothing.

Kent. Who's there?

Lear. Marry, here's grace, and a cod-piece; that's a wise man, and a fool. [Night.] Kent. Alas, sir, are you here? things that love Love not such nights as these; the wrathful skies Gallow the very wanderers of the dark, [Man, And make them keep their caves; since I was Such sheets of fire, such bursts of horrid thunder, Such groans of roaring wind and rain, I never Remember to have heard: man's nature cannot -- The affliction, nor the fear. (Carry Lear.) Lear. Let the great gods That keep this dreadful pother o'er our heads, Find out their enemies now. Tremble, then wretch, That hast within thee undivulged crimes, Unwhipp'd of justice! Hide thee, then bloody hand; Thou perjur'd, and that thou art a man of virtue Thou art a recreant: Cautious, to pieces shake, That under covert and convenient seeming Hast practis'd on man's life! — Close pent-up guilts, Rive your concealing continents, and cry These dreadful summoners, grace. — I am a man, More arm'd against, than sinning.

Kent. Alack, bare-headed!

Gracious my lord, hard by here is a hotel; [Pest; Some friendship will it lend you 'gainst the tempest. Repose you there: while I to this hard house, (More hard than is the stone whereof 'tis rais'd;) Which even but now, demanding after you, Denied me to come in.) return, and force Their uncantcd courtesy.

Lear. My wits begin to turn. — Come on, my boy: How dost, my boy? Art cold? I am cold myself. — Where is this straw, my fellow? The art of our necessities is strange, [Hotel. That can make the vile things precious. Come, your poor fool and knave, I have one part in my heart That's sorry yet for thee.

Fool. He that has a little tiny wit — With heigh, ho, the wind and the rain, — Must make content with his fortunes fit; For the rain it raineth every day.

Lear. True, my good boy. — Come, bring us to this hotel. [Excuse Lear and Kent. Fool. This is a brave night to cool a courtier. — I'll speak a prophecy ere I go: When priests are more in word than matter; When brewers mar their malt with water; When nobles are their tailor's tutors; No hereticks burn'd, but wenches' suitors: When every case in law is right; No síquire in debt, nor no poor knight; When slanders do not live in Tongues; Nor cutpurse come not to thrones; When usurers tell their gold 't the field; And bawds and whores do churches build; — Then shall the realm of Albion Come to great confusion. Then comes the time, who lives to see't, That going shall be us'd with feet.

This prophecy Merlin shall make; for I live before his time. [Excite]

Scene III. — A Room in Gloster's Castle.

Enter Gloster and Edmund.

Glo. Alack, alack, Edmund, I like not this unnatural dealing: When I desired their leave that I might pity them, they took from me the use of mine own house; charged me, on pain of their perpetual displeasure, neither to speak of him, entreat for him, nor any way sustain him.

Edm. Most savage, and nunnatural! Glo. Go to; say you nothing: There is division between the dukes; and a worse matter than that: I have received a letter this morning — 'tis dangerous to be spoken: — I have locked the letter in my closet: these injuries the king now bears will be revenged; there is part of a power already footed: we must incline to the king. I will seek him, and privately relieve him: go you, and maintain talk with the duke, that my charity be not of him perceived: If he ask for me, I am ill, and gone to bed. If I die for it, as no less is threatened me, the king my old master must be relieved. There is some strange thing toward, Edmund: pray you be careful. [Exit. Edm. This courtesy, forbidden thee, shall the duke Instantly know; and of that letter too: — This seems a fair deserving, and must draw me That which my father loses; no less than all: The younger rises, when the old doth fall. [Exit.

Scene IV. — A Part of the Heath, with a Howel.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

Kent. Here is the place, my lord; good my lord, The tyranny of the open night's too rough [Enter: For nature to endure. [Storm still!]

Lear. Let me alone.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Will break my heart? Kent. I'd rather break mine own: Good my lord, enter.
Lear. Thou think'st 'tis much, that this contentious storm
Invades us to the skin: so 'tis to thee;
But where the greater malady is fix'd,
The lesser is scarce felt. Thou'dst shun a bear:
But if thy flight lay toward the raging sea,
Thou'dst meet the bear! the mouth. When the body's delicate: the tempest in my mind
Doth from my senses take all feeling else,
Save what beats here.—Filial ingratitude!
Is it not, as this mouth should tear this hand,
For lifting food to’t?—But I will punish home:
No, I will weep no more.—In such a night
To shunt me out!—Pour on; I will endure:
In such a night as this! O Regan, Goneril!—
Your old kind father, whose frank heart gave all,
O, that way madness lies; let me shun that;
No more of that.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Pr'ythee, go in thyself; seek thine own ease;
This tempest will not give me leave to ponder
On things that would hurt me more.—But I'll go in:
In, boy: go first.—[To the Fool.] You houseless poverty, Nay, get thee in. I'll pray, and then I'll sleep.

[Fool goes in.

Poor naked wretches, where'er you are:
That bide the pelting of this pitiless storm,
How shall your houseless heads, and unfed sides,
Your loop'd and window'd raggedness, defend you
From seasons such as these? 0, I have ta'en
To little care of this! Take physic, pomp;
Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel;
That thou may'st shun the superflux to them,
And show the heavens more just.

Edg. [Within] Fathom and half, fathom and half! Poor Tom!

[The Fool runs out from the hovel.

Fool. Come not in here, nuncle, here's a spirit.
Help me, help me!

Fool. A spirit, a spirit; he says his name's poor.
Kent. What art thou that dost grumble there?
Come forth.

[The straw?

Enter Edgar, disguised as a madman.

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!—
Through the sharp hatchorn blows the cold wind.

Humph! go to thy cold bed, and warm thee.

Lear. Hast thou given all to thy two daughters?
And art thou come to this?

Edg. Who gives any thing to poor Tom? whom the foul fiend hath led through fire and through flame, through for'd and whirlpool, over bog and quagmire; that hath laid knives under his pillow, and halters in his paws; set ratsbane by his porridge; made him proud of heart, to ride on a bay trotting-horse over four-inched bridges, to course his own shadow for a traitor.—Bless thy five wits!
Tom's a cold!—0, do de, do de, do de.—Bless thee from the whirlwind, and taking! Do poor Tom some charity, whom the foul fiend vexes:
There could I have him now, and there,—
and there, and there again, and there.

[Storm continues.

Lear. What, have his daughters brought him to this pass?—

Could'st thou save nothing? Did'st thou give them Fool. Nay, he reserved a blanket, else we had been all shamed.

Lear. Now, all the plaques that in the pendulous
Hang fated o'er men's faults, light on thy daugh-
Kent. He hath no daughters, sir.

Lear. Death, traitor! nothing could have subdued nature to such a lowness, but his unkind daughters.
Is it the fashion, that discarded fathers
Should have thus little mercy on their flesh?
Judicious punishment! 'twas this flesh begot
Those pelican daughters.

Edg. Pippock sat on pippock's-hill;—
Hallow, hallow, too, too!—

Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen.

Edg. Take heed o'the foul fiend: Obey thy patents; keep thy word justly; swear not; commit not with man's sworn spouse; set not thy sweet heart on proud array; mind Tom's cold.

Lear. What hast thou been?

Edg. A serving-man, proud in heart and mind; that curled my hair; wore gloves in my cap, served the lust of my mistress's heart, and did the act of darkness with him; wore as many oaths as I spake words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven;
one, that slept in the contriving of lust, and waked to do it: Wine loved I deeply; dice dearly; and in woman, out-paramoured the Turk: False of heart, light of ear, bloody of hand; Hog in sloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness, dog in madness, lion in prey. Let not the creaking of shoes, nor the rust-lining of silks, betray thy poor heart to women:
Keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of plackets, thy tongue from lacer's books, and defy the foul fiend.—Still through the hawthorn blows the cold wind: Says suum, mun, ha no nonny, dolphin my boy, my boy, sessa; let him trot by.

[Storm still continues.

Lear. Why, thou were better in thy grave, than to answer with thy uncovered body this extremity of the skies.—Is man no more than this? Consider him well: Thou owest the worm no silk, the beast
no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat no perfume:
Ha! here's three of us are sophisticated!—Thou art the thing itself; unaccommodated man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked animal as thou art.—Of, off, you lendings.—Come; unbutton here.—

[Tearing off his clothes.

Fool. Pr'ythee, nuncle, be contended; this is a naughty night to swim in.—Now a little fire in a wild field were like an old lecher's heart; a small spark, all the rest of his body cold.—Look, here comes a walking fire.

Edg. This is the foul fiend. Fillibertigibet: he begins at curfew, and walks till the first cock; he gives the web and the pin, squints the eye, and makes the hare-lip; mildews the white wheat, and hurts the poor creature of earth.

Saint Withold footed thrice the mold;
He met the night-mare, and her nine-fold,
Bid her alight,
And in with right,
And, aroint thee, wife, aroint thee!—
Kent. How fares your grace?

Enter Gloster, with a torch.

Lear. What's he?

Kent. Who's there? What is't you seek?

Glo. What are you there? Your names?

Edg. Poor Tom; that eats the swimming frog, the toad, the tadpole, the wall-newt, and the water;
that in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiend comes, eats every thing unsavoury; swallows the old rat, and the ditches, drinks the dew of the standing pool; who is whipped from tything to tything, and st coked, punished, and imprisoned; who hath had three suits to his back, six shirts to his body, horse to ride, and weapon to wear,
But mice and rats, and such small deer,
Have been Tom's food for seven long year.

Beware my follower:—Peace, Smolkin; peace,
thou poor fool;—

Glo. What, hath your grace no better company?

Edg. The prince of darkness is a gentleman;
Mado he's call'd, and Mahu.

Glo. Our flesh and blood, my lord, is grown so
That it doth hate that gets it. [vile.

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.

Glo. Go in with me; my duty cannot suffer
To obey in all your daughters' hard commands:

2 Z
Though their injunction be to bar my doors,
And let this tyrannous night make hold upon you;
Yet have I ventured to come seek you out,
And bring you where both fire and food is ready.

Lear. First let me talk with this philosopher.—
What is the cause of thunder?

Kent. Good my lord, take his offer ;
Go into the house.

Lear. I'll talk a word with this same learned
What is your study?

[Theban._

Edg. How to prevent the fiend, and to kill vermin.

Lear. Let me ask you one word in private.

Kent. Importune him once more to go, my lord,
His wit begun to unsettle.

Glo. Can't thou blame him?
His daughters seek his death ;—Ah, that good
Kent!
He said it would be thus:—Poor baulish'd man !
Thou say'st, the king grows mad; I'll tell thee,
I am almost mad myself: I had a son, [Friend,
Now outlaw'd from my blood: he sought my life,
But lately, very late; I lov'd him, friend,—
No father his son dearer: true to tell thee,
[Storm continues.

The grief hath craz'd my wits. What a night's
I do beseech your grace,—[this !

Lear. O, cry you mercy,
Noble philosopher, your company.

Edg. Tom's a-cold.

Glo. In, fellow, there, to the hotel: keep thee
Lear. Come, let's in all. [war.

Kent. This way, my lord.

With him;
I will keep still with my philosopher.

Kent. Good my lord, soothe him; let him take

Kent. Sirrah, come on; go along with us.

Lear. Come, good Athenian.

Glo. To no words, no words:
Tush.

Edg. Child Rowland to the dark tower came,
His word was still,—Fie, jot, and sum,
I smell the blood of a British man. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A Room in Gloster's Castle.

Enter Cornwall and Edmund.

Corn. I will have my revenge, ere I depart his house.

Edm. How, my lord, I may be censured, that nature thus gives way to loyalty, something fears me to think of.

Cor. I now perceive, it was not altogether your brother's evil disposition made him seek his death;
but a provoking merit, set a-work by a reprovable
badness in himself.

Edm. How malicious is my fortune, that I must repent to be just! This is the letter he spoke of, which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France. O heavens! that this treason were not, or not I the detector?

Corn. What is the matter of this paper be certain,
you have mighty business in hand.

Corn. True, or false, it hath made thee earl of Gloster. Seek out where thy father is, that he may be ready for our apprehension.

Edm. [Aside.] If I find him comforting the king, it will stuff his suspicion more fully.—I will persevere in my course of loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood.

Corn. I will lay trust upon thee; and thou shalt find a dearer father in my love. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—A Chamber in a Farm-House,

Joining the Castle.

Enter Gloster, Lear, Kent, Fool, and Edgar.

Glo. Here is better than the open air; take it thankfully: I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can: I will not be long from you.

KENT. All the power of his wit has given way to his impatience.—The gods reward your kindness.

[Exit Gloster.

Edg. Frateretto calls me; and tells me Nero is an angler in the lake of darkness. Pray, innocent, and beware the soul fiend.

Fool. Pray, my noble sir, tell me, whether a madman be a gentleman, or a yeoman?

Lear. A king, a king! Fool. No; he's a yeoman, that has a gentleman for his son; for he's a mad yeoman, that sees his son a gentleman before him.

Kent. To have a thousand with red burning spits
Come hissing in upon them:—

Edg. The foul fiend bites my back.

Fool. He's mad, that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse's health, a boy's love, or a whore's care.

Lear. It shall be done, I will arraign them straight:

Come, sit thou here, most learned justice:—

Thou, sapient sir, sit here. [To the Fool.]—Now, you see the foxes.—

Edg. Look, where he stands and glares!—

Wantest thou eyes at trial, madam?

Come over the bourn, Bessy, to me:—

Fool. Her boat hath a leak, and she must not speak.

Why doth she dare not come over to thee.

Edg. The foul fiend haunts poor Tom in the voice of a nightingale. Haply, tries riles in Tom's belly for two white herring. Croak not, black angel; I have no food for thee.

Kent. How do you, sir? Stand you not so amaz'd:

Will you lie down and rest upon the cushions?

Lear. I'll see their trial first:—Bring in the evidence.

Thou rob'd man of justice, take thy place:—

[To Edgar.

And thou, his yoke-fellow of equity, [To the Fool.

Bench by his side:—You are of the commission,

Sit you too. [To Kent.

Edg. Let us deal justly.

Sleep eat or makest thou, jolly shepherd?

Thy sheep be in the corn;

And for one blast of thy minikin mouth,

Thy sheep shall take no harm.

PUR ! the cat is grey.

Lear. Arraign her first; 'tis Goneril. I here take my oath before this honourable assembly, she kicked the poor king her father.

Fool. Come hither, mistress; Is your name Goner-

Lear. She cannot deny it.

Fool. Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool.

Lear. And here's another, whose warp'd looks proclaim

What store her heart is made of.—Stop her there!
Arms, arms, sword, fire!—Corruption in the place
False justicer, why hast thou let her 'scape?

Edg. Bless thy five wits!

Kent. O pity!—Sir, where is the patience now,

That you will oft have boasted to retain?

Edg. My tears begin to take his part so much,

They'll mar my counterfeiting. [Aside.

Lear. The little dogs and all,

Tray, Blanch, and Sweet-heart, see, they bark at
Edg. Toth, will throw his head at them:—

Avast, you curs! Be thy mouth or black or white,

Tooth that poisons if it bite;—

Mastiff, greyhound, mongrel grim,

Hound, or spaniel, brach, or lym;

Or bobtail tike, or trundle-tail;

Tom will make them weep and wail,

With throwing thus my head,

Dogs leap the hatch, and all are fled.

fairs, and market towns:—Poor Tom, thy horn is dry.

Lear. Then let them anatomiize Regan, see what breeds about her heart: Is there any cause in nature, that makes these hard hearts?—You, sir, I entertain you for one of my hundred; only, I do not like the fashion of your garments: you will say, they are Persian attire; but let them be changed. [To Edgar.

Kent. Now, good my lord, lie here, and rest awhile.

Lear. Make no noise, make no noise; draw the curtails: So, so, so: We'll go to supper i' the morning: So, so, so.

Fool. And I'll go to bed at noon.

Re-enter Gloster.

Glo. Come hither, friend: Where is the king my master? [gone.

Kent. Here, sir; but trouble him not, his wits are Glo. Good friend, I pr'ythee take him by thy I have o'er-heard a plot of death upon him: [arms; There is a litter ready; lay him in't, [meet And drive towards Dover, friend, where thou shalt Both welcome and protection. Take up thy master; If thou should'st daily half an hour, his life. With thine, and all that offer to defend him, Stand in assured loss: Take up, take up; And follow me, that will to some provision Give thee quick conduct.

KENT.

Oppress'd nature sleeps:— This rest might yet have balm'd thy broken senses, Which, if convenience will not allow, [master; Stand in hard cure.—Come, help to bear thy Must not stay behind.

Glo. To the Fool.

KENT. Come, come, come, off the King.

Edg. When we our betters see bearing our woes, We scarcely think our miseries our foes. Who alone suffers, suffers most the mind; Leaving free things, and happy shows, behind: But then the mind much suffereth doth o'erstep, When grief hath mates, and bearing fellowship. How light and portable my palm seems now, When that, which makes me bend, makes the king He childed, as I father'd!—Tom, away: [bow; Mark the high noises: and thyself bewray, [thee, When false opinion, whose wrong thought defiles In thy just proof, repeals and reconciles thee. Who will hap more to-night, safe scape the king? Lurk, lurk.

[Exit.

SCENE VII.—A Room in Gloster's Castle.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, Goneril, Edmund, and Servants.

Corn. Post speedily to my lord your husband; show him this letter:—the army of France is landed:—Seek out the villain Gloster. [Exeunt some of the Servants.

Reg. Hang him instantly.

Gon. Pluck out his eyes.

Corn. Leave him to my displeasure.—Edmund, keep you our sister company: the revenges we are bound to take upon your traitorouk father, are not fit for your beholding. Advise the duke, where you are going, to a most fortunate preparation; we are bound to the like. Our posts shall be swift, and intelligent betwixt us. Farewell, dear sister:—farewell, my lord of Gloster.

Enter Steward.

How now? Where's the king?

Stew. My lord of Gloster hath convey'd him Some five or six and thirty of his knights, [hence: Hot quievstirs after him, met him at gate: Who, with some others of the lord's dependants, Are gone with him towards Dover; where they To have well-armed friends. [boast

Corn. Get horses for your mistress.

Gon. Farewell, sweet lord, and sister. [Exeunt Goneril and Edmund.

Corn. Edmund, farewell,—Go, seek the traitor Gloster,

Pinion him like a thief, bring him before us: [Exeunt other Servants.

Though we may not pass upon his life Without the form of justice; yet our power Shall do a courtesy to our wrath, which men May blame, but not control. Who's there? The traitor?

Re-enter Servants, with Gloster.

Reg. Ingrateful fox! 'tis he.

Reg. Hard, hard,—O filthy traitor! Glo. Unmerciful lady as you are, I am none. Corn. To this chair bind him — Villain, thou shalt find—[Regan plucks his beard Glo. By the kind gods, 'tis most ignobly done To pluck me by the beard.

Reg. So white, and such a traitor! Glo. Naughty lady, These hairs, which thou dost ravish from my chin, Will quicken, and accuse thee, do am host; With robbers' hands, my hospitable favours You should not ruffle thus. What will you do?

Corn. Come, sir, what letters had you late from France? [truth.

Reg. Be prepared-answer'd, for we know the Corn. And what confession have you with the Late footed in the kingdom? [traitors

Reg. To whose hands have you sent the lunatick Speak.

Glo. I have a letter guessingly set down, Which came from one that's of a neutral heart, And not from one oppos'd.

Corn. Cunning. And false.

Reg. Where hast thou sent the king?

Glo. To Dover.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover? Was thou not charg'd at thy peril — Corn. Wherefore to Dover? Let him first answer that.

Glo. I am tied to the stake, and I must stand the Reg. Wherefore to Dover? [course.

Glo. Because I would not see thy cruel nails Pluck out his poor old eyes; nor thy fierce sister in his inointcd flesh stick boarish fangs.

Glo. He, that will think to live till lie be old, Give me some help:—O cruel! O ye gods! Reg. One side will mock another; the other too. Corn. If you see vengeance,— Serv. Hold your hand, my lord: I have serv'd you ever since I was a child; But better service have I never done you Than now to bid you hold.

Reg. How now, you dog? Serv. If you did wear a beard upon your chin, I'd shake it on this quarrel: What do you mean? Corn. My villain! [Drags, and runs at him. Serv. Nay, then come on, and take the chance of anger. [Drags. They fight. Cornwall is wounded.

Reg. Give me thy sword.—[To another Servant. A peasant stand up thus!

[Snatches a sword, comes behind, and stabs him.

SCENE I.—The Heath.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. Yet better thus, and known to be contemned,
Than still contemned and flatter'd. To be worst,
The lowest, and most defected thing of fortune,
Stands still in expectation, lives not in fear:
The lamentable change is from the best;
The worst returns to laughter. Welcome then,
Thou unsubstantial air, that I embrace!
The wretch, that thou hast blown unto the worst,
Owes his condition to thy blasts. But who comes here?

Enter Gloster, led by an Old Man.

My father, poorly led?—World, world, O world!
But that thy strange mutations make us hate thee,
Life would not yield to age.

Old Man. O my good lord, I have been your tenant, and your father's tenant, these fourscore years.

Glo. A way, get thee away; good friend, be gone:
Thy comforts can do me no good at all,
Thee they may hurt.

Old Man. Alack, sir, you cannot see your way.
Glo. I have no way, and therefore want no eyes;
I stumbled when I saw: Full oft 'tis seen,
Our meat secures us; and our mere defects
Prove our commodities.—Ah, dear son Edgar,
The food of thy abused father's wrath!
Might I but live to see thee in my touch,
It were, I had eyes again.

Old Man. How now? Who's there?
Edg. [Aside.] O gods! Who is't can say, I am
I am worse than e'er I was. [at the worst?]

Old Man. 'Tis poor mad Tom.
Edg. [Aside.] And worse I may be: The worst is
So long as we can say, This is the worst.

Old Man. Fellow, where goest?
Glo. Is it a beggar-man?
Old Man. Madman and beggar too.
Glo. He has some reason, else he could not beg.
'Who the last night's storm I such a fellow saw;
Which made me think a man a worm: My son
Came then into my mind; and yet my mind
Was then scarce friends with him: I have heard
Since:
As flies to wanton boys, are we to the gods;
They kill us for their sport.

Edg. How should this be?
Bad is the trade must play the fool to sorrows,
And feel its own; and others. [Aside.]—Bless thee.
Glo. Is that the naked fellow? [master:
Old Man.
Aye, my lord.
Glo. Then, pr'ythee, get thee gone: If, for my sake,
Thou wilt e'take us, hence a mile or twain,
'th'way to Dover, do it for ancient love;
And bring some covering for this naked soul,
Whom I'll entreat to lead me.

Old Man. Alack, sir, he's mad.
Glo. 'Tis the times' plague, when madmen lead the blind.
Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure:
Above the rest, he gone.

[have, Old Man. I'll bring him the best 'parrel that I Come on.' Bless that will.'

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.—I cannot drench it
further.

Edg. [Aside.] And yet I must. —Bless thy sweet
2 eyes, they beled.
Glo. Know'st thou the way to Dover?
Edg. Both style and gate, horse-way, and foot-path.
Poor Tom hath been scarred out of his good wits: Bless the good man from the foul fiend! Five Friends have been in poor Tom at once; of lust, as Obidient; Hobbidissance, prince of darkness; Mauh, of stealing; Modo, of murder; and Flibbertigibbet,
Morgan, and mowing; who since possess chamber-maids and waiting-women. So, bless thee, master!

Glo. Here, take this purse, thou whom the haec
Have humbled to all strokes: that I am wretched,
Makes thee the happier. —Heavens, deal so still!
Let the superfluous, and lust-dieten man,
That slave in fortune, lives not in fear:
Because he doth not feel, feel thy power quickly;
So distribution should undo excess,
And each man have enough. —Dost thou know
Edg. Ay, master.
Glo. There is a cliff, whose high and bending
Looks fearfully in the confined deep:
[head Bring me but to the very brim of it,
And I'll repair the misery thou dost bear,
With something rich about me: from that place
I shall no leading need.
Give me thy arm:

Edg. Poor Tom shall lead thee.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—Before the Duke of Albany's Palace.

Enter Goneril and Edmund; Steward meeting
them.

Gon. Welcome, my lord: I marvel, our mild husband [master. —Now, where's your Stern. Madam; within; but never man so
I told him of the army that was landed; [chang'd:
He smil'd at it: I told him, you were coming;
His answer was, The worse: of Gloster's treachery,
And other fatal service of his son,
When I inform'd him, then he call'd me sot;
And told me, I had turn'd the wrong side out:—
What most he should dislike, seems pleasant to
What like, offensive.

Gon. Then you shall go no further.

You justices, that these our nether crimes
So speedily can venge!—But, O, poor Gloster!
Lost he his other eye!

Mess. Both, both, my lord.—
This letter, madam, craves a speedy answer;—
'Tis from your sister.

Gon. [Aside.] One way I like this well;
But being widow, and my Gloster with her,
May all the building in my fancy pluck.

Upon my hateful life: Another way,
The news is not so tart.—I'll read, and answer.

Alb. Where was his son, when they did take his Mess. Come with my lady hither.

[Exeunt.

Enter Kent and a Gentleman.

Kent. Why the king of France is so suddenly gone back know you the reason? He is not here.
Mess. No, my good lord; I met him back again.

Alb. Knows he the wickedness? [against him;
Mess. Ay, my good lord; 'twas he inform'd
Alb.] quit the house on purpose, that their punish-

Gloster, I live
To thank thee for the love thou show'dst the king,
And to revenge thine eyes.—Come hither, friend;
Tell me what more thou knowest.

SCENE III.—The French Camp, near Dover.

Enter Kent and a Gentleman.

Kent. Why the king of France is so suddenly
gone back know you the reason? He is not here.

Gent. Something he left imperfect in the state,
Which since his coming forth is thought of; which Imports to the kingdom so much fear and danger,
That his personal return was most requir'd,
And necessary.

Kent. Who hath he left behind him general?

Gent. The Mareschal of France, Monsieur le Fer.

Kent. Did you his letters pierce the queen to any demonstrations of grief?

[Exit.

Gent. Ay, sir; she took them, read them in my
And now and then an ampler tear trill'd down
Her delicate cheek: it seem'd, she was a queen
Over her passion; who, most rebel-like,
Sought to be the king o'er her.

Kent. O, then it mov'd her.

Gent. Not to a rage: patience and sorrow strove
Who should express her goodliest. You have seen
Sunshine and rain at once; her smiles and tears
Were like a better day: Those happy smiles,
That play'd on her white lip, seem'd not to know
What guests were in her eyes; which parted thence,
As pearls from diamonds drop'd.—In brief, sor-
Would be a rarity most belov'd, if all
Row
Could so become it.

Kent. Made she no verbal question?

Gent. 'Faith, once, or twice, she heav'd the name of father
Pantingly forth, as if it press'd her heart;

Cried, Sisters! sisters!—Shame of ladies! sisters!

Kent. fathers? sisters? Where's the storm? [Ithe
Let pity not be believ'd! —There she shook [night,
The holy water from her heavenly eyes,
And clamour moisten'd;—then away she started
To deal with grief alone.

Kent. It is the stars,
The stars above us, govern our conditions;
Else one self mate and mate could not beget
Such different issues. You spoke not with her

Gent. No.

Kent. Was this before the king return'd?

Gent. No, since.

Kent. Well, sir; The poor distress'd Lear is

His mind so venemously, that burning shame
Detaigns him from Cordelia.

SCENE IV.—The same. A Tent.

Enter Cordelia, Physician, and Soldiers.

Cor. Alack, 'ts he; why, he was met even now
As mad as the vex'd sea: singing aloud;
Crown'd with rank fumiter, and furrow weeds,
With ballocks, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-flowers,
Darnel, and all the idle weeds that grow
In our sustaining corn.—A century send forth;
Search every acre in the high-growed field,
And bring him to our eye. [Exit an Officer.—

Lest his ungovern'd rage dissolve the life
That wants the means to lead it.

Enter a Messenger.

Mass. Madam, news;
The British powers are marching hitherward.
Cor. 'Tis known before; our preparation stands
In expectation of them. —Oh dear father,
It is thy business that I go about;
Therefore great France
Must learning, and important tears, hath pitted.
No blown ambition dotr our arms incite,
But love, dear love, and our ag'd father's right:

Reg. What might import my sister's letter to Stem. I know not, lady, him?
Reg. 'Faith, he is posted hence on serious matter,
It was great ignorance, Glositer's eyes being out,

Enter GLOSTER, and EDGAR dressed like a peasant.

Glo. When shall we come to the top of that same hill?
Edg. You do climb up it now: look how we la-
Glo. Methinks, the ground is even. [bour.
Edg. Horrible steep:
Hark, do you hear the sea?
Glo. No, truly.
Edg. Why, then your other senses grow imperfect
By your eyes' anguish.
Glo. So may it be, indeed;
Methinks, thy voice is alter'd; and thou speak'st
In better phrase, and matter, than thou didst.
Edg. You are much deceiv'd: in nothing am I
Both in my garments. [chang'd, Glo.
Edg. Methinks, you are better spoken.
Glo. Comeon, sir; here's the place;—stand still.
—How fearful
And dizzy 'tis, to cast one's eyes so low!
The crows, and crows, that wing the midway air,
Show scarce so gross as beetles: Half way down
Hangs one that gathers samphire; dreadful trade! Methinks, he seems no bigger than his head;
The fishermen, that walk upon the beach, Appear like mice; and you' tall archoring bark, Diminishing to her cock; her cock, a buoy Almost too small for sight. The murruring surge, That on the unnumber'd idle pebbles chafes, Cannot be heard so high:—I'll look no more;
Lest my brain turn, and the deficient sight
Topple down headlong.

Set me where you stand.
Edg. Give me your hand: You are now within a foot
Of the extreme verge: for all beneath the moon
Would I not leap upright.
Glo. Let go my hand.
Here, friend, is another parse; in it, a jewel
Well worth a poor man's taking: Fairies, and gods,
Prosper it with thee! Go thou further off;
Bid me farewell, and let me hear thee going.
Edg. Now fare you well, good sir, [goes to me.
Glo. With all my heart.
Edg. Why do I trifle thus with his despair,
Is done to cure it.
Edg. O you mighty gods!
This world I do renounce; and, in your sights, Shave patiently my great affliction off:
If I could bear it longer, and not fall
To quarrel with your great oppression wills.
My snuff, and loathed part of nature, should Burn itself out; if Edgar live, O, bless him!—
Now, fellow, fare thee well.
[He leaps, and falls along.
Glo. Gone, sir? farewell.

And yet I know not how conceal may rob
The treasury of life, when life itself
Yields to the theft: Had he been where he thought
By this, had thought been past—Alive, or dead?
No, you sir! friend!—Hear you, sir?—speak!—
Thus might he pass indeed:—Yet he revives
What are you, sir?

Glo.
Away, and let me die.
Edg. Hadst thou then aught but gossomer,
So many fathom down precipitating, [feathers, air,
Thou hadst shriveller'd like an egg: but thou dost
breathe;
Hast heavy substance; bleed'st not; speak'st; art
Ten masts at each make not the altitude,
Which thou hast perpendicularly fell;
By thy life's tracery:—speak yet again.
But have I fallen, or no? [bourn
Edg. From the dread summit of this chalky
Look up a height;—the shrill-gord'd lark so far
Cannot be seen or heard: do but look up.
Glo. Alack, I have no eyes—
Is wretchedness depriv'd that benefit,
To end itself by death?—I was yet some comfort,
When misery could beguile the tyrant's rage,
And frustrate his proud will.
Give me your arm:
Up:—So;—How is't? Feel you your legs? You
Glo. Too well, too well.
Edg. This is above all strangeness.
Upon the crown o'the cliff, what thing was that
Which parted from you?
A poor unfortunate beggar.
Edg. As I stood here below, methought, his eyes
Were two full moons; he had a thousand noses,
Horns whelk'd, and wav'd like the enridged sea;
It was a mad wind. Therefore, thou happy father,
Think that the clearest gods, who make them
honours
Of men's impossibilities, have preserv'd thee.
Glo. I do remember now: henceforth I'll bear
Ad.locum, till it do cry out itself.
Enough, enough, and, die. That thing you speak of,
I took it for a man; often 'twould say,
The fiend, the fiend: he led me to that place.
Edg. Bear free and patient thoughts.—But who comes here?
Enter Lear, fantastically dress'd with flowers.
The safer sense will ne'er accommodate His master thus.
Lear. No, they cannot touch me for coining;
I am the king himself.
Edg. O thou side-piercing sight!
Lear. Nature's above art in that respect.—There's her press-money. That fellow helicopter his bow like a crow-keeper; draw me a clothier's yard.—
Look, look, a mouse! Peace, Peace:—this piece of toasted cheese will do.—There's my gauntlet: I'll prove it on a giant.—Bring up the brown bills:—
0, well flown, bird!—the clout, the clout:
hewgh!—Give the word.
Edg. Sweet marjoram.
Lear. Pass.
Glo. I know that voice.
Lear. Ha! Goneral!—with a white beard!—
They flatter'd me like a dog; and told me, I had who?—I had who?—I had who?—I had who?—I had who?—I had who?—I had who?—I had who?
When the rain came to wet me once, and the wind to make me chatter; when the thunder would not peace at my bidding; there I found them, there I smelt them out. Go to, they are not men o'their words:
they told me I was every thing; 'tis a lie; I am not ague-proof.
Glo. The trick of that voice I do well remember:
Is that the king?
Lear. Ay, every inch a king:
When I do stare, see, how the subject quakes.
I pardon that man's life: What was thy cause?—
Adultery?
Thou shalt not die: Die for adultery! No:
The wen goes to't, and the small gilded fly
Does lecher in my sight.

Let copulation thrive, for Gloster's bastard son
Was kinder to his father, than my daughters
'Got twentie laws on shilings.
To't, luxury, pell-mell, for I lack soldiers.—
Behold yon simpering dame,
Whose face between her forks presageth snow;
That minces virtue, and does shake the head
To her of man's name.
The fitchew, nor the soiled horse, goes to't
With a more riotous appetite.
Down from the waist they are centaurs,
Though women all above:
But to the girl that doth the gods inherit,
Beneath is the fiend's; there's hell, there's darkness,
there is the sulphurous pit, burning, scalding, stench, consumption:—Fye, fye, fye! pah; pah!
Give me an ounce of civet, good apothecary, to sweeten my imagination: there's money for these.
Glo. O, let me kiss that hand!
Lear. Let me wipe it first; it smells of mortality.
Glo. O ruin'd piece of nature! This great world
Shall so wear out to nought.—Dost thou know me?
Lear. I remember those eyes well enough. Dost thou squiny at me? No, do thy worst, blind Cupid;
I'll not love.—Read thou this challenge; mark
but the penning of it.
[one.
Glo. Were all the letters suns, I could not see
Edg. I would not take this from report;—it is,
And my heart breaks at it.
Lear. Read.
Lear. What, with the case of eyes?
Lear. O, ho, are you there with me? No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse? Your eyes in a heavy case, your purse in a light: Yet you see how this world goes.
Glo. I see it feelingly.
Lear. What, art mad? A man may see how this world goes, and yet see not:
Look with thine ears: see how you' justice raius upon you' simple thief.
Hark, in thine ear: Change places; and, handy-dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief?—
Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar?
Glo. Ay, sir.
Lear. And the creature run from the cur?
There thou must'ist behold the great image of authority: a dog's obeyed in office.
Thou rascal beadle, hold thy bloody hand:—
Woy dost thou preventing that we starve this thine own,
Thou hotly lust'st to use her in that kind [back:
For which thou whipp'st her. The usherer hangs the cozener.
Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes, and fur'd gowns, hide all. Plate sin with gold.
And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks:
Arm it in raas, a pigmy's straw doth pierce it.
None does offend, none, I say, none; I'll able'em:
Take that of me, my friend, who have the power
To seal the accuses' lips. Get thee glass eyes;
And, like a scruffy politician, seem
To see the things thou dost not.—Now, now, now,
Pull off my boots:—harder, harder; so. [now
Edg. O, matter and impertinency mix'd!
Reason in marks, and write the letters!—
[eyes.
Lear. If thou wilt meep my fortunes, take my
I know thee well enough; thy name is Gloster;
Thou must be patient; we came crying hither.
Thou know'st, the first time that we smell the air,
We wawl, and cry:—I will preach to thee; mark
Glo. Alack, alack the day! [me.
Lear. When we are born, we cry, that we are come [block?—
This great stage of fools;—This a good
It were a delicate stragatagem, to shoe
A troop of horse with feit: I'll put it in proof;
And when I have stolen upon these sons-in-law,
Then, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill.

Enter a Gentleman, with Attendants.
Gent. O, here he is; lay hand upon him.—Sir,
Your most dear daughter—

KING LEAR.

Act 4.

Lear. No rescue? What, a prisoner? I am even the natural fool of fortune.—Use me well; you shall have that. Let me have a surgeon. I am cut to the brains.

Gent. You shall have any thing.

Lear. No seconds? all myself?

Why, this would make a man, a man of salt, to set his eyes for garden water-pots, Ay, and for laying autumn's dust.

Gent. Good sir,—Lear. I will die bravely, like a bridgegroom; what? I will be jovial: come, come; I am a king, my masters, know you that? Gent. You are a royal one, and we obey you. Lear. Then there's life in it. Nay, an you get it, you shall get it by running. Sa, sa, sa, sa.

Gent. A sight most pitiful in the meanest wretch; Past speaking of in a king!—Thou hast one daughter, Who redeems nature from the general curse Which twain have brought her to.

Edg. Hail, gentle sir.

Gent. Sir, speed you: What's your will? Edg. Do you hear aught, sir, of a battle toward? Gent. Most sure, and vulgar: every one hears Which can distinguish sound. [Edg. That, that, But, by your favour, How near's the other army?] Gent. Near, and on speedy foot; the main desery Stands on the hourly thought.

Edg. I thank you, sir: that's all.

Gent. Though that the queen on special cause is her army mov'd on. [Here, Edg.] I thank you, sir. [Exit Gent.]

Edg. You ever gentle gods, take my breath from Let not my worser spirit tempt me again [me]; To die before you please!

Stew. A proclaim'd prize! Most happy! That eyeless head of thine was first fram'd flesh To raise my fortunes.—Thou old unhappy traitor, Briefly thyself remember:—The sword is out That must destroy thee. Glo. Now let thy friendly hand Put strength enough to it. [Exit Steward.]

[Edgar opposes.]

Stew. Wherefore, bold peasant, Dar'st thou support a publish'd traitor? Hence; Let that the infection of his fortune take Like hold on thee. Let go his arm. Edg. Chill not let go, xir, without vurther 'casion. Stew. Let go, slave, or thou diest. Edg. Good gentleman, go your gait, and let poor volt pass. And ch'd ha' been zwagger'd and jarring senses, O, wind up, Of this child-changed father! Stew. Out, dunghill! Edg. Chill pick your teeth, xir: Come, no matter for your foins. [They fight, and Edgar knocks him down.]

Stew. Slave, thou hast slain me.—Villain, take If ever thou wilt thrive, hury my body; [my purse; And yet, the letters, which thou find'st about me,— To Edmund earl of Gloster; seek him out Upon the British party:—O, untimely death! [Dies.]

Edg. I know thee well: A serviceable villain; As duteous to the vices of thy mistress, As badness would desire.

Glo. What is he dead? Edg. Sit you down, father; rest you.—I've see his pockets; these letters that he speaks of, May be my friends.—He's dead; I am only sorry He had no other death's man.—Let us see:— Leave, gentle wax: and, manners, blame us not: To know our enemies' minds, we'd rip their hearts; Their papers, is more lawful.

[Reads.] Let our reciprocal vows be remembered. You have many opportunities to cut him off: if your wish reat not, time and place will be frailfully offered. There is nothing done, if he return the conqueror: Then am I the prisoner, and his bed my goal: from the loathed warmth whereof deliver me, and supply the place for your labour. Your wife, (as I would say), and your affectionate servant, Goneril.

O undistinguished's pace of woman's will— A plot upon her virtuous husband's life; And the exchange, my brother!—Here, in the T'ee I'll take up, the post unsanctified [sands, Of murderous lechers: and, in the mature time, With this ungracious paper strike the sight Of the death-practis'd duke: For him 'twis well, That of thy death and business I can tell. [Exit Edgar, dragging out the body.]

Glo. The king is mad: How stiff is my sylte sense, That I stand up, and have ingenious feeling Of my huge sorrows! Better I were distract: So should my thoughts be sever'd from my grief; And woes, by wrong imaginations, lose The knowledge of themselves.

Re-enter Edgar.

Edg. Give me your hand: Far off methinks, I hear the beaten drum. Come, father, I'll bestow you with a friend. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—A Tent in the French Camp. Lear on a Bed, asleep; Physician, Gentleman, and others attending.

Enter Cordelia and Kent. Cor. O thou good Kent, shall how I live, and work, To match thy goodness? My life will be too short, And every measure fail me. Kent. To be acknowledg'd, madam, is o'er-paid. All my reports go with the modest truth; No more, nor clipp'd, but so. Cor. Be better suited; These weeds are memories of those wors'er hours: I pray you, put them off. Kent. Pardon me, dear madam; Yet to be known, shortens my made intent: My boon I make it, that you know me not, Till time and I think meet. Cor. Then be it so, my good lord,—How does the king? [To the Physician.]

Phys. Madam, sleeps still. Cor. O you kind gods, Cure this great breach in his abused nature! The unkind and jarring senses, O, wind up, Of this child-changed father! Phys. So please your majesty, That we may wake the king? he hath slept long. Cor. Be govern'd by your knowledge, and proceed The sway of your own will, Is he array'd? Gent. Ay, madam; in the heaviness of his sleep, We put fresh garments on him. Phys. Be by, good madam, when we do awake I doubt not of his temperance. [him; Cor. Very well. Phys. Please you, draw near.—Louder the music shall there. Cor. O my dear father! Restoration, hang Thy medicine on my lips; and let this kiss Repair those violent harms, that my two sisters Have in thy reverence made! Kent. Kind and dear princess
Cor. Had you not been their father, these white flakes
Had challenge'd pity of them. Was this a face
To be expos'd against the warring winds?
To stand against the deep dread-bolted thunder?
In the most terrible and nimble stroke
Of quick, cross-lightning? to watch (poor perdû!) With this thin helm? Mine enemy's dog,
Though he had bit me, should have stood that night
Against my fire; And wast thou fain, poor father,
To hovel thee with swine, and rogues forlorn,
In short and musty straw? Alack, alack!
'Tis wonder, that thy life and wits at once
Had not concluded all. - He wakes; speak to him. [Exit.
Phys. Madam, do you; 'tis fittest.
Cor. How does my royal lord? How fares your majesty? [grave:-
Lear. You do me wrong, to take me out of the Thou art a soul in bliss; but I am bound
Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears
Do soal like molten lead.
Cor. Sir, do you know me?
Lear. You are a spirit, I know; When did you
Cor. Still, still far wide!
Phys. He's scarce awake; let him alone awhile.
Lear. Where have I been? Where am I? -Fair day-light?
I am mightily abused. - I should even die with pity.
To see another thus. - I know not what to say.-
I will not swear, these are my hands: -let's see;
I feel this pin prick. 'Would I were assur'd
Of my condition.
Cor. O, look upon me, sir,
And hold your hands in benefaction o'er me:-
No, sir, you must not kneel.
Lear. Pray do not mock me:
I am a very foolish fond old man,
Fourscore and upward; and, to deal plainly,
I fear I am not in my perfect mind.
Methinks, I should know you, and know this man;
Yet I am doubtful: for I am mainly ignorant
What place this is: and all the skill I have Remembers not these garments; nor I know not
Where I did lodge last night: Do not laugh at me;
For, as I am a man, I think this lady
To be my child Cordelia.
Cor. And so I am, I am.
Lear. Be all my tears wet? Yes, faith, I pray, weep not:
If you have poison for me, I will drink it.
I know, you do not love me; for your sisters
Have, as I do remember, done me wrong:
You have some cause, they have not.
Cor. No cause, no cause.
Lear. Am I in France?
Kent. In your own kingdom, sir.
Lear. Do not abuse me.
Phys. Be comforted, good madam : the great rage,
You see, is curâd in him: and yet it is danger
To make him even o'er the time he has lost.
Desire him to go in: trouble him no more,
Till further settling.
Cor. Will it please your highness walk?
[Exeunt Lear, Cordelia, Physician, and Attendants.
Gent. Hold'st it true, sir, That the duke of Cornwall was so slain?
Kent. Most certain, sir.
Gent. Who is conductor of his people?
Kent. As 'tis said,
The bastard son of Gloucester.
Gent. They say, Edgar,
His banish'd son, is with the earl of Kent
In Germany.
Kent. Report is changeable.
'Tis time to look about; the powers o' the kingdom
Approach apace.
Gent. The arbitrement is like to be a bloody.
Fare you well, sir.
KENT. My point and period will be throughly wrought,
Or well, or ill, as this day's battle's fought. [Exit.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Camp of the British Forces, near Dover.

Enter, with drums and colours, Edmund, Regan, Officers, Soldiers, and others.

Edm. Know of the duke, if his last purpose hold;
Or, whether since he is advis'd by aught
To change the course: - he's full of alteration,
And self-reproving: - bring his constant pleasure.

[To an Officer, who goes out
Reg. Our sister's man is certainly miscarried.
Edm. 'Tis to be doubted, madam.

Reg. Now, sweet lord,
You know the goodness I intend upon you:
Tell me, -but truly, - but then speak the truth,
Do you not love my sister?
Edm. In honour'd love.
Reg. But have you never found my brother's way,
To the foreended place?
Edm. That thought abuses you,
Reg. I am doubting; that you have been conjunct
And bosom'd with her, as far as we call hers.
Edm. No, by mine honour, madam.
Reg. I never shall endure her: Dear my lord,
Be not familiar with her.
Edm. Fear me not: -
She, and the duke her husband,—

[Exeunt Albany, Goneril, and Soldiers.

Gen. I had rather lose the battle, than that sister,
Should loosen him and me. [Aside.
Alb. Our very loving sisters, will be met:-
Sir, this I bear. - The king is come to his daughter,
With others, whom the rigour of our state
For'd to cry out. Where I could not be honest,
I never yet was valiant: for this business,
It toucheth us as France invades our land,
Not holds the king; with others, whom, I fear,
Most just and heavy causes make oppose.
Edm. Sir, you speak nobly.
Reg. Why is this reason'd?
Gen. Combine together 'gainst the enemy:
For these domestick and particular broils
Are not to question here.
Alb. Let us then determine
With the ancient of war on our proceedings.
Edm. I shall attend you presently at your tent.
Reg. Sister, you'll go with us?
Gen. No.
Reg. 'Tis most convenient: pray you, go with us.
Gen. O, ho, I know the riddle: [Aside.] I will go.
As they are going out, enter Edgar, disguised,
Edg. If e'er your grace had speech with man so
Hear me one word. [poor,
Alb. I'll overtake you. -Speak.
[Exeunt Edmund, Regan, Goneril, Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants.
Edg. Before you fight the battle, ope this letter.
If you have victory, let the trumpet sound
For him that brought it: wretched though I seem,
I can produce a champion, that will prove
What is avouch'd there: If you miscarry,
Your business of the world hath so an end,
And machination ceases. Fortune love you!
Alb. Stay till I have read the letter.
Edg. When time shall serve, let but the herald cry,
And I'll appear again. [Exit.
[Exeunt. Alb. Why, fare thee well; I will o'erlook thy paper.

Re-enter Edmund.

Edm. The enemy's in view, draw up your powers.
Here is the guess of their true strength and forces.
By diligent discovery:—but your haste
Is now urg'd on you.

We will greet the time. [Exit.]

Edm. To both these sisters have I sworn my love;
Each jealous of the other, as the stung
Are of the adder: Which of them shall I take?
Both? one? or neither? Neither can be enjoy'd,
If both remain alive: To take the widow,
Exasperates, makes mad her sister Goneril,
And hardly shall I carry out my side,
Her husband being alive. Now then, we'll use
Her majesty of the state for the battle: which being done,
Let her, who would be rid of him, devise
His speedy taking off. As for the mercy
Which he intends to Lear, and to Cordelia,—
The battle done, and they within our power,
Shall none take of his pardon: for my state
Stands on me to defend, not to debate. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Field between the two Camps.

[Alarums within. Enter, with drum and colours,
Lear, Cordelia, and their Forces; and exeunt.]

Enter Edgar and Gloster.

Edg. Here, father, take the shadow of this tree
For your good host; pray that the right may
If ever I return to you again,
I'll bring you comfort.

[Alarums; afterwards a Retreat. Re-enter Edgar.

Edg. Away, old man, give me thy hand, away;
King Lear hath lost him, and his daughter ta'en:
Give me my sword, and come on.

Glo. No further, sir; a man may rot even here.

Edg. What, in all thoughts again? Men must endure
Their going hence, even as their coming hither:
Ripeness is all: Come on.

Glo. And that's true too. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The British Camp near Dover.

[Enter, in conquest, with drum and colours,
Edmund; Lear and Cordelia, as prisoners; Officers, Soldiers, &c.]

Edm. Some officers take them away: good guard;
Until their greater pleasures first be known
That are to censure them.

Cor. We are not the first,
Who, with best meaning, have incurred't the worst.
For thee, oppressed king, am I lost down;
Myself could else out-frown false fortune's frown.—
Shall we not see these daughters, and these sisters?

Lear. No, no, no! Come, let's away to prison:
We two alone will sing like birds! the cage:
When thou dost ask me blessing, I'll kneel down,
And ask of thee forgiveness: So we'll live,
And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh
At gilded butterflies, and hear poor rogues [too—
Talk of court news; and we'll talk with them
Who loses, and who wins; who is in, who's out;—
And take upon us the mystery of things,
As if we were God's spies: And we'll wear out,
In a wall'd prison, packs and sects of great ones,
That ebb and flow by the moon.

Edm. Take them away.

Lear. Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia, [thou?—
The gods themselves throw incense. Have I caught
He that parts us, shall bring a brand from heaven,
And fire us hence, like foxes. Wipe thine eyes;
Thou goutiers shall devour them, flesh and fell.
Erst they, shall make us weep: we'll see them starve first.

Cone. [Exeunt Lear and Cordelia, guarded.

Edm. Come hither, captain; hark.

Take thou this note; [giving a paper.] go, follow them to prison;
One step I have advanc'd thee: if thou dost
As this instructs thee, thou dost make thy way
To noble fortunes: Know thou this,—that men
Are as the time is: to be tender-minded
Does not become a sword. —Thy great employment
Will not bear question;—either say, thou'lt do,
Or thrive by other means.

Off. I'll do't, my lord.

Edm. About it; and write happy, when thou hast done.

Mark,—I say, instantly; and carry it so,
If it be man's work, I will do it. [Exit Officer.

Flourish. Enter Albany, Gloucester, Regan,
Officers, and Attendants.

Alb. Sir, you have shown to-day your valiant

And fortune led you well: You have the captives
Who were the opposites of this day's strife:
We do require of you; so to use them,
As we shall find their merits and our safety
May equally determine.

Sir, I thought it fit
To send the old and miserable king
To some retirement and appointed guard;
Whose age has charms in it, whose title more,
To pluck the common bosom on his side,
And not so impress'd loves in his eyes [queen;
Which do command them. With him I sent the
My reason all the same, and they are ready
To-morrow, or at further space, to appear
Where you shall hold your session. At this time,
We swept, and bleed: the friend hath lost his
And the best quarrels, in the heat, are curs'd
By those that feel their sharpness:—
The question of Cordelia, and her father,
Requires a sitter place.

Alb. Sir, by your patience,
I hold you but a subject of this war,
Not as a brother.

Reg. That's as we list to grace him.

Methinks, our pleasure might have been demanded,
Ere you had spoke so far. He led our powers;
Bore the commission of my place and person;
The which immediacy may well stand up,
And call itself your brother.

Gon. Not so hot:
In his own grace he doth exalt himself,
More than in your advancement.

Reg. By me invested, he compeers the best.

Gon. That were the most, if he should husband
Jesters do oft prove prophets.

Reg. Holla, holla! That eye, that told you so, look'd but a-squint.

Gon. Lady, I am not well; else I should answer
From a full-flowing stomach.—General,

Reg. Take thou my soldiers, prisoners, patrimony,
Dispose of them, of me; the walls are thine;
Witness the world, that I create thee here
My lord and master.

Gon. Mean you to enjoy him?—

Reg. The let-alone lies not in your good will.

Edm. Nor in thine, lord.

Alb. Half-blooded fellow, yes.

Reg. Let the drum strike, and prove my title thine.

[To Edmund.]

Alb. Stay yet; hear reason.—Edmund, I arrest
On capital treason; and, in thy arrest,
Let this girded serpent; [Pointing to Gon.]—for your claim, fair sister,
I har it in the interest of my wife;
Tis she is sub-contracted to this lord,
And, for her friend, all those shall, and contracts your bans.
If you will marry, make your love to me,
My lady is bespoke.

Gon. An interlude!

Alb. Thou art arm'd, Gloster.—Let the trumpet sound:
If none appear to prove upon thy person,
Thy heinous, manifest, and many treasons,
There is my pledge: [Throwing down a glove.]

I'll prove it on thy heart,
Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing less
Than I have here proclaimed thee.

Reg.

Edm. There's my exchange: [Throwing down a glove.] what in the world he is

That names me traitor, villain-like he lies:
Call by thy trumpet; be he that dares approach,
On him, on you, (who not?) I will maintain
My truth and honour firmly.

Alb. A herald, ho?

Edm.

Alb. Trust to thy single virtue; for thy soldiers,
All levi'd in my name, have in my name
 Took their discharge.

Reg.

[This sickness grows upon me.

Enter a Herald.

Alb. She is not well; convey her to my tent. [Exit Regan, led.

Come hither, herald,—Let the trumpet sound,—
And read out this.

Qff.

[Herald reads.

If any man of quality, or degree, with thin the lists of the army, will maintain upon Edmund, supposed earl of Gloster, that he is a manifold traitor, let him appear.

at the third sound of the trumpet: He is bold in his defence.

Edm. Sound.

Her.

Alb.

Her. Again.

Alb. [Trumpet answerd within.

Enter Edgar, armed, preceded by a trumpet.

Edm. Sound.

Her. Again.

[Trumpet answerd within.

Alb. Ask him his purposes, why he appears
Upon this call o' the trumpet.

Her.

What are you?

Your name, your quality? and why you answer
This present summons?

Edg.

Know, my name is lost;
By treason's tooth bare gnaw'd, and canker-bit:
Yet I am noble, as the adversary
I come to cope withal.

Alb. Which is that adversary?

Edg. What's he that speaks for Edmund earl of Gloster?

Edm. Himself;—What sayst thou to him?

Edg.

This is my speech offend a noble heart;
Thy arm may do thee justice: here is mine.
Behold, it is the privilege of mine honors,
My oath, and my profession; I protest,—
Mauger thy strength, youth, place, and eminence,
Despite thy victor sword, and grieve new fortune,
Thy valour, and thy heart,—thou art a traitor:
False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy father;
Conspirat 'gainst this high illustrious prince;
And, from the extremest upward of thy head,
To the descent and dust beneath thy feet,
A most toad-spotted traitor. Say thou, No,
This sword, this arm, and my best spirits, are bent
To prove upon thy heart, whereeto I speak,
Thou liest.

Edm. In wisdom, I should ask thy name;
But, since thy outside looks so fair and warlike,
And that thy tongue some 'say of breeding breathes,
What safe and nicely I might well delay
By rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn;
Back do I toss these reasons to thy head;
With the hell-hated lie o' erwhelm thy heart;
Which, (for they yet glance by, and scarcely bruise,) This sword of mine shall give them instant way,
Where they shall rest for ever.—Trumpets, speak. [Alarums. They fight. Edmund falls.

Alb. O save him, save him!

Gon.

This is mere practice, Gloster:
KING LEAR.

Edg. Kent, sir, the banish'd Kent; who in disguise
Follow'd his enemy king, and did him service
Improper for a slave.

Enter a Gentleman hastily, with a bloody knife.

Gent. Help! help! O help! What kind of help?

Edg. What means that bloody knife?

Gent. 'Tis hot, it smokes;

It came even from the heart of—

Edg. Who, man? speak.

Gent. Your lady, sir, your lady: and her sister
By her is poison'd; she confesses it.

Edm. I was contracted to them both; all three
Now marry in an instant.[dead—

Edg. Produce their bodies, be they alive or
The judgment of the heavens, that makes us tremble,

Touched us not with pity. [Exit Gentleman.

Enter Kent.

Edg. Here comes Kent, sir.

Edg. 0! it is he.
The time will not allow the compliment,
Which very manners urges.

Kent. I am come
To bid my king and master aye good night;
Is he not here?

Edg. Great thing of us forget!—
Speak, Edmund, where's the king; and where's
See'st thou this object, Kent? [Cordelia—

[The bodies of Goneril and Regan are brought in.

Kent. Alack, why thus? Yet Edmund was belov'd:
The one the other poison'd for my sake,
And after slew herself.

Edg. Even so.—Cover their faces.

Edm. I pant for life.—Some good I mean to do,
Despite of mine own nature. Quickly send,—
Be brief in it,—to the castle, for my writ
Is on the life of Lear, and on Cordelia:—

Nay, send in time.

Edg. Run, run, 0, run—

Edm. To who, my lord?—Who has the office?
The token of repreive.

Edg. Well thought on: take my sword,
Give it the captain.

Edm. Haste thee, for thy life. [Exit Edgar.

Edm. He hath commision from thy wife and me
To hang Cordelia in the prison, and
To lay the blame upon her own despair,
That she fordid herself.

Edg. The gods defend her! Bear him hence
While [Edmund is borne off—

Enter Lear, with Cordelia dead in his arms; Edgar, Officer, and others.

Lear. Howl, howl, howl, howl!—O, you are men of stones;
Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them so
That heaven's vault should crack:—O, she is gone for ever!—

I know when one is dead, and when one lives;
She's dead as earth:—Lend me a looking-glass; If that her breath may mist or stain the stone, Why, then she lives.

Kent. Is this the promised end?

Edg. Or image of that horror?

Edm. This feather stirs; she lives! if it be so, It is a chance that does redeem all sorrows
That ever I have felt.

Kent. 0 my good master! [Kneeling.

Lear. Pr'ythee, away.

Tis noble Kent, your friend.

Lear. A plague upon you, murderers, traitors all.
I might have sav'd her; now she's gone for ever!—

Cordelia, Cordelia, stay a little. Ha! What is't thou say'st?—Her voice was ever soft,
Gentle and low: an excellent thing in woman:
I kill'd the slave that was a hanging thee.

Off. 'Tis true, my lords, he did.

Lear. Did I not, fellow? I have seen the day, with my good biting faulchiou I would have made them skip: I am old now, And these same crosses spoil me.—Who are you? Mine eyes are none o'the best:—I'll tell you straight.

Kent. If fortune brag of two she lov'd and hated,
One of them we behold.

Lear. This is a dull sight: Are you not Kent?

Kent. The same;

Your servant Kent: Where is your servant Caius?

Lear. He's a good fellow, I can tell you that;
He'll strike, and quickly too: He's dead and rotten.

Kent. No, my good lord; I am the very man:—
Lear. I'll see that straight.

Kent. That, from your first of difference and de-
Have follow'd your sad steps. [say,

Lear. Ay, so I think.

Edg. He knows not what he says; and vain it is
That we present us to him.

Edg. Very bootless.

Enter an Officer.

Off. Edmund is dead, my lord.

Edg. That's but a trifle here:—
You lords, and noble friends, know our intent.
What comfort to this great decor may come, Shall be applied: For us, we will resign,
During the life of this old majesty,
To him our absolute power:—You, to your rights;
[To Edgar and Kent.

With boot, and such addition as your honours Have more than merited.—All friends shall taste The wages of their virtue, and all foes
The cup of their deservers.—O, see, see!—

Lear. And my poor fool is hang'd! No, no, no
Why should a dog, a horse, a rat, have life, [life: And thou no breath at all? 0, thou wilt come no Never, never, never, never, never!—

[more. Pray you, undo this button: Thank you, sir,—
Do you see this? Look on her,—look,—her lips—
Look there, look there! [He dies.

Edg. He faints!—My lord, my lord,—

Kent. Break, heart: I pr'ythee, break!

Edg. Look up, my lord. [hates him,

Kent. Vex not his ghost: O, let him pass! he That would upon the rack of this tough world Stretch him out longer.

Edg. O, he is gone, Indeed.

Kent. The wonder is, he hath endur'd so long: He but usurp'd his life.

Edg. Bear them from hence.—Our present busi-

Lear. I have a journey, sir, shortly to go;—
My master calls, and I must not say, no.

Edg. The weight of this sad duty I must obey;—
Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say.

Rule in this realm, and the g'ord'st state sustain.
Kent. I have a journey, sir, shortly to go;—
Friends of my soul, you twain
[To Kent and Edgar.

Enter, with a dead march.
ROME AND JULIET.

PERSONS REPRESENTED.

Escalus, Prince of Verona.
Paris, a young nobleman, kinsman to the Prince.
Montague, the heads of two houses, at variance with Capulet, each other.
An old Man, uncle to Capulet.
Romeo, son to Montague.
Mercutio, kinsman to the Prince, and friend to Romeo.
Benvolio, nephew to Montague, and friend to Romeo.
Tybalt, nephew to Lady Capulet.
Friar Laurence.
Friar John, of the same order.
Balthazar, servant to Romeo.
Sampson, servant to Capulet.
Abram, servant to Montague.

SCENE,—during the greater Part of the Play, in Verona: once in the Fifth Act, at Mantua.

PROLOGUE.

Two households, both alike in dignity,
In fair Verona, where we lay our scene,
From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,
Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean.
From forth the fatal loins of these two foes
A pair of star-cross'd lovers take their life;
Whose misadventur'd piteous overthrows
Do, with their death, bury their parents' strife.
The fearful passage of their death-mark'd love,
And the continuance of their parents' rage,
Which, but their children's end, nought could remove,
Is now the two hours' traffic of our stage;
The which if you with patient ears attend, [mend,]
What here shall miss, our toil shall strive to

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A publick Place.

Enter Sampson and Gregory, armed with swords and bucklers.

Sam. Gregory, o' my word, we'll not carry coals.
Gre. No, for then should we be colliers.
Sam. I mean, an we be in choler, we'll draw.
Gre. Ay, while you live, draw your neck out of the collar.

Sam. I strike quickly, being moved.
Gre. But thou art not quickly moved to strike.
Sam. A dog of the house of Montague moves me,
Gre. To move is—to stir; and to be valiant, is—to stand at it: therefore, if thou art mov'd, thou run'st away.
Sam. A dog of that house shall move me to stand: I will take the wall of any man or maid of Montague's.

Gre. That shows thee a weak slave; for the weakest goes to the wall.
Sam. True; and therefore women, being the weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall: therefore I will push Montague's men from the wall, and thrust his maids to the wall.
Gre. The quarrel is between our masters, and us their men.
Sam. 'Tis all one, I will show myself a tyrant: when I have fought with the men, I will be cruel with the maids; I will cut off their heads.
Gre. The heads of the maids?
Sam. Ay, the heads of the maids, or their maidenheads; take it in what sense thou wilt.

Gre. They must take it in sense, that feel it.
Sam. Me they shall feel, while I am able to stand: and 'tis known I am a pretty piece of flesh.
Gre. 'Tis well, thou art not fish; if thou hast, thou hast been poor John. Draw thy tool; here comes two of the house of the Montagues.

Enter Abram and Balthasar.

Sam. My naked weapon is out; quarrel, I will back thee.
Gre. How? turn thy back, and run?
Sam. Fear me not.
Gre. No, marry: I fear thee!
Sam. Let us take the law of our sides; let them begin.
Gre. I will frown, as I pass by; and let them take it as they list.
Sam. Nay, as they dare. I will bite my thumb at them; which is a disgrace to them, if they bear it.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?
Sam. I do bite my thumb, sir.
Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?
Sam. Is the law on our side, if I say—ay?
Gre. No.
Sam. No, sir, I do not bite my thumb at you, sir; but I bite my thumb, sir.
Gre. Do you quarrel, sir?
Abr. Quarrel, sir? no, sir.
Sam. If you do, sir, I am for you; I serve as good a man as you.
Abr. No better.
Sam. Well, sir.

Enter Benvolio, at a distance.

Gre. Say—better; here comes one of my master's kinsmen.
Sam. Yes, better, sir.
Abr. You lie.
Sam. Draw, if you be men.—Gregory, remember thy swashing blow.
Ben. Part, fools; put up your swords; you know not what you do.

Enter Tybalt.

Tyb. What, art thou drawn among these heartless hinds?
Turn thee, Benvolio, look upon thy death.
Ben. I do but keep the peace; put up thy sword, or manage it to part these men with me.
Tyb. What, drawn, and talk of peace? I hate the word,
As I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee:—

[They fight.]

Enter several partizans of both houses, who join the fray; then enter Citizens, with clubs. 1

1 Cit. Clubs, bills, and partizans! strike! beat them down!

[guests]

Down with the Capulets! down with the Monta.

Enter Capulet, in his gown; and Lady Capulet.

Cap. What noise is this?—Give me my long sword, ho!

La. Cap. A crutch, a crutch!—Why call you for

Cap. My sword, I say!—Old Montague is come,

And floursishes his blade in spite of me.

Enter Montague and Lady Montague.

Mon. Thou villain Capulet.—Hold me not, let me go.

La. Mon. Thou shalt not stir one foot to seek a [Enter Prince, with Attendants.

Prin. Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace,

Profaners of this neighbour-stained steel,—

Will they not hear?—what man, you beasts,—

That quench the fire of your pernicous rage

With purple fountain issuing from your veins,

On part with torture, from those bloody hands,

Throw your mistemper'd weapons to the ground,

And hear the sentence of your moved prince—

Three civil brawls, bred of an airy word,

By thee, old Capulet, and Montague,

Have thrice disturb'd the quiet of our streets;

And made Verona's ancient citizens

Cast by their grave beseeing ornaments,

To wield old partizans, in hands, as old,

Canker'd with peace, to part your canker'd hate:

If ever you disturb our streets again,

Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace.

For this time, all the rest depart away:

You, Capulet, shall go along with me;

And, Montague, come you this afternoon,

To know our further pleasure in this case,

To old Free-town, our common judgment-place.

Once more, on pain of death, all men depart.

[Exeunt Prince and Attendants; Capulet, Lady Capulet, Tybalt, Citizens, and Servants.

Mon. Who set this ancient quarrel is new

Speak, nephew, were you by, when it began?

Ben. Here were the servants of your adversary,

And yours, close fighting ere I did approach:

I did but put them; in the instant came

The fiery Tybalt, with him his sword prepar'd;

Which, as he breathed, defiance to my ears,

He swung about his head, and cut the winds,

Who, nothing hurt withal, hissed him in scorn:

While we were interchanging threats and blows,

Came more and more, and fought on part and part,

Till the prince came, who parted either part.

La. Mon. O, where is Romeo!—saw you him
Right glad I am, he was not at this fray, to-day?

Ben. Madam, an hour before the worship'st sun

Peep'd from the golden window of the east,

A troubled mind drove me to walk abroad;

Where,—underneath the grove of sycamore,

That westward rootheth from the city's side,—

So early walking did I see your son:

Towards him I made; but he was 'ware of me,

And stole into the covert of the wood:

I, measuring his affections by my own,—

That most are busied when they are most alone—

Purs'd my humor, not pursuing his,

And left him who gladdened me from me.

Mon. Many a morning hath he there been seen,

With tears augmenting the fresh morning's dew,

Adding to clouds more clouds with his deep sighs:

But all so soon as the all-cheering sun

Should to the further east begin to draw

The shady curtains from Aurora's bed,

Away from light steals home my heavy son,

And private in his chamber pens himself;

Shuts up his windows, locks fair daylight out,

And, in his own person, makes himself an artificial night.

Black and portentous must this humour prove,

Unless good counsel may the cause remove.

Ben. My noble uncle, do you know the cause?

Mon. I neither know it, nor can learn of him.

Ben. Is there you impartially by any means?

Mon. Both by myself, and many other friends:

But he, his own affections' counsellor,

Is to himself—I will not say, how true—

But to himself so secret and so close,

So far from sounding and discovery,

As is the bud bit with an envenomed worm,

Ere he can spread his sweet leaves to the air,

Or dedicate his beauty to the sun.

Could we but learn from whence his sorrows grow,

We would as willingly give cure, as know.

Enter Romeo, at a distance.

Ben. See, where he comes: So please you, step

I'll know his grievances, or be much denied.

[aside;

Mon. I would, thou wert so happy by thy stay,

To hear true shrift.—Come, madam, let's away.

[Exeunt Montague and Lady.

Ben. Good morrow, cousin.

Rom. Is the day so young?

Ben. But new shrift come mine.

Rom. Ah! sad hours seem long.

Was that my father that went hence so fast?

Ben. It was:—What sadness lengthens Romeo's hours?

Rom. Not having that, which, having, makes

Ben. In love?

Rom. Out—

Ben. Of love?

Rom. Out of her favour, where I am in love.

Ben. Alas, that love, so gentle in his view,

Should be so tyrannous and rough in proof!

Rom. Alas, that love, whose view is muffled still,

Should, without eyes, see pathways to his will!

Where shall we dine?—O me!—What fray was Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all.

Here? Here's much to do with hate, but more with love:—

Why then, O brawling love! O loving hate!

O any thing, of nothing first create!

O heavy lightness! serious vanity!

Mis-shapen chaos of well-seeming forms!

Feather offed, bright smoke, cold fire, sick health!

Still making sleep, that is not what it is!—

This love I feel, I that feel no love in this.

Dost thou not laugh?

Ben. No, coz, I rather weep.

Rom. Good heart's at what

Ben. At thy good heart's oppression.

Rom. Why, such is love's transgression—

Griefs of mine own lie heavy in my breast;

Which thou wilt propagate, to have it prest

With more of thine: this love, that thou hast shown,

Both add more grief to too much of mine own.

Love is a smoke rais'd with the fume of sighs;

Being purg'd, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes;

Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with lovers' tears;

When making sleep, that is not what it is!—

This love I feel, that feel no love in this.

Dost thou not laugh?

Ben. Soft, I will go along;

An if you leave me you, do me wrong.

Rom. Tut, I have lost myself; I am not here;

This is not Romeo, he's some other where.

Ben. Tell me in sadness, who she is you love.

Rom. What, shall I groan, and tell thee?

Ben. Groan? why no;

But sadly tell me, who.

Rom. Bid a sick man in sadness make his will:—

Ah, word ill urg'd to one that is so ill!—

In sadness, cousin, I do love a woman.

Ben. I aim'd so near, when I suppos'd you lov'd.

Rom. It is said, I rather good marks-man!—And she's fair I love.

Ben. A right fair mark, fair coiz, is soonest hit.
Act I.

ROmEO AND JULIET. 719

Rom. Well, in that hit, you miss: she'll not be hit
With Cupid's arrow, she hath Diana's wit:
And, in strong proof of chastity well arm'd,
From love's weak childish bow she lives unarm'd.
She will not stay the siege of loving terms,
Nor hide the encounter of assailing eyes,
Nor draw her hand to settling golden gold;
O, she is rich in beauty; only poor,
That, when she dies, with beauty dies her store.
Ben. Then she hath sworn, that she will still live chaste?
Rom. She hath, and in that sparing makes huge
For beauty, starv'd with her severity,[waste
Cuts beauty off from all posterity.
She is too fair, too wise; wisely too fair,
To merit bliss by making me despair:
She hath sworn true, and, in that vow,
Do I live dead, that live to tell it now?
Ben. Be rul'd by me, for think to her of.
Rom. O teach me how I should forget to think.
Ben. By giving liberty unto thine eyes;
Examine other beauties.
Rom. 'Tis the way
To call hers, exquisite, in question more:
These happy masks, that kiss fair ladies' brows,
Being black, put us in mind they hide the fair;
Yet, he is strucken blind, cannot forget
The precious thing of his mistress' breath.
Show me a mistress that is passing fair,
What doth her beauty serve, but as a note
Where I may read, who pass'd that passing fair?
Farewell; thou canst not teach me to forget.
Ben. I'll pay that doctrine, or else die in debt.[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Street.

Enter Capulet, Paris, and Servant.

Cap. And Montague is bound as well as I,
In penalty alike; and 'tis not hard, I think,
For men so old as we to keep the peace.
Par. Of honourable reckoning are you both;
And pity 'tis, you live't at odds so long,
But now, my lord, what say you to my suit?
Cap. But saying o'er what I have said before,
My child is yet a stranger in the world,
She hath not seen the change of fourteen years;
Let two more summers witter in their pride,
 Ere we may think her ripe to be a bride.
Par. Younger than she are happy mothers made.
Cap. And too soon marr'd are those so early made.

The earth, with swallow'd all my hope but she,
She is the hopeful lady of my earth:
But woo her, gentle Paris, get her heart,
My will to her consent is but a part;
An she agree, within her scope of choice
Lies my consent and fair according voice.
This night I hold an old accurst'd feet,
Whereto I have invited many a guest,
Such as I love; and you, among the store,
One more, most welcome, makes my number more.
At my poor house, look to behold this night
Captivating stars, that make dark heaven light:
Such comfort, as do lusty young men feel
When well apparel'd April on the heel
Of limping winter treads, even such delight
Among fresh feminine buds shall you this night
Inherit at my house; hear all, all see,
And like her most, whose merit most shall be:
Such, amongst view of many, mine, being one,
May stand in number, though in reckoning none.
Come, go with me.—Go, sirrah, trudge about
Through fair Verona; find those persons out,
Whose names are written there,[gives a paper.
and to them say,
My house and welcome on their pleasure stay.

[Exeunt Capulet and Paris.

Serv. Find them out, whose names are written here?
It is written—that the shoemaker should meddle with his yard, and the taylor with his last,
the fisher with his pencil, and the painter with his nests: but I am sent to find those persons, whose names are here writ, and can never find what names the writing person hath here writ. I must to the learned:—In good time.

Enter Benvolio and Romeo.

Ben. Tut, man! one fire burns out another's burning,
One pain is lessen'd by another's anguish;
Turn giddy, and be holp by backward turning;
One desperate grief cures with another's languisch:
Take thou some new infection to the eye,
And the rank poison of the old will die.
Rom. Your plaintiff's leaf is excellent for that.
Ben. For what, I pray thee?
Rom. For your broken shin.
Ben. Why, Romeo, art thou wise or mad?
Rom. Not mad, but bound more than a madman
Shut up in prison, kept without my food,[is Whipp'd, and tormented, and—Good-e'en, good fellow.
Serv. God gi' good e'en.—I pray, sir, can you read?
Rom. Ay, mine own fortune in my misery.
Serv. Perhaps you have learned it without book.
But I pray, can you read any thing you see?
Rom. Ay, if I know the letters, and the language.
Serv. Ye say you know the letters; Rest you merry!
Rom. Stay, fellow: I can read. [Reads.
Signior Martino, and his wife and daughters,
County Anselme, and his beauteous sisters; the lady widow of Vitruvio; Signior Placentio, and his lovely nieces; Mercutio, and his brother Valentine;
 Mine uncle Capulet, his wife, and daughters; My fair niece Rosaline; Livia; Signior Valentio, and his cousin Tybalt; Lucio, and the lively Helena.
A fair assembly; [gives back the note.] Whither should they come.
Serv. Up.
Rom. Whither?
Serv. To supper; to our house.
Rom. Whose house?
Serv. My master's.
Rom. Indeed, I should have asked you that before.
Serv. Now I'll tell you without asking: My master is the great rich Capulet; and if you be not of the house of Montagues, I pray, come and crush a cup of wine. Rest you merry.[Exit.
Ben. At this same ancient feast of Capulet's
Sups the fair Rosaline, whom thou so lov'st;
With all the admired beauties of Verona:
Go thither; and, with unattainted eye,
Compare her face with some that I shall show,
And I will make thee think thy swan a crow.
Rom. When the devout religion of mine eye Maintains such falsehood, then turn tears to fires!
And these,—who, often drown'd, could never die,
Transparent hereticks, be burnt for liars!
One fairer than my love! the all-seeing sun
Ne'er saw her match, since first the world began.
Ben. Tut! you saw her fair, none else being by,
Herself pois'd with herself in either eye;
But in those crystal scales, let there be weigh'd
Your lady's love against some other maid.
That I will show you, shining at this feast,
And she shall scarce show well, that now shows best.
Rom. I'll go along, no such sight to be shown,
But to rejoice in splendour of mine own.[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Room in Capulet's House.

Enter Lady Capulet and Nurse.

La. Cap. Nurse, where's my daughter? call her forth to me. [year old,— Nurse. Now, by my maiden-head,—at twelve
I bade her come.—What, lamb! what, lady-bird
God forbid!—where's this girl?—what, Juliet!
[Enter Juliet.

Jul. How now, who calls?
Nurse. Your mother.

Jul. Madam, I am here.

What is your will? [while, Cap. This is the matter:—Nurse, give leave to us. We must talk in secret.—Nurse, come back again; I have remember'd me, thou shalt hear our coun-thur know'st, my daughter's of a pretty age. [sel. Nurse. 'Faith, I can tell her age unto an hour.

La. Cap. She's not fourteen.

Nurse. I'll lay fourteen of my teeth, And yet to your teen be it spoken, I have but four,

She is not fourteen—How long is it now To Lammas-tide?

La. Cap. A fortnight, and odd days.

Nurse. Even or odd, of all days in the year, Come Lammas-eve at night, shall she be fourteen.

Susan and she,—God rest all Christian souls!— Were of an age.—Well, Susan is with God; She was too good for me: But, as I said, On Lammas-eve at night shall she be fourteen; That shall she, marry: I remember it well. 'Tis since the earthquake now eleven years; And she was wean'd,—I never shall forget it,— Of all the days of the year, upon that day: For I had laid warming to my dog,

Sitting in the sun under the dove-house wall, My lord and you were then at Mantua:— Nay, I do bear a brain:—but, as I said, When it did taste the wormwood on the nipple Of my dog, and felt it bitter, pretty fool! To see it tetchy, and fall out, with the dog,

Shake, quoth the dove-house: 'twas no need, I to bid me trudge. [trow, And since that time it is eleven years: For then she could stand alone; nay, by the rood, She could have run and waddled all about. For even the day before, she broke her brow: And then my husband—God be with his soul! 'A was a merry man:—took up the child: Yea, quoth he, doest thou fall upon thy face? Thouwert like a golden cockerel; And wilt thou then, Julie? and, by my holy dam, The pretty wretch left crying, and said—Ay: I to see now, how a jest shall come about. I warrant, an I should live a thousand years, I never should forget it; Wilt thou not, Julie? and, pretty fool, it stitted, and said—Ay. [he: La. Cap. Enough of this; I pray thee, hold thy peace. [laugh, Nurse. Yes, madam; yet I cannot choose but To think it should leave crying, and say—Ay: And if a warrant it had upper'd A bump as big as a young cockrel's stone; A parious knock; and it cried bitterly. Yet, quoth my husband, fall'st upon thy face? Thou wilt fall backward, when thou com'st to age; Wilt thou not, Julie? it stitted, and said—Ay. Jul. And stint thou too, I pray you, nurse, say I. Nurse. Peace, I have done. God mark thee to his grace! Thou wast the prettiest babe that e'er I nurs'd: An I might live to see thee married once, I have my wish.

La. Cap. Marry, that marry is the very theme I came to talk of:—Tell me, daughter Juliet, How stands your disposition to be married? Jul. For one that I am not of.

Nurse. An honour I were I not thine only nurse, I say, thou hast suck'd wisdom from thy teat.

La. Cap. Well, think of marriage now: younger Here in Verona, ladies of estate, [than you, Are made already mothers: by my count, I was not born nor yet under marriage that you are now a maid. Thus then, in brief:— The valiant Paris seeks you for his love.

Nurse. A man, young lady! lady, such a man, As all the world.—Why, he's a man of wax. La. Cap. Verona's summer hath not such a flower.

Nurse. Nay, he's a flower; in faith, a very flower.

La. Cap. What say you?—can you love the gentle-man?

This night you shall behold him at our feast:

Read o'er the volume of young Paris' face, And find delight writ there with beauty's pen, Examine every married lineament, And note not one angel's legends contain; And what obscure'd in this fair volume lies, Find written in the margin of his eyes.

This precious book of love, this unbound lover, To beautify him, only lacks a cover: This book in the sea; and 'tis much pride, For without the fair within to hide:

That book in many's eye doth share the glory, That in gold clasps locks in the golden story; So shall you share all that he doth possess, By having him, making yourself no less.

Nurse. How less? nay, bigger; women grow by men. [love

La. Cap. Speak briefly, can you like of Paris' Jul. I'll look to like, if looking liker move: But no more deep will I endart mine eye, Than your consent gives strength to make it fly.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Madam, the guests are come, supper serv- ed up, you called, my young lady asked for, the nurse cursed in the pantry, and every thing in exterior. nurse must hence to wait; I beseech you, follow straight.

La. Cap. We follow thee. Juliet, the county Nurse. Go, girl, seek happy nights to happy days. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. A Street.

Enter Romeo, Mercutio, Benoîllo, with Five or Six Maskers, Torch-Bearers, and others.

Rom. What, shall this speech be spoke for our Or shall we on without apology? [exceus

Ben. The date is out of such prolixity: We'll have no Cupid hood-wink'd with a scarf, Bearing a Tartar's painted bow of lath, Scaring the ladies like a cock: nor Noor without-book prologue, faintly spoke After the prompter, for our entrance: But let them measure us by what they will, We'll measure them a measure, and be gone. Rom. Give me a torch.—I am not for this am- Being but heavy, I will bear the light. [bling

Mer. Nay, gentle Romeo, we must have you dance.

Rom. Not I, believe me: you have dancing shoes, With such sole soles: I have a will to lead, So stakes me to the ground, I cannot: Mer. You are a lover; borrow Cupid's wings, And soar with them above a common bound. Rom. I am too sore empericed with his shaft, To soar with his light feathers; and so bound, I cannot bound a pitch above dill will: Under love's heavy burden do I sink. Mer. And, to sink in It, should you burden love; Too great oppression for a tender thing. Rom. Is love a tender thing? it is too rough, Too rude, too boistrous; and it pricks like thorn. Mer. If love be rough with you, be rough with love; Prick love for prickings, and you beat love down. Give me a case to put my visage in: A visor for a visor!—what care I, What curious eye doth quote deformities? Here are the beetle-brows, shall blush for me. Ben. Come, knock, and enter: and no sooner in, But everyone betake him to his sport.

Rom. A torch for me: let wantons, light of heart, Tickle the senseless rushes with their heels: For I am proverb'd with a grandsire phrase,— I'll be a candle-holder, and look on, The game was ne'er so fair, and I am done. Mer. Tut! dun's mouse, the constable's own word: If thou art dun, we'll draw thee from the mire Of this [save reverence] love, wherein thou stick'st Up to the ear.—Come, we burn day-light, ho.
Act I.

ROMEO AND JULIET. 721

SCENE V.—A Hall in Capulet’s House.

Musicians waiting. Enter Servants.

1 Serv. Where’s Potpan, that he helps not to take awae he shift a trencher! he scrape a trencher?

2 Serv. When good manners shall lie all in one or two men’s hands, and they unwash’d too; ’tis a toilful thing.

1 Serv. Away with the joint-stools, remove the court-cupboard, look to the plate:—good thou, are me a piece of marchpane; and, as thou lovest me, let the porter let in Sumbur Grindstone, and Neil.—Antony! and Potpan!

2 Serv. Ay, boy; ready.

Serv. You are look’d for, and called for, and sought for, in the great chamber.

2 Serv. We cannot be here, and there too.

—Cheerly, boys; be brisk a while, and the longer river take all.

[They retire behind.]

Enter Capulet, &c. with the Guests, and the Maskers.

Cap. Gentlemen, welcome! ladies, that have their toes
Unplagued’with corns, will have a bount with you:—
Ah, his, my mistress! which of you all [she,
Will now deny to dance?—she that makes dainty,
I’ll swear, hath corns; Am I come near you now?
You are welcome, gentlemen! I have seen the day, That I have worn a visor; and could tell
A whispering tale in a fair lady’s ear,

Such as would please:—’tis gone, ’tis gone, ’tis gone:

[play.

You are welcome, gentlemen!—Come, musicians,
A hall! a hall! give room, and foot it. girls.

[Musick plays, and they dance.

More light, ye knaves: and turn the tables up,
And quench the fire, the room is grown too hot—
Ah sirrah, this unlook’d-for sport comes well.

Nay, sit, say, sit, good cousin Capulet;
For you eat; I am past our dancing days:
How long is’t now, since last yourself and I
Were in a mask?

2 Cap. By’r lady, thirty years.

1 Cap. What, man! ’tis not so much, ’tis not so
’Tis since the nuptial of Lucentio,

[much.

Come pentecost as quickly as it will,
Some five and twenty years; and then we mask’d.

2 Cap. ’Tis more, ’tis more; his son is elder sir;

His son is thirty.

Will you tell me that?

His son was but a ward two years ago.

Rom. What lady’s that, which doth enrich the
Of younder knight?

[hand

Serv. I know not, sir.

[bright:

Rom. O, the doth teach the torches to burn
Her beauty hangs upon the cheek of night
Like a rich jewel in an Ethiop’s ear;
Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear! so
Shows a snowy dove troopings with crows,
As younder lady o’er her fellows shows.

The measure done, I’ll catch her place of stand,
And, touching hers, make happy my rude hand,
Did my heart love till now? forswear it, sight!
For I ne’er saw true beauty till this night.

Tyb. This, by his voice, should be a Montague:

Fetch me my rapier, but what I dares the slave
Come hither, cover’d with an antick face,
To fleer and scorn at our solemnity?

Now, by the stock and honour of my kin,
To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.

[you

1 Cap. Why, how like a kinsman? wherefore storm

Tyb. Uncle, this is a Montague, our foe;
A villain, that is hither come in spite,
To scorn at our solemnity this night.

1 Cap. Young Romeo is’t?

[trumpet

Tyb. This is that villain Romeo.

1 Cap. Content thee, gentle coz, let him alone
He bears him like a portly gentleman;
And, to say truth, Verona brings of him,
To be a virtuous and well-govern’d youth:
I would not for the wealth of all this town,

[Exeunt.
Enter Romeo.

Rom. Can I go forward, when my heart is here? Turn back, dull earth, and find thy center out.

[He climbs the wall, and leaps down within it.]

Enter Benvolio and Mercutio.

Ben. Romeo! my cousin Romeo!

Mer.

Romeo! humours! madman! passion! lover! Appear thou in the likeness of a sigh, Speak but one rhyme, and I am satisfied; Cry but,—Ah me! couple but—love and dove; Speak to my gossip Venus one fair word, One nick-name for her purblind son and heir, Young Adam Cupid, he that shot so trim, When king Cophetua lov'd the beggar-maid.— He heareth not, stirreth not, hemoveth not; The ape is dead, and I must conjure him.— I conjure thee by Rosaline's bright eyes, Be her high forehead, and her scarlet lip, By her fine foot, straight leg, and quivering thigh, And the demennes that there adjacent lie, That in thy likeness thou appear to us.

Ben. An if he hear thee, thou wilt anger him.

Mer. This cannot anger him: 'twould anger him. To raise a spirit in his mistress' circle Of some strange nature, letting it there stand Till she had laid it, and conjur'd it down; That were some spite; my invocation Is fair and honest, and, in his mistress' name, I conjure only but to raise up him.

[The two tramps lift a bundle and fly.]

Ben. Come, he hath hid himself among those To be consorted with the humorous night: Blind is his love, and best befits the dark.

Mer. If love be blind, love cannot hit the mark. Now will he sit under a medlar tree, And think this fruit was that kind of fruit, As maidens call medlars, when they laugh alone.— Romeo, good night;—I'll to my truckle bed; This field-bed is too cold for me to sleep: Come, shall we go?—

Romeo. Go, then: for 'tis in vain To seek him here, that means not to be found.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II

SCENE I.—An open Place, adjoining Capulet's Garden.

Enter Romeo.

ROMEO AND JULIET.
SCENE II.—Capulet's Garden.

Enter Romeo.

Romeo. He jests at scars, that never felt a wound.—[Juliet appears above, at a window.]

But, soft! what light through yonder window breaks? It is the east and Juliet is up, The sun rises, and my modesty subdues. Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon, Who is already sick and pale with grief, That thou her maid art far more fair than she: Be not her maid, since she is envious; Her vestal livery is but sick and green, And none but fools do wear it; cast it off. It is my lady; O, it is my love: O, that she knew she were!—

She speaks, yet she says nothing; What of that? Her eye discourses, I will answer it.—

I am too bold, 'tis not to me she speaks: Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven, Having some business, do entreat her eyes To twinkle in their spheres till they return. What if her eyes were there, they in her head? The brightness of her cheek would shame those As daylight doth a lamp; her eye in heaven Would through the airy region stream so bright, That birds would sing, and think it were not night. See, how she waves her hand!—O, that I were A glove upon that hand, That I might touch that cheek!

Jul. Ah me!—

Romeo. She speaks:—

O, sweet revenge, bright angel! for that art As glorious to this night, being o'er my head, As is a winged messenger of heaven Unto the white-upturned wond'ring eyes Of mortals, that fall to gaze on him, Whose beauty is like a morning cloud, And sailing upon the bosom of that star, O, Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou Deny thy father, and refuse thy name? [Romeo?] Or, if thou wilt not, but be sworn my love, And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

Romeo. Shall I bear more, or shall I speak at this? [Aside.

Jul. 'Tis but thy name, that is my enemy; Thou art thyself, though not a Montague. What's Montague? It is nor hand, nor foot, Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part Of belonging to a man. O, be some other name! What's in a name? that which we call a rose, By any other name would smell as sweet; So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd, Retain that dear perfection which he owes, Without that title:—Romeo, doff thy name; And for that name, which is no part of thee, Take all myself.

Romeo. I take thee at thy word: Call me but love, and I'll be new baptiz'd; Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

Juliet. What man art thou, that thus bescreen'd So stumptly on my counsel? [in night, Rom.]

By a name I know not how to tell thee who I am; My name, dear salut, is hateful to myself, Because it is an enemy to thee; Had I it written, I would tear the word.

Juliet. My ears have not yet drunk a hundred words Of that tongue's utterance, yet I know the sound; Art thou not Romeo, and a Montague?

Romeo. Neither, fair saint, if either thee dislike.

Juliet. How canst thou, thus hither, tell me, and wherewith? The orchard walls are high, and hard to climb. And the place death, considering who thou art, If any of my kinsmen find thee here. [these walls; Rom. With love's light wings did I o'er-perch For stony limits cannot hold love out: And that dares love attempt; Therefore thy kinsmen are no let to me.

Juliet. If they do see thee, they will murder thee.

Romeo. Alack, there lies more peril in thine eye, Than twenty of their swords; look thou but sweet, And I am proof against their enmity.

Juliet. I would not for the world, they saw thee here. [look at her eyes.

Romeo. I have night's cloak to hide me from their And, thou love me, let them find me here: My life were better ended by their hate, Than death procured, wanting of thy love.

Juliet. By whose direction found'st thou out this place?

Romeo. By love, who first did prompt me to in- He lent me counsel, and I lent him eyes. I am no pilot yet, yet, worth thou as far As that vast shore wash'd with the furthest sea, I would adventure for such merchandise.

Juliet. Thou know'st the mask of night is on my else would a maiden blush bespawl my cheek, For that which thou hast heard me speak to-night. Fain would I dwell on form, fain, fain delay What I have spoke; But farewell compliment! Dost thou love me? I know, thou wilt say—Ay; And I will take thy word: yet, if thou swears't, Thou may'st prove false; at lovers' perjuries, They say, Jove laughs. O, gentle Romeo, If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully: Or if thou think'st I am too quickly won, I'll frown, and be perverse, and say thee nay, So thou wilt woo; but, else, not for the world. In truth, fair gentle, I am but young, and therefore thou may'st think my haviour light: But trust me, gentleman, I'll prove more true Than those that have more cunning to be strange. I should have been more strange, I must confess, But that thou over-heard'st, ere I was ware, My true love's passion: therefore pardon me; And not impute this yielding to light love, Which the dark night hath so discovered.

Romeo. Lady, by yonder blessed moon I swear, That tips with silver all these fruitless tops,— Juliet. O, swear not by the moon, the inconstant That monthly changes in her circled orb, [moon Lest that thy love prove likewise variable.

Romeo. What shall I swear by?

Juliet. Do not swear at all; Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self, Which is the god of my idolatry, And I'll believe thee.

Romeo. If my heart's dear love—

Juliet. Well, do not swear: although I joy in thee, I have no joy of this contract to-night: It is too rash, too unadvis'd, too sudden; Too like the lightning, which doth cease to be, Ere one can say it lightens. Sweet, good night! This bud of love, by summer's sole respect, May prove a beauteous flower when next we meet. Good night, good night! as sweet repose and rest Come to thy heart, as that within my breast!

Romeo. O, wilt thou leave me so unsatisfied?

Juliet. What satisfaction canst thou have to-night?

Romeo. The exchange of thy love's faithful vow For mine.

Juliet. I gave thee mine before thou didst request And yet it would I give to thee again.

Romeo. Would'st thou have it? I withdraw it from purpose, love?

Juliet. But to be frank, and give it thee again. And yet I wish but for the thing I have: My bounty is as boundless as the sea, My love as deep; the more I give to thee, The more I have, for both are infinite. [Nurse calls within. I hear some noise within; Dear love, adieu!

Anon, good nurse!—Sweet Juliet, be true. Still but a little more, and I will send [Exit.

Romeo. O blessed blessed night! I am afeard, Being in night, all this is but a dream, Too flattering-sweet to be substantial.

Re-enter Juliet, above.

Juliet. Three words, dear Romeo, and good night, If that thy hent of love be honourable, [indeed Thy purpose marriage, send me word to-morrow,
By one that I'll procure to come to thee,
With willing wondrous grace, to perform the rite;
And all my fortunes at thy foot I'll lay,
And follow thee my lord throughout the world.

[Exit."

Jul. I come, anon:—But if thou mean'st not
I do beseech thee,—"[well,

Rom. [Within.] Madam.

Jul. By and by, I come:—
To cease thy suit, and leave me to my grief:
To-morrow will I send.

Rom. So thrive my soul,—
Jul. A thousand times good night! [Exit.

Rom. A thousand times the worse, to want thy light.

Jul. [books;

Love goes toward love, as school-boys from; But love from love, toward school with heavy looks.

[Retiring slowly.

Re-enter Juliet, above.

Jul. Hist! Romeo, hist!—O, for a falconer's
To lure this tassel-gentle back again! [voice
Bondage is hoarse, and may not speak aloud;
Else would I hear the cage where echo lies,
And make her airy tongue more hoarse than mine
With repetition of my Romeo's name.

Rom. It is my soul, that calls upon my name:
How silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues by night,
Like softest music to attending ears!

Jul. Romeo!—
Rom. My sweet!—
Jul. At what o'clock to-morrow
Shall I send to thee?

Rom. At the hour of nine.
Jul. I will not fail; 'tis twenty years till then.
I have forgot why I did call thee back.

Rom. Let me stand here till thou remember it.
Jul. I shall forget, to have thee still stand there,
Remembering now how I love thy company.

Rom. And I'll still stay, to have thee still forget,
Forgetting any other home but this.

Jul. 'Tis almost morning, I would have thee
And yet no further than a wanton's bird; [gone
Who lets it hop a little from her hand,
Like a poor prisoner in his twisted gryes,
And with a silk thread plucks it back again,
So loving-jealous of his liberty.

Rom. I would, I were thy bird.

Jul. Yet should I kill thee with much cherishing.
Good night, good night! parting is such sweet sorrow,
That I shall say—good night, till it be morrow.

[Exit.

Rom. Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast!—
'Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest! Hence will I to my ghostly father's cell;
His help to crave, and my dear hap to tell. [Exit.

SCENE III.—Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar Laurence, with a basket.

Fri. The grey-eid'morn smiles on the frowning night,
Checking in the eastern clouds with streaks of light;
And flecked darkness like a drunken reeds From forth day's path-way, made by Titan's wheels:
Now ere the sun advance his burning eye,
The day to cheer, and night's dank dew to dry,
I must up, fill this o'er cage of ours With baleful weeds, and precious-jucied flowers.
The earth, that's nature's mother, is her tomb;
What is her burying grave, that is her womb:\nAnd from her womb children of divers kind With looking on her natural bosom find;
Many for many virtues excellent,
None but for some, and yet all different.
O, mickle is the powerful grace, that lies in herbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities:
For nought so vile that on the earth doth live,
But to the earth some special good doth give;
Nor aught so good, but, strain'd from that fair use,
SCENE IV.—A Street.

Enter Benvolio and Mercutio.

Mer. Where the devil should this Romeo be?

Come he not home to-night?

Ben. Not to his father’s; I spoke with his man.

Mer. Ah, that same pale hearted wench, that Rosaline,

Torments him so, that he will sure run mad.

Ben. Tybalt, the kinsman of old Capulet,

Hath sent a letter to his father’s house.

Mer. A challenge, on my life.

Ben. Romeo will answer it.

No man, that can write, may answer a letter.

Ben. Nay, he will answer the letter’s master, how he dares, being dared.

Mer. Alas, poor Romeo, he is already dead!

O, he is the courser, and they the courtesans,

Of compliments; he fights as you sing prick-song, keeps time, distance, and proportion; rests me his minim rest one, two, and the third in your bosom: the very butcher of a silk button; a duellist; a gentleman of the very first house,—of the first and second cause: Ah, the immortal passado! the punto reverso! the hay!

Ben. The what?

Mer. The box of such antique, lispng, affectng, fantasticoes; these new runners of accents! — By Jesus, a very good blade! — a very tall man! — a very good whore!—Why, is not this a lamentable thing, grand sire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies, these fashion-mongers, these pardoness-mongers, who stand so much on the new form, that they cannot sit at ease on the old bench? O, their bones, their bones!

Enter Romeo.

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo.

Mer. Without his roe, like a dried herring:—O, flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified!—Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flowed in: Laura, to her lady, was but a kitchen-wench;—marry, she him, solely to be rhyme her: Dido, a dowdy; Cleopatra, a gypsy; Helen and Hero, hangers and harlots; Thisebe, a grey ey’d girl, but not to the purpose.—Signor Romeo, bon jour! there’s a French salutation to your French slop. You gave us the counterfeit fairly last night.

Rom. Good morrow to you both. What counterfeit did I give you?

Mer. The slip, sir, the slip: Can you not conceive?

Rom. Pardon, good Mercutio, my business was great; and, in such a case as mine, a man may strain courtesy.

Mer. That’s as much as to say—such a case as yours constrains a man to bow in the hams.

Rom. Many a time—court’sy.

Mer. Thou hast not hit me kindly, sir; I shall hit it.

Rom. A most courteous exposition.

Mer. Nay, I am the very pink of courtesy.

Rom. Pink for flower.

Mer. Right.

Rom. Why, then is my pump well flowered.

Mer. Well said: Follow me this jest now, till thou hast worn out thy pump; that, when the single sole of it is worn, the jest may remain, after the wearing, solely singular.

Rom. O single-soled jest, solely singular for the singleness!

Mer. Come between us, good Benvolio; my wits fail.

Rom. Switch and spurs, switch and spurs; or I’ll cry a match.

Mer. Nay, if thy wits run the wild-goose chase,

I have done; for thou hast more of the wild-goose in one of thy wits than, I am sure, I have in my whole five: Was I with you there for the goose?

Rom. Thou wast never with me for anything, when thou wast not there for the goose.

Mer. I will bite thee by the ear for that jest.

Rom. Nay, good goose, bite not.

Mer. Thy bite is a very bitter sweeting; it is a most sharp sauce.

Rom. And is it not well served in to a sweet goose?

Mer. O, here’s a wit of cheverel, that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broad!

Rom. I stretch it out for that word—broad; which added to the goose, proves thee far and wide a broad goose.

Mer. Why, is not this better now than groaning for love? now art thou sociable, now art thou Romeo; now art thou what thou art, by art as well as by nature; for this drivelling love is like a great natural, that runs lolling up and down and to hide his babbie in a hole.

Ben. Stop there; stop there.

Mer. Thou desirest me to stop in my tale against the hair.

Ben. Thou wouldst else have made thy tale large.

Mer. O, thou art deceived, I would have made it short: for I was come to the whole depth of my tale: and meant, indeed, to occupy the argument no longer.

Rom. Here’s goodly gear!

Enter Nurse and Peter.

Nur. A sill, a sail, a sail!

Ben. Two, two; a shirt, and a smock.

Peter. Nurse! Nurse! Peter.

Peter. Anon?

Nurse. My nurse, Peter.

Mer. Prythee, do, good Peter, to hide her face; for her fan’s the fairer of the two.

Nurse. God ye good morrow, gentlemen.

Mer. God ye good den, fair gentlemwoman.

Nurse. is it good den?

Mer. Tis no less, I tell you; for the bawdy hand of the dial is now upon the prick of noon.

Nurse. Out upon you! what a man are you?

Rom. One, gentlemwoman, that God hath made himself to man.

Peter. Bawdly hand.

Nurse. By my troth, it is well said.—For himself to mar, quoth a—Gentlemen, can any of you tell me where I may find the young Romeo?

Rom. I can tell you; but young Romeo will be older when you have found him, than he was when you sought him: I am the youngest of that name, for fault of a worse.

Nurse. You say well.

Mer. Yes, is the worst well? very well took, ifth: wisely, wisely.

Nurse. If you be he, sir, I desire some confidence with you.

Ben. She will indite him to some supper.

Rom. A hawd, a bawd, a bawd! So ho!

Rom. What hast thou found?

Nur. No hare, sir; unless a hare, sir, in a lenten pie, that is something stale and hoar ere it be spent.

An old hare hoar,

And an old hare hoar,

Is very good meat in lent;

But a hare that is hoar,

Is too much for a score, when it hoars ere it be spent.

Romeo, will you come to your father’s? we’ll to dinner thither.

Rom. I will follow you.

Peter. Farewell, ancient lady; farewell, lady, lady, lady.

Peter. Farewell Mercutio and Benvolio.

Nurse. Marry, farewell!—I pray you, sir, what saucy merchant was this, that was so full of his ropery?
A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear himself talk; and will speak more in a minute, than he will stand to in a month.

Nurse. Not upon any thing against me; I'll take him down an 'a were jestlier than he is, and twenty such Jacks; and if I cannot, I'll find those that shall. Scurvy knave! I am none of his flirt-gills; I am none of his skinks-mates.—And thou must live by thy legs, and suffer every knave to use on thy pleasure?

Pet. I saw no man use you at his pleasure; if I had, my weapon should quickly have been out, I warrant you: I dare draw as soon as another man, if I see occasion in a good quarrel, and the law on my side.

Nurse. Now, aforesaid God, I am so vexed, that every part about me quivers. Scurvy knave!—Pray you, sir, a word: and as I told you, my young lady bade me inquire you out; what she bade me say, I will keep to myself; but first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her into a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very gross kind of behaviour, as they say: for the gentlewoman is young; and, therefore, if you should deal double with her, truly, it were an indignity to offer to any gentlewoman, and very weak dealing.

Rom. Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress. I protest unto thee,—

Nurse. Good heart! and, if it be, I will tell her as she is, lord, she will be a joyful woman.

Rom. What wilt thou tell her, nurse? thou dost not mark me.

Nurse. I will tell her, sir;—that you do protest; which, as I take it, is a gentlemanlike offer.

Rom. But devise some means to come to shift this afternoon: And there she shall at friar Laurence' cell Be shriv'd, and married. Here is for thy pains.

Nurse. No, truly, sir; not a penny.

Rom. Go to; I say, you shall.

Rom. This afternoon, sir? well, she shall be there.

[Rom. And stay, good nurse, behind the abbey. Within this hour my man shall be with thee; And bring thine cords made like a tackled stair: Which to the high top-gallant of my joy Must be my convoy in the secret night. Farewell!—Be trusty, and I'll quit thy pains. Farewell!—Commend me to thy mistress. Nurse. Now God in heaven bless thee!—Hark you!]

Rom. What say'st thou, my dear nurse?

Nurse. Is your man secret? Did you ne'er hear Two may keep counsel, putting one away? [say— Rom. I warrant thee; my man's as true as steel. Nurse. Well, sir; my mistress is the sweetest lady—Lord, lord!—when 'twas a little prating thing,—O, there's a nobleman in one Paris, that would fain lay knife aboard; but she, good soul, had as lieve see a toad, a very toad, as see him. I anger her sometimes, and tell her that Paris is the properer man; but, I warrant you, when I say so, she looks as pale as any clout in the varsal world. Dost not rosemary and Romeo begin both with a letter?

Rom. Ay, nurse; What of that? both with an R. Ay, macker! That's the dog's name. R. is for the dog. No; I know it begins with some other letter: and she hath the prettiest sententious of it, of you and rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it. Nurse. Commend me to thy lady. [Exit.

Rom. Ay, a thousand times.—Peter! Pet. Anon?

Nurse. Peter, Take my fan, and go before.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Capulet's Garden.

Enter Juliet.

Jul. The clock struck nine, when I did send the In half an hour she promis'd to return. [nurse; Perchance, she cannot meet him:—that's not so.—O, she is lame! love's heralds should be thoughts. Which ten times faster glide than the sun's beams, Driving on with wind's assistance. Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves draw love, And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings. Now is the sun upon the highest hill Of this day's journey; and from nine till twelve Is three long hours,—yet she is not come. Had I not promised, and with oaths inflamed, And warm breastful blood, She'd be as swift in motion as a ball; My words would bandy her to my sweet love, And his to me: But old folks, many feign as they were dead; Unwieldy, slow, heavy and pale as lead.

Enter Nurse and Peter.

Jul. Now, good sweet nurse,—O lord! why look'st thou sad?

Though news be sad, yet tell them merrily; If good, thou shamt's the music of sweet news By playing it to me with so sour a face. An thou be a weary, give me a while:—

Fye, how my bones ache! What a jaunt have I had! Jul. I would, thou hadst my bones, and I thy news; [say, Nay, come, I pray thee, speak;—good, good nurse, Nurse. Jesus, What haste? can you not stay Do you not see, that I am out of breath? [awhile? Jul. How art thou out of breath, when thou hast To say to me—that thou art out of breath? [breath The excuse, that thou dost make in this delay, Is longer than the tale thou dost accuse. Is thy news good, or bad? answer to that; Say either, and I'll stay the circumstance: Let me be satisfied, Is't good or bad? Nurse. Well, you have made a simple choice; you know not how to choose a man: I hope I no, not he; though his face be better than any other, yet his leg excels all men's; and for a hand, and a foot, and a body, though they be not to be talked on, yet they are past compare: He is not the flower of courtesy,—but, I'll warrant him, as gentle as a lamb, to go thy ways, wench; serve God.—What, have you dined at home?

Jul. No, no: But all this did I know before; What says he of our marriage? what of that? Nurse. Lord, how my head aches! what a head Is twenty thousand pieces, [have I? My back o' t' other side,—O, my back, my back!— Beshrew your heart, for sending me about, To catch my death with jaunting up and down! Jul. I' faith, I am sorry that thou art not well; Sweet, sweet, sweet nurse, tell me, what says my love?

Nurse. Your love says like an honest gentleman, And a courtees, and a kind, and a handsome, And, I warrant, a virtuous:—Where is your mother? [in: Jul. Where is my mother?—why, she is with Where should she be? How oddily thou reply'st? Your love says like an honest gentleman,— Jul. Here's such a coil,—Come, what says, Nurse. And how you got leave to go to thirt-to-day? Jul. I have.

Nurse. Then he live you hence to friar Laurence' There stays a husband to make you a wife:—cell, Now comes the wanton blood up in your cheeks, This very afternoon; the Scarlet straight at any news. If ye to church: I must another way, To fetch a ladder, by the which your love Must climb a bird's nest soon, when it is dark: I am the drudge, and toil in your delight; But you shall bear the burden soon at night.
Go, I'll to dinner; 'tis now the eleventh hour.

Juliet Here's good fortune,—honest nurse, farewell.

Friar Laurence Therefore what, marry, and for hire. I'll go in the very morning. I fear not, nor will I begin to inquire. And in their triumph die, like fire and powder. Which, as they kiss, consume: The sweetest honey is loathsome in his own deliciousness, and in the taste confounds the appetite. Therefore, love moderately; long love doth so; Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow.

Enter Juliet.

Here comes the lady:—O, so light a foot
Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint:
A lover may bestride the gossamers
That idle in the wonton summer air,
And yet not fall; so light is vanity.

Juliet Good even to my ghostly confessor.

Friar Laurence Shall thank thee, daughter, for us both.

Juliet As much to him, else are his thanks too much.

Rom. Ah, Juliet, if the measure of thy joy
Be heaped like mine, and that thy skill be more
To blazon it, then sweeten with thy breath
This neighbour air, and let Richard's tongue
Unfold the imagin'd happiness that both
Receive in either by this dear encounter.

Juliet Conceit, more rich in matter than in words,
Brags of his substance, not of ornament;
They are but beggars, that can count their worth;
But my true love is grown to such excess,
I cannot sum up half my sum of wealth.

Friar. Come, come, with me, and we will make short work.

For, by your leave, you shall not stay alone,
Till holy church incorporate two in one. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A publick Place.

Enter Mercutio, Benvolio, Page, and Servants.

Ben. I pray thee good Mercutio, let's retire;
The day is hot, the Capulets abroad.
And, if we meet, we shall not 'scape a brawl;
For now, these hot days, is the mad blood stirring.

Mercutio Thou art like one of those fellows, that, when he enters the confines of a tavern, claps me his sword upon the table, and says, 'God send me no need of thee!' and, by the operation of the second cup, draws it on the drawer, when, indeed, there is no need.

Ben. Am I like such a fellow?

Mercutio Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in thy mood as any in Italy; and as soon moved to be moody, and as soon moody to be moved.

Ben. And what to?

Mercutio Nay, an there were two such, we should have none short, for one would kill the other. Thou! why thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more, or a hair less, in his beard, than thou hast. Thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason but because thou hast hazel eyes, and such a man, but such an eye, would say out such a quarrel? Thy head is as full of quarrels, as an egg is full of meat; and yet thy head hath been beaten as addle as an egg, for quarrelling. Thou hast quarrelled with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath wakened thy dog that hath lain asleep in the sun. Didst thou not fall out with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before Easter? with another, for tying his new shoes with old ribband? and yet thou wilt tutor me from quarrelling?

Ben. An I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the fee-simple of my life for an hour and a quarter.

Merc. The fee-simple? O simple!

Enter Tybalt, and others.

Ben. By my head, here come the Capulets.

Mercutio By my heel, I care not which.

Tybalt Follow me close, for I will speak to them.

Gentlemen, good den; a word with one of you.

Mercutio And but one word with one of us? Couple it with something; make it a word and a blow.

Tybalt Wilt thou? I am apt enough to that, sir, if you will give me occasion.

Mercutio Could you not take some occasion without giving?

Tybalt Mercutio, thou consort'st with Romeo.

Mercutio Consort? Do thou make me minstrels! an thou make minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but discords; here's my fiddlestick; here's that shall make you dance. 'Zounds, consort!

Ben. We talk here in the public haunts of men:
Either withdraw into some private place,
Or reason coldly of your grievances.

Mercutio Or else depart; here all eyes gaze on us.

Mercutio Men's eyes were made to look, and let them look.

I will not budge for no man's pleasure. I [gaze.

Enter Romeo.

Tybalt Well, peace be with you, sir! here comes my man.

Mercutio But I'll be hanged, sir, if he wear your marry, go before to field, he'll be your follower.

Tybalt Your worship in that sense may call him—man.

Romeo Tybalt, the hate I bear thee can afford
No better term than this—Thou art a villain.

Tybalt It beats the reason that I have to love thee.

Romeo Doth much excuse the appertaining rage
To such a greeting:—Villain am I none;
Therefore, farewell; I see, thou know'st me not.

Tybalt Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries
That thou hast done me; therefore turn, and draw.

Romeo I do protest, I never injur'd thee;
But love thee better than thou canst devise,
Till thou shalt know the reason of my love:
And so, good Capulet, which I tender
As dearly as mine own,—be satisfied.

Mercutio O calm, dishonourable, vile submission!
A la stoccatu! carries it away.

Romeo Tybalt, you rat-catcher, will you walk?

Tybalt What wouldst thou have with me?

Mercutio Good king of cats, nothing, but one of your nine lives; that I mean to make bold withal, and, as you shall use me hereafter, dry-beat the rest of the eight. Will you pluck your sword out of this pilcherry by the ears? make haste, lest mine be about your ears ere it be out.

Tybalt I am for you.

Romeo Gentle Mercutio, put thy rapier up.

Mercutio Come, sir, your passado.

Romeo Draw, Benvolio.

Tybalt Beat down their weapons:—Gentlemen, for shame
Forbear this outrage:—Tybalt—Mercutio—The prince expressly hath forbid this bandying
In Verona streets:—Hold, Tybalt—good Mercutio:— [Exeunt Tybalt, and his Partizans.

Romeo I am hurt;—A plague o'both your houses!—I am sped;

Tybalt Is he gone, and hath nothing?

Mercutio By what, art thou hurt?—Ay, ay, a scratch, a scratch; marry, tis enough.

Romeo Where is my page?—go, villain, fetch a surgeon.

Mercutio Courage, man; the hurt cannot be much.

Romeo No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide

as a church door; but 'tis enough, 'twill serve: ask for me to-morrow, and you shall find me a grave man. I am peered, I warrant, for this world:—
A plague o'both your houses!—'Zounds, a dog, a rat, a mouse, a cat, to scratch a man to death! a brave fellow is this Tybalt, that fights by the book of arithmetick!—Why, the devil, came you between us? I was hurt under your arm.

Rom. I thought all for the best.

Merc. Help me into some house, Benvolio, or I shall faint. A plague o'both your houses! They have made women's meat of me: I have it, and soundly too,—Your houses!

[Exeunt Mercutio and Benvolio.

Rom. This gentleman, the prince's near ally, Mercutio, hath got his mortal hurt In my behalf; my reputation stain'd.

With Tybalt's slander, Tybalt, that an hour Hath been my kinsman:—O sweet Juliet, Thy beauty hath made me effeminate, And in my temper soften'd valour's steel.

Re-enter Benvolio.

Benv. O Romeo, Romeo, brave Mercutio's dead; That gallant spirit hath aspird the clouds, Whose utterance here did sound the earth.

Rom. This day's black fate on more days doth de.

This but begins the woe, others must end. [peud;

Re-enter Tybalt.

Benv. Here comes the furious Tybalt back again. Rom. Alive! in triumph! and Mercutio slain! Away to heaven, respective lenity, And fire-eyed fury be my conduct now!—

Now, Tybalt, take the villain back again, That late thou gav'st me; for Mercutio's soul Is but a little way above our heads, Staying for thine to keep him company; Either thou, or I, or both, must go with him. Tyb. Thou wretched boy, that didst consort him Shalt with him hence. [here.

Rom. This shall determine that. [They fight; Tybalt falls.

Benv. Romeo, away, be gone! The citizens are up, and Tybalt slain:—[death, Stand not amaz'd,—the prince will doom thee If thou art taken;—hence!—be gone!—away! Rom. O! I am fortune's fool! Ben. Why dost thou stay? [Exit Romeo.

Enter Citizens, &c.

1. Cit. Which way ran he, that killed Mercutio? Tybalt, that murderer, which way ran he? Ben. There lies that Tybalt. 1 Cit. Up, sir, go with me; I charge thee in the prince's name, obey.

Enter P'i:u:ce, attended; Montague, Capulet, their Wives, and others.

Prin. Where are the vile beginners of this fray? Ben. O noble Prince, I can discover all The progress of this fatal brawl!—There lies the man, slain by young Romeo, That slew thy kinsman, brave Mercutio. La. Cap. Tybalt, my cousin!—O my brother's Unhappy sight! ah me, the blood is splitt'd [child! Of my dear kinsman!—Prince, as thou art true, For blood of ours, shed blood of Montague. O cousin, cousin! Ben. Benvolio, who began this bloody fray? Ben. Tybalt, here slain, whom Romeo's hand did

Romeo that spoke him fair, bade him bethink How nice the quarrel was, and urg'd withal Your high displeasure:—All this—uttered With gentle breath, calm look, knees humbly bow'd,— Could not take truce with the nurly spleen Of Tybalt, deaf to peace, but that he tits With piercing steel at bold Mercutio's breast; Who, all as hot, turns deadly point to point,

And, with a martial scorn, with one hand beats Cold death aside, and with the other sends It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity Retorts it: Romeo he cries aloud, [tongue, Hold, friends! friends, part! and swifter than his

His sword, which wounds both their fatal points, And 'twixt them rushes:—one moment, whose arm An envious thrust from Tybalt hit the life Of stout Mercutio, and then Tybalt fled:—

By and by comes back to Romeo, Who had not newly entered on his engage, And to't they go like light'ning; for ere I Could draw to part them, was stout Tybalt slain; And, as he fell, did Romeo turn and fly;

This is the truth, or let Benvolio die.

La. Cit. He is a kinsman to the Montague, Affection makes him false, he speaks not true: Some twenty of them fought in this black strife, And all those twenty could but kill one life: I beg for justice, which thou, prince, must give;— Romeo slew Tybalt, Romeo must not live. Prin. Romeo slew him, he slew Mercutio; Who now the price of his dear blood doth owe? Mon. Not Romeo, prince, he was Mercutio's friend: His fate concludes but, what the law should end, The life of Tybalt.

Prin. And, for that offence, Immediately we do exile him hence: I have an interest in your hate's proceeding, My blood for your rude brawls dosttho a bleeding: But thus I'll tune you with so sweet a sense; That you all repent the loss of mine: I will be deaf to pleading and excuses; Nor tears, nor prayers, shall purchase out abuses, Therefore use none: let Romeo hence in haste, Else, when that day is last, He bear hence this body, and attend our will: Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. — A Room in Capulet's House.

Enter Juliet.

Jul. Gallop apace, you fiery-footed steeds, Towards Phoebus' mansion; such a waggoner As Phaeton would whip you to the west, And bring in cloudy night immediately. Spread thy close curtain, love-performing night! That run-away's eyes may wink; and Romeo Leap to these arms, untalk'd of, and unseen— Lovers can see to do their amorous rites By their own beauteous: or, if they be blind, It best agrees with night.—Come, civil night, Thou sober-suited matron, all in black, And learn me how to lose a winning match, Play'd for a pair of statuesque maidens: Hood my unman'd blood bathing in my cheeks, With thy black mantle; till strange love, grown Think true love acted, simple modesty. [hold, Come, night!—Come, Romeo! come, thou day in For thou wilt lie upon the wings of night [night! Whiter than new snow on a raven's back. Come, gentle night; come, loving, black-brow'd night, Give me my Romeo: and, when he shall die, Take him and cut him out in little stars, And he will make the face of heaven so fine, That the all world will be in love with night, And pay no worship to the garish sun. O, I have bought the mansion of a love, But not possess'd it; and, though I am sold, Not yet enjoy'd:—So tedious is this day, As I sit on the night before some festival To an impatient child, that hath new robes, And may not wear them. O, here comes my nurse,

Enter Nurse, with cords.

And she brings wews; and every tongue, that speaks But Romeo's name, speaks heavenly eloquence. Now, nurse, what news? What hast thou there? That Romeo bade thee fetch? [the cords,
Role of Nurse:

Juliet: Ah me! what news! why dost thou wring thy hands?

Nurse: Ah well—a day! he's dead, he's dead, he's dead!
We are undone, lady, we are undone!—[dead
Alack the day!—he's gone, he's kill'd, he's dead!—
Juliet: Can heaven be so envious?—

Romeo can, though heaven cannot:—O Romeo, Romeo!—
Who ever had thought it?—Romeo! [thus?—
Juliet: What devil art thou, that dost torment me?
This torture should be roar'd in dismal hell.
Hath Romeo slain himself? say thou but I,
And that bare vow I shall poison more
Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice;
I am not I, if there be such an I;
Or those eyes shut, that make the answer, I.
Juliet: If he be slain, say I; if or not, no;
Brief sounds determine of my weal, or woe.

Nurse: I saw the wound, I saw it with mine eyes,—

God save the mark!—here on my manly breast:
A piteous corsé, a bloody piteous corsé;
Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaw'd in blood,
All in gore blood;—I swooned at the sight.

Juliet: O break, my heart!—poor bankrupt, break
To prison, eyes I ne'er look on thee!—[at once
Vile execrable Adams!—end morn here, end morn;
And thou, and Romeo, press one heavy bier!

Nurse: O Tybalt, Tybalt, the best friend I had!—
O courteous Tybalt! honest gentleman,
That ever lived to see thee dead!

Juliet: What storm is this, that blows so contrary?
Is Romeo slaughter'd? and is Tybalt dead?
My dear lov'd cousin, and my dearer lord?—
Then, dreadful trumpet, sound the general doom!
For who is living, if those two are gone?

Nurse: Tybalt is dead, and Romeo banish'd;
Romeo, that kill'd him, he is banish'd. [blood
Juliet: O God!—did Romeo's hand shed Tybalt's
Nurse: It did, it did; alas the day! it did.

Juliet: O serpent heart, hid with a frow'ring face!
Did ever dragon keep so fair a cave?
Beautiful tyrant! fiend angelical! Dove-feather'd raven! wolvish-ravening lamb! Dispersed substance of divinest show!
Just opposite to what thou justly seem'st, A damnable saint, an honorable villain.
O, nature! what hadst thou to do in hell,
When thou didst bow the spirit of a fiend
In mortal paradise of such sweet flesh?—
Was ever book, containing such vile matter,
So fair and foul?—no, if this fiendish deceit should dwell
In such a gorgeous palace?

Nurse: There's no trust,
No faith, no honesty in men; all perjur'd,
All forsworn, all naught, all dissemblers.—
Ah, where's my man! give me some aqua vitae:—
These griefs, these woes, these sorrows make me
Shame come to Romeo!—[old

Juliet: Blister'd he thy tongue,
For such a wish! he was not born to shame:
Upon his brow shame is as shameless flax.
For 'tis a throne where honour may be crown'd
Sole monarch of the universal earth.
O, what a beast was I to chide him!

Nurse: Will you speak well of him that kill'd your cousin?

Juliet: Shall I speak ill of him that is my husband?
Ah, poor my lord, what tongue small smooth thy name,
That I, thy three-hours' wife, have mangled it?—
But, with my hand, villain, didst thou kill my cousin?
That villain cousin would have kill'd my husband:
Back, foolish tears, back to your native spring;
Your tributary drops belong to woe,
Which you, mistaking, offer up to joy.
My husband lives, that Tybalt would have slain;
And Tybalt's dead, that would have slain my husband;
All this is comfort; Wherefore weep I then?

Some word there was, worser than Tybalt's death;
That murder'd me: I would forget it fain;—
But, O! it press'd me to my houses,
Like damned guilty deeds to sinners' minds.
Tybalt is dead, and Romeo—banish'd:
That—banish'd, that one word—banish'd,
Hath slain ten thousand Tybalt's. Tybalt's death
Was woe enough, if it had ended there;
Or,—if sour woes delights in fellowship,
And needly will be rank'd with other griefs,—
Why follow'd not, when she said—Tybalt's dead,
Thy father, or thy mother, nay, or both,
Which modern lamentations might have mov'd?—
But, with a rear-ward following Tybalt's death,
Romeo is banish'd,—to speak that word,
Is father, mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet,
All slain, all dead:—Romeo is banish'd,
There is no end, no limits, measure, bound,
In that word's death; no words can that woe sound.—
Where is my father, and my mother, nurse?
Nurse: Weeping and wailing over Tybalt's corse:—
Will you go to them? I will bring you thither.

Juliet: Wash they his wounds with tears? mine shall be spent,
When theirs are dry, for Romeo's banishment.
Take up those cords:—Poor ropes, you are bespotted
Both you and I; for Romeo is exil'd.
[To Nurse.]

Juliet: Hee. To comfort you:—I wot well where he is.
Hark ye, your Romeo will be here at night;
I'll to him; he is hid at Laurence cell.

Juliet: O find him! give this ring to my true knight,
And bid him come to take his last farewell.

SCENE III. Friar Laurence's Cell.

Friar. Romeo, come forth; come forth, thou fear-
Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts;—

Romeo: What less than Tybalt's day is the prince's
This grief, this banishment, more bitter to me:
On his lips, not body's death, but body's banishment.

Friar. Romeo, come forth; come forth, thou fear-
Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts;—

Romeo: What less than Tybalt's day is the prince's
This grief, this banishment, more bitter to me:
On his lips, not body's death, but body's banishment.

Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts;—

Romeo: What less than Tybalt's day is the prince's
This grief, this banishment, more bitter to me:
On his lips, not body's death, but body's banishment.
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin;
But Romeo may not: he is banished:
Pilots may do this, when I from this must fly;
They are free men, but I am banished.
And say'st thou yet, that exilè is not death?
Hast thou no poison mix'd, no sharp-ground knife?
No sudden death of death, though ne'er so mean,
But—banished—to kill me; banished?
O friar, the damned use that word in hell;
Howlings attend it: How hast thou the heart,
Being a divine, a ghostly confessor,
A sin-absolver, and my friend profess'd,
To manage with that word—banishment?
Fri. Thou fond mad man, hear me but speak a word.
Rom. O, thou wilt speak again of banishment.
Fri. I'll give thee armour to keep off that word; Advise thy sweet milk, philosophy,
To comfort thee, though thou art banished.
Rom. Yet banished?—Hang up philosophy!
Unless philosophy can make a Juliet,
Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom;
Helps not, it prevails not, talk no more.
Fri. O, then I see that madmen have no ears.
Rom. How should they, when that wise men have no eyes?
Fri. Let me dispute with thee of thy estate.
Thy name cannot speak with that thou dost not Wert thou as you are, Juliet thy love, [feel:]
An hour but married, Tybalt murdered,
Doting like me, and like me banished,
Then might'st thou speak, might'st thou tear
And fall upon the ground, as I do now, [thy hait,
Taking the measure of an unmade grave.
Fri. Arise; one knocks; good Romeo, hide thyself.
[Knocking within.
Rom. Not I; unless the breath of heart-sick groans,
Mist-like, infold me from the search of eyes.
Fri. I ask, how they knock!—Who's there?—
Romeo, arise;
Thou wilt be taken:—Stay a while:—stand up;—
Run to my study:—By and by:—God's will!
What willfulness is this?—I come, I come.
[Knocking.
Who knocks so hard? whence come you? what's this thy will? know my errand?—
Nurse. [Within.] Let me come in, and you shall
I come from lady Juliet.
Fri. Welcome then.
[Enter Nurse.
Nurse. O holy friar, O, tell me, holy friar,
Where is my lady's lord, where's Romeo?
Fri. There on the ground, with his own tears made drunk.
Nurse. O, he is even in my mistress' case,
Just in her case!—O woeful sympathy!
Piteous predicament!
Nurse. Even so lies she, [ing:
Blubbering and weeping, weeping and hubber.
Stand up; stand, stand, you are a man:
For Juliet's sake, for her sake, rise and stand;
Why should you fall into so deep an O?
Rom. Nurse! [all.
Nurse. Ah sir! ah sir!—Well, death's the end of Stand up; stand, you are a man:
For Juliet's sake, for her sake, rise and stand;
Why should you fall into so deep an O?
Rom. Nurse!
Nurse. O, she says nothing, sir, but weeps and
And now falls on her bed; and then starts up,
And Tybalt calls; and then on Romeo cries,
And then down falls again.
Fri. As if that name,
Shot from the deadly level of a gun,
Did murder her; as that name's cursed hand
Murder'd her kinsman. O tell me, friar, tell me,
In what vile part of this anatomy
Doth our name lodge; tell me, that I may sack
The hateful mansion. [Draws his sword.
Fri. Hold thy desperate hand:
Art thou a man? thy form cries out thou art;
Thy tears are womanish; thy wild acts denote
The unreasonable fury of a beast:
Unseemly woman, in a seeming man!
Or ill-beseeming beast, in seeming both!
Thou hast amaz'd me; by my holy order,
I thought thy disposition better temper'd.
Hast thou slain Tybalt? wilt thou slay thyself?
And slay thy lady too that lives in thee,
By doing damned hate upon thyself?
Why ral'llst thou on thy birth, the heaven, and earth?
[meet
Since birth, and heaven, and earth, all three do
In thee at once; which thou at once wouldst lose.
Fye, fye! thou sham'st thy shape, thy love, thy wit;
Which, like an usurer, abound'st in all,
And usest none in that true use indeed
Which shouldst yield thee love, and love, thy wit.
Thy noble shape is but a form of wax,
Dreggins from the valour of a man:
Thy dear love, sworn, but hollow perjury,
Killing that love which thou hast vow'd to cherish:
Thy best, that ornament to shape and love,
Mis-shapen. Why shouldst thou, in the conduct of both,
Like powder in a skill-less soldier's flank,
Is set on fire by thine own ignorance,
And thou dismember'd with thine own defence.
What, rouse thee, man! thy Juliet is alive,
For whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead;
There art thou happy: Tybalt would kill thee,
But thou slew'st Tybalt; there art thou happy too:
The law, that threatening death, becomes thy friend,
And turns it to exile; there art thou happy:
A pack of blessings lights upon thy eye.
Happiness courts thee in her best array;
But, like a misbe'dav'd and sullen wench,
Thou poust'st upon thy fortune and thy love:
Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable.
Go get thee to thy love, as was decreed,
Ascend her chamber, hence and comfort her;
But, look, thou stay not till the watch be set,
For then thou canst not pass to Mantua;
Where thou shalt live, till we can find a time
To bind thy marriage, receive thy friends,
Beg pardon of the prince, and call thee back
With twenty hundred thousand times more joy
Than thou went'st forth in lamentation.—
Go, before, nurse: commend me to thy lady;
And bid her hasten all the house to bed,
Which heavy sorrow makes them apt unto:
Romeo is coming.
Nurse. O Lord, I could have staid here all the
To hear good counsel: O, what learning is!—
My lord, I'll tell my lady you will come.
Rom. Do so, and bid my sweet prepare to chide.
Nurse. Here, sir, a ring she bid me give you, sir:
Hie you, make haste, for it grows very late.
[Exit Nurse.
Rom. How well my comfort is reviv'd by this!—
Fri. Go hence: Good night; and here stands
all your state;
Either begone before the watch be set,
Or by the break of day disgust'd from hence:
Sojourn in Mantua; I'll find out your man,
And bring all signifying from that place.
Every good hap to you, that chances here:
Give me thy hand; 'tis late; farewell; good night
Rom. But that a joy past joy calls out on me,
It were a grief, so brief to part with thee:
Farewell.
[Exit.
SCENE IV.—A Room in Capulet's House.
Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, and Paris.
Cap. Things have fallen out, sir, so unluckily,
That we have had no time to move our daughter
Look you, she lov'd her kinsman Tybalt dearly, And so did I;—Well; we were born to die,—
'Tis very late, she'll not come down to night:
I promise you, but for your company,
I would have been a-bed an hour ago.

Par. These times of woe afford no time to woo;
Madam, good night; commend me to your daughter.

[Exeunt.

La. Cap. I will, and know her mind early to-

To-night she's me'nd up to her heaviness.

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate tender Of marriage. This night's moon will be full and bright.
In all respects by me; nay more, I doubt it not. Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed;
Acquaint her here of my Paris's love;
And bid her mark you me, on Wednesday next—
But, soft; What day is this?

Par. Monday, my lord.

Cap. Monday? ha! ha! Well, Wednesday is too soon.
O' Thursday let it be;—o' Thursday, tell her,
She shall be married to this noble earl!—
Will you be ready? do you like this haste?
We'll keep no great ado;—a friend, or two. —
For hark you, Tybalt being slain so late, It may be thought we held him carelessly,
Being our kinsman, if we reveal much. Therefore, have you so many friends, And there an end. But what say you to Thursday?

Par. My lord, I would that Thursday were tomorrow.

Cap. Well, get you gone. O' Thursday be it Go to Juliet ere you go to bed. [Then:] Prepare her, wife, against this wedding-day.

Farewell, my lord.—Light to my chamber, ho! Afore me, it is so very late, that we May call it early by and by:—Good night.

Act 3.  ROMEO AND JULIET.

SCENE V.—Juliet's Chamber.

Enter Romeo and Juliet.

Jul. Wilt thou be gone? it is not yet near day:
It was the nightingale, and not the lark,
That pierc'd the fearful hollow of thine ear;
Nightly she sung on yon pomegranate tree;
Believe me, love, it was the nightingale.

Rom. It was the lark, the herald of the morn,
No mean bird, though but a country note:
Do lice the severing clouds in yonder east?
Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund day
Stands tiptoe on the misty mountain tops;
I must be gone and live, or stay and die.

Jul. What light in night? I know it, I:
It is some meteor that the sun exhales,
To be to thee this night a torch-bearer,
And light thee on thy way to Mantua:
Therefore stay yet, thou need'st not to be gone.

Rom. Let me be ta'en, let me be put to death;
I am content, so thou wilt have it so.
I'll say, yon grey is not the morning's eye,
'Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia's brow;
Nor that is not the lark, whose notes do beat
The heavy heaven so high aloft:
I have more care to stay than will to go:
Come death, and welcome! Juliet willeth it so.
How is't, my soul? let's talk, it is not day.

Jul. It is, it is, hie hence, he gone, away;
It is the lark that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh discords, and unpleasing sharps.
Some say, the lark makes sweet division;
This doth not so, for she divideth us:
Some say, the lark and loathed toad change eyes;
O, no! they had chang'd voices too!
Since arm from arm that voice doth us affray,
Hunting thee hence with hunts-up to the day.
O, now be gone; more light and light it grows.

Rom. More light and light?—more dark and dark our woes.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Madam.

Nurse. Your lady mother's coming to your The day is broke; be wary, look about.

[Exit Nurse.

Jul. Then, window, let day in, and let life out.

Rom. Farewell, farewell! one kiss, and I'll de-

[Roméo descends.

Jul. Art thou gone so? my love! my lord! my friend! I must hear from thee every day till the hour,
For in a minute these are many days:
O! by this count I shall be much in years,
Ere I again behold my Romeo.

Rom. Farewell! I will omit no opportunity That may convey my greetings, love, to thee.

Jul. O, think'st thou, we shall ever meet again?
Rom. I doubt it not; and all these woes shall For sweet discourses in our time to come. [serve Jul. O God! I have an ill-divining soul.
Methinks, I see thee, now thou art below,
As one dead in the bottom of a tomb:
Either my eyesight fails, or thou livest pale.

Rom. And trust me, love, in my eye so do you:
Dry sorrow drinks our blood. Adieu! adieu!

[Exit Romeo.

Jul. O fortune, fortune! all men call thee fick'le;
If thou art fick'le, what dost thou with him? That is renowned for his faith? Be fick'le, fortune;
For then, I hope, thou wilt not keep him long,
But send him back.

La. Cap. [Within.] Ho, daughter! are you up?

Jul. Who is't that calleth? is it my lady mother? Is she not down so late, or up so early?

What unaccustom'd cause procures her hither?

[Enter Lady Capulet.

La. Cap. Why, how now, Juliet?

Jul. Madam, I am not well.

La. Cap. Evermore weeping for your cousin's death?

Jul. What wilt thou wash him from his grave with An if thou could'st, thou could'st not make him live:
[love]
Therefore, have done: Some grief shows much of But much of grief shows still some want of wit.

Jul. Yet let me weep for such a feeling loss.

La. Cap. So shall you feel the loss, but not the Which you weep for.
[friend

Jul. Feeling so the loss, I cannot choose but ever weep the friend.

La. Cap. Well, girl, thou weep'st not so much for his death, As that the villain lives while he slay'd him.
Jul. What villain, madam?

Jul. Villain and he are many miles asunder.
God pardon him! I do, with all my heart;
And yet no man, like he, doth grieve my heart.

La. Cap. This is, because the traitor murderer lives.
[hands

Jul. Ay, madam, from the reach of these my Would, none but I might venge my cousin's death!

La. Cap. We will have vengeance for it, fear thou
Then weep no more. I'll send to one in Mantua— Where that same banish'd runagate doth live,— That shall bestow on him so sure a draught, That he shall soon keep Tybalt company: And then I hope thou wilt be satisfied.

Jul. Indeed, I never shall be satisfied With Romeo, till I behold him—dead— Is my poor heart so for a kinsman vex'd— Madam, if you could find out but a man To bear a poison, I would temper it That Romeo should, upon receipt thereof, Soon sleep in quiet,—O, how my heart aches To hear him nam'd,—and cannot come to him,— To wreak the love I bore my cousin Tybalt Upon his body that hath slay'd him!

La. Cap. Find thou the means, and I'll find such But now I'll tell thee joyful tidings, girl.
[man.

Jul. And joy comes well in such a needful time.
What are they, I beseech your ladyship?
La. Cap. Well, well, thou hast a careful father, O, who, to put thee from thy heaviness, [child];
Hath, being a sudden day of joy,
That thou expect'st not, nor I look'd not for.
Jul. Madam, in happy time, what day is that?
The gallant, young, and noble gentleman, [morn, The Friar's, and St. Peter's church,]—shall Have to her match'd; and having now provided
A gentleman of princely parentage,
Of fair, comely, youthful, and nobly train'd,
Staff'd (as they say,) with honourable parts,
Propos'd one as one's heart could wish a man,—
And then to have a wretched pulling fool,
A whining mammet, in her fortune's tender,
To answer—I'll not need,—I cannot love,
I am too young;—I pray you, pardon me:
But, an you will not, be heard, I pardon you:
Graze where you will, you shall not house with me:
Look to't, think not, I do not use to jest.
Thursday is near; lay hand on heart, advise:
An you be mine, I'll give you to my friend;
An you be not, hang, beg, starve, die the streets,
For, by my soul, I'll bear acknowledge thee,
Nor what is mine shall never do thee good:
Trust to't, bethink you, I'll not be forsworn. [Exit.
Jul. Is there no pity sitting in the clouds,
That sees into the bottom of my grief?
O, sweet my mother, cast me not away!—
Delay this marriage for a month, a week;
Or, if you do not, make the bridal
In that dim monument where Tybalt lies. [word;
La. Cap. Talk not to me, for I'll not speak a
As thou hast been for I have done with thee. [Exit.
Jul. O God!—O nurse! how shall this be prevented?
My husband is on earth, my faith in heaven;
How shall that faith return again to earth,
Unless that husband send it me from heaven
By leaving earth?—comfort me, counsel me.
Alack, alack, that heaven should practise stratagies—
Upon so soft a subject as myself!—
[gems What say'st thou? hast thou not a word of joy?
Some comfort, nurse.
Nurse. 'Faith, here 'tis: Romeo
Is banished; and all the world to nothing,
That he dares ne'er come back to challenge you;
Or, if he do, it needs must be by stealth.
Then, since the case so stands as now it doth,
I think it best you married with the country,
O, he's a lovely gentleman!
Romeo's a dishclout to him; an eagle, madam,
Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye,
As Paris hath. [Exit.
Jul. I think you are happy in this second match;
For it excels your first: or if it did not,
Your first is dead; or 'twere as good he were,
As living here and you no use of him.
Jul. Speakst thou from thy heart?
Nurse. From my soul too;
Or else beshearm them both.
Jul. Amen!—
Nurse. To what?
Jul. Tell, thou hast comforted me marvellous
Go in; and tell my lady I am gone,
Having disprais'd my father, to Laurence's cell,
To make confession, and to be absolv'd.
Nurse. Marry, I will; and this is wisely done.
[Exit.
Jul. Ancient damnation! I most wicked fiend!
Is it more sin—to wish me thus forsorn,
Or to dispaire my lord with that same tongue
Which she hath prais'd him with above compare
So many thousand times?—Go, counsellor;
Thou art innocent from henceforth; thou shalt be twain—
I'll to the friar, to know his remedy;
If all else fail, myself have power to die. [Exit.
From off the battlements of yonder tower;
Or walk in thievish ways; or bid me lark
Where serpents are; chain me with roaring bears;
Or shut me nightly in a charnel-house,
O'er-cover'd quite with dead men's rattling bones,
With reeky shanks, and yellow Chapless sculls;
Or bid me go to father Christmas' grave,
And hide me with a dead man in his shroud;
Things, that, to hear them told, have made me
And I will do it without fear or doubt, [tremble;]
To live an unstate'd wife to my sweet love. [sent
To marry Paris;] Wednesday is to-morrow;
To-morrow night look that thou lie alone,
Let not thy nurse lie with thee in thy chamber:
Take thou this phial, being then in bed,
And this distilled liquor drink thou off:
When, presently, through all thy veins shall run
A cold and drowsy humour, which shall seize
Each vital spirit; for no pulse shall keep
His natural progress, but peruse to beat:
No warmth, no breath, shall testify thou liv'st;
The roses in thy lips and cheeks shall fade
To pearly ashes; thy eyes' windows fall,
Like death, when he shuts up the day of life;
Each part, depriv'd of supple governance,
Shall stiff, and stark, and cold, appear like death;
And in this hour, when all likens our drust
Thou shalt remain full two and forty hours,
And then awake as from a pleasant sleep.
Now when the bridgesome in the morning comes
To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou dead:
Then (as the manner of our country is)
In thy best robes uncover'd on the bier,
Thou shalt be borne to that some ancient vault,
Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie.
In the mean time, against thou shalt awake,
Shall Romeo by my letters know our drift;
And hither shall he come; and he and I
Will watch thy waking, and that very night
Shall Romeo bear thee hence to Mantua.
And this shall free thee from this present shame;
If no constant toy, nor womanish fear,
Abate thy valour in the acting it.
Jul. Give me, O give me! tell me not of fear.
Fri. Hold; get you gone, be strong and prosperous
In this resolution: I'll send a friar with speed
To Mantua, with my letters to thy lord.
Jul. Love, give me strength! and strength shall help afford.
Farewell, dear father! [Exit.

SCENE II.—A Room in Capulet's House.

Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, Nurse, and Servants.

Cap. So many guests invite as here are writ.—

[Exit Servant.

Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks.

2 Serv. You shall have none ill, sir; for I'll try
If they canlick their fingers.

Cap. How canst thou try them so?

2 Serv. Master, this is an ill cook that cannot lick his own fingers: therefore he, that cannot lick his fingers, goes not with me.

Cap. Go, begone.—

[Exit Servant.

We shall be much unfurnish'd for this time.—

What is my daughter gone to friar Laurence?

Nurse. Ay, forsooth.

Cap. Well, he may chance do some good on her: A peevish self-will'd harlotry it is. [Enter Juliet.

Nurse. See, where she comes from shrift with merry look. [been gadding?

Cap. How now, my headstrong? where have you
Jul. Where I have learn'd me to repent the sin
Of disobedient opposition
To you, and your behests; and am enjoin'd
By holy Laurence to fall prostrate here,
And beg your pardon:—Pardon, I beseech you
Henceforward I am ever true'ld by you.
Cap. Send for the county; go tell him of this; I'll have this knot knit up to-morrow morning.

Jul. I met the youthful lord at Laurence' cell; And gave him what became love I might, Not stepping o'er the bounds of modesty: [np] Why, I am glad on't; this is well.—stand This is as't should be. Let me see the county; Ay, marry, go, I say, and fetch him hither.— Now, afore God, this reverend holy friar, All our whole city is much bound to him.

Jul. Nurse, will you go with me into my closet, To help me sort such needful ornaments As you think fit to furnish me-to-morrow?

La. Cap. No, not till Thursday; there is time enough.

Cap. Good night, go with her;—we'll to church to-morrow. [Exeunt Juliet and Nurse.

La. Cap. We shall be short in our provision; 'tis now near night.

Cap. Tush! I will stir about, And all things shall be well, I warrant thee, wife: Go thou to Juliet, help to deck up her; I'll not to bed to-night:—let me alone; I'll play the housewife for this once.—What, ho!— They are all forth.—Well, I will walk myself To county Paris, to prepare him Against to-morrow: my heart is wound'rous light, Since this same wayward girl is so reclaim'd. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Juliet's Chamber.

Enter Juliet and Nurse.

Jul. Ay, those attires are best:—But, gentle I pray thee, leave me to myself to-night;—nurse, For I have need of many orisons. To move the heavens to smile upon my state, Which, well thou know'st, is cross and full of sin.

Enter Lady Capulet.

La. Cap. What, are you busy? do you need my help?

Jul. No, madam; we have cull'd such necessaries As are behoveful for our state to-morrow; So please you, let me now be left alone, And let the nurse this night sit up with you; For, I am sure, you have your hands full all, In this so sudden business.

La. Cap. Good night! Get thee to bed, and rest; for thou hast need. [Exeunt Capulet and Nurse.

Jul. Farewell! God knows, when we shall meet again. I have a faint cold fear thrills through my veins, That almost freezes up the heat of life: I'll call them back again to comfort me;— Nurse! What should she do here? My dismal scene I needs must act alone. Come, phil. — What if this mixture do not work at all? Must I of force be married to the county? — No, no;—this shall forbid it:—lie thou there. — [Laying down a dagger.

What if it be a poison, which the friar
Subly hath minister'd to have me dead; Let in this marriage he should be dishonour'd, Because he married me before his time? I fear it is; and yet, methinks, it should not, For he hath still been tried a holy man: I will not entertain so had a thought.— How if, when I am laid into the tomb, I wake before the time that Romeo comes?

Oh! or, if I live, is it not very like, The horrible contumelies of death and night, Together with the terror of the place,— As in a vault, an ancient receptacle, Where, for these many hundred years, the bones Of all my buried ancestors are pack'd; Where bloody Tybalt, yet hut green in earth, Lies fest'ring in his shroud; where, as they say, At some hours in the night spirits resort; — Alack, alack! is it not like, that I, So early waking,—what with loathsome smells; And shrieks like mandrakes torn out of the earth. That living mortals, hearing them, run mad; — O! if I wake, shall I not be distraught, Environed with all these hideous fears? And madly play with my forefathers' joints? And pluck to pieces Tybalt from his shroud? And in this rage, with some great kinsman's bone, As with a club, dash out my desperate brains? O, look! methinks, I see my cousin's ghost Seeking out Romeo, that did spitt his body Upon a hapless point:—Stay Tybalt, stay!

Romeo, I come! this do I drink to thee. [She throws herself on the bed.

SCENE IV.—Capulet's Hall.

Enter Lady Capulet and Nurse.

La. Cap. Hold, take these keys, and fetch more nurse.

Nurse. They call for dates and quinces in the pastry.

Enter Capulet.

Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir! the second cock hath crow'd.

The curfew bell hath rung, 'tis three o'clock: Look to the hark'd meats, good Angelica: Spare not for cost.

Nurse. Go, go, you cot-queen, go,

Get you to bed; 'tis faith, you'll be sick to-morrow For this night's watching.

[Now Cap. No, not a whit; What! I have watch'd ere all night for lesser cause, and ne'er been sick.

La. Cap. Ay, you have been a mouse-hunt in your time; But I will watch you from such watching now.

[Exeunt Capulet and Nurse.

Cap. A jealous-hood, a jealous-hood!—Now, What's there?

[fellow,

Enter Servants, with spits, logs, and baskets.

1 Serv. Things for the cook, sir; but I know not what, sir.

Cap. Make haste, make haste. [Exeunt Servants.

[Serv. Srrah, fetch drier logs; Call Peter, he will show thee where they are.

2 Serv. I have a head, sir, that will find out logs, And never trouble Peter for the matter. [Exeunt.

Cap. As I am well said: A merry whoreson! ha, Thou shalt be head-gear.—Good faith, 'tis day: The county will be here with musick straight, [Musick within.

For so he said he would. I hear him near.

Nurse.— Wife!—what, ho!—what, nurse, I say!

Enter Nurse.

Go, waken Juliet, go, and trim her up; I'll go and chat with Paris:—He, make haste, Make haste! the bridegroom he is come already: Make haste, I say. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Juliet's Chamber-Juliet on the Bed.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Mistress!—what, mistress!—Juliet fast, I warrant her, she . Why, where is she?—madam!—you slug-a-bed! — Why, love, I say!—madam! sweet-heart!—why, bride! — [Now; What, not a word?—you take your penniesworth Sleep for a week; for the next night, I warrant, The county Paris hath set up his rest, And rest but little. — God forgive me, (Marry, and amen!) how sound is she asleep! I needs must wake her.—Madam, madam, madam, let the county take you in your bed; I dam: He'll fright you up, i' faith.—Will it not be? What, what, drest! and in your clothes! and down again!
Act 4.  ROMEO AND JULIET.

I must needs wake you: Lady! lady! lady! Alas! alas! — Help! help! help! my lady's dead!—
O, well-a-day, that ever I was born!—
Some aqua-vita, ho!—my lord! my lady!

Enter Lady Capulet.

La. Cap. What noise is here?—
Nurse. La. Cap. O woful day!—
La. Cap. What is the matter?—
Nurse. Look, look! O heavy day!—
La. Cap. O me, O me!—my child, my only life;
Revenge, look up, or I will die with thee:—
Help, help—call help.

Enter Capulet.

Cap. For shame, bring Juliet forth; her lord is come.

Nurse. She's dead, deceas'd; she's dead; alack
La. Cap. Alack the day! she's dead, she's dead;

Cap. Ha! let me see her:—Out, alas! she's cold;
Her blood is settled, and her joints are stiff;
Life and these lips have long been separated;
Death lies on her, like an untimely frost
Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.
Accursed time! unfortunate old man!

Nurse. O lamentable day!

La. Cap. O woful time!

Cap. Death, that hath ta'en her hence to make me wait,
Ties up my tongue, and will not let me speak.

Enter Friar Laurence and Paris, with musicians.

Fri. Come, is the bride ready to go to church?—
Cap. Ready to go, but never to return:
O son, the night before thy wedding day
Hath death lain with thy bride:—See, there she flowered as she was, doweled by him:—
[liès,
Death is my son-in-law, death is my heir;
My daughter he hath wedded! I will die, And leave him all; life leaving, all is death.
Par. Have I thought long to see this morning's And doth save me such a sight as this?—[face.
La. Cap. Accurs'd, unhappy, wretched, hateful!
Most miserable hour, that e'er time saw [day!—
In lasting labour of his pilgrimage!
But one, poor one, was ever woe-begone child, But one thing to rejoice and solace in, And cruel death hath catch'd it from my sight.

Nurse. O woe! O woful, woful day!

Most lamentable day! most woful day,
That ever I did or ever beheld,
O day! O day! O hateful day!
Never was seen so black a day as this:
O woful day, O woful day!

Par. Beguild'd, divorced, wronged, spited, slain
Most detestable death, by thee beguild'd,
By cruel cruel thee quite overthrown,
O love! O life! not life, but love in death!

Cap. Despair'd, distressed, hated, martyr'd, kill'd!—

Unequallable mine! why canst not thou
To murder murder our solemnity?—
O child! O child!—my soul, and not my child!—
Dead art thou, dead!—alack! my child is dead!—
And, with my child, my joys are buried.

Fri. Peace, ho, for one time! confusion cure lives
In these confusions. Heaven and yourself [not
Had part in this fair maid; now heaven hath all,
And all the better is it for the maid:
Your part in her you could not keep from death;
But heaven keeps his part in eternal life.
The rest you sought was her promotion;
For 'twas your heaven, she should be advance'd:—
And weep ye now, seeing she is advance'd,
Above the clouds, as high as heaven itself?—
O, in this love, you love your child so ill,
That you run mad, seeing that she is well:
She's not well married, that lives married long;
But she's best married, that dies married young.
Dry up your tears, and stick your rosemary
On this fair corse; and, as the custom is,
In all her best array bear her to church:

For though fond nature bids us all lament,
Yet nature's tears are reason's errand.
Cap. All things, that we ordained festival,
Turn from their office to black funeral:
Our instruments, to melancholy bells;
Our wedding cheer, to a sad burial feast;
Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change;
Our bridal flowers serve for a buried corse;
And all things change them to the contrary.
Fri. Sir, go you in,—and, madam, go with
And go, sir Paris;—every one prepare [him—
To follow this fair corse unto her grave:
The heavens do lower upon you, for some ill;
Move them no more, by crossing their high will.

1 Mus. 'Faith, we may put up our pipes, and be gone.

Nurse. Honest good fellows, ah, put up, put up,
For, well you know, this is a pitiful case.

[Exit Nurse.

1 Mus. Ay, by my troth, the case may be amended.

Enter Peter.

Pet. Musicians, O, musicians, Heart's ease, heart's ease; O, an you will have me live, play—heart's ease.

1 Mus. Why heart's ease?—
Pet. O musicians, because my heart itself plays—
My heart is full of moe: O, play me some merry dump, to comfort me.

2 Mus. Not a dump we; 'tis no time to play now.

Pet. You will not then?

Mus. No.

Pet. I will then give it you soundly.

1 Mus. What will you give us?

Pet. No money, on my faith; but the gleeke: I will give you the minstrel.

1 Mus. Then will I give you the serving-creature.

Pet. Then will I lay the serving-creature's dagger on your pate. I will carry no crotches: I'll say:—'Gentlemen, I'll give you my dagger.' Do you note me?

1 Mus. An you re us, and fiu us, you note us.

2 Mus. I' pray you, put up your dagger, and put out your wit.

Pet. Then have at you with my wit; I will dry-beat you with an iron wit, and put up my iron dagger:—Answer me like men:

When griping grief the heart doth wound,
And doleful dumps the mind oppress,
Then musick, with her silver sound,

Why, silver sound? why, musick with her silver sound?

What say you, Simon Catling?

1 Mus. Marty, sir, because silver hath a sweet sound.

Pet. Pretty! What say you, Hugh Rebeck?

2 Mus. I say—silver sound, because musicians sound for silver.

Pet. Pretty too! What say you, James Sound-bast?

3 Mus. 'Faith, I know not what to say.

Pet. O, I cry you mercy! you are the singer: I will say for you,—It is—musick with her silver sound, because such fellows as you have seldom gold for sound.

Then musick with her silver sound,

With speedy help doth lend redress.

[Exit, singing.

1 Mus. What a pestilent knife is this same?

2 Mus. Hang him, Jack! Come, we'll in here; tarry for the mourners, and stay dinner. [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Mantua. A Street.

Enter Romeo.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering eye of sleep,
My dreams presage some joyful news at hand:
Enter Balthasar.

News from Verona!—How now, Balthasar?
Dost thou not bring me letters from the friar?
How doth my lady? Is my father well?
How fares my Juliet? That I ask again;
For nothing can be ill, if she be well.
Bath. Then she is well, and nothing can be ill;
Her body sleeps in Capel's monument,
And her immortal part with angels lives;
I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault,
And presently took post to tell it you:
O pardon me for bringing these ill news.
Since you did leave it for my office, sir,
Rom. Is it even so? then I defy you, stars!—
Thou know'st my lodging; get me ink and paper,
And hire post-horses; I will hence to-night.
Bal. Pardon me, sir, I will not leave you thus;
Your words are pale and wild, and do import
Some misadventure.

Rom. Tush, thou art deceiv'd;
Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do:
Hast thou no letters to me from the friar?
Bal. No, my good lord.

Rom. No matter; get thee gone.
And hire those horses; I'll be with thee straight.

[Exit Balthasar.

Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night.
Let's for a means:—O, mischief! thou art swift
To enter into the thoughts of diff'rent men!
I do remember an apothecary,—
And hereabouts he dwells, whom late I noted
In tatter'd weeds, with overweighing brows,
Culling of simples; meager were his looks,
Sharp misery had worn him to the bones:
And in his needy shop a tortoise hung,
An alligator stuff'd, and other skins
Of ill-shap'd fishes; and about his shelves
A beggarly account of empty boxes,
Green earthen pots, bladders, rusty seeds,
Remnants of packthread, and old cakes of roses,
Were thinly scatter'd, to make up a show.
Notting this penny, to myself I said—
An if a man did need a poison now,
Whose sole is present death in Mantua,
Here live I, who am a Roman; and I know
It, this same thought did but fore-run my need;
And this same needy man must sell it me.
As I remember, this should be the house:
Being holiday, the beggar's shop is shut:—
What, ho! apothecary!

Enter Apothecary.

Ap. Who calls so loud?
Rom. Who calls so loud?—I see, that thou art
Hollinger; there is forty ducats in the house [poor;
A dram of poison; such soon-speeding gear
As will disperse itself through all the veins,
That the life-weary taker may fall dead;
And that the trunk may be discharg'd of breath
As soon as hasty powder.
Doth hurry from the fatal cannon's womb.
Ap. Such mortal drugs I have; but Mantua's law
Is death, to any he that utter them.

Rom. Art thou so bare, and full of wretchedness,
And fear'st to die? famine is in thy cheeks,
Need and distress, starving in thy eyes,
Upon thy back hangs ragged misery,
The world is not thy friend, nor the world's law;
The world affords no law to make thee rich;
Then be not poor, but break it, and take this.

Ap. My poverty, but not my will, consents.

Rom. I pay thy poverty, and not thy will,
Ap. Put this in any liquid thing you will,
And drink it off; and, if you had the strength
Of twenty men, it would despatch you straight.
Rom. There is thy gold: worse poison to men's souls,

Doing more murders in this loathsome world,
Than the thickest compounds; that thou may'st not
I sell thee poison, thou hast sold me none.
[sell
Farewell! buy food, and get thyself in flesh.
Come, cordial, and not poison; go with me to Juliet's grave, for there must I use thee.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar John.

John. Holy Franciscan friar! brother, ho!

Enter Friar Laurence.

Laus. This same should be the voice of friar John.
Welcome from Mantua: What says Romeo?
Or, if his mind be writ, give me his letter.
John. Going to find a bare-foot brother out,
One of our order, to associate me,
Here in this city visiting the sick,
And finding him, the searchers of the town,
Suspecting, that we both were in a house
Where the infectious pestilence did reign,
Seal'd up the doors, and would not let us forth:
So that my speed to Mantua there was stay'd.
Laus. What are my letters then, friar John?
John. I could not send it,—here it is again,
Nor get a messenger to bring it thee,
So fearful were they of infection.

Laus. Unhappy fortune; by my brotherhood,
The letter was not nice, but full of charge,
Of dear import; and the neglecting it
May do much danger: Friar John, go hence;
Get me an iron crow, and bring it straight
Unto my cell.

John. Brother, I'll go and bring it thee.

[Exit.

Laus. Now must I to the monument alone;
Within this three hours will fair Juliet wake;
She will beswear me much, that Romeo
Hath had no notice of these accidents;
But I will write again to Mantua,
And bring a friar that may settle the come;
Poor living corpse, cles'd in a dead man's tomb!

[Exit.

SCENE III.—A Church-Yard; in it, a Monument belonging to the Capulets.

Enter Paris, and his Page, bearing flowers and a torch.

Par. Give me thy torch, boy: Hence, and stand
Yet put it out, for I would not be seen.
[aloof;
Under yon yew-trees lay thee all along,
Holding thine ear close to the hollow ground:
So shall no foot upon the church-yard tread,
(Being loose, unform, with digging up of graves,)
But thou shalt hear it: whistle then to me,
As signal that thou hear'st something approach,
Give me those flowers. Do as I bid thee, go.

Page. I am almost afraid to stand alone
Here in the church-yard; yet I will adventure.

[Retires.

Par. Sweet flower, with flowers I strew thy hridal bed:
Sweet tomb, that in thy circuit dost contain
The person model of eternity;
Pair Juliet, that with angels dost remain,
Accept this latest favour at my hands;
That living honour'd thee, and, being dead,
With funeral praises do adorn thy tomb.

The boy gives warning, something doth approach.
What cursed foot wanders this way to-night?
To cross my obsequies, and true lover's rites?
What, with a torch—muffle me, night, a while.

[Retires.
Enter Romeo and Balthasar, with a torch, mattock, &c.

Rem. Give me that mattock, and the wrenching Hold, take this letter; early in the morning [Iron. See thou deliver it to my lord and father. Gio. do, my lord; conjuratories. Take thee, Whate'er thou hearst or seest, stand all aloof, And do not interrupt me in my course.

Why I descend into this bed of death, Is, partly, to behold my lady's face: But, chiefly, to take thence from her dead finger A precious ring; a ring, that I must use In dear employment: therefore hence, be gone:—

But if thou, jealous, dost return to try In what I further shall intend to do, Fly hence, I will, I swear thee joint by joint, And strew this hungry church-yard with thy Time and my intents are savage-wild; [limbs: More fierce, and more inexorable far, Than empty tigers, or the roaring sea.

Bat. I will be gone, sir, and not trouble you. Rem. So shalt thou show me friendship. — Take thou that:

Live, and be prosperous; and farewell, good fellow.

Bat. For all this same, I'll hide me hereabout; Be look'd for, I fear, and his intents I doubt. [Retires. Rem. Thou dost despise a law, thou lamb of death, Gorg'd with the dearest morsel of the earth, Thus I enforce thy rotten jaws to open, [Breaking open the door of the monument. And, in despite, I'll cram thee with more food! Par. This is that finished & haughty Montague, That murder'd my love's cousin; — with which It is supposed, the fair creature died; — [grief, And here is come to do some villainous shame To the dead bodies: I will apprehend him— [Advances.

Stop thy unhallow'd till, vile Montague!
Can vengeance be purs'd further than death? Condemn'd villain, I do apprehend thee: Obey, and go with me; for thou must die. Rem. I must, indeed; and therefore came I lither.

Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man, Fly hence and leave me;—think upon these gone; Let them affright thee. — I beseech thee, youth, Hast not another sin upon my head, By urging me to farther strife? — Be, O, be gone: By heaven, I love thee better than myself; For I come hither arm'd against myself: Stay not, be gone;—live, and hereafter say — A madman's mercy bade thee run away. Rem. Behold my hand, — and death:—

And do attach thee as a felon here. Rem. wilt thou provoke me? then have at thee, boy. [They fight. Page. O lord! they fight: I will go call the watch. [Exit Page.

Par. O, I am slain! [Falls.] If thou be merciful, Open the tomb, lay me with Juliet. [Dies. Rem. In faith, I will: — Let me peruse this Mercutio's kinsman, not for I know Paris; — [face: What said my man, when my betossed soul Did not attend him as we rode? I think, He told me, Paris should have married Juliet; Said he not so? or did I dream it so? Or am I mad? hearing him talk of Juliet, To think it was so? — O, give me thy hand, One writ with me in self misfortune's book: I'll bury thee in a triumphant grave,— A grave? O, no; a lantern, slaughter'd youth, For here my kinsman lies. — Paris, or I call A lightning before death: O, how may I Call this a lightning? —O, my love! my wife! Death, that hath suck'd the honey of thy breath, Hath had no power yet upon thy beauty: Thou art not conquer'd: beauty's ensign yet Is crimson in thy lips, and in thy cheeks, And death's pale flag is not advanced there.—

Tybalt, liest thou there in thy bloody sheet? O, what more favour can I do to thee, Than with my hand that cut thy youth in wain, To sunder his that was thine enemy? — Forgive me, cousin! — Ah, dear Juliet,

Why art thou yet so fair? Shall I believe That unsubstantial death is amorous; And that the lean abhorred monster keeps Thee in his dark'ning vault, till thou art bare Of beauty's envious jellies? — For of that, I will still stay with thee; And never from this palace of dim night Depart again; here, here will I remain With worms that are thy chamber-maids; O, here Will I set up my everlasting rest; And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars [last! From this world-wearied flesh.—Eyes, look your Arms, take your last embrace! and lips, O you The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss A deathless bargain to engrossing death! — Come, bitter conduct, come, unsavoury guide! Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark! [cary! Here's to my love!—[Drinks.] O, true aposthe-Thy drugs are quick. — Thus with a kiss I die. [Dies. Enter, at the other end of the church-yard, Friar Laurence, with a lantern, crow, and spade. Fri. Saint Francis be my speed! how oft to-night Have my old feet stumbled at graves? — Who's Who is it that consorts, so late, the dead ?[there? Bal. Here's one, a friend, and one that knows you weil. [friend, Fri. Bliss be upon you! Tell me, good my What torch is yond', that vainly lends his light To grubs and eyeless sculls; as I discern, It burneth in the Capels' monument. Bal. It doth so; holy sir; and there's my master, One that you love. Fri. Who is it? Bal. Romeo. Fri. How long hath he been there? Bal. Full half an hour. Fri. Go with me to the vault. Bal. I dare not, sir. — My master knows not, but I am gone hence; And fearfully did menace me with death, If I did stay to look on his intents. Fri. Stay then, I'll go alone. — Fear comes upon O, much I fear thy heart and mine bejoin'd, [me; Bal. As I did sleep under this yew-tree here, I dreamt my master and another fought, And that my master slew him. [Advances. Fri. Romeo! —[Romeo. Fri. Alack, alack, what blood is this, which stains The stony entrance of this sepulchre? What mean these masterless and gory swords To lie discolor'd by this place of peace? [Enters the monument. Romeo! O, pale!—Who else is near? Paris too? And steep'd in blood?—Ah, what an unkind hour Is guilty of this lamentable change! — The lady stirs. [Juliet makes and stirs. Jul. O, comfortable friar! where is my lord? I do remember well where I should be, And there I am. — Where is my Romeo? [Noise within. Fri. I hear some noise.—Lady, come from that Of death, contagion, and unnatural sleep; [nest A Greater Power than we can interrupt Hath thwarted our intents; come, come away: Thy husband in thy bosom there lies dead; And Paris too; come, I'll dispose of thee Among a sisterhood of holy nuns: Stay not to question, for the watch is coming; Come, go, good Juliet.—[Noise again.] I dare stay no longer. [Exit Fri. Jul. Go, get thee hence, for I will not stay —
ROMEO AND JULIET.

Act 5.

What's here? a cup, clod'd in my true love's hand? Poison, I see, hath been his time-end:—
O churl! drink all; and leave no friendly drop, To help misbrained in my death I'll will thy lips; Haply, some poison yet doth hang on them, To make me die with a restorative. [Kisses him.]

Thy lips are warm!

1 Watch. [Within.] Lord, boy!—Which way? Jul. Yes, noise is—then I'll be brief.—O happy dagger! [Snatcheth Romeo's dagger.] This is thy sheath; sheathe it, there rust, and let me die. [Falls on Romeo's body, and dies.]

Enter Watch, with the Page of Paris.

Page. This is the place; there, where the torch doth burn. (the church-yard.)

1 Watch. The ground is bloody; Search it, some of you, whoe'er you find, attach. [Exeunt some.]

Pitiful sight! here lies the county shrieval—
And Juliet bleeding, warm, and newly dead, Who here hath lain these two days buried—
Go, tell the prince,—run to the Capulets,— Raise up the Montagues,—some others search:— [Exeunt other Watchmen.]

We see the ground whereon these deaths do lie; But the true ground of all these piteous woes, We cannot without circumstance descry.

Enter some of the Watch, with Balthasar.

2 Watch. Here's Romeo's man, we found him in the church-yard. [hither.]

1 Watch. Hold him in safety, till the prince come. [Enter another Watchman, with Friar Laurence.]

3 Watch. Here is a friar, that trembles, sighs, and weeps:— We took this mattick and this spade from him, As he was coming from this church-yard side.

1 Watch. A great suspicion! Stay the friar too.

Enter the Prince and Attendants. Prince. What misadventure is so early up, That calls our person from our morning's rest? [Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, and others.]

Cap. What should it be, that they so shriek abroad?
La. Cap. The people in the street cry,—Romeo, some—Juliet, and some—Paris; and all run, With open outcry, toward our monument.

Prince. What fear is this, which startles in our ears? [slain.]

1 Watch. Sovereign, here lies the county Paris And Romeo dead: and Juliet, dead before, Warm and new kill'd. [murder comes.

Prince. Search, seek, and know how this foul foul! Watch. Here is a friar, and slaughter'd Romeo's With instruments upon them, fit to open men. These dead men's tombs. [sheathe.]

Cap. O, heavens!—O, wife! look how our This dagger hath mist'men,—for, lo! his house Is empty on the back of Montague, And his men part of, and are a part of his daughter's bosom.
Lu. Cap. O me! this sight of death is as a bell, That warns my old age to a sepulchre.

Enter Montague and others. Prince. Come, Montague; for thou art early up, To see thy son and heir more early down.

Men. Alas, my liege, my wife is dead to-night; Grief of my son's exile hath stopp'd her breath: What further woé conspires against mine age?

Prince. Look, and thou shalt see.

Men. O thou unnatural! what manners is in this, To press before thy father to a grave?

Prince. Seal up the mouth of outrage for a while, Till we can clear these ambiguities, scents; And know their spring, their head, their true de- And then will I be general of your woes, And lead you even to death: Meantime forbear, And let mishance be slave to patience.

Bring me the body, and let me see That poison makes against my daughter's life; And here I stand, both to impeach and purge

Men. All, all!—[in this.]

Prince. Then say at once what thou dost know.

Fri. I will be brief, for my short date of breath Is not so long as is a tedious tale.

Romeo there dead, was husband to that Juliet, And she, there dead, that Romeo's fair wed wife: I married her last, and their solemn marriage-day Was Tybalt's dooms-day, whose untimely death Banish'd the new-made bridegroom from this city; For whom, and not for Tybalt, Juliet pin'd.

You,—to remove that siege of grief from her,— Betroth'd, and would have married her perchance, To county Paris:—Then comes she to me; And, with wild looks, bid me devise some means To rid her from this second marriage, Or, in my cell there would she kill herself.

Then go I there, so tunes and a dolorous A sleeping potion; which so took effect As I intended, for it wrought on her The form of death: meantime I write to Romeo, That he should hither come as this dire night, To bear the tidings of her death, and grave, Being the time the potion's force should cease But he which bore my letter, friar John, Was staid by accident; and yeastsnight Return'd my letter back: Then all was done, At the prefixed hour of her death, and Came I to take her from her kindred's vault, Meaning to keep her closely at my cell, Till I conveniently could send to Romeo: But when I came, (some minute time the Of her awakening,) here untimely lay The noble Paris, and true Romeo, dead.

She wakes; and I entreated her come forth, And bear this work of heaven with patience: But then a noise did scare me from the tomb; And she, too desperate, would not go with me, But (as it seems,) did violence on herself.

All this I know; and to the marriage Her nurse is privy: And, if sought in this Misca-ried by my fault, let my old life Be sacrifice'd, some hour before his time.

O, what a night of severest luck! [man—

Prince. We still have known thee for a holy Where Romeo's man? what can he say in this?

Bal. I brought my master news of Juliet's death; And then in post he came from Mantua, To this same place, to this same monument. This letter he early bid me give his father; And threaten'd me with death, going in the vault, If I departed not, and left him there.

Prince. Give me the letter, I will look on it.— Where is the county's page, that rais'd the watch?—

Siriach, what made your master in this place?

Page. He came with flowers to strew his lady's And bid me stand aloof, and so I did: grave: Anon, comes one with light to ope the tomb; And, by and by, my master drew on him; And all the rest came on the way to my daughter's bosom.

Prince. This letter doth make good the friar's Their course of love, the tidings of her death: And here he writes,—that he did buy a poison Of a poor poetichary, and therewith I came,—to assist Juliet, to die, and For these enemies? Capulet! Montague!— See, what a scourgic is laid upon your hate, That heaven fends means to kill your joys, with love And 1, for winking at your discord too, Have mercy! on the fair of kinsman's b'd.

Cap. O, but that I were Montague, give me thy hand This is my daughter's jointure, for no more Can I demand.

Men. But I can give thee more:

For I will raise her statue in pure gold; That, while Verona by that name is known,
There shall no figure at such rate be set,
As that of true and faithful Juliet.

Cap. As rich shall Romeo by his lady lie;
Poor sacrifices of our enmity! [bribes;
Prince. A glooming peace this morning with it

The sun for sorrow will not show his head;
Go hence, to have more talk of these sad things;
Some shall be pardon'd, and some punished:
For never was a story of more woe
Than this of Juliet and her Romeo. [Exeunt.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Elsinore. A Platform before the Castle.

Francisco on his post. Enter to him Bernardo.

Ber. Who's there?

Fran. Nay, answer me: stand and unfold Yourself.

Ber. Long live the king!

Fran. Bernardo?

Ber. He.

Fran. You come most carefully upon your hour.

Ber. 'Tis now struck twelve; get thee to bed, Francisco.

Fran. For this relief, much thanks: 'tis bitter And I am sick at heart. [cold,

Ber. Have you had quiet guard?

Fran. Not a mouse stirring.

Ber. Well, good night.

If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus,
The rivals of my watch, bid them make haste.

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Fran. I think, I hear them.—Stand, ho! Who
Hor. Friends to this ground. [is there?

Mar. And liegenem to the Dane.

Fran. Give you good night.

Mar. O, farewell, honest soldier: Who hath reliev'd you?

Fran. Bernardo hath my place.

Give you good night. [Exit Francisco.

Ber. What, is Horatio there?

Hor. A piece of him.

Ber. Welcome, Horatio; welcome, good Marcellus. [night?

Hor. What, has this thing appear'd again to
B. I have seen nothing.

Mar. Horatio says, 'tis but our fantasy; And will not let belief take hold of him,
Touching this dreaded sight, twice seen of us: Therefore I have entreated him, along With us to watch the minutes of this night; That, if again this apparition come, He may approve our eyes, and speak to it.

Hor. Tush; tush! 'twill not appear.

Ber. Sit down awhile; And let us once again assail your ears,

That are so fortified against our story,
What we two nights have seen.

Hor. Well, sit we down, And let us hear Bernardo speak of this.

Ber. Last night of all,
When you same star, that's westward from the pole,
Had made his course to illumine that part of heaven Where now it burns, Marcellus, and myself, The bell then beating one,— [again!

Mar. Peace, break thee off; look, where it comes

Enter Ghost.

Ber. In the same figure, like the king that's dead.

Mar. Thou art a scholar, speak to it, Horatio.

Ber. Looks it not like the king? mark it, Horatio.

Hor. Most like.—it harrows me with fear and

Ber. It would be spoke to. [wonder.

Mar. Speak to it, Horatio.

Hor. What art thou, that usurp'st this time of Together with that fair and warlike form, In which the majesty of buried Denmark Did sometimes march? by heaven I charge thee, Mar. It is offended. [speak.

Ber. See! it staks away.

Hor. Stay; speak: speak I charge thee, speak.

[Exit Ghost.

Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer.

Ber. How now, Horatio? you tremble and look
Is not this something more than fantasy? [pale:
What think you of it?

Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe,
Without the sensible and true avouch
Of mine own eyes.

Mar. Is it not like the king?

Hor. As thou art to thyself:
Such was the very armour he had on,
When he the ambitious Norway combated:
So frown'd he once, when, in an angry parle
He smote the saddle Polack on the ice.

'Tis strange. [hour,

Mar. Thus, twice before, and jump at this dead
With martial stalk, hath he gone by our watch.

Hor. In what particular thought to work, I know
But, in the gross and scope of mine opinion, [not:
This bodes some strange eruption to our state.

Mar. Good now, sit down, and tell me, he that knows,
Why this same strict and most observant watch
So nightly tois the subject of the land?
And why such daily cast of brazen cannon,
And foreign mart for implements of war:
Why such an horrid carcass should be sent
To doth divide the Sunday from the week?
What might be toward, that this sweaty haste
Doth make the night joint-labourer with the day?
Who is't, that can inform me?

That can I;

At least, the whisper goes so. Our last king,
Whose image even but now appear'd to us,
Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway,
Thereto pricked on by a most emulate pride,
Dio to the combat; in which our valiant Hamlet
[For so this side of our known world esteem'd him,]
Did slay this Fortinbras; who, by a seal'd compact,
Well ratified by law, and heraldry,
Did forfeit, with his life, all those his lands,
Which he had seized of, to the conqueror
And, as it were, a public property
Was gaged by our king; which had return'd
To the inheritance of Fortinbras,
Had he been vanquisher; as, by the same co-mart,
And carriage of the article design'd,
His fell to Hamlet: Now, sir, young Fortinbras,
Of unimproved mettle hot and full,
Hath in the skirts of Norway, here and there,
Shark'd up a list of landless resolutely,
For food and diet, to some enterprise
That he's a stomach in: which is no other
(As it doth well appear unto our state,)
But to recover of us, by strong hand,
And terms compulsory, those foresaid lands
So by his father lost: And this, I take it,
Is the motive of our present preparation;
The source of this our watch; and the chief head
Of this protracted and remarriage in the land.

Bers. I think, it be no other, but even so:
Well may it soot, that this portentious figure
Comes armed through our watch; so like the king
That was and it, the gesticulation of these wars.

Hor. A mote it is, to trouble the mind's eye.
In the most high and palmy state of Rome,
A little ere the mightiest Julius fell,
The graves stood tenantless, and the sheeted dead
Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets.

As, stars with trains of fire and dewbs of blood,
Disasters in the sun; and the moist star,
Upon whose influence Neptune's empire stands,
Was now, as you know, to dooms-day and eclipse,
And even the like precise of fierce events.—
As harbingers preceding still the fates,
And prologue to the omen coming on—
Have heaven and earth together demonstrated
Unto our climastures and countrymen.

Re-enter Ghost.

But, soft; behold! lo, where it comes again!
I'll cross it, though it blast me.—Stay, illusion!
If thou hast any sound, or use of voice,
Speak to me:
If there be any good thing to be done,
That may thee do ease, and grace to me,
Speak to me:
If thou art privy to thy country's fate,
Which, happily, foreknowing may avoid,
O, speak!
Or, if thou hast uphoarded in thy life
Extorted treasure in the womb of earth,
For which, they say, thou spirits oft walk in death,
                 [Cock crows.
Speak of it—stay, and speak.—Stop it, Marcellus.

Mar. Shall I strike at it with my partizan?

Hor. Do, if it will not stand.

Bers. This here! This here!

In. 'Tis here! [Exit Ghost.

Mar. 'Tis gone!

We do it wrong, being so majestical,
To offer it the show of violence;
For it is, as the air, invulnerable,
And our wain blows, malicious mockery.

Bers. It was about to speak, when the cock crew.

Hor. And then it started like a guilty thing

Upon a fearful summons. I have heard.
The cock, that is the trumpeter of dawn,
Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat
Awake the god of day; and, at his warning,
Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air,
The extravagant and erring spirit hies
To his own place: and of the truth herein
This present object made probation.

Mar. It faded on the crowing of the cock.

Some say, that ever 'gainst that season comes
Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated,
This bird of dawning singeth all night long:
And when the noise thereof no sooner stir abroad
The nights are wholesome; then no planets strike,
No fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm,
So hallow'd and so gracious is the time.

Hor. So have I heard, and do in part believe it.
But, look, the morn, in russet mantle clad,
Walks o'er the dew of yon high eastern hill:
Break we our watch up; and, by my advice,
Let us import what we have seen to-night
Unto young Hamlet: for, upon my life,
This spirit, dumb to us, will speak to him:
Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it,
As needful in our loves, fitting our duty?

Mar. Let's do't, I pray; and I this morning know
Where we shall find him most convenient. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same. A Room of State in the same.

Enter the King, Queen, Hamlet, Polonius, Laertes, Voltemand, Cornelius, Lords, and Attendants.

King. Though yet of Hamlet our dear brother's death
The memory be green; and that it us befitted
To bear our hearts in grief, and our whole kingdom
To be contracted in one broil with France, and Spain,
Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature,
That we with wisest sorrow, think on him,
Together with remembrance of ourselves.
Therefore our sometime sister, now our queen,
The imperial jointress of this warlike state,
Have we, as 'twere, with a defeated joy,
With one auspicious, and one dropping eye;
With mirth in funeral, and with dirge in marriage.
In equal scale, weighing delight and dole.—[Rage, Taken up.

Hor. Nor have we herein spared
Your better wishes, which have freely gone
With this affair along:—For all, our thanks.
Now follows, that you know, young Fortinbras—
Holding a weak supposal of our worth;
Or thinking, by our late dear brother's death,
Our state to be disjoint and out of frame,
Colleagued with this dream of his advantage,
He hath not fail'd to pester us with message,
Importing the surrender of those lands
Lost by his father, with all bands of law
To our most valiant brother.—So much for him.
Now for ourself, and for this time of meeting.
Thus much the business is: We have here writ
To Norway, uncle of young Fortinbras,—
Who, impotent and bed-rid, scarcely hears
Of this new Emperor's purpose, think'st thou not
His further gait herein; in that the levies,
The lists, and full proportions, are all made
Out of his subject:—and we here despatch
You, good Cornelius, and you, Voltimand,
For bearers of this greeting to old Norway;
Giving to you no further personal power
To business with the king, more than the scope
Of these dilated articles allow.

Farewell; and let your haste commend your duty.

Cor. This is our charge, and all things, will we show
Our duty.

King. We doubt it nothing; heartily farewell.

[Exeunt Voltemand and Cornelius.

And now, Laertes, what's the news with you?

Hor. I come to you to know some suit with you.

Laertes. You cannot speak of reason to the Dane. [Laertes,
And lose your voice: What wouldst thou beg,
That shall not be my offer, not thy asking?

[Exit.
This gentle and unforfeart accord of Hamlet
Sits smiling to my heart: in grace whereof,
No jeocund health, that Denmark drinks to-day,
But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell;
And the King's rouse the heaven shall bruit again,
Re-speaking earthly thunder. Come away.

[Exeunt King, Queen, Lords, &c. Polonius, and Laertes.

Ham. O, that this too solid flesh would melt,
Thaw, and resolve itself into a dew;
Or that the everlasting had not fix'd
His canon 'gainst self-slaughter! O God! O God!
How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable
Seem to me all the uses of this world!
Save those two precious stones, that open eye
That grows to seed; things rank and gross in nature,
Possess it merely. That it should come to this!
But two months dead — nay, not so much, not two;
So excellent a king; that was, to this,
Hyperion to a satyr: so loving to my mother,
That he might not beceed the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly. Heaven and earth!
Must I remember? why, she would hang on him,
As if increase of appetite had grown
By what it fed on: and yet, within a month,—
Let me not think on't: — Frailty, thy name is woman!

little month; or ere those shoes were old,
With which she follow'd my poor father's body,
Like Niobe, all tears;— why she, even she,—
O heaven! a heart, that wants discourse of reason,
Would have mourn'd longer,—married with my uncle,
My father's brother: but no more like my father,
Than I to Heracleus: Within a month;
Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears
Had left the flushing in her galled eyes,
She married: — O most wicked speed, to post
With such dexterity to in consistence sheets!
It is not now, nor ever, will be good:
But break, my heart; for I must hold my tongue.

Enter Horatio, Bernardo, and Marcellus.

Hor. Hail to your lordship!

Ham. I am glad to see you well:
Horatio,—or I do forget myself.
Hor. The same, my lord, and your poor servant ever.

[with you. Ham. Sir, my good friend! I'll change that name
And what make you from Wittenberg, Horatio?—
Marcellus?

Mar. My good lord,—

Ham. I am very glad to see you; good even, sir,—
But what, in faith, make you from Wittenberg? Hor. A truant disposition, good my lord.

Ham. I would not hear your enemy say so;
Nor shall you do mine ear that violence,
To make it truster of your own report
Against yourself: I know, you are no truant.
But what is your affair in Elsinore? We'll teach you to drink deep, ere you depart.
Hor. My lord, I came to see your father's funeral.

Ham. I pray thee, do not mock me, fellow-stu;
I think, it was to see my mother's wedding. [dent; Hor. Indeed, my lord, it follow'd hard upon
Ham. Thrift, thrift, Horatio! the funeral bak'd meats
Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.
Would I had met my dearest foe in heaven
Or ever I had seen that day, my father.
My father,—Methinks, I see my father.

Hor. Where, my lord?

Ham. In my mind's eye, Horatio.

Hor. I saw him once, he was a goodly king.

Ham. He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again.

Hor. My lord, I think I saw him yesternight.

Ham. Saw! who? Hor. My lord, the king your father.

Ham. The king my father!
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Act I.

Hor. Season your admiration for a while
With an attentive ear; till I may deliver,
Upon the witness of these gentlemen, ...

This marvel to you.

Ham. For God’s love, let me hear.

Hor. Two nights together had these gentlemen, Marcellus and Bernardo, on their watch,
In the dead waist and middle of the night,
Been the encounter’d. A figure like your father,
Armed at point, exactly, cap-a-pe,
Appears before them, and, with solemn march,
Goes slow and stately by them: thrice he walk’d,
By their oppress’d and fear-surprised eyes,
Within his truncheon’s length; whilst they, dis-
Almost to jelly with the act of fear,

[til’d Stand dumb, and speak not to him.

This to me
In dreadful secrecy impart they did;
And I with them, the third night kept the watch: Where, as the had deliver’d, both in time,
Form of the thing, each word made true and good,
The apparition comes: I knew your father;
These hands are not more like.

Ham. But where was this? Mar. My lord, upon the platform where we
Ham. Did you not speak to it? watch’d.

Hor. My lord, I did:
But asuser made it une; yet once, methought,
It lifted up its head, and did address
Itself around, like as it would speak:
But, even then, the morning cock crew loud;
And at the sound it shrunk in haste away,
And vanish’d from our sight.

Ham. Tis very strange.

Hor. As I do live, my honour’d lord, ’tis true;
And we did think it writ down in our duty,
To let you know of it.

Ham. Indeed, indeed, sirs, but this troubles me.

Hold you the watch to-night?

All. We do, my lord.

Hor. Arm’d, say you?

All. Arm’d, my lord.

Ham. From top to toe?

All. My lord, from head to foot.

Ham. Then saw you not his face.

Hor. O, yes, my lord: he wore his beard up.

Ham. What, look’d he frowningly?

Hor. A countenance more
In sorrow than in anger.

Ham. Fale, or red?

Hor. Nay, very pale.

Ham. And fix’d his eyes upon you?

Hor. Most constantly.

Ham. It would have much amaz’d you.

Hor. Very like,

Very like: Stay’d it long?

Hor. While out with moderate haste might tell

Hor. Not when I saw it.

Ham. His beard was grizzled? no?

Hor. It was, as I have seen it in his life,
A sable silver’d.

Ham. I will watch to-night;

Perchance, ’twill walk again.

Hor. I warrant you, it will.

Ham. If it assume my noble father’s person,
I’ll speak to it, though hell itself should gape,
And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all;
If you have hitherto conceal’d this sight,
Let it beenable in your silence still;
And whatsoever else shall hap to-night,
Give it an understanding, but no tongue;
I will require your loves: So, fare you well;

Upon the platform, ’twixt eleven and twelve,
I will await you.

All. Our duty to your honour.

Ham. Your loves, as mine to you: Farewell.

[Exeunt Horatio, Marcellus, and Bernardo.

My father’s spirit in arms! all is not well;
I doubt a foul play: ’would, the night were come!

Till then sit still, my soul: Foul deeds will rise,
Though all the earth o’erwhelm them, to men’s eyes.

[Exit.

SCENE III.—A Room in Polonius’ House.

Enter Laertes and Ophelia.

Later. My necessities are embark’d; farewel!
And, sister, as the winds give benefit,
And convoy is assistant, do not sleep,
But let me hear from you.

Oph. Later. Do you doubt that?

Later. For Hamlet, and the tripling of his favour,
Hold it a fashion, and a toy in blood;
A violet in the youth of primy nature,
Forward, not permanent, sweet, not lasting,
The perfume and suppliance of a minute;
No more.

Oph. No more but so?

Later. Think it no more:

For nature, crescent, does not grow alone
In thaws, and bulk; but, as this temple waxes,
The inward service of the mind and soul
Grows wide withal. Perhaps, he loves you now;
And now no soil, nor cautel, doth besmirch
The virtue of his will: but, you must fear,
His greatness weigh’d, his will is not his own;
For he himself is subject to his birth;
He may not, as an unavailing person,
Carve for himself; for on his choice depends
The safety and the health of the whole state;
And therefore must his choice be circumscrib’d
Unto the voice and yielding of that body,
Whereof he is the head: Then if he says, he loves
It fits your wisdom so far to believe it,

[you,
As he in his particular act and place
May give his saying deed; which is no further,
Than the main voice of Denmark goes withal.
Then will to him that loss your golden stay,
If with too credent ear you list his songs;
Or lose your heart; or your chaste treasure open
To his unmaster’d importunity.

Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister;
And keep you in the rear of your affection,
Out of the shot and danger of desire.
The choicest maid is prodigal enough,
If she unmask her beauty to the moon:
Virtue itself scapes not calamitous strokes:
The canker galls the infant, as the spring,
Too oft before their buttons be discret’d;
And in the morb and liquid dew of youth
Contagious hastigam are most imminent.
Be wary then: best safety lies in fear;
Youth to itself rebels, though none else near.

Oph. I shall the effect of this good lesson keep,
As watchmen to my heart; but, good my brother,
Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven;
Whilst, like a puff’d and reckless libertine,
Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,
And recks not his own read.

Oph. O fear me not.
I stay too long;—But here my father comes.

Enter Polonius.

A double blessing is a double grace;
Occasion smiles upon a second leave.

[fshame:

Pol. Yet here, Laertes! aboard, aboard, for
The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail, [you
And you are staid for: There, my blessing with Polonius’ head.

And these few precepts in thy memory

Look thou character. (Give thy thoughts no tongue,
Nor any unproportion’d thought his act.
Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar.
The friends that are about him, and he abomination tried,
Grapplest first to the soul with hooks of steel;
But do not dull thy palm with entertainment
Of each new-hatch’d, undersign’d comrade. Beware
Of entrance to a quarrel; but, being in
Bear it, that the opposer may beware of thee.
Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice:
Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment. Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy, \[men.
Not express'd in fancy: rich, not gaudy:
For the apparel oft proclaims the man;
And they in France, of the best rank and station.
Are most select and generous, chief in that.
Nor will I blow by borrow'd air to th' skies;
For loan oft losses both itself and friend;
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.
This above all,—To thine own self be true;
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou art thyself; get not false to any man.
Farewell: my blessing season this in thee!
Lae. Most humbly do I take my leave, my lord.
Pol. The time invites you; go, your servants tend.
Lae. Farewell, Ophelia: and remember well
What I have said to you.

Oph. 'Tis in my memory lock'd,
And you yourself shall keep the key of it.

Lae. Farewell.

Pol. What is't, Ophelia, he hath said to you?
Oph. So please you, something touching the lord.
Pol. Marr, well bethought:

Hamlet. I'll tell thee: think yourself a baby;
That you have ta'en these tenders for true pay,
Which are not sterling. Tender yourself more dearly.

Or, (not to crack the wind of the poor phrase, Wronging it thus,) you'll tender me a fool.

Oph. My lord, he hath importun'd me with love,
In honourable fashion.

Lae. This fashion, Ophelia, may call it; go to, go to.

Oph. And hath given countenance to his speech,
With almost all the holy vows of heaven. [my lord,
Pol. Ay, springs to catch woodcocks. I do know
When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul
Leaves the too-spared daughter,
Giving more light than heat,—extinct in both,
Even in their promise, as it is a making,—
You must not take for fire. From this time
Be somewhat scarcer of your maiden presence;
Set your entremets at a higher rate.
Than a command to parley. For Lord Hamlet,
Believe so much in him, That he is young;
And with a larger tatter may he walk,
Than may be given you: in few, Ophelia,
Do not believe his vows: for they are brokers
Not of that die investments show,
But mere importors of unholy suits,
Breathing like sanctified and pious hounds,
The better to beguile. This is for all,—
I would not, in plain terms, from this time forth,
Have a brother's face suffer any moment's curse.
As to give words or talk with the lord Hamlet.

Lae. Look to't, I charge you; come your ways.

Oph. I shall obey, my lord.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Platform.

Enter Hamlet, Horatio, and Marcellus.

Ham. The air bites shrewdly; it is very cold.

Hor. It is a nipping and an eager air.

Ham. What hour now?—

Hor. I think, it lacks of twelve.

Mar. No, it is struck.

[near the season.

Ham. Indeed? I heard it not; it then draws

Wherein the spirit held his wont to walk.
[A flourish of trumpets, and ordnance shot off, within.

What does this mean, my lord?—

Ham. The king doth wake to-night, and takes Keeps wassel, and the swaggering up-spring reeds;
And, as he drinks, the ghost of Rhinemund down,
The kettle-drum and trumpet thus Bray out
The triumph of his pledge.

Is it a custom?

Ham. Ay, marry, is't:
But to my mind;'tis only, as I am native here,
And to the manner born,—it is a custom
More honour'd in the breach, than the observance.

This heavy-headed revel, east and west,
Makes us traduc'd, and tax'd of other nations:
They clepe us lambs, and call us gentle swains;
Which, for a time, it is the swinish phrase
Soil our addition; and, indeed, it takes
From our achievements, though performed at
The pith and marrow of our attribute.
[height.
So oft I chance in particular men,
That for some vicious mole of nature in them,
As, in their births, (wherein they are not guilty,
Since nature cannot choose his origin,) By the o'er-growth of some complexion;
Oft breaking down the pales and forts of reason;
By the subtle knavery of some habit, that too much o'er-leavens
The form of plausible manners;—that these men—
Carrying, I say, the stamp of one defect;
Being nature's lively, or fortune's star,—
Their virtues else (be they as pure as grace,
As infinite as man may undergo),
Shall in the general censure take corruption
From that particular fault: The drum of base
Doth all the noble substance often dout,
To his own scandal.

Enter Ghost.

Hor. Look, my lord, it comes!

Ham. Angels and ministers of grace defend us!--
Be thou a spirit of health, or goblin damn'd,
Bring with thee airs from heaven, or blasts from
Be thy intents wicked, or charitable,
[hell.
Thou com'st in such a questionable shape,
That I will speak to thee: I'll call thee, Hamlet,
King, father, royal Dane: O, answer me;
Let me not burst in ignorance! but tell,
Why thy时辰 calendar,
Have burst their ceremonies? why the sepulchre,
Wherein we saw thee quietly in-urn'd,
Hath op'd his ponderous and marble jaws,
To cast thee up again! What may this mean,
That thou, dead corse, again, in complete steel,
Revisit'st thus the grimmer of thy tomb,
Making night hideous; and we fools of nature,
So horribly to shake our disposition,
With thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls?
Say, why is this? wherefore? what should we do?
Hor. It beckons you to go away with it,
As if it some imparted did desire
To you alone.

Mar. Look, with what courteous action
It waves you to a more removed ground:
But do not go with it.

Hor. No, by no means.

Ham. It will not speak; then I will follow it.

Hor. Do not, my lord.

Ham. Why, what should be the fear?
I do not set my life at a pin's fee.
And, for my soul, what can it do to that,
Being a thing immortal as itself?
It waves me forth again:—I'll follow it.

Hor. What, if it tempt you toward the flood,
Or to the dreadful precipit of the pit?
[his Lord,
That beetle o'er his base into the sea?
And there assume some other horrible form,
Which might deprive your sovereignty of reason,
And draw you into madness? think of it:
The very place puts toys of desperation,
Without more motive, into every brain,
That looks so many fathoms to the sea,
And hears it roar beneath.
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Act I.

Ham. It waves me still:—
Go on, I'll follow thee.

Mar. You shall not go, my lord.

Ham. Hold off your hands.

Hor. But rul'd, you shall not go.

Ham. My fate cries out, and makes each petty artery in this body
As hardy as the Nemean lion's nerve—

Still am I call'd:—unhand me, gentlemen:—

[Ghost beckons.]

[Exeunt Ghost and Hamlet.]

Hor. He waves his desperate hand in imagination.

Mar. Let's follow: 'tis not fit thou linger' st here.

Hor. Have after. — To what issue will this come?

Mar. Something is rotten in the state of Denmark.

Hor. Heaven will direct it.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A more remote Part of the Platform.

Re-enter Ghost and Hamlet.

Ham. Whither wilt thou lead me? speak, I'll go.

Ghost. Mark me.

[no further.]

Ham. I will.

Ghost. My hour is almost come,
When to the sulphurous and tormenting flames
My soul render up myself.

Ham. Alas, poor ghost!—

Ghost. Pity me not, but lend thy serious hearing
To what I shall unfold.

Ham. Speak, I am bound to hear.

Ghost. So art thou to revenge, when thou shalt

Ham. What?

[hearken.]

Ghost. I am thy father's spirit;—

Doom'd for a certain term to walk the night;
And, for the day, confin'd to fast in fires,
Till the foul crimes done in my days of nature,
Are re-perform'd in thine own�s upon me,
Whose head oft with thine own hand was staint,
And each particular hair to stand on end,
Like quills upon the fretful porcupine:
But this eternal blazon must not be
To ears of flesh and blood:— List, list, O list!—
If this did ever thy dear father love,—

Ham. O heaven!—

Ghost. Revenge his soul and most unnatural

Ham. Murder? [murder.]

Ghost. Murder most foul, as in the best it is,

But this most foul, strange, and unnatural:

Ham. Haste me to know it; that I, with wings
As meditation, or the thoughts of love, as swift
May sweep to my revenge.

Ghost. I find thee apt;

And sooner should'st thou be as light as the fat weed
That rots itself in ease on Lethe's wharfe,—

[hearken. 'Would'st thou not stir in this? Now, Hamlet,

'Tis given out, that sleeping in mine orchard,
A serpent stung me; so the whole ear of Denmark
Is by a forged process of my death

Banksly abused; but know, thou noble youth,
The serpent that did sting thy father's life,

Now wears his crown.

Ham. O, my prophetic soul! my uncle:

Ghost. Ay, that incestuous, that adulterate beast,
Whose flesh did feed on thine own筋s'stomach,
With his own taint' stinct, as it were a traitor's gift,

[O wicked wit, and gifts, that have the power
So to seduce!] I won to his shameful lust
The will of my most seeming virtuous queen;

O, Hamlet, what a falling-off was there!—
From whose love was of that dignity,

That it went hand in hand even with the vow
I made to her in marriage; and to decline
Upon a wretch, whose natural gifts were poor
To those of mine!—

But virtue, as it never will be mov'd,
Though lewdness court it in a shape of heaven;—
So lust, though to a radiant angel link'd,
Will sate itself in a celestial bed,
And prey on heavenly garb;

But, soft! I methinks, I scent the morning air;

Brief let me be:—Sleeping within mine orchard,
My custom always of the afternoon,

Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole,
With justest, and most cursed, and most hellish
And in the porches of mine ears did pour
The leperous distilment: whose effect

Holdst such an enmity with blood of man,
That, swift as quicksilver, it courses through
The natural gates and alleys of the body;

And curst, like eager droppings into milk,
The thin and wholesome blood: so did it mine;

And a most instant tetter bark'd about,

Most lazier, like with vile and loathsome crust,
All my smooth body.

Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand,

Of life, of crown, of queen, at once despatch'd;

Cut off in even the blossoms of my sin,

Unhousel'd, disappointed, unsniff'd;

No noosing mate made, but sent in recompence
With all my imperfections on my head:

O, horrible! O, horrible! most horrible
If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not;—

Let not the royal bed of Denmark be
A couch for luxury and damned incest.

But, however thou pursu'dst this act,
Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive
Against thy mother aught;—leave her to heaven,

And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge,

To prick and sting her. Fare thee well at once!—

The glow worm shows the matin to be near,

And 'gin's to pale his uneffectual fire:

Adieu, adieu, adieu! remember me.

[Exit.]

Ham. O all you host of heaven! O earth! What else?

In my heart, and shall I couple hell?—O fye!—Hold, hold;

And you, my sinews, grow not instant old,

But bear me stiffly up!—Remember thee?

Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a seat
In this distracted globe. Remember thee?

Vea, from the circuit of my memory,

I'll wipe away all trivial fond records,

All saws of books, all forms, all pressures past.

That youth and observation copied there,

And thy commandment all alone shall live

With this book and volume of my brain;

Unmix'd with baser matter: yes, by heaven,

O most pernicious woman!—O villain, villain, smiling, damned villain!

My tables,—meet it is, I set it down,

That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain;

At least, I am sure, it may be so in Denmark:

[Writing.]

So, uncle, there you are. Now to my word:

It is, Adieu, adieu! remember me.

I have sworn't.

Ham. [Within.] My lord, my lord,—

Mar. Within. Lord Hamlet,

Hor. [Within.] Heaven secure him!—

Mar. Within. I'llo, ho, ho, my lord

Ham. Ill, ho, ho, boy, I come, bird, come.

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Mar. How is't, my noble lord?

Hor. What news, my lord?

Ham. O, wonderful!—

Hor. Good my lord, tell it.

No;—

You will reveal it.

But I, Not 1, my lord, by heaven.

Mar. Nor 1, my lord.

Ham. How say you then; would heart of man,

But you'll be secret.—

Hor. Mar. Ay, by heaven, my lord.
Ham. There's ne'er a villain dwelling in all Den.
But he's an arrant knave.
Hor. There needs no ghost, my lord, come from.
To tell us this. [the grave, Ham.
Ham. Why, right; you are in the right;
And so without more circumstance at all,
I hold it fit, that we shake hands, and part:
You, as your business, and desire, shall point you:
For every man hath business, and desire,
Such as it is,—and for my own poor part,
Look you, I will go pray.
Hor. These are but wild and whirling words, my lord.
Ham. I am sorry they offend you, heartily; yes,
'Fair, heartily.
Hor. There's no offence, my lord.
Ham. Yes, by St. Patrick, but there is; Horatio,
And much offence too. Touching this vision here,
It is an honest ghost, that let me tell you:
For your desire to know what is between us,
O'er-master it as you may. And now, good friends,
As you are friends, scholars, and soldiers,
Give me one poor request.
Hor. What is't, my lord?
We will.
Ham. Never make known what you have seen to-night.
Hor. Mar. My lord, we will not.
Ham. Nay, but swear't.
Hor. In faith, my lord, not I.
Mar. Nor I, my lord, in faith.
Ham. Upon my sword.
Mar. We have sworn, my lord, already.
Ham. Indeed, upon my sword, indeed.
Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.
Ham. Ha, ha, boy! say'st thou so? art thou
There, true-jenny?
Come on—you hear this fellow in the cellarage,
Consent to swear.
Hor. Propose the oath, my lord.
Ham. Never to speak of this that you have seen,
Swear by my sword.
Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.
Ham. Hicet ubique? then we'll shift our ground:
Come hither, gentlemen,
And lay your hands again upon my sword:
Swear by my sword,
Never to speak of this that you have heard.
Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear by his sword.
Ham. Well said, old mole! canst not work
The earth so fast? [friends
A worthy pioneer!—Once more remove, good
Hor. 10 day and night, and this is wondrous strange!
[come.
Ham. And therefore as a stranger give it weel—
There are more things in heaven and earth, Hora-
Than are dreamt of in your philosophies.
[tio, but come——
Here, as before, never, so help you mercy!
How strange or odd soe'er I bear myself,
As I, perchance, hereafter shall think meet
To put an antic disposition on—
That seeing me, never shall
With arms encumber'd thus, or this head-shake,
Or by pronouncing of some doubtful phrase,
As, Well, well, we know — or, W. could, an if we would — or, If we list to speak — or, There be, an if they might —
Or such ambiguous giving out, to note
That you know aught of me:—This do you swear,
So grace and mercy at your most need help you!
Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.
Ham. Rest, rest, perturbed spirit! So, gentlemen,
With all my love I do commend me to you:
And what so poor a man as Hamlet is
May do, to express his love and friendships to you,
God willing, shall not lack. Let us go in together;
And still your fingers on your lips, I pray.
The time is out of joint:—O cursed spite!
That ever I was born to set it right.
Nay, come, let's go together.
[Exeunt.
Rey. My lord, I have.

Pol. God be wi' you; fare you well.

Rey. Good my lord,

Pol. Observe his inclination in yourself.

Rey. I shall, my lord.

Pol. And let him ply his musick.

Rey. Well, my lord.

[Exit.

Enter Ophelia.

Pol. Farewell!—How now, Ophelia? what's the matter? [affrighted]

Oph. O, my lord, my lord, I have been so

Pol. With what, in the name of heaven?

Oph. My lord, as I was sewing in my closet,

Lord Hamlet, with his doublet on unbrac'd;

No hat upon his head; his stockings foult'd,

Ungarter'd, and down-gyved to his ancle;

Pale as his shirt; his knees knocking each other;

And with a look so piteous in purport,

As if he had been loosed out of hell,

To speak of horrors,—he comes before me.

Pol. Mad for thy love?

Oph. But, truly, I do fear it.

Pol. What said he?

Oph. He took me by the wrist, and held me hard;

Then goes he to the length of all his arm;

And, with his other hand thus o'er his brow,

He falls to such perusal of my face,

As he would draw it. Long stay'd he so;

At last he rais'd a shaking of mine arm;

And thrice his head thus wandering up and down,

He rais'd a sigh so piteous and profound,

As it did seem to shatter all his bulk,

And end his being: That done, he lets me go;

And, with his head over his shoulder turn'd,

He seem'd to find his way without his eyes;

For out o'doors he went without their helps,

And, to the last, bended their light on me.

Pol. Come, go with me; I will go seek the king.

This is the very ecstasy of love;
Whose want of property foredoes itself,
And leads the will to desperate undertakings,
As oft as any passion under heaven,
That does afflict our natures. I am sorry,—
What, have you given him any hard words of late?

Oph. No, my good lord; but, as you did commend
I did repel his letters, and denied [mand,
His access to me.

Pol. That hath made him mad.
I am sorry, that with better heed, and judgment,

I had not quoted him: I fear'd, he did but trifle,

And meant to wreck thee; but, beshrew my jae;

It seems, it is as proper to our age [lousy!
To cast beyond ourselves in our opinions,
As it is common for the younger sort
To lack discretion. Come, go we to the king;
This must be known; which, being kept close,

More grief to hide, than hate to utter love.

Come. [Exit.

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter King, Queen, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern,
And Attendants.

King. Welcome, dear Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern!
Moreover that we much did long to see you,
The need, we have to use you, did provoke
Our hasty sending. Something have you heard
Of Hamlet's transformation; so I call it,
Since not the exterior nor the inward man
Resembles that it was: What it should be,
[him] More than that, our father's death, that thus hath put
So much from the understanding of himself,
I cannot dream of: I entertain you both,
That,—being of so young days brought up with
him;
And, since so neighbour'd to his youth and but
That you vouchsafe your rest here in our court...
Answer, and think upon this business.

Mean time, we thank you for your well-took labour:
Go to your rest; at night we'll feast together:
Most welcome home!

[Exit Voltimand and Cornelius.]

Pol. This business is well ended.
My liege, and madam, to expostulate
What majesty should be, what duty is,
Why day is day, night, night, and time is time,
Were nothing but to waste night, day, and time.
Therefore, there's sadness in the soul of wit,
And tediousness the limbs and outward flourish,
I will be brief: Your noble son Is mad:
Mad call I it: for, to define true madness,
What 'tis, but to be nothing else but mad:
But that go.

Queen. More matter, with less art.
Pol. Madam, I swear, I use no art at all.
That he is mad, 'tis true; 'tis true, 'tis pity;
And pity 'tis, 'tis true: a foolish figure;
But farewell it, for, I will use no art.
Mad let us grant him then; and now remains,
That we find out the cause of this effect;
Or, rather say, the cause of this defect;
For this effect, defective, comes by cause:
Thus it remains, and the remainder thus.

Per. I have a daughter; have, while she is mine;
Who, in her duty and obedience, mark,
Hath given me this: now gather, and surmise.
To the celestial, and my soul's idol, the most beautified Ophelia,
That's an ill phrase, a vile phrase; beautified is a vile phrase; but you shall hear— thus: —
In her excellent white gown, these, &c.—
Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her?
Pol. Good madam, stay awhile; I will be faithful.

Doubt thou, the stars are fire; — [Reads.
I doubt, that the sun doth move;
Doubt truth to be a liar; —
But never doubt, I love,
O dear Ophelia, I am ill at these numbers: I have not at reckoning my groats: but that I love thee best,
O must best, believe it. Adieu.
Thine evermore, most dear lady, whilst this machine is to him, Hamlet."

This, in obedience, hath my daughter shown me:
And more above, hath his solicitings,
As they fell out by time, by means, and place,
All given to mine ear.

Receiv'd his love?

What do you think of me?

As of a man faithful and honourable.

I would fain prove so. But what might you think.

When I had seen this hot love on the wing,
(As I perceive it, I must tell you that,
Before my daughter told me,) what might you,
Or my dear majesty your queen here, think,
If it had play'd the desk, or table-book;
Or given my heart a working, muite and dumb;
Or look'd upon this love with idle sight;
What might you think? no, I went round to work,
And my young mistress thus did I bespeak;
Lord Hamlet is a prince out of thy sphere;
This must not be; and then I precipitately gare her,
That she should look herself from his consort,
Admit no messengers, receive no tokens.
Which done, she took the fruits of my advice; and he, repulsed, (a short tale to make,) Felt into a sadness; and then I precipitately gare her,
That she should look herself from his resort,
Admit no messengers, receive no tokens.

When it prov'd other wise?

Not that I know.

Pol. Take this from this, if this be otherwise:
[Pointing to his head and shoulder
If circumstances lead me, I will find
Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeed
Within the centre.

King. How may we try it further?

Pol. You know, sometimes he walks four hours
Here in the lobby.

[Together, and then separate.

Pol. At such a time I'll lose my daughter to Be you and I behind an array then;
[him
Mark the encounter: if he love her not,
And be not from his reason fallen thereon,
Let me be no assistant for a state,
But keep a farm, and carter. We will try it.

Enter Hamlet, reading.

Queen. But, look, where sadly the poor wretch
Comes reading.

Pol. Away, I do beseech you, both away;
I'll board him presently: — 0, give me leave.—

[Exit King, Queen, and Attendants.

How do my good lord Hamlet?

Ham. Well, god-a-mercy;

Pol. Do you know me, my lord?

Ham. Excellent well; you are a fishmonger.

Pol. Not I, my lord.

Ham. Then I would you were so honest a man.

Pol. Honest, my lord.

Ham. Ay, sir; to be honest, as this world goes,
is to be one man picked out of ten thousand.

Pol. That's very true, my lord.

Ham. For if the sun breed maggots in a dead dog, being a god, kissing ear-rion. — Have you a daughter?

Pol. I have, my lord.

Ham. Let her not walk i' the sun: conception is a blessing; but as your daughter may conceive,— friend, look to't.

Pol. How say you by that? [Aside.] Still harping on my daughter: — yet he knew me not at first: he said I was a fishmonger: He is far gone, far gone: and truly in my youth I suffered much extremity for love; very near this. I'll speak to him again. — What do you read, my lord?

Ham. Words, words, words!

Pol. What is the matter, my lord?

Ham. Between who?

Pol. I mean, the matter that you read, my lord.

Ham. Slanders, sir; for the satirical rogue says here, that old men have grey beards; that their faces are wrinkled; their eyes purging thick amber, and plum-tree gum; and that they have a plentiful lack of wit, together with most weak hams: All of which, sir, though I most powerfully and potently believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down; for yourself, sir, shall be as old as I am, if, like a crab, you could go backward.

Pol. Though this he madness, yet there's method in it. [Aside.] Will you walk out o' the air, my lord?

Ham. Into my grave.

Pol. Indeed, that is out o' the air.— How pregnant sometimes his replies are! a happiness that often madness hits on, which reason and sanity could not so prosperously be delivered of. I will leave him, and suddenly contrive the means of meeting between him and my daughter.— My honorable lord, I will most humbly take my leave of you.

Ham. You cannot, sir, take from me any thing that I will more willingly part withal; except my life, except my life, except my life.

Pol. Fare you well, my lord.

Ham. These tedious old fools! [Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Pol. You go to seek the lord Hamlet; there he is.

Guil. My honour'd lord!—

Ros. My most dear lord!—

Ham. My excellent good friends! How dost thou, Guildenstern? Ah, Rosencrantz! Good lords, do not contradict me.

Ros. As the indifferent children of the earth.

Guil. Happy, in that we are not overhappy; On fortune's cap we are not the very button.

Ham. Nor the soles of her shoe? Ros.

Ham. Then is your sentence past?

Ros. None, my lord; but that the world's grown honest.

Ham. Then is dooms-day near: But your news is not true. Let me question more in particular; What have you, my good friends, deserved at the hands of fortune, that she sends you to prison hither?

Guil. Prison, my lord?

Ham. Denmark's a prison.

Ros. Then is the world as vast as a dream.

Ham. A dream itself is but a shadow.

Ros. Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality, that it is but a shadow's shadow.

Ham. Then are our beggars, bodies; and our monarchs, and outstretched heroes, the beggar's shadows: Shall we to the court? for, by my say, I cannot reason.

Ros. Guil. We'll wait upon you.

Ham. No such matter: I will not sort you with the crowd of common visitors; for, to speak to you like an honest man, I am most dreadfully attended. But, in the beaten way of friendship, what make you at Elsinore?

Ros. To visit you, my lord; no other occasion.

Ham. Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks; but I thank you: and sure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear, a half-penny. Were you not sent for? Is it your own inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, come; deal justly with me: come, come; nay, speak.

Guil. What should we say, my lord?

Ham. Any thing—but to the purpose. You were sent for; and there is a kind of confession in your looks, which your modesties have not craft enough to colour: I know, the good king and queen have sent for you.

Ros. To what end, my lord?

Ham. That you must teach me. But let me conjure you, by the rights of our fellowship, by the consonnancy of your youth, by the obligation of our ever-ready love, and by what more dear a better proposer could charge you withal, be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for, or no?

Ros. What say you? [To Guildenstern. Exit. Ham. Nay, then I have an eye of you; [Aside.]—if you love me, hold not off.

Guil. My lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen moul no feather. I have of late, (but, wherefore, I know not,) lost all my mire, forgone all custom of exercises: and, in deed, it goes so heavily with my disposition, that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a steri promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, too, I fear, is grown to such a change, that our majestical roof fretted with golden fire, why, it appears no other thing to me, than a foul and pes-tilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infi finite in faculties! in form, and moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust? man delights not on -thou art a strumpet; though, by your smiling, you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there is no such stuff in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh then, when I said,

Man delights not on me?

Ros. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what lenent entertainment the players shall receive from you: we coted them on the way; and hither are they coming, to offer you service.

Ham. And is that the king, shall be welcome; his majesty shall have tribute of me: the adventurous knight shall use his foil, and target: the lover shall not sigh gratis; the humorous man shall end his part in peace: the clown shall make his mirth; whose lungs are tickled o'er yerer, and the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for't.—What players are they?

Ros. Even those you were wont to take such delight in, the tragedians of the city.

Ham. How chances it, they travel? their resi-idence, both in reputation and profit, was better both ways.

Ros. I think, their inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation.

Ham. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city? Are they so followed?

Ros. No, indeed, they are not.

Ham. How comes it? Do they grow rusty?

Ros. Nay, their endeavours keeps in the wonted pace: But there is, sir, an alery of children, little gyases, that cry out on the top of question, and are most tyrannically clapped for't: these are now the fashion; and so berattle the common stages, (so they call them,) that many, wearing rapiers, are afraid of goose quills, and dare scarce come thither.

Ham. But, by their play, are they clever, or maintain them? how are they escoted? Will they pursue the quality no longer than they can sing? will they not say afterwards, if they should grow them-severs to common players, (as it is most like, if their means are not better,) their writers do them wrong, to make them exclaim against their own succession?

Ros. Faith, there has been much to do on both sides; and the nation holds it no sin to tarre them off, if they come to them every other season, or who maintain them? are they escoted? will they pursue the quality no longer than they can sing? will they not say afterwards, if they should grow them-
severs to common players, (as it is most like, if their means are not better,) their writers do them wrong, to make them exclaim against their own
succession?

with you in this garb; lest my extency to the players, which, I tell you, must show fairly outward, should more appear like entertainment than yours. You are welcome: but my uncle-father, and aunt-mother, are deceived.

Get. In what is my dear lord?

Ham. I am but mad north-north-west: when the wind is southerly, I know a hawk from a handsaw.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. Well be you with him, gentlemen!

Ham. Hark you, Guildenstern,—and you too:—

at each ear a hearer; that great lady, you see there, is not yet out of his swaddling clouts.

Pol. He's the second time he comes to me; for, they say, an old man is twice a child.

Ham. I will prophesy, he comes to tell me of the players; mark it.—You say right, sir: o'Monday morning; 'twas then, indeed.

Pol. My lord, I have news to tell you.

Ham. My lord, I have news to tell you. When Roscius was an actor in Rome,——

Pol. The actors are come hither, my lord.

Ham. Bus, bus.

Pol. Upon my honour,—

Ham. Th' a came each actor on his ass,—

Pol. The best actors in the world, either for tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pastoral-comical, historical-pastoral, tragical-historical, tragical-comical, historical-tragical, some singular, some inimitable, some poem unlimited: Seneca cannot be too heavy, nor Plautus too light. For the law of wit, and the liberty, these are the only men.

Ham. O Jephthah, judge of Israel,—what a treasure hadst thou?

Pol. What a treasure had he, my lord?

Ham. Why. One fray daughter, and no more, The which he loved passing well.

Pol. Still on my daughter.

Ham. [Aside.]

Am I not the right, old Jephthah?

Pol. If you call me Jephthah, my lord, I have a daughter, that I love passing well.

Ham. Nay, that follows not.

Pol. What follows then, my lord?

Ham. Why, As by Ido, God wot, and then, you know, It came to pass, As most like it was. —The first row of the pious chanson will show you more: for look, my abridgment comes.

Enter Four or Five Players.

You are welcome, masters; welcome, all:—I am glad to see thee well:—welcome, good friends.——

0, old friend! Why, thy face is valanced since I saw thee last; Com'th thou to beard me in Denmark? What! my young lady and mistress! By th' lady, your ladyship is nearer to heaven, than when I saw you last, by the altitude of a chappie. Pray God, your voice, like a piece of incurrant gold, be not cracked within the ring.—Masters, you are all welcome. We'll e'en tot like French falconers, fly at any thing we see: We'll have a speech straight: Come, give us a taste of your quality; come, a passion-speech.

1 Play. What speech, my lord?

Ham. I will speak the speech once,——but it was never acted; or, if it was, not above once; for the play, I remember, pleased not the million; 'twas caviare to the general: but it was (as I received it, and others, whose judgments, in such matters, cried in the top of mine,) an excellent play; well digested: and the scenes, set down with as much modesty as cunning. I remember, one said, there were no sallies in the lines, to make the matter savouri: nor no matter in the phrase, that might indicate an author of affection; but called it, an honest methodic chaplet; and by very much more handsome than one. Fine speech in one it chiefly loved: 'twas Eneas'tale to Dido; and thereof about it especially, where he speaks of Priam's daughter: If it live in your memory, begin at this line; let me see, let me see;——

The rugged Pyrrhus, like the Hyrcanian beast,— 'tis not so; it begins with Pyrrhus. The rugged Pyrrhus,—he, whose noble arms, Black as his purpose, did the night resemble When he lay couched in the ominous horse, Hath now this dread and black complexion worn'd With heraldry more than correct; head to foot Now is he total gutes; horribly trick'd With blood of fathers, mothers, daughters, sons: Bak'd and impast'd with the parching streets, That tend a tyrannous and a demented light To their lord's murderer; Roasted in wrath, and fire, And thus o'er-sliced with consolating gore With eyes like carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus Old grandaire Priam seems:——So proceed you.

Pol. 'Fore God, my lord, well spoken; with good accent, and good discretion.

1 Play. Anon he finds him

Striking too short at Greeks; his antique sword, Rebellious to his arm, lies where it falls, Repugnant to command: Uncivil match'd, Pyrrhus at Priam drives: in rage, strikes wide: but with the whip and mind of his fell sword The unserved fitter falls. Then senseless Illium, seeming to feel this blow, with flaming top Stoops to his base; and with a hideous crash Takes prisoner Pyrrhus' ear: for, lo! his sword Which was declining on the midnight stars Of reverend Priam, seem'd, 'tis the air to strike: So, as a painted tyrant, Pyrrhus stood: And, like a neutral to his will and matter, Did nothing.

But, as we often see, against some storm, A silence in the heavens, the rock stand still, The bold winds speechless, and the orb below As hush as death: anon the dreadful thunder Dotth rend the region: So, after Pyrrhus' pause, A roused vengeance sets him on his work: And never did the Cyclops' hammers fall On Mars' armour, forg'd for proof e'erone, With less remorse than Pyrrhus' bleeding sword Now falls on Priam. Out, out, thou strumpet, Fortune! All you gods, In general synod, take away her power: Break all the spoaks and fullies from her wheel, And bond the round wave down the hill of heaven, As low as to the founds!

Pol. This is too long.

Ham. It shall to the barber's, with your beard. Pr'ythee, say on:—He's for a jig, or a tale of bawdry, or he sleeps——say on: come to Hebeus.

1 Play. But no, ah no! had seen the mobbed Ham. The mobbed queen?——

1 Play. That's good; nobled queen is good.

1 Play. Run barefoot up and down, threatening the flames With bison rhiuen: a cloud upon the head, Where late the diadem stood: and, for a robe, About her rank and all o'er-loom'd teems, A blanket, in the alarm of fear caught up; Who this had seen, with tongue in venom steep'd, 'Gainst fortune's state would treason have pronounced.

But if the gods themselves did see her then, When she saw Pyrrhus make malicious sport In mixing with his sword her husband's limb; The instant burst of clamour that he made, (Unless things mortal move them not at all,) Would have made milch the burning eye of heaven, And passion in the gods.

Pol. Look, whether he be not turn'd his countenance, and has tears in his eye: Pr'ythee, no more.

Ham. 'Tis well; I'll have these speak out the rest of this soon.—Good my lord, will you see the players well bestowed? Do you hear, let them be well used; for they are the abstract, and brief chronicles, of the time: After your death you were better have a bad epitaph, than their ill report while you live.

Pol. My lord, I will use them according to their desert.

Ham. Odd's bodkin, man, much better: Use every man after his desert, and who shall 'scape whippimg? Use them after your own honour and dignity: The less they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in.

Pol. Come, sir. [Exit Pol. with some of the Play.

Ham. Follow him, friends: we'll hear a play to morrow.--Dost thou hear me, old friend; can you play--the murder of Gonzago?

1 I. Ay, my lord.

Ham. We'll have it to-morrow night. You could, for a need, study a speech of some dozen or sixteen lines, which I would set down, and insert 't in could.

1 I. Play, Ay, my lord.

Ham. Very well.----Follow that lord; and look you mock him not. [Exit Player.] My good friends, [To Ros. and Guild.] I'll leave you till night; you are welcome to the palace.

Ros. Good my lord! [Exit Rosen. and Guild.

Ham. Ay, so, God be wi' you!--Now I am alone.

O, what a rogue and peasant slave am I! Is it not monstrous, that this player here, But in a fiction, in a dream of passion, Could force his soul so to his own conceit, That from her working, all his visage wann'd; Tears in his eyes, distraction in his aspect, A broken voice, and his whole function suitting What for this conceit? And all for nothing! For Hecuba!

What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba, That he should weep for her? What would he do, Had he the motive and the cue for passion, That this poor player should unstore his heart, And cleave the general ear, with horrid speech; Make mad the guilty, and appall the free, Confound the ignorant; and amaze, indeed, The very faculties of eyes and ears.

Yet I, A dull and muddy-mettled rascal, peak, Like John a-dreams, unpregnant of my cause, And can say nothing; no, not for a king, Upon whose property, and most dear life, A damnd defeat was made. Am I a coward? Who calls me villain? breaks my pate across? Plucks off my beard, and blows it in my face? Tweaks me by the nose? gives me the lie in the throat, As deep as to the lungs? Who does me this? Ha!

Why, I should take it: for it cannot be, But I am pigeon-liver'd, and lack gall To make oppression bitter; or, ere this, I should have fatted all the region kites With this sudden offal: Bloody, bawdy villain! Remorseless, treacherous, lecherous, kindless villain!

Why, what an ass am I? This is most brave; That I, the son of a dear father murder'd, Prompted to my revenge by heaven and hell, Must, like a whore, unpack my heart with words, And fall a cursing, like a very drab, A scullion! [have heard, Fye upon't! foh! About my brains! Humph! I That guilty creatures, sitting at a play, Having the very curving of my name; Been struck so to the soul, that presently They have proclaim'd their malefactions; For murder, though it have no tongue, will speak With most miraculous organ. I'll have these play

Play something like the murder of my father, Before mine uncle: I'll observe his looks; I'll tent him to the quick; if he do blench, I know my course. The spirit that I have seen, Play me, and the devil hath power To assume a pleasing shape; yea, and, perhaps, Out of my weakness, and my melancholy, (As he is very potent with such spirits,) Abuses me to damn me: I'll have grounds More relative than this: The play's the thing, Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king.

[Exit.
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

That flesh is heir to,—tis a consumption Devoutly to be wish'd. To die;—to sleep;—
To sleep! perchance to dream;—ay, there's the rub;
For in that sleep of death what dreams may come.
When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
Must give us pause: there's the respect,
That makes calamity of so long life:
For who would bear the whips and scorns of time,
The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely,
The pangs of despis'd love, the law's delay,
The insolence of office, and the spurrs
That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
When he himself might his quietus make
With a bare bodkin? who would fardels bear,
The weight and bulk of thisworld's朽
But that the dread of something after death,
The undiscover'd country, from whose bourn
No traveller returns,—puzzles the will;
And makes us rather bear those ills we have,
Than fly to others that we know not of?
Thus conscience does make cowards of us all;
And thus the native hue of resolution
Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought;
And enterprises of great pith and moment,
With this regard, their currents turn awry,
And lose the name of action.—Soft you, now!
The fair Ophelia: Nymph, in thy orisons
Be all my sins remember'd.

Oph. Good my lord, How does your honour for this many a day? Ham. I humbly thank you; well.

Oph. My lord, I have remembrances of yours,
That I have longed long to re-deliver;
I pray you, now receive them.

Ham. No, not I; I never gave you ought.

Oph. My honour'd lord, you know right well,
And, with them, words of so sweet breath compost,
As made the things more rich: their perfume lost,
Take these again; for to the noble mind,
Rich gifts wax poor, when givers prove unkind.

There, my lord.

Ham. Ha, ha! are you honest?

Oph. My lord?

Ham. Are you fair?

Oph. What means your lordship?

Ham. That if you be honest, and fair, you should admit no discourse to your beauty.

Oph. Could beauty, my lord, have better commerce with him than my lord?

Ham. Ay, truly; for the power of beauty will sooner transform honesty from what it is to a bawd, then the force of honesty can translate beauty into his likeness; this was some time a paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love you once.

Oph. Indeed, my lord, you made me believe so.

Ham. You should not have believed me: for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock, but we shall relish of it: I lov'd you not.

Oph. I was the more deceiv'd.

Ham. Get thee to a nunnery; Why wouldst thou be a breeder of sinners? I am myself indifferent honest; but yet I could accuse me of such things, that it were better, my mother had not born me: I am very proud, revengeful, ambitious; with more offences at my back, than I have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to act them in: What should such fellows as I do crawling between earth and heaven? We are arraign'd of our own offences. Go thy ways to a nunnery. Where's your father?

Oph. At home, my lord.

Ham. Let the doors be shut upon him; that he may play the fool no where but in's own house.

Farewell.

Oph. O, help him, you sweet heavens!

Ham. If thou dost marry, I'll give thee this plague for thy dowry; Be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny. Get thee to a nunnery; farewell; Or, if thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool; for wise men know well enough, what monsters you make of them. To a nunnery, go; and quickly too. Farewell.

Oph. Heaven powers, restore him!

Ham. I have heard of your paintings too, well enough; God hath given you one face, and you make yourself another: a woman may keep a secret, and have the tongue: or you may tell it, and have the wit to keep it. Let women make their painters well; and then come to the judgment of their work. If you must be in love, let it be to a monster; and when you have mark'd the beast, be gone. What will the mollusk do? Zeal of God honest, and patience: God keep the women well in their husband's house! I was never so sportive: to a nunnery, go.

Enter Hamlet, and certain Players.

Ham. Speak the speech, I prays you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue: but if you mouth it, as many of your players do, I had as lief the town-crier spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus: but use all gently: for in the very torrent, tempest, and as I may say, whirlwind of your passion, you must acquire and beget a temperature, that may give it smoothness. O, it offends the soul, to hear a robustious periwig-pated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings: who, for the most part, are capable of nothing but the smell and sound: I would have such a fellow whipped for o'er-doing Termagant: it out-herods Herod; pray you, avoid it.

1 Play. I warrant your honour.

Ham. Be not too tame neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor: suit the action to the word, the word to the action; with this special observance, that you o'er-step not the modesty of nature; for anything so overdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end, both at the first, and now, was, and is, to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature; to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time, his form and pressure. Now this, overdone, or come tardy off, though it make the unskilful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve; the censure of which one, must, in your and mine, o'er weigh a whole theatre of others. O, the theft, the players, that I have seen play, and heard others praise, and that highly,—not to speak it profanely, that, neither having the accent of Christians, nor the gait of Christian, pagan, man, nor have so strutted, and beliwed, that I have that nature's journeymen had made men, and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.

I Play. I hope, we have reformed that differently with us.

Ham. O, reform it altogether. And let those, that play your clowns, speak no more than is set down for them; for there be of them, that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too; though, in the mean time, the very question of the play be then to be considered: that's villainous; and shows a most pitifull ambition in the fool that uses it. Go, make you ready.

[Exit Players.]

Enter Polonius, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

How now, my lord? will the king hear this piece of work?

Pol. And the queen too, and that presently.

Ham. Bid the players make h.statement.

Will you two help to hasten them?

Both. Ay, my lord.

[Exit Polonius.]

Ham. What, ho; Horatio!

Enter Horatio.

Hor. Here, sweet lord, at your service.

Ham. Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man As e'er my conversation cop'd withal.

Hor. O, my dear lord.

Ham. Nay, do not think I flatter:
For so much advancement may I hope from thee,
That no revenue hast, but thy good spirits,
To feed, and clothe thee? Why should the poor
No, let the candied tongue liek absorbs pomp;
And crook the pregnant hinges of the knee,
Where thrift may follow fawning. Dost thou hear?
Since my dear soul was mistress of her choice,
And cou'd of men distinguish her election,
She hath seal'd thee for herself: for thou hast been
As one, in suffering all, that suffers nothing;
A man, that fortune's buffets and rewards
Hast ta'en with equal thanks: and bless'd'd are those,
Whose blood and judgment are so well co-mingled,
That they are not a pipe for fortune's frown.
To sound what stop she please: Give me that man
That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him
In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart,
As I do thee.—Something too much of this.

There is a play to-night before the king;
One scene of it comes near the circumstance,
Which I have told thee of my father's death.
I pray thee, when thou seest that act a-foot,
Even with the very comment of thy soul
Observe my master if his occulted guilt
Do not itself unkennel in one speech;
It is a damned ghost that we have seen;
And my imaginations are as foul
As Vulcan's stithy. Give him heedful note:
For I mine eyes will rivet to his face;
And, after, we will both our judgments join
In censure of his seeming.

Hor. Well, my lord:
If he steal aught, whilst this play is playing,
And scape detecting, I will pay the theft.

Ham. They are coming to the play; I must be
Get you a place.

[Idie.]

Danish mirth. A flourish. Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Ophelia, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and others.

King. How fares our cousin Hamlet?

Ham. Excellent, i' faith; of the cameleon's dish: I eat the air, promise-grammed: You cannot feed capacious players.

King. I have nothing with this answer, Hamlet; these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine now. My lord,—you played once in the university, you say? [To Polonius.

Pol. I did I, my lord; and was accounted a good actor.

Ham. And what did you enact?

Pol. I did enact Julius Caesar: I was killed 't he Capitol; Brutus killed me.

Ham. It was a brute part of him, to kill so capital a calf there.—Be the players ready?

Ros. Ay, my lord: they stay upon your patience.

Queen. Come hither, my dear Hamlet, sit by me.

Ham. No, good mother, here's metal more attractive to an ear, than the truest armour in your royal armory.

Pol. O ho! do you mark that? [To the King.

Ham. Lady, shall I lie in your lap? [Lying down at Ophelia's feet.

Oph. No, my lord.

Ham. I mean, I have upon your lap?

Oph. No, my lord.

Ham. Do you think, I mean country matters?

Oph. I think nothing, my lord.

Ham. That's a fair thought to lie between maids' legs.

Oph. What is, my lord?

Ham. Nothing.

Oph. You are merry, my lord.

Ham. Who, I?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. O! my only jig-maker. What should a man do, but be merry? for, look you, how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within these two hours.

Oph. Nay, 'tis twice two months, my lord.

Ham. So long? Nay, then let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables. O heavens! die two months ago, and not forgotten yet? Then there's hope, a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year. But, by'r lady, he must build churches then: or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the hobby-horse; whose epitaph is, For, O, for, O, the hobby-horse is forgot.

Trumpets sound. The dumb show follows.

Enter a King and a Queen, very lovingly; the Queen embracing him, and he her. She kneels, and makes show of protestation unto him. He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck: lays him down upon a bank of flowers; she, seeing him asleep, leaves him. Amon comes in a fellow, takes off his crown, kisses it, and pours poison in the King's ears, and exit. The Queen returns; finds the King dead, and makes passionate action. The poisoner, with some two or three mates, comes in again, seeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away. The poisoner woos the Queen with gifts; she seems loath and unwilling awhile, but, in the end, accepts his love.

[Exeunt.]

Oph. What means this, my lord? Ham. Merry, this is miching mallecho; it means mischief.

Oph. Belike, this show imports the argument of the play.

Enter Prologue.

Ham. We shall know by this fellow. the players cannot keep counsel; they'll tell all.

Oph. Will he tell us what this show meant?

Ham. Ay, or any show that you'll show him. Be not you ashamed to show, he'll not shame to tell you what it means.
Ham. If she should break it now.—[To Ophelia.]

P. King. 'Tis deeply sworn. Sweet, leave me here a while;
My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile
The tedious day with sleep. [Sleep.]

P. Queen. Sleep rock thy brain, and never come mischance between us twain! [Exit]

Ham. Madam, how like you this play? Queen. The lady doth protest too much, methinks.

Ham. O, but she'll keep her word.

King. Have you heard the argument? Is there no offence in't?

Ham. No, no, they do but jest, poison in jest; no offence in the world.

King. What do you call the play?

Ham. The mouse-trap. Marry, how? Tropically. This play is the image of a murder done in Vienna: Gonzago is the duke's name; his wife, Baptista: you shall see anon; 'tis a knavish piece of work: But what of that? your majesty, and we that have free souls, it touches us not: Let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung.—

Enter Lucianus.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the king. Oph. You are as good as a chorus, my lord.

Ham. I could interpret between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying.

Oph. You are keen, my lord, you are keen.

Ham. It would cost you a groaning, to take off my edge.

Oph. Still better, and worse.

Ham. So you mistake your husbands.—Begin, murderer:—leave thy damnable faces, and begin.

Enter Lucianus.

Doth bellow for revenge. [time agreeing:]

Luc. Thoughts black, hands apt, drugs fit, and Confederate season, else no creature seeing;

[Pour the poison into the sleepy ear.]

Ham. I'll poison him (the garden for his estate.
His name's Gonzago; the story is exact, and written in very choice Italian: You shall see anon, how the murderer gets the love of Gonzago's wife.

Oph. The king rises.

[Exeunt all but Hamlet and Horatio.]

Ham. Why, let the stricken deer go weep,
The heart ungalled play:
For some must watch, while some must sleep;
Thus runs the world away.—

Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers, if (the rest of my fortune (the Turk with me), with two Provencal roses on my razed shoes, get me a fellowship in a cry of players, sir? Hor. Half a share.

Ham. A whole one, I.

For thou art my enemy, O Damon dear.

This realm dismantled was
Of Jove himself; and now reigns here
A very, very—peacock.

Hor. You might have rhymed.

Ham. O good Horatio, I'll take the ghost's word for a thousand pound. Didst perceive?

Hor. Very well, my lord.

Ham. Upon the talk of the poisoning,—

Hor. I did very well note him.

Ham. Ah, hark!—Come, some music:—come the recorders.—

For if the king like not the comedy,

Why then, belike—he likes it not, perdy:

Both here, and hence, pursue me lasting strife,

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Gail. Good my lord, vouchsafe me a word with you.

Ham. Sir, a whole history.

Gail. The king, sir, what of him?

Gail. Is, in his retirement, marvellous distempered.

Ham. With drink, sir?

Gail. No, my lord, with choler.

Ham. Should he show itself more rich, to signify this to the doctor; for, for me to put him to his purgation, would, perhaps, plunge him into more choler.

Gail. Good my lord, put your discourse into some frame: I start wildly from my affair.

Ham. I am tame, sir:—pronounce.

Gail. The queen, your mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Gail. Nay, my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment: if not, your pardon, and my return, shall be the end of my business.

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

Gail. What, my lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer; my wit's diseased: But, sir, such answer as I can make, you shall command; or, rather, as you say, my mother: therefore, no more, but to the matter: My mother, you say—

Ros. Then thus she says; Your behaviour hath struck her into amazement and admiration.

Ham. O wonderful son, that can so astonish a mother! E'en there is no sequel at the heels of this mother's admiration! Impart.

Ros. She desires to speak with you in her closet, ere you go to bed.

Ham. We shall other, were she ten times our mother. Have you any further trade with us?

Ros. My lord, you once did love me.

Ham. And do still, by these pickers and stealers. Good my lord, what is your cause of distemper? do you, surely, but have the door upon your own liberty, if you deny your griefs to your friends.

Ham. Sir, I lack advancement.

Ros. How can that be, when you have the voice of the king himself for your succession in Denmark?

Ham. Ay, sir, but, While the grass grows,—the proverb is something musty.

Enter the Players, with recorders.

O, the recorders: let me see one.—To withdraw with you: Why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toil?

Gail. O, my lord, if my duty be too bold, my love is too unmanly.

Ham. I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe?

Gail. My lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Gail. Believe me, I cannot.

Ham. I do beseech you.

Gail. I know no touch of it, my lord.

Ham. 'Tis as easy as lying: govern these vents with your fingers and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most elegant music. Look you, these are the stops.

Gail. But these cannot I command to any utterance of harmony; I have not the skill.

Ham. Well, look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me. You would play upon me; you would seem to know my stops; you would pluck out the heart of my mystery; you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass; and there is much music, excellent voice, in this little organ; yet cannot you make it speak. 'Sblood, do you think, I am easier to be played on than a pipe? Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play upon me.

Enter Polonius.

God bless you, sir!

Pol. My lord, the queen would speak with you, and presently.

Ham. Do you see yonder cloud, that's almost in shape of a camel?

Pol. By the mass, and 'tis like a camel, indeed.

Ham. Methinks, it is like a weasel.

Pol. It is backed like a weasel.

Ham. Or, wisdom like a whale?

Pol. Very like a whale.

Ham. Then will I come to my mother by and by. They fool me to the top of my bent.—I will come by and by.

Pol. I will say so. [Exit Polonius.

Ham. By and by is easily said. Leave me, friends.

Gail. [Exeunt Ros. Gail. Hor., &c.

'Tis now the very witching time of night; [out When churchyards yawn, and hell itself breathes— Contagion to this world: Now could I drink hot And do such business as the bitter day [blood, Would quake to look on. Soft; now to my mother.—

O, heart, lose not thy nature; let not ever The soul of Nero enter this firm bosom: Let the hard cruelest, not unnatural; I will speak daggers to her, but use none; My tongue and soul in this be hypocrites: How in my words soever she be shent, To give them seals never, my soul, consent! [Exit.

SCENE III.—A Room in the same.

Enter King, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. I like him not; nor stands it safe with us, To let his madness range. Therefore, prepare you; I give you this commission shall forthwith be pitch, And he to England shall along with you: The terms of our estate may not endure Hazard so near us, as doth hourly grow Out of his lunes.

We will ourselves provide: Most holy and religious fear it is, To keep those many many bodies safe, That live, and feed, upon your majesty. [Ros. The single and peculiar life is bound, With all its strength and armour of the mind, To keep itself from 'noyance: but much more That spirit, upon whose weal depend and rest The lives of many. The cease of majesty Dies not alone; but, like a gulf, doth draw What things are, with it: it is a necessary wheel, Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount, To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things Are mortis'd and adjoint; which, when it falls, Each small annexm'nt, petty conseq'nce, Attends the boisterous ruin. Never alone Did the king sigh, but with a general groan. King. Arm you, I pray you, to this speedy voy- For we will feteres put upon this fear, [age: Which now goes too free-footed. Ros. We will haste us. [Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. My lord, he's going to his mother's closet: Behold, as was said, I'll convey my words To hear the process; I'll warrant, she'll tax him And, as you said, and wisely was it said, [home. 'Tis meet, that some more audience than a mother, Since nature makes them partial, should o'hear The speech of vantage. Fare you well, my liege: I'll follow upon you, you know I shall, And tell you what I know.

King. Thanks, dear my lord. [Exit Polonius.

O, my offence is rank, it smells to heaven; It hath the primal eldest earm'nt out, A brother's murder!—Pray can I not, Though inclination be as sharp as will;
Act 3.

HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

755

My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent; And, like a man to double business bound, I stand in pause where I shall first begin, And both neglect. What if this cursed hand Were thicker than itself with brother's blood? Is there not rain enough in the sweet heavens, To wash it white as snow? Wherefore serves mercy, But to confront the visage of offence? And what's in prayer, but this two-fold force,— To be forestalled, ere we come to fall, Or pardon'd, being down? Then I'll look up; My fault is past. But, O, what form of prayer Can serve my turn? Forgive me my foul murder!— That cannot be: since I am still possess'd Of all the beauteous powers that were my own, I cannot then repent; and, if I may May one be pardon'd, and retain the offence? In the corrupted currents of this world, Offence's gilded hand may shove by justice; And oft 'tis seen, the wicked prize itself Buys out the law: But 'tis not so above; There is no shuffling, there the action lies In his true nature: and we ourselves compell'd, Even to the teeth and forehead of our faults, To give in evidence. What then? what rests? Try what repentance can: What can it not? Yet what can it, when one can not repent? O wretched state! O bosom, black as death! O limed soul; that struggling to be free, Art more engag'd! Help, angels, make assay! Bow, stubborn knees! and, with the strings of Soft as sinews of the new-born babe; [steel, All may be well!

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now might I do it, pat, now he is praying; And now I'll do't:—and so he goes to heaven! And so am I reveng'd! That would be scann'd: A villain kills my father; and, for that, I, his sole son, do this same villain send To heaven: no, by the author of my joy, Why, this is hire and salary, not revenge. He took my father grossly, full of bread; With all his crimes broad blown, as flush as May; And, how his audit stands, who knows, save heaven?

But, in our circumstance and course of thought, 'Tis heavy with him: and am I then reveng'd, To take him in the purging of his soul, When he is fit and season'd for his passage? No, Up, sword; and know thou a more horrid hent: When he is drunk, asleep, or in his rage; Or in the incestuous pleasures of his bed; At gaming, swearing; or about some act That has no relish of salvation in't: Then trip him, that his heels may kick at heaven: And that his soul may be as damn'd, and black, As hell, whereto it goes. My mother stays: This physick but prolongs thy sickly days. [Exit.

The King rises and advances.

King. My words fly up, my thoughts remain below: Words, without thoughts, never to heaven go. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Another Room in the same.

Enter Queen and Polonius.

Pol. He will come straight. Look, you lay home to him: Tell him, his pranks have been too broad to bear And that your grace hath screen'd and stood be- tween Much heat and him. I'll silence me even here. Pray you, be round with him.

Queen. I'll warrant you; Fear me not:—withdraw, I hear him coming. [Polonius hides himself.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now, mother; what's the matter?

Queen. Hamlet, thou hast thy father much of- fended.

Ham. Mother, you have my father much offend- ed.

Queen. Come, come, you answer with an idle tongue.

Ham. Go, go, you question with a wicked tongue.

Queen. Why, how now, Hamlet?

Ham. What's the matter now?

Queen. Have you forgot me?

Ham. No, by the rood, not so: You are the queen, your husband's brother's wife: And,—'would it were not so!—you are my mother.

Queen. Nay, then I'll set those to you that can speak. [not undue;

Ham. Come, come, and sit you down; you shall Have go no, till I set you up a glass Where you may see the inmost part of you.

Queen. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not murder

Help, help, ho! [me?

Pol. [schinda.] What, ho! help!

Dead, for a ducat, dead! [Polonius.

[Pol. [schinda.] O, I am slain. [Falls and dies.

Queen. O me, what hast thou done?

Nay, I know not:

Is it the king? [Lifts up the arras, and draws forth Polonius.

Queen. O, what a rash and bloody deed is this! Harn. A bloody deed;—almost as bad, good mo-

As kill a kinsman, and marry with his brother. [ther, Queen. As kill a king!

Ham. Ay, lady, 'twas my word: Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farewell! [To Polonius.

I took thee for thy better; take thy fortune: Thou find'st, to be too busy, is some danger: Leave wringing of your hands: Peace, sit you down, And let me wring your heart: for so I shall, If it be made of such unreservable stuff; If damned custom have not braez'd it so, That it be proof and bulwark against sense.

Queen. What have I done, that thou dost wag In noise so rude against me?

[thy tongue.

Ham. Such an act, That blurs the grace and blush of modesty; Calls virtue, hypocrite; takes off the rose From the fair forehead of an innocent love, And sets a blister there; makes marriage vows As false as dianc'i's, O, such a deed As from the body of contraception allies The very soul; and sweet religion makes A rhapsody of words: Heaven's face doth glow; Yea, this solidity and compound mass, With tristful visage, as against the doom, Is thought-sick at the act.

Ah me, what act, That roars so loud, and thunders in the index?

Ham. Look here, upon this picture, and on this; The counterfeit presentment of two brothers. See, what a grace was seated on this brow; Hyperion's curst; the front of Jove himself; An eye like Mars, to threaten and command; A station like the herald Mercury;

New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill; A combination, and a form, indeed, Where every god did seem to set his seal, To give the world assurance of a man:

[follows:

This was your husband.—Look you now, what Here is your husband; like a mildew'd ear, Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you eyes? Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed, And batten on this moor? Ha! have you eyes? You cannot call it love: for at your age, The hey-dey in the blood is tame, it's humble, And waits upon the judgment; And what judgment

[have, Would step from this to this? Sense, sure, you Else, could you not have motion: But sure, that is apopli'd: for madness would not err; [sense. Nor sense to extasy was 'ne'er so thral'd,

3 C 2
But it resolv'd some quantity of choice.
To serve in such a difference. What devil wasn't
That th'ns hath cozen'd you at hoardman-blind:
Eyes without feeling, feeling without sight,
Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans all,
Or but a sickly part of true sense
Could be excus'd.
O shame! where is thy blush? Rebellious hell,
If thou canst mutine in a matron's bones,
To flaming youth let virtue be as wax,
And me't in her own fire: proclaim no shame,
When the compul'sive ardour gives the charge;
Since frost itself as actively doth burn,
And reason panders will.
Queen. O Hamlet, speak no more:
 Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soul;
And there I see such black and grained spots,
As will not leave their tint.
Ham. Nay, but to live
In the rank sweat of an ensoned bed:
Strew'd in corruption; honeying, and making love
Over the nasty styfe;—O, speak to me no more.
These words, like daggers, enter in mine ears;
No more, sweet Hamlet.
Ham. A murderer, and a villain:
A king, that is not twain, but part the tythe
Of your precedent lord:—a vice of kings:
A cutpurse of the empire and the rule;
That from a shelf the precious diadem stole,
And put it in his pocket!
Queen. No more.

Enter Ghost.

Ham. Of shreds and patches:—save me, and ho'Ver o'Ver with your wings,
You heavenly guards!—What would your gracious
Queen. Alas! he's mad. (figure)
Ham. Do you not come your tardy son to chide,
That, laps'd in time and passion, lets go by
The important acting of your dread command? O, lady.
Ghost. Do not forget this: This visitation
Is but to whet thy almost blunted purpose:
But, look! amazement on thy mother sits:
0, step between her and her fighting soul;
Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works:
Speak to her, Hamlet.
Ham. How is it with you, lady?
Queen. Alas, how is't with you?
That do you bend your eye on vacancy,
And with so solemn air do hold discourse?
Forth at your eyes your spirits wildly peep;
And as the sleeping soldiers in the alarm,
Your bedded hair, like life in excrements,
Starts up, and stand, on end. O gentle son,
Upon the heat and flame of thy distemper
Sprinkle cool patience. Whereon do you look?
Ham. On him! on him!—Look you, how pale he glares!
His form and cause conjoint'd, preaching to stones,
Would make them capable.—Do not look up on me;
Lest, with this piteous action, you convert
My stern effects: then what I have to do
Will want true colour; tears, perchance, for blood.
Queen. To whom do you speak this?
Ham. Do you see nothing there?
Queen. Nothing at all; yet all, that is, I see.
Ham. Nor did you nothing hear?
Queen. No, nothing, but ourselves
Ham. Why, look you there! look, how it steels
My father, in his habit as he liv'd! Look,
Where he goes, even now, out at the portal!
[Exit Ghost.

Queen. This is the very coinage of your brain:
This bodiless creation ecstasy
Is very cunning.
Ham. Excuse me.
My pulse, as yours, doth temperament keep time,
And makes as healthful musick: It is not madness,
That I have uttered: bring me to the test,
And I the matter will re-ward; which madness
Would gambol from. Mother, for love of grace,
Lay not that flatteringunction to your soul,
That not your trespass, but my madness, speaks:
It will but skin and film the ularceous place;
When rank corruption, mining all within,
Infesteth the mind. Confess you, thou hast heavens:
Repent what's past: avoid what is to come;
And do not spread the compost on the weeds,
To make them ranker. Forgive me this my virtue:
For in the fineness of these pursy times,
Virtue itself of false allure must pardon beg.
Yea, curb and woo, for leave to do him good.
Queen. O Hamlet! thou hast cleft my heart in twain.

Ham. O throw away the worser part of it,
And live the purer with the other half.
Good night: but go not to my uncle's bed;
Assume a virtue, if you have it not.
That monster, custom, who all sense doth eat
Of habit's devil, is angel yet in this;
That to the use of actions fair and good
He likewise gives a frock, or livery.
That aptly is put on: Refrain to night:
And that shall lend a kind of easiness
To the next abstinen: the next more easy:
For to the death of change the stamp of nature,
And either curb the devil, or throw him out
With wondrous potency. Once more, good night;
And when you are desirous to be bles'sd,
I'll blessing beg of you.—For this same lord.

Pointing to Polonius.

I do repent: But heaven hath pleas'd it so,—
To punish me with this, and this with me:
That I must be their scourge and minister.
I will bestow, and will answer well:
The heavenly, rich, and good, this night;
I must be cruel, only to be kind:
Thus bad begins, and worse remains behind—
But one word more, good lady.
Queen.

What shall I do?—
Ham. Not this, by no means; that I bid you do:
Let the boat king tempt you again to bed;
Pinch wanton on your cheek; call you, bis mouse;
And let him, for a pair of reecy kisses,
Or padling in your neck with his damn'd fingers,
Make you to ravel all this matter out,
That I essentially am not in my mind,
But mad in craft. 'T were good, you let him know
For who, that's but a queen, fair, sober, wise,
Would from a paddock, from a hat, a glib,
Such dear concernings hide? who would do so?
No, no, deep incorporation, do hold discourse:
Unpeg the basket on the house's top,
Let the birds fly; and, like the famous ape,
To try conclusions, in the basket creep,
And break your own neck down.
Queen. Be thou assured, if words be made of
And breath of life, I have no life to breathe
What thou hast said to me.
Ham. I must to England; you know that?
Queen. Alack! I had forgot; 'tis so concluded on.
Ham. There's letters seal'd: and my two school-
fellows,—
Whom I will trust, as I will adders Fang'd,—
They bear the mandate; they must sweep my way,
And marshal me to knavery: Let it work;
For 'tis the sport, to have the engineer
Hoist with his own petar: and it shall go hard,
But I will delive one yard below their mines,
And blow them at the moon: O, 'tis most sweet;
When two are one, and one and twenty more directly meet.—
This man shall set me packing.
I'll lug the guts into the neighbour room:
Mother, good night.—Indeed, this counsellor
Is now most still, most secret, and most grave,
Which in a fool, I have a foolish pratling knave.
Come, sir, to draw toward an end with you:
Good night, mother.

[Exit severally: Hamlet dragging in Polonius.]
ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The same.

Enter King, Queen, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. There's matter in these signs; these profound heav'ns
You must translate: 'tis fit we understand them:
Where is your son?

Queen. Bestow this place on us a little while.—
[To Rosencrantz and Guildenstern, who go out.
Ah, my good lord, what have I seen to-night?

King. What, Gertrude? How does Hamlet?

Queen. Mad as the sea, and wind, and when both con-
Which is the mightier: in his lawless fit, [tend Behind the areas hearing some thing stir,
Whips out his rapiers, cries, A rat! a rat! and,
In this brainish apprehension, kills
The unseen old man.

King. O heavy deed! It had been so with us, had we been there:
His liberty is full of threats to all:
To you yourself, to us, to every one.
Alas! how shall this bloody deed be answer'd?
It will be laid to us, whose providence
Should have kept short, restrain'd, and out of haunt,
This mad young man: but, so much was our love,
We would not understand what was most fit;
But, like the owner of a foul disease,
To keep it from divulging, let it feed
Even on the pith of life. Where is he gone?
O, to draw apart the body he hath kill'd:
'0'er whom his very madness, like some ore,
Among a mineral of metals base,
Shows itself pure; he weeps for what is done.

King. O, Gertrude, come away!
The sun no sooner shall the mountains touch,
But we will ship him hence: and this vile deed
We must, with all our majesty and skill, [stern
Both countenance and excuse.—Ho!—Guilden-

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Rosencrantz. Friends both, go join you with some further aid:
Hamlet in madness hath Polonius slain,
And from his mother's closet hath he dragg'd him:
Go, seek him out; speak fair, and bring the body
Into the chapel. I pray you, haste in this.

[Exeunt Ros. and Guile.

Enter Hamlet. Come, Gertrude, we'll call up our wisest friends;
And let them know, both what we mean to do,
And what's unto time done: so, haply, slander,
Whose whisper o'er the world's diameter,
As by a window looking in a blank,
Transports his poison'd shot,—may miss our name;
And hit the woundless air.—O come away!
My soul is full of discord, and dismay.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Another Room in the same.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. — Safely stowed,—[Ros. &c. within.
Hamlet! lord Hamlet! But soft, what noise?

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Ros. What have you done, my lord, with the dead body?

Ham. Compounded it with dust, whereto 'tis kin.

Ros. Tell us where 'tis; that we may take it
And bear it to the chapel. [tence,

Ham. Do not believe it.

Ros. Believe what?

Ham. That I can keep your counsel, and not mine own. Besides, to he demanded of a spong! —what replication should be made by the son of a king?

Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord?

Ham. Ay, sir; that soaks up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end: He keeps them, like an ape, in the corner of his jaw; first mouthed, to be last swallowed: When he needs

Ros. I understand you not, my lord.

Ham. I am glad of it: A knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.

Ros. My lord, you must tell us where the body is, and go with us to the king.

Ham. The body is with the king, but the king is not with the body. The king is a thing—

Guil. A thing, my lord?

Ham. Of nothing: bring me to him. Hide fox, and all after.

[Execut.

SCENE III.—Another Room in the same.

Enter King, attended.

King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the body.

Ham. Do not our eyes, if that this man goes loose?
Yet must not we put the strong law on him:
He's low'd of the distracted multitude,
Who like not in their judgment, but their eyes;
And, where 'tis so, the offender's scourge is weigh'd,
But never the offence. To bear all smooth and even,
This sudden sending him away must seem
Deliberate pause: Diseases, desperate grown,
By desperate appliance are reliev'd.

[Enter Rosencrantz.

Ros. Or not at all.—How now? what hath befallen?

Ham. Where the dead body is bestow'd, my lord,
We cannot get from him.

King. But where is he?

Ros. Without, my lord; guarded, to know your

King. Bring him before us. [pleasure.

Ros. Ho, Guildenstern! bring in my lord.

Enter Hamlet and Guildenstern.

Ham. At supper.

King. At supper? Where?

Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten:
A certain convocation of politick worms are e'en at him.
Your worm is your only emperor for diet: we fat all creatures else, to fat us; and we fat ourselves for maggots: Your fat king, and your lean beggar, is but variable service; two dishes, but to one table:
that's the end. Alas, alas!

King. A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king; and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.

King. What dost thou mean by this?

Ham. Nothing, but to show you how a king may go a progress through the guts of a beggar.

King. Where is Polonius?

Ham. In heaven; send thither to see: if your messenger find him not there, seek him 'tis the other place yourself. But, indeed, if you find him not within this month, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the lobby.

King. Go seek him there. [To some Attendants.

Ham. He will stay till you come.

[Exeunt Attendants.

King. Hamlet, this deed, for thine especial safety,
Which we do tender, as we dearly grieve [hence for that which thou hast done,—must send thee
With fiery wars. Therefore prepare thyself:
The bark is ready, and the wind at help,
The associates tend, and every thing is bent
For England.

Ham. For England?

King. Ay, Hamlet.

Ham. Good.

King. So is it, if thou knew'st our purposes.

Ham. I see a cherub that sees them.—But, come;
for England!—Farrell, dear mother.

King. Thy loving father, Hamlet.

Ham. My mother; Father and mother is man and wife; man and wife is one flesh; and so, my

[Exeunt.
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Act 4.

Enter Fortinbras, and Forces, marching.

For. Go, captain, from me greet the Danish king; Tell him, that, by his licence, Fortinbras Graves the conveyance of a promising march Over his kingdom. You know the rendezvous. If that his majesty would aught with us, We shall express our duty in his eye, And let him know so.

Cap. 1 will do't, my lord.

For. Go softly on.

[Exeunt Fortinbras and Forces.

Enter Hamlet, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, &c.

Ham. Good sir, whose powers are these? Cap. They are of Norway, sir.

Ham. How purpos'd, sir?

Cap. Against some part of Poland.

Ham. Who commands them, sir?

Cap. The nephew to old Norway, Fortinbras. Ham. God save the main of Poland, sir, Or for some frontier?

Cap. Truly to speak, sir, and with no addition, We go to gain a little patch of ground. That hath in it no profit but the name. To pay five ducats, five, I would not farm it; Nor will it yield to Norway, or the Pole, A ranker rate, should it be sold in fee.

Ham. Why, then, the Polack never will defend it.

Cap. Yes, 'tis already garrison'd. (ducats, &c.

Ham. Two thousand ducats, and twenty thousand Will not debate the question of this straw. This is the imposthume of much wealth and peace; That inward breaks, and shows no cause without Why the man dies,—I humbly thank you, sir.

Cap. God be with you, sir. (Exit Captain Ros.

Ham. Will please you go, my lord.

[Exeunt Ros. and Guil.

How all occasions do inform against me, And spur my duteous revenge! What is a man, If his chief good, and market of his time, Be but to sleep and feed? a beast, no more. Sure, he, that made us with such large discourse, Looking before, and after, gave us not That capability and godlike reason To fast in us unused. Now, whether it be Bestial oblivion, or some craven scruple Of thinking too precisely on the event,— Wisdom, a thought, which, quarter'd, hath but one part And, ever, three parts coward,—I do not know Why I am as I am. This thing 'is this: Toions, Sith I have cause, and will, and strength, and To do't. Examples, gross as earth, exhort me; Witness, this army of such mass, and charge, Led by a delicate and tender prince; Whose spirit, with divine ambition puff'd, Makes mouths at the invisible event: Exposing what is mortal, and unsure, To all that fortune, death, and danger, dare, Even for an egg-shell. Rightly to be great,

Is, not to stir without great argument; But greatly to find quarrel in a straw, When honour's at the stake. How stand I then, That have a father kill'd, a mother stain'd, Exiled of my reason, and my blood, And let all sleep? while, as I am your slave, I see The imminent death of twenty thousand men, That, for a fantasy, and trick of fame, Go to their graves like bed-fellows; fight for a plot Wherefore the numbers cannot try the cause, Which is too proud for use; and continent, To hide the slain?—O, from this time forth, My thoughts be bloody, or be nothing worth! [Exit.

SCENE V.—Elsinore. A Room in the Castle.

Enter Queen and Horatio.

Queen. I will not speak with her. Hor. She is importunate; indeed, distract; Her mood will needs be pitied.

Queen. What would she have? Her. She speaks much of her father; says, she hears, heart; There's tricks in't; the world; and, at last, and beats her Spurns enviously at straws; speaks things in doubt, That carry but half sense: her speech is nothing, Yet the unshaped use of it doth move The hearers to collection: they sit at it, And bate their words in fit to their own thoughts: Which, as her winks, and nods, and gestures yield them, [thought, Indeed would make one think, there might be Though nothing sure, yet much unhappy.

Queen. Twere good she were spoken with; for she may draw Dangerous conjectures in ill-breeding minds: Let her come in. [Exit Horatio.

To my sick soul, as sin's true nature is, Each toy seems prologue to some great amiss: So full of artless jealousy it gull, It spills itself, in fearing to be spilt.

Renter Horatio, with Ophelia.

Oph. Where is the beauteous majesty of Den. Que. How now, Ophelia? [mark] Oph. How should I your true love know From another one? By his cockle hat and staff, And his sandal shoe? [Singing.

Queen. Alas, sweet lady, what imports this song? Oph. Say you? nay, pray you, mark. He is dead and gone already. [Sings

He is dead and gone: At his head a grass-green turf, At his heels a stone.

O, ho! Queen. Nay, but Ophelia,— Pray you, mark.

White his shroud as the mountain snow. [Sings.

Enter King.

Queen. Alas, look here, my lord.

Oph. Larded all with sweet flowers, Which beseem to the grave did go, With true-love showers.

King. How do you, pretty lady? Oph. Well, God yield you! They say, the owl was a baker's daughter. Lord, we know what we are, but, know not what we may be. God be at your table! King. Conceit upon her father.

Oph. Fray, let us have no words of this; but when they ask you what it means, say you this: Good morrow, 'tis Saint Valentine's day, All in the morning betime, And a maid at your window, To be your Valentine: Then up he rose, and don'd his clothes, And dipp'd the chamber door; Let in the maid, that out a maid Never departed more.
King. Pretty Ophelia! [on't:

Oph. Indeed, without an oath, I'll make an end

By Gis, and by Saint Charity, and all her saints, and for shame!
Young men will do't, if they come to't:
By oath, they are to blame.
Quoth she, before you tumbled me,
You promised'd me to wed:

[He answers.]

So would I ha' done, by yonder sun, An thou hadst not come to my bed.

King. How long hath she been thus?
Oph. I hope, all will be well. We must be patient: but I cannot choose but weep, to think, they should lay him 'tis the cold ground: My brother shall know of it, and so I thank you for your good counsel. Come, my coach! Good night, ladies; good night, sweet ladies; good night, good night. [Exit.]

King. Follow her close; give her good watch, I pray you. [Exit Horatio, O! this is the poison of deep grief; it springs All from her father's death: And now behold, O Gertrude, Gertrude, When sorrow comes, they come not single spies, But in battalions! First her father slain; Next your poor son, and he the most precious author Of his own just remove: The people muddled, Thick and unhonorable in their thoughts and whispers, [greely, For good Polonius' death; and we have done but In hugger-mugger to enter him. Poor Ophelia, Divided from herself, and her fair judgment; Without which the we are pictures, or mere beasts. Last, and as much containing as all these, Her brother is in secret come from France: Feeds on his wonder, keeps himself in clouds, And wants not buzzers to infect his ear With pestilential speeches of his father's death; Wherein necessity, of matter beggar'd, Will nothing stick our person to arraign In ear and ear. O my dear Gertrude, this, Like a murdering piece, in many places Gives me superfluous death. [A noise within.

Queen. Alack! what noise is this?

Enter a Gentleman.

King. Attend; Where are my Switzers? Let them guard the door; What is the matter?

Gent. Save yourself, my lord; The ocean, overpeering of his list, Eats not the flats with more impetuous haste, Than young Laertes, in a riotous head, O'erhears your officers; The rabble call him, lord; And as the world were now but to begin, Antiquity forgot, custom not known, The ratifiers and props of every word, They cry, Choose we; Laertes shall be king!
Caps, hands, and tongues, appeal it to the clouds, Laertes shall be king, Laertes king!
Queen. How cheerfully on the false trail they cry! O, this is counsellor, you false Danish dogs.

King. The doors are broke. [Noise within.

Enter Laertes, armed; Danes following.

Laer. Where is this king?—Sirs, stand you all down. No, let's come in. [without. Laer. I pray you, give me leave. Dan. We will, we will. [They retire without the door. Laer. I thank you;—keep the door.—O thou wise, Give me my father. [king. Queen. Calmly, good Laertes.

Laer. That drop of blood, that's calm, proclaims me bastard; Cries, cuckold, to my father; brands the harlot Even here, between the chaste unsmirched brow Of my true mother.

King. What is the cause, Laertes,

That thy rebellion looks so giant-like?— Let him go; Gertrude; do not fear our person; There's such divinity doth hedge a king, That treason can but peep to what it would, Acts little of his will.—Tell me, Laertes, Why thou art thus incensed?—Let him go, Get speak, man. [trude:—

Laer. Where is my father?

King. Dead.

Queen. But not by him. King. Let him demand his fill. [with:

Laer. How came he dead? I'll not be jugged To hell, allegiance I vows, to the blackest devil! Conscience and grace, to the profoundest pit! I dare damnation: To this point I stand,— That both the worlds I give the negligence, Let come what comes; only I'll be reveng'd Most thoroughly for my father.

King. Will you know them then? Laer. To his good friends thus wide I'll ope my And, like the kind life-rend'ring pelican, [arms; Reast them with my blood. Why, now you speak Like a good child, and a true gentleman. That I am puleless of your father's death, And am most sensibly in grief for it, It shall as level to your judgment pear, As day does to your eye.

Danes. [Within.] Let her come in.

Laer. How now! what noise is that?

Enter Ophelia, fantastically dressed with straws and flowers.

O heat, dry up my brains! tears, seven times salt, Burn out the sense and virtue of mine eye!— By heaven, thy madness shall be paid with weight, Till our scale turn the beam. O rose of May!— Dear maid, kind sister, sweet Ophelia!— O heavens! is't possible, a young maid's wits Should be as mortal as an old man's life? Nature is fine in love: and, where 'tis fine, It sends some signal instance of itself After the thing it loves.

Oph. They love him barefaced on the bier; Hey no nonny, nonny key nonny; And in his grave rain'd many a tear— Fare you well, my love!—

Laer. Hadst thou thy wits, and didst persuade It could not move thus. [revenge, Oph. You must sing, Down a-down, and you call him a-down-a. O, how the wheel becomes it! It is the false steward, that stole his master's daughter.

Laer. This nothing's more than matter. Oph. There's rosemary, that's for remembrance; pray you, love, remember: and there's pansies, that's for thoughts.

Laer. A document in madness; thoughts and remembrance fitted. Oph. There's fennel for you, and columbines:— there's rue for you; and here's some for me:— we shall call it, herb of grace o' Sundays—you may wear your rue with a difference.—There's a daisy:— I would give you some violets; but they withered all, when my father died.—They say, he made a good end,—

For bonny sweet Robin is all my joy.— [Sings. Laer. Thought and affliction, passion, hell itself, She turns to favour, and to prettiness.

Oph. And will he not come again? [Sings. And will he not come again?
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Act 4.

No, no, he is dead,
Go to thy death-bed,
He never will come again.

His beard was as white as snow,
All fancies was his poll:
He is gone, he is gone,
And we must away soon:
God 'a mercy on his soul!

And of all christian souls! I pray God. God be wi' you! [Exit Ophelia.]

Laer. Do you see this, O God?

King. Laertes, I must commune with your grief,
Or you deny me right. Go but apart,
Make choice of whom your wisest friends you will,
And they shall hear and judge 'twixt you and me:
If by direct or by collateral hand
They find us touch'd, we will our kingdom give,
Our crown and life, and all that we call ours,
To you in satisfaction; but, if not,
Be you content to lend your patience to us,
And we shall jointly labour with your soul
To give it due content.

Laer. Let this he so; his means of death, his obscure funeral,—
No trophy, sword, nor hatchment, o'er his bones,
No noble rite, nor formal ostentation,—
Cry to be heard, as 'twere from heaven to earth,
That I must call in question.

King. So you shall;
And, where the offence is, let the great axe fall,
I pray you, go with me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Another Room in the same.

Enter Horatio, and a Servant.

Hor. What are they that would speak with me?

Serv. They say, they have letters for you.

Hor. Let them come in.—[Exit Servant.

I Sail. God bless you, sir.

Hor. Let him bless thee too. I sail. He shall, sir, an't please him. There's a letter for you, sir; it comes from the ambassador that was bound for England; if your name be Horatio, as I am let to know it is.

Hor. [Reads.] Horatio, when thou shalt have overlooked this, give these fellows some means to the king; they have letters for him. Ere we were two days old at sea, a pirate of very sinister appointment gave us chase: Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on a compelled valour; and in the grapple I boarded them: on the instant, they got clear of our ship; so I alone became their prisoner. They have dealt with me, like thieves of mercy; but they know what they did; I am to do a good turn for them. Let the king have the letters I have sent; and repair thou to me with as much haste as thou woul'dst a fly death. I have words to speak in thine ear, will make thee dumber than they make too light for the bore of the matter. These good fellows will bring thee where I am. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern hold their course for England; of them I have much to tell thee. Farewell, he gods.

He that thou knowest thing, Hamlet.

Come, I will give you way for these your letters;
And do't the speedier, that you may direct me.
To him from whom you brought them. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—Another Room in the same.

Enter King and Laertes.

King. Now must your conscience my acquaintance seal,
And you must put me in your heart for friend;
Sith you have heard, and with a knowing ear,
That he, which hath your noble father slain,
Pursu'd my life.

Laer. It well appears:—But tell me,
Why you proceeded not against these feats,
So senseful and so capital in nature,
As by your safety, greatness, wisdom, all things
You mainly were stir'd up. [else.]

King. O, for two special reasons:—
Which may to you, perhaps, seem much unisnew'd,
But yet to me they are strong. The queen, his mother,
Lives almost by his looks; and for myself,
(My virtue, or my plague, be it either which,) She is so conjunctive to my life and soul,
That, as the star moves not but in his sphere,
I could not but love her. The other motive,
Why to a publick count I might not go,
Is the great love the general gender bear him:
Who, slipping all his faults in their affection,
Work like the spring that turneth wood to stone,
Convert his gyves to graces; so that my arrows,
Too slightly timber'd for so loud a wind,
Would have reverted to my bow again,
And not where I had aim'd them.

Laer. And so have I a noble father lost;—
A ship driven in desperate tempests:
Whose worth, if praises may go back again,
Stood challenger on mount of all the age
For her perfections:—But my revenge will come.

King. Break not your sleeps for that: you must not think,
That we are made of stuff so flat and dull,
That we can let our beard be shook with danger,
And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear
I loved your father, and we love ourselves;—more:
And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine,—
How now? what news?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Letters, my lord, from Hamlet:
This is your majesty; this to the queen.

King. From Hamlet! Who brought them?

Mess. Sailors, my lord, they say: I saw them not;—
They were given me by Claudio, he receiv'd them
Of him that brought them.

King. Laertes, you shall hear them—

Leave us. [Exeunt Messenger.

[Reads.] High and mighty, you shall know, I am set naked on your kingdom. Tomorrow shall I be seen to see your kingly eyes; when I shall, first asking your pardon thereunto, recount the occasion of my sudden and more strange return. Hamlet.

What should this mean? Are all the rest come
Or is it some abuse, and no such thing? [back 2]

Laer. Know you the hand?—King.

'Tis Hamlet's character. Naked,—
And, in a postscript here, he says, alone:
Can you advise me?

Laer. I am lost in it, my lord. But let him come;
It warms the very sickness in my heart,
That I shall live and tell him to his teeth,
Thus diddest thou.

King. If he be so, Laertes,
As how should it be so? how otherwise?—

Will you be rul'd by me?—

Laer. Ay, my lord;
So you will not o'er-rule me to a peace. [turn'd.—

King. To thine own peace. If he be now re-
As checking at his voyage, and that he means
No more to undertake it,—I will work him
To what, if any, I now have in my device.
Under the which he shall not choose but fail;
And for his death no wind of blame shall breathe
But even his mother shall uncharge the practice,
And call it, accident.

Laer. My lord, I will he rul'd—
The rather, if you could devise it so,
That I might be the organ.

King. It falls right.
You have been talk'd of since your travel much,
And in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality
Wherein, they say, you shine; your sum of parts
Did not together pluck such eny from him, As did that one; and that, in my regard, Of the unworthiest siege.

Lear. A very ribband in the cap of youth, Yet needful too; for youth no less becomes The light and careless livery that it wears, Than settled age his sables, and his weeds, Importing health and greatness. — Two months since, I have seen myself, and serv'd against, the French, And they can well on horseback: but this gallant Had witchcraft in't; he grew unto his seat; And to such wonder'd doing brought his horse, As he had been incorp'rd and demi-naked.

With the brave beast: so far he topp'd my thought, That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks, Come short of what he did.

Lear. A Norman, was't? A Norman. A Norman, was't? Lear. Upon my life, Lamord. The very same. King. I know him well: he is the brood, indeed, And gem of all the nation.

Lear. He made confusion of you; And gave you such a masterly report, For art and exercise in your defence, And for your rapier most especial, That he cried out, 'twould be a sight indeed, If you could match you with the masters of their nation, had neither motion, guard, nor eye, [tion, If you oppos'd them: Sir, this report of his Did Hamlet so envenom with his envy, That he could nothing do, but wish and beg To hidden coming o'er, to play with you. Now out of this, — What out of this, my lord? King. Lear, was your father dear to you? Or are you like the painting of a sorrow, A face without a heart? Why ask you this? King. Not that I think, you did not love your But that I know, love is begun by time; [father; And that I see, in passages of proof, Time qualifies the spark and fire of it. There lives within the very frame of love A kind of wick, or snuff, that will abate it; And nothing is at a like goodness still; For goodness, growing to a plurius, [diversity of manners: That we would do, We should do when we would; for this would And hath abatements and delays as many, [changes, As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents; And then this should is like a spendthrift sigh, That hurts by easing. But, to the quick o'the ulcer: Hamlet comes back: what would you undertake, To show yourself indeed your father's son More than in words?

Lear. To cut his throat t' the church. King. No place, indeed, should murder sanctify: [Laertes. Revenge should have no bounds. But, good Will you do this, keep close within your chamber: Hamlet, return'd, shall know you are come home: And call a council of those shall praise thee excellence, And set the double varnish on the fame: [gether, The Frenchman gave you; bring you, in fine, to, And wager o'er your heads: he, being remiss, Most generous, and free from all constriving, Will not purse the foils; so that, with ease, Or with a little shuffling, you may choose A sword, unhatt'd, and, in a pass of practice, Requite him for your father.

Lear. I will do't. For the purpose, I'll anoint my sword. I bought an unct'on of a mountebank, So mortal, that but dip a knife in it, Where it draws blood, no cataplasm so rare, Collected from all simples that have virtue Under the moon, can save the thing from death, That is but scratch'd withal: I'll touch my point With this contagion; that, if I gall him slightly, It may be death.

King. Let's further think of this;

Weigh, what convenience, both of time and means, May fit us to our shape: if this should fail, [once, And that our drift through our bad perform- 'Twere better not assay'd; therefore this project Should have a back, or second, that might hold, If this should blast in proof. Soft,—let me see:— I'll make a solemn wager on your cunnings,— I ha't. When in your motion you are hot and dry, (As make your bouts more violent to that end,) And that he calls for drinks, I'll have preferr'd him A chalice for the nonce; whereon but sipping, If he by chance escape your venom'd stink, Our purpose may hold there. But stay, what noise?

Enter Queen.

How now, sweet queen?

Queen. One woe doth tryst upon another's heel, So fast they follow:—Your sister's drown'd, Laertes.

Lear. Drown'd! 0, where?

Queen. There is a willow grows asasuant the brook, That shows his hoar leaves in the glassy stream;
Therewith fantastic garnish'd, and his tresses, Of crow-flowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples, That liberal shepherds give a grosser name, But our cold maids do dead men's fingers call them; There on the pendent boughs his coronet weeds Glimmering to hang, an ensign sliver broke; When down her weary trophyes, and herself, wide;
Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread And, mermaid-like, a while they bore her up: Which time, she chant'd snatches of old tunes; As one incapable of her own distress, Or like a creature native and indu'd Unto that element: but long it could not be, Till that her garments, heavy with their drink, Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay To muddy death.

Lear. Alas then, she is drown'd?

Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.

Lear. Too much of water hast thou, poor Ophelia, And therefore I forbid my tears: But yet It is our trick; nature her custom holds, Let shame say what it will: when these are gone, The woman will be out.—Adieu, my lord! I have a speech of fire, that fain would blaze, But that this folly drowns it. [Exit.

Exit, Gertrude. How much I had to do to calm his rage! Now fear I, this will give it start again; Therefore, let's follow. [Exit.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Church-Yard.

Enter Two Clowns, with spades, &c.

1 Clo. Is she to be buried in christian burial, that wilfully seeks her own salvation?

2 Clo. I tell thee, she is; therefore make her grave straight: the crowner hath set on her, and finds it christian burial.

1 Clo. How can that be, unless she drowned herself in her own defence?

2 Clo. Why, 'tis found so.

1 Clo. It must be se offensando; it cannot be else. For here lies the point: if I drown myself willingly, it argues an act: and an act hath three branches: it is, to act, to do, and to perform: Argal, she drowned herself willingly.

3 Clo. Nay, but hear you, goodman deliver.

1 Clo. Give me me that l' the water; good: here stands the man; good: If the man go to this water, and drown himself, it is, will he, nill he, he goes; mark you that: but if the water come to him, and drown him, he drowns not himself: Argal, he, that is not guilty of his own death, shortens not his own life.

2 Clo. But is this law?
1 Clo. Ay, marry is't; crowner's quest-law.
2 Clo. Will you ha' the truth on't? If this had not been a gentlewoman, she should have been buried out of Christian burial.
1 Clo. Why, there thou say'st: And the more pity that great folks shall have countenance in this world to dress and hang themselves, more than their even Christian: Come, my spade. There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, ditches, and grave-makers; they hold up Adam's profession.
3 Clo. Was he a gentleman?
1 Clo. He was the first that ever bore arms.
2 Clo. Why, he had none.
1 Clo. What is he, that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?
2 Clo. The gallows-maker: for that frame out-lives a thousand tenants.
1 Clo. I like thy wit well, in good faith; the gallows does well: but how does it well? it does well to take a man to deal: now thou dost ill, to say the gallows is built stronger than the church; argal, the gallows may do well to thee. To't again; come.
2 Clo. Who builds stronger than a mason, a shipwright, or a carpenter?
1 Clo. Ay, tell me that, and undone.
2 Clo. Marry, now I can tell.
1 Clo. To't.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio, at a distance.

1 Clo. Cudgel thy brains no more about it; for your dull ass will not mend his pace with beating: and, when you are asked this question next, say, a grave-maker; the houses that he makes, last till doomsday. Go, get thee to Youghan, and fetch me a stoup of liquor. [Exit 2 Clo.]
1 Clown digs, and sings.

In youth, when I did love, did love,
Methought, it was very sweet,
To count the time, for, ah, my behove,
O, methought, there was nothing meet.

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his business? he sings at grave-making.
Hor. Custom hath made it in him a property of easiness.

Ham. 'Tis e'en so: the hand of little employment hath the daintier sense.

1 Clo. But age, with his stealing steps,
Had clane'd me in his clutch,
And hath shipped me into the land,
As if I had never been such. [Throws up a skull.

Ham. That skull had a tongue in it, and could sing once: How the knave joys it to the ground, as if it were Cains' jaw-bone, that did the first murder! This might be the pate of a politician, which this a now o'er-reaches; one that would circumvent God, might it not?
Hor. It might, my lord.

Ham. Of a courtier; which could say, Good-morrow, sweet lord! How dost thou, good lord? This might be my lord Such-a-one, that praised my lord Such-a-horse, when he meant to beg it; might it not?
Hor. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Why, e'en so; and now my lady Worm's; chapple, and knocked about the mazzard with a serpent's spade: Here's fine revolution, an we had the trick to see'd. Did these bones cost no more the breeding, but to play at loggats with them? mine akee to think on't.
some eight year, or nine year: a tanner will last you nine year.

Ham. Why he more than another?

1 Clo. Why, sir, his hide is so tanned with his trade, that he will keep out water a great while; and your water is a sore decayer of your whoreson dead body. Here's a skull now hath lain you the earth three-and-twenty years.

Ham. Whose was it?

1 Clo. A whoreson mad fellow's it was; Whose thou think it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

1 Clo. A pestilence on him for a mad rogue! he poured a flag of Rhenish on my head once. This same skull, sir, was Yorick's skull, the king's jester.

Ham. This?

1 Clo. Even that.

Ham. Alas, poor Yorick!—I knew him, Horatio; a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy: he hath borne me on his back a thousand times; and now how abhorred in my imagination it is! my gorges rises at it. Here hung those lips that I have kissed know not how oft. Where be your gibes now? your gamboois? your songs? your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table on a roar. Now are they silent. One now, to mock your own grinning: quite chap-fallen? Now get you to your lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come; make her laugh at that.—Pr'ythee, Horatio, tell me one thing.

Hor. What's that, my lord?

Ham. Dost thou think, Alexander looked o'this fashion 'tis the earth?

Hor. 'E'en so.

Ham. And smoo; so? pah! [Throns down the skull.

Hor. 'E'en so, my lord.

Ham. To what base uses we may return, Horatio! Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a bung-hole?

Hor. 'Twere to consider too curiously, to consider so.

Ham. No, faith, not a jot: but to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelihood to lead it: As thus; Alexander died, Alexander was buried, Alexander returneth to dust: the dust is earth: of earth we make loam: And why of that loam, whereto he was converted, might they not stop a beer-barrel?

Imperious Caesar, dead, and turn'd to clay,

Might stop a hole to keep the wind away:

O earth, earth, earth, to英勇(ci)

Which kept the world in awe,

Should pause to exclaim How? and exclaim:—And why doth ground

So soft and silt?—Here comes the king.

Enter Priests, &c. in procession; the corpse of Ophelia, Laertes, and Mourners following; King, Queen, their Trains, &c.

The queen, the courtiers: Who is this they follow? And with such maimed rites! This doth betoken, The corse, they follow, did with desperate hand Fordo its own life. Was't some of estate?

And make a while, and mark. [Retiring with Hor.

Laer. What ceremony else?

Ham. A very noble youth: Mark.

Laer. What ceremony else?

1 Print. Her obsequies have been as for enlarg'd As we have warranty: Her death was doubtful; And, but that great command o'ersways the order, She should in ground unsanctified have lodge'd Till the last trumpet; for charitable prayers, And memorable milestones, should be thrown on her. Yet here she is allowed her virgin crants, Her maiden strewments, and the bringing home Of bell and burial.

Laer. Must there no more be done?

Print. No more he done! We should profane the service of the dead, To sing a requiem, and such rest to her, As to peace-parted souls.

Laer. Lay her l'the earth;—

And from her fair and unpolluted flesh May violets spring: I tell thee, curish priest, A minist'ring angel shall my sister be, When thou liest howling.

Ham. What, the fair Ophelia! —Queen. Sweets to the sweet: Farewell! [Scattering flowers. I hop'd, thou should'lst have been my Hamlet's wife; [maid, I thought, thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet And not have strew'd thy grave.

Laer. O, treble woe

Fall ten times treble on that cursed head,

Whose wicked deed thy most ingenuous sense

Depri'ved thee of!—Hold off the earth a while,

Till I have caught her once more in mine arms:

[Leaps into the grave.

Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead:

Till of this flat a mountain you have made,

To o'er-top old Pelion, or the skysih head

Of blue Olympus.

Ham. [Advancing.] What is he, whose grief

Bears such an emphasis? whose phrase of sorrow

Conjures the wand'ring stars, and makes them

Like wonder-wounded hearers? this is I, [stand

Hamlet the Dane. —Laer. The devil take his soul! [Grasping with him.

Hm. Thou pray'st not well.

I pr'ythee, take thy fingers from my throat;

For, though I am not splenetic and rash,

Yet have I in me something dangerous,

Which let thy wisdom fear: Hold off thy hand.

King. Pluck them asunder.

Queen.

All. Gentlemen,— Good my lord, be quiet.

[The Attendants part them, and they come out of the grave.

Ham. Why, I will fight with him upon this

Until my eyelids will no longer wag. [theme,

Queen. O my son! what theme?

Ham. I lov'd Ophelia; forty thousand brothers

Could not, with all their quantity of love,

Make up my sum.—What will thou do for her?

King. O, he is mad, Laertes.

Queen. For love of God, forbear him.

Ham. 'Zounds, show me what thou'lt do:

Woul't weep? woul't fight? woul't fast? woul't tear

Woul't drink up Esl? eat a crocodile? [thyself? [I'll do't.—Dost thou come here to whine?

To outvie her?—He that is in her grave?

Be buried quick with her, and so will I:

And, if thou prate of mountains, let them throw

Millions of acres on us; till our ground,

Singeing his pate against the burning zone,

Make Ossa like a wart! Nay, an thou'lt mouth,

I'rant as well as thou.

Queen.

This is mere madness:

And thus a while the fit will work on him;

Anon, as patient as the female dove,

When her golden couplets are disclos'd,

His silence will sit drooping.

Ham. Hear you, sir; What is the reason, that you use me thus?

I lov'd you ever: But it is no matter;—

Let Hercules himself do what he may,

The cat will mew, and dog will have his day. [Exit, King. —I pray thee, good Horatio, wait upon him.— [Exit Horatio. Strengthen then your patience in our last night's speech;

To Laertes.

We'll put the matter to the present push.—

Good Gertrude, set some watch over your son.—

This grave shall have a living monument:

An hour of quiet shortly shall we see;

Till then, in patience our proceeding be. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Hall in the Castle.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio.

Ham. So much for this, sir: now shall you see the other;—
Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kind of fight That would not let me sleep: methought, I lay Worse than the mutines in the bilboes. Rashly, And praising, I was ready for it; but, as we know, Our ignorance sometimes serves as well, When our deep plots do fail: and that should There's a divinity that shapes our ends, (teach us, Rough-hew them how we will.)

Hor. That is most certain.

Ham. Up from my cabin, My sea-gown scar'd about me, in the dark Grop'd I to find out them: had my desire; Finger'd their packet; and, in fine, withdrew To mine own room again: making so bold, My fear forgetting manner, to reveal Their grand commission; where I found, Horatio, A royal knavery; an exact command.— Larded with many several sorts of reasons, Importing Denmark's health, and England's too, With, ho! such bags and golbins in my life,— That, on the supreme, no leisure bated, No, not to stay the grinding of the axe, My head should be struck off.

Hor. Is't possible?

Ham. Here's the commission; read it at more leisure But wilt thou hear now how I did proceed. Hor. Ay, besieech you.

Ham. Being thus benetted round with villains, Or rather taint'd with brains. They had begun the play:— I sat me down; Devi'd a new commission; wrote it fair: I once did hold it, as our statistis do, A bassens to write fair, and labour'd much He could forget that learning; but, sir, now It did not yeoman's service! Will thou know The effect of what I wrote?

Hor. Ay, good my lord.

Ham. An earnest conjuration from the king,— As England was his faithful tributary; A love between them like the palm might flourish; As peace should still her wheaten garland wear, And stand a comma 'tween their amities; And many such like as 's of great charge,— That on the view and knowing of these contents, Without debate nor further, more or less, He should the bearers put to sudden death, Not shriving-time allow'd.

Hor. How was this seal'd?

Ham. Why, even in that was heaven ordain'd; I lay my father's signet in my purse, Which was the model of that Danish seal; Folded the writ up in the form of the other; [ly, Subscrib'd it; gave't the impression; plac'd it safe— The changeling never known: Now the day Was our sea-fight: and what to this was sequent Thou know'st already.

Hor. So Guildenstern and Rosencrantz go to't.

Ham. Why, man, they did make love to this employment; They are not near my conscience; their defeat Does by their own insinuation grow; 'Tis dangerous, when the baser nature comes Between the fall and incessant points Of mighty opposites.

Hor. Why, what a king is this!

Ham. Does it not, think thee, stand me now upon? He that hath kill'd my king, and who'd my mother; Popp'd in between the election and my hopes; Throw'n out his angle for my proper life, And with such cozenage; 'tis not perfect conscience, To steel him with this arm, and 'tis not to be To let this canker of our nature come (damn'd, In further evil? [England, Hor. It must be shortly known to him From what is the issue of the business there. Ham. It will be short: the time is mine, And a man's life's no more than to say, one But I am very sorry, good Horatio, That to Laertes I forget myself;

For by the image of my cause, I see The portraiture of his: I'll count his favours: But, sure, the bravery of his grief did put me Into a towering passion.

Hor. Peace; who comes here?
fancy, very responsive to the blits, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the carriages?

Hor. I knew, you must be edified by the margaet, ere you had done.

Osr. The carriages, sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would be more german to the matter, if we could carry a cannon by our sides; I would, it might be hangers till then. But, on: Six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal conceited carriages; that’s the French bet against the Danish: Why is this impawned, as you call it?

Osr. The king, sir, hath laid, that in a dozen passes between yourself and him, he shall not exceed you one hit; he hath laid it on twelve for nine; and it would come to immediate trial, if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How, if I answer, no?

Osr. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in that.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall; If it please his majesty, it is the breathing time of day with me: let the fools be brought, the gentleman willing, and the king hold his purpose, I will for him, if I can. I will, I will gain nothing but my shame, and the odd hits.

Osr. Shall I deliver you so?

Ham. To this effect, sir; after what flourish your nature will.

Osr. I commend my duty to your lordship. [Exit. Ham. Yours, yours. — He does well to commend it himself; there are no tongues else for’t.

Hor. This lapwing runs away with the shell on his head.

Ham. He did comply with his dug, before he sucked it. Thus he h-(and many more of the same breed, that, I know, the drossy age dotes on.) only got the tune of the time, and outward habit of encounter, a kind of yeasty collection, which carries them through the most fond and wining opinions; and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. My lord, his majesty commanded him to you by young Osric, who brings back to him, that you attend him in the hall: He sends to know, if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time.

Ham. I am constant to my purposes, they follow the king’s pleasure: if his fitness speaks, mine is ready; now, or whensoever, provided I be so able as now.

Lord. The king, and queen, and all are coming down.

Ham. In happy time.

Lord. The queen desires you, to use some gentle entertainment to Laertes, before you fall to play.

Ham. She well instructs me. [Exit Lord. Ham. You will lose this wager, my lord.

Ham. I do not think so; since he went into France, I have been in continual practice; I shall win at the odds. But thou wouldst not think, how ill all’s here about my heart: but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my lord.

Ham. Nay, but folly; but it is such a kind of gain-giving, as would, perhaps, trouble a woman. Hor. If your mind dislike any thing, obey it: I will forestall their repair hither, and say, you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we defy augury; there is a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, ’tis not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now: if it be not now, yet it will come: the readiness is all: Since no man, of aught he leaves, knows, what’s to leave before he leaves. Let be.

Enter King, Queen, Laertes, Lords, Osric, and Attendants with feats, &c.

King. Come, Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me.

[The King puts the hand of Laertes into that of Hamlet. Ham. Give me your pardon, sir; I have done you wrong;

But pardon it, as you are a gentleman. [heard. This presence knows, and you must needs have How I am punished with a sore distraction.

What have I done,

That might your nature, honour, and exception, Roughly awake: I here proclaim was madness. Was’t Hamlet wrong’d Laertes? Never, Hamlet: If Hamlet from himself be ta’en away, And, when he’s not himself, does wrong Laertes, Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it. Who does it then? His madness: I’f he be so, Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong’d;

His madness is poor Hamlet’s enemy. Sir, in this audience,

Let my disclaiming from a purpos’d evil Free me so far in your most generous thoughts,

That I have shot my arrow o’er the house,

And hurt my brother.

Laer. I am satisfied in nature,

Whose motive, in this case, should stir me most To my revenge: but in my terms of honour,

I stand aloof; and will no reconciliation,

Till by some elder masters, of known honour,

I have a voice and precedent of peace,

To keep my name ungord’d; But till that time,

I do receive your offered love like love,

And will not wrong it.

Ham. I embrace it freely;

And will this brother’s wager frankly play,—

Give us the foils; come on.

Laer. Come, one for me.

Ham. I’ll be your foil, Laertes; in mine ignorance

Your skill shall, like a star in the darkest night,

Stick fiery off indeed.

Laer. You mock me, sir.

Ham. No, by this hand.

King. Give them the foils, young Osric.—Cousin

You know the wager? [Hamlet, Ham. Very well, my lord;

Your grace hath laid the odds o’ the weaker side.

King. I do not fear it: I have seen you both —

But since he’s better’d, we have therefore odds.

Laer. This is too heavy, let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well: these foils have all a length.

[They prepare to play. Osr. Ay, my good lord.

King. Set me the stoups of wine upon that table: If Hamlet give the first or second hit,

Or quit in answer of the third exchange,

Let all the battlements their ordinarie fire:

The king shall drink to Hamlet’s better breath;

And in the cup an union shall he throw,

Richer than that which four successive kings

In Denmark’s crown have worn; Give me the

And let the kettle to the trumpet speak, [cups,

The trumpet to the cannonner without.

The cannons to the heavens, the heavens to earth,

Now the king drinks to Hamlet.—Come, begin; —

And you, the judges, bear a wary eye.

Ham. Come on, sir,

Laer. No.

Osr. A hit, a very palpable hit.

Well,-again.

Laer. King. Stay, give me drink: Hamlet, this pearl is thine;

Here’s to thy health.—Give him the cup.

[Trumpets sound; and cannon shot off within. Ham. I’ll play this bout first, set it by awhile.

Come.—Another hit; What say you? [They play.

Laer. A touch, a touch, I do confess.

King. Our son shall win.

Queen. Here, Hamlet, take my napkin, rub thy brows.

The queen carouses to thy fortune, Hamlet.
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK

Act 5

Ham. Good madam,—
King. Gertrude, do not drink.
Queen. I will, my lord:—I pray you, pardon me.
Ham. It is the poison'd cup; it is too late.

[Aside.

Ham. I dare not drink yet, madam; by and by.
Queen. Come, let me wipe thy face.
Laer. My lord, I'll hit him now.
Ham. I do not think it.
Laer. And yet it is almost against my conscience.

[Aside.

Ham. Come, for the third, Laertes: You do but I pray you, pass with your best violence;—daily;
I am afraid, you make a wanton of me.
Laer. Say you so? come on. [They play.
Osr. Nothing neither way.
Laer. Have at you now.

[Laertes wounds Hamlet; then, in scuffling,
they change rapiers, and Hamlet wounds Laertes.

King. Part them, they are insane'd.
Ham. Nay, come again. [The Queen falls.
Osr. Look to the queen there, ho!—
Hor. They bleed on both sides:—How is it, my
Osr. How is't, Laertes? [lord?
Laer. Why, as a woodcock to my own springe,
I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.
Ham. How does the queen?
King. She swoons to see them bleed.
Queen. No, no, the drink, the drink,—O my dear
Ham.

The drink, the drink:—I am poison'd! [Dies.
Ham. O villainy!—Ho! let the door he lock'd;
Treachery! seek it out. [Laertes falls.
Laer. It is here, Hamlet: Hamlet, thou art slain;
No medicine in the world can do thee good,
In thee there is not half an hour's life;
The treacherous Instrument is in thine hand,
Unbated, and envemon'd: the foul practice
Hath turn'd itself on me; lo, here I lie.
Never to rise again; Thy mother's poison'd;
I can no more; the king, the king's to blame.
Ham. The point
Environ'd too!—Then, venom, to thy work.

[Slays the King.

Osr. & Lords. Treason! treason!
King. O, yet defend me, friends, I am but hurt.
Ham. Here, thou incestuous, mur'drous, damned
Dane,
Drink off this potion:—Is the union here?
Osr. Follow my mother. [King dies.
Laer. He is justly serv'd;
It is a poison temper'd by himself—
Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet:
Mine and my father's death come not upon thee;
Nor thine on me!
Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I follow thee.
I am dead, Horatio:—Wretched queen, adieu!—
You that look pale and tremble at this chance,
That are but mute or audience to this act,
Had I but time, (as this fell sergeant, death,
Is strict in his arrest.) O, I could tell you,
But let it be:—Horatio, I am dead;
Thou livest; report me and my cause aright
To the unsatisfied.
Hor. Never believe it;
I am more an antique Roman than a Dane,
Here's yet some liquor left.
Ham. As thou'rt a man,—
Give me the cup; let go; by heaven I'll have it.—
O God:—Horatio, what a wounded name,

Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind
If thou didst but ever hold me in thy heart, [me!
Absent thee from felicity a while,
And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,
To tell my story. [March after off, and shot within.

What warlike noise is this?
Osr. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from
To the ambassadors of England gives [Poland,
This warlike volley.

Ham. O, I die, Horatio;
The potent poison quite o'er-crows my spirit;
I cannot live to hear the news from England:
But I do prophesy, the election lights
On Fortinbras; he has my dying voice;
So tell him, with the occurrences, more or less,
Which have solicited,—The rest is silence. [Dies.
Hor. Now cracks a noble heart;—Good night,
sweet prince;
And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest!
Why does the drum come hither? [March within.

Enter Fortinbras, the English Ambassadors, and others.

Fort. Where is this sight?
Hor. What is it, you would see?
If sought of woe, or wonder, cease your search.

Fort. Why, is it no quarrel cries on hand?—O proud
What feast is toward in thine eternal cell, [death!
That thou so many princes, at a shot,
So bloodily hast struck?—

Amb. It is.

Ham. The sight is dismal;—And our affairs from England come too late
The ears are senseless, that should give us hearing,
To tell him, his commandment is fulfilled,
That Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are dead:
Where should we have our thanks?

Hor. O, not from his mouth,
Ham. Had it the ability of life to thank you:
He never gave commandment for their death.
But since, so jump upon this bloody question,
You from the Polish wars, and you from England
Are here arrived; give order, that these Hodics
High on a stage be placed to the view;
And let me speak, to the yet unknowing world,
How these things came about:—So shall you hear
Of carnal, bloody, and unnatural acts:
Of accidental judgments, casual slaughters;
Of deaths put on by cunning, and for'c'd cause;
And, in this upshot, purposes mistook
Fall'n on the inventors' heads: all this can I Truly deliver.

Fort. Let us haste to hear it,
And call the noisest to the audience.
For me, with sorrow I embrace my fortune;
I have some rights of memory in this kingdom,
Which now to claim my vantage doth invite me.
Hor. Of that I shall have also cause to speak,
And from his mouth whose voice will draw on
But let this same be presently perform'd: [more:
Even while men's minds are wild; lest more mis-
On plots, and errors, happen. [chance,
[Hor. Let four captains
Bear Hamlet like a soldier, to the stage;
For he was likely, had he been put on,
To have prov'd most royally: and, for his passage
The soldier's music, and the rites of war,
Speak loudly for him.
Take up the bodier:—Such a sight as this
 Becomes the field, but here shows much amiss.
Go, bid the soldiers shoot. [A dead March

1 Exeunt, bearing off the dead bodies; after which a peel of ordnance is shot off.

SCENE I.—Venice; A Street.

Enter Roderigo and Iago.

Rod. Tush, never tell me, I take it much un.
Thou that, Iago,—who hast had my purse, [kindly.
As if the strings were thing,—shouldst know of Iago. 'Sblood, but you will not hear me:—[this.
If ever I did dream of such a matter,
Abhor me.
Rod. Thou told'st me, thou didst hold him in thy hate.
[Of the city,
Iago. Despise me, if I do not. Three great ones
In personal suit to make me his lieutenant,
Oft capp'd to him:—and, by the faith of man,
I know my price, I am worth no worse a place:
But let me loving his own pride and purposes,
EvaDES them, with a bombast circumstance,
Horribly stuff'd with epithets of war;
And, in conclusion, nonsuits
My meditators; for, certes, says he,
I have already chose my officer.
And what was he?
Forsooth, a great mathematician,
One Michael Cassio, a Florentine,
A fellow almost damn'd in a fair wife;
That never set a squadron in the field,
Nor the division of a battle knows
More than a spinster; unless the bookish theorick,
Wherein the toged consuls can propose
An action withal; he: mere prattle, without practice,
Is all his soldiership. But, he, sir, had the election;
And I,—of whom his eyes had seen the proof,
At Rhodes, at Cyprus; and on other grounds
Christian and heathen,—must be be-lee'd and calm'd
By debitor and creditor, this counter-caster;
He, in good time, must his lieutenant be, [ancient.
And I, (God bless the mark!) his Moor's ship's Rod. By heaven, I rather would have been his hangman.
Iago. But there's no remedy, 'tis the curse of Preferment goes by letter, and affection, [service;
Not by the old gradation, where each second
Stood heir to the first. Now, sir, he judge yourself,
Whether you have any just term am affin'd
To love the Moor.
Rod. I would not follow him then.
Iago. O, sir, content you;
I follow him to serve my turn upon him:
We cannot all be masters, nor all masters
Cannot be truly follow'd. You shall mark
Many a duteous and knee-crooking knave,
That, doting on his own obeisant homage,
Wears out his time, much like his master's ass,
For nourish but provender; and, when he's old,
cashier'd;
Whip me such honest knaves: Others there are,
Who, trimm'd in forms and visages of duty,
Keep yet their hearts attending on themselves;
And, throwing but shows of service on their lords,
Do well thrive by them, and, when they have lin'd their coats,
Do themselves homage; these fellows have some
And such a one do I profess myself.
For, sir,
It is as sure as you are Roderigo,
Were I the Moor, I would not be Iago;
In following him, I follow but myself;
Heaven is my judge, not I for love and duty,
But seeming so, for my peculiar end:
For when my outward action doth demonstrate
The native act and figure of my heart
In compliment extern, 'tis not long after
But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve
For daws to peck at: I am not what I am.
Rod. What a full fortune does the thick-lips owe,
If he can carry thus!
Iago. Call up her father,
Rouse him: make after him, poison his delight,
Proclaim him in the streets; incense her kinsmen,
And, though he in a fertile climate dwell,
Plague him with flies: though that his joy be joy,
Yet throw such changes of vexation on't,
As it may lose some colour.
Rod. Here is her father's house; I'll call aloud.
Iago. Do; with like timorous accent, and dire
As when, by night and negligence, the fire [yell,
Is spread in populous cities.
Rod. What, ho! Brabantio! signior Brabantio ho!
Thieves! thieves!
Iago. A wake! what, ho! Brabantio! thieves!
Look to your house, your daughter, and your bags:
Thieves! thieves!
Brabantio, above, at a window.
Bra. What is the reason of this terrible summons?
What is the matter there?
Rod. Signior, is all your family within?
Iago. Are your doors lock'd?
Bra. Why? wherefore ask you this?
Iago. 'Zounds, sir, you are robb'd; for shame,
put on your gown;
Your heart is burst, you have lost half your soul.
Even now, very now, an old black ram
Is tupping your white ewe. Arise, arise;
Wake the smoking citizens with the bell,
Or else the devil will make a grandire of you:
Arise, I say.
Bra. What, have you lost your wits?
Rod. Most reverend signior, do you know my
Bra. Not I; what are you? [voice
Rod. My name is—Roderigo.
Bra. The worse welcome;
I have charg'd thee, not to haunt about my doors:
In honest plainness thou hast heard me say,
My daughter is not for thee: and now, in madness,
Being full of supper, and distempering draughts,
Upon malicious bravery, dost thou come
To start my quiet.
Rod. Sir, sir, sir,
Bra. But thou must needs be sure,
My spirit, and my place, have in them power
To make this bitter to thee.

Rod. Patience, good sir.

Bra. What tell'st thou me of robbing? this is My house is not a grange. [Venice;

Most grave Brabantio,
In simple and pure soul I come to you.
Zounds, sir, you are one of those that will not serve God, if the devil bid you.
Because we come to do you service, you think we are ruf-

Bra. What profane wretch art thou?

Iago. I am one, sir, that comes to tell you your daughter and the Moor are now making the beast with two backs.

Bra. Thou art a villain.

Iago. You are—a senator.
Bra. This thou shalt answer; I know thee, Rod-

Rod. Sir, I will answer any thing. But I beseech
Ist be your pleasure, and most wise consent,
(As partly, I find, it is,) that your fair daughter,
At this odd-even and dull watch o'the night,
Transported—with no worse nor better guard,
But what is mark of common hire, a gondolier,
To the gross clans of a lascivious Moor.
If this be known to you, and your allowance,
We then have done you bold and saucy wrongs:
Put, if you know not this, my manners tell me,
We have your wrong rebuke. Do not believe,
That, from the sense of all civility,
I thus would play and trifle with your reverence:
Your daughter,—if you have not given her leave,
I say again, hath made a gross revolt;
Tying her duty, beauty, wit, and fortunes,
In the most flagrant and wildest danger,
Of here and every where; straight satisfy yourself;
If she be in her chamber, or your house,
Let loose on me the justice of the state
For this deluding you.

Bra. Strike on the tinder, ho!
Give me a taper;—call up all my people:—
This accident is not unlike my dream;
Belief of it oppresses me already:—

Light, I say! light! [Exit, from above.

Bra. Farewell; for I must leave you:
It seems not meet, nor wholesome to my place,
To be produc'd (as, if I say, I shall,)
Against the Moor: For, I do know, the state,—
However this may gall him with some check,—
Cannot the Moor cast him; there's his embark'd
With such loud reason to the Cyprus' wars.
(Which even now stand in act,) that, for their souls,
Another of his fathom they have not,
To lead their business. in which regard,
Though I do hate him as I do hell pains,
Yet, for necessity of present life,
I must show out a flag and sign of love,
Which is indeed but sign. That you shall surely Lead to the Sagittary the rais'd search; [find him,
And there will I be with him. So, farewell. [Exit.

Enter, below, Brabantio, and Servants with torches.

Iago. It is too true an evil: gone she is;
And what's to come of my desipled time,
Is nought but bitterness.—Now, Rodrigo,
Where didst thou see her?—O, unhap'ry girl!
With the Moor, says'th thou?—Who would be a

[me

Rod. Truly, I think, they are. [of the blood.

Bra. O heaven! How got she out!—O treason

By what you see them act. Are there not charms,

By which the property of youth and maidhood
May be abus'd? Have you not read, Rodrigo,
Of some such thing?

Rod. Yes, sir; I have indeed.

Bra. Call up my brother.—O, that you had

Some one way, some another.—Do you know

Where we may apprehend her and the Moor?

Rod. I can divine, my liege; he cannot but

Pray. You lead on. At every house I call:
I may command at most;—get weapons, ho!
And raise some special officers of night.
On, good Rodrigo; I'll deserve your pains. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The same. Another Street.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Attendants.

Iago. Though in the trade of war I have slain
Yet do I hold it very stuff o'the conscience, [men,
To do no contriv'd murder; I lack iniquity
Sometimes, to do me service: Nine or ten times
I had thought to have yerkt' him here under the Oth. 'Tis better as it is. [Exit.

Iago. Nay, but he prated,
And spoke such scurvy and provoking terms
Against your honour,
That, with the little godliness I have,
I did full hard forbear him. But, I pray, sir,
Are you fast married? for, be sure of this—
That the magnifico is much beloved;
And hath, in his effect, a voice potential
As double as the duke's; he will divorce you;
Or put upon you what restraint and grievance
The law (with all his might, to enforce it on,)
Will give him cable.

Oth. Let him do his spite:
My services, which I have done the signiory,
Shall out-tongue his complaints. 'Tis yet to know
(Which, when I know that boasting is an honour,
I shall promulgate,) I fetch my life and being
From men of royal siege; and my demerits
May speak, unbookmett'd, to the proud a fortune
As this that I have reach'd: For know, Iago,
But that I love the gentle Desdemona,
I would not my unhoused free condition
Put into circumscription and confine Yonder?
For the sea's worth. But, look, what lights come

Enter Cassio, at a distance, and certain Officers with torches.

Iago. These are the raised father, and his friends.
You were best goin.

Not i; I must be found;
My parts, my title, and my perfect soul,
Shall manifest me rightly. Is it they?

Iago. By Janus, I think no.
Oth. The servants of the duke, and my lieutenant.
The good ness of the night upon you, friends!

What is the news?

Cas. The duke does greet you, general:
And he requires your haste-post-haste appearance,
Even on the instant.

Oth. What is the matter, think you?

Cas. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine;
It is a business of some heat: the galleys
Have sent a dozen sequent messengers
This very night, at one another's heels;
And many of the consuls, rai'd and met,
Are at the duke's already: You have been hotly call'd for;

When, being not at your lodging to be found,
The senate hath sent about three several quests,
To search you out.

'Oth. 'Tis well I am found by you!
I will but spend a word here in the house,
And go with you.

[Exit.

Cas. Ancient, what makes he here?

Iago. 'Faith, he to-night hath boarded a land
carack;

If it prove lawful prize, he's made for ever.
Cas. I do not understand.

Iago. He's married.

Cas. To who?

Re-enter Othello.

Iago. Marry, to—Come, captain, will you go? Oth. Have with you. Cas. Here comes another troop to seek for you.

Enter Brabantino, Roderigo, and Officers of night, with torches and weapons.

Iago. It is Brabantino:—general, be advis'd; He comes to bad intent.

Oth. Rod. Signior, it is the Moor. [They draw on both sides.

Iago. You, Roderigo! come, sir, I am for you. Oth. Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust them.

Good signor, you shall more command with years, Than with your weapons. [my daughter? Bra. O thou foul thief, where hast thou stow'd Damn'd as thou art, thou hast enchanted her: For I'll refer me to all things of sense, If she in chains of magic were not bound, Whether a maid—so tender, fair, and happy; So opposite to marriage, that she shunn'd The wealthy curled darlings of our nation, Would ever have, to incur a general mock, Run from her guardhouse to the sooty bosom Of such a thing as thou: to fear, not to delight. Judge me the world, if 'tis not gross in sense, That thou hast practis'd on her with foul charms; Ab'd her heart and mouth with drugs, or minerals, That waken motion: I'll have it disputed on; 'Tis probable, and palpable to thinking. I therefore apprehend and do attach thee, For an abuser of the world, a practiser Of art inhibited and out of warrant: Lay hold upon him; if he do resist, Subdue him at his peril.

Oth. Hold your hands, Both you of my inclining, and the rest: Were it my cue to fight, I should have known it Without a prompter. Where will you that I Go to answer this your charge?

Bra. To prison: till fit time Of law, and course of direct session, Call thee to answer.

Oth. What if I do obey? How may the duke be therewith satisfied? Whose messengers are here about my side, Upon some present business of the state, To bring me to his council?

Off. 'Tis true, most worthy signior, The duke's in council; and your noble self, I am sure, is sent for.

Bra. How! the duke in council! In this time of the night! —Bring him away: Mine's not an idle cause: the duke himself, Or any of my brothers of the state, Cannot but feel this wrong, as 'twere their own: For if such actions may have passage free, Bond-slaves, and pagans, shall our statesmen be. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The same. A Council-Chamber.

The Duke, and Senators, sitting at a table; Officers attending.

Duke. There is no composition in these news, That gives them credit.

1 Sen. Indeed, they are disproportion'd; My letters say, a hundred and seven galleys. Duke. And mine, a hundred and forty. 2 Sen. But though they jump not on a just account, [As in these cases, where the aim reports, 'Tis oft with differences,) yet do they all confirm A Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus.

Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to judgment; I do not so secure me in the error, But the main article I do approve In fearful sense.

Sailor. [Within.] What ho! what ho! what ho! Enter an Officer, with a Sailor.

Off. A messenger from the galleys.

Duke. Sold. Now 'tis the business? The Turkish preparation makes for So was I bld report here to the state, [Rhodes; By signior Angelo.

Duke. How say you by this change? 1 Sen. And why this haste? This cannot be, By no assay of reason; 'tis a pageant, To keep us in false gaze: When we consider The importance of Cyprus to the Turk; And let ourselves again but understand, That, as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes, So may he with more facile question bear it, For that it stands not in such warlike brace, But altogether lacks the abilities That Rhodes is dress'd in: if we make thought of We must not think, the Turk is so unstiffl, [this, To leave that latest which confirms him first; Neglecting an attempt of ease, and gain, To wake, and wage, a danger profitless.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The Oottomites, reverend and gracious, Steering with due course toward the isle of Rhodes, Have there injointed them with an after fleet.

1 Sen. Ay, so I thought—How many, as you guess?

Mess. Of thirty sail: and now do they re-stem Their backward course, bearing with frank appearance Their purposes toward Cyprus.—Signior Montano, Your trusty and most valiant servitor, With his free duty, recommends you thus, And prays you to believe him.

Duke. 'Tis certain then for Cyprus.— Marcus Lucchese, is he not in town? 1 Sen. He's now in Florence.

Duke. Write from use; wish him post-post-haste despatch. [Moor.

1 Sen. Here comes Brabantino, and the valiant Enter Brabantino, Othello, Iago, Roderigo, and Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight employ Against the general enemy Ottoman. [you I did not see you; welcome, gentle signior; To Brabantino.

We lack'd your counsel and your help to-night. Bra. So did I yours: Good your grace, pardon me; Neither my place, nor aught I heard of business, Hath rais'd me from my bed; nor doth the general Take hold on me, for my particular grief [care Of so flood-gate, and o'erbearing nature, That it engulfs and swallows other sorrows, And it is still itself.

Duke. Why, what's the matter? Bra. My daughter! O, my daughter! Sen. Dead? Bra. Ay, to me She is abus'd, stol'n from me, and corrupted By spells and medicines bought of mountebanks; For nature so preposterously to err, Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense, Sans witchcraft could not— [ceeding.

Duke. Who'er he be, that, in this foul profanation thus beguil'd your daughter of herself, And you of her, the bloody book of law You shall yourself read in the bitter letter, After your own sense; yea, though your proper son Stood in your action.

Bra. Humly I thank your grace. Here is the man, this Moor; whom now, it seems, Your special mandate, for the state affairs, Hath hither brought.
Duke & Sen. We are very sorry for it.

Duke. What, in your own part, can you say to this? [To Othello.]

Oth. Nothing, but this is so.

Duke. What, is this true? Do you mean to say that what Is told me of this new exchange of joy and hate, of fortune and misfortune, that what Is brought into your world, does not disturb
In your native thoughts?—Oth. I still am in
And little bless'd with the set phrase of peace;
For since these arms of mine had seven years' pith,
Till now some nine moons wasted, they have no'd
Their dearest action in the tented field;
And most in this great world can I speak,
More than pertains to seats of broil and battle;
And therefore little shall I grace my cause,
In speaking for myself: Yet, by your gracions pa-
I will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver [tience,
Of my whole course of love; what drugs, what charms,
What conjuration, and what mighty magic,
(For such proceeding I charg'd withal,) I won his daughter with.

Duke. A maiden never bold;
Of spirit so still and quiet, that her motion
Blush'd at herself; and she,—in spite of nature,
Of years, of country, credit, every thing,—
To fall in love with what she fear'd to look on? I think it a malady, and can I,
That will confess—perfection so could err.
Against all rules of nature; and must be driven
To find out practices of cunning hell,
Why this should be. I therefore vouch again,
That whilst mixtures powerfull o'er the blood,
Or with some drain conjur'd to this effect,
He wrought upon her.

Duke. To vouch this, is no proof;
Without more certain and more overt test,
That with old habis, and poor likehoods
Of modern seeming, do prefer against him.
1 Sen. But, Othello, speak—
Did you by indirect or forced courses
Subdue and poison this young maid's affections?
Or came it by request, and such fair question
As soul to soul affordeth?

Oth. I do beseech you,
Send for the lady to the Sagittary,
And let her speak of me before her father:
If you find me, I am in no sight,
The trust, the office, I do hold of you,
Not only take away, but let your sentence
Even fall upon my life.

Oth. The ancient, conduct the business you best know the place.—[Exit Iago and Attendants.]

And, till she come, as truly as to heaven
I do confess the vices of my blood,
So justly to your grave ears I'll present
How I did thrive in this fair lady's love,
And she in mine.

Duke. Say it, Othello.

Oth. Her father lov'd me; oft invited me;
Still question'd me the story of my life,
From year to year; the battles, sieges, fortunes,
That passed and past; I ran it through,
Even from my boyish days,
To the very moment that he bade me tell it.
Wherein I spoke of most disastrous chances,
Of moving accidents, by flood and field;
Of hair-breadth escapes? the imminent deadly
Of being taken by the insolent foe, [breach;
And sold to slavery; of my redemption thence,
And portance in my travel's history;
Wherein of antres vast, and desarts idle,
Rough terrains, pits, and hills whose heads
Touch heaven,
It was my hint to speak, such was the process;
And of the Cannibals that each other eat,
The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads
Do grow beneath their shoulders. These things to
Would Desdemona seriously incline: [hear,
But still the house affairs would draw her thence;
Which ever as she could with haste despatch,
She'd come again, and with a greedy ear
Devour up my discourse: Which I observing,
Took some repose, and learned good means
To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart,
That I would all my pilgrimage dilate,
Whereby if parcels she had something heard,
But not intentionally: I did consent;
And I would beguile her of her tears,
When I did speak of some dishonourable stroke,
That my youth suffer'd. My story done,
She gave me for my pains a world of sighs:
She swore,—In faith, 'twas strange, 'twas passing Wrong, 'twas wondrous pitiful: [strange; She wished, she had not heard; yet she wished That heaven had made her such a man: she thanked me;
And bade me, if I had a friend that lov'd her,
I should but teach him how to tell my story,
And bade the world woo her. Upon this hint, I spoke;
She lov'd me for the dangers I had pass'd;
And I lov'd her, that she did pity them.
This only is the witchcraft I have us'd;
Here comes the lady, let her witness it.

Enter Desdemona, Iago, and Attendants.

Duke. I think, this tale would win my daughter
Good Brabantio, [too.]
Take up this mangled matter at the best:
Men do their broken weapons rather use,
Than their bare hands.

Iago. I prye you, hear her speak; she
If she confess, that she was half the wooser,
Destruction on my head, if my bad blame
Light on the man!—Come hither, gentle mistress;
Do you perceive in all this noble company,
Where most you owe obedience?

Duke. My noble father,
I do perceive here a divided dnty:
To you, I am bound for life and education;
My life, and education, both do learn me
How to respect you: you are the lord of duty,
And hither your daughter; But hear'st my hus-
And so much duty as my mother shew'd [band;
To you, preferring you before her father,
So much I challenge that I may profess
Due to the Moor, my lord.

But. God be with you!—I have done:
Please it your grace, on to the state affairs;
I had rather to adopt a child, than get it.—
Come hither, Moor: I here do give thee that with all my heart,
That you wish hast already, with all my heart:
I would keep from thee—For your sake, jewel,
I am glad at soul I have no other child;
For thy escape would teach me tyranny,
To hang clogs on them.—I have done, my lord.

Duke. Let me speak like yourself; and lay a sentence,
Which, as a grise, or step, may help these lovers
Into your favour.
When remedies are past, the griefs are ended,
By seeing the worst, which late on hopes depended.
To more have mischief than past and gone,
Is the next way to draw new mischief on.
What cannot be prevent'd when fortune takes Patience her injury a mockery makes.
[tief; The robb'd, that smilies, steals something from the
He robs himself, that spends a bootless grief.
Bra. So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile;
We lose it not, so long as we can smile.
He bears the sentence well, that nothing bears
But the free comfort which from thence he hears.
But the sentence and the sorrow,
That, to pay grief, most of poor patience borrow.
These sentences, to sugar, or to gall,
Being strong on both sides, are equivocal:
But words are words; I never yet did hear, [esr.
That the bruist'hart was pierced through the
I humbly beseech you, proceed to the affairs of state.
Duke. The Turk with a most mighty preparation makes for Cyprus.—Othello, the fortitude of the place is best known to you: And though we have thought it wise to give you a substitute of most careful suspicion, yet opinion, a sovereign mistress of effects, throws a more safer voice on you; you must therefore be content to slumber the gloss of your new fortunes with this more stubborn and bolsterous expedition. The true custom, most grave we senators, Hath made the flinty and steel couch of war My thrice-driven bed of down; I do agnize A natural and prompt alacrity, I find in hardiness; and do undertake That present wars against the present. Most humble therefore bending to your state, I crave fit disposition for my wife; Due reference of place, and exhibition; With such accommodation, and besor, As lets with her breeding. If you please, Be't at her father's.

[Exeunt Duke, Senators, Officers, &c.

Oth. My life upon her faith.—Honestly Iago, My Desdemona I leave to thee, I pr'ythee, let thy wife attend on her; And bring them after in the best advantage.— Come, Desdemona, I have but an hour Of love, of worldly matters and direction, To spend with them, most grave we senators.

[Exeunt Othello and Desdemona.

Rod. It is sliiness to live, when to live is a torment: and then have we a prescription to die, when death is our physician.

Iago. O villainous! I have looked upon the world for four times seven years! and since I could distinguish between a benefit and an injury, I never found a man that knew how to love himself. Ere I would say, I would drown myself for the love of a Guinea-hen, I would change my humanity with a baboon.

Rod. What should I do? I confess, it is my shame to be so fond; but it is not in virtue to amend it.

Iago. Virtue! a fig! 'tis in ourselves, that we are thus, or thus. Our bodies are our gardens; to the which, our wills are gardeners: so that if we will plant nettles, or sow lettuce; set hyssop, and weed up thyme; supply it with one gender of herbs, or distract it with many; either to have it sterile with idleness, or manured with industry; why, the power and corrigible authority of this lies in our wills. If the balance of our lives had not one scale of reason to poise another of sensuality, the blood and baseness of our natures would conduct us to most preposterous conclusions: But we have reason to cool our raging motions, our carnal stings, our unbitten lusts; whereas if I take this, that you call—love, to be a sect or scion.

Rod. It cannot be.

Iago. It is merely a lust of the blood, and a permission of the will. Come, be a man: Drown thy blind passions, and give up thy mind; 'tis now that I 'dress me thy friend, and I confess me knit to thy deserving with cables of perdurable touchless; I could never better steady thee than now. Put money in thy purse; follow these wars; defeat thy favour with an unsuspected ardor; I say, pay. in thy purse. It cannot be, that Desdemona should long continue her love to the Moor,—put money in thy purse;—nor he his to her: it was a violent commencement, and thou shalt see an answerable sequestration;—but put money in thy purse. These Moors are changeable in their wills;—fill thy purse with money; the food that to him now is as luscious as locusts, shall be to him shortly as bitter as coloquintida. She must change for youth: when she is sated with his love, she will find other choice. She must have change, she must: therefore put money in thy purse,—If thou wilt needs damn thyself, do it a more delicate way than drowning. Make all the money thou canst: If sanctimony and a frail vow, betwixt an erring barbarian and a supersubtle Venetian, be not too hard for my wits, and all the tribe of hell, thou shalt enjoy her; therefore make money. A pox of drowning thy self! it is clean out of the way: seek thou rather to be hanged in compassing thy joy, than to be drowned and go without her.

Rod. Will thou be false to my hopes, if I depend on the issue?

Iago. Thou art sure of me!—Go, make money:—I have told thee often, and I re-tell thee again and again, I hate the Moor: My cause is hearted; thine hath no less reason: Let us be conjunctive in our revenge against him: if thou canst cuckold him, thou dost thyself a pleasure, and me a sport,

There are many events in the womb of time, which will be delivered. Traverse; go; provide thy money. We will have more of this to-morrow.
Adieu.

Rod. Where shall we meet i'the morning?

Iago. At my lodging.

Rod. I'll be with thee betimes.

Iago. Go to; farewell. Do you hear, Roderigo?

Rod. What say you? Iago. No more of dawning, do you hear.

Rod. I am changed. I'll sell all my land.

Iago. Go to; farewell! put money enough in your purse. [Exit Roderigo.

Thus do I ever make my fool my purses:
For I mine own gain'd knowledge should profane,
If I would time expend with such a snipe,
But for my sport and profit. I hate the Moor;
And it is thought abroad, that 'twixt my sheets
He has done my office: I know not if't be true;
But I, for more suspicion in that kind,
Will do, as if for surety. He holds me well;
The better shall my purpose work on him.
Cassio's a proper man: Let me see now;
To get his place, and to plume-up my will;
A double knavery.—How? Let me see:—
After some time, to abuse Othello's ear,
That he is too familiar with his wife:—
He hath a person, and a smooth dispose,
To be suspected; fram'd to make women false.
The Moor, he thinks, is of a free and open nature,
That thinks men honest, but that seem to be so;
And will as tenderly be led by the nose,
As asses are.

I have't;—it is engender'd:—Hell and night,
Must bring this monstrous birth to the world's light.

[Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Sea-port Town in Cyprus. A Platform.

Enter Montano and Two Gentlemen.

Mont. What from the cape can you discern at sea?

Gent. Nothing at all: it is a high-wrought flood;
I cannot, 'twixt the heaven and the main,
Descry a sail.

Mont. Well, sea, the wind hath spoke aloud at
A fuller blast ne'er shock our battlements;
If it hath ruffian'd so upon the sea,
What ribs of oak, when mountains melt on them,
Can hold the mortise? what shall we hear of this?

A separation of the Turkish fleet:
For do but stand upon the foaming shore,
The chiding billow seems to pelt the clouds;
The wind-shak'd surge, with high and monstrous
Seems to cast water on the burning bare,
[main,
And quench the guards of the ever-fixed pole:
I never did like molestation view
On th' enchasfed flood.

Mont. If that the Turkish fleet
Be not ensheathed and embay'd, they are drown'd;
It is impossible they bear it out.

Enter a Third Gentleman.

3 Gent. News, lords! our wars are done;
The desperate tempest hath so bang'd the Turks,
That their designment halts: A noble ship of Venice
Hath seen a grievous wreck and sufferance
On most part of their fleet.

Mont. How! is this true?

3 Gent. The ship is here put in,
A Veronese; Michael Cassio,
Lieutenant to the warlike Moor, Othello,
Is come on shore: the Moor himself's at sea,
And is in full commission here for Cyprus.

Mont. I am glad on't; 'tis a worthy governor.

3 Gent. But this same Cassio,—though he speak of comfort,

To touching the Turkish loss,—yet he looks sadly,
And prays the Moor be safe: for they were parted
With foul and violent tempest.

Mont. Pray heaven he be;
For I have serv'd him, and the man commands
Like a full soldier. Let's to the sea-side, ho!—
As well to see the vessel that's come in,
As to throw out our eyes for brave Othello;
Even till we make the main and the aerial blue,
An indistinct regard.

Ros. Come, let's do so;
For every minute is expectancy
Of more arrivance.

Enter Cassio.

Cas. Thanks to the valiant of this warlike isle,
That so approve the Moor: O, let the heavens
Give him defence against the elements,
For I have lost him on a dangerous sea!

Mont. Is he well ship'd?

Cas. His bark is stoutly timber'd, and his pilot
Of very expert and approv'd allowance;
Therefore my hopes, not surfeited to death,
Stand in bold cure.

[Within.] A sail, a sail, a sail!

Enter another Gentleman.

Cas. What noise?

4 Gent. The town is empty; on the brow o'the sea
Stand ranks of people, and they cry,—a sail.

Cas. My hopes do shape him for the governor.

2 Gent. They do discharge their shot of cour-

[Gun heard.

Our friends, at least.

Cas. I pray you, sir, go forth,
And give us truth who 'tis that is arriv'd.

2 Gent. I shall. [Exit. Mon. But, good lieutenant, is your general well?
Cas. Most fortunately: he hath achieve'd a maid,
That paragons description, and wild fame;
One that exells the quirks of blazoning pens,
And in the essential venture of creation,
[In?
Does bear all excellency.—How now? who has put

Re-enter Second Gentleman.

2 Gent. 'Tis one Iago, ancient to the general.
Cas. He has had a most favourable and happy speed;
Tempests themselves, high seas, and howling
The thunder'd rocks, and congregated sands,
Traitors ensteed to clog the guiltless keel,
As having sense of beauty, do omit
Their mortal natures, letting go safely
The divine Desdemona.

Mon. What is she?

Cas. She that I spake of, our great captain's cap-
Left in the conduct of the bold Iago;
[tain,
Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts,
A seem'dnight's speed.—Great Iove, Othello guard,
And swell his sail with thine own powerful breath,
That he may bless this bay with his tall ship,
Make love's quick pants in Desdemona's arms,
Give renew'd fire to our extincted spirits,
And bring all Cyprus comfort!—O, behold,

Enter Desdemona, Emilia, Iago, Roderigo, and Attendants.

The riches of the ship is come on shore!
Ye men of Cyprus, let her have your knees:
Hail to thee, lady: and the grace of heaven,
Before, behind thee, and on ever hand,
Enwheels thee round.

Des. I thank you, valiant Cassio.

Cas. What tidings can you tell me of my lord?

Cas. He is not yet arriv'd; nor know I aught
But that he's well, and will be shortly here.

Des. O, but I fear;—How lost you company?

Cas. They great contention of the sea, and skies
Parted our fellowship: But, hark: a sail.

[Cry within. A sail, a sail! Then guns heard.
ACT 2.  THE MOOR OF VENICE.

[3 Gent. They give their greeting to the citizen: This likewise is a friend.]

[Enter Gentleman.]

[Good ancient, you are welcome—Welcome, mistress:]

[To Emilia.]

Let it not wear your patience, good Iago. That I extended my manners: tis my breeding That gives me this bold show of courtesy. [Kissing her.]

Iago. Sir, would she give you so much of her lips, And her tongue she oft bestows on me, You'd have enough. Alas, she has no speech.

Iago. In faith, too much:
I find it still, when I have list to sleep: Marry, before your ladyship, I grant, She is not a little to her heart, And chides with thinking.

Emil. You have little cause to say so.

Iago. Come on, come on; you are pictures out of doors.

Bells in your parlours, wild cats in your kitchens, Saints in your injuries, devils being offended, Players in your housewifery, and housewives in.

Des. O, fye upon thee, slanderer! [your beds.]

Iago. Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk; You rise, and play so, to go to bed. Emil. You shall not write my praise.

Iago. No, let me not.

Des. What would'st thou write of me, if thou hadst praise?

Iago. O gentle lady, do not put me to't;
For I am nothing, if not critical.

Des. Come on, assay:—There's one gone to the Iago. Ay, madam. [harbour?]

Des. I am not merry; but I do beguile
The thing I am, by seeming otherwise.—

Come, how would'st thou praise me?

Iago. I am about it; but, indeed, my invention
Comes from my pate, as birdlime does from frize;

For that her folly help'd her to an hour:

But my muse labours, And thus she is deliver'd.

If she be fair and wise,—fairness, and wit,
The one's for use, the other use'th it.

Des. Well prais'd! How if she be black and witty?
Iago. If she be black, and thereto have a wit,

She'll find a white that shall her blackness fit.

Des. Worse and worse.

Emil. How, if fair and foolish?

Iago. She never yet was foolish that was fair;
For that her folly help'd her to an hour;

But these are fond paradoxes, to make fools
Laugh 't the alehouse. What miserable praise hast thou for her's foul and foolish?

Iago. There's none so foul, and foolish there-

But does foul pranks which fair and wise ones do.

Des. O heavy ignorance!—thou praisest the worst best. But what praise could'st thou bestow on a deserving woman indeed? one, that, in the authority of her merit, did justly put on the vouch of very malice itself?

Iago. She that was ever fair, and never proud;
Had tongue at will, and yet never was loud;

Never lank'd gold, and yet never went gay;

Fled from her wish, and yet said, now I may:
She, being anger'd, her revenge being nigh,
Bade her wrong stay, and her displeasure fly:

She that in wisdom never was so frail,
To change the cod's head for the salmon's tail;

She that could think, and ne'er disclose her mind,

Sees suitors following, and not look behind;

She was a wight,—if ever such wight were—

Des. To do what?

Iago. To saddle fools, and chronicle small beer.

Des. O most lame and impotent conclusion!—

Do not learn of him, Emilia, though he be thy husband.—How say you. Cassio? is he not a most profane and liberal counsellor?

Cas. He speaks home, madam; you may relish him more in the soldier, than in the scholar.

Iago. [Aside.] He takes her by the palm: Ay, well said, whisper: with as little a web as this, will I ensnare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, smile upon her, my love; I will give thee in courtship, you say true; 'tis so, indeed: if such tricks as these strip you out of your leutenantry, it had been better you had not kissed your three fingers so oft, which now again you are most apt to play the sir in. Very good, I'll well kiss! [Trumpet.] The Moor, I know his trumpet.

Cas. 'Tis truly so.

Des. Let's meet him, and receive him.

Caio. Lo, where he comes!

Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Oth. O my fair warrior!

Des. My dear Othello! Oth. It gives me wonder great as my content,
To see you here before me. O my soul's joy! If after every tempest come such calms,
May the winds blow till they have wak'n'd death! And let the labouring bank climb hills of seas,
Olympus-high; and duck again as low As hell's from heaven! If it were now to die,
'Twere now to be happy: for, I fear,
My soul hath her contention to bed with us;
That nor another comfort like to this
Succeeds in unknown fate.

Des. The heavens forbid, But that our loves and comforts should increase,
Even as our days do grow!

Oth. Amen to that, sweet powers!—
I cannot speak enough of this content,
It stops me here; it is too much of joy:
And this, this, the greatest discords be,
That e'er our hearts shall make !

Iago. O, you are well turn'd now! But I'll set down the pegs that make this music,
As honest as I am. [Aside.

Oth. Come, let's to the castle—

News, friends; our wars are done, the Turks are drown'd.

How do our old acquaintance of this isle? Honey, you shall be well with in Cyprus.
I have found great love amongst them: O my sweet, I prattie out of fashion, and I dote
In mine own comforts.—I pray thee, good Iago, Go to the bay, and disembar thy coffers:
Bring thou the shore to the citadel;
He is a good one, and his worthiness
Does challenge much respect.—Come, Desdemona, Once more well met at Cyprus.

[Exeunt Oth. Des. and Attend.]

Iago. Do thou meet me presently at the harbour.

Come hither. If thou be'st valiant as (they say) base men, being in love, have then a nobility in their natures more than is native to them,—list me.
The lieutenant to-night watches on the court of guard.—First, I must tell thee this—Desdemona is directly in love with him.

Rod. With him I why, 'tis not possible.

Iago. Lay thy finger—thus, and let thy soul be instructed. Mark me with what violence she first loved the Moor, but for bragging, and telling her fantastical lies: And will she love him still for praying? let not thy discreet heart think it. Her eye must be fed; and what delight shall she have to look on the devil? When the blood is made dull with the act of sport, there shall be,—again to inflame it, and to give satiety a fresh appetite,— loveness in favour; sympathy in years, manners, and beauties; all which the Moor is defective in:
Now, for want of these required conveniences, her delicate temper will find itself abused, begin to hate the gorge, disrelish and abhor the Moor; very nature will instruct her in it, and compel her to some second choice. Now, sir, this granted, (as it is a most pregnant and unforced position,) who stands so eminently in the degree of this fortune, as Cassio does? a knife very valuable; no farther conceivable, than in putting on the mere form of civil and humane seeming, for the better compassing of his salt and most hidden loose affection? why, none; why, none: A slippery and subtle knife; a finder of occasions; that has an eye to stamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advantage may be hid: A deceptive knife! besides, the knife is handsome, young; and hath all those requisites in him, that folly and green minds look after: A pestilent complete knife; and the woman hath found him already.

Rod. I cannot believe that in her; she is full of most blessed condition.

Iago. Blessed fig's end! the wine she drinks is made of grapes: if she had been blessed, she would never have loved the Moor: Blessed puddling! Didst thou not see her paddle with the palm of his hand? didst not mark that?

Rod. Yes, that I did; but that was but courtesy.

Iago. Lechery, by this hand; an index, and obscure prologue to the history of lust and foul thoughts. They met so near with their lips, that their breaths embraced together. Villainous thoughts, Roderigo! when these mutualities so marshalled the way, hard at hands comes the master and main exercise, the incorporate conclusion: But, thou, in mine eye: I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to-night; for the command, I'll lay't upon you: Cassio knows you not;—I'll not be far from you: Do you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, tarnishing his discipline; or from what other course you please, which the time shall make more favourably minister.

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he is rash, and very sudden in choler; and, when he is truculent, he may strike at you: Provoke him, that he may: for, even out of that, will I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny; whose qualification shall come into no true taste again, but by the displanting of Cassio. So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires, by the means I shall then have to prefer them; and the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity.

Rod. I will do this, if I can bring it to any opportunity.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at the citadell: I must fetch his necessary ashore. Farewell.

Rod. Adieu. [Exit.

Iago. To Cassio loves her, I do well believe it: That she loves him, 'tis apt, and of great credit: The Moor—howbeit that I endure him not— Is of a constant, loving, noble nature; And, I dare think, he'll prove to Desdemona A most dear husband. Now I do love her too; Not out of absolute lust, (though, peradventure, I stand accountant for as great a sin,) But partly led to diet my revenge, For that I do suspect the lusty Moor Hath leap'd into my seat: the thought whereof Doth work my blood in my inward veins; And nothing can or shall content my soul, Till I am even with him, wife for wife; Or, failing so, yet that I put the Moor At least into a jealousy so strong That judgment cannot cure. Which thing to do,— If this poor trash of Venice, whom I trash For his quick hunting, stand the putting on, I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip; Abuse him to the Moor in the rank garb,— For I have Cassio with my night-cap too: Make the Moor thank me, love me, and reward me, For making him egregiously an ass, And practising upon his peace and quiet. Everything that here, but yet confus'd; Knavey's plain face is never seen, till us'd. [Exit.

SCENE II.—A Street.

Enter a Herald, with a proclamation; People following.

Her. It is Othello's pleasure, our noble and valiant general, that, upon certain tidings now arrived, importing the mere perdition of the Turkish fleet, every man put himself into trimness: some to dance; some to make bonfires, each man to what sport and revels his ambition leads him; for, besides these beneficial news, it is the celebration of his nuptials; So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed. All offices are open; and there is full liberty of feasting, from this present hour of five, till the bell hath told eleven. Heaven bless the isle of Cyprus, and our noble general, Othello! [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Hall in the Castle.

Enter Othello, Desdemona, Cassio, and Attendants.

Oth. Good Michael, look you to the guard to-night; Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop, Not to out-sport discretion.

Cas. Iago hath direction what to do; But, let no one standing, with my personal eye
I will look to.

Oth. Iago is most honest.

Michael, good night: To-morrow, with our earliest,
[love,
Let me have speech with you.—Come, my dear The purchase made, the fruits are to ensue;
[To Desdemona.
That profit's yet to come 'twixt me and you.—
Good night. [Exeunt Oth. Des. and Attend.

Enter Iago.

Cas. Welcome, Iago: We must to the watch.

Iago. Not this hour, lieutenant; 'tis not yet ten o'clock; Our general cast us thus early, for the love of his Desdemona; whom let us not therefore blame: he hath not yet made wanton the night with her: and she is sport for Jove.

Cas. She's a most exquisite lady.

Iago. And, I'll warrant her, full of game.

Cas. Indeed, she is a most fresh and delicate creature.

Iago. What an eye she has! methinks it sounds a parley of provocation.

Cas. An inviting eye; and yet methinks right modest.

Iago. And, when she speaks, is it not an alarm to love?

Cas. She is, indeed, perfection.

Iago. Well, happiness to their sheets! Come, lieutenant, I have a stoop of wine: and here without are a brace of Cyprus gallants, that would fain have a measure to the health of the black Othello.

Cas. Not to-night, good Iago; I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking: I could well wish courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment.

Iago. O, they are our friends; but one cup; I'll drink for you.

Cas. I have drunk but one cup to-night, and that was craftily qualified too, and, behold, what innovation it makes here: I am unfortunate in the insinuity, and dare not task my weakness with any more.

Iago. What, man! 'tis a night of revels; the gallants do.

Cas. Where are they?

Iago. Here at the door; I pray you call them in.

Cas. I'll do it; but it dislikes me. [Exit Cassio.

Iago. If I can fasten but one cup upon him, With that which he hath drunk to-night already, He'll be as full of quarrel and offence As my young mistress' dog. Now, my sick fool Roderigo,
I fear, the trust Othello puts him in,
On some old time of his infirmity,
Will shake this island.

Mon. But is he often thus?

Iago. 'Tis evermore the chime that to his sleep
He'll watch the horologe a double set,
If drink rock not his cradle.

Mon. It was well,
The general were put in mind of it.
Perhaps, he sees it not; or his good nature
Prizes the virtue that appears in Cassio,
And looks not on his evils: Is not this true?

Enter Roderigo.

Iago. How now, Roderigo?

I pray you, after the lieutenant; go.

[Aside Roderigo.

Mon. And 'tis great pity, that the noble Moor
Should hazard such a place, as his own second,
With one of an ingrate infirmity,
It were an honest action, to say
So to the Moor.

Iago. Not I, for this fair island:
I do love Cassio well; and would do much
To cure him of this evil. But hark! what noise?
[Cry within.—Help! Help! Help!

Re-enter Cassio, driving in Roderigo.

Cas. You rogue! you rascal!
Mon. What's the matter, lieutenant?
Cas. A knife!—teach me my duty!
I'll beat the knave into a twigg'n bottle.
Rod. Beat me!

Cas. Dost thou prate, rogue?

[Striking Roderigo.

Mon. Nay, good lieutenant; [Slaying him.
I pray you, sir, hold your hand.
Cas. Or I'll knock you o'er the mazzard.

Mon. Come, come, you're drunk.

Cas. Drunk! [They fight.

Iago. Away, I say! go out, and cry—a mutiny.
[Aside to Roder. who goes out.

Nay, good lieutenant,—alas, gentlemen,—
Help, ho!—Lieutenant,—sir,—Montano,—sir!—
Help, masters!—Here's a goodly watch, indeed!

[Bell rings.

Who's that that rings the bell?—Diablo, ho!
The town will rise: God's will, lieutenant: hold;
You will be sham'd for ever.

Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Oth. What is the matter here?

Mon. I bleed still, I am hurt to the death;—he
Oth. Hold, for your lives. [Dies.

Iago. Hold, hold, lieutenant,—sir,—Montano,— gentlemen,—

Have you forgot all sense of place and duty?
Hold, hold! the general speaks to you; hold, for Shame! [this?

Oth. Why, how now, ho! from whence ariseth
Are we turn'd Turks; and to ourselves do that,
Which heaven hath forbid the Ottomites?
For christian shame, put by this barbarous brawl:—
He that stirs next to carve for his own rage,
Hold his soul light; he dies upon his motion.—
Silence that dreadful bell; it frights the isle [ters
From her propriety.—What is the matter, mas-
Honest Iago, that look'rt dead with grieving,
Speak, who began this? on thy love, I charge thee.
Iago. I do not know;—friends all but now, even now,

In quarter, and in terms like bride and groom
Devesting them for bed: and then, but now,
(As if some planet had unwitt'd men,
Swords out, and tilting one at other's breast,
In opposition bloody. I cannot speak
Any beginning to this peevish odds;—
And would in action glorious I had lost
These legs, that brought me to a part of it!—

Oth. How comes it, Michael you are thus forgot?
Cas. I pray you, pardon me, I cannot speak. Oth. Man, thou dost wrong me. The gravity and stillness of your youth. The world hath noted, and your name is great In mouths of wisest censure; What's the matter, That you unlace your reputation thus, And spend your rich opinion, for the name Of a night-boy? I give you answer to it.

Non. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger; Your officer, Iago, can inform you— [me;— While I spare speech, which something now offends Of what I am knowed: nor know I aught By me that's said or done amiss this night; Unless self-charity be sometime a vice, And to defend ourselves it be a sin, When violence assails us.

Oth. False hope! Now, by heaven, My blood begins my safer guides to rule; And passion having my best judgment collied, Assays to lead the way: If I once stir, Or do but lift this arm, the best of you Shall sink in my rebuke. Give me to know How this foul outrage began, who set it on; And he that is approved in this offence, Though he had twinn'd with me, both at a birth, Shall lose me.—What! in a town of war, Yet wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear, To manage affairs and disquiet, but in night, and on the court and guard of safety! 'Tis monstrous—Iago, who began it? Non. If partially affin'd, or I-ag'd in office, Thou dost deliver more or less than truth, Thou art no soldier. Iago. Touch me not so near: I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth, Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio; Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth Shall nothing wrong him.—This is, generally Montano and myself being in speech, There comes a fellow, crying out for help; And Cassio following him with determin'd sword, To execute upon him: Sir, this gentleman Steps in to Cassio, and entreats his pause; Myself the erring fellow did pursue, Lest, by his clamour, (as it so fell out,) The town might fall in fright: he, swift of foot, Outran my purpose; and I return'd the rather For that I heard the clink and fall of swords, And Cassio high in oath; which, till to-night, I ne'er might say before: When I came back, (For this was brief,) I found them close together, At blow, and thrust: even as again they were, When you yourself did part them. More of this matter can I not report.— But men are men: the best sometimes forget: Though Cassio did some little wrong to him,— As men in rage strike those that wish them best,— Yet, sorely, Cassio, I believe, receiv'd, From him that fled, some strange indignity, Which patience could not pass.

Oth. I know, Iago, Thy honesty and love doth mirrour this matter, Making it light to Cassio: Cassio, I love thee; But never more be officer of mine.

Enter Desdemona, attended.

Look, if my gentle love be not rais'd up; — I'll make thee an example.

Des. What's the matter, dear? Oth. All's well now, sweeting; Come away to Sir, for your hurts, [bed.

Myself will be your surgeon; Lead him off.

To Montano, who is led off.

Iago, look with care about the business. And silence those whom this viev brawli distracted. Come, Desdemona; 'tis the soldiers' life, To have their balmy slumbers wak'd with strife.

[Exeunt all but Iago and Cassio.

Iago. What, are you hurt, lieutenant?

Cas. Ay, past all surgery.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!

Cas. Reputation, reputation, reputation! O, I have lost my reputation! I have lost the immortal part, sir, of myself, and what remains is bestial.— My reputation is my life; Iago, my reputation.

Iago. As I am an honest man, I thought you had received some bodily wound; there is more offence in that, than in reputation. Reputation is an idle and most false imposition; oft got without merit, and best lost for nothing. You have lost no reputation at all, unless you repute yourself such a loser. What, man! there are ways to recover the general again: You are but now cast in his mood, a punishment more in policy than in malice; even so as one would beat his offencless dog to affright an imperious lion: sue to him again, and he is your's.

Cas. I will rather sue to be despised, than to deceive a good a commander, with so slight, so drunken, so indiscreet an officer. Drunk? and speak parrot? and squabble? swagger? swear? and discourse fustian with one's own shadow?—O thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee—devil!

Iago. What was he that thou followed with your sword? What had he due to you?

Cas. I know not.

Iago. Is it possible?

Cas. I remember a mass of things, but nothing distinct. I do but mistake, and nothing wherefore.—O, that men should put an enemy in their mouths, to steal away their brains! that we should, with joy, revel, pleasure, and applause, transform ourselves into beasts!

Iago. Why, but you are now well enough: How came you thus recovered?

Cas. It hath pleased the devil, drunkenness, to give place to the devil, wrath: one unperfectness shows me another, to make me frankly despise myself.

Iago. Come, you are too severe a moraler: As the time, the place, and the condition of this country stands, I could heartily wish this had not been fallen; but, since it is as it is, mend it for your own good.

Cas. I will ask him for my place again; he shall tell me, I am a drunkard! Had I as many mouths as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast! O strange!—Every inordinate cup is unblessed, and the ingredient is a devil.

Iago. Come, come, good wine is a good familiar creature, if it be well used; exclaim no more against it. And, good lieutenant, I think, you think I love you not.

Cas. I have well approved it, sir;—I drink!

Iago. You, or any man living, may be drunk at some time, man. I'll tell you what you shall do Our general's wife is now the general;—I may say so in this respect, for that he hath devoted and given up himself to the contemplation, mark, and denotement of her parts and graces;—confess yourself freely to her; importune her; she'll help to put you in your place again: she is of so free, so kind, so apt, so blessed a disposition, that she holds more in her good graces not to do more than she is requested: This broken joint, between you and her husband, entreat her to splinter; and, my fortunes against any lay worth naming, this crack of your love shall grow stronger than it was before.

Cas. You advise me well.

Iago. I protest, in the sincerity of love, and honest kindness.

Cas. I think it freely; and, betimes in the morning, I will bespeak the virtuous Desdemona to undertake for me: I am desperate of my fortunes, if they check me here.

Iago. You are in the right. Good night, lieutenant; I must to the watch.

Cas. Good night, honest Iago.

Iago. And what's he then, that says,—I play the villain?

When this advice is free I give, and honest,
Enter Roderigo.

Rod. I do follow here in the chase, not like a hound that hunts, but one that fills up the cry. My money is almost spent; I have been to-night exceedingly well cudgel'd; and, I think, the issue will be—I shall have so much experience for my pains: and so, with no money at all, and a little more fortune, I'll pursue my condition into his ear—That she repeats him for his body's lust: And, by how much she strives to do him good, She shall undo her credit with the Moor. So will I turn her virtue into pitch; And out of her own goodness make the net, That shall enmesh them all. How now, Roderigo?

Enter Roderigo.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Before the Castle.

Enter Cassio, and some Musicians.

Cas. Masters, play here, I will content your pains, Something that's brief; and bid—good-morrow, general. [Musick.

Enter Clowm.

Clo. Why, masters, have your instruments been at Naples, that they speak 'tithose thus?

1 Mus. How, sir, how?

Clo. Are these, I pray you, called wind instruments?

1 Mus. Ay, marry, are they, sir.

Clo. O, thereby hangs a tail.

1 Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, sir?

Clo. Marry, sir, by many a wind instrument that I know. But, masters, here's money for you: and the general so likes your musick, that he desires you, of all loves, to make no more noise with it.

1 Mus. Well, sir, we will not.

Clo. If you have any musick that may not be heard, 'tis again: but, as they say, to hear musick, the general does not greatly care.

1 Mus. We have none such, sir.

Clo. Then put up your pipes in your bag, for I'll away: Go; vanish into air: a wheeler. [Exeunt Musicians.

Cas. Dost thou hear, my honest friend? I hear you.

Cas. Prythee, keep up thy quittles. There's a poor piece of gold for thee: if the gentlewoman that attends the general's wife, be stirring, tell her, there's one Cassio entreats her a little favour of speech: Wilt thou do this?

Clo. She is stirring, sir; if she will stir hither, I shall seem to notify unto her. [Exeunt.

Enter Iago.

Cas. Do, good my friend. — In happy time, Iago. Iago. You have not been a-bed then?

Cas. Why, no; the day had broke before we parted. I have made bold, Iago, To send in to your wife: My suit to her Is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona Procure me some access.

Iago. I'll send her to you presently; And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor Out of the way, that your converse and business May be more free. [Exeunt.

Cas. I humbly thank you, sir. I never knew A Florentine more kind and honest.

Enter Emilia.

Emil. Good morrow, good lieutenant: I am sorry For your displeasure; but all will soon be well. The general, and his wife, are talking of it; And she speaks for you stoutly: The Moor replies, That he, you hurt, is of great fame in Cyprus, And great affinity; and that, in wholesome wisdom, He might not but refuse you: but, he protests, he loves you; And needs no other suitor, but his likenings, To take the safest occasion by the front, To bring you in again.

Cas. Yet, I beseech you,— If you think fit, or that it may be done,— Give me advantage of some brief discourse With Desdemona alone.

Emil. Pray you, come in; I will bestow you where you shall have time To speak your bosom freely.

Cas. I am much bound to you. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Gentlemen.

Oth. These letters give, Iago, to the pilot; And, by him, to the bee and the state: That done, I will be walking on the works, Repair there to me.

Iago. Well, my good lord, I'll do't.

Oth. This fortification, gentlemen,—shall we see't?

Gent. We'll wait upon your lordship. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Before the castle.

Enter Desdemona, Cassio, and Emilia.

Des. Be thou assured, good Cassio, I will do All my abilities in thy behalf.

Emil. Good madam, do; I know, it grieves my As if the case were his. [husband

Des. O, that's an honest fellow.—Do not doubt, But I will leave my lord and you again [Cassio, As friendly as you were.

Cas. Bounteous madam, Whatever shall become of Michael Cassio, He's never any thing but your true servant. Des. O, sir, I thank you: You do love my lord: You have known him long; and be you well assur'd, He shall in straitness worth no further off Than in a politick distance.

Cas. Ay, but, lady That policy may either last so long,
Enter Othello and Iago, at a distance.

Des. Madam, here comes my lord.

Cas. Madam, I'll take my leave.

Des. Why, stay, and hear me speak.

Cas. Madam, not now; I am very ill at ease, Unfit for mine own purposes.

Des. Well, well, Do your discretion. [Exit Cassio.

Iago. Ha! I like not that.

Oth. What dost thou say?

Iago. Nothing, my lord; or if—I know not what.

Oth. Was not that Cassio, parted from my wife?

Iago. Cassio, my lord? No, sure, I cannot think that he would steal away so guilty-like, [it,

Seeing you coming. Oth. I do believe 'twas he.

Des. How now, my lord?

I have been talking with a suitor here, A man that languishes in your displeasure.

Oth. Who is't you mean?

Des. Why, your lieutenant Cassio. Good my lord, If I have any grace, or power to move you, His present reconciliation take;

For, if he be not one that truly loves you, That err in ignorance, and not in cunning, I have no judgment in such honest face: I pray thee, call him back.

Oth. Went he hence now?

Des. Ay, sooth; so humbled, That he hath left part of his grief with me; I suffer with him. Good love, call him back.

Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemona; some other Des. But shall be shortly time.

Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you.

Des. Shall't be to-night at supper?

Oth. No, not to-night.

Des. To-morrow dinner then?

Oth. I shall not dine at home; I meet the captains at the citadel. [morn; Des. Why theu, to-morrow night; or Tuesday
Or Tuesday noon, or night; or Wednesday morn; I pray thee, name the time; but let it not Exceed three days: in faith he's penitent; And yet his trespass in our common reason (Save that, they say, the wars must stole examples Out of their best), is not almost a fault To incur a private check: When shall he come? Thus, Othello, I wonder in my soul, What you could ask me, that I should deny, Or stand so hammering on. What! Michael Cassio, That came a wooing with you; and many a time, When I have spoke of you disparagingly, Hath ta'en your part; to have so much to do To thrust him in! Trust me, I could do much,— Oth. Pr'ythee, no more: let him come when he will denote thee nothing. [will; Des. Why, this is not a boon; Yet I should entreat you wear your gloves, Or feed on nourishing dishes, to keep you warm; Or sue to you to do peculiar profit To your own person: Nay, when I have a suit, Wherein I mean to touch your love indeed, It shall be full of poise and difficulty, And fearful to be granted.

Oth. I will deny thee nothing:

Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this, To leave me but a little to myself. Des. Shall I deny you? no: Farewell, my lord.

Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona: I will come to thee straight.

Des. Emilia, come:—Be it as your fauces teach Whate'er you be, I am obedient to you; [Exit, with Emilia.

Oth. Excellent wench! Perdition catch my soul, But I do love thee! and when I love thee not, Chaos is come again.

Iago. My noble lord,—

Oth. What dost thou say, Iago?

Iago. Did Michael Cassio, when you woo'd my Know of your love?

Oth. He did, from first to last: Why dost thou Iago. But for a satisfaction of my thought; [ask] No further harm.

Oth. Why of thy thought, Iago?

Iago. I did not think, he had been acquainted Go, and with her.

Oth. O, yes; and went between us very oft.

Iago. Indeed?

Oth. Indeed! ay, indeed:—Discern'st thou aught is he not honest? [in that?

Iago. Honest, my lord?

Oth. Ay, honest.

Iago. My lord, for aught I know I know. Oth. What dost thou think?

Iago. Think, my lord?

Oth. Think, my lord!

By heaven, he echoes me,
As if there were some monster in his thought Too hideous to be shown.—Thou dost mean something:—

I heard thee say but now,—Thou lik'dst not that, When Cassio left my wife: What did'st not like? And, when I told thee—he was of my counsel In my whole course of wooing, thou couldst, Indeed? And did'st contract and purseth by brow together, As if thou then had'st shut up thy heart Some horrible conceit: If thou dost love me, Show me thy thought.

Iago. My lord, you know I love you.

Oth. I think thou dost; And, for I know thou art full of love and honesty, And weigh'st thy words before thou giv'st them breath,

There are these stops of thine fright me the more: For such things in a false disloyal knave, Are tricks of custom; but, in a man that's just, They are close denotements, working from the That passion cannot rule. [heart,

Iago. For Michael Cassio,—

I cannot be sworn, I think that he is honest. Oth. I think so too.

Iago. Men should be what they seem; Or, those that be not would they seem none. Oth. Certain, men should be what they seem.

Iago. Why then,

I think, that Cassio is as honest man.

Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this:

I pray thee, speak to me as to thy thoughts, As thou dost ruminate; and give thy worst of The worst of words.

Iago. Good my lord, pardon me; Though I am bound to every act of duty, I am not bound to that all slaves are free to. False— Utter my thoughts? Why, say, they are vile and As where's that palace, whereunto foul things Some of their adders, who have a breast so pure, But some uncleanly apprehensions Keep leets, and law-days, and in session sit With meditations lawful?—

Oth. Thou dost conspire against thy friend, Iago, but think'st him wrong'd, and mak'st his A stranger to thy thoughts.

Iago. I do beseech you,—

Though I, perchance, am vicious in my guess, As, I confess, it is my nature's plague, To spy into abuses; and, oft, my Jesuoly Shapes faults that are not,—I entreat you then,
From one that so imperfectly conjuncts,
You'd take no notice; nor build yourself a trouble
Out of his scattering observations:
It was not for your quiet, nor your good,
Nor for my manhood, honesty, or wisdom,
To let you know my thoughts.

Oth.

What dost thou mean?

Iago.

Good name, in man, and woman, dear my
Is the immediate jewel of their souls; [lord,
Who steals my purse, steals trash; 'tis something, nothing;]

Iago.

'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thou.
But, 0, what damned minutes tell he o'er,
Who dotes, yet doubts; suspects, yet strongly loves!
Oth.

O misery!

Iago.

Poor, and content, is rich, and rich enough;
But riches, fineless, is as poor as winter,
To him that ever fears he shall not secure:
Good heaven, the souls of all my tribe defend
From jealousy?

Oth.

Why! why is this?

Think'st thou, I'd make a life of jealousy,
To follow still the changes of the moon
With fresh suspicions? No; to be once in doubt,
Is—once to be resolv'd: Exchange me for a goat,
When I shall turn the business of my soul
To such exsufflicate and blown surmisest,
Matching thy inference. 'Tis not to make me
To say—my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,
Is free of speech, sings, plays, and dances well;
Where virtue is, these are more virtuous:
Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw
The smallest fear, or doubt of her revolt;
For she had eyes, and chose me: No, Iago;
I'll see, before I doubt; when I doubt, prove;
And, on the proof, there is no more but this,—
Away at once with love, or jealousy.

Iago.

I will have the love and duty that I bear you [reason
With franker spirit: therefore, as I am bound,
Receive it from me:] I speak not yet of proof.
Look to your wife; observe her well with Cassio;
With your eyes:—the old ensign, he shall be more;
I would not have your free and noble nature,
Out of self-bounty, be sub'd; look to't;
I know our country disposition well;
In Venice they do let heaven see the pranks
They dare not show their husbands; their best conscience
Is—not to leave undone, but keep unknown.

Oth.

Dost thou say so?

Iago.

She did deceive her father, marrying you;
And, when she seemed to shake, and fear your looks,
She lov'd them most.

Oth.

And so she did.

Iago.

Why, go to, then;
She that so young, could give out such a seeming,
To see her father's eyes up, close as oak,
He thought, 'twas witchcraft:—But I am much to
I humbly do beseech you of your pardon, [blame;
For too much loving you.

Oth.

I am bound to thee for ever.

Iago.

I see, this hath a little dash'd your spirits,
Oth.

Not a jot, not a jot.

Iago.

Trust me, I fear it has.
I hope, you will consider, what is spoke
Comes from my love:—But, I do see you are
I am to pray you, not to strain my speech [mov'd;
To grosser issues, nor to larger reach,
Than to suspicion.

Oth.

I will not.

Iago.

Should you do so, my lord,
My discourse shall fall into such vile success
As my thoughts al'm not at. Cassio's my worthy
My lord, I see you are mov'd; [friend—
Oth.

No, not much mov'd—
I do not think but Desdemona's honest.

Iago.

Long live she so! and long live you to think so!

Oth.

And yet, how nature erring from itself,—

Iago.

Ay, there's the point:—As,—to be bold
Not to affect many proposed matches, [with you—
Of her own choice, and of her free and lawful degree;
Whereto, we see, in all things nature tends:
Foh! one may smell, in such, a will most rank,
Foul disproportion, thoughts unnatural.—
But, pardon me; I do not in position,
Distinctly speak of it; I though I may fear,
Her will, recoiling to her better judgment,
May fall to match you with her country forms,
And (haply) repent.

Oth.

Farewell, farewell:
If more thou dost perceive, let me know more;
Set thy wife to observe; Leave me, Iago.

Iago.

My lord, I take my leave.

[Going.

Oth.

Why did I marry?—This honest creature, doubtless,
Sees and knows more, much more, than he unfolds.

Iago.

My lord, I would, I might entrea' your honour
To scan this thing no further; leave it to time:
And though it be fit that Cassio have his place,
(For, sure, he fills it up with great ability),
Yet, if you please to hold it more than this,
You shall by that perceive him and his means:
Note, if your lady strain his entertainment
With any strong or vehement importunity;
Much will be seen in that. In the mean time
Let me be thought too, to clear my fears,
(As worthy cause I have, to fear,) Desdemona,
And hold her free, I do beseech your honour.

Oth.

Fear not my government.

Iago.

I once more take my leave.

[Exit.

Oth.

This fellow's of exceeding honesty,
And knows all qualities, with a learned spirit,
Of human dealings: If I do prove her haggard,
Though that her jesses were my dear heart-strings,
I'd whistle her off, and let her down the wind,
To prey at fortune. Haply, for I am black;
And have not the soft parts of conversation
That chamberers have: Or, for I am declin'd
Into the vale of years;—yet that's not much;
She's gone; I am abus'd; and my relief
Must be—to loath her. O curse of marriage,
That we can call these delicate creatures ours,
And not their appetites! I had rather be a toad,
And live upon the vapour of a dungeon,
Than keep a corner in the thing I love,
For others' uses. Yet 'tis the plague of great ones;
Prerogativ'd are they less than the base;
'Tis destiny unshunnable, like death;
Even then this forked plague is feted to us,
When we do quicken. Desdemona comes:

[Enter Desdemona and Emilia.

If she be false, O, then heaven mocks itself!—
I'll not believe it.

Des.

How now, my dear Othello?
Your dinner, and the generous islanders
By you invited, do attend your presence.

Oth.

I am to blame. [well?

Des.

Why is your speech so faint? are you not
Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead here.

Des.

Faith, that's with watching; 'twill away
Let me but bind it hard, within this hour [again:
It will be well.

Oth.

Your napkin is too little;
[He puts the handkerchief from him, and it drops.

Let it alone. Come, I'll go in with you.

Des.

I am very sorry that you are not well.

[Exeunt Oth. and Des.]
Emil. I am glad I have found this napkin; this was her first remembrance from the Moor: My second husband hath a hundred times woo'd me jealously; but she solveth the token, (For he conjur'd her, she would keep it,) That she reserves it evermore about her, To kiss, and talk to. I'll have the work ta'en out, And give it Iago. What he'll do with it, heaven knows, not I; Nothing but to please his fantasy.

Enter Iago.

Iago. How now! what do you here alone? Emil. Do not you chide; I have a thing for you. Othel's what a thing for me?—it is a common thing. Emil. Ha! Iago. To have a foolish wife. Emil. O, is that all? What will you give me now For that same handkerchief? Iago. What handkerchief? Emil. Why, that the Moor first gave to Desdemona; That which so often you did me steal. Iago. Hast stolen it from her? Emil. Thou dost it drop by negligence; And, to the advantage, I, being here, took't up. Look, here it is.

Iago. A good wench; give it me. Emil. What will you do with it, that you have so earnestly To have me flitch it? Iago. Why, what's that to you? [Snatching it. Emil. If it be not for some purpose of import, Give it me again: Poor lady! she'll run mad, When she shall lack it.

Iago. Be not you known of it; I have use for it. Go, leave me. [Exit Emilia. I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin, And let him find it: 'Trifles, light as air, Are important; in their place and use, They assume a grandeur.' [goring, Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep Which thou ow'dst yesterday.

Oth. Ha! ha! false to me?

Iago. Why, how now, general? no more of that. Oth. Avaunt! be gone! thou hast set me on the I swear, tis better to be much abus'd, [rack: Than but to know a little.

Iago. How now, my lord? Oth. What sense had I of her stolen hours of lust? I saw it not, thought it not, it harm'd not me; I slept the next night well, was free and merry; I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips: He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stolen, Let him not know it, and he's not robb'd at all. Iago. I am sorrow to hear this. Oth. I had been happy, if the general camp, Pioneers and all, had tasted her sweet body, So I had nothing known: O now, for ever, Farewell the tranquil mind! farewell content! Farewell the plumed cap, and the big wars, That make ambition virtue! O, farewell! Farewell the neighing steed, and the shrill trump, The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing fife, The royal banner; and all quality. Farewell the proud, and circumstance of glorious war! And O you mortal engines, whose rude throats The immortal Jove's dread clamours counterfeit, Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone! Iago. Is it possible?—My lord,—

Be sure of it; give me the ocular proof; [Taking him by the throat. Or, by the worth of mine eternal soul, You had better have been born a dog, Than answer my wak'd wrath. Iago. Is it come to this? Oth. Make me to see it; or (at the least) so prove That the probation bear no hinge, nor loop, [it, To thee in stormy weather; or, woe upon thy life! Iago. My noble lord,—

Oth. If thou dost slander her, and torture me, Never pray more; abandon all remorse; On horror's head horrors accumulate: Do so to make heaven weep, all earth amaz'd, For nothing canst thou to damnation add, Greater than that.

Iago. O grace! O heaven defend me! Are you a man? have you a soul, or sense?— God be wi' you; take mine office. —O wrangling That liv'st to make thine honesty a vice! —fool, O monstrous world! Take note, take note, O world, To be direct and honest, is not safe.— I thank you for this profit: and, from hence, I'll love no friend, since love breeds such offence. Oth. No, no, you stay:—Thou should'st be honest. Iago. I should be wise; for honesty's a fool, And loses that it works for.

Oth. By the world, I think my life be honest, and think she is not; I think that thou art just, in think thou art not; I'll have some proof; Her name, that was as fresh As Dian's visage, is now begrim'd and black As mine own face.—If there be cords, or knives, Poxion, or fire, or suffocating streams, I'll not endure it. —Would she should be honest. Iago. I see, sir, you are eaten up with passion; I do repent me, that I put it to you. You would be satisfied?—Would? nay, I will.

Oth. Iago. And may? But, how? how satisfied, my lord? Would you, the supervisor, grossly gape on? Behold her tuppy?—

Oth. Death and damnation! O! Iago. It were a tedious difficulty, I think, To bring them to that prospect; Damn them then, If ever mortal eyes do see them bolster, More than their own! What then? how then? What shall I say? Where's satisfaction? It is impossible, you should see this, Wasting as grim as goats, and leaping as monkeys, As salt as wolves in pride, and fools as gross As ignorance made drunk. But yet, I say, If imputation, and strong circumstances,— Which lead directly to the truth,— Will make you a satisfaction, and may have it. Oth. Give me a living reason she's disloyal. Iago. I do not like the office: But, sith I am enter'd in this cause so far,— Prick'd to it by foolish honesty and love,— I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately; And, being troubled with a raving tooth, I could not sleep. There are a kind of men so loose of soul, That in their sleep's will mutter their affairs; One of this kind is Cassio: In sleep I heard him say,—Sweet Desdemona, Let us be merry, let us hide our loves! And then, sir, would he gripe, and wring my hand, Cry,—O, sweet creature! and then kiss me hard, As if he pluck'd up kisses by the root; Then, putting my lips, he laid his leg Over my thigh, and sigh'd, and kiss'd; and then Cry'd,—Cursed fate! that gave thee to the Moor! O monstrous! monstrous! Iago. Nay, this was but his dream. Oth. But this denoted a false conclusion; 'Tis a shrewd doubt, though it be but a dream. Iago. And this may help to thicken other proofs, That do demonstrate thinly.

Oth. I'll tear her all to pieces. Iago. Nay, but be wise; yet we see nothing done;
She may be honest yet. Tell me but this,—Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief, dyed red with strawberries, in your wife's hand? Oth. I gave her such a one; 'twas my first gift. Iago. I know not that; but such a handkerchief, (I am sure it was your wife's,) did I to-day see Cassio wipe his beard with.

Oth. If it be that,—Iago. If it be that, or any that was her's, It speaks against her, with the other proofs. Oth. O, that the slave had forty thousand lives; One is too poor, too weak for my revenge! Now do I see 'tis true.—Look here, Iago; All my fond love thus I do blow to heaven: 'Tis gone.

Arise, black vengeance, from thy hollow cell! Yield up, O love, thy crown, and hearted throne, To tyrannous hate! swell, bosom, with thy fraught, For 'tis of spick's tongues! Iago. Pray, be content. Oth. O, blood, Iago, blood! Iago. Patience, I say; your mind, perhaps, may change.

Oth. Never, Iago. Like to the Pontick sea, Whose icy current and compulsory course Never feels retiring ebb, but keeps due on To the Propontick, and the Hellespont; Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace, Shall never look back, nor turn to humble love, Till that a capable and wide revenge Swallow them up.—Now, by yond' marble heaven, In the due reverence of a sacred vow [Kneels. I here engage my words.

Iago. Do not rise yet.—[Kneels. Witness, you ever-burning lights above! Those elements that clip us round about! Witness, that here Iago doth give up The execution of his wit, hands, heart, To wrong'd Othello's service! let him command, And to obey shall be in me remorse, That bloody work soever.

Oth. I greet thy love, Not with a thanks, but with acceptance bound And will upon the instant put thee to't: [seous, Within these three days let me hear thee say, That Cassio's not alive.

Iago. My friend is dead; 'tis done, at your return. But let her live! [quest: Cost her a charm her, lewed minx! O, damn her! Come, go with me apart: I will withdraw, To furnish me with some swift means of death For the fair devil. Now art thou my lieutenant. Iago. I am your own for ever. [Execunt.

SCENE IV.—The same.

Enter Desdemona, Emilia, and Clown.

Des. Do you know, sirrah, where lieutenant Cassio lies?

Clo. I dare not say, he lies any where.

Des. Why, man?

Clo. He is a soldier; and for me to say a soldier lies, is stabbing.

Des. Where to? Where lodges he?

Clo. To tell where he lodges, is to tell you where I lie.

Des. Can any thing be made of this?

Clo. I know not where he lodges; and for me to devise a lodging, and say—he lies here, or he lies there, were to lie in my own throat.

Des. Can you enquire him out, and be edified by report?

Clo. I will catechise the world for him; that is, make questions, and by them answer. Des. Seek him, bid him come hither; tell him, I have moved my lord in his behalf, and hope, all will be well.

Clo. To do this, is within the compass of man's wit; and therefore I will attempt the doing it. [Exit. Des. Where should I lose that handkerchief, Emilia?

Emil. I know not, madam.

Des. Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse.

Full of crusades. And, but my noble Moor Is true of mind, and made of no such baseness As jealous creatures are, it were enough To put him to ill thinking.

Emil. Is he not jealous?

Des. Who, he? I think, the sun, where he was Drew all such humours from him. [born, Emill. Look, where he comes.

Des. I will not leave him now, till Cassio Be call'd to him.—How is't with you, my lord?

Enter Othello.

Oth. Well, my good lady;—[Aside.] O, hard- ness to dissemble!—

How do you, Desdemona?

Des. Well, my good lord.

Oth. Give me your hand: This hand is moist, my lady.

Des. It yet has felt no age, nor known no sorrow. Oth. This argues fruitfulness, and liberal heart; Hot, hot, and moist! This hand of yours requires A sequester from liberty, fasting and prayer, Much castigation, exercise devout; For here's a young and sweating devil here, That commonly rebels. 'Tis a good hand, A frank one.

Des. You may, indeed, say so; For 'twas that hand that gave away my heart.

Oth. A liberal hand: The hearts, of old, gave hands:

But our new heraldry is—hands, not hearts.

Des. I cannot speak of this. Come now, your Oth. What promise, chuck? [promise. Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak with you.

Oth. I have a salt and sudden rheum offends me; Lend me thy handkerchief.

Des. Here, my lord.

Oth. That which I gave you.

Des. Not?

Des. No, indeed, my lord.

Oth. That is a fault: That handkerchief Did an Egyptian to my mother give;

Tho' a charmer, and could almost read The thoughts of people: she told her, while she kept it, 'Twould make her amiable, and subdue my father Entirely to her love; but if she lost it, Or made a gift of it, my father's eye Should hold her loathly, and his spirits should hunt After new fancies: She, dying, gave it me; And bid me, when my fate would have me wise, To give it her. I did so: and take heed of, Make it a darling like your precious eye; To lose or give't away, were such perdition, As nothing else could match.

Des. Is it possible?

Oth. 'Tis true: There's magick in the web of it: A sibyl, that had number'd in the world The sun to make two hundred compasses, In her prophetick fury sew'd the work: The worms were hallow'd, that did breed the silk; And it was dy'd in mummy, which the skilful Conserv'd of maidens' hearts.

Des. Indeed! 'tis true?

Oth. Most veritable; therefore look to't well.

Des. It is not lost; But what an if it were?

Oth. Ha! I say, it is not lost.

Oth. Fetch't, let me see it.

Des. Why, so I can, sir, but I will not now;
This is a trick, to put me from my suit;
I pray, let Cassio be receiv'd again.

Oth. Fetch me that handkerchief: my mind
revives.

Des. Come, Cousin Othello; thou wilt never meet a more sufficient man.

Oth. The handkerchief,

Des. I pray, talk me of Cassio.

Oth. The handkerchief:

Des.

A man that, all his time,

Hath founded his good fortune on your love,

Shad'd dangers with you:—

Oth. The handkerchief,—

Des. In sooth, You are to blame.

Oth. Away! [Exit Othello.

Emil. Is not this man jealous?

Des. I ne'er saw this before.

Sure, there's some wonder in this handkerchief; I am most unhappy in the loss of it.

Emil. 'Tis not a year or two shows us a man:—

They are all but stomachs, and we all but food;

They eat us hungerly, and when they are full,

They belch us. Look you! Cassio, and my husband.

Enter Iago and Cassio.

Iago. There is no other way; 'tis she must do't;

And, lo, the happiness! go, and importune her.

Des. How now, good Cassio? what's the news with you?

Cas. Madam, my former suit: I do beseech you,

That, by your virtuous means, I may again

Exist, and be a member of his love,

Whom I, with all the duty of my heart,

Entirely honour; I would not be delay'd:

If my offence be of such mortal kind,

That neither service past, nor present sorrows,

Nor purpos'd merit in futurity,

Can ransome me into his love again,

But I know so must be my benefit;

So shall I clothe me in a fore'd content,

And shunt myself up in some other course,

To fortune's alms.

Des. Alas! thrice-gentle Cassio,

My advocacy is not now in tune;

My lord is not my lord; nor should I know him,

Were he in favour, as in humour, alter'd.

So help me, every spirit sanctified,

As I have spoken for you all my best,

And stood within the blank of his displeasure,

For my free speech: You must a while be patient:

What I can do, I will; and more I will,

Than for myself I dare: let that suffice you.

Iago. Is my lord angry?

Emil. He went hence but now,

And, certainly, in strange unquietness.

Iago. Can he be angry? I have seen the cannon,

When it hath blown his ranks into the air;

And, like the devil, from his very arm

Puff'd his own brother,—And can he be angry?

Something of moment, then: I will go meet him;

There's matter in't indeed, if he be angry.

Des. I pray thee, do so.—Something, sure of state.— [Exit Iago.

Either from Venice; or some unmatch'd practice,

Made demonstrable here in Cyprus to him,—

Hath palled his clear spirit: and, in such cases,

Mec's natures wrangle with inferior things,

Though great ones are their object. 'Tis even so;

For let our finger aches, and it indues

Our other healthful members even to that sense

Of pain: Nay, we must think, men are not gods;

Nor of them look for such observances
As fit the bridal.—Beshrew me much, Emilia, I was (unhandsome warrior as I am,)—

And bearing his unkindness with my soul;

But now I find, I had suborn'd the witness,

And he's induit falsely.

Emil. Pray heaven, it be state matters, as you

And no conception, nor no jealous toy, [think;

Concerning you.

Des. Alas, the day I never gave him cause.

Emil. But jealous souls will not be awser'd so;

They are not ever jealous for the cause,

But jealous for they are jealous: 'tis a monster,

Begotten upon itself, born on itself.

Des. Heaven keep that monster from Othello's

Emil. Lady, amen. [wind! [Enter Desdemona and Emilia.

Des. I will go seek him.—Cassio, walk here.

If I do find him fit, I'll move your suit, [about:

And seek to effect it to my uttermost.

Cas. I humbly thank your ladyship. [Exit.

Bian. Save you, friend Cassio! [Enter Bianca.

Cas. What make you from home?

Bian. How is it with you, my most fair Bianca?

I'd faith, sweet love, I was coming to your house.

Cas. And I was going to your lodging, Cassio.

Bian. What! keep a week away? seven days and nights?

Eight score eight hours? and lovers' absent hours,

More tedious than the dial eight score times?

O weary reckoning!

Cas. Pardon me, Bianca; I have this white with leaden thoughts benne

But I shall, in a more continuative time, [pressed,

Strike off this score of absence. Sweet Bianca,

[Giving her Desdemona's handkerchief.

Take me this work out.

O, Cassio! whence came this?

This is some token from a newer friend.

To the feit absence now I feel a cause:

Is it come to this? Well, well.

Cas. Woman, go to!

Throw your vile guesses at the devil's teeth, [now,

From whence you have them. You are jealous,

That this is from some mistress, some remem-

No, in good troth, Bianca. [brance.

Bian. Why, whose is it?

Cas. I know not, sweet: I found it in my cham-

I like the work well; ere it be demanded, [ber.

(As like enough, it will,) I'd have it copied:

Take it, and do't; and leave me for this time.

Bian. Leave you! wherefore?

Cas. I do attend here on the general;

And think it no addition, nor my wish,

To have him see me woman'd.

Bian. Why, I pray you?

Cas. Not that I love you not.

Bian. But that you do not love me.

I pray you, bring me on the way a little;

And say, if I shall see you so much at night.

Cas. 'Tis but a little way, that I can bring you,

For I attend here: but I'll see you soon.

Bian. 'Tis very good, I must be circumstanc'd.'

[Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The same.

Enter Othello and Iago.

Iago. Will you think so?

Oth. What?

Iago. To be in private?

Oth. An unauthorized kiss.

Iago. Or to be naked with her friend abed,

An hour, or more, not meaning any harm?

Oth. Naked abed, Iago, and not mean harm?

It is impossible! I tell thee against the devil.

I hey that mean virtuously, and yet do so,

The devil their virtue tempers, and they tempt

heaven.

Iago. So they do nothing, 'tis a venial slip:

But if I give her a handkerchief,—

Oth. What then?

Iago. Why, then 'tis hers, my lord: and, being

She may, I think, bestow't on any man.

Oth. She is protectress of her honour too;

May she give that?
Iago. Her honour is an essence that's not seen;
They have it very oft, that have it not:
But, for the handkerchief—
Oth. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot
This said fit, O; it comes o'er my memory, [it —
As doth the raven o'er the infected house,
Boding to all,—he had my handkerchief.
Oth. Ay, what of that?
Iago. That's not so good, now.
Iago. What, if I had said, I had seen him do you wrong?
Or heard him say, — as knaves he such abroad,
Who having, by their own unprofitable suit,
Or voluntary doatage of some mistress,
Conceded or supplied them, cannot choose
But they must blab—
Oth. Hath he said any thing?
Iago. He, my lord; but be you well assur'd,
No more than he'll unswear.
Oth. What hath he said he?
Iago. 'Faith, that he did,—I know not what he Iago. Lie—
Oth. With her?
Iago. With her, on her; what you will.
Oth. Lie with her! lie on her! — We say, lie on her, when they belie her: Lie with her! that's falsome.—Handkerchief,—confessions,— handkerchief.—To confess, and be hanged for his labour.
He, to be but hanged, and then to confess— I tremble at it.
Nature would not invest herself in such shadowing passion, without some instruction.
It is not words, that shake me thus: —Pish! —
Noses, ears, and lips: —Is it possible? — Confess! — Handkerchief! — O devil!
[FFalls in a trance.
Iago. Work on, [caught;
My medicine, work! Thus credulous fools are
And many worthy and chaste dames, even thus,
All guiltless meet reproach.—What, ho! my lord!
[Enter Cassio.
My lord, I say! Othello! — How now, Cassio?
Cas. What is the matter?
Iago. My lord is fallen into an epilepsy;
This is his second fit: he had one yesterday.
Cas. Rub him about the temples.
Iago. No, forbear;
The lethargy must have his quiet course;
If not, he foams at mouth; and, by and by,
Breaks out to savage madness, look, he stirs;
Do you withdraw yourself a little while,
He will recover straight: when he is gone,
I would on great occasion speak with you.—
[Exit Cassio.
How is it, general? have you not hurt your head?
Oth. Dost thou mock me?
Iago. I mock you! no, by heaven;
Would, you would bear your fortunes like a man,
Oth. A hurried man's a monster, and a beast.
Iago. There's many a beast then in a populous
And many a civil monster.
Oth. He did confess it?
Iago. Good sir, be a man;
Think, every bearded fellow, that's but yok'd,
May draw with you: there's millions now alive,
That mightily lie in those improper beds,
Which they dare speak peculiar; your case is best,
'Tis the spite of hell, the fiend's arch-mock, [ter.
To lip a wanont in a secure couch,
And to suppose her chaste! No, let me know;
And knowing what I am, I know what she shall
Oth. O, thou art wise; —tis certain. [be.
Iago. Stand you awhile apart;
Confiue yourself but in a patient list.
Whilst you were here, ere while mad with your
A commission most unseeling such a man, [grief
Cassio came hither; I shifted him away,
And laid good 'scuse upon your ecstasy;
Bade him anon return, and here speak with me;
The which he promised. Do but encase yourself,
And mark the fencers, the gibes, and notable scorns,
That dwell in every region of his face;
For I will make him tell the tale anew,—
Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when
He hath, and is again to cope your wife;
I say, but mark his gesture. Marry, patience;
Or I shall say, you are all in all in spleen,
And nothing of a man.
Oth. Dost thou hear, Iago?
I will be found most cunning in my patience;
But (dost thou hear?) most bloody.
Iago. That's not amiss;
But yet keep time in all. Will you withdraw?
[Othello withdraws.
Now will I question Cassio of Bianca,
A housewife, that, by selling her desires,
Buys herself bread and clothes: it is a creature,
That dotes on Cassio,— as tis the strumpet's plague,
To beguile many, and be beguil'd by one:—
He, when he hears of her, cannot refrain
From the excess of laughter — Here he comes:—
[Re-enter Cassio.
As he shall smile, Othello shall go mad;
And his unbookish jealousy must construe
Poor Cassio's smiles, gestures, and behaviour,
Quite in the wrong.—How do you now, lieutenant?
Cas. The worser, that you give me the addition,
Whose want even kills me.
Iago. Fly Desdemona well, and you are sure of it.
Now, if this suit lay in Bianca's power.
[Speaking lower.
How quickly should you speed?
Cas. Alas, poor caitiff!
Oth. Look, how he laughs already! [Aside.
Iago. I never knew a woman love man so. [me.
Cas. Alas, poor rogue! I think I'll, she loves
Oth. Now he denies it faintly, and laughs it out.
[Aside.
Iago. Do you hear, Cassio?
Oth. Now he importunes him
To tell it o'er: Go to; well said, well said. [Aside.
Iago. She gives it out, that you shall marry her:
Do you intend it?
Cas. Ha, ha, ha!
Cas. I marry her! —what? a customer! I pray thee, bear some charity to my wit; do not think it so unwholesome. Ha, ha, ha!
Oth. So, so, so! They very laugh that win. [Aside.
Iago. Faith, the cry goes, that you shall marry
Cas. Prythee, say true. [her.
Iago. I am a very villain else.
Oth. Have you scored me? Well. [Aside.
Cas. This is the monkey's own giving out: she is thus disarmed I will be marry, her, out of her own love and flattery, not out of my promise.
Oth. Iago beckons me; now he begins the story.
[Aside.
Cas. She was here even now; she haunts me in every place. I was, the other day, talking on the sea-bank with certain Venetians; and thither comes this bauble; by this hand, she falls thus about my neck:—
Oth. Crying, O dear Cassio! as it were: his gestures imports it. [Aside.
Cas. So hangs, and rolls and weeps upon me; so hales, and pulls me: ha, ha, ha! [Aside.
Oth. Now he tells, how she plucked him to my chamber: 0, I see that nose of yours, but not that I shall throw it to. [Aside.
Cas. Well, I must leave her company.
Iago. Before me! look, where she comes.
[Enter Bianca.
Cas. 'Tis such another fitchew! marry, a perfumed one.—What do you mean by this haunting of me?
Bian. Let the devil and his dam haunt you! What did you mean by that same handkerchief you gave me even now? I was a fine fool to take it.
I must take out the whole work?— A likely piece of work, that you should find it in your chamber, and not know who left it there! This is some mim's token, and I must take out the work? There,—give your hobby-horse: whereasover you had it, I'll take out no work on'.
Cas. How now, my sweet Bianca? how now? How
now?—
Oth. By heaven, that should be my handkerchief!
[Aside.
Bian. An you'll come to supper to-night, you may: an you will not, come when you are next prepared for. [Exit.
Iago. After her, after.
Cas. 'Faith, I must, she'll rain in the street else.
Iago. Will you sup there?
Cas. 'Faith, I intend so.
Iago. Well, I may chance to see you; for I would very fain speak with you.
Cas. Pr'ythee, come; Will you?
_Iago. Go to; say no more. [Exit Cassio.
Oth. How shall I murder him, Iago?
Iago. Did you perceive how he laughed at his vice?
Oth. O, Iago!
Iago. And did you see the handkerchief?
Oth. Was that mine?
Iago. Yours, by this hand; and to see how he prizes the foolish woman, your wife! she gave it him, and he hath given it his whore.
Oth. I would have him nine years a killing:—
A fine woman! a fair woman! a sweet woman!
Iago. Nay, you must forget that.
Oth. Ay, let her rot, and perish, and be damned to-night; for she shall not live: No, my heart is burned to stone; I strike it, and it hurts my hand.
0, the world hath not a sweeter creature; she might lie by an emperor's side, and command him tasks.
Iago. Nay, that's not your way.
Oth. Hang her! I do but say what she is:—So de-icate with her needle!—An admirable musician,
O, she will sing the savageness out of a bear!—
Of so high and plentiful wit and invention!
Iago. She's the worse for all this.
Oth. O, a thousand, a thousand times:—And then,
of so gentle a condition!
Iago. Ay, too gentle.
Oth. Nay, that's certain: But let the pity of it,
Iago—Ay, go, the pity of it, Iago!
Iago. If you are so fond over her iniquity, give her pattern to offend; for, if it touch not you, it comes near nobody.
Oth. I will chop her into messes:—Cuckold me!
Iago. O, 'tis foul in her.
Oth. With mine officer!
Iago. That's fouler.
Oth. Get me some poison, Iago; this night:—
It'll not expotulate with her, lest her body and beauty unprovoke my mind again:—this night,
Iago.
Iago. Do it not with poison, strangling her in her bed, then the bed she hath contaminated.
Oth. Good, good: the justice of it pleases; very good.
Iago. And, for Cassio,—let me be his under-
You shall hear more by midnight. [taker:
Oth. Excellent good.—What trumpet is that same?
Iago. Something from Venice, sure. 'Tis Lodo-vico,
Come from the duke: and, see, your wife is with Enter Lodovico, Desdemona, and Attendants.
Iago. Save you, worthy general!
Oth. With all my heart, sir.
Lod. The duke and senators of Venice greet you.
Iago. Give him a packet.
Oth. I kiss the instrument of their pleasures.
[Opens the packet and reads.
Des. And what's the news, good cousin Lodovi-
Iago. I am very glad to see you, signior; [co?
Welcome to Cyprus.
Lod. I thank you; how does lieutenant Cassio?
Iago. Lives, sir.
Des. Cousin, there's fallen between him and my
An unkind breach: but you shall make all well.
Oth. Are you sure of that?
Des. My lord?
Oth. This fail you not to do, as you will.
[Reads.
Lod. He did not call: he's busy in the paper.
Is there division 'twixt thy lord and Cassio?
Des. A most unhappy one; I would do much
To avenge them, for the love I bear to Cassio.
Oth. Fire and brimstone!
Des. My lord?
Oth. What is he angry?
Lod. 'May be, the letter mov'd him;
For, as I think, they do command him home,
Deputing Cassio in his government.
Des. By my troth, I am glad on't.
Oth. Indeed?
Des. Oth. I am glad to see you mad.
Des. How, sweet Othello?
Oth. Devil! [Striking her.
Lod. Des. I have not deserv'd this.
Lod. My lord, this would not be believ'd in Venice,
Though I should swear I saw it: 'Tis very much;
Make her amends, she weeps.
Oth. O devil, devil!
If that the earth could teem with woman's tears,
Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile:—
Out of my sight!
Des. I will not stay to offend you.
[Going.
Lod. Truly, an obedient lady:—
I do beseech your lordship, call her back.
Oth. Mistress.
Des. My lord?
Oth. What would you with her, sir?
Des. Who, I, my lord? [turn:
Oth. Ay; you did wish, that I would make her
Sir, she can turn, and turn, and yet go on,
And turn again; and she can weep, sir, weep;
And she's obedient, as you say,—obedient,—
Very obedient:—Proceed you in your tears.
Concerning this, sir,—O well-painted passion!
I am commanded home:—Get you away,
I'll send for you anon,—Sir, I obey the mandate,
And will return to Venice:—Hence, avaut!
[Exit Desdemona.
Cassio shall have my place. And,—sir, to-night,
I do entreat that we may sup together,
You are welcome, sir, to Cyprus. Goats and mon-kies!
[Exit.
Lod. Is this the noble Moor whom our full senate
Call—All-in-all sufficient?—This the noble
Nature Whom passion could not shake? whose solid virtue
The shot of accident, nor dart of chance,
Could neither graze, nor pierce?
Iago. He is much chang'd.
Lod. Are his wits safe? is he not light of brain?
Iago. He is that he is; I may not breathe my Censure.
What he might be,—if, what he might, he is not—
I would to heaven, he were.
Lod. Iago. 'Faith, that was not so well; Yet 'would I knew,
That stroke would prove the worst.
Lod. Is it his use?
Or did the letters work upon his blood,
And new-create this fault?
Iago. Alas, alas! It is not honesty in me, to speak him; What I have seen and known. You shall observe
And his own courses will denote him so,
That I may save my speech: Do but go after,
And mark how he continues.
Lod. I am sorry, that I am deceiv'd in him.
[Exeunt.
SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter Othello and Emilia.

Oth. You have seen nothing then?
Emil. Nor ever heard; nor ever did suspect.
Oth. Yes, you have seen Cassio and she together.
Emil. But then I saw no harm; and then I heard Each syllable, that breath made up between them.
Oth. What, did they never whisper?
Emil. Never, my lord.
Oth. Nor send you out o’the way?
Emil. Never.
Oth. To fetch her fan, her gloves, her mask, nor Emil. Never, my lord. [nothing? Oth. That’s strange.
Emil. I durst, my lord, to wager she is honest, Lay down my soul at stake; if you think other, Remove your thought; it doth abuse your bosom. If any wretch hath put this in your head, Let heaven requite it with the serpent’s curse! For, if she be not honest, chaste, and true, There’s no man happy; the purest of their wives Is foul as slander.

Oth. Bid her come hither:—go. [Exit Emilia.

She says enough;—yet she’s a simple bard, That cannot say as much. This is a subtle whore, A closet-lock-and-key of villainous secrets, And yet she’ll kneel, and pray; I have seen her do’t.

Re-enter Emilia, with Desdemona.

Des. My lord, what is your will?
Oth. Pray, chuck, come hither.
Des. What is your pleasure?
Oth. Let me see your eyes;

Look in my face.

Des. What horrible fancy’s this?
Oth. Some of your function, mistress; [To Emilia.

Leave prooceans alone, and shut the door;

Cough, or cry—hem, if any body come;
Your mystery, your mystery—nay, despatch.

Oth. Why, what art thou?

Des. Your wife, my lord; your true And loyal wife.

Oth. Come, swear it, damn thyself;

Lost, being like one of heaven, the devils them- selves Should fear to seise thee: therefore be double- Swear—thou art honest.
Oth. Heaven truly knows, that thou art false as hell.

Des. To whom, my lord? with whom? How am O Desdemona!—away! away! away! Des. Alas, the heavy day!—Why do you weep? Am I the occasion of these tears, my lord? If, haply, you my father do suspect, An instrument of this your calling back, Lay not your blame on me; if you have lost him, Why, I have lost him too.

Oth. Had it pleas’d heaven To try me with affliction; had he rain’d All kinds of sores, and shames, on my bare head; Steep’d me in poverty to the very lips; Given to captivity me and my utmost hopes; I should have found in some part of my soul A drop of patience: but [alas!] to make me A fixed figure, for the time of scorn
To point his slow unmoving finger at,— 0 ! Yet could I bear that too; well, very well: But there, where I have garner’d up my heart; Where either I must live, or bear no life; The fountain from which my current runs, Or else dries up; to be discarded thence! Or keep it as a cistern, for foul toads

To knot and gender in!—turn thy complexion there!

Patience, thou young and rose-hipp’d cherubin; Ay, there, look grim as hell!

Des. I hope, my noble lord esteems me honest.
Oth. O, ay; as summer flies are in the shambles, That quicken even with blowing. O thou weed, Who art so lovely, and smell’d so sweet, That the sense aches at thee. Would, thou hadst ne’er been born!

Des. Alas, what ignorant sin have I committed? Oth. Was this fair paper, this most goodly book, Made to write whore upon? What committed! Committed! O thou public commoner! I should make very forges of my cheeks, That would to cinders burn up modesty, Did I but speak thy deeds.—What committed! Heaven stops the nose at it, and the moon winks; The bawdy wind, that kisses all it meets, Is hurl’d within the hollow mine of earth, And will not hear it: What committed! Impudent strumpet!

Des. By heaven, you do me wrong.
Oth. Are not you a strumpet?
Des. No, as I am a christian: If to preserve this vessel for my lord, From any other foul unlawful touch, Be—not to be a strumpet, I am none.

Oth. What, not a whore?

Des. No, as I shall be saved.
Oth. Is it possible?

Des. O, heaven forgive us!

Oth. I cry you mercy, then: I took you for that cunning whore of Venice, That married with Othello.—You, mistress, Re-enter Emilia.

That have the office opposite to Saint Peter, And keep the gate of hell; You! you! ay, you! We have done our course; there’s money for your pains; I pray you, turn the key, and keep our counsel.

Emil. Good madam, what’s the matter with my Des. With who?

Oth. Why, with my lord, madam.
Des. Who is thy lord?

Emil. He that is yours, sweet lady.

Des. I have none: Do not talk to me, Emilia; I cannot weep; nor answer you, I will; But what should go by water. Pr’ythee, to-night Lay on my bed my wedding sheets,—remember; And call thy husband hither.

Emil. Here is a change, indeed! [Exit. Des. ‘Tis meet I should be us’d so, very meet. How have I been behav’d, that he might stick The smallest opinion on my great’st abuse?

Re-enter Emilia, with Iago.

Iago. What is your pleasure, madam? How is it with you?

Des. I cannot tell. Those, that do teach young Do it with gentle means, and easy tasks: He might have chid me so; for, in good faith, I am a child to suffering. What’s the matter, lady? Emil. Alas, Iago, my lord hath so bewhir’d her, Thrown such despe and heavy terms upon her, As true hearts cannot bear.

Des. Am I that name, Iago?

Iago. What name, fair lady? Des. Such as, she says, my lord did say I was. Emil. He call’d her, whore; a beggar, in his drink, Could not have lain such terms upon his callet.

Iago. Why did he so? [such.

Des. I do not know; I am sure, I am none Iago. Do not weep, do not weep; Alas the day
Emil. Has she forsook so many noble matches, Her father, and her country, and her friends, To be called—where? would not not one Des. It is my wretched fortune. [weep? Iago. Beshrew him for it! How comes this trick upon him? Des. Nay, heaven doth know. Iago. I will be hang'd; if some external villain, Some busy and insinuating rogue, Some coggling cozening slave, to get some office, Have not devis'd this slander; I'll be hang'd, else. Iago. Fye, there is no such man; it is impossible. Des. If any such there be, heaven pardon him! Emil. A halter pardon him I and hell gnaw his bones! Why shonld he call her, whore? who keeps her company? [hood? What place? what time? what form? what like! The Moor's abus'd by some most villainous knave, Some base notorious knave, some scurvy fellow:— O, heaven, that such companions thou'dst unfold; And put in every honest hand a whip, To lash the rascal all through the world, Even from the east to the west! Iago. Speak within door. Emil. O, fye upon him! some such squire he was, That turn'd your wit the seamy side without, And did you to suspect me with the Moor. Iago. You are a fool; go to. Des. O good Iago, What shall I do to win my lord again? Good friend, go to him: for, by this light of heaven, I know it will be lost. Here I kneel:— If e'er my will did trespass 'gainst his love, Either in discourse of thought, or actual deed; Or that mine eyes, mine ears, or any sense, Delighted them in any other form; Or that I did, by some yet, and ever did, And ever will,—though he do shake me off To beggarly divortement,—love him dearly, Comfort forswear me! Unkindness may do much; And his unkindness may defeat my life, But never taint my love. I cannot say, whore; It does abhor me, now I speak the word; To do the act that might the addition earn. Not the world's mass of vanity could make me. Iago. I pray you, be content; 'tis but his humour; The business of the state does him offence, And he does chide with you. [If 'twere no other, Des. Iago. It is but so, I warrant you. [Trumpets. Hark, how these instruments summon to supper, And the great messengers of Venice stay To in, and weep:—all things shall be well. [Execut Desdemona and Emilia. Enter Roderigo. How now, Roderigo? Rod. I do not find, that thou deal'st justly with me. Iago. What in the contrary? Rod. Every day thou dost me with some device, Iago; and rather (as it seems to me now,) keep'st from me all convenience, than supersist me with the least advantage of hope. I will, indeed, no longer endure it: Nor am I yet persuad'd, to put up in peace what already I have foolishly suffer'd. Iago. Will you hear me, Roderigo? Rod. 'Faith, I have heard too much; for your words, and performances, are no kin together. Iago. You charge me most unjustly. Rod. With nought but truth. I have wasted my stout You. The jewels you have had from me, to deliver to Desdemona, would half have corrupted a votarist. You have told me—she has received them, and returned me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquittance; but I find none. Iago. Well; go to; very well. Rod. Very well! go to! I cannot go to, man; nor 'tis not very well: By this hand, I say, it is very scurvy; and begin to find myself fooled in it. Rod. Very well. Rod. I tell you, 'tis not very well. I will make myself known to Desdemona: If she will return me my jewels, I will give over my suit, and repent my unlawful solicitation; if not, assure yourself, I will seek satisfaction of you. Iago. You have said now. Rod. Ay, and I have said nothing, but what I protest intendment of doing. Iago. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee; and even from this instant, do build on thee a better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand, Roderigo: Thou hast taken against me a most just exception; but yet, I protest, I have dealt most directly in thy affair. Rod. It hath not appeared. Iago. I grant, indeed, it hath not appeared; and your suspicion is not without wit and judgment. But, Roderigo, if thou hast that within thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever,—I mean, purpose, courage, and valour,— this night show it: if thou the next night following enjoyest not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery, and devise engines for my life. Rod. Well, what is it? Is it within reason, and compassable? Iago. Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice, to depute Cassio in Othello's place. Rod. Is that true? why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice. Iago. O, no; he goes into Mauritania, and takes away with him the kinsman Desdemona, unless his abode be lingered here by some accident; wherein none can be so determinate, as the removing of Cassio. Rod. How do you mean—removing of him? Iago. Do you not make my uncapable of Othello's place; knocking out his brains. Rod. And that you would have me do? Iago. Ay; if you dare do yourself a profit, and a right. He sups to-night with a harlot, and thither will I go to him:—he knows not yet of his honorable fortune; if you will watch his going thence, (which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one,) you may take him at your pleasure; I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not amazed at it, but go along with me: I will show you such a necessity in his death, that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and the night grows to waste: about it. Rod. I will hear further reason for this. Iago. And you shall be satisfied. [Execut. SCENE III.—Another Room in the Castle. Enter Othello, Lodovico, Desdemona, Emilia, and Attendants. Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble yourself no further.OTH. pardon me; 'twill do me good to walk. Lod. Most welcome, good night; I humbly thank your honour is most welcome. [Jadshiy. Oth. Will you walk, sir?— Des. My lord? Oth. Get you to bed on the instant; I will be returned forthwith: dismiss your attendant there; look, it be done. Des. I will, my lord. [Execut Othello, Lodovico, and Attendants. Emil. How goes it now? he looks gentler than Des. He says, he will return incontinent; [he did. He hath commanded me to go to bed, and bade me to dismiss you. Dismiss me! Des. It was his bidding; therefore, good Emilia; Give me my nightly wearing, and adieu; We must not now displease him.
Act V.

THE MOOR OF VENICE.

Des. Beshrew me, if I would do such a wrong for the whole world.

Des. Why, the wrong is but a wrong the world; and, having the world for your labour, 'tis a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make it right.

Des. I do not think there is any such woman.

Des. Yes, a dozen; and as many
To the vantage, as would store the world they play'd for.

But, I do think, it is their husbands' faults, if wives do fall: Say, that they slack their duties, And pour our treasures into foreign laps;
Or else break out in peevish jealousies, Throwing restraint upon us; or, say, they strike us, Or scant our former having in despite; [grace, Why, we have gallas; and, though we have some Yet we have some revenge. Let husbands know, Their wives have sense like them: they see, and smell, And have their palates both for sweet and sour, As husbands have. What is it that they do, When they change us for others? Is it sport? I think, it is; And doth affection breed it? I think, it doth; Is't frailty, that thus errs? It is so too; And have we not affections? Desires for sport; and frailty, as men have? Then, let them use us well; else, let them know, The ill we do, their ills instruct us to.

Des. Good night, good night: Heaven me such usage send, Not to pick bad from bad; but, by bad, mend!  [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Street.

Enter Iago and Roderigo.

Iago. Here, stand behind this bulk; straight will he come;

Wear thy good rapier bare, and put it home: Quick, quick; fear nothing; I'll be at thy elbow; It makes us, or it mars us; think on that,
And fix most firm thy resolution.

Rod. Be near at hand; I may miscarry in't.

Iago. Here, at thy hand; be bold, and, take thy sword.  [Retires to a little distance.

Rod. I have no great devotion to the deed;
And yet he has given me satisfying reasons:—
'Tis but a man gone—forth, my sword; he dies.  [Goes to his stand.

Iago. I have rubb'd this young quat almost to the sense, And he grows angry. Now whether he kill Cassio, Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other, Every way makes my gain: Live Roderigo, He calls me to a restitution large
Of gold, and jewels, that I bob'd from him, As gifts to Desdemona: It must not be: if Cassio do remain, He hath a daily beauty in his life, That makes me ugly; and, besides, the Moor May unfold me to him; there stand I in much peril; No, he must die.—But so, I hear him coming.

Enter Cassio.

Rod. I know his gait, 'tis he;—Villain, thou diest.  [Rushes from his post, and makes a pass at Cassio.

Cas. That thrust had been mine enemy indeed But that my coat is better than thou think'st; I will make proof of thine.

[Draws, and wounds Roderigo.

Rod. O, I am slain!  [Iago rushes from his post, cuts Cassio behind in the leg, and exit Cas. I am main'd for ever—Help, ho! murder, murder!  [Falls,

3E2
Enter Othello, at a distance.

Oth. The voice of Cassio:—Iago keeps his word.
Rod. O, villain that I am!

Oth. Hark! 'tis even so
Cas. O, help! ho! light! a surgeon!

Oth. 'Tis he:—O brave Iago, honest, and just,
That hast such noble sense of thy friend's wrong!
Thon testeach me,—Minion, your dear lies dead,
And your false lies apace:—Strumpet, I come:—
Forth of my heart those charms, thine eyes are blotted;
Thy bed, lust-stain'd, shall with lust's blood be spotted. [Exit Othello.

Enter Lodovico and Gratiano, at a distance.

Cas. What, ho! no watch? no passage? murder! murder!

Gra. 'Tis some mischance; the cry is very dire.

Cas. O, help! [full.

Rod. Hark!

Rod. O wretched villain!

Rod. Two or three groans;—it is a heavy night:
These may be counterfeit;—let's think't unsafe
To come in to the cry, without more help.

Rod. No body come? then shall I bleed to death.

Enter Iago, with a light.

Rod. Hark!

Gra. Here's one comes in his shirt, with light and weapons.

Iago. Who's there? whose noise is this, that cries on murder?

Rod. We do not know.

Iago. Did you not hear a cry?

Cas. Here, here; for heaven's sake, help me.

Iago. What's the matter?

Gra. This is Othello's ancient, as I take it.

Rod. What's the same, indeed; a very valiant fellow.

Iago. What are you here, that cry so grievously?

Cas. Iago? O, I am spilt! undone by villains!

Gra. Give me some help.

Iago. O me, lieutenant! what villains have done this?

Cas. I think, that one of them is hereabout,
And cannot make away.

Iago. O treacherous villains!—

What are you there? come in, and give some help.

[To Lodovico and Gratiano.

Rod. O, help me here!

Cas. That's one of them.

Iago. O murderons slave! O villain!

Iago. O damn'd Iago! O inhuman dog!—

O! O! O!

Iago. Kill men 'tis the dark!—Where be these bloody thieves?—

How silent is this town! H'm! murther! murder! murder!

What may you be? are you of good, or evil?

Rod. As you shall prove us, praise us.

Iago. Signior Lodovico?

Rod. He, sir.

Iago. I cry you mercy; Here's Cassio hurt by villains.

[To Cassio.

Gra. Cassio?

Iago. How is it, brother?

Cas. My leg is cut in two.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!—

Light, gentlemen; I'll bind it with my shirt.

Enter Bianca.

Bian. What is the matter, ho? who is't that Iago. Who is't that cry'd? [cry'd?
Bian. O my dear Cassio! my sweet Cassio!

O Cassio! Cassio! Cassio!

Iago. O notable strumpet!—Cassio, may you suspect
Who they should be, that have thus mangled you?

Cas. No.

Gra. I am sorry, to find you thus: I have been to seek you?

Iago. Lend me a garter: So.—O, for a chair,
To speak to him:—easily hence—[Cassio!

Bian. Alas, he faints:—O Cassio! Cassio! Cassio!

Iago. Gentlemen all, I do suspect this trash
To be a party in this injury:—

Patience awhile, good Cassio.—Come, come;

Lend me a light.—Know we this face, or no?

Alas! my friend, and my dear countryman.
Roderigo? no:—Yes, sure; O heaven! Roderigo.

Gra. What of Venice?

Iago. Even he, sir; did you know him?

Iago. Signior Gratiano? I cry you gentle pardon;

These bloody accidents must excuse my manners,
That so neglected you.

Gra. How do you, Cassio? O, a chair, a chair!

Iago. Roderigo!

Iago. He, he, 'tis he:—O, that's well said:—

The chair:—[A chair brought in.

Some good man bear him carefully from hence;

I'll fetch the general's surgeon.—For you, mistress,

[To Bianca.

Save you your labour.—He that lies slain here, Cassio,

What, look you pale? O bear him out o' the air.—

[Cassio and Rod. are borne off.

Stay you good gentlemen.—Look you pale, mistress?

Do you perceive the gnostiess of her eye?—

Nay, if you stare, we shall hear more anon:—

Behold her well; I pray you, look upon her;

Do you see, gentlemen? nay, guiltiness will speak,

Though tongues were out of use.

Enter Emilia.

Emil. 'Las, what's the matter; what's the matter, husband?

Iago. Cassio hath here been set on in the dark,
By Roderigo, and fellows that are scap'd:—
He's almost slain, and Roderigo dead.

Alas, good gentlemen! alas, good Cassio! Iago. This is the fruit of whoring.—Pr'ythee, miss,

Go know of Cassio where he supp'd to-night:—

What, do you shake at that?

Bian. He supp'd at my house; but I therefore shake not.

Iago. O, did he so? I charge you, go with me.

Emil. Fye, fye upon thee, strumpet! Bian. I am no strumpet; but of life as honest,

As you that thus abuse me.

Emil. As I? foh! fye upon thee!

Iago. Kind gentlemen, let's go see poor Cassio dress'd:—

Come, mistress, you must tell us another tale.—

Emilia, run you to the citadel,

And tell my lord and lady what has happ'd.—

What's the news, I pray? This is the night, [Aside.

That either makes me, or fordoes me quite. [Exit.

SCENE II.—A Bedchamber: Desdemona in bed asleep. A Light burning.

Enter Othello.

Oth. It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul,—
Yet must not name it to you, nor chase these stats:—

It is the cause.—Yet I'll not shed her blood;

Nor scar that whiter skin of hers than snow,

And smooth as monumental alabaster.

[Takes off his sword.

Yet she must die, else she'll betray more men.

Put out the light, and then put out the light. [If I quench thee, thou flaming minister,
I can again thy former light restore,
Should I repent me—but once put out thine,
That cunningst pattern of a kindling nature,
I know not where is that Promethean heat,
That can thy light relume. When I have pluck'd
I cannot give it vital growth again; [thy rose,
It needs must wither:—I'll smell it on the tree.—
O balmy breath, that dost almost persuade Justice to break her sword!—One more, one more.
Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill thee,
And love thee after.—One more, and this the last:
So sweet was never so fatal. I must weep,
But they are cruel tears: This sorrow's heavenly;
It strikes, where it doth love.—She waketh—
Des. Who's there? Othello?
Oth. Ay, Desdemona.
Des. Will you come to bed, my lord?
Oth. Have you pray'd to-night, Desdemona?
Des. Ay, my lord.
Oth. If you bethink yourself of any crime
Unreconcil'd as yet to heaven and grace,
Seek for it straight.
Des. Alas, my lord, what may you mean by that?
Oth. Well, do it, and be brief; I will walk by:
I would not kill thy unprepared spirit;
No,—Heaven forefend.—I would not kill thy soul.
Des. Talk you of killing?
Oth. Ay, I do. Then, heaven
Have mercy on me!
Oth. Des. If you say so, I hope you will not kill me.
Oth. Hump!
Des. And yet I fear you; for you are fatal then,
When your eyes roll so: Why should I fear, I know not.
Since guiltiness I know not; but yet I, I fear,
Oth. Think on thy sins.
Des. They are loves I bear to you.
Oth. Ay, and for that thou diest. [loving.—
Des. That death's unnatural, that kills for Alas, why gnaw you so your nether lip?
Some bloody passion shake your very frame;
These are portents; but yet I, I hope, I hope,
They do not point on me.
Oth. Des. I will so: What's the matter?
That handkerchief, which I so lov'd,
And thou gav'st to Cassio. [gave thee,
Des. No, by my life and soul;
Send for the man, and ask him.
Oth. Sweet soul, take heed.
Take heed of perjury: thou'rt on thy death-bed.
Des. Ay, but not yet to die.
Oth. Yes, presently: Therefore confess thee freely of thy sin:
For to deny each article with oath,
Cannot remove, nor choke, the strong conception,
That I do groan withal. Thou art to die.
Des. Then, Lord have mercy on me!
Oth. I say, amen.
Des. And have you mercy too!—I never did
Offend you in my life; never lov'd Cassio,
But with such general warranty of heaven
As I might love: I never gave him token. [hand,
Oth. By heaven, I saw my handkerchief in his
Or peri'urd woman! I thou dost stone my heart,
And mak'st me call, what I intend to do,—
A murder, which I thought a sacrifice:
I saw the handkerchief.
Des. He found it then;
I never gave it him:—Send for him hither,
And let him confess a truth.
Oth. He hath confess'd.
Des. What, my lord?
Oth. That he hath—us'd thee.
Des. How? unlawfully?
Oth. Ay.
Des. He'll not say so.
Oth. No, his mouth is stopp'd; Honest Iago hath ta'en order fort.

Des. My fear interprets then,—What, is he dead?
Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great revenge
Had stomach for them all.
Des. Alas! he is betray'd, and I undone.
Oth. Out, trumpet! Weep'st thou for him to my face?
Des. O, banish me, my lord, but kill me not.
Oth. Down, trumpet!
Des. Kill me to-morrow, let me live to-night.
Oth. Nay, if you strive,—
Des. But half an hour.
Oth. Being done,
There is no pause.
But while I say one prayer.
Oth. It is too late. [He smothereth her.
Emil. [Within.] My lord, my lord! what ho!
your lord!
Oth. What noise is this?—Not dead! not yet!
I, that am cruel, am yet merciful; [quite dead I would not have thee linger in thy pain.—
So, so.
Emil. [Within.] What ho, my lord! my lord!
Oth. [Within.] Who's there?
Oth. [Within.] O, good my lord, I would speak
a word with you.
[dead.
Oth. Yes:—'tis Emilia:—by and by:—She's
'Tis like she comes to speak of Cassio's death;
The noise was high.—Ha! no more moving?
Still as the grave. Shall she come in? Weren't good?
I think, she stirs again:—No.—What's the best?
If she come in, she'll sure speak to my wife:
My wife! my wife! what wife?—I have no wife:
O insupportable! O insupportable!
Methinks it should be now a huge eclipse
Of sun and moon; and that the affrighted globe
Should yaw in alteration.
Emil. [Within.] I do beseech you I may speak
O, good my lord!—[with you,
Oth. I had forgot thee: O, come in, Emilia.
Emil. Soft,—by and by:—Let me the curtains draw.—
Where art thou? What's the matter with thee
now?
[Unlock the door.

Enter Emilia.
Emil. O, good my lord, yonder's foul murder
Oth. What? now?
[done.
Emil. But now, my lord!
Oth. It is the very error of the moon;
She comes more near the earth than she was wont;
And makes men mad.
Emil. Cassio, my lord, has kill'd a young Ve-
Call'd—Roderigo.
[netian,
Oth. And Cassio kill'd?
Emil. No, Cassio is not kill'd.
Oth. Not. Cassio kill'd? Then murder's out of
And sweet revenge grows harsh.
[tune,
Des. O, falsely, falsely murder'd!
Emil. Alas; what cry is that?
Oth. That! what?
Emil. Out, and alas! that was my lady's voice:—
Help! help, ho! help!—O lady, speak again!
Sweet Desdemona! I, sweet mistress, speak!
Des. A guiltyess death I die.
Emil.
O, who hath done
This deed?
Des. Nobody: I myself; farewell!
Emil. Command me to my kind lord! O, farewell. [Dies.
Oth. Why, how should she be murder'd?
Emil. Alas, who knows?
Oth. You heard her say herself, it was not I.
Emil. She said so; I must needs report the truth.
Oth. She's, like a liar, gone to burning hell!
'Twas I that kill'd her.
Emil. O, the more angel she,
And you the blacker devil!
Oth. She turn'd to folly, and she was a whore.
Emil. Thou dost belittle her, and thou art a devil.
Oth. She was false as water.
Emil. Thou art rash as fire, to say
That she was false; O, she was heavenly true!
Oth. Cassio did tup her: ask thy husband else.
Othello, I did not,
D'ye think I was false to wedlock?
Oth. Ay, with Cassio.

Nay, had she been true,
I, too, might have made me such another world
Of one entire and perfect chrysolite,
I'd not have sold her for it.

Emil. My husband?
Oth. Ay, 'twas he that told me first;
An honest man he is, and hates the slime
That sticks on filthy deeds.

Emil. What needs this literancy, woman? I say, thy husband.

He, woman;
I say, thy husband: Dost understand the word?
My friend, thy husband, honest, honest Iago.

Emil. If he say so, may his pernicious soul
Rot half a grain in a day! he lies to the heart;
She was too fond of her most filthy bargain.

Oth. Ha! Do thy worst;
This deed of thine is no more worthy heaven,
Than thou wast worthy her.

Emil. Thon hast not half the power to do me harm,
As I have to be hurt. O guilt! O do it!
As ignorant as dirt! thou hast done a deed,—
I care not for thy sword; I'll make thee know,
Though I lost twenty lives: —Help! help, ho! help!
The Moor has kill'd my mistress; Murder! murder!

Enter Montano, Grattiano, and Iago.

Mon. What is the matter? — How now, general? —
Emil. O, are you come, Iago? you have done well.

That men must lay their murders on your neck.

Gra. What is the matter?

Emil. Disprove this villain, if thou be'st a man:
He says, thou told'st him that his wife was false:
I know, thou didst not, thou'rt not such a villain:
Speak; let your heart be full.

Iago. I told him what I thought; and told no more
Than what he found himself was apt and true.
Emil. But did you ever tell him she was false?

Iago. I did.

Emil. You told a lie; an odious damned lie;
Upon my soul, a lie; a wicked lie: —
She false with Cassio! — Did you say with Cassio?

Iago. With Cassio, mistress; Go to, charm your tongue.

Emil. I will not charm my tongue; I am bound
My mistress here lies murder'd in her bed.

All. O heavens forefend!

Emil. And your reports have set the murder on.
Oth. No, I chide not, master; it is true, indeed.
Gra. 'Tis a strange truth.

Mon. O monstrous act!

Emil. Villainy, villainy, villainy!
I think upon't, — I think, — I smell't: — O villainy! —
I thought so then: — I'll kill myself for grief: —
O villainy, villainy!

Iago. What, are you mad? I charge you, get you home.

Emil. Good gentlemen, let me have leave to
'Tis proper I obey him, but not now:
Perchance, Iago, I will ne'er go home.

Oth. O! O! O! [Hanging over his wife.]

Emil. Nay, lay thee down, and roar;
For thou hast kill'd the sweetest innocent,
That e'er did lift up eye.

Oth. O, she was foul! — [Rising.

I scarce did know you, uncle: There lies your niece,
Whose breath, indeed, these hands have newly
I know this act shows horrible and grim.

Gra. Poor Desdemona! I am glad thy father's dead:
Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief
More than cold thread in twain: did he live now,
This sight would make him do a desperate turn,
Yea, curse his better angel from his side,
And fall to reprobation.

Oth. 'Tis pitiful: but yet Iago knows,
That she with Cassio hath the act of shame
A thousand times committed; Cassio confess'd it,
And she did gratify his amorous works
With that recognition and pledge of love
Which I first gave her; I saw it in his hand;
It was a handkerchief, an antique token
My father gave my mother.

Emil. O heaven! O heavenly powers! —
Iago. Come, hold your peace.

Emil. 'Twill out, 'twill out; — I hold my peace.
No, I will speak as liberal as the air; —
[Shr?]
Let heaven bless these men, and devils, let them all,
All, all, cry shame against me, yet I'll speak.
Iago. Be wise, and get you home.

Emil. I will not.

[Re-enter Gratiano.

Gra. What is the matter?

Oth. Behold! I have a weapon; —
A better never did itself sustain

Your sword upon a woman?

Emil. O thou dull Moor! that handkerchief thou speak'st of,

I found by fortune, and did give my husband:
For a present with a solemn earnestness,
(More than, indeed, belong'd to such a trifle,)
He heeg'd of me to steal it.

Iago. Villainous whore!

Emil. She give it Cassio! no, alas; I found it,
And did give it my husband.

Gra. Neither am I, nor valiant neither,
But ever upon my sword.

[Exeunt Montano and Gratiano.

Oth. You must tell me:

[Re-enter Iago:

What did thy song bode, lady? —

Hark, canst thou hear me? I will play the swan,
And thou the siren, — Whore, willow.

And Cassio, was she chaste? she lov'd thee, cruel Moor;
So come my soul to bliss, as I speak true;
So speaking as I think, I die, — I die.

[Dies. Oth. I have another weapon in this chamber,
It is a sword of Spain, the ice-brook's temper: —
O, here it is — Uncle, I must come forth.

Gra. [Within.] If thou attempt it, it will cost thee dear;

Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer.

Oth. Look in upon me then, and speak with me,
Or, naked as I am, I will assault thee.
Upon a soldier's thigh: I have seen the day,
That with this little arm, and this good sword,
I have made my way through more impediments
Than twenty times your stop!—But, O vain boast!
Who can control his fate? 'tis not so now.—
Be not afraid thou who do see weapon'd;
Here is my journey's end, here is my butt,
And very sea-mark of my utmost sail.
Do you go back dismay'd? 'tis a lost fear;
Man but a rush against Othello's breast,
And he retires:—Where should Othello go?—
Now, how dost thou look now? O ill-star'd wench!
Pale as thy smock! when we shall meet at comfit,
This look of thine will hurl my soul from heaven,
And fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold, my girl,
Even like thy chastity.—O cursed, cursed slave!—Whip me, ye devils,
From the possession of this heavenly sight!
Blow me about in winds! roast me in sulphur!
Wash me in steep-down galls of liquid fire!—
O Desdemona! Desdemona! dead?
Dead? O! O! O!

Enter Lodovico, Mostano, Cassio carried in a chair, and Officers, with Iago, prisoner.

Lod. Where is this rash and most unfortunate man?
Oth. That's he, that was Othello; here I am.

Lod. Where is that viper? bring the villain forth.
Oth. I look down towards his feet:—but that's a fable.

If that thou wert a devil, I cannot kill thee.

[Othello wounds Iago]

Lod. Wench his sword from him.

Iago. I bleed, sir; but not kill'd.

Oth. I am not sorry neither; I'd have thee live;
For, in my soul, that was once so good,
Fall'n in the practice of a cursed slave,
Who shall be said to thee?

Oh. Why, any thing:—An honourable murderer, if you will;—
'Et fought I did in hate, but all in honour.

Lod. This wretch hath part confess'd his villainy;
Did you and he consent in Cassio's death?

Oth. Yes.

Cass. Dear general, I never gave you cause.
Oth. I do believe it, and I ask your pardon.
Will you, I pray you, demand that demi-devil,
Why he hath thus ensnared my soul and body?
Iago. Demand me nothing: What you know,
you know:
From this time forth I will never speak word.

Oth. What? not to pray?

Iago. Torments will ope your lips.

Oth. Well, thou dost best.

Lod. Sir, you shall understand what hath befall'n, which, as I think, you know not: Here is a letter, sound in the pocket of the slain Roderigo; and here, another: the one of them imports the death of Cassio to be undertook by Roderigo.

Oth. O villain! —

Cas. Most heathenish, and most gross!

Lod. Now here's another discontented paper, Found in his pocket too; and, 'tis seems, Roderigo meant to have sent this damned villain; But that, belike, Iago in the interim Came in and satisfied him.

Oth. O the pernicious one! —

How came you, Cassio, by that handkerchief That was my wife's?

Cas. I found it in my chamber; And he himself confess'd, but even now, That there he dropp'd it, for a special purpose, Which wrought to his desire.

Oth. O fool! fool! fool! —

Cas. There is, besides, in Roderigo's letter,— How he upbraids Iago, that he made him Brave me upon the watch; whereon it came That I was cast: And even but now he spake, After long seeming dead,—Iago hurt him, Iago set him on.

Lod. You must forsake this room, and go with us;
Your power and your command is taken off,
And Cassio rules in Cyprus. For this slave,— If there be any cunning cruelty; That can torment him much, and hold him long. It shall be his:—You shall close prisoner rest, Till that the nature of your fault be known To the Venetian state,—Come, bring him away.

Oth. Soft you; a word or two, before you go. I have done the state some service, and they know it;
No more of that:—I pray you, in your letters, When you shall these unlucky deeds relate, Speak of me as I am: nothing extenuate, [speak Nor set down aught in malice: then must you Nor set down aught in malice: then must you Of one, that lov'd not wisely, but too well; Of one, not easily jealous, but, being wrought, Perplex'd in the extreme: of one, whose hand, Like the base Judean, threw a pearl away, richer than all his tribe; of one, whose subdu'd Albeit unused to the melting mood, [eyes, Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees Their medicinal gum: Set you down this: And say, besides,—that in Aleppo once, Where a malignant and a turban'd Turk Beat a Venetian, and traduc'd the state, I took by the throat the circumcised dog, And smote him too. — [State himself Lod. O bloody period!

Gra. All, that's spoke, is marr'd.

Oth. I kiss'd thee, ere I kill'd thee,—No way but this, [Falling upon Desdemona. Killing myself, to die upon a kiss. — [Dies. Cass. This did I fear, but thought he had no For he was great of heart. — [weapon; Lod. O Spartan dog, More fell than anguish, hunger, or the sea! Look on the tragick loading of this bed; —[To Iago. This is thy work: the object poisings sight;— Let it be hid.—Gratiano, keep the house, And seize upon the fortunes of the Moor, For they succeed to you.—To you, lord governor, Remains the censure of this hellish villain; The time, the place, the torture,—O enforce it! Myself will straight a board; and, to the state, This heavy act with heavy heart relate. —[Exeunt.
